Nay Origen himself, one of the first brought to depose against us, (if Rufinus his Translator deserve my credit) will in his Homily upon the 9. chap. of Josua testify both for Churches and Altars among Christians in his time. For thus he allegorizeth there the story of the Gibeonites, whose lives Josua and the Elders spared, but gave them no better entertainment than to be hewers of wood and drawers of water for the Congregation and for the Altar of the Lord: (b) "Sunt quidam in Ecclesia (saith he) \ credentes quidem, & habentes fidem in Deum, & acquiescentes in omnibus divinis præceptis, quique etiam erga servos Dei religiosi sunt & servire eis cupiunt; sed & ad ornatum ECCLESIAE vel ministerium satis prompti paratique sunt: in actibus vero suis & conversatione propria, obscenitatibus & vitiis involuti; nec omnino deponentes veterem hominem cum actibus suis, sed involuti vetustis vitiis & obscenitatibus suis, sicut & isti (i. Gabaonites) pannis & calceamentis veteribus obtecti: præter hoc, quod in Deum credunt, & erga servos Dei vel ECCLESIAE cultum (i. ornatum) videntur esse devoti, nihil adhibent emendationis vel innovationis in mores, &c.* And a little after; Veruntamen sciendum est, quantum ex hujusmodi figurarum adumbrationibus edocemur, quod si qui tales sunt in nobis, quorum fides hoc tantummodo habet, ut ad ECCLESIAM veniant, & inclinent caput suum sacerdotibus, (mark here a custom) officia exhibeant, servos Dei honorent,

(b) There are a sort of men in the Church that believe and have faith in God, that assent to all Divine precepts, who are also very officious toward the servants of God, and are ready to serve them; yea and are exceeding ready and forward to the adorning of the CHURCH and the service thereof: But yet all this while, as to their actions and the course of their lives and conversations, they are altogether engaged and entangled in sin and filthiness; they care not at all to put off the old man with his deeds, [Col. 3. 9.] but keep on their old dress and habit, their old sins and filthinesses, just as these Gibeonites came to Josua with their old shoes on their feet and in their old garments. Now these men, (setting this aside, that they profess to believe in God, and seem to be devoutly affected towards the servants of God and the adorning of the CHURCH) what do they do? even nothing at all towards inward reformation and real amendment of their lives — And a little after (saith Origen.) But here we are to know, (that which we are taught from what is shadowed out by these and the like Figures and Types in the Old Testament, particularly from this History of the Gibeonites.) That if their be any such Christians among us, whose Faith signifies only thus much and goes no further than this, viz. That they come duly to the CHURCH, and bow their heads to the Priests, perform their duties, honour the servants of God, and withal contribute something to the adorning of the ALTAR or the CHURCH; and yet do not seriously endeavour to reform and amend their lives and actions, and leaving off their former vices, to follow after chastity and purity, nor labour in good earnest to subdue their anger, their covetousness, and that ravenous disposition in them, unsatisfiedly and greedily catching at more and more still; ——— If (I say) there be any such, let them know this and consider it, That as for all such Christians as these, who mind not to amend their ways, to reform themselves, but even to their old age continue in their sins, our Lord Jesus (of whom Josua was a Type) will give them their part and portion with the Gibeonites.

if any where Rufinus may be trusted, sure he may in this; forasmuch as in his Peroration in Epist. ad Romanos he hath given us his word, that in his translation of this and the next Book he took not his wonted liberty to insert or alter any thing, but considers the matter together with the brevity of this Homily, cannot see a possibility how these passages can be an addition or supplement of the Translator's, unless he made the whole Homily; because the contents of them are the only argument thereof, and being taken from it nothing would be remaining.

(a) As to what we have written upon Josua the son of Nave or Nun, as also upon the Book of Judges, and upon Psal. 36, and 37, and 38. we have simply expressed every thing therein as we found it in Origen, whose Comments upon these parts of Scripture we translated without any great labour.

Lastly, Because the fore-alleged words of Lactantius are so usually brought against us, though they be nothing urgent, and his time be altogether repugnant to any such inference; yet absolutely to take away all scruple, let us hear him also, Instit. Lib.

(b) As I was teaching Oratory in Bithynia, (whither I was sent for and called to that end,) at which time also it fell out that the Temple of God was thrown down; there were two then upon the place that insulted, whether more proudly or importunately I know not, over the Christian Verity then in a low and afflicted condition.

“importunius, insultarunt. See the rest which follows. This was when the Edict of Diocletian came forth for the demolishing of the Christian Churches.

And thus having removed that stumbling-stone which hath been the main inducement to the contrary opinion, so prejudicial to those works of religious bounty and piety; I hope my Proofs will find the freer passage with those of understanding and judgment, to whose pious consideration I have devoted this my Discourse.

ECCLESIASTES 5. 1.

Look to thy foot [or feet] when thou comest to the House of God : and be more ready to obey, than to offer the sacrifice of fools ; for they know not that they do evil.

[ This Sermon was preached at S. Marie's in Cambridge, on
S. Matthias's

SOLOMON, whom God chose to build that sacred and glorious Temple to his Name, it hath pleased his holy Spirit to make also our principal Instructor how we ought to demean our selves in such sacred places. This appears, as by that his solemn and famous Prayer made at the Dedication thereof, so also by this Scripture which I have now begun to read ; the first seven verses of this Chapter, if we will rightly understand them, being wholly spent upon that argument, and containing precepts and instructions fitted to the several duties of holy worship we are to perform, both at our coming thither, and whilest we remain there.

To unfold them all, were too much for the shortness of the time allotted me : May it please you therefore to vouchsafe me your Christian patience and charitable attention, whilest I utter my thoughts upon the words I have now read. For the better and more distinct explication whereof, consider in them these two parts ; An Admonition, and a Caution. 1. An Admonition of reverent and awful demeanour when we come to God's House ; Look to thy foot, or feet, when thou comest to the House of God. 2. A Caution, not to prefer the secondary Service of God before the first and principal ; Be more ready to obey, than to offer the sacrifice of fools ; for they know not that they do evil. In the first, or Admonition, I will consider two things : 1. The Place, God's House ; 2. The Duty of those who come thither, Look to thy feet. Of these in order, and first of the Place, God's House.

SECTION I.

THE House of God is the place set apart for his Worship and service, and so hath peculiar Relation unto him ; wherewith being invested it becomes sacred and holy ; not only whilest Divine duties are performed therein, as some erroneously affirm, but as long as it is for such use ; namely, according to the nature of other Sacred things, which continue their state of separateness and sanctity, so long as that relation they have unto God (wherein this sanctity consists) is not quite abolished.

To erect and set apart such Places as these for the exercise of the Rites of Religion, is derived from the Instinct of Nature, and approved of God from the beginning. It began not with that Tabernacle or ambulatory Temple which Moses caused to be made by God's appointment at Mount Sinai, but was much more ancient. Noah built an Altar as soon as he came out of the Ark. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, (wheresoever they came to pitch their Tents,) erected Places for Divine worship, (that is, Altars with their septs and enclosures) without any special appointment from God. Jacob in particular vowed a place for Divine worship by the name of God's House, where he would pay the Tithes of all that God should give him, Gen. 28. 19. &c. Lo here a Church endowed. Yea Moses himself ( Exod. 33. 7. ) before the Ark and that that glorious Tabernacle were yet made, pitched a Tabernacle for the same purpose without the Camp, whither every one that sought the Lord was to go. And all this was done tanquam recepti moris, as a thing of custom, and as mankind by Tradition had learned to accommodate the Worship of their God, by appropriating some Place to that use; Nature teaching them, that the work was honoured and dignified by the peculiarity of the place appointed for the same; and that if any work were so to be honoured, there was nothing it more becomed than the Worship and service of Almighty God, the most peculiar and incommunicable act of all other.

Nay more than this; It was believed in those elder times, That that Country or Territory, wherein no Place was set apart for the Worship of God, was unhallowed and unclean. Which, I think, I rightly gather from that Story in the Book of Josua, of the Altar built by Reuben, Gad and the half Tribe of Manasseh upon the bank of the River Jordan; which Josua and the Elders, as their words intimate, supposed they had done lest the land of their possession, being by the River Jordan cut off from the land of Canaan, (where the Lord's Tabernacle was) and so having no place therein consecrated to the worship of their God, might otherwise be an unclean and unhallowed habitation. Hear the words of Phinehas and the Princes sent to dissuade them (Josua 22. 19.) and judge whether they import not as I have said. If the land (say they) of your possession be * unclean, then pass ye over unto the land of the possession of the LORD, where the LORD'S Tabernacle dwelleth, and take possession amongst us: but rebel not against the LORD, nor against us, in building you an Altar besides the Altar of the LORD your God.

Now concerning the condition and property of Places thus sanctified or hallowed, what it is; whence can we learn better than from that which the Lord spake unto Moses, Exod. 20. immediately after he had pronounced the Decalogue from Mount Sinai: where premising that they should not make with him gods of gold and gods of silver, but that they should make him an Altar of earth (as namely their ambulatory state then permitted, otherwise of stone) and thereon sacrifice their burnt-offerings and peace-offerings; he adds, in all places where I record my Name, I will come unto thee, and bless thee, בְּכָל-הַמָּקוֹם אֲשֶׁר אֶזְכֹּר אֶת-שְׁמִי, In every place where the remembrance or memorial of my Name shall be, or, Wheresoever that is which I have or shall appoint to be the remembrance or memorial of my Name and presence, there I will come unto thee, and bless thee. Lo here a description of the Place set apart for Divine worship: It is the Place where God records his Name, and comes unto men to bless them, Two things are here specified: The Monument, Record or Memorial of God's Name; secondly, His coming or meeting there with men. Of both let us enquire distinctly, what they mean.

Verf. 23, 24.

I know it would not be untrue to say in general, That God's Name is recorded or remembered in that place upon which his Name is called, or which is called by his Name, (as the Scripture speaks,) that is, which is dedicate to his worship and service: But there is some more special thing intended here; namely, the Memorial or Monument of God's Name is that token or Symbole whereby he testifieth his Covenant and commerce with men. Now although the Ark, called the Ark of the Covenant or Testimony, (wherein lay the * two Tables, namely the Book or Articles of the Covenant, and Manna, the Bread of the Covenant) were afterwards made for this purpose, to be the standing Memorial of God's Name and Presence with his people: yet cannot that be here either only, or specially aimed at; because when these words were spoken, it had no being, nor was there yet any commandment given concerning the making thereof. Wherefore the Record here mentioned I understand with a more general reference to any Memorial whereby God's Covenant and commerce with men was testified: such as were the sacrifices immediately before spoken of, and the seat of them the Altar; which therefore may seem to be in some sort the more particularly here pointed unto. For that these were Rites of remembrance, whereby the Name of God was commemorated or recorded, and his Covenant with men renewed and testified, might be easily proved. Whence it is that that which was burned upon the Altar is so often called the Memorial; as in Leviticus the 2. 5. 6, and 24. chapters. Accordingly the son of Sirach tells us, chap. 45. 16. that Aaron was chosen out of all men living, to offer sacrifices to the Lord, incense and a sweet savour, for a Memorial, to make reconciliation for his people. Add also that (Esay 66. 3.) Qui recordatur thure, quasi qui benedicat Idolo; He that (without true contrition and humiliation before the Lord) recordeth or maketh remembrance with incense, is as if he blessed an Idol. But I must not stay too long upon this.

1 Cor. 11.24.

You will say, What is all this to us now in the time of the Gospel? I answer, Yes: For did not Christ ordain the holy Eucharist to be the Memorial of his Name in the New Testament? This (saith he) is my Body, τὸτο ποιεῖτε εἰς τὴν ἐμὴν Ἀνάμνησιν, Do this for my Commemoration, or in Memorial of me. And what if I should affirm that Christ is as much present here as the Lord was upon the Mercy-seat between the Cherubims? Why should not then the Place of this Memorial under the Gospel have some semblable sanctity to that where the Name of God was recorded in the Law? And though we be not now tied to one only Place, as those under the Law were; and that God heareth the faithful prayers of his Servants wheresoever they are made unto him, (as also he did then:) yet should not the Places of his Memorial be promiscuous and common, but set apart to that sacred purpose. In a word, All those sacred Memorials of the Jewish Temple are both comprehended and excelled in this One of Christians; the Sacrifices, Shew-bread, and Ark of the Covenant; Christ's Body and Blood in the Eucharist being all these unto us in the New Testament, agreeable to that of the Apostle, Rom. 3. 25. God hath set forth Jesus Christ to be our ἱλαστήριον through faith in his blood, that is, our Propitiatory or Mercy-seat; for so it is called in the Greek both of the Old and New Testament; nor is the word, I think, ever used but in that sense, unless in Ezekiel 43. for the Settle of the Altar.

But you will say, This Christian Memorial is not always actually present in our Churches, as some one or other at least of those in the Law were in the Temple. I answer, It is enough, it is wont to be; as the Chair of State loses not its relation and due respect, though the King be not always there, And remember that the Ark of the Covenant was not in Jerusalem when Daniel opened his windows and prayed thitherward; yea, that it was wanting in the Holy Place (I mean that sacred Cabinet made by Moses) all the time of the second (or Zorobabel's) Temple; and yet the place esteemed notwithstanding as if it had been there.

You will yet except and say, That in the Old Testament those things were appointed by divine Law and Commandment, but in the New we find no such thing. I answer, In things for which we find no new Rule given in the New Testament, there we are referred and left to the Analogy of the Old. This the Apostle's proof taken from thence for the maintenance of the Ministers of the Gospel, 1 Cor. 9. 13, 14. [viz. Thus were they, Ergo, So God hath ordained that we] will give us to understand; likewise the practice of the Church in baptizing Infants, derived surely from the Analogy of Circumcision; the hallowing of every first day of the week, as one in every seven, from the Analogy of the Jewish Sabbath; and other the like. S. Hierome witnesseth the same in that saying of his, "Ut sciamus traditiones Apostolicas sumptas ex Veteri Testamento; quod Aaron & filii ejus atque Levitæ in Templo fuerunt, hoc sibi Episcopi, Presbyteri atque Diaconi vendicant in Ecclesia: That we may know (saith he) that the Apostolick traditions were derived from the Old Testament; that which Aaron, his Sons and the Levites were in the Temple, the same do Bishops, Priests and Deacons claim in the Church. For we are to consider, That the end of Christ's coming into the world was not properly to give new Laws unto men, but to accomplish the Law already given, and to publish the Gospel of Reconciliation, through his Name, to those who had transgressed it. Whence it is that we find not the style of the New Testament to carry a form of enacting Laws almost any where; but those which are there mentioned, to be brought in occasionally, only by way of proof, of interpretation, exhortation, application, or the like, and not as by way of constitution or re-enacting. Meanwhile, lest I should be mistaken, mark well that I said not, the Old Testament was to be our Rule simply in the case mentioned, but the Analogy thereof only; that is, this regulation is to be made according to that proportion which the difference of the two Covenants and the things in them admits, and no further: the more particular application and limitation of which Analogy is to be referred to the judgment and prudence of the Church.

There comes here very fitly into my mind a passage of Clement, (a man of the Apostolick age, he whose name S. Paul saith was written in the Book of life) in his genuine Epistle Ad Corinthios, lately set forth, pag. 52. "Πάντα (saith he) τάξει ποιῶν ὁφείλομεν, ὅσα ὁ δεσπότης ἐπιτελεῖν ἐκέλευσε· κατὰ καιρὸν τεταγμέναις τὰς τε προσφύρας καὶ λειτουργίας ἐπιτελεῖσθαι. Καὶ [γδ] ἐκ ἐκῇ ἢ ἀτάκτως ἐκέλευσε γίνεσθαι, ἀλλ' ὡρισμένοις καιροῖς καὶ ὥραις· Ὡς οὖν τε καὶ διὰ τῶν ἐπιτελεῖσθαι θέλει, αὐτὸς ὡρίσας τῇ ὑπερτάτῃ αὐτῷ βουλήσει· that is, All those duties which the Lord hath commanded us to do, we ought to do them regularly and orderly; our Oblations and

"divine Services to celebrate them on set and appointed times. For so he hath ordained, Ecclef. 5. 1.
 "not that we should do them at hap-bazard and without order, but at certain determined "days and times: WHERE also and BY WHOM he will have them executed, "himself hath defined according to his supreme will. But where hath the Lord defined these things, unless he hath left us to the Analogy of the Old Testament.

It follows in the Text alledged, There I will come unto thee, and bless thee. In the Place where the Lord's Memorial is, where his Colours, as I may so speak, are displayed and set up, there, in a special manner, he vouchsafes his presence with the sons of men to bless them: or, to speak rotundè, where his Memorial is, there His שכינה SHECINAH or Δόξα is, (as the Hebrew Masters term it,) that is, His * Hermes G L O R Y. * The Gentiles ascribed the presence of their Gods to the places where Trism. in As-

 to be understood, and to be construed by way of Antithesis or opposition: Thou shalt not lib. 5. c. 15.
*make with me gods of silver, nor gods of gold: An Altar only of earth, or of * stone, shalt* thou make unto me, to offer thy Sacrifices upon. For in every place where I shall record my Name, I will come unto thee, and bless thee. And here take notice, that for this reason the Tabernacle of the Lord was called אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד The Tabernacle of meeting; not of mens meeting together, as is commonly supposed, when we translate it, Tabernacle of the Congregation; but of God's meeting there with men. I have a good author for it; for so the Lord himself gives the reason of the name in three several places of the Law, אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד אֲשֶׁר אֶעֱבֹד לָכֶם שָׁמָּה, The Tabernacle of meeting, where I will meet with you. See Exod. 29. 42. 30. 36. Num. 17. 4. and Masius in Jos. c. 18.

SECTION II.

THUS we have seen What is the condition and property of that Place which in my Text is called God's House. But before I proceed to speak of the Duty of those who come thither, (which was the second thing I propounded) there is one thing yet to be cleared concerning that which I last mentioned, namely, How God is said to come unto, or to be present with, men in one place more than another; seeing his Presence fills every place; Heaven being his throne, and the whole Earth his footstool. For although we read often in Holy Scripture of such a SHECINAH, or speciality of the Divine presence, and have it often in our mouths; yet what it is, and wherein the Ratio thereof consisteth, is seldom, if at all, enquired into. When we speak of Churches, we content our selves to say, That God's special presence there is in his Word and Sacraments: But though it be true that the Divine Majesty is there specially present where his Word and Sacraments are; yet seems not this speciality of presence to be the same with his Word and Sacraments, but a diverse relation from them. This may be gathered, in some sort, out of those words of Exodus whereupon we have so long dwelt, as where the recording of God's Name and his coming thither are spoken of as two: but is more strongly evinced by such instances of Scripture, where the Lord is said to have been specially present in places where this Record of his Word and sacra- ments was not; as for example, to Moses in the Bush, to Jacob at Bethel, and the like.
 The true Ratio therefore of this SHECINAH or speciality of Divine Presence must be fought and defined by something which is common to all these, and not by that which is proper to some only.

Well then, to hold you no longer in suspense, This specification of the Divine pre- sence, whereby God is said to be in one place more than another, I suppose (under correction) to consist in his train or retinue. A King is there where his Court is, where his train and retinue are: So God the Lord of Hosts is there specially pre- sent where the Heavenly Guard, the blessed Angels, keep their sacred station and rendezvous.

That this is consonant to the revelation of holy Scripture, I shew, first, from the collection or inference which the Patriarch Jacob makes upon that Divine vision of his at Bethel: where having seen a ladder reaching from heaven to earth, and the Angels of God ascending and descending upon it; Surely, (saith he) the Lord is in this place, and I knew it not. How dreadful is this place! It is no other but

Gen. 28. 16, 17.

Ecclef. 5. 1.

the House of God, even the gate of Heaven, that is, Heaven's Guild-hall, Heaven's Court; namely, because of the Angels: For the Gate was wont to be the Judgment-Hall, and the Place where Kings and Senators used to sit, attended by their guard and ministers.

Exod. 19. 16, 18.

Secondly, I prove it from that interpretative expression used in the New Testament of the Lord's descent upon Mount Sinai when the Law was given; intimating, that the specification of the presence of the Divine Majesty there also consisted in the Angelical retinue there encamping. For so S. Steven, Acts 7. 53. You who have received the Law by the disposition of Angels, and have not kept it. S. Paul twice; first, Gal. 3. 19. The Law was added because of transgressions, διαταγὰς διὰ τῶν Ἀγγέλων ἐν χειρὶ μεσίτου, ordained by Angels in the hand of a Mediator: and again, Heb. 2. 2. he calls the Law, λόγος λαληθεὶς δι' Ἀγγέλων, the word spoken by Angels. Howbeit in the story it self we find no such thing expressed, but only that the Lord descended upon the Mount in a fiery and smoking cloud, accompanied with thunders and lightnings, with an earthquake, and the voice of a trumpet. Whence then should this expression of S. Steven and the Apostle proceed, but from a supposition, that the special presence of the Divine Majesty, wheresoever it is said to be, consisted in the encamping of his sacred retinue the Angels? for that of himself, He, who filleth the Heaven and the Earth, could not descend, nor be in one place more than another.

Marth. 16. 27.
Mark 8. 38.

Yea all the Apparitions of the Divine Majesty in Scripture are described by this retinue. That of the Ancient of days coming to judgment, Dan. 7. 10. Thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; to wit, of Angels. Whence we read in the Gospel, that Christ our Saviour shall come in the glory of his Father, that is, with an Host of Angels, as the Holy Ghost himself in the same places expounds it: for Δόξα or Glory here signifies the Presence of the Divine Majesty.

* That is, came unto them resting upon Sinai. Compare Psal. 68. vers. 17. or 18.

In the same style, of the same Appearing, prophesied Enoch, the seventh from Adam, Jude verse 14. Ἴδε, ἦλθε Κύριος ἐν ταῖς ἀγίαις μυριάσιν αὐτοῦ, Behold, the Lord cometh with his holy Myriads, or ten thousands; for so it ought to be rendred, and not, as we have it, with ten thousand of his Saints. Wherefore here the vulgar Latine comes nearer, which hath, Ecce, venit Dominus in sanctis millibus suis. A like expression whereunto of the Divine presence we shall find in Moses Blessing, Dent. 33. 2. *The Lord (saith he) came* from Sinai unto them, (i. unto Israel) and rose up from Seir unto them; he shined forth from mount Paran, he came with his holy ten thousands, or holy Myriads, (for so it should be translated: then it follows,) from his right hand went a fiery law for them.* From whence perhaps that notion of the Jewish Doctors, followed by S. Steven and the Apostle [That the Law was given by Angels] had its beginning. And thus you have heard out of Scripture What that is whereby the special presence of the Divine Majesty is (as I suppose) defined, that is, wherein it consists; namely, such as is applicable to all places wherein he is said to be thus present, even to Heaven it self his Throne and Seat of glory, the proper place (as every one knows) of Angelical residence.

Now, according to this manner of presence is the Divine Majesty to be acknowledged present in the Places where his Name is recorded, as in his Temple under the Law, and in our Christian Oratories or Churches under the Gospel; namely, that the heavenly Guard there attend and keep their rendezvous, as in their Master's House: according to that vision which the Prophet Esay had thereof, Esay 6. 1. I saw the Lord (saith he) sitting upon a Throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the Temple, [Septuagint, and John 12. 41. Δόξα αὐτοῦ] that is, the Angels and Seraphims his Skiptores; as may be gathered from that which immediately follows, verse 3. where it is said, The Seraphims cried one unto another, Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord God of hosts; the whole earth is full of his Glory.

* De Bello Jud. lib. 2. cap. 16.

This King Agrippa in * Josephus intimates, in that Oration he is said to have made unto the Jews a little before that fatal siege, deborting them from rebelling against the Romans: where speaking to the people hard by, and in view of that sacred Temple, he hath these words; *Μαρτύρομαι ὃ ἐγὼ μὲν ὑμῶν τὰ Ἁγία καὶ τὰ ἱερὰ ἀγαγέμενος τῷ Θεῷ, I call to witness your sacred Temple and * the holy Angels of God; namely, which encamp there.*

* To whom some think that voice may be referred before the destruction of the Temple, Migremus hinc, Let us depart hence.

The same is implied in that of the 138. Psalm, ver. 1, 2. according to the translation of the Septuagint and Vulgar; Ἐναντίον ἀγγέλων, In conspectu Angelorum psallam tibi; Adorabo ad Templum sanctum tuum, & confitebor Nomini tuo: Before the Angels I will sing praise unto thee; I will worship towards thy holy Temple, and praise thy Name.

And

And according to this sense I understand that of Solomon in this Book of Ecclesiastes within two or three verses of my Text, concerning vows to be made in God's House: Ecclef. 5. 1. When thou vowest a vow, defer not to pay it — Better it is thou shouldest not vow, than vow and not pay. Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin; neither say thou BEFORE THE ANGEL, It was an error; — that is, Let not such a foolish excuse come from thee in the house of God, before the holy Angels. For note that the word Angel may be taken* collectively, for more than one.

For this cause all the curtains of the * Tabernacle were filled with the pictures of Cherubims, and the * walls of Solomon's Temple within with carved Cherubims; * the Ark of the Testimony overspread and covered with two mighty Cherubims, having their faces looking towards it and the Mercy-seat, (μαρτυριον) with their wings stretched forth on high, called Heb. 9. 5. The Cherubims of glory, that is, of the Divine Presence: All to signify, that where God's sacred Memorial is, the ensign of his Covenant and commerce with men, there the blessed Angels out of duty give their attendance.

Nor is it to be over-passed, that the Jews at this day continue the like opinion of their modern Places of worship; namely, that the blessed Angels frequent their assemblies, and praise and laud God with them in their Synagogues: notwithstanding they have no other Memorial of his there than an imitative one only, to wit, a Chest with a Volume or Roll of the Law therein, in stead of the Ark with the two Tables. For thus speaks the Seder Tephilloth, or Form of prayer used by the Jews of Portugal; O Lord our God, the Angels, that supernal company, gathered together with thy people Israel here below, do crown thee with praises, and altogether do thrice redouble and cry that spoken of by the Prophet, Holy, Holy, Holy Lord God of hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory. They allude to Esay's Vision of the Glory of God, above mentioned.

You will say, Such a presence of Angels perhaps there was in that Temple under the Law; but there is no such thing in the Gospel. No? why? Are the Memorials of God's Covenant, his Insignia in the Gospel, less worthy of their attendance than those of the Law? or have the Angels, since the nature of man, Jesus Christ our Lord, became their Head and King, gotten an exemption from this service? Surely not. S. Paul, if we will understand and believe him, supposes the contrary, in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, chap. 11. verse 10. where treating of a comely and decent accommodation to be observed in Church-assemblies, and in particular of womens being covered or veiled there, he enforces it from this presence of Angels; For this cause (saith he) ought the woman to have a covering on her head, δια τῶν Ἀγγέλων, because of the Angels; namely, which are there present. For otherwise the reason holds not, that she should more be covered in the Place of Prayer than any where else, unless the Angels be more there than elsewhere. This place much troubleth the Expositors: but see what it is to admit a truth; for now there is no difficulty in it.

And that the ancient Fathers conceived no less venerably of their Christian Oratories in this particular than the Jews did of their Temple, appears by S. Chrysostom, who is very frequent in urging an awful and reverent behaviour in God's house from this motive of Angelical presence. As in his Homily* 36. in 1 Corinth. where reproving the irreverent behaviour of his Auditory in that Church, in talking, walking, saluting, and the like, (which he saith was peculiar unto them, and such as no Christians elsewhere in the world presumed to do,) he enforces his reproof with words that come home to our purpose: "Non tonsrina, (inquit,) neque unguentaria officina, neque ulla alia opificum qui sunt in foro taberna, est Ecclesia; sed Locus Angelorum, Locus Archangelorum, Regia Dei, ipsum Cælum: The Church (saith he) is no Barber's or Drug-seller's shop, nor any other crafts-mans or merchants workhouse or warehouse in the market-place; but the place of Angels, the place of Archangels, the Palace of God, Heaven it self."

* In Moral.

And in his 4. Homily De incomprehensibili Dei natura, towards the end; "Cogita apud quem proximè stas, quibuscum invoces Deum; scil. cum Cherubim, cum Seraphim, cum omnibus cæli Virtutibus: animadvertite quos habeas socios: satis hoc tibi sit ad sobrietatem, cum recorderis te corpore constantem & carne coagmentatum, admitti cum Virtutibus incorporeis celebrare omnium Dominum: Think near whom thou standest, with whom thou invocatest God; namely, with Cherubims and Seraphims, and all the Powers of Heaven: consider but what companions thou hast: let it be sufficient to persuade thee to sobriety, when thou remembrest that thou, who art compounded of flesh and blood, art admitted with the incorporeal Powers to celebrate the common Lord of all. But all this, you will say, the Angels may do in Heaven. Well, let it be so, yet is it if not altogether out of our way : but the next places I shall bring will not be so eluded.

Namely, that in his 15. Homily upon the Epistle to the Hebrews, against those that laughed in the Church : "Regiam quidem ingrediens, & habitu, & aspectu, & incessu, & omnibus aliis te ornas & componis : Hic autem verè est Regia, & planè hic talia qualia cœlestia ; & rides ? Atque scio quidem quòd tu non vides. Audi autem, quòd ubique adjunt Angeli, & maxime in Domo Dei adstant Regi, & omnia sunt impleta incorporeis illis Potestatibus : When thou goest into a King's Palace, thou composest thy self to a comeliness in thy habit, in thy look, in thy gate, and in all thy whole guise : But here is indeed the Palace of a King, and the like attendance to that in Heaven ; and dost thou laugh ? I know well enough thou seest it not. But hear thou me, and know that Angels are every where, and that chiefly in the House of God they attend upon their King, where all is filled with these incorporeal Powers."

The like unto this you shall find in his 24. Homily upon the Acts of the Apostles ; "Knowest thou not that thou standest here with Angels, that with them thou singest, with them thou laudest God with Hymns ? and dost thou laugh ? See the rest."

I will alledge but one passage more of his, lest I should grow tedious, and that is out of his 6. Book de sacerdotio, not very far from the beginning ; where speaking of the time when the holy Eucharist is celebrated, "τότε (saith he) ὁ ἄγγελος παρῆναι κασι τῷ ἱερεὶ, καὶ ἑρανίων δυνάμεων ἀπαντὸς ὁ ἅμα βοᾷ, καὶ ὁ περὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον πληρεῖται τόπος, εἰς τιμὴν τὴν καμμένην." Then the Angels stand by the Priest, and the whole Quire resounds with celestial Powers, and the place about the Altar is filled with them, in honour of him who is laid thereon, that is, of his Memorial. Compare with it a like passage in his 3. Hom. De incomprehensibili Dei natura ; Item Hom. 1. De verbis Isaie.

Οὐκ οἶδας ὅτι μετὰ Ἀγγέλων ἑστῶτες, μετ' ἐκείνων αἰδέσῃς, μετ' ἐκείνων ἐμνεῖς ; καὶ ἐστῶτες γελῶν ;

[That it was the sense of the Ancient Church (That Christ is offered in the Eucharist by way of Commemoration only) see it proved in the following Treatise of The Christian Sacrifice, Chap. 9.]

(a) Doubt not but an Angel is present, when Christ is present, when Christ is offered.

S. Ambrose acknowledgeth the same in c. 1. Luc. (a) "Non dubites assistere Angelum, quando Christus assistit, Christus immolatur."

Yea Tertullian, ( in whose time, which was within two hundred years after Christ, some will scarcely believe that Christians had any such Places as Churches at all, ) if I understand him, intimates as much in his Lib. de Oratione c. 12. where reprehending the irreverent gesture of some in sitting at the time of Prayer in the Church ; "Si quidem (saith he) irreverens est assidere sub conspectu contraque conspectum ejus quem cum maxime reverearis ac venereris ; quanto magis sub conspectu Dei vivi, ANGELO adhuc ORATIONIS adstante, factum illud irreligiosissimum est ; nisi exprobramus Deo, quòd nos oratio fatigaverit ? If it be an irreverent thing to sit in the sight and before him whom thou in a special manner honourest and reverencest ; how much more is it an act most irreligious to do it in the presence of the living God, the ANGEL OF PRAYER, yet standing by ; unless we upbraid God, that we have wearied our selves with praying ? Mark [ In the presence of the living God, the Angel of Prayer standing by ] that is, in the presence of the living God specified by his Angel ; the latter being an explanation of the former. It is like unto that in this chapter of my Text, say not thou before the Angel, It was an error : yet I believe not borrowed thence ; forasmuch as the Septuagint, whose translation Tertullian was only acquainted with and every where follows, have no mention of Angel in that place, but of God ; rendring it, Μὴ εἴπῃς πρὸ προσώπου τοῦ Θεοῦ, say not before the presence of God. Which shews how they understood it."

I cite the passage of these Fathers thus at large, lest I might to some seem to broach a Novelty. And though some of those of S. Chrysostome be Hyperbolically expressed ; yet for the main and substance of what he intended, I believe it to be true, and ground my belief upon the authority of S. Paul before alledged, Διὰ τῶν Ἀγγέλων, Because of the Angels. If any shall say, whatsoever were then, they will not believe there is any such kind of presence in our Churches now : I must tell them, If it be so, it is because of our irreverent and unseemly behaviour in them, which makes those blessed Spirits loath our company. For though they be invisible and incorporeal creatures, yet can they not look into our hearts, ( that is God their Master's prerogative ) but are witnesses of our outward behaviour and actions only ; and it was a case of external decorum, wherein the Apostle mentions this presence of theirs for a motive or reason ; For this cause ought the woman to have a covering on her head, because of the Angels. For they love not to behold any thing that is uncomely and unbecoming, but fly from it : and if we lose their company, the best members of our congregation are wanting.

Thus

Thus you have heard what is the dignity and prerogative of God's House. Who now that considers and believes this, (and there was a time when it was believed,) will not say with the Patriarch Jacob, when he saw the Angels ascending and descending at Bethel, Quàm reverenda sunt hæc loca ! How reverend are these places ! For every Place where the name of God is recorded, is Bethel, where the Angels of God are ascending and descending, that is, God in a special manner present and meeting with men. How seemly therefore, orderly and awfully should we compose our selves in them? how reverent should our manner be at our coming into them? which is the second thing I propounded to speak of. Thus much therefore of God's House: I come now to the Duty of those who come thither; Look to thy feet when thou comest to the House of God.

Eccles. 5. 1.

SECTION III.

LOOK to thy feet, שמר רגליך; for so the Cethib or Textual reading hath it: the Masorites in the margin note another reading, רגלך in the singular number. But which way soever of the two it be read, the sense is still the same; Look to thy foot being to be expounded plurally Look to thy feet, as in other places of Scripture. The Symbolical application of this Precept to the purifying and ridding the Mind of corrupt and fleshly thoughts, though it be useful, and the thing it self true, yet I will let pass, as being not argumentative; and betake my self wholly to the παραματικόν or Literal meaning, which the Symbolical or Tropological signification destroyeth not, but presupposeth. The meaning therefore in general is; Have a care that thy feet be as they should be, when thou goest (or comest) to the House of God. But what is that? Most of the Interpreters (saith Aben Ezra) compare it with that which is said of Mephibosheth, 2 Sam. 19. 24. לא-עשרו רגליו He dressed not his feet, that is, He washed them not: So here, Look to thy feet when thou goest to the House of God, is as much as to say, Come not into God's House illotis pedibus, with unwashed feet. This is true, but goes not far enough. For I suppose here is an allusion in particular to that Rite of Discalceation used by the Jews and other Nations of the Orient at their coming into Sacred places; namely, that whereof the Lord spake to Moses, Exod. 3. 5. and again to Josua, Jos. 5. 15. Exue calceamenta tua de pedibus tuis; locus enim in quo stas terra sancta est: Put thy shoes from thy feet; for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

For although the verb לך here used signifies properly motum à loco, that is, to go; and not in locum, to come, (in which respect the Rite of washing the feet perhaps, being a preparatory act, might agree better with it;) yet is it not always so used: besides, it is an unusual Trope in Scripture, ex antecedente intelligere consequens, by the antecedent to understand the consequent; which hath place here. That whereby I gather it is, because the Precepts following my Text, whereunto this word of motion belongs ἀπὸ κοινοῦ, (that is, in common) are not of things to be done when we are going to the House of God, but when we are comethither: as, When thou comest to the House of God, be not rash nor hasty to utter any thing before God, &c. When thou comest to the House of God, and makest a vow before him, defer not to pay it, — neither say thou before the Angel, &c. — To which may be added the latter part of my Text, When thou comest to the house of God, be more ready to hear, or obey, than to offer the sacrifice of fools. All, as you see are of things to be done when we are come into God's house. Therefore כאשר תלך which is common to them, should rather note motum in termino ad quem; not when thou goest, but when thou comest to the house of God; and accordingly this admonition of care to be had of the feet, to intend something to be observed when we come there, rather than when we are going thither: Which was, (as I have said) among the Jews and other Nations, of the Orient especially, that Rite of Discalceation, or putting off their shoes, still used and continued amongst them unto this day, when they come into their Temples and Sacred places.

Which that I affirm not without good warrant, in case any one shall doubt thereof, these Testimonies following will sufficiently evidence. First, That Symbol of Pythagoras, Ἀντιπρόσθετος δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν προσκύνει, OFFER SACRIFICE AND WORSHIP WITH THY SHOES OFF. What mystical or symbolical sense he intended, I enquire not; but it is plain, his expression alludes to some such custom then used by those who came to worship in the Temples of their Gods.

Exod. 2. 5.

Wherein that my collection fails me not, Justin Martyr will bear me witness in his second Apology, where he tells us, That those who came to worship in the Sanctuaries and Temples of the Gentiles were commanded by their Priests ἀπολυσθαι, that is, to put off their shoes : which their Gods learned (saith he) by way of Imitation, from that which the Lord spake to Moses out of the flaming Bush, Loose thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. This Testimony for the antiquity of the practice is without exception. Yet by the Father's good leave, I am prone to think that those words unto Moses gave not the first beginning unto it, but were an admonition only of the Divine presence, thereby commanding the Rite then accustomed in places so hallowed : and that therefore it was rather, as other Religious Rites, derived unto the Gentiles by Tradition from the Patriarchs before Moses ; of whom both the Jews and those Nations of the Orient which agreed with them in this custom were descended. Concerning whose present custom Druſius in his Notes upon Josua affirmeth, "Quod etiam nunc apud plerasque Orientis Nationes placitum sit, calceato pede Templorum pavimenta calcasse : That even to this day among most of the Nations of the Orient it is reputed a piacular crime, to tread upon the pavements of their Temples with their shoes on their feet."

For the Jews in particular, that this Rite of Veneration was anciently used by them in Places sanctified by the Divine Presence ; Maimonides puts us out of doubt, telling us in his Beth Habbechirah, chap. 7. "That it was not lawful for a man to come in to the Mountain of God's House with HIS SHOES ON HIS FEET, or with his staffe, or in his working garment, or with dust on his feet, and the like. The same hath Rabbi Solomon upon the 19. of Levit. ver. 30.

It is further confirmed by their modern practice in their Synagogues ; even here in these Western and colder parts of the world : where though no such custome be in use as in the Orient, nor our manners with conveniencie capable thereof, yet they still observe it, as far as the guise of the West will permit them ; an argument it descends unto them by a strong and rooted Tradition from their forefathers. My Author is Buxtorf. Synagog. Judaic. lib. 5. c. 5. where he hath these words ; "Ante Synagogam vel Scholam ipsorum ferrum quoddam habent immuratum, ad quod quilibet calceos immundos aut cœnosos abstergere tenetur ; idque Solomonis autoritate, qui, Custodi, ait, pedem tuum — Quisquis crepidis indutus est, is eas immundas de pedibus suis detrahere tenetur — prout scriptum est, Solve calceamenta tua de pedibus tuis, &c." that is, Before their Synagogues they have a certain iron fastned in a wall, whereat every one is bound to make clean his foul or dirty shoes ; and that by the authority of Solomon, who saith, Look to thy foot, &c. Whosoever hath slippers on, is bound they being foul to put them quite off, ( viz. before he enters into the Synagogue ) according as it is written, Loose thy shoes from off thy feet, &c.

And for the Mahumetans, what they do in their Mosques, Bartlemew Georgiovez, who was a long time a captive amongst them, can best inform us, in his Book De ritu & ceremoniis Turcarum. "Quicumque (saith he) veniunt ad orationem, debent abluer manus, pedes, &c. postremo ter spargunt aquam super capita, recitando hæc verba, ELHEMDU LILLAHI, ( i. gloria Deo meo : ) Deinde exutis calceamentis Patismagh dictis, iisque ante januam Templi relictis, introeunt, alii NUDIS PEDIBUS, alii habentes munda calceamenta Mesth dicta. That is, Such as come to pray, their duty is first to wash their hands feet, &c. at last they sprinkle water over their heads thrice, repeating these words, ELHEMDU LILLAHI, ( that is, Glory be to my God : ) Then putting off their shoes, called Patismagh, and leaving them before the door of the Temple, they enter, some barefooted, others having a clean kind of sandal, which they call Mesth ; namely as the custom is with us, when we pull off our hats, to wear a cap.

Lastly, That we may not want an instance among Christians, Zaga Zabo, an Æthiopian Bishop, sent Ambassador from David King of the Abyssines to John the third King of Portugal, above an hundred years since, in his description of the Religion and Rites of the Abyssine Christians, thus informs us : * "Prohibitum est apud nos (saith he) nè aut gentes, aut canes, aut alia hujusmodi animalia, in Tempia nostra intrent. Item non datur potestas nobis adeundi Templum, nisi NUDIS PEDIBUS ; neque licet nobis in ipso Templo ridere, obambulare, aut de rebus prophanis loqui, neque spuer aut screare in ipso Templo. Quia Ecclesiæ Æthiopum non sunt similes terræ illi ubi populus Israel comedit Agnum Paschalem decedens ab Ægypto, ( in quo loco, propter terræ pollutionem, jussit eos Deus comedere indutos calceamentis & zonis accinctos ; ) sed similes sunt monti Sinai, ubi Dominus locutus est Moſi, dicens, Exue calceamenta tua

"tua de pedibus tuis, quoniam terra quam pedes tui premunt sancta est. That is, It is prohibited amongst us that either Pagans, or dogs, or any other beasts should come into our Churches. Moreover, it is not permitted to us to go into the Church, but BARE-FOOTED; nor is it lawful for us in the Church to * laugh, or to walk up and down, or to speak of secular matters, no not to spit, hawk or hem in the Church. Because the Churches of Ethiopia are not like unto that Land where the people of Israel, ready to depart out of Egypt, ate the Paschal Lamb, (where, because of the pollution of the countrey, God commanded them to eat it with their shoes on their feet and their loins girded;) but they are like unto Mount Sinai, where God spake unto Moses, saying, put off thy shoes from thy feet, for the ground whereon thy feet tread is holy. Thus Zaga Zabo of the Abyssine Christians, whereof he was a Bishop. And till the contrary be shewed me, I am prone to believe that some other Christians of the Jacobite sect may have the like custom, as it is certain that in most of their Rites they agree with them.

Now the religious guise of the Jews and other Nations of the Orient having anciently been (and still being) such as you have heard, when they entered into their Temples, or remained in them; the words of my Text, Look to thy Foot or Feet, being taken for an expression borrowed from and alluding thereto, will have the same sense, as if we, inflecting them to our manners, should say, Look unto thy Head, (that is, have a care thy Head be fitted as it ought to be) when thou comest into the House of God; meaning that he should put off his hat, or be uncovered, when he comes thither, and use such other reverence as is wont to accompany it. For know that the Holy Ghost, mentioning or specifying but one Rite, is yet so to be understood as implying therewith the rest of the same order accustomed to go with it; according to that usual Trope of Scripture, by a part, or that which is more notable or obvious in any kind or rank of things, to imply the rest; the rule whereby we interpret the Decalogue, and is the more fitly applicable here, because this guise of Discalceation was a leading Ceremonie to the other gestures of Sacred veneration then used, as that of putting off the hat (in civil use at least) is wont to be with us. Not as if Solomon or the Holy Ghost in this Admonition intended the outward Ceremonie only, and no more; (that were ridiculous to imagine;) but the whole act of Sacred reverence commenced in the heart and affection, whereof this was the accustomed and leading gesture: to wit, the very same and all that which the Lord commandeth in that original law, Lev. 19.30. Sanctuarium meum reveremini, Reverence my Sanctuary; which Jonathan's Targum explaineth, לביית מקדשי יהוה אוליך בהחלטה, Te shall go to the House of my Sanctuary with reverence; Solomon paralleleth here with, Look to thy foot when thou goest to the House of God. For so is the manner of Scripture almost every where, under the name of the Gesture only to understand and imply the whole dutie of Veneration which such Gesture representeth and importeth.

But as this is most true, so is it on the other side as false, if any shall from hence collect, That therefore the Outward worship may securely be neglected, (in Time, and Place where and when it may be done,) so the Inward be performed. Nay the contrary follows: For if the Inward worship be chiefly intended when the Outward or Bodily is only named, as it is granted; is it not then absurd to imagine, that where that which is not expressly named is meant, there that which is only mentioned should be excluded? Nay surely, where the Outward is mentioned, (as here in my Text,) there no doubt but the Outward, in one kind or other, is a part of the dutie commanded, whatsoever besides it be intended. And because it is a disease almost proper to our time, (for our forefathers were mostly sick of the other extreme,) so far to slight and disesteem (that I may not say disdain) the worship of God by the Body, as to think it may be omitted and neglected even in Time and Place convenient, as in God's House and publick service, without all guilt of sin; give me therefore leave to propound a few Considerations for the Cure of such as are sick of that maladie. For as that which seems but some lighter Symptome at the first, if the cure thereof be neglected and contemned, oftentimes proves fatal, and destroys life it self; so may this. I would have them therefore consider,

1. That we all look not only for the Glorification of our Souls, but of our Bodies in the life to come: Now a Reward presupposeth a Work. It is meet and right therefore we should worship and glorifie God here in this life with the Body as well as the Soul, if we look that God should one day glorifie both.

2. That

Ecclef. 5. 1.

2. That as the Outward worship without the Inward is dead, so the Inward without the Outward is not complete; even as the Glorification of the Soul separate from the Bodie is not, nor shall be consummate, till the Body be again united unto it.

3. That those who derogate so much from Bodily worship in the service of the true God, as kneeling, bowing, and the like, make by consequent Idolatrie a sin far less hainous in degree than it is. For is not Idolatrie to communicate that honour with a creature which is due unto the Creator alone? By how much therefore the worship of gesture and posture is less due unto God when we do our homage unto him, by so much is the sin the less hainous and grievous when the same is given unto an Idol. For I believe, they will not deny but part of the sin of Idolatrie consists even in the outward worship given unto an Idol, as kneeling, bowing, and falling down before it, and the like.

4. Lastly, That although Bodily worship, being considered in it self, be one of the minora Legis, of the lesser things of the Law, and the honour done unto God thereby of no great value (though not of none) in his sight; yet may a voluntary and presumptuous neglect even of so small a duty be a great and hainous sin, because such a neglect proceeds from a prophane disposition and election of the heart. For a sin is not always to be esteemed according to the value of the duty omitted, but from the heart's election in omitting it. Non est bonum per se (saith Seneca) munda vestis, sed munda vestis electio; quia non in re bonum est, sed in electione: that is, A clean garment hath no goodness of it self, but it is the election of a clean garment which is commended; because the goodness consists not in the thing, but in the election thereof. So say I here; It is not the value or merit of the work which aggravates the sin in omitting the doing thereof, but the Election not to do it.

Now therefore to return to my Hypothesis; By that which hath been delivered it appears, That it is not only lawful to use some Reverential gesture when we come into God's House, (which yet some think they are very liberal if they grant,) but that it is a duty commanded by God himself, and so no Will-worship; as namely in that Divine admonition given first to Moses, and afterward to Josua, Put thy shoes from off thy feet, &c. in that Law, Reverence my sanctuary; in this Instruction by Solomon, Look to thy feet when thou comest to the house of God: That the Saints and people of God in the Old Testament, and Christians in the New, have used such Reverence: That the neglect thereof is condemned of Prophaneness by the practice of Jews, * Gentiles, Pagans, Mahumetans, all Religions whatsoever: if any be to be excepted (proh pudor & dolor!) it is our selves.

sacrificium accessuri vultum submitimus, togam adducimus, in omne argumentum modestie fingimus. We enter our Temples with a composed gesture, coming to sacrifice we let fall our Countenance, draw in our Gown, are framed to all shew of Humility.

But without doubt, in this we are not in the right, nor was it so from the beginning. Whatsoever is dedicated unto God in general, or (to speak in the phrase of Scripture) whatsoever is called by his Name, that is, is His by peculiar relation, ought to be used with a different respect from things common: and God's House (as you have heard) hath something singular from the rest. Should we then come into it as into a Barn or Stable? It was not (once) good manners so to come into a mans house: For our Blessed Saviour, when he sent forth his Disciples to preach the Gospel, Matt. 10. 12. said, εἰσερχόμενοι εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, ἀσπάζεσθε αὐτήν, when ye enter into an house, salute it. Why should we not think it a part of religious manners to do something answerable when we come into the House of God? that is, to bless the Master thereof, (you know how far that word extendeth;) and if not to say, God be here, (which hath been the form, and is somewhere still, when we enter into a mans House) yet to say with * Jacob at Bethel, God is here; and to testify in some manner or other, as the Saints of God were wont to do, that we acknowledge it; and that both at our first coming thither, and while we continue there; for the one follows from the other. And because I paralleled before that Oriental rite of Disalceation (whereunto I supposed the words of my Text to have reference) with ours of Uncovering the Head, by the name of a leading ceremonie; if any shall therefore ask me, what other Gesture I implied thereby as fitting to accompany this in the case we speak of, I answer, That belongs to the discretion of our Superiours and the authority of the Church to appoint, not to me to determine. For here as in other Ceremonies, the Church is not tied, but hath liberty to ordain (having respect to the Analogy of the Old Testament) what she shall judge most suitable and agreeable to the time, place, and manners of the people where she lives. But if I may without offence or presumption tion speak what I think, then I say, That Adoration, or Bowing of the body, with some short ejaculation, ( which the Church of Israel used in their Temple together with Discealcation, and which the Christians of the Orient use at this day, and time out of mind have done, at their ingress into their Churches, ) is of all other the most seemly, ready and fitting to our manners; which yet I submit: namely, according to that of the 132. Psal. v. 7. Introibimus in Tabernacula ejus, incurvabimus nos scabello pedum ejus: We will go into his Tabernacles, and worship before ( or toward ) his Footstool, that is, the Ark of the Covenant or Mercy-seat, which you shall find thus styled, 1 Chron. 28. 2. and according to that, Psal. 5. 7. I will enter into thine House in the multitude of thy mercies; in thy fear will I worship toward thy holy Temple, ( i. Nadab, for they stood in the Courts when they worshipped ) which is the Form the Jews use at this day when they come first into their Places of worship; and so might we too, for any thing I know. The ordinary form among the Greeks is that of the Publican, God be merciful to me a sinner; yet sometimes they premise this of the Psalms before it.

SECTION IV.

AND thus have I done with the First part of my Text, which for distinction sake I called The Admonition: I come now to the Second, which I termed A Caution; Be more ready to obey, than to offer the Sacrifice of fools: as much as to say, Prefer not the Secondary service of God before the First and Principal. Our Translation hath, Be more ready to hear, than, &c. whereby some have taken occasion childishly to apply this Scripture against that custom of a short and private Prayer at our first coming into the Church, before we joyn with the Congregation. For we should ( say they ) rather hear and listen to what the Minister is reading or speaking, ( as Solomon here bids us; ) than at such a time to betake our selves to any private devotion; which ( say they ) is but the Sacrifice of fools. But I would themselves who thus argue were as wise as they should be: For if they were, they would consider both that Solomon ( according to the time wherein he spake ) must needs mean of another kind of Sacrifice than what so loose a notion importeth, namely of such as were then used in the Temple he had built; and besides, that this sense of theirs directly thwarts the purport and meaning of the words going before, which is, that we ought to use some sign of reverence when we come into the house of God, such as according to the custom of the West is this. But though none of these things were, yet would this Text be nothing to their purpose: Forasmuch as by Hearing in this place is not meant auricular hearing, but practical, that is, Obedience to God's commandments, according as the Vulgar hath, * Melior est obedientia quam victimæ stultorum. For it is the same with that Proverbial sentence of Scripture, Obedience is better than Sacrifice, which Samuel used in that bitter reproof of King Saul, for sparing Agag and the best of the spoil of the Amalekites, upon a pretence of sacrificing to the Lord in Gilgal. Hath the Lord ( saith he ) as great delight in burnt-offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice; and to hearken, than the fat of rams. The word here twice rendered obey, is עָמַל the same which is in my Text, and it is an ordinary signification thereof in Scripture. The case is clear.

* Obedience is better than the Sacrifices of fools. 1 Sam. 15. 22.

But was not the offering of Sacrifice, will some man say, part of the obedience due unto the divine Law? How come they then to be thus opposed one to the other? Give me leave therefore, before I give my full explication of this passage, to enquire and consider of some others, of much more difficulty in this respect, yet their meaning conducing to the understanding of this.

There are divers places in Scripture disparaging and villifying Sacrifices, yea so far, as if Sacrifice were a service which God neither appointed nor approved. As Psal. 51. 16, 17. Thou desirest not Sacrifice, (saith David,) else would I have given it thee; but thou delightest not in burnt-offerings. The sacrifice of God is a troubled spirit; a broken and contrite heart, O God thou wilt not despise. Hosea 6. 6. I will have mercy, and not sacrifice. Micah 6. 6. Wherewith shall I come before the Lord, and bow my self before the most High? shall I come before him with burnt-offerings, with calves of a year old? 7. Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, and with ten thousands of rivers of oyl? shall I give my first-born for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?

Ecclef. 5. 1.

soul? 8. He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? Nay, Jer. 7. 21, 22, 23. he seems to say expressly, that he never commanded them: Put (saith he) your burnt-offerings unto your sacrifices, and eat flesh. For I spake not unto your Fathers nor commanded them, in the day that I brought them out of the Land of Egypt, concerning burnt-offerings and sacrifices: But this thing commanded I them, saying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people; and walk ye in the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well with you.

Exod. 8: 27.

Yet nothing is more plain than that God ordained sacrifices at Mount Sinai. How then shall this difficulty be resolved? Some, and those of the Ancients too, have affirmed, that these Ordinances of sacrifice were not given to Israel at first, nor prima intentione Dei; but were (as they call them) ἐπεσπαστα, superinducta, afterwards imposed upon them, when they had committed Idolatry in making and worshipping the golden Calf. But the contrary to this is also apparent. For to pass by Cain and Abel's sacrifices and the sacrifices of Noah and Abraham; when the Lord pronounced the Decalogue from Mount Sinai, he added this, as it were an Appendix thereto, Ye shall not make with me gods of silver, neither shall ye make unto you gods of gold: Only an Altar thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt-offerings, and thy peace-offerings, thy sheep and thine Oxen, &c. and this before Moses came down from the Mount, or the Calf was yet made. Nay, more than all this, when Moses and Aaron were sent unto Pharaoh, the effect of their Embassy was, The God of the Hebrews saith, Let my people go, that they may sacrifice unto me, three dayes journey in the wilderness. And when Pharaoh would have given them leave to have sacrificed to their God in the Land; No, (saith Moses) we will go three days journey into the wilderness, and there sacrifice to the Lord our God, as he hath commanded us. What shall we answer then to those passages of Scripture where God disclaimeth sacrifice, saying, he required no such Service at his peoples hands; yea, that he commanded them no such thing when he brought them out of the Land of Egypt?

For the assailing this difficulty, according to the differing quality of the passages which are or may be produced to this purpose, I lay down these three Propositions.

Matt. 19. 20.

1. That according to the propriety and genius of the Hebrew tongue, a Comparative sense is often expressed after the form of an Antithesis: As in that of Joel, Rent your hearts, and not your garments; that is, more or rather than your garments: Prov. 8. 10. Receive my instruction, and not silver; that is, rather than silver, (as the words following teach us to construe it) and knowledge rather than choice gold. Likewise in the New Testament, Lay not up treasures for your selves on earth, but lay up for your selves treasures in heaven; that is, Treasures in Heaven rather than treasures on earth; have more care to lay up the one than the other.

According to this construction only, without more ado, some of the aforesaid passages will be discharged of their difficulty: as namely that of Hosea, I desired mercy, and not sacrifice, that is, more or rather than sacrifice; as the following words give us to understand, which are, and the knowledge of God more than burnt-offerings; and according as the same sense is elsewhere expressed, as Prov. 21. 3. To do justice and judgment, is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice. But all will not be thus salved.

2. Wherefore I lay down this second Proposition; That antecedenter, antecedently, it is true, that God commanded not Sacrifice should be offered unto him, neither when the Law was given, nor before; but consequenter, consequently only. For the understanding whereof we must know, That sacrifice was a Rite whereby men renewed a Covenant with God, by making atonement for their sin; therefore it presupposed a breach and transgression of the Law. But the will of God was not, that men should transgress his Law, and violate the Covenant he had made with them, but that they should observe and keep it; which if they did, sacrifice would have no place. This is that I mean, when I say that God required not nor commanded Sacrifice antecedenter, but that men should keep his Commandments. But in case sin were committed, and the articles of his Covenant violated, then and in such a state God ordained and admitted of sacrifice for a Rite of atonement and reintegration of his Covenant with men: that is, he commanded Sacrifice only consequenter, consequently, as a remedy, if sin were committed. And if those Ancients could be thus understood who say that sacrifice was not ordained when the Law was first given, but after it was transgressed; namely, if their meaning were only, that the ordinance of Sacrifice presupposed a transgression of the Law; then their Assertion were true: but otherwise historically taken, it cannot be defended. Now according to this proposition proposition is of that of Jeremy 7. 22, 23. to be understood, (or if there be any other like it) I spake not unto your Fathers, nor commanded them, in the day that I brought them out of the Land of Egypt, concerning burnt-offerings and sacrifices: But this thing commanded I them; Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people: and walk ye in all the wayes that I have commanded you, that it may be well with you.

Eccles. 5.1.

3. My third Proposition is this; That when sacrifice was to be offered in case of sin, yet even then God accepted not thereof primariò, primarily and for it self, as though any refreshment or emolument accrued to him thereby, (as the Gentiles fondly supposed of their gods;) but secundariò only, as a testimony of the conscience of the offerer, desiring with humble repentance to glorifie him with a Present, and by that Rite to renew a covenant with him. For sacrifice (as I have said) was oblatio federalis a federal oblation. Now Almighty God renews a Covenant with, or receiveth again into his favour, none but the repentant sinner; and therefore accepts of sacrifice in no other regard, but as a token and effect of this. Otherwise it is an abomination unto him, as whereby men professed a desire of being reconciled unto God, when they had offended him, and yet had no such meaning. Hence God rejects all Sacrifices wherein there is no Contrition, nor Purpose to forsake sin and keep his commandments, which are the parts of Repentance. So is to be taken that in the first of Esay: To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices? — Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me. — Wash ye, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes, cease to do evil: — then (if you offer sacrifice unto me) though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow, &c. and that in Esay the last: To this man will I look, to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit. He that killeth an ox, (namely otherwise,) is as if he slew a man; he that sacrificeth a lamb, (unless he comes with this disposition) as if he cut off a dog's neck; he that offereth an oblation, as if he offered bloud; he that burneth incense, as if he blessed an Idol. And surely, he that blest an Idol is so far from renewing a Covenant with the Lord his God, that he breaks it: So did they who without conscience of Repentance presumed to come before him with a sacrifice; not procure atonement, but aggravate their breach.

According to one of these three senses are all passages in the Old Testament disparaging and rejecting sacrifices literally to be understood: namely, when men preferred them before the greater things of the Law; valued them out of their degree, as an antecedent duty; or placed their efficacy in the naked Rite, as if ought accrued to God thereby; God would no longer own them for any ordinance of his: nor indeed in that disguise put upon them were they.

I will except only one Passage out of the number, which I suppose to have a singular meaning; to wit, that of David in the 51. Psalms, v. 16, 17. which the ancient translations thus express: Quoniam si voluisses sacrificium, dedissem utique; sed holocaustis non oblectaberis, (vel, holocaustum non acceptabis.) sacrificium Deo spiritus contribulatus, &c. — If thou wouldst have had a sacrifice, I would have offered it; but thou wilt accept no burnt-offering, &c. — For this seems to be meant of that special case of Adulterie and Murder which David here deplores: for which Sins the Lord had provided no Sacrifice in his Law. Wherefore David in this his Penitential confession tells him, That if he had appointed any Sacrifice for expiation of this kind of sin, he would have given it him; but he had ordained none, save only a broken spirit and a contrite heart: which thou, O God, (saith he) wilt not despise, but accept that alone for a Sacrifice in this case, without which Sacrifice in no case is accepted.

Now out of this Discourse we are sufficiently furnished for the understanding of this Caution of Solomon in my Text, Be more ready to obey, than to offer the sacrifice of fools; or, as the words in the Original import, Be more approaching God with a purpose and resolution of obedience to his Commandments, than with the sacrifice of fools; that is, Have a care rather to approach the Divine Majesty with an offering of an obediential disposition, than with the bare and naked Rite. But the sense is still the same; namely, The House of God at Jerusalem was an House of sacrifice, which they, who came thither to worship, offered unto the Divine Majesty, to make way for their prayers and supplications unto him, or to find favour in his sight. Solomon therefore gives them here a caveat, not to place their Religion either only or chiefly in the external Rite, but in their readiness to hear and keep the Commandments of God; without which that Rite alone would avail them nothing, but be no better than the sacrifice of fools, who when they do evil, think they do well. For without this readiness to obey,

obey, this purpose of heart to live according to his Commandments, God accepts of no Sacrifice from those who approach him, nor will pardon their transgressions when they come before him. He therefore that makes no conscience of sinning against God, and yet thinks to be expiate by Sacrifice, is an ignorant fool, how wise and religious soever he may think himself to be, or appear unto men, by the multitude or greatness of his Sacrifices. The reason, Because the Lord requires Obedience antecedently and absolutely, but sacrifice consequently only; and then too not primariò, or chiefly and for it self, but secondarily only, as a testimony of Contrition and a ready desire and purpose in the offerer to continue in his favour by Obedience.

This is solomon's the Preacher's meaning: Wherein behold, as in a glass, the condition of all external service of God in general, as that which he accepteth no other-wise than secondarily; namely, as issuing from a Heart respectively affected with that devotion it importeth. For God, as he is a living God, so he requires a living worship: But as the Body without the Soul is but a carcass: so is all external and bodily worship wherein the pulse of the Heart's devotion beats not.

But if this be so, you will say, it were better to use no external worship at all of course, as we do the worship of the Body in the gestures of bowing, kneeling, standing, and the like, than to incur this danger of serving God with a dead and hypocritical service; because it is not like the Heart will be always duly affected when the outward worship shall be required. I answer; Where there is a true and real intent to honour God with outward and bodily worship, there the act is not Hypocrisie, though accompanied with many defects and imperfections. Here therefore that Rule of our Saviour touching the greater and lesser things of the Law must have place: ταῦτα ἴδε ποιεῖσαι, καὶ κείνα μὴ ἀφαιρεῖναι, These things (that is, the greater things of the Law) we ought to do, and not to leave the other (though the lesser) undone. For otherwise, if this reasoning were admitted, a man might upon the same ground absent himself from coming to Church upon the days and times appointed, or come thither but now and then; alledging the indisposition of his Heart to joyn with the Church in her publick worship at other times: or if he came thither, act a mute; and when others sing and praise God, be altogether silent, and not open his mouth, nor say Amen when others do. For all these are external services; and the service of the voice and gesture are in this respect all one, there is no difference. But who would not think this to be very absurd? We should rather upon every such occasion rouse and stir up our Affections with fit and seasonable meditations, that what the order and decency of a Church-assembly requires to be done of every member outwardly, we may likewise do devoutly and acceptably. These things we ought to do, and not leave the other undone.

But you will say, What if I cannot bring my Heart unto that religious fear and devotion which the outward worship I should perform requireth? I could say that some of the outward worship which a man performs in a Church-assembly, he does not as a singular man, but as a member of the Congregation. But howsoever, I answer; Let the worship of thy Body, in such a case, be at least a confession and acknowledgment before God of that love, fear and esteem of his Divine Majesty thou oughtest to have, but hast not. For though to come before God without that inward devotion requisite, be a sin; yet to confess and acknowledge, by what our outward gesture importeth, the duty we owe unto him, but are defective in, I hope is not; no more than the confession of any other sin. For our worship, in such a case, if we will so intend it, is an act of Repentance: and as the modern Greeks are wont to call their Adorations, Μετανοίας, Repentances; so may we in this case make ours to be: namely, as if we said, Lord, I ought to come before thee with that religious fear, humble reverence, and lifting up of Heart, which the gesture, the posture I here present, importeth; but, Lord, be merciful to me a sinner. If a mans Heart be so prophane and irreligious as not to acknowledge thus much, I yield that such a one might better spare his labour, and not come into the presence of God at all. Otherwise I conclude still with our Blessed Saviour's determination in the like case, Those greater things we ought to do, and not to leave the other undone.

is a point, though most needful to be known, yet beyond belief obscure, intricate and perplext. He that shall make trial, will find I say true. A reverend and learned Prelate of ours acknowledges as much: Apud veteres Patres (saith he) (ut quod res est libere fateamur) de sacrificio corporis Christi in Eucharistia incruento frequens est mentio: que dictum vix potest quantopere quorundam, alioqui doctorem hominum, ingenia exercuerit, torserit, vexaverit: To speak the plain truth, In the Writings of the ancient Fathers there is frequent mention of The unbloody Sacrifice of the Body of Christ in the Eucharist; a point which hath beyond expression puzzled and vexed the minds of several men otherwise not unlearned. The reason of this obscurity hath grown partly from the changing of the Notion of the Church thereabout in following times; partly by the violence of the Controversies of this last Age, whilst each part finding the knot, and studying not so much the right way of untying it, as how to give the least advantage to the adverse party, have infinitely intangled the same, and made it more indissoluble than before.

I have acquainted my self long with this Argument, and spent many a thought thereabout, using the best means I could conceive to be inform'd; namely, Not so much to rely upon the opinions of modern Writers, as to peruse and compare the passages of the Ancients themselves, and their Forms and Liturgies, out of which I was assur'd the Truth might be learned, if I were but able to understand them.

What I have found and learned, I desire to give an account of in this place, as I shall have occasion; the Argument being such as befits no other Auditorie but the Schools of the Prophets. Nor will the Discourse be unprofitable for such as mean to be acquainted with the Writings of the Fathers and Antiquities of the Church: there being nothing in them so like to stumble the Reader as this.

To come then to the matter: where I will chalk out my Discourse in this order.

First, I shall premise, as the ground thereof, A Definition of The Christian Sacrifice as the ancient Church meant it.

Secondly, Explain the meaning of my Text, by application thereto.

Thirdly, Prove each part of the Definition I shall give, by the Testimonies of the Fathers, Councils and Liturgies of the first and best Ages; interlacing therewith such passages as may make for the better understanding either of the Testimonies I bring, or of the matter it self for which they are brought.

CHAP. II.

The Christian Sacrifice defined, and briefly explained. The two parts or double Object of this Sacrifice. What meant by Sacrificium Quod, what by Sacrificium Quo.

TO begin with the First, The Definition of the Christian sacrifice: Under which name first know, That the ancient Church understood not, as many suppose, the mere Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ; but the whole Sacred Action or Solemn Service of the Church assembled, whereof this Sacred Myserie was then a prime and principal part, and as it were the Pearl or Jewel of that Ring, no publick Service of the Church being without it. This observed and remembred, I define the Christian Sacrifice, ex mente antiquæ Ecclesiæ, according to the meaning of the ancient Church, in this manner:

* or, Through the Sacrifice of Jesus Christ upon the Cross. * or, first offered to God to agnize him.

An Oblation of Thanksgiving and Prayer to God the Father * through Jesus Christ and his Sacrifice commemorated in the Creatures of Bread and Wine, * wherewith God had first been agniz'd. So that this Sacrifice as you see hath a double object or matter: first, Praise and Prayer, which you may call sacrificium Quod; secondly, The commemoration of Christ's Sacrifice on the Cross, which is sacrificium Quo, the Sacrifice whereby the other is accepted. For all the Prayers, Thanksgivings and Devotions of a Christian, are tendred up unto God in the name of Jesus Christ crucified. According whereunto we are wont to conclude our Prayers with Through Jesus Christ our Lord. And this is the specification whereby the Worship of a Christian is distinguished from that of the Jew. Now that which we in all our Prayers and Thanksgivings do vocally, when we say, Through Jesus Christ our Lord; the ancient Church in her publick and solemn Service did visibly, by representing him, according as he commanded, in the Symbols of his Body and Bloud: For there he is commemorated and received by us for the same end for which he was given and suffered for us; that through him we receiving forgiveness of our sins, God our Father might accept our service and hear our prayers we make unto him? What time then so fit and seasonable to commend our devotions unto God, as when the Lamb of God lies slain upon the holy Table; and we receive visibly, though mystically, those gracious Pledges of his blessed Body and Bloud? This was that sacrifice of the ancient Church the Fathers so much ring in our ears; The Sacrifice of Praise and Prayer through Jesus Christ mystically represented in the Creatures of Bread and Wine.

Mal. i. 11.

But yet we have not all, there is one thing more my Definition intimates, when I say, Through the Sacrifice of Jesus Christ commemorated in the Creatures of Bread and Wine, wherewith God had first been agnized. The Body and Bloud of Christ were not made of common Bread and common Wine, but of Bread and Wine first sanctified, by being offered and set before God as a Present to agnize him the Lord and Giver of all: according to that, * The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; and * Let no man appear before the Lord empty. Therefore as this sacrifice consisted of two parts, as I told you, of Praise and Prayer, (which in respect of the other I call sacrificium Quod;) and of the Commemoration of Christ Crucified, (which I call sacrificium Quo;) so the Symbols of Bread and Wine traversed both; being first presented as Symbols of Praise and Thanksgiving to agnize God the Lord of the Creature, in the sacrificium Quod; then, by invocation of the Holy Ghost, made the Symbols of the Body and Bloud of Christ, in the sacrificium Quo. So that the whole Service throughout consisted of a reasonable part, and of a material part, as of a Soul and a Body: of which I shall speak more fully hereafter, when I come to prove this I have said by the Testimonies of the Ancients.

CHAP. III.

The words of the Text explained, and applied to the foregoing Definition of the Christian Sacrifice. Incense denotes the rational part of this Sacrifice, Mincha the material part thereof. What meant by Mincha purum. Two Interpretations of the Purity of the Christian Mincha given by the Fathers; a third propounded by the Author.

AND this is that Sacrifice which Malachi foretold the Gentiles should one day offer unto God; In every place Incense shall be offered unto my Name, and a pure Mincha: for my Name shall be great among the Heathen, saith the Lord of hosts. Which Words I am now, according to the order I propounded, to explicate, and apply to my Definition.

II.

Know therefore that the Prophet in the foregoing words upbraids the Jews with despising and disesteeming their God; forasmuch as they offered unto him for sacrifice not of the best, but the lame, the torn and the sick; as though he had not been the great King, Creator and Lord of the whole World, but some petty God, and of an inferiour rank, for whom any thing were good enough. Verf. 6, 7. If I be a Father, where is mine honour? If I be Dominus, where is my fear? saith the Lord of Hosts unto you, O Priests that despise my name; and ye say, Wherein have we despised it? Ye offer polluted bread upon mine Altar; and ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee? [I'll tell you] In that ye say, The Table of the Lord is contemptible, or, not so much to be regarded; that is, you think so, as appears by the baseness of your Offering: for the Present shews what esteem the giver hath of him he honoureth therewith. But you offer that to me which ye would not think fit to offer to your Prorex or Governour under the King of Persia; which shews you have but a mean esteem of me in your hearts, and that you believe not I am He that I am. It may be, because you see me acknowledged of no other Nation but yours, and that ye have been subdued by the Gentiles, and brought into this miserable and despicable condition wherein you now are, you imagine me to be some Topical God, and as of small jurisdiction, so of little power. But know, that howsoever I now seem to be but the Lord of a poor Nation, yet the days are coming, when from the rising of the sun to the going down of the same, my Name shall be great among the Gentiles; and in every place Incense shall be offered to my Name, and a pure Offering: for my Name shall be great among the Heathen, saith the Lord of Hosts: it follows, though you have prophaned it, in that ye say, The Table of the Lord is contemptible; whereas I am a great King, and my Name shall be dreadful among the Heathen.

* Revel. 8.3.
Qui recorda-
tur thure.
Eccius. 45.16.

This is the coherence and dependence of the Words. Now to apply them. Incense (as the Scripture it self tells) notes the * Prayers of the saints. It was also that wherewith the * remembrance was made in the Sacrifices, or God put in mind. Mincha, which we turn Munus, a Gift or Offering, is Oblatio farrea, an Offering made of meal or flower baked or fried, or dried or parched corn. We in our English, when we make distinction, call it a Meat-offering; but might call it a Bread-offering, of which the Libamen or the Drink-offering being an indivisible concomitant, both are implied under the name Mincha, where it alone is named.

The Application then is easy: Incense here notes the rational part of our Christian sacrifice, which is Prayer, Thanksgiving, and Commemoration; Mincha the material part thereof, which is Oblatio farrea a Present of Bread and Wine.

BUT this Mincha is characterised in the Text with an attribute not to be over-past, Minchapurum; In omni loco offeretur incensum Nomini meo, & Mincha purum, In every place Incense shall be offered to my Name, and a pure Mincha: The Meat-offering which the Gentiles should one day present the God of Israel with should be Munus purum, a pure Offering, or, as the Septuagint, θυσία καθαρά, a pure sacrifice. Let us learn, if we can, what this Purity is, and wherein it consisteth, or in what respect the Gentiles Oblation is so styled.

1. Some of the Fathers take this Pure Offering, to be an Offering that is purely or spiritually offered: The old Sacrifices both of the Jew and Gentile were offered modo corporali, in a corporeal manner, by slaughter, fire, and incense; but this of Christians should be offered only λόγῳ ὑψῆς καὶ ὑπακουσίᾳ, by way of Prayer and Thanksgiving, as * Justin Martyr expresses it; whence it is usually called λογικὴ καὶ ἀναιμακτος θυσία, a reasonable and unbloody sacrifice; namely, of the * manner of offering it: not that there was no material thing used therein, as some mistake, (for we know there was Bread and Wine;) but because it is offered unto God immaterially or λογικῶς only; which the Fathers in the first Council of Nice call ἀθύρωσιν θύεσθαι, to be sacrificed without sacrificing rites. This sense of Pure Sacrifice is followed by Tertullian, as may appear by his words ad Scapulam, where speaking of the Christian Liturgy, Sacrificamus (saith he) pro salute Imperatoris; — sed, quomodo præcepit Deus, pura prece: Non enim eget Deus, Conditor Universitatis, odoris aut sanguinis alicujus; hæc enim Daemoniorum pabula sunt: We offer sacrifice for the health and welfare of the Emperor; but it is (according as God hath commanded) the sacrifice of * pure prayer: For God, the maker of the World, stands not in need of the smell or savour or of the blood of any creature: These indeed are the food and diet which the Devils love. Also in his third Book against Marcion cap. 22. In omni loco offertur Sacrificium Nomini meo — In every place sacrifice shall be offered to my Name — & sacrificium mundum, and a pure sacrifice; that is, (saith he) gloriæ relatio, benedictio, laus & hymni, giving glory to God, blessing, praise and hymns: which he presently calls munditia sacrificiorum, the purities of sacrifices. The same way go some others. But this sense, though it fitly serves to difference our Christian sacrifice from the old sacrifices of the Jews and Gentiles, and the thing it self be most true; yet I cannot see how it can agree with the context of our Prophet, where the word Incense (though I confess mystically understood) is expressed together with Munus purum a pure offering. For it would make the Literal sense of our Prophet to be absurd, and to say, In every place Incense is offered to thy Name, and an Offering without Incense. And yet this would be the Literal meaning, if Pure here signified without Incense.

2. Let us hear therefore a second Interpretation of this Puritie of the Christian Mincha, more agreeable to the dependence of the words; and that is à conscientia offerentis, from the disposition and affection of the offerer; according to that of the Apostle, Tit. 1. 15, 16. To the pure all things are pure; but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure, but even their mind and conscience is defiled; They profess they know God, but in works they deny him. The Jews offering was prophane and polluted, because it proceeded not out of a due belief, and a conscience thoroughly perswaded of the Greatness of their God, that he was the Creator and Lord of the whole earth, but rather some petty and particular God, like the Gods of other Nations: But the Gentiles, who should see him not only the God of one Nation, but universally acknow-acknowledged over all the earth, should have no such reason to doubt, but firmly believe him to be the Great God, Creator of heaven and earth, and worship him as such; and so their Offering be a Pure Offering, not polluted with unbelief. And it is to be observed, that all the ancient Christian Liturgies begin with this acknowledgment: For the Summe of the Eucharistical Doxology, when the Bread and Wine is first presented before God, is comprehended in that of the Apocalyps, Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory, and honour, and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created. Mal. i. 11.

And to this way of interpreting the Purity of the Christian Sacrifice, to wit, from the conscience and affection of the offerers, the Fathers mostly bend. Irenæus lib. 4. cap. 34. Sacrificia non sanctificant hominem, (non enim indiget Deus sacrificio) sed conscientia ejus qui offert sanctificat sacrificium, pura existens — Quoniam igitur cum simplicitate Ecclesia offert, justè munus ejus purum sacrificium apud Deum deputatum est: Sacrifices do not sanctifie a man, (for God stands not in need of any of our Sacrifices;) but the Conscience of him that offers, being pure, sanctifies the Sacrifice — And because the Church offereth with simplicity, (with a Conscience purified from all malice and hypocrisie) rightly therefore is her Oblation accounted by God a Pure Sacrifice. And a little after, Oportet enim nos oblationem Deo facere, & in omnibus gratos inveniri fabricatori Deo, in sententia pura & fide sine hypocrisi, &c. For it behoveth us to present God with our Oblations, and in all things to be found thankful unto God our maker; with pure minds and faith unfeigned, with stedfast hope and fervent love offering unto him the First-fruits, or a Present, of his Creatures. Neither is Tertullian, whom I alledged before for the other interpretation, averse from this; for in his fourth Book Cont. Marc. c. 1. Sacrificium mundum, a pure Sacrifice, that is, saith he, simplex oratio de conscientia pura, sincere Prayer proceeding from a pure Conscience. But this conscientious purity they seem to restrain, at least chiefly, to freedom from malice, as that singular purity whereby this Christian Sacrifice is differenced from that of the Jew, because none can offer it but he that is in charity with his brother; according to that in the Gospel, When thou bringest thy gift unto the Altar, and remembrest thy brother hath ought against thee — Go first and be reconciled to thy brother, &c. Matt. 5. 23, 24. And therefore in the beginning of this Christian Service, the Deacon was anciently wont to cry, Μή τις κατά τινος, Let no man have ought against his brother; and then followed osculum sanctum, the kiss of reconciliation. Thus the Fathers of the first Council of Nice took sacrificium purum, as appears Can. 5. where they expound δωρον καθαρόν the pure Gift or Oblation, to be that which is offered πάσης μετὰ ψυχίας ἀναίμακταις, omni similitate deposita, all malice and hypocrisie, and the like instances of an unworthy and ignoble spirit, being laid aside.

But according to this Exposition, the Purity of the Christian Sacrifice will not be opposite to the pollution of the Jewish in the same kind, as it would if more generally taken, but in another kind; and so the sense stands thus; You will not offer me a pure offering, but the Gentiles one day shall, and that with a purity of another manner of stamp than that my Law requires of you. And thus I have told you the two ways according to which the Ancients understood this Purity; and I prefer the latter, as I think they did.

3. But there is a third Interpretation, were it back'd by their Authority, (which I confess it is not) which I would prefer before them both; and, I think, you will wonder with me they should be so silent therein: namely, that this title of Purity is given to the Christian Mincha in respect of Christ whom it signifies and represents, who is a Sacrifice without all spot, blemish and imperfection. This the Antithesis of this Sacrifice to that of the Jews might seem to imply: For the Jews are charged with offering polluted Bread upon God's Altar; whereby what is meant the words following tell us, If you offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil? and if you offer the lame and sick, is it not evil? and in the end of the Chapter, Cursed be the deceiver, who hath in his flock a male, and voweth and sacrificeth to the Lord a corrupt thing. Verse 14. Now, if the Sacrifice of the Gentiles be called Pure in opposition to this; is it not so called in respect of that most perfect, unblemish'd and unvaluable Sacrifice it represents, Jesus Christ the Lamb of God? I leave it to your consideration.

CHAP. IV.

Six Particulars contained in the Definition of the Christian Sacrifice. The First, viz. That this Christian Service is an Oblation, proved out of Antiquity. How long the Apostles Age lasted, or when it ended. Proofs out of the Epistles of Clemens and Ignatius. Προσφορὰ, Θυσία and Δοχὴ how distinguished in Ignatius. The Christian Service is properly Προσφορὰ, but improperly Θυσία according to the strict and prime sense of the word.

III.

THUS having absolved the Two first things I propounded; given you a Definition of the Christian sacrifice, and explained the words of my Text: I come now to the Third and longest part of my task, To prove each particular contained in my Definition by the Testimonies and Authorities of the ancient Fathers and Writers of the first and purest Ages of the Church. The Particulars I am to prove are in number Six.

1. That this Christian Service is an Oblation, and expressed under that Notion by the utmost Antiquity.

2. That it is an Oblation of Thanksgiving and Prayer.

3. An Oblation through Jesus Christ commemorated in the creatures of Bread and Wine.

4. That this Commemoration of Christ, according to the style of the ancient Church, is also a sacrifice.

5. That the Body and Bloud of Christ, in this Mystical Service, was made of Bread and Wine which had first been offered unto God, to agnize him the Lord of the Creature.

6. That this Sacrifice was placed in Commemoration only of Christ's sacrifice upon the Cross, and not in a real offering of his Body and Bloud anew.

When I shall have proved all these by sufficient Authority, I hope you will give me leave to conclude my Definition for true, That the Christian sacrifice (ex mente antiquæ Ecclesiæ, according to the meaning of the ancient Church) was An Oblation of Thanksgiving and Prayer to God the Father, through the sacrifice of Jesus Christ commemorated in the Creatures of Bread and Wine, wherewith God had first been agnized.

I.

Let us begin then with the first, That this Christian Service is an Oblation, and under that notion expressed by all Antiquity. The names whereby the Ancient Church called this Service are, Προσφορὰ, Θυσία, Oblation, Sacrifice; Ευχαριστία, Eucharist, (a word, if rightly understood, of equipollent sense;) Θυσία αἰνέσεως, Θυσία λογικῆς ἀναμνήσεως, a Sacrifice of Praise, a reasonable and unbloody sacrifice; Sacrificium Mediatoris, Sacrificium Altaris, Sacrificium pretii nostri, Sacrificium Corporis & Sanguinis Christi, the Sacrifice of our Mediator, the Sacrifice of the Altar, the Sacrifice of our Ransome, the Sacrifice of the Body and Bloud of Christ. It would be infinite to note all the Places and Authors where and by whom it is thus called. The four last are

* S. Augustine's; Προσφορὰ and Θυσία are to be found with Justin Martyr and Irenæus, whose antiquity is the Age next the Apostles. But, you will say, the Fathers even so early had swerved from the style of the Apostolick Age, during which these kind of terms were not used; as appears, by that we find them not any where in their Epistles and Writings. But what if the contrary may be evinced, That this language was used even while the Apostles yet lived? For grant they are neither found in the Acts of the Apostles, nor in S. Paul's and S. Peter's Writings; yet this proves not they were not used in the Apostles times, no more than that Ευχαριστία was not, whose case in this point is the same with the other. But know, that to confine the Apostles Age within the limits of S. Paul's and S. Peter's lives, is a general mistake: For the Apostles Age ended not till S. John's death, Anno Christi 99. and so lasted as long, within a year or thereabouts, after S. Paul's and S. Peter's suffering, as it was from our Saviour's Ascension to their Deaths, that is, one and thirty years. And this too for the most part was after the Excidium or Destruction of Jerusalem, in which time it is likely the Church received no little improvement in Ecclesiastical Rites and Expressions; both because it was the time of her greatest increase; and because, whilst the Jews Polity stood, her Polity, for its full establishment, stood in some sort suspended. This appears by S. John's Writings, which are the only Scripture written after that time, and in which we find two Ecclesiastick terms of Λόγος, The Word, for the Deity of Christ, and Κυριακὴ ἡμέρα, The Lord's day, for the first day of the week; neither of both seeming to have been in use in S. Paul's and S. Peter's times: and why may

CHAP. V.

The Second Particular, That the Christian Sacrifice is an Oblation of Thanksgiving and Prayer; proved from Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Clemens Alexand. &c. The Altar, or Holy Table, anciently the place of the publick Prayers of the Church. Prayer, Oblation and Sacrifice promiscuously used by the Fathers when they speak of the Christian Sacrifice. The Conjunction of Prayer and the Eucharist argued from Acts 2. 42. and from Ignatius ad Ephes. The three parts of which the Christian Synaxis consisted.

II. NOW I come to the Second particular contained in my Definition; To prove that the Christian Sacrifice, according to the meaning of the ancient Church, is an Oblation of Thanksgiving and Prayer.

My first Author shall be Justin Martyr, in his Dialogue with Trypho the Jew; where, to the Evasion of the Jews, labouring to bereave the Christians of this Text (by saying it was meant of the Prayers which the dispersed Jews at that time offered unto God in all places where they lived among the Gentiles; which Sacrifices, though they wanted the material Rite, yet were more acceptable unto God in regard of their sincerity than those prophaned ones at Jerusalem; and not that here was meant any Sacrifice which the Gentiles should offer to the God of Israel: to this Evasion.) Justin replies, Ὅτι μὴ καὶ εὐχαὶ καὶ εὐχαριστίαι ὑπὸ τῶν ἀγίων γινώσκονται τέλειαι μόναι καὶ οὐκ ἀρεστοὶ εἰσι τῷ Θεῷ θυσίαι, καὶ αὐτὸς φημι· ταῦτα ἡμῶν καὶ Χριστιανῶν παράλαβον ποιεῖν. That Prayers and Thanksgivings made by those that are worthy are the only Sacrifices that are perfect and acceptable unto God, I do also affirm; for these are the only Sacrifices which Christians have been taught they should perform. If you ask where, and how; he tells you, ἐπ' ἀναμνήσει τῆς περὶ ἡμᾶς ἀνθρώπου ἡμεῶν τε καὶ ὑμεῶν, ὅτι καὶ τὸ πάθος ὃ πάσιν οὖν δι' αὐτοῦ ὁ Θεὸς τῷ Θεῷ [leg. ὁ υἱὸς τῷ Θεῷ] μέμνηται· in that thankful remembrance of their food both dry and liquid, wherein also is commemorated the Passion which the Son of God suffered by himself. It is a description of the Eucharist, wherein, as I have already told you, the Bread and Wine were first presented unto God, as the Primitiae or a kind of First-fruit-Offering, to agnize him the Giver of our Food both dry and liquid; and then consecrated to be the Symbols of the Body and Blood of Christ.

My next Author shall be Tertullian ad Scap. in the * place before alledged: sacrificamus (saith he) pro salute Imperatoris; — sed, quomodo praecepit Deus, pura prece: Non enim eget Deus, Conditor Universitatis, odoris & sanguinis alicujus; haec enim Demoniorum pabula sunt. The Gentiles so thought, that their Gods were refreshed and nourisht with the smell and savour of their Sacrifices. Besides, in his third Book contra Marcionem cap. 22. In omni loco sacrificium nomini meo offertur, & sacrificium mundum, (to wit, saith he) Gloriae relatio, benedictio, laus & hymni; and Lib. 4. cap. 1. Sacrificium mundum, scilicet simplex oratio de conscientia pura.

Thirdly, Clemens Alexandrinus Lib. 7. Stromat. ἡμεῖς δὲ εὐχῆς τιμῶμεν τὸν Θεόν, *We (Christians) honour God by Prayer; καὶ ταύτην τὴν Θυσίαν ἀρίστην καὶ ἁγιωτάτην ἀναπέμπομεν, τῷ ἁγιωτάτῳ λόγῳ γεραίοντες, δι' ἧς παραλαμβάνομεν τὴν γνῶσιν, And this we send up unto him as the best and holiest sacrifice, honouring him by that most sacred Word, whereby we receive knowledge; that is, by Christ. Again, ἡ Θυσία τῆς Ἐκκλησίας λόγῳ, ἔστιν ἀπὸ τῶν ἁγίων ψυχῶν ἀναθυμιάμενη, The sacrifice of the Church is an oration exhaled from sanctified souls. He speaks not of the private Prayer of every Christian, but of the publick Prayer of the Church as a Body; as will be evident to him that reads the place, and appears by the words quoted, *Θυσία τῆς Ἐκκλησίας, The sacrifice of the Church; and ἀπὸ τῶν ἁγίων ψυχῶν ἀναθυμιάμενη, exhaled (not from a sanctified soul, but) from sanctified souls. For to private Prayer was not given this title of the Christian Sacrifice, but unto the publick, which the Church offered unto God when she presented her self before him, as one Body in Christ, by the mystical Communication of his Body and Blood.

This my next Author, Cyprian, will make plain in his 16, Epist. ad Mosen & Maximum. Nos quidem (saith he) vestri diebus & noctibus memores, & quando in sacrificiis precem cum pluribus facimus, & cum in secessu privatis precibus oramus: We indeed are mindful of you day and night; both when we in our sacrifices pray publickly with others, and when we pray privately in our retirements: where we see the sacrifice of Prayer to be, cum precem cum pluribus facimus, and distinguish it from that we do cum in secessu privatis precibus oramus. These

These Authorities are all within the first three hundred years : to which I will add one of the fourth ; Optatus Milevitannus Lib. 6. contra Parmenianum, where he thus expostulates with the Donatists for breaking and defacing the Altars of the Catholics : Quid est enim tam sacrilegum (saith he) quàm Altaria Dei (in quibus & vos aliquando obtulistis) frangere, radere, remove ? in quibus Vota Populi & Membra Christi * portata sunt ; quò Deus omnipotens invocatus sit : For what is there so sacrilegious as to break and deface, nay and quite take away, the Altars of God, whereon ye your selves have sometimes offered ; those Altars which did bear both the Prayers of the People and the Body and Bloud of Christ, that so Almighty God might be invocated ? Mark here Altaria in quibus Vota populi & Membra Christi portata sunt, and gather hence what parts the Christian Sacrifice consisted of : Vota populi are the Prayers of the Church, Membra Christi the Body and Bloud of Christ, which the Prayers were offered with ; both of them upon the Altar. For it is worthy your notice, That the ancient Church had no other Place whereat she offered her publick Prayers and Orisons but that whereon the memory of the Body and Bloud of Christ was celebrated ; that as they were joyned in their Use, so they might not be severed in their Place.

Mal. 1. 11.

According to which use, and agreeable to this passage of Optatus, speaks the Council of Rhemes, commanding the Table of Christ ( that is, the Altar ) to be revered and honoured, Quia Corpus Domini ibi consecratur, & sanguis ejus hauritur ; Preces quoque & Vota populi in conspectu Dei à Sacerdote offeruntur : Because there the Body of Christ is consecrated, and his Bloud is drunk ; there also the Prayers and Desires of the People are offered up by the Priest before God.

Furthermore, That the Christian Sacrifice was an Oblation of Prayer, and consisted in Invocation, is also another way to be evinc'd ; namely, Because the Fathers, when they speak thereof, use the terms of Prayer, Oblation and Sacrifice promiscuously and interchangeably one for the other, as words importing the same thing.

Tertullian Exhort. ad Cast. dissuading a Widower from marrying again, because it would be uncomely in the Sacrifice of the Church to make mention ( as the manner then was ) of more Wives than one, and that too by the mouth of an once-married Priest, speaks thus ; Neque enim pristinam poteris odisse, cui etiam religiosiorem reservas affectionem, ut jam receptæ apud Dominum, pro cujus spiritu postulas, pro qua oblationes annuas reddis. Stabis ergo ad Dominum cum tot uxoribus quos in oratione commemoras ? & offeres pro duabus ? & commendabis illas duas per sacerdotem de monogamia ordinatum ? circumdatum virginibus & univiris ? & ascendet sacrificium tuum cum liberâ fronte ? For thou canst not hate thy former wife, for whom thou reservest a more religious affection, as being received already with the Lord, for whose spirit thou makest request, for whom thou rendrest yearly Oblations. Wilt thou then stand before the Lord with as many wives as in thy prayers thou makest mention of ? and wilt thou offer for two ? and commend those two by a Priest ordained after his having been but once-married ? encompassed with virgins and with women but once married ? and shall thy Sacrifice ascend freely and confidently ? Here postulatio and oblatio, oratio and offerre, oratio and sacrificium are interchangeably put one for the other. So also, in his Book De Oratione are Oratio and sacrificium ; where he speaks of the kiss of Peace and Reconcilement, used at the Eucharist : Quæ oratio (saith he) cum divortio sancti osculi integra ? quale sacrificium, à quo sine pace receditur ? What Prayer can be complete that is without the holy kiss ? what a kind of Sacrifice is that, from which Christians come away without the kiss of Peace ?

Augustine De Civit. Dei Lib. 8. cap. 27. speaking of the honour of Martyrs ; Nec Martyribus (saith he) sacrificia constituimus — quis audivit aliquando fidelium, stantem Sacerdotem ad Altare (etiam super sanctum corpus Martyris) ad Dei honorem cultumque constructum, dicere in Precibus Offero tibi sacrificium, Petre, vel Paule ? &c. We do not sacrifice to Martyrs — Who among the faithful, while the Priest was standing at the Altar built for the honour and worship of God, ( nay though it were over the holy body of the Martyr, ) I say, who ever heard the Priest to say thus in Prayer, To thee, O Peter, or O Paul, do I offer Sacrifice ? Here sacrificium is expounded by Preces, and Preces put for sacrificium.

And Lib. 22. cap. 8. concerning one Hesperius, a man of quality in the City whereof Austin was Bishop, who, by the affliction of his cattel and servants, perceiving his Country-Grange liable to some malignant power of evil spirits, Rogavit nostros, (saith S. Austin) me absente, Presbyteros, ut aliquis eorum illò pergeret, cujus orationibus cederent. Perrexit unus, obtulit ibi sacrificium corporis Christi, orans, quantum potuit, ut cessaret illa vexatio. Deo protinus miserante cessavit. He entreated our Presbyters, in my absence, that some one of them would go to the place, through the prevalency of whose

Mal. i. 11.

Prayers he hoped the evil spirits would be forced away. Accordingly one of them went thither, and offered there the Sacrifice of Christ's Body, praying earnestly with all his might for the ceasing of that sore affliction: and it ceased forthwith through God's mercy. The Priest was entreated to pray there; he went, and offered sacrifice, and so prayed.

For this reason the Christian Sacrifice is among the Fathers, by way of distinction, called Θυσία αἰνέσεως, Sacrificium laudis, that is, of Confession and Invocation of God; namely, to difference it from those of Blood and Incense. Augustine Lib. 1. contra Adversarium Legis & Prophetarum cap. 20. Ecclesia immolat Deo in corpore Christi sacrificium laudis, ex quo Deus Deorum locutus vocavit terram à Solis ortu usque ad occasum: The Church offereth to God the Sacrifice of praise, ever since the fulfilling of that in Psalm 50. The God of Gods hath spoken, and called the earth from the rising of the Sun to the going down thereof. Again, Epist. 86. Sacrificium laudis ab Ecclesia toto orbe diffusa diebus omnibus immolatur: The Sacrifice of Praise is continually offered by the Christian Church dispersed all the world over. And elsewhere. And amongst the Greek Fathers this term is so frequent as I shall not need to quote any of them.

Now this joyning of the Prayers of the Church with the mystical commemoration of Christ in the Sacrament of his Body and Bloud, was no after-Invention of the Fathers, but took its original from the Apostles times, and the very beginning of Christianity: For so we read of the first believers Acts 2. 42. that they were περισκατερόντες τῇ διδασκῇ τῶν Ἀποστόλων, καὶ τῇ κοινωνίᾳ, καὶ τῇ κλάσει τοῦ ἁγίου, καὶ ταῖς προσευχαῖς: which the Vulgar Latine turns, *Erant autem perseverantes in doctrina Apostolorum, & communicatione fractionis panis, & orationibus; And they persevered in the doctrine of the Apostles, and in the communication of the breaking of bread, and Prayers: but the Syriack, Perseverantes erant in doctrina Apostolorum, ומשתתפים הו כצלוחא ובקציא, ראוכלר מטא; & communicabant in oratione, & fractione Eucharistiae: They persevered in the doctrine of the Apostles, and communicated in Prayer and in breaking of the Eucharist; that is, They were assiduous and constant in hearing the Apostles, and in celebrating the Christian Sacrifice. Both which Translations teach us, κλάσις τοῦ ἁγίου and προσευχαί, Breaking of Bread and Prayers, are to be referred to κοινωνία Communion, as the Exegesis thereof; namely, that this Communion of the Church consisted in the Breaking of Bread and Prayers; and so the conjunction καὶ to be Exegetically taken, as if the Greek were rendred thus, *Erant perseverantes in (audienda) doctrina Apostolorum, & in communicatione, videlicet, fractione panis, & orationibus. And who knows not that the Synaxis of the ancient Christians consisted of these three parts, Of hearing the Word of God, of Prayers, and Commemoration of Christ in the Eucharist? Our Translation therefore here is not so right, which refers κοινωνία to Ἀποστόλων, and translates it, The fellowship of the Apostles.

The Antiquity also of this conjunction we speak of appears out of Ignatius, in his Epistle to the Ephesians, where speaking of the damage which Schismatics incur by dividing themselves from the communion of the Church, he utters it in this manner; Μηδεις πλανᾶτω. εἰν μή τις ἐντός ἡ τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου, ὑπερεῖται τοῦ ἁγίου τοῦ Θεοῦ. Εἰ γὰρ ἴνός καὶ δευτέρη προσευχὴ ποσαύτην ἰσχυὴν ἔχει, ὥς ἐ καὶ Χριστὸν ἐν αὐτοῖς ἐσθῆναι, πόσῳ μάλλον ἡ τε τοῦ Ἐπισκόπου καὶ πάσης τῆς Ἐκκλησίας προσευχὴ, σύμφωνον ἀνίστα πρὸς Θεόν, πείσει παραχρησθῆναι αὐτοῖς πάντα τὰ ἐν Χριστῷ αἰτήματα; Let no man (saith he) deceive himself: unless a man be within the Altar, he is deprived of the Bread of God. And if the prayer of one or two be of that force as to set Christ in the midst of them, how much more shall the joynt-prayer of the Bishop and whole Church, sent up unto God, prevail with him to grant us all our requests in Christ? These words of Ignatius directly imply that the Altar was the place as of the Bread of God, so of the Publick Prayers of the Church; and that they were so nearly linked together, that he that was not within the Altar, (that is, who should be divided therefrom) had no benefit of either.

CHAP. VI.

Mal. I. 11.

The Third Particular, That the Christian Sacrifice is an Oblation of Thanksgiving and Prayer through Jesus Christ Commemorated in the Creatures of Bread and Wine. Sacrifices under the Law were Rites to invoke God by. That the Eucharist is a Rite to give thanks and invoke God by, proved from several Testimonies of the Fathers and the Greek Liturgies. A passage out of Mr. Perkins agreeable to this notion. What meant by that usual expression of the Ancients speaking of the Eucharist, [Through Jesus Christ the great High-Priest.] By Nomen Dei in Mal. 1. Justin Martyr and Irenæus understood Christ. Why in the Eucharist Prayers were to be directed to God the Father.

THE second Particular thus proved, the Third comes next in place, which is, *That this Oblation of Thanksgiving and Prayer was made through Jesus Christ commemorated in the creatures of Bread and Wine: Namely, they believed that our Blessed Saviour ordained this Sacrament of his Body and Blood as a Rite to bless and invoke his Father by, in stead of the manifold and bloody Sacrifices of the Law. For, * That those bloody Sacrifices of the Law were Rites to invoke God by, is a Truth, though not so vulgarly known, yet undeniable; and may, on the Gentiles behalf, be proved out of Homer and other Authors; * on the Jews, by that speech of Saul, 1 Sam. 13. 12. when Samuel expostulated with him for having offered a burnt-offering: I said, saith he, The Philistines will come down upon me to Gilgal, and I have not made supplication to the Lord; I forced my self therefore, and offered a burnt-offering: upon which place Kimchi notes, that על ירי העולות היתה הפלות כרוב, Sacrifice was a Rite or Medium, whereby Prayer was usually presented unto God. The same is likewise true of their Hymns and Doxologies, as is to be seen 2 Chron. 29. 27. and by the words of the Chaldee Paraphrast Jonathan, upon Exod. 38. 8. concerning the women that assembled at the door of the Tabernacle: The Women (saith he) which came לעזרה to pray, stood at the door of the Tabernacle * by their Oblation, ומשבחן ומורן and they praised and confessed; afterwards they returning to their husbands, brought forth righteous children.*

מראותיהם נרבה that these religious women despising the vain delights of this world, gave, as a Free-will-offering for the making of the Laver, their Looking-glasses, by which they were wont to dress and adorn themselves; not caring to use them any longer for such purposes.

It is further confirmed for Invocation in general, by that which the Scripture so often reports of Abraham and Isaac, * That they built Altars where they came, and there they called upon the name of the Lord: But the Altar was a place for Sacrifice.

In stead therefore of the slaying of Beasts and burning of Incense, whereby they called upon the Name of God in the Old Testament; the Fathers, I say, believed our Saviour ordained this Sacrament of Bread and Wine, as a Rite whereby to give thanks and make supplication to his Father in his Name.

The mystery of which Rite they took to be this: That as Christ, by presenting his Death and Satisfaction to his Father, continually intercedes for us in Heaven; so the Church on Earth semblably approaches the Throne of Grace, by representing Christ unto his Father in these holy Mysteries of his Death and Passion. Veteres enim, (saith Cassander) in hoc mystico sacrificio, non tam peracta semel in Cruce oblationis, cujus hic memoria celebratur, quam perpetui sacerdotii & jugis sacrificii, quod quotidie in Cælis sempiternus sacerdos offert, rationem habuerunt; cujus hic Imago per solennes Ministrorum preces exprimitur. The Ancients did not in this mystical Sacrifice so much consider and respect the Oblation once made upon the Cross, (the memory whereof is here celebrated,) as the everlasting Priesthood of Christ and the perpetual Sacrifice which he, our High-Priest for ever, doth continually offer in Heaven; the resemblance whereof is here on earth expressed by the solemn prayers of God's Ministers.

This a Reverend and famous Divine of blessed memory, once of this Society, and interr'd in this place, saw more clearly, or expressed more plainly, than any other Reformed Writer I have yet seen, in his Demonstratio Problematis, and Title de sacrificio Missæ; where he speaks thus: Veteres Cenam Domini, seu totam cene actionem, vocarunt sacrificium, variis de causis: — quia est commemoratio, adeoque representatio Deo Patri, sacrificii Christi in cruce immolati: The ancient Fathers used to call the Supper of the Lord, or the whole action of the Supper, a sacrifice; and that for divers reasons —

Because

Mal. i. i.

Because it is a Commemoration, and also a Representation unto God the Father, of the Sacrifice of Christ offered upon the Cross. He goes on, Hoc modo fideles etiam inter orandum Christum offerunt Deo Patri victimam pro suis peccatis, dum scilicet mente affectuque ad sacrificium ejus unicum feruntur, ut Deum sibi habeant faciuntque propitium: In this sense the Faithful in their prayers do offer Christ as a Sacrifice unto God the Father for their sins, in being wholly carried away in their minds and affections unto that only and true Sacrifice, thereby to procure and obtain God's favour to them. That which every Christian doth mentally and vocally, when he commends his prayers to God the Father through Jesus Christ, making mention of his death and satisfaction; that in the publick service of the Church was done by that Rite which our Saviour commanded to be used in Commemoration of him.

These things thus explained, Let us now see by what Testimonies and Authorities it may be proved the ancient Church had this meaning. I will begin with S. Ambrose, because his Testimony is punctual to our explication. Offic. lib. 1. cap. 48. Antè (saith he) Agnus offerebatur, offerebatur & Vitulus: nunc Christus offertur; sed offertur quasi homo, quasi recipiens passionem; & offert seipsum quasi sacerdos, ut peccata nostra dimittat: hic in imagine, ibi in veritate, ubi apud Patrem pro nobis quasi advocatus intervenit. Heretofore (under the Law) was wont to be offered a Lamb, and a Bullock: (Exod. 29.) But now (under the Gospel) Christ is offered; but he is offered as a man, and as one that suffered; and he also as a Priest offers himself, for the forgiveness of our sins. Here (on earth) this is done in a resemblance and representation; there (in Heaven) in truth, where he as our Advocate intercedes for us with his Father. * An Author which Cassander in his Consultations quotes without name, expresses this mystery fully; Non impiè à nobis (saith he) Christus occiditur, sed piè sacrificatur; & hoc modo mortem Domini annunciamus donec veniat: hoc enim hic per eum humiliter agimus in terris, quod pro nobis ipse potenter (sicut filius pro sua reverentia exaudiendus) agit in Caelis; ubi apud Patrem pro nobis quasi advocatus intervenit; cui est pro nobis intervenire, carnem quam pro nobis & de nobis sumit, Deo Patri quodammodo pro nobis ingerere. Christ is not wickedly slain by us, but piously sacrificed; and thus we shew the Lord's death till he come: For we by him do that here on earth in a meaner way, which he (as a * Son to be heard for his reverence or piety) doth for us in heaven powerfully and prevailingly, where he as our Advocate mediates for us with the Father, whose office it is to intercede for us, and to present that flesh which he took for us and of us, to God the Father in our behalf.

* So the Vulg. Lat. Hebr. 5. 7. renders εὐχαριστία, which (according to Grotius and others) should be rendered, Exauditus (i. liberatus) à metu. The like phrase in Psal. 22. 22.

My next Author shall be Eusebius, Demonstrat. Evangel. lib. 1. cap. 10. where mentioning that of the 23. Psalm, *Thou hast prepared a Table before me, &c. Thou anointedst my head with oyl; Herein, saith he, are plainly signified the Mystical unction, καὶ τὰ σεμνὰ τῆ Χερσὶν τετραπέζης θυμᾶτα, and the venerable sacrifices of Christ's table; (he means the Symbols of the Body and Bloud of Christ) δι' ὧν καλλιεργήσας, τὰς ἀναίμας καὶ λογικὰς αὐτῷ τε προσήκεις θυσίας διὰ παντός βίῃ τῷ ὅπῃ πάντων προσφέρειν Θεῷ, διὰ τῶ πάντων ἀνωτάτῃ Ἀρχιερέως αὐτοῦ, δειδύμεθα, whereby propitiating God, we are taught to offer up all our life long unto the Lord of all, unbloudy and reasonable sacrifices, most acceptable to him, by his most glorious High-Priest, Jesus Christ. Here Eusebius affirms that Christians are taught to offer unto God reasonable and unbloudy sacrifices, that is, Prayer and Thanksgiving, διὰ σεμνῶν τῆ Χερσὶν τετραπέζης θυμᾶτων καλλιεργήσας, propitiating, or finding favour with God, through the venerable mysteries of Christ's Table. For καλλιεργεῖν is, litare, i. e. propitiare, or placare Numen, votum impetrare, εὐαρεστεῖν, gratum facere.*

Next I produce Cyril of Jerusalem (or more likely John his successor) Author of those five Catecheses Mystagogicae: In the last of which, relating and expounding the meaning of that which was said or done in the celebration of the Eucharist, according to the use of his time, amongst other things he says thus; *Μετὰ τὸ ἀπαρτιθῆναι τὴν πνευματικὴν θυσίαν, ἢ ἀναίμακτον λατρείαν, after that spiritual sacrifice, that unbloudy service, that is, After the Thanksgiving and Invocation of the Holy Ghost upon the Bread and the Wine, to make it the Body and Bloud of Christ, (of which he was speaking before) was done, * ὅπῃ τῇ θυσίας ὁκείνης τῇ ἰλασμῷ παρεχόμενον τῷ Θεῷ ὑπὲρ κοινῆς τῆς Ἐκκλησιῶν εἰρήνης, ὑπὲρ τῆ τοῦ κόσμου σωτηρίας, ὑπὲρ βασιλείων,*

Βασιλέων, &c. We do over that Propitiatory Sacrifice beseech God for the common peace of the Churches, for the good estate of the World, for Kings, their Armies and Confederates, for the sick and the afflicted, and in fine for all that are in an helpless condition. And this is the manner of the Greek Liturgies, immediately upon the Consecration of the Dona (viz. the Bread and Wine) to be the Symbols of the Body and Bloud of Christ, and the Commemoration thereon of his Passion, Resurrection and Ascension, * to offer to the Divine Majesty, as it were over the Lamb of God then lying upon the Table, their Supplications and Prayers, * for the whole state of Christ's Church and all sorts and degrees therein, together with all other their suits and requests; and that ever and anon interposing the word προσφέρωμεν, we offer unto thee, for these and these, that is, we commemorate Christ in this mystical Rite for them. This Prayer therefore our Author Cyrill in the place afore-quoted calls Δέησιν τῆς ἁγίας καὶ φοβερῆς αὐτῆς προσκευῆς θυσίας, the prayer of the holy and most worthily dreaded Sacrifice lying then upon the Table: and saith, that it is a most powerful Prayer, as that wherein we offer unto the Divine Majesty Χριστὸν ἑσφαγιασμένον ὑπὲρ τῶν ἡμετέρων ἁμαρτημάτων, Christ that was once slain for our sins, ἐξιλεῶμενοι ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν καὶ ἡμῶν τὸν φιλόνηρον, propitiating the merciful God for our selves and others we pray for.

And this is that, if I mistake not, which Tertullian means lib. de Oratione cap. 11. where he says of the Christians, that they did Dominicā passione orare. Nos vero (inquit) non attollimus tantum [ manus, ] sed etiam expandimus; & Dominicā passione orantes confitemur Christo, id est, Christum; We do not only lift up, but spread forth our hands, and praying with the Lord's passion, (that is, by the Commemoration thereof in the Eucharist) confess unto Christ, that is, confess and acknowledge Christ; according to the Dialect of the Scripture, Confitemur Domino for Confitemur Dominum: For by commemorating Christ and offering our Prayers to the Father in his Name, we confess and acknowledge him to be our Mediator. So Eusebius de Laude Const. calls it ἐπικλησιν Χριστοῦ. ὡς καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸν ὅλων Θεὸν ἀναπέμπειν, To send up Prayers in his Name to the God of all.

The same with Tertullian means S. Austin, describing the Christian Sacrifice to be, immolare Deo in Corpore Christi sacrificium Laudis, lib. 1. contra Adversarium Legis & Prophetarum, cap. 20. Ecclesia (saith he) immolat Deo, in Corpore Christi, sacrificium Laudis, ex quo Deus Deorum locutus vocavit terram à Solis ortu usque ad occasum, Psalm 50. 1. The Church offereth unto God the Sacrifice of Praise in the Body of Christ, ever since the fulfilling of that in Psalm 50. The God of Gods hath spoken, and called the earth from the rising of the Sun to the going down thereof.

Lastly, That the representation of the Body and Bloud of Christ in this Christian Service was intended and used as a Rite whereby to find grace and favour with God, when the Church addressed her self unto him, (which is that I undertook to prove,) is apparent by a saying of Origen Hom. 13. in Levit. where treating of the shew-bread, which was continually set before the Lord with Incense, for a memorial of the children of Israel, that is, to put God in mind of them, he makes it in this respect to have been a lively figure of the Christians Eucharist; for, saith he, Ista est commemoratio sola quæ propitium facit Deum hominibus; That's the only Commemoration which renders God propitious to men.

All these Testimonies have been express for our purpose, That the Thanksgivings and Prayers of the Church in the Christian Sacrifice were offered unto the Divine Majesty through Christ commemorated in the Symbols of Bread and Wine, as by a Medium whereby to find acceptance.

There is, besides these, an usual expression of the Fathers, when they speak of the Eucharist; which though it be not direct and punctual, as the former, yet I verily believe it aimed at the same Mystery: namely, when they say that in this Sacrifice they offer Praise and Prayer to God the Father, through Jesus Christ the great High Priest. I will quote an Example or two. Clemens, or the Author of the Constitutions, lib. 2. cap. 29. al. 25. Τρεῖς σήμερον, ὧς Ἐπίσκοποι, ἐς τὸ λαὸν ὑμῶν ἱερεῖς Λευῖται — παρῆσθε τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ Κυρίου τοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν, Τον, (saith he) O Bishops, are now unto your people as Priests and Levites, — standing at the Altar of the Lord our God, καὶ προσάγοντες αὐτῷ τὰς λογικὰς καὶ ἀναιμάκτους θυσίας, διὰ Ἰησοῦ τοῦ μεγάλου Ἀρχιερέως, and offering unto him reasonable and unbloody Sacrifices through Jesus Christ the great High-Priest.

Mal. i. ii.

The same Clemens, in a more undoubted writing of his, to wit his Epist. ad Corinthios, quoting that of the 50. Psalm after the Septuagint, Θυσία αἰνέσεως δοξάσει με, The sacrifice of Praise shall glorifie me; καὶ ἐκεῖ ὁδὸς ἣ δειξω αὐτῷ τὸ σωτήριον τῷ Θεῷ, — and there is the way wherein I shall shew to him that sacrificeth the salvation of God; Αὐτὴ ἡ ὁδός, This is the way, saith Clemens, that is, the sacrifice of Praise is the way, ἐν ᾗ εὐεργησάμενοι τὸ σωτήριον ἡμῶν, Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν ἀρχιερέα τῶν προσφορῶν ἡμῶν, wherein we have found our salvation, Jesus Christ, the High-Priest of all our offerings. The Fathers are wont to expound this place of the Eucharist; and therefore I doubt not but Clemens means of the same, and tells us that in this Sacrifice Christ, the High-Priest of our offerings, is found, that is, represented and commemorated.

In the same style speaks Iust. Mar. Dial. cum Tryphone. Οὐδὲ ἐν ὅλῳς ἐστὶ τὸ γένος αἰθρώπων, εἴτε βαρβάρων, εἴτε Ἑλλήνων, εἴτε ἀπλῶς ὀνιμίῳ ὀνόματι προσαγορευομένων — ἐν οἷς μὴ διὰ τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ σταυρωθέντος Ἰησοῦ οὐχαὶ καὶ οὐχαρισταὶ τῷ Πατρὶ καὶ ποιότητι τῶν ὅλων γίνονται. There is not any sort of men in the world, whether Barbarians, or Greeks, or of what denomination soever — amongst whom Prayers and Thanksgivings are not made to the Father and Maker of all through the name of the crucified Jesus. He is speaking of the Christian sacrifice, and our Text in Malachi, In omni loco offeretur Incensum Nomini meo: where note that by Nomen Dei the Name of God he understands Christ, through whom in this Sacrifice our devotions are offered. So doth Irenæus

Quemadmodum si quis Rex ipse filii sui pingat imaginem, jussu suam illam dicit imaginem secundum utrumque; quoniam & filii ejus est, & quoniam ipse fecit eam: Sic & Jesus Christi nomen, quod per universam mundum glorificatur in Ecclesia, suum esse constituitur Pater; & quoniam Filii ejus est, & quoniam ipse scribens id, ad salutem dedit hominum.

and others, Iren. lib. 4. cap. 33. Quod est aliud Nomen quod in Gentibus glorificatur, quam quod est Domini nostri, per quem glorificatur Pater, & glorificatur homo — quoniam ergo Nomen Filii proprium Patris est, & in Deo omnipotente, per Jesum Christum offert Ecclesia; bene ait secundum utraque, Et in omni loco offeretur Incensum Nomini meo, & Sacrificium purum. What other Name is there that is glorified among the Gentiles, than the Name of our Lord, by whom the Father is glorified, and man also is glorified? — And because the Name of the Son is the Father's, and in Almighty God, the Church offers through Jesus Christ; well saith the Prophet in respect of both, And in every place Incense shall be offered to my Name, and a pure Sacrifice.

Now how this Incense and sacrifice, which the Prophet saith the Gentiles should offer to the Name of God, may be expounded, Offered by the Name of God, to wit, by Christ, Origen lib. 8. contra Cels. will inform us; τὸν εἷνα Θεόν, καὶ τὸν εἷνα υἱόν αὐτοῦ καὶ λόγον καὶ εἰκόνα, ταῖς κατὰ τὸ δυνατόν ἡμῖν ἰκεσίαις καὶ ἀξιώσεσι σέβωμεν, προσάγοντες τῷ Θεῷ τῶν ὅλων τὰς οὐχὰς διὰ τοῦ μονογενοῦς αὐτοῦ, Ὁ ΠΡΩΤΟΝ ΠΡΟΣΦΕΡΟΜΕΝ ἈΤΤΑ' Σ, ἀξιῶντες αὐτόν, ἱλασμοὶν ὄντα [περὶ] τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν, προσάγαγεῖν ὡς Ἀρχιερέα καὶ οὐχὰς καὶ τὰς θυσίας καὶ τὰς ἐντεύξεις ἡμῶν τῷ ὁπῶσι Θεῷ. We worship, (saith he) as we are able, with our Prayers and Supplications the one God and his only Son, the Word and Image of God, Jesus Christ; offering to the God of the Universe our Prayers by his only-begotten Son, TO WHOM WE FIRST OFFER THEM; beseeching him, that he, being the Propitiation (i. Propitiator) for our sins, would vouchsafe, as our High-Priest, to present our PRAYERS and SACRIFICES and INTERCESSIONS to God most High. The summe whereof is this, That which we offer to the Father by Christ, we offer first to Christ; that he, as our High-Priest, might present it to his Father. More passages hath Origen in the same Books of this kind.

But I will not weary you too much in this rugged way; Only I will add, that out of this which we have hitherto discoursed and proved, may be understood the meaning and reason of that Decree of the third Council of Carthage and Hippo, namely, Ut nemo in Precibus, vel Patrem pro Filio, vel Filium pro Patre, nominet: Et cum Altari assistitur [N. B.] semper ad Patrem dirigatur oratio: That none in their Prayers should name either the Son for the Father, or the Father for the Son: And that, when they stand at the Altar, they ought always to direct their Prayer to the Father. The reason, Because the Father is properly the Object εἰς ὃν, to whom; the Son only δι' οὗ, by whom, in this Mystical service; and therefore to direct here our Prayers and Thanksgivings to the Son, were to pervert the order of the Mystery, which is, as hath been proved, An Oblation of Praise and Prayer to God the Father through the Intercession of Jesus Christ, represented in the Symbols of Bread and Wine.

CHAP. VII.

Mal. i. ii.

The Fourth Particular, That the Commemoration of Christ in the Creatures of Bread and Wine ( in the Eucharist ) is a Sacrifice, according to the style of the ancient Church. How Sacrifices are distinguished from all other Offerings. A Sacrifice defined. The universal Custom of mankind to contract or confirm Covenants and Friendship by eating and drinking together : This illustrated from Testimonies of Scripture and humane Authors. Sacrifices were Federal Feasts, wherein God and men did feast together in token of amity and friendship. What was God's Messe or portion in the Sacrifices. The different Laws of Burnt-offerings, Sin and Trespass-offerings, and the Peace-offerings. Burnt-offerings had Meat and Drink-offerings annexed to them, and were regularly accompanied with Peace-offerings. That Sacrifices were Feasts of amity between God and men, proved by four Arguments. The reason of those phrases, Secare foedus and Icere foedus. That in those Sacrificial Feasts ( and also in the Eucharist ) God is to be considered as the Convivator, and Man as the Conviva. This cleared by several passages in this ( as also in the ) following Chapter.

THE Fourth Particular propounded was this, That the Sacrament of the Body and Bloud of Christ, or Lord's Supper, or the Commemoration of Christ in the Creatures of Bread and Wine, is also a Sacrifice, according to the style of the ancient Church.

IV.

It is one thing to say, That the Lord's Supper is a Sacrifice, and another to say, That Christ is properly sacrificed therein. These are not the same : For there may be a Sacrifice which is a representation of another Sacrifice, and yet a Sacrifice too. And such a Sacrifice is this of the New Testament, a Sacrifice wherein another Sacrifice, that of Christ's death upon the Cross, is commemorated. Thus the Papists gain nothing by this Notion of Antiquity, and our asserting the same : For their Tenet is, That Christ in this Sacrifice is really and properly sacrificed ; which we shall shew in due time that the Ancients never meant.

To begin with this, That the Lord's Supper or Mystical Rite of the Body and Bloud of Christ is a Sacrifice : As in the Old Testament the name of Sacrifice was otherwhile given to the whole Action in which the Rite was used, sometimes to the Rite alone : so in the Notion and Language of the ancient Church, sometimes the whole Action or Christian Service ( wherein the Lord's Supper was a part ) is comprehended under that name ; sometimes the Rite of the Sacred Supper it self is so termed, and truly, as ye shall now hear.

The resolution of this Point depends altogether upon the true Definition of a Sacrifice, as it is distinguished from all other Offerings. Which, though it be so necessary that all disputation without it is vain ; yet shall we not find that either party interested in this question hath been so exact therein as were to be wished. This appears by the differing Definitions given and confuted by Divines on both sides : The reason of which defect is, because neither are deduced from the Notion of Scripture, but built upon other conceptions. Let us see therefore if it may be learned out of Scripture what that is which the Scripture, in a strict and special sense, calls a Sacrifice.

Every Sacrifice is an Oblation or Offering : but every Offering is not a Sacrifice, in that strict and proper acception we seek. For Tithes, First-fruits, and all other called Heave-offerings in the Law, and whatsoever indeed is consecrated unto God, are Oblations or Offerings ; but none of them Sacrifices, nor ever so called in the Old Testament. What Offerings are then called Sacrifices ? I answer, Burnt-Offerings, Sin-offerings, Trespass-offerings and Peace-offerings. These, and no other, are called by that name.

Out of these therefore must we pick the true and proper ratio and nature of a Sacrifice. It is true, indeed, that these Sacrifices were Offerings of beasts, of beeves, of sheep, of goats, of fowls : but the ratio or essence of any thing consists not in the matter thereof ; as the Gowns we wear are still the same kind of apparel, though made of differing stuffs. These Sacrifices also were slain, and offered by Fire and Incense : but neither is the modus of any thing the ratio or essential Form thereof. That therefore may have the nature and formale of a Sacrifice, which consists of another matter, and is offered after another and differing manner. Those we call Sacraments of the Old Testament, Circumcision and the Passover, were by effusion of blood ; ours are not ; and yet we esteem them nevertheless true Sacraments : So it may be here.

Mal. i. ii.

To hold you therefore no longer in suspense : A sacrifice, I think, should be defined thus ; An Offering whereby the offerer is made partaker of his God's Table, in token of Covenant and Friendship with him, &c. or more explicately thus ; An Offering unto the Divine Majesty of that which is given for the Food of man ; that the offerer partaking thereof might, as by way of pledge, be certified of his acceptation into Covenant and fellowship with his God, by eating and drinking at his Table. S. Augustine comes toward this Notion, when he defines a Sacrifice ( though in a larger sense ) Quod Deo nuncupamus, reddimus & dedicamus, hoc sine, ut sanctâ societate ipsi adhareamus ; That which we devote, dedicate and render unto God, for this end, that we may have an holy society and fellowship with him. For to have society and fellowship with God, what is it else but to be in league and covenant with him ?

In a word, a Sacrifice is Oblatio federalis. For the true and right understanding whereof, we must know, That it was the universal custom of mankind, and still remains in use, to contract covenants and make leagues and friendship by eating and drinking together. When Isaac made a covenant with Abimelech the King of Gerar, the Text saith, He made him and those that were with him a Feast, and they did eat and drink, and rose up betimes in the morning, and swore one to another, Gen. 26. 30, 31. When Jacob made a covenant with Laban, after they had sworn together, he made him a Feast, and called his brethren to eat Bread, Gen. 31. 54. When David made a league with Abner, upon his promise to bring all Israel unto him, David made Abner and the men that came with him a Feast, 2 Sam. 3. 20. * Hence in the Hebrew tongue a Covenant is called ברית of ברה To eat ; as if they should say An eating : which derivation is so natural, that it deserves to be preferred before that from the * other signification of the same Verb, which is To chuse. And this will suffice for the custom of the Hebrews.

Now for the Gentiles, Herodotus tells us, the Persians were wont to contract leagues and friendship inter Vinum & Epulas, in a full Feast, whereat their wives, children and friends were present. The like Tacitus reports of the Germans. Amongst the Greeks and other Nations, the Covenantees ate Bread and Salt together. Unto which comes near that Ceremony some-where used at Weddings, that the Bridegroom, when he comes home from Church, takes a piece of Cake, tastes it, then gives it to his Bride to taste it likewise ; as a token of a Covenant made between them. The Emperor of Russia at this day, when he would shew extraordinary grace and favour unto any, sends him Bread and Salt from his Table : And when he invited Baron Sigismund, the Emperor Ferdinand's Ambassador, he did it in this form ; Sigismunde, comedes sal & panem nostrum nobiscum, Sigismund, you shall eat our Bread and Salt with us. Hence that Symbol of Pythagoras, Ἀπὸν μὴ καταγύναν, Break no bread, is interpreted by Erasmus and others to mean Break no friendship. Moreover the Egyptians, Thracians, and Libyans in special, are said to have used to make leagues and contract friendship by presenting a cup of Wine one to another ; which custom we find still in use amongst our Western Nations. And what is our I'll pledge you, but I take it as a pledge of league and friendship from you ? Yea it is a rule in Law, that if a man drink to him against whom he hath an accusation of slander or other verbal injury, he loses his Action, because it is supposed he is reconciled with him.

Such now as were these Covenant-feastings and eatings and drinkings in token of league and amity between men and men, such are sacrifices between Man and his God ; Epule federales, Federal feasts, wherein God deigneth to entertain Man to eat and drink with or before him, in token of favour and reconciliation. For so it becomes the condition of the parties, that he which hath offended the other, and seeks for favour and forgiveness, should be entertained by him to whom he is obnoxious ; and not à contrâ : that is, that God should be the Convivator, the entertainer or maker of the Feast, and man the Conviva, or Guest. Towhich end the Viands for this sacred Epulum were first to be offered unto God, and so made his ; that he might entertain the offerer, and not the offerer him. For we are to observe, that what the Fire consumed was accounted as God's own Mess, and called by himself the meat of his Fire-offerings : the rest was for his guests, which they were partakers of either by themselves, as in all the Peace-offerings ; or by their proxies the Priests, as in the rest, to wit, the Holocausts, the Sin and Trespass-offerings. The reason of which difference was, I suppose, because the one was ad impetrandum or renovandum fœdus, for the making or renewing the Covenant with God, where therefore a Mediator was needful ; the other, to wit, the Peace-offerings, ad confirmandum & consignandum, for the confirming the Covenant only, wherein therefore they addressed themselves before fore the Divine Majesty with greater confidence. If any shall object, That the Holocaust was wholly burnt and consumed, and so no body partaker thereof; I answer, It is true, the Beast which was slain was wholly burnt, and so all of it as it were God's Meats: But there was * a Meat-offering and Drink-offering annexed thereunto, as a part of the holy Feast; of which a handful only was burnt for a memorial, the remainder was for the * Priests to eat in the holy place. Besides Burnt-offerings were regularly accompanied with Peace-offerings (as you shall find them in Scripture ordinarily joyned together;) now in these the people that offered had the greatest share. In a word, That those who offered sacrifice, both among Jews and Gentiles, were partakers of the same, is a thing to be taken for granted; as appears by the warning God gave the Israelites, Exod. 34. 12, 15. That they should make no covenants with the inhabitants of the land; Lest, when they went a whoring after their Gods, and offered a sacrifice unto them, they might call them, and they also eat of their sacrifice. Also by that Psal. 106. 28. They joyned themselves to Baal-Peor, and ate the sacrifices of the dead. By that of S. Paul, Heb. 13. 10. We have an Altar, whereof they have no right to eat which serve at the Tabernacle. So that of this there need be no question.

It remains only that we prove, That these sacred Epulæ were Epulæ fæderales, Federal Feasts, and so our Definition will stand good. Now this will appear first in general, by that expression of Scripture, wherein the Covenant which God makes with Man is expressed by eating and drinking at his Table, Luke 13. 26. Those to whom the Lord opens not, plead for themselves, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets, &c. Chap. 22. 29, 30. Our Saviour tells his Disciples, I appoint you a Kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; That ye may eat and drink at my Table in my Kingdom. Apocal. 3. 20. Behold, I stand at the door, and knock; If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in unto him, and will sup with him, and he with me. But these passages, you will say, shew rather how sacrifices might be Feasts of amity between God and men, than prove they were so indeed: Hear therefore such proofs as I think come home to the point.

First, Every sacrifice, saith our Saviour, Mark 9. 49. is salted with salt. This salt is called Levit. 2. 13. The salt of the Covenant of God; that is, a Symbol of the perpetuity thereof. Now if the salt which seasoned the Sacrifice were salsæderis Dei, the salt of the Covenant of God, what was the Sacrifice it self but Epulum fæderis, the Feast of the Covenant?

Secondly, Moses calls the Bloud of the Burnt-offerings and Peace-offerings, wherewith he sprinkled the children of Israel when they received the Law, The Bloud of the Covenant which the Lord had made with them; This is, saith he, the Bloud of the Covenant which the Lord hath made with you, Exod. 24. 8.

Thirdly, But above all, this may most evidently be evinced out of the 50. Psal., the whole Argument whereof is concerning sacrifices: There God saith, vers. 5. Gather my Saints together unto me, which make covenant with me by sacrifice, כִּרְחֵי בְרִיתִי עֲלֵי-יֹדְבָה. And vers. 16. of the Sacrifices of the wicked and such as amend not their lives, Unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my Statutes קִי, and take my Covenant in thy mouth? seeing thou hatest instruction, &c. Statutes here are Rites and Ordinances, and particularly those of sacrifice, which whoſo bringeth unto God, and thereby supplicates and calls upon his Name, is said to take the Covenant of God in his mouth; forasmuch as to invoke God with this Rite, was to do it by way of commemoration of his Covenant, and to say, Remember, Lord, thy covenant, and, For thy covenant's sake, Lord, hear my prayer and supplication. For what hath man to do with God, to beg any favour at his hands, unless he be in covenant with him? Whereby appears the reason why mankind, from the beginning of the world, used to approach their God by this Rite of sacrificing, that is, ritu fæderali, by a fæderal Rite.

Fourthly, I add in this last place, for a further confirmation yet, That when God was to make a Covenant with Abram, Gen. 15. he commanded him to offer him a Sacrifice, vers. 9. Offer unto me (saith he, * so it should be turned) a heifer, a she-goat, * And so the Chaldeæ Par. for the Hebrew קֶחָה לִי קָרִיב קָרָמִי offer before me, and a ram, each of three years old, a turtle dove, and a young pigeon. All which he offered accordingly, and divided them in the midst, laying each piece or moiety one against the other; and when the Sun went down, God in the likeness of a smoaking furnace and burning lamp past between the pieces, and so (as the Text says) made a covenant with Abram, saying, unto thy seed will I give this land, &c. By which Rite of passing between the parts, God condescended to the manner of men. And note here, that the Gentiles, and Jews likewise, in their more solemn Covenants between men and men, men, (which were made under pain of curse or execration) used this Rite of Sacrifice, whereby men covenanted with their God, as it were to make their God both a witness and party with them. And here the Jews cut the Sacrifice in sunder, and pass between the parts thereof; as God did here with Abram: which was as much as if they had said, Thus let me be divided and cut in pieces, if I violate the oath I have now made in the presence of my God. The Gentiles, besides other ceremonies, used not to eat at all of these Sacrifices, but to fling them into the Sea, or bury them in the Earth; as if they had said, If I break a Covenant, thus let me be excluded from all amity and favour with my God, as I am now from eating of his Sacrifice. Hence came those phrases of לכרות ברית, in the Hebrew; of ferire, percutere & icere fœdus, in Latin; of ὄρχια τέμνειν, in Homer, To cut or to strike a Covenant; à ferendis, percutiendis, & secandis sacrificiis in fœderibus sanciendis, from the custome of striking and cutting the Sacrifices asunder at the making of Covenants between man and man. Though this manner of speech may be also derived from their ordinary Epulæ fœderales, wherein they killed Beasts, which the ancients in their ordinary diet did not.

Mal. i. 11.

See Jerem. ch.
34. ver. 18. 19.

Having thus seen what is the nature of a Sacrifice, and wherein the ratio or essential Form thereof consisteth; it will not be hard to judge, whether the ancient Christians did rightly in giving the Eucharist that name, or not: For that the Lord's Supper is Epulum fœderale a Federal Feast we all grant, and our Saviour expressly affirms it of the Cup in the institution, τὸ το ποτήριον ἡ καινὴ ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ ἐν τῷ αἵματι μου, τὸ περὶ πολλῶν ἐκχυρόμενον εἰς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, This Cup is the Rite of the new Covenant in my Blood, which is poured out for many for the remission of sins; evidently implying, That the bloody Sacrifices of the Law, with their Meat and Drink-offerings, were Rites of an old Covenant, and that this succeeded them as the Rite of the \ New*: That that was contracted with the blood of beeves, sheep and goats; but this founded in the blood of Christ. This parallel is so plain, as I think none will deny it. There is nothing then remains to make this sacred Epulum a full Sacrifice, but that the Viands thereof should be first offered unto God, that he may be the Convivator, we the Convivæ or the Guests.

CHAP. VIII.

The Fifth Particular, That the Body and Blood of Christ in the Eucharist was made of Bread and Wine which had first been offered to God, to agnize him the Lord of the Creature. This proved from the Testimonies of Antiquity next to the Apostles times, and from ancient Liturgies; as also from the Fathers arguing from this oblation of the Creature in the Eucharist to God, that the Father of Christ was the Creator of the world, in confutation of some Hereticks in their days; and lastly from S. Paul's parallel of the Lord's Supper and the Sacrifices of the Gentiles. Two Questions answered. 1. Whence may it appear that our Saviour at the Institution of the Eucharist did first offer the Bread and Wine to God, to agnize him the Lord of the Creature? 2. Is not the celebration of the Eucharist in the Western Churches (whether the Reformed or the Roman) therefore defective, because no such Oblation is there in use?

MY last task was to prove, That not only the whole Action of the celebration of the Eucharist, according to the Definition I gave thereof, but even the Rite of the Lord's Supper is indeed a Sacrifice, not in a Metaphorical, but a proper sense; and this, if the nature of Sacrifice be truly defined, no whit repugnant to the Principles of the Reformed Religion.

To evidence which I shewed, That a Sacrifice was nothing else but a Sacred Feast, namely Epulum fœderale, wherein God mystically entertained Man at his own Table, in token of amity and friendship with him: Which that he might do, the Viands of that Feast were first made God's by oblation, and so eaten of, not as of Man's, but God's provision.

There is nothing then wanting to make this sacred Epulum, of which we speak full out a Sacrifice; but that we shew, That the Viands thereof were in like manner first offered unto God; that so being his, he might be the Convivator, Man the Convivæ or the Guest. And this the ancient Church was wont to do; this they believed our Blessed Saviour himself did, when, at the institution of this holy Rite, he took the Bread and the Cup into his sacred hands, and looking up to Heaven gave thanks and blessed.

And,

And, after his example, they first offered the Bread and Wine unto God, to agnize him the Lord of the Creature; and then received them from him again in a Banquet, as the Symbols of the Body and Blood of his Son. This is that I am now to prove out of the Testimonies of Antiquity, not long after, but next unto the Apostles times, when it is not likely the Church had altered the form they left her for the celebration of this Mystery.

Mal. 1. 11.

I will begin with Irenæus as the most full and copious in this point. He in his fourth Book cap. 32. speaks thus; Dominus Discipulis suis dans consilium Primitias Deo offerre ex suis Creaturis, non quasi indigenti, sed ut ipsi nec infructuosi nec ingrati sint; eum qui ex Creatura panis est accepit, & gratias egit, dicens, Hoc est corpus meum; & Calicem similiter, qui est ex ea Creatura quæ est secundum nos, suum sanguinem confessus est: & Novi Testamenti novam docuit oblationem, quam Ecclesia ab Apostolis accipiens, in universo mundo offert Deo, ei qui alimenta nobis præstat, primitias suorum munusculorum in Novo Testamento: Our Lord counselling his Disciples to offer unto God the First-fruits (or a Present) of his Creatures, not for that God hath any need thereof, but that they might shew themselves neither unfruitful nor ungrateful; He took that Bread which was made of his Creature, and gave Thanks, saying, This is my Body; and he likewise acknowledged the Cup, consisting of the Creature which we use, to be his Blood: And thus taught the new oblation of the New Testament, which the Church receiving from the Apostles, offers throughout the world unto God, that feeds and nourisheth us, being the First-fruits of his own gifts in the New Testament.

And Cap. 34. *Igitur Ecclesiæ oblatio, quam Dominus docuit offerri in universo mundo, purum sacrificium reputatum est apud Deum, & acceptum est ei; non quod indigeat à nobis sacrificium, sed quoniam is qui offert, glorificatur ipse in eo quod offert, si acceptetur. munus ejus: Per munus enim erga Regem honos & affectio ostenditur. Therefore the Oblation of the Church, which our Lord taught and appointed to be offered through all the world, is accounted a pure Sacrifice with God, and is acceptable unto him; not because God stands in need of our Sacrifice, but because the offerer is himself honoured in that he offers, if his Present be accepted: For by the Present it appears what affection and esteem the Giver hath for the King he honoureth therewith. He alludes to that in Malachi 1. 14. I am a great King, saith the Lord of Hosts.*

Ibid. Oportet nos oblationem Deo facere, & in omnibus gratos inveniri Fabricatori Deo — Primitias earum quæ sunt ejus Creaturarum offerentes: & hanc oblationem Ecclesia sola puram offert Fabricatori, offerens ei cum gratiarum actione ex Creatura ejus: It becometh us to present God with our Oblations, and in all things to be found thankful unto God our Maker — offering unto him the First-fruits of his Creatures: and it is the Church only that offers this Pure Oblation unto the Creator of the world, while it offers unto him a Present out of his Creatures with thanksgiving.

In the same place, Offerimus autem ei, non quasi indigenti, sed gratias agentes Dominationi ejus, & sanctificantes creaturam: But we offer unto him, not as if he needed, but as giving thanks to his Sovereignty, and sanctifying the Creature. He alludes again to that in this Chapter of Malachi, v. 6. If I be Dominus, where is my fear, saith the Lord of hosts unto you, O Priests that offer polluted Bread upon mine Altar?

My next witness shall be Justin Martyr, in time elder than Irenæus, though I reserved him for the second place. He in his Dialogue with Tryphon, (the place before alledged) telling the Jew, That the sacrifices of Christians are Εὐχαὶ καὶ Εὐχαριστίαι, supplications and giving of Thanks; ταῦτα γὰρ μόνα καὶ Χριστιανοὶ παρέλαβον ποιεῖν, ἐπ' ἀναμνήσει δὲ τῆς τροφῆς αὐτῶν ἐνεῶς τε καὶ ὑγρᾶς, and that these are the only sacrifices which Christians have been taught they should perform, in that thankful remembrance of their food both dry and liquid; ἐν ᾗ καὶ τῷ πάθους ὁ πέπονθε δι' αὐτὸν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ μνησθῆναι, wherein also is commemorated the Passion which the Son of God suffered by himself. Here is a twofold commemoration witnessed to be made in the Eucharist: The first, as he speaks, of our food dry and liquid, that is, of our meat and drink, by agnizing God, and recording him the Creator and giver thereof; the second, of the Passion of Christ the Son of God, in one and the same food. And again, in the same Dialogue, *Panem Eucharistiæ * in commemorationem passionis suæ Christus * εὐχαριστῶντα τῷ πατρί, fieri tradidit, Christ hath taught us that the Eucharistical Bread should be consecrated for the Commemoration of his Passion; ἵνα ἅμα τε εὐχαριστῶμεν τῷ Θεῷ, ὑπὲρ τε τῆς τὸν κόσμον ἐκτικῆναι σὺν πᾶσι τοῖς ἐν αὐτῷ δια τὸν ἄνθρωπον, καὶ ὑπὲρ τῆς ἀπὸ τῆς κακίας ἐν ᾗ γεγόναμεν ἐλευθερωθῆναι ἡμᾶς, καὶ τὰς ἀρχαὶς καὶ τὰς ἐξουσίαις καταλελυθῆναι τελείαν καταλυσιν, διὰ τῆς παθητῆς γενομένης κατὰ τὴν βουλὴν αὐτοῦ, that withall we may give thanks to God for having made the world with all things therein for man, and for having freed us* from that evil and misery wherein we were, and having utterly overthrown * Principalities and Powers, by him that became passible according to his * counsel and will. To which he immediately subjoins the Text, and applies it to the Eucharist, Thus Justin Martyr.

My third witness is Origen in his 8. Book Contra Cels. Celsus (saith he) thinks it seemly we should be thankful to Demons, and to offer them * Χαιρετήρια but we think him to live most comelie, τὸν μεμνημένον τῆς ὁ Δημιουργήσας, that remembers who is the Creator: unto whom we Christians are careful not to be unthankful, with whose benefits we are filled, and whose Creatures we are. Εἰ δὲ καὶ σύμβολον ἡμῖν τῆς πρὸς Θεὸν εὐχαριστίας, ἄρτος Εὐχαριστία καλούμενος. that is, And we have also a Symbol of our Thanksgiving unto God, the Bread which is called 'Ευχαριστία. Where note that the Eucharistical Bread is said to be a Symbol not only of the Body and Bloud of Christ, but a Symbol of that Thanksgiving which we render to the Creator through him.

Again, in the same Book, where Celsus likewise would have mankind thankful unto Demons, as those to whom the charge of things here upon earth is committed, and to offer unto them Ἀπαρχὰς καὶ εὐχαίς, First-fruits and Prayers; Origen thus takes him up, Κέλσος μὲν, ὡς ἀγνοῶν Θεόν, τὰ Χαιρετήρια ἀποδιδότω· ἡμεῖς δὲ τῷ τῷ παντὶ δημιουργῷ εὐαρεστέμεν, καὶ τῷ μετ' εὐχαριστίας καὶ εὐχῆς τῆς ἐπὶ τοῖς δοθείσι προσαγομένους ἄρτις ἐδώμεν, σῶμα γενομένους, δια τὴν εὐχὴν, ἅγιόν τι. Let Celsus, as being void of the true Knowledge of God, render Χαιρετήρια to the Demons. As for us Christians, whose only desire it is to please the Creator of the Universe, we eat the Bread that was offered unto him with Prayer and Thanksgiving for his Gifts, and then made a kind of holy Body by Prayer. Mark here, Bread offered unto God with Prayer and Thanksgiving pro datis, for that he hath given us, and then by Prayer made a holy Body, and so eaten.

Thus much out of Fathers; all of them within less than two hundred and fifty years after Christ, and less than one hundred and fifty after the death of S. John.

The same appears in the Forms of the ancient Liturgies. As in that of Clement, where the Priest in the name of the whole Church assembled speaks thus; (a) Προσφέρμεν σοι τῷ Βασιλεῖ καὶ Θεῷ, We offer unto thee our King and God, κατὰ τὴν αὐτῷ διαταξίν, according to his (that is, Christ's) appointment τὸν ἄρτον τοῦτον καὶ τὸ ποτήριον τοῦτο, this Bread and this Cup; εὐχαριστοῦν σοι δι' αὐτῷ, ἐφ' οἷς κατηξίωσας ἡμᾶς ἐξάναί ἐνώπιόν σου καὶ ἱερατεύειν σοι· καὶ ἀξιῶμέν σε ὅπως εὐμένως ἐπ' ἐλέει σου τὰ προκείμενα δώρα ἐνώπιόν σου, σὺ ἀρετῶν Θεοῦ, καὶ εὐδοκίης ἐπ' αὐτοῖς εἰς τιμὴν τῷ Χριστῷ σου, &c. Giving thanks unto thee through him, for that thou hast vouchsafed us (he speaks of the whole Church) to stand before thee and to minister unto thee: And we beseech thee, thou God that wantest nothing, that thou wouldst look favourably upon these Gifts here set before thee, and accept them to the honour of thy Christ, &c.

Again, (b) Ὑπὲρ τῶ δώρε τῷ προσκομιδέντῳ. Κυρίῳ τῷ Θεῷ ἡμῶν δεησώμεν, ὅπως ὁ ἀγαθὸς Θεὸς προσδέξηται αὐτὸ δι' τῆς μεσιτείας τῷ Χριστῷ αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸ ἐπ' ἐσχάτον αὐτῷ συσπασθῆναι εἰς ὁμὴν εὐδίας. For the Gift or Oblation that is offered to the Lord our God, let us pray that our good God would receive it through the mediation of his Christ to his heavenly Altar for a sweet-smelling savour.

Yea, in the Canon of the * Roman Church, though the Rite be not used, yet the words remain still; as when the Priest, long before the consecration of the Body and Bloud of Christ, prays, Te, Clementissime Pater, per Jesum Christum Filium tuum, Dominum nostrum, supplices rogamus, ut accepta habeas & benedicas hæc Dona, hæc Munera: We humbly beseech and intreat thee, most merciful Father, Through Jesus Christ thy Son, our Lord, to accept and bless these Gifts, these Presents: and other like passages, which now they wrest to a new-found Oblation of the Body and Bloud of Christ, which the ancient Church knew not of.

But, of all others, This Rite is most strongly confirmed by that wont of the Ancient Fathers to confute the Hereticks of those first times (who held the Creator of the world to be some inferiour Deity, and not the Father of Christ,) out of the Eucharist: For, say they, unless the Father of Christ be the Creator of the world, why is the Creature offered unto him in the Eucharist as if he were? would he be agnized the Author and Lord of that he is not?

Hear Irenæus, Adversus Hæres. lib. 4. cap. 34. Hæreticorum Synagoga (saith he) non offerunt [ Eucharisticam oblationem quam Dominus offerri docuit ; ] Alterum enim præter Fabricatorem dicentes Patrem, Ideo quæ secundum nos Creaturæ sunt offerentes ei, cupidum alieni ostendunt eum, & aliena concupiscentem : The Synagogues of the Hereticks do not offer [ the very Eucharistical oblation which our Lord taught and appointed to be offered ; ] for they affirming another besides the Creator of the world to be the Father of Christ, do therefore, while they offer unto him the Creatures which are here with us, represent him to be desirous of that which is anothers, and to covet that which is not his : and a little after, *Quomodo autem constabit eis eum panem * in quo gratiæ actæ sunt Corpus esse Domini sui, & Calicem sanguinis ejus, si non ipsum Fabricatoris mundi Filium dicant, id est, Verbum ejus per quod lignum fructificat, & desunt fontes, & terra dat primum quidem * gramen, post deinde spicam, deinde plenum triticum in spica ?* How shall it appear to them that that Bread for which Thanks have been given is the Body of their Lord, and that Cup the Cup of his Blood, if they deny him to be the Son of the Creator of the world, that is to say, to be the word of him by whom the Tree brings forth fruit, Fountains send forth water, and the Earth brings forth first green corn like grass, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear ?

τίας* and *ἡοὐ εὐχαρισ-

Mar. 4. 28.

From the same ground Tertullian argues against Marcion, Contra Marc. lib. 1. cap. 23. Non putem (saith he) impudentiorem quàm qui in aliena aqua alii Deo tingitur, ad alienum Cælum alii Deo expanditur, in aliena terra alii Deo sternitur, super alienum panem alii Deo gratiarum actionibus fungitur : I cannot conceive any one more impudent than he that is baptized to a God in a water that is none of his, that in prayer to a God spreads forth his hands towards an Heaven that is none of his, that prostrates himself to a God upon an Earth that is not his, that gives thanks to a God for that Bread which is none of his.

Origen against the same Heretick useth the same Argument, Dialog. advers. Marc. 3. paulo ante finem : Dominus aspiciens in cælum gratias agit : Ecquid non agit conditori gratias ? Cum panem accepisset, & poculum, & benedixisset, quid ? alterine pro Creaturis conditoris benedixit ? an potius illi qui effecit & exhibuit ? Our Lord looking up to heaven gave thanks. What ? did not he give thanks to the Creator of the world ? When he took the Bread and the Cup, and blessed ; did he bless and give thanks to any other for the Creatures of God the Maker of the world, and not rather bless and give thanks to him who made them and gave them us ?

Lastly, This Oblation of the Bread and Wine is implied in S. Paul's parallel of the Lord's Supper and the Sacrifice of the Gentiles : Ye cannot (saith he) be partakers of the Table of the Lord, and the Table of Devils ; namely, because they imply contrary Covenants, incompatible one with the other ; a sacrifice (as I told you) being Epulum fæderale a Federal Feast. Now here it is manifest that the Table of Devils is so called, because it consisted of Viands offered to Devils, (for so S. Paul expressly tells us,) whereby those that eat thereof, eat of the Devil's meat ; Ergo, The Table of the Lord is likewise called his Table, not because he ordained it, but it because consisted of Viands offered unto him.

1 Cor. 10. 21.

Having thus, as I think, sufficiently proved what I took in hand, I think it not amiss to answer two Questions which this Discourse may beget. The first is, How the Ancients could gather out of the Institution, that our Saviour did as hath been shewed. I answer, They believed that he did as the Jews were wont to do : But they did thus. How, will you say, doth this appear ? I answer, It may appear thus. The Passeover was a sacrifice, and therefore the Viands here, as in all other holy Feasts, were first offered unto God. Now the Bread and Wine, which our Saviour took when he blessed and gave thanks, was the Mincha or Meat-offering of the Passeover. If then he did as the Jews used to do, he agnized his Father and blessed him, by oblation of these his Creatures unto him, using the like or the same Form of words ; ברוך אתה יהוה אלהינו מלך העולם המוציא לחם מן הארץ Blessed be thou, O Lord our God, the King of the world, which bringest forth Bread out of the earth : and over the Wine, ברוך אתה יהוה אלהינו מלך העולם כורא פרי הנפן Blessed be thou, O Lord our God, the King of the world, which createst the fruit of the Vine. Moreover the Church ab initio applied that Precept of our Saviour, Matt. 5. 23. If thou bring thy Gift to the Altar, &c. to the Eucharist ; for they believed that he would not enact a new Law concerning Legal Sacrifices which he was presently to abolish, but that it had reference to that Oblation which was to continue under the Gospel.

The other Question is, If all this be so, how is not our celebration of the Eucharist defective, where no such Oblation is used ? I answer, This concerns not us alone, but all the Churches of the West of the Roman Communion, who, as in other things things they have depraved this mystery, and swerved from the Primitive pattern thereof, so have they for many Ages disused this Oblation of Bread and Wine, and brought in, in lieu thereof, a real and Hypostatical oblation of Christ himself. This blasphemous Oblation we have taken away, and justly; but not reduced again that express and formal use of the other. Howsoever, though we do it not with a set ceremony and form of words; yet indeed and effect we do it, so often as we set the Bread and Wine upon the Holy Table: For whatsoever we set upon God's Table, is ipso facto dedicated and offered unto him; according to that of our Saviour Matt. 23. 19. τὸ θυσιάζειν ἀγιάζει τὸ δῶρον, The Altar sanctifies the gift, that is, consecrates it unto God, and appropriates it to his use. In which respect it were much to be wisht that this were more solemnly done than is usual; namely, not until the time of the administration, and by the hand of the Minister, in the name and sight of the whole Congregation standing up and shewing some sign of due and lowly reverence; according as the Deacon was wont to admonish the people in Ancient Liturgies, Ὁρθοὶ πρὸς Κύριον μετὰ φόβου καὶ τρόμου ἑστῶτες ὡς μὲν προσφέρειν, Let us stand in an upright posture before God to offer with fear and trembling.

CHAP. IX.

The Sixth Particular, That Christ is offered in the Eucharist Commemoratively only, and not otherwise. This Commemorative Sacrifice, or the Commemoration in the Eucharist, explained. That Christ is offered by way of Commemoration only, was the sense of the ancient Church. This proved from ancient Liturgies and Fathers. The Conclusion, containing an elegant description of the Christian Sacrifice out of the History of S. Andrew's Martyrdom.

VI. THE Sixth and last thing to be proved was, That Christ is offered in this Sacrifice Commemoratively only, and not otherwise.

Though the Eucharist be a Sacrifice, (that is, an Oblation wherein the Offerer banquets with his God) yet is Christ in this Sacrifice no otherwise offered than by way of Commemoration only of his Sacrifice once offered upon the Cross, as a learned Prelate of ours hath lately written, objectivè only, not subjectivè. And this is that which our Saviour himself said when he ordained this sacred Rite, τὸ ποιεῖτε ἐν τῷ ἑμῷ ἀνάμνησιν, This do in commemoration of me.

But this Commemoration is to be made to God his Father, and is not a bare remembering or putting our selves in mind only, (as is commonly supposed,) but a putting of God in mind: For every sacrifice is directed unto God, and the Oblation therein, whatsoever it be, hath him for its Object, and not Man. If therefore the Eucharist be sacrificium Christi Commemorative, a Commemorative Sacrifice of Christ, as ours grant, then must the Commemoration therein be made unto God: And if Christ therein be offered objectivè, that is, as the Object of the Commemoration there made, (as that learned Bishop speaks,) if the Commemoration of him be an Oblation of him, to whom is this Oblation, that is, Commemoration, made but unto God?

Well then, Christ is offered in this Sacred Supper, not Hypostatically, as the Papists would have him, (for so he was but once offered,) but Commemoratively only: that is, By this Sacred Rite of Bread and Wine we represent and inculcate his blessed Passion to his Father; we put him in mind thereof, by setting the Monuments thereof before him; we testify our own mindfulness thereof unto his Sacred Majesty; that so he would, for his sake, according to the tenour of his Covenant, in him be favourable and propitious unto us miserable sinners.

That this, and no other Offering of Christ in the blessed Eucharist, the Ancient Church ever meant or intended, I am now to shew by authentical Testimonies.

First, by the constant Form of all the Liturgies; in which, after the reciting of the words of Institution, is subjoyned, Μνησθέντες προσφέρμεν, commemorantes, or commemorando, offerimus, Commemorating, or by Commemorating, we offer.

* Constit. Clem.
l. 8. c. 12.

* Clemens, Μνησθέντες τοίνυν τὸ πάθος αὐτοῦ, καὶ τὸ θάνατον, καὶ τῆς ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστάσεως, καὶ τῆς εἰς οὐρανὸν ἐπαρόδου — — προσφέρμεν σοι τῷ Βασιλεῖ καὶ Θεῷ τὸν ἄρτον τῆτον καὶ τὸ ποτήριον τῆτον. Therefore commemorating his Passion, and Death, and Resurrection from the dead, and ascension into Heaven — — we offer to thee our King and God this Bread and this Cup. Mark here, Commemorating we offer, that is,

We

We offer by Commemorating. But this Commemoration is made unto God to whom we offer. This is the tenour of all the Greek Liturgies, save that some, in stead of We offer unto thee this Bread and this Cup, have προσφέρω σοι τὴν φοβεράν τάντων καὶ ἀναιμάκτων θυσίαν, We offer unto thee this dreadful and unbloudy Sacrifice; as that of Jerusalem (called S. James his Liturgie:) others, τὴν λογικὴν τάντων καὶ ἀναιμάκτων λατρείαν, this reasonable and unbloudy Service; as that of S. Chrysostome: others, τὰ σὰ ἐκ ἑσῶν, thine own of thine own; as that of Basil and of Alexandria (called S. Mark's:) but all, Μενυμμένοι προσφέρωμεν, Commemorantes offerimus, Commemorating we offer.

Mal. i. 11.

In the same form runs the Ordo Romanus, Memores, Domine, nos servi tui, sed & Plebs tua sancta, ejusdem Christi Filii tui Domini Dei nostri, tum beatæ Passionis, nec non ab inferis Resurrectionis, sed & in Cælum gloriosæ Ascensionis, Offerimus præclaræ Majestati tuæ, de tuis donis ac datis, hostiam puram, hostiam sanctam, hostiam immaculatam, panem sanctum vitæ æternæ & calicem salutis perpetuæ: We, O Lord, thy servants, as also thy holy people, being mindful both of the blessed Passion and Resurrection from the dead, as also of the glorious Ascension into Heaven, of the same Christ thy Son our Lord, Offer unto thy excellent Majesty of thy own Gifts a pure Sacrifice, a holy Sacrifice, an immaculate Sacrifice, the holy Bread of eternal life and the Cup of everlasting Salvation. Note here also Memores offerimus, Being mindful of,— or Commemorating, we offer.

Which Ivo Carnotensis explains thus; Memores offerimus Majestati tuæ (id est, oblatam commemoramus per hæc dona visibilia) hostiam puram—sanctam, immaculatam, &c. Et hanc veri sacrificii commemorationem postulat sacerdos ita Deo Patri fore acceptam, sicut accepta fuerunt munera Abel, &c. Remembring, or being mindful, we offer to thy Majesty a pure, holy, and immaculate Sacrifice, that is, (saith he) we commemorate the same offered unto God by these visible Gifts. And the Priest accordingly prays that this Commemoration of the true Sacrifice may in like manner be acceptable to God the Father, as the Gifts of Abel were accepted of him. Thus he.

Memores therefore in the Latin Canon is Commemorantes, which the Greek expresses better Μενυμμένοι of the sense whereof that we may not doubt, hear the explication of that great Council of Ephesus in this manner: Καταγγέλλοις καὶ θάνατον τοῦ μονογενοῦς υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ, τὴν τε ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναβίωσιν, καὶ ἡ εἰς ὑψανὺς ἀναλήψιν ὁμολογῶντες, καὶ ἀναιμάκτον ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τελευτῶμεν * θυσίαν. Shewing forth * Al. λατρείαν the Death of the only begotten Son of God, that is, of Jesus Christ, as also confessing his Resurrection and Ascension into heaven, we celebrate in our Churches the unbloudy Sacrifice or Service.

Μενυμμένοι * Commemorating therefore is Shewing forth and Confessing: But unto whom should we confess but unto God? To him therefore, and not unto our selves, is that Ἀνάμνησις or Commemoration to be made which Christ commended to his Church, when he said, Do this εἰς τὴν ἐμὴν ἀνάμνησιν, for my Commemoration, or in remembrance of me.

* So the Syr. Paraph. (u. 1 Cor. 11. 26) rende's καὶ ἀναμνηστε' ye shew forth by סעקרתן אנתן ye commemorate.

In this Council of Ephesus Cyril of Alexandria was chief Actor and President: and it is to be noted, that the Liturgie of the Church of Alexandria (usually called S. Mark's) hath in stead of Μενυμμένοι the self-same words, Καταγγέλλοις καὶ ὁμολογῶντες, shewing forth and confessing, which I now quoted out of the Council for an explication of the same: which argues, as I take it, Cyril to have been the pen-man of the Decree of the Council, and the Liturgie of his Church to have then run in this form.

I shall need alledge no more of the Latin Liturgies; there is no material difference amongst them; so that if you know the form of one, you know of all. I will add only out of S. Ambrose an Explication following those words of the Institution; Do this in remembrance of me, exprest in this manner; Mandans & dicens ad eos, Quotiescunque hoc feceritis, toties commemorationem mei facietis, Mortem meam predicabitis, Resurrectionem meam annuntiabitis, Adventum sperabitis, donec iterum adveniam: Commanding and saying to them, As often as ye shall do this, ye shall commemorate me, declare my Death, shew forth my Resurrection, express your hope of my Coming, until I come again.

This may suffice for Liturgies. Now let us hear the Fathers speak.

I quoted heretofore a passage out of Justin Martyr affirming a twofold Ἀνάμνησις or Commemoration to be made in the Eucharist; the one of our Food, dry and liquid; (as he speaks) that is, of our meat and drink, by agnizing and recording him the Lord and Giver of the same; the other an Ἀνάμνησις in the same Food τῷ πιδεῖ τῷ υἱῷ τοῦ Θεοῦ, of the Passion of the Son of God. The first of these Commemorations is made unto God; for to whom else should we tender our thankfulness for the Creature? Ergo, the second, the Commemoration of the Passion of the Son of God, is made to him likewise.

Mal. i. 11.

My next Father is Origen, Homil. 13. in Lev. cap. 24. where comparing the Eucharist to the shew-bread which was every Sabbath set for a Memorial before the Lord, Ista est (saith he, meaning the Eucharist) commemoratio sola quæ propitium facit Deum hominibus; That's the only Commemoration which renders God propitious to men. Where noteth that both this Commemoration is made unto God as that of the shew-bread was; and that the end thereof is to make him propitious to men: According to that of S. Augustine l. 9. c. 13. Illa quæ in cœna Christus exhibet, Fides accepta interponit inter peccata nostra & iram Dei, tanquam satisfactionem & propitiationem: Those things which Christ exhibits in his Supper, Faith having received them, interposeth them as a Satisfaction and Propitiation between our sins and God's wrath.

My next witness is Eusebius, Demonst. Evan. lib. I. cap. 10. Μετὰ πάντα εἶόν τι θάυμασιον θυμίαμα καὶ σφάγιον ἐξαίρετον τῷ Πατρὶ καλλιερωμένον, ὑπὲρ τῆς ἀπάντων ἡμῶν ἀνέγκη σωτηρίας, * μνήμην καὶ ἡμῖν παραδόντι θυσίας τῷ Θεῷ διανεκῶς προσφέρειν. After all other things done, (saith he, speaking of Christ) he made that so wonderful an Oblation and excellent Sacrifice to God for the Salvation of us all, appointing us to offer continually unto God a Remembrance thereof in stead of a Sacrifice. And again, toward the end of that Chapter, having cited this place of Malachi which I have chosen for my Text, and alluding thereunto, θυμιῶμεν τὸ προφητικὸν θυμίαμα, We offer the Incense spoken of by the Prophet. Θύομεν καὶ θυμιῶμεν· τότε μὲν τὴν μνήμην τοῦ μεγάλου θύματος, κατὰ τὰ πρὸς αὐτὸ παραδοθέντα μυστήρια ὁπτελύντες, καὶ τὴν ὑπὲρ σωτηρίας ἡμῶν Ἐυχαριστίαν δι' ὁσέων ὑμῶν τε καὶ ὀρχῶν τῷ Θεῷ προσκομιζόμενοι· τότε δὲ σφᾶς αὐτὸς ὅλως κατεργάσας αὐτῶν, καὶ τῷ γε Ἀρχιερεὶ αὐτὸς λόγῳ, αὐτῷ σώματι καὶ ψυχῇ ἀνακαίμενοι· We offer Sacrifice and Incense, while we celebrate the remembrance of the Great Sacrifice according to the mysteries given to us by him, and offer the Eucharist with holy Hymns and Prayers to God for the Salvation of our Souls; as also in that we consecrate our selves wholly unto him, and dedicate our selves both Soul and Body to his High Priest the Word.

But above all other, S. Chrysostome speaks so full and home to the point as nothing can be more; to wit, Hom. 17. in Epist. ad Hebræos, upon these words cap. 9. v. 26. But now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself: τί οὖν; ἡμεῖς καθ' ἑκάστην ἡμέραν προσφέρομεν; What then? (saith he) Do not we offer every day? He answers, Προσφέρομεν μὲν, ἀλλ' ἀνάμνησιν ποιούμενοι τοῦ θανάτου αὐτοῦ· καὶ μία ἐστὶν αὐτῇ, καὶ ἡ πολλὰι· We offer indeed, but it is by making a Commemoration of his death: And this Sacrifice is one, and not many.— πῶς μία, καὶ ἡ πολλὰι; But how is it one, and not many? ἐπεὶ ἅπαξ προσενέχθη, ὡς ὅτι ἐκείνη ἡ εἰς τὰ ἁγία τῆς ἁγίας· τὸτο ἐκείνης τύπος ἐστὶ, καὶ αὕτη ἐκείνης· Because it was once offered, not as that which was carried into the Holy of holies. That was the figure of this, and this [the Truth] of that. And a little after, Ὁ Ἀρχιερεὺς ἡμῶν ἐκείνός ἐστιν ὁ τὴν θυσίαν τὴν καθαίρωνσαν ἡμᾶς προσενέγκων· ἐκείνην προσφέρομεν καὶ νῦν, τὴν τότε προσενεχθεῖσαν, τὴν αἰδωλῶν· τὸτο εἰς ἀνάμνησιν γίνεται τὸ τότε γινόμενον· Τὸτο γὰρ ποιεῖτε, φησὶν, εἰς τὴν ἐμὴν ἀνάμνησιν. Οὐκ ἄλλαν θυσίαν, καθάπερ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς τότε, ἀλλὰ τὴν αὐτὴν αἰεὶ ποιῶμεν, μάλλον δὲ ἀνάμνησιν ἐργαζόμεθα θυσίας· He (that is, Christ) is our High-Priest who offered that Sacrifice which purifieth us. The same do we also offer now, that then was offered, and is yet unconsumed. This is done in remembrance of that which was then done; For Do this, (saith he) in remembrance of me. We offer not another, not a different, Sacrifice, as the Jewish High-Priest did of old, but still one and the same; or rather we perform the remembrance of a Sacrifice. What can be more express than this is?

Primasius is short, but no less to the purpose. Offerunt quidem, saith he, Sacerdotes nostri, sed ad recordationem mortis ejus, in 10. cap. ad Hebræos: Our Priests indeed offer, but it is in remembrance of his death. S. Augustine calls it Memoriale sacrificium a Sacrifice by way of remembrance, in his Book against Faustus.

In a word, The Sacrifice of Christians is nothing but that one Sacrifice of Christ once offered upon the Cross, again and again commemorated.

Which is elegantly express'd by those words of S. Andrew, recorded in the History of his Passion, written by the Presbyters of Achaia: where Ægeas the Proconsul requiring of him to sacrifice to Idols, he is said to have answered thus; Omnipotent Deo, qui unus & verus est, ego omni die sacrifico, non thuris fumum, nec taurorum mugientium carnes, nec hircorum sanguinem; sed immaculatum Agnum quotidie in Altari crucis sacrifico;

sacrificio; cujus carnes postquam omnis populus credentium manducaverit, & ejus sanguinem biberit, Agnus qui sacrificatus est integer perseverat & vivus: I sacrifice daily to Almighty God, but what? not the smoke of Frankincense, nor the flesh of bellowing Bulls, nor the blood of Goats: No, but I offer daily the unspotted Lamb of God on the Altar of the Cross; whose Flesh and Blood though all the Faithful eat and drink of, yet after all this notwithstanding, the Lamb that was sacrificed remains entire and alive still. This Riddle though Ægeas the Proconsul were not able to unfold, I make no question but you are. And here I conclude.

E Z R A V I. X.

That they may offer Sacrifices of sweet savour unto the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the King, and of his Sons.

THE words of the Decree of King Darius, for the building and furnishing of the service of the Temple of God at Jerusalem; That (saith he) which they have need of for the burnt-offerings of the God of heaven, both young bullocks, rams and lambs, wheat, salt, wine and oyl, let it be given them day by day without fail: That they may offer Sacrifices of sweet savour unto the God of Heaven, and pray for the life of the King, and of his Sons.

I have made choice of this Scripture, to shew that Sacrifice was Species Orationis, or a Rite of Supplication unto God: Such a one, namely wherein the Supplicant came not with naked Prayer, but presented something unto his God whereby to find favour in his sight. The nature and quality of the thing presented was Munus federale a Federal Gift, consisting of meat and drink; in the tender whereof, as a sinner agnized himself to be his God's vassal and servant, so by acceptance of the same he was reconciled and restored to his Covenant, by the atonement and forgiveness of his sin. * Forasmuch as, according to the use and custom of Mankind, to receive meat and drink from the hand of another was a sign of amity and friendship; much more to make another partaker of his Table, as the sinner was here of God's, by eating of his Oblation: hence those who came to make supplication unto the Divine Majesty, whom they had offended, were wont by this Rite to make way for their sute, by removing the obstacle of his offence. For what hope of speeding could there be, whilst the party to whom we tendred our supplication should be at enmity with us? when God might say, What hast thou to do to take my Covenant in thy mouth, seeing thou hatest instruction, and castest my words behind thee? For the foundation of all Invocation is, Remember thy Covenant; and of Impetration, the Remission of our sin.

For this cause therefore was Sacrifice used as Medium deprecandi Deum, as a Rite of address unto God, when we were to make prayer and supplication unto him; yea or to bless or give thanks. But this is not to my present purpose, but the use for Prayer only; which to have been thus addressed as I speak, appears not only by the words of my Text, That they may offer, &c. and pray, &c. but sundry other places of Scripture, which I mean to rehearse.

As first, by that so often inculcated of Abraham and Isaac, that where they pitched down their Tents, they built also an Altar, and there called upon the Name of the Lord: But an Altar was a place for Sacrifice: Therefore Sacrifice must be a Rite whereby they called upon the Name of God.

The same appears by that speech of Saul, 1 Sam. 13. 12. when Samuel reprovng him for having offered a Burnt-offering, I said, (saith he) The Philistines will come down upon me to Gilgal, and I have not made supplication unto the Lord: I forced my self therefore, and offered a Burnt-offering: Therefore to offer a Burnt-offering was to make Supplication.

It is yet more plain out of 1 Sam. 7. 8. The Children of Israel said to Samuel, Cease not, (or be not silent) to cry unto the Lord our God for us, that he will save us out of the hands of the Philistines. And Samuel (saith the Text, v. 9.) took a sucking Lamb, and offered it for a Burnt-offering unto the Lord; and Samuel cryed unto the Lord for Israel, and the Lord heard him.

Ezra 6. 10.

It is further proved by that in the 116. Psalm, v. 13. I will take the Cup of Salvation and call upon the Name of the Lord: For this Cup of Salvation is the Libamen or Drink-offering annexed and poured upon the Sacrifice, at what time they used (as here you see) to call upon the Name of the Lord. 'Tis a Synechdoche, where the part is put for the whole. Also [to take] is here to offer, by that Figure, quæ ex Antecedente intelligitur Consequens.

The same is implied by that of Micah 6. 6. Wherewith shall I come before the Lord, and bow my self before the most High? Shall I come before him with burnt-offerings, with calves of a year old?

And by that Antithesis, Prov. 15. 8. The Sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord; but the Prayer of the upright is his delight: For here the words of Sacrifice and Prayer are taken the one for the other: it being all one as if it had been said, for [Prayer of the upright] the Sacrifice of the upright, or for [Sacrifice of the wicked] the Prayer of the wicked. Hence it follows, That Sacrifice was Species Orationis, or a Rite of Supplication unto God.

The like may be inferred out of Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the Temple, and the Lord's answer to the same: For in that dedicatory prayer is no mention at all of Sacrifice to be there offered, but only that the Lord would be pleased to hear from heaven the Prayers of such and such as should be made in that Place, or towards it. Nevertheless, when God appeared to Solomon in the night, he saith unto him, I have heard thy Prayer, and have chosen this place to my self for an house of Sacrifice, 2 Chron. 7. 12, plainly implying, That to be an house of Sacrifice was to be an house of Prayer.

Add to these that in 1 Mac. 12. 11. where the Jews in their Epistle to the Lacedæmonians speak on this manner; We at all times (say they) without ceasing, both in our Feasts and other convenient days, do remember you in the Sacrifices which we offer, and in our prayers; ἐν διαδοχῇ, for in our prayers at our Sacrifices. Certainly it may be gathered hence, that Prayers were annexed to their Sacrifices, and that Sacrifice was a Rite of Prayer.

Verf. 10. 11.

The like we shall find in the first of Baruch, where we read that those who were carried Captive with Jechonias made a Collection of Money, and sent it to Jerusalem, saying, Behold, we have sent you money to buy you Burnt-offerings and Sin-offerings and Incense; and prepare ye the Meat-offering, and offer upon the Altar of the Lord our God: And pray for the life of Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon, and for the life of Balthasar his son, that their dayes on earth may be as the days of heaven; just to that of my Text, that they may offer Sacrifices of sweet savour unto the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the King, and of his Sons.

* Antiq. Jud.

Hence appears the reason why * Josephus, when the Scripture mentions no more but that Noah offered a Sacrifice when he came out of the Ark, attributes unto him a Prayer. Νῶχος (saith he) φοβόμενος μὴ κατέκαστον ἔτος ἐπιπλύσῃ τὴν γῆν ὁ Θεός, φθορὰν ἀνθρώπων καταψηφισάμενος, ἱερεῖα καύσας εἰδέτο τὸ λοιπὸν τὸν Θεὸν ἐπὶ τῆς πρώτης μένειν εὐταξίας, &c. Noah fearing lest God (having adjudged men to a general destruction) should every year thus drown the earth, offered sacrifices unto God, beseeching him that hereafter all things may continue in that good order and primitive state, &c.

I could be as plentiful in Profane Testimonies to this point as I have been in Sacred; and could alledge the Testimonies of Homer, (where we have Examples of Sacrifices with the forms of Prayer,) of Herodotus, and others. But what need we the Testimonies of the Gentiles, save to know that in this point the Jews and they agreed? It is enough to have proved it out of Scripture, that this was the use and nature of Sacrifice: wherein I have been so much the longer, because though the thing be of it self most apparent and evident, yet it is very little taken notice of.

But you will enquire now, What profit hath this Discourse, or what use is there of this thing being known? I answer, Yes; it will help our conceit very much to understand in what sense and for what respect the ancient Church called the Eucharist or Lord's Supper a Sacrifice, and how harmless that notion was; namely, They took this Sacrament to have been ordained by our Blessed Saviour to succeed those bloody Sacrifices of the Law, and to be a Medium deprecandi Deum, a mean of Supplication and address to God, in the New Testament, as they were in the Old, by representing the Body and Bloud of Christ unto his Father, κατὰ τὴν διάταξιν αὐτοῦ according to his appointment: Forasmuch as they saw them both to be Rites of a like kind, as consisting of Meats and Drinks; both Epule federales, Federal Feasts, those of the Old Covenant, this of the New, [τὸ τοῦ ποτήριον ἡ καινὴ διαθήκη, This Cup is the

New

New Testament,] both Rites of atonement or for Impetration of Remission of sin, [ τὸ τοῦ γὰρ ἔστι τὸ αἷμα μου, saith our Saviour, τὸ περὶ πολλῶν ἐκχυρόμενον εἰς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, This is my Bloud, which is shed for many for remission of sins. ] Besides, the Eucharist was by the time of its institution as it were substituted in place of the Passover, which was a Sacrifice of that kind called Pacifica. All these things considered how obvious was it for them to think, that it was in the Institution intended for the same End and Use the other were, namely, for a Commemoration, whereby to have access and find favour with God, when we address our selves unto him in the New Testament?

Ezra 6. 10.

And that this was no new device of later ages, but derived from the first times, may appear out of Cyril ( or his Successour John of Jerusalem ) Author of the 5. Catech. Mystag. In the last whereof, relating and expounding the meaning of that which was said or done at the celebration of the holy Eucharist, according to the use of his time, ( which was the Fourth seculum current ) amongst other things he saith, Μετὰ τὸ ἀπαρτιθῆναι τὴν πνευματικὴν θυσίαν, &c. [ See this passage quoted in the foregoing Discourse, Chap. 6. pag. 366. ]

Yea that it was the use in the days of Constantine thus adhibere Eucharistiam ad preces, to use the Eucharist as a Rite of impetration in their prayers, appears out of Eusebius in his De vita Constantini, lib. 4. c. 45. where speaking of a great Synod of Bishops assembled at Jerusalem by the Emperor's Command, to celebrate the dedication of a Church erected over the place of our Saviour's Sepulchre, and telling how the Bishops there met employ'd themselves during that Solemnity; some ( saith he ) by Panegyrick Orations set forth the Emperor's felicity; others were employed in preaching and expounding the Mysteries of Holy Scripture; another part ἀναίμαται θυσίαις τὸ θεῖον ἱλασκόνο, ὑπὲρ τῆς κοινῆς εἰρήνης, ὑπὲρ τῆς Ἐκκλησίας τοῦ Θεοῦ, αὐτῷ τε βασιλεῶς, ὑπὲρ τῶν ποσάτων αἰτίαι, παίδων τ' αὐτοῦ θεοφιλῶν, ἱκετηρίας ἐνχαίς τῷ Θεῷ προσαναφέροντες, did propitiate God and sought his favour by unbloody sacrifices, offering unto God humble Prayers for the publick peace, for the Church of God, for the King the Author of so much good, and for his children beloved of God; namely, as the Jews in their Sacrifices prayed for the life of the King and his sons, according to my Text.

But for the more full understanding the notion and practice of this Age, take also a passage of S. Austin: it is in his 22. Book De Civitate Dei, concerning one Hesperi, &c. [ See this passage quoted in the foregoing Discourse, Chap. 5. pag. 363. ]

But some will suspect perhaps that this Custome began in the days of Constantine. No, it did not: It was in use in the days of Cyprian 60. years before, as appears in his 16. Epistle ad Mosen & Maximum. * Nos quidem vestri memores, & quando in sacrificiis precem cum pluribus facimus, &c. [ See this passage quoted in the foregoing Discourse, Chap. 5. pag. 362. ]

* Adde here unto that of Cyprian in his De Orat. Dom. Et quando in unum cum fratribus convenimus, & SACRIFICIA Divina cum Dei Sacerdote celebramus, verecundia & discipline memores esse debemus, non passim ventilare PRECES nostras inconditis vocibus, &c.

Let us ascend a little higher yet unto the days of Tertullian, within 200 years after Christ. He, in his Book De Oratione, makes express mention of Orationes Sacrificiorum, Prayers that accompanied the celebration of the Christian Sacrifice, such namely as S. Cyprian ( Bishop of the same City whereof Tertullian was Presbyter, to wit of Carthage ) even now spake of. And in his Book ad Scapulam, Sacrificamus ( saith he ) purâ prece, We sacrifice with pure prayer. But you will say, This is against me rather, because he saith purâ prece, implying their was nothing else. No, it is not: For by purâ prece he means not nudâ & solitariâ prece, bare and naked prayer, but * prayer not defiled with shedding of blood and smoke of Incense, according to the manner of the Gentiles. And thus ( as Sozomen in l. 2. c. 14. relates ) Constantine writes to Sapores the Persian King in behalf of the Christians, μόναίς ἐνχαίς ἀναιμάχαις πρὸς ἱκεσίαν θεῷ ἀρχόνται that they did satisfy themselves and acquiesce in offering up Prayers without blood for the intreating of God's favour, & ὅδ' αὐτῷ φίλον αἱμάτων χύσις, μόνη δὲ χαίρει ψυχῇ καθαρά, for that the shedding of blood was no way acceptable to God, whose sole and chief delight was in a purified Soul.

* This to be his meaning, appears from the words immediately following, Non eget Deus odoris & sanguinis, alicujus, &c. See Chap. 3. of the foregoing Discourse, pag. 358.

And that it was the manner in Tertullian's time adhibere Eucharistiam ad preces, may be further confirmed by the promiscuous use of the words signifying the one and the other. For in his * Exhort. ad Castitatem, Oratio and Offerre, Oratio and sacrificium are interchangeably put the one for the other. It was observed before, how that Josephus attributes unto Noah a Prayer when the Scripture mentions only his offering a sacrifice. And for that which is said ( Acts 6. 6. ) in the story of the seven Deacons set before the Apostles to be ordained by them, καὶ προσευξάμενοι, and when they had prayed, &c. we have in Constit. Apostol. l. 8. c. ult. ἡμεῖς προσενέγκοντες κατὰ τὴν διαταγὴν αὐτοῦ θυσίαν καθάραν καὶ ἀναιμακτον, &c. We having offered (according to his appointment) a pure and unbloudy Sacrifice, ordained Bishops, Presbyters, and Deacons, in number seven.

[What remains in the Manuscript, consists of Testimonies quoted out of Justin Martyr his Dialogue with Trypho, and Ignatius his Epistle to the Ephesians, and Acts 2. 42. All which Passages are quoted at large in the foregoing Discourse, Chap. 5.]

Of the Name ALTAR,

OR

anciently given to the HOLY TABLE.

A Chappel Common-place, An. 1635.

GENTLE READER.

* An. 1635.

Long Preface would not become a Treatise of so small a bulk. Only therefore, in a word or two, thou art desired to take notice, That this Discourse was a private Exercise delivered in a Colledge Chappel, * above two full years since, and so before the present Controversie about that Subject whereof it treats was commenced by any publick Writing; and therefore not to be suspected to aim at, or to have relation to, any mans opinion or person since interested therein.

That it was never intended for the publick view, but, as thou mayest easily perceive by the form it still carries unaltered, fitted properly to that private Auditory and time, wherein it was uttered. But when, by occasion of the late Polemicks, it was copied out, to communicate to some friends for their better resolution in the controverted point; it chanced to fall into the hands of some, who so well liked it, as that they thought, the time of its composure especially considered, (which by way of caution was then prefixed in the front) it would, being made publick, conduce to peace, and settling of mens minds and judgments in this question.

The hope of so desirable a good prevailed with the Author (otherwise the most unwilling of any man to come abroad) to permit it to the Press. For whom would it not grieve to see, that the very NAME of That, the approach whereunto was wont, and still should, dissolve all differences, should now become the occasion of so much quarrel?

Matt. 5. 23, 24.

Thus much I thought good to admonish thee: and so hoping thou wilt make a favourable and candid construction of what is presented unto thee, with no ill meaning, (I dare assure thee) I bid thee Farewel.

SECTION

SECTION I.

HAVING made so long a Tractation about the Eucharist or Christian Sacrifice, I hold it not unfit, before I pass to another Theme, to speak somewhat of the Seat or raised Fabrick whereon this holy Mystery hath been celebrated; as an Appendix to my former Discourses thereof: and the rather, because some questions and scruples are moved thereabout. And though others commonly pronounce of these things according to vulgar opinion and hearsay, without further search and enquiry; yet it becomes not us, who live in the Schools of the Prophets, to do so; but to give our verdict, when we do give it, out of judgment and due examination.

To come then to the matter: The Seat or raised Fabrick appointed for the setting and celebration of this holy Mystery was the HOLY TABLE, or ALTAR: for by both these names hath that sacred Biere (as I may call it) of the Body and Blood of Christ been ever promiscuously and indifferently called in the Church. Of the name TABLE there is no question; it is granted by all: But concerning the name  $\Theta \Upsilon \Sigma \text{I} \Lambda \Sigma \text{T} \text{H} \Pi \text{O} \text{N}$  or ALTAR, many will not believe it. Let us therefore see what may be alledged for the antiquity of the use of it, as well as of that of TABLE. And take notice, that I speak not here either of the matter or form, (wherewith men are wont to entangle this question) but of the name and notion only, whatsoever the form or matter were.

I will begin with Tertullian, the most ancient of the Latine Fathers now extant; who flourished about 100. years after the death of S. John the Evangelist, and 200. after the birth of Christ. He, in his Book De oratione, in fine, reprehending their scrupulosity who thought it not so lawful to partake the Eucharist upon their Station or weekly fast-days, lest their Fast thereby should be dissolved, expresses himself after this manner.

(a) And so for the Station or Fast-days, there are many so scrupulous as to think they may not be present at the prayers of the Christian Sacrifices, because their Fast would be dissolved (as they suppose) upon their receiving the Lord's Body. But what? Does the Eucharist then dissolve that their Service devoted to God? Does it not rather the more strictly engage them to God and his Service? Nay will not thy Station or Fast be the more solemn if thou shalt also stand at God's ALTAR, where thou mayest receive the Lord's Body, and reserve it to be eaten at home when thy Fast is ended? And thus both shall be saved; thou mayest partake of the Sacrifice, and withal go on in the performance of thy Devotions.

(b) If a Soul be conscious of its guilt, and thereupon Conscience be ashamed, how shall it dare to pray at the ALTAR?

These two places shew, That in Tertullian's time, as the name Sacrifice was used for the Eucharist, so was that of ALTAR for the HOLY TABLE: Besides that, the Prayers of the Church used there to be offered up unto God.

Within 50. years after Tertullian lived S. Cyprian, Bishop of the same Church where Tertullian was Presbyter; to whom this language was so familiar, that I have observed it ten times at least in his Epistles only: but whether he ever useth the name TABLE, I know not. I will recite only five or six of the most pregnant and evident places, and not easie to be eluded.

And first, that in his 42. Epist. or 2. ad Cornelium; where, to shew that he favoured his part against Novatianus at the beginning, though he was not fully informed then of the lawfulness of his election, he relates, That having read his letters in the Church-

Again, in his De Exhortatione castitatis,
c. 10. endeavouring to prove (though erroneously) that a Soul conscious of the act of the marriage-bed could not be fit for the duties of prayer and devotion, he speaks thus; (b) "Si spiritus reus apud se

2. Likewise in his 55. Epistle; where declaiming against some lapsed Christians, who in time of Persecution having sacrificed unto Idols, were yet so proud and insolent as to endeavour by threats and violence to be received again into the Church, without undergoing publick penance and the satisfaction accustomed, he speaks on this manner: If such Insolency as this be tolerated, and those who sacrifice unto Idols once come to be received again into the Church without due satisfaction,

(b) What then remains but that the Church should yield to the Capitol, and that the Priests withdrawing themselves, and taking away the Lord's ALTAR, Images and Idol-Gods together with their Altars should succeed and take possession of the place proper to the sacred and venerable Bench of our Clergy?

"lachra atque idola cum ARIS suis transeant?

3. Again, in his 64. Epistle against one Fortunatianus a Bishop, who having lapsed in the time of Persecution would nevertheless return to the office of a Bishop, he hath these words; (c) "Cum debeat satisfacere,

 "& ad Dominum exorandum diebus ac

(c) Whenas he ought to make due satisfaction, and with earnest supplications, prayers and tears both day and night intreat God's mercy; does he as yet dare to claim the Sacerdotal dignity which he had betrayed; as if it were a fit thing for one to come immediately from the Devil's Altars to the Altar of God?

(d) We ought to use our utmost care and industry, that such lapsed and apostatized persons do not return again to their charge, to the defiling of the ALTAR and the infecting of the Brethren.

(d) "Nè tales ad ALTARIS impia- "menta & contagia fratrum denuo redeant,
 "omnibus viribus excubandum est. In these two last places note, 1. The name

ALTAR used for the HOLY TABLE: 2. That those Fathers, when they would distinguish between the ALTAR of the true God and the ALTARS of Idols, do usually call the one ARA, and the other ALTARE; of which more hereafter.

4. A fourth Testimony is to be found in his 70. Epistle ad Januar. & ceteros, where to prove that Hereticks cannot give true Baptism, he reasons thus; (b) "Porrò au-

 "tem (saith he) Eucharistia, & unde
 "Baptizati unguuntur, Oleum, in ALTA-
 "RI sanctificatur. Sanctificare autem

 "TARE habuit nec Ecclesiam. Unde
 "nec unctio spiritalis apud Hereticos potest
 "esse, quando constat oleum sanctificari &
 "Eucharistiam fieri apud illos omnino non "posse.

(e) And moreover we are to consider that as the Eucharist, so the Oile also wherewith the baptized ones are anointed, is consecrated on the ALTAR. But how can any such consecrate the Creature of Oile, as have neither ALTAR nor Church? And therefore there can be no spiritual unction amongst the Hereticks, since it is evident that neither can the Oile be consecrated nor the Eucharist celebrated by such as are Hereticks.

5. A fifth Testimony of this use of speech we may have in his 63. Epistle ad Cecilium,

(f) But withall the Holy Ghost by Solomon doth foreshew the Type of the Lord's Sacrifice, the Oblation there offered, and the Bread and Wine; as also makes mention of the ALTAR and the Apostles, saying, Wisdom hath built her self an house, and hath set it upon seven pillars; She hath killed her Sacrifices, she hath mingled her Wine in her Cup; she hath also prepared her table, and sent forth her servants, calling with a loud voice and inviting all unto her Cup, saying, &c.

A like passage whereto is to be found also in his Testimoniorum adversus Judeos

(a) That Christ is the Wisdom of God, as also concerning the mystery of his Incarnation, and of his Passion and Cup, and the ALTAR, and the Apostles who being sent preached the Gospel, there is a plain Testimony in Solomon's Proverbs, viz. Wisdom hath built her self an house, and set it upon seven pillars; She hath killed her Sacrifices, she hath mingled her wine in her cup, and prepared her table, &c.

By which two passages it appears, that the name Altar was so familiarly and ordinarily used of the Holy Table in his time, that he interprets Solomon's * Mensa by that name, tanquam per notius, as by the better known. Otherwise what need he have expounded Solomon's mensa by Altare Christi? Mensa Christi would have served the turn. I have deduced these Testimonies of Cyprian the more at large, because of those Objections wont to be alledged out of Arnobius to the contrary, who notwithstanding lived fifty years after him; and out of Lactantius, who, being Tutor to Constantine's son Crispus, was yonger than he.

Not long after Cyprian, about the year 260. lived Zeno Veronensis, as appears by himself in his Book De Continentia. Casanbon calls him Scriptor vetustissimus & elegantissimus. This Author in the 9. of his Paschal Sermons Ad Neophytos, Invitatione ad Fontem tertiâ, says of the Church, then a child-bearing mother unto God of many sons by Baptism, That she brought forth far cleaner children than a natural Mother

(b) Happily nourished and brought up (not in ill-scented cradles, but) within the pleasant Septs of the holy ALTAR.

RE, but ALTARIS cancelli, the septs whereby it was separated from the rest of the Church or place of sacred assembly.

And for the days of Constantine (whose reign began some fifty years after) Eusebius hath left us a copy of a Panegyrick Oration made at the dedication of a sumptuous and magnificent Church at Tyre; the structure and garnishing whereof the Panegyrist describing at large, and amongst the rest the seats erected in the Sacrarium or Quire, for the honour (as he speaks) τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, of the Prelacy and Priestly Order, he adds,

(c) And placing the most holy ALTAR in the middle; that the multitude might be hindred from pressing too near it, he compassed it about with a wooden rail of net-work, of so curious an artifice, as was admirable to behold.

But the same Eusebius, in his Book De laudibus Constantini, versùs finem, hath a more full passage, and which shews this language to have been at that time common and usual. For there, magnifying and setting forth the stupendous and unparall'd power of Christ our Lord and Saviour, testified abundantly by that wonderful and never-before-exemplified change which he had then wrought in the world, amongst service of blessing and praising God? And hence it was that ALTARS were erected, and Churches also consecrated, throughout all the world; as also Intellectual and Reasonable Sacrifices were by all Nations offered up to God the King of the whole world. But as for the bloody and smoaky Sacrifices, they are by a secret and invisible power quite extinguished, and are no more in use.

SECTION II.

BUT will some say, 'Tis true indeed, that from two hundred years after Christ, and forward, the name of ALTAR was much frequented; but before that time it cannot be shewed to have been used by the testimony of any Authentick Writer; and therefore nothing so ancient as that of TABLE. So some of ours affirm indeed; but they will be tried by no other Authors and Records of those times than such only as themselves hold for genuine, as Justin Martyr, Theophilus Antiochenus, Irenæus, or it may be another small Tractator or two (with whom this name is not found.) Of whom the works of the two principal, Justin and Irenæus, the most likely to have informed us, are near the one half perished.

But before I make further Answer to this Exception, I would know to what end it is made, and what advantage the Authors thereof do hope to gain by it. For the reason, I think, why the name ALTAR is so much scrupled at is, because it is thought to imply Sacrifice. But Justin Martyr and Irenæus are well enough known to call the Eucharist both an Oblation and Sacrifice; yea the latter to dwell upon that theme. What gain is there then, that the name ALTAR is not to be found in those works of theirs which remain, if that of Oblation and Sacrifice (for which the name of ALTAR is disliked) be? Besides, what likelihood that those who conceived of the Eucharist under the notion of a Sacrifice, should not call the place thereof, as well as their Successors did, ΘΥΣΙΑΣΤΗΡΙΟΝ?

Secondly, I would know of the Authors and users of this Exception, whether in those Writers and Fathers before the two hundred years after Christ, which they acknowledged for genuine, the name of TABLE be to be found, or not, given to that whereon the holy Eucharist was celebrated. If it be not, then this Exception of two hundred years after Christ, (which yet is but one hundred after the Apostles) makes no more against the one than the other, if neither be to be found in the works extant of the Fathers which then lived. For by this it will appear, they had no occasion to mention this sacred BOARD either by one name or other in those works of theirs which are left unto us. Now for my part, though I have with diligence sought to inform my self herein, yet hitherto it hath never been my hap to find the Name of TABLE in any of them more than of ALTAR. I have enquired of others; and yet they have not shewed it me. And therefore till I see it, I will believe it cannot be shewn.

But perhaps you will say, What matters it whether the Fathers we speak of have it or not, if the Scripture hath? For doth not S. Paul say, You cannot be partakers of the Table of the Lord and of the Table of Devils? 'Tis true. There is this only place to be alledged to that purpose: I know no other. And yet this too, if the judgment of some of our own Expositors be taken, is not sufficient to prove it neither. For Table here might signifie, not the instrument or seat, but the Epulum or meat it self; it being the use of all Languages (I am sure of those learned ones) to express time of the holy Eucharist. For the better judgment whereof, and of the right meaning of the Canon (because the readings, distinction, and translations somewhat vary) take also a Canon of the Council of Carthage under Aurelius (Anno 397.) very like unto it, and made undoubtedly in imitation thereof.

(a) That it is not lawful to offer any thing but Bread and Wine mingled with water at the time of celebrating the holy Mysteries. Let nothing else besides the Lord's Body and Blood be offered, as our Lord himself hath ordained; that is to say, Bread and Wine mingled with water. But as for the First-fruits, whether of Honey or Milk, let them be offered (as the manner is) upon one solemn and accustomed day, at the Baptism of Infants. And though these (viz. Honey and Milk) more especially offered at the ALTAR, yet they are to have their proper and peculiar benediction, different and apart from the blessing of the Bread and Wine, or the consecration of the Lord's Body and Blood. Nor let there be any thing presented as a kind of First-fruit-offering there (viz. at the Altar, at the time of celebrating the holy Mysteries) but Grapes and Corn.

Ut nihil amplius quam Corpus & Sanguis Domini offeratur, quemadmodum Dominus ipse tradidit; hoc est, Panis & Vinum aqua mixtum. Which only were permitted to be offered at the time of the Eucharist, (as may seem) because Bread and Wine are made of them.

But I will not set my rest upon a Pseudepigraphal Testimony, but alledge a witness past exception, and for antiquity beyond them all: And that is, that holy and blessed Martyr Ignatius, Bishop of that City where the name of Christians was first given to the Disciples of Christ; who lived and saw the latter end of the Apostles times. This blessed Martyr, in those Epistles of his which none that are learned or judicious now make question of, thrice useth the name ΘΥΣΙΑΣΤΗΡΙΟΝ or ALTAR for the Lord's TABLE, in his Epistles Ad Philadelphenses, Trallenses,

(b) I write unto you and warn you that you use one Faith, one Doctrine, one Eucharist: For there is one Flesh of our Lord Jesus Christ, one Blood of the same our Lord Jesus Christ which was shed for us; one Bread broken for us, and one Cup distributed to all; one ALTAR to every Church, and one Bishop with the Presbytery and Deacons my fellow-Servants.

and Ephesios. In the first whereof ad Philadelph. he speaks thus: (b) "Scribo ad vos, moneoque ut unâ fide, unâ prædicatione, unâ Eucharistiâ utamini: una enim est caro Domini nostri Jesu Christi, unus illius sanguis qui pro nobis effusus est; unus item panis omnibus confractus, & unus CALIX qui omnibus distributus est; unum ALTARE omni Ecclesiæ, & unus Episcopus cum Presbyterio & Diaconis conservis meis. In this place * Videlicet expressly acknowledgeth the name ALTAR to be used by Ignatius for the HOLY TABLE, (though otherwise he be no friend to that name) because he knew not how to elude it. I thought good therefore to put it in the head of the file, to lead on the rest which follow. Whereof

That Ad Ephesios shall have the next place; where exhorting them to be subject and at unity with their Bishop and Presbytery, he enforceth it thus: "Nemo erret; (faith he) Nisi quis intra ALTARE sit, [Gr. ἐν τῷ τοῦ ΘΥΣΙΑΣΤΗΡΙΟΥ,] privatur pane Dei. Si enim unius aut alterius precatio tantarum virium sit, ut Christum inter illos statuat; quanto plus Episcopi & totius Ecclesiæ oratio consona ad Deum ascendens (for this used to be presented at the Altar) exorabit, ut omnia quæ petiverint Christo dentur ipsis? As if he had said, Be not deceived, but take notice, that as every one who is not at peace with his brother is excluded from the Altar, [Matth 5. 24.] so much more he that through disobedience is in schism and discord with his Bishop and spiritual Fathers is excluded thence; that is, hath no right to offer his Gift thereat; and consequently is deprived of the Bread of God, (the holy Eucharist,) and of the benefit of those precious and efficacious Prayers therewith offered up to God by the Bishop and Priestly Order in the name of the whole Church. Which how great a benefit it is may appear by this, That if the Prayer of one or two be of that efficacy as to place Christ in the midst of them; how much more shall the united prayer of the Bishop and the whole Church be of force to prevail with the Divine Majesty to grant them all they shall ask in Christ's name? It follows, (c) "Quisquis igitur

(c) Whosoever therefore separates himself from these, and joyns not with the Council of the Clergy, whose office it is to celebrate the Christian Sacrifices, nor with the Church of the First-born which are enrolled in heaven, (Heb. 12. 23.) Whosoever is thus in schism and discord with them, is a Woolf in a Sheeps skin, pretending meekness under that disguise.

natus sacrificiorum, he understands the Bishop and his Clergy, who are Senatus rei Divinae, or sacris faciundis. Therefore Vedelius, who will needs here, without reason or copy, in stead of βελῆ δυσίων read βελῆ οσιών (the better to make way for his conceit, That the body of the Church in general should be the Altar Ignatius here speaks of) did but correct the Magnificat, and pervert Ignatius his meaning, which he understood not. For that this which I have said is the meaning of Ignatius in this place, appears more plainly by the third Testimony I am now to alledge of his, viz.

(4) Reverence the Bishop, as ye do Christ, as the blessed Apostles have commanded us. He that is within the ALTAR, is clean; and therefore obeys the Bishop and Presbyters. But he that is without, is he that does any thing without the Bishop, Presbyters and Deacons: and such a one hath a defiled Conscience, and is worse than an Infidel.

“scientiam & Infideli deterior est: i. He is a Woolf in a Sheeps skin, as he said in the other Epistle. The places are twins, and the one is a gloss unto the other.

Now, by warrant of these Testimonies, I think I may safely conclude, That the use of the name ΘΥΣΙΑΣΤΗΡΙΟΝ or ALTAR (for ought that any hitherto hath shewed to the contrary) is no less ancient in Christianity than that of ἱερὴ τράπεζα, of the HOLY TABLE or TABLE OF THE LORD; and that both have been promiscuously used from the Apostles times.

Nor is it any marvel it should be so; for these names are of an equivalent notion, and signifie one and the self-same thing. For what is an Altar but of those kinds of things we call Tables? what Genus else can we refer it to? The difference is, That an Altar notes not a common, but an Holy Table, a Table for an Holy Feast, such as I have heretofore shewed a Sacrifice to be, Epulum ex oblatis, or a Feast of an Oblation made unto God: That is, there is no more difference between a Table and an Altar, than between another Cup and a Chalice. An Altar is not every Table or a Table for a common Feast, but an Holy Table; and an Holy Table is an Altar. The difference is not (as many suppose) either in the matter, as of wood or stone; for an Altar may be of wood (as both the golden Altar and that of Burnt-offering were in the Tabernacle, namely of Shittim-wood) and a Table may be of stone: nor in the posture or manner of standing, whether in the middle, or against a wall; (for the Altar of Burnt offering stood in the midst of the Priests court, and the Altar of Incense up against the veil:) But this is the true difference, that a Table is a common Name, and an Altar is an Holy Table. “This Holy Altar (saith Gregory Nyssene, Sermone de Baptismo Christi) whereat we stand, is by nature a common stone, nothing differing from other stones; but being consecrated to the service of God, and having received the benediction, it is ἱερὴ τράπεζα “ἁγία, Θυσιαστήριον ἀχραντον, an Holy Table, an Altar inviolable. See he makes one to be the Exegesis of the other. For in times past (when men perhaps were as wise as we are now) it was thought fit and decent, that things set apart unto God, and sacred, should be distinguished not only in use, but in * name also from things common. For what is a Temple or Church but an House? yet distinguished in name from other Houses. What is a Sacrifice but a Feast? yet distinguished in name from other Feasts. So what is an Altar but a Table? yet distinguished in name from other Tables.

Well, let all this be granted, may some man say, that there is no greater difference between these two names than as you affirm; yet ought the Language of the Church to be conformed to the Style of the New Testament. But where in the New Testament should those Ancients find any Text whereon to ground the application of this name to the Holy Table? I answer, There, I am prone to believe, whence they derived the Oblation of the Bread and Wine in the Eucharist, and that Rite of Reconciliation at their entrance thereunto; (where the Deacon was wont to proclaim, Μὴ τις κατὰ

For that they derived from this Text that Rite of Peace and Reconciliation before the Offertory, appears expressly out of Constit. Apost. l. 2. c. 57. Iren. lib. 4. 34. Edit. Ecard. Tertull. De Oratone c. 10. Eusebius De vita Constantini, lib. 4. c. 41. Cyril of Jerusalem Catech. Myst. 5. Why then may I not believe as well that they might derive from the same Text the Offertory itself, and the application of the name Altar to the Holy Table; seeing all three in the Text depend one upon another, and that there is not in the New Testament any other passage of Scripture whereon so ancient and universal a practice of the Church, as was in all these three particulars, could expressly be grounded? And, besides that the Primitive practice of the Catholick Church is a good Rule to interpret Scripture by, there may be good Reasons found from the circumstances of the Text, and Sermon it self, to perswade it to be an Evangelical Constitution.

1. Because there was no such thing commanded in the Law to such as came to offer Sacrifice; nor any such Deuterostis to be found amongst the Traditions of the Elders. Now it is altogether improbable our Saviour would then annex a new Rite to the Legal sacrifices, when he was so soon after to abolish them by his sacrifice upon the Cross, yea (if the Harmonists of the Gospel are not deceived) within less than two years after; for they place this Sermon between his second and third Passover. Ergo he intended it for an Ordinance of the Kingdom of God, (as the Scripture speaks) that is, for the Church of his Gospel.

2. Because the Sermon, whereof this was part, is that famous Sermon of our Saviour upon the Mount, which he read as a Lecture to his Disciples, to instruct them in the Mysteries of the Kingdom of God, a little before he sent them out to preach; and so, in all likelihood, contained the Summe of that they were to preach; which no doubt was Doctrine Evangelical. In all other parts of the Sermon we find it so; wherefore then should we not so esteem it even in this also?

Verse 20.

3. Because it is brought in (and that in the first place) as an exemplification of that righteousness wherein the Citizens of the Kingdom of Christ were to outgo the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees: I say unto you, (saith our Saviour) except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Then follows this Text, shewing how far we are to outstrip the Scribes and Pharisees in our obedience to the Precept, Thou shalt not kill.

Verse 17.

4. This passage should be Evangelical, forasmuch as it seems, together with the rest that follow it, to be a part of that ἀνθρώποις or Complementum Legis whereof our Saviour spake a little before, saying, Think not that I am come to dissolve the Law and the Prophets, (that is, to abolish or abrogate the observation of them in my Kingdom) ἀλλὰ ἀνθρώποις, but to accomplish, supply, or perfect them. For this to be the meaning of that ἀνθρώποις, the whole discourse following it seemeth to evince, wherein namely our Saviour puts in practice and makes good de facto in several particulars what he formerly said he came to do.

SECTION III.

BUT there is one thing yet behind, by no means to be forgotten in this Argument, That what I have hitherto spoken of the name Altar is to be understood of θυσιαστήριον, not of βωμός. For these two are not the same. ΘΥΣΙΑΣΤΗΡΙΟΝ is the Altar

Altar of the true God, Β Ω Μ Ο Σ the Altar of an Idol. Wherefore the ancient Fathers and Christians (which spake the Greek tongue) never used to call the Altar of Christ Βωμός, (though it were the usual word in that language) but ever Θυσιαστήριον. Which difference they learned out of the Greek Bible; in all which the Altar of the true God is * no where termed Βωμός, but always Θυσιαστήριον. On the contrary, Βωμός is never used (when it is used) but of an Idolatrous Altar or Altar of an Idol. This difference of these two words may be evidently seen and confirmed by one passage in the first Book of Maccabees, c. I. v. * 59. where concerning the Ministers of Antiochus Epiphanes, who had erected an Altar to Jupiter Olympius upon the great brazen Altar in the Temple of the Lord, and sacrificed thereon, the Greek expresseth it in this manner, Θυσιαζόντες ἥσαν ἐπὶ τῷ Βωμῷ, ὃς ἦν ἐπὶ τῷ Θυσιαστηρίῳ, They sacrificed upon the Βωμός, which was upon the Θυσιαστήριον * which our Translation rightly renders, They sacrificed upon the Idol-Altar, which was upon the Altar of God; the circumstances of the place leading them thereunto. And that this Testimony may not go alone, take with it a like expression or two in S. Chrysostom, who in his 24. Homil. in 1. Ad Corinthios, brings in our Saviour thus speaking; Εἰ αἵματι. ἔπιθυμῶ, μὴ τὸ πρὸς εἰδώλων βωμὸν τῷ πρὸς ἀλόγων φόνῳ, ἀλλὰ τὸ Θυσιαστήριον τὸ ἐμὸν τῷ ἐμῷ φοίνισσεν αἷματι. If thou desirest blood, make not the Idols Βωμός ruddy with the slaughter of Beasts, but my Θυσιαστήριον with my blood. 'Tis upon that passage, The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? With the same style in the Homily a little before quoted [ Demonstrat. Quod Christus sit Deus ] he magnifies the speedy propagation of the Gospel, that in so short a time Βωμοὶ καὶ εἰδώλα (Eomoi & Simulacra) were abolished, and Θυσιαστήρια were erected throughout the Roman Empire, yea among the Persians, Scythians, Moors and Indians. To all which add another observation, That ΘΥΣΙΑΣΤΗΡΙΟΝ is a word not used by any Pagan Writer, but is a mere Ecclesiastical and Hellenistical term, first devised (as * Philo in his Vita Moysi would give us to understand) by the Septuagint to express the Hebrew word מִזְבֵּחַ, and to distinguish the Altar of the God of Israel from the Altars of the Idol-Gods of the Gentiles.

But you will ask me now, Wherein consisted the real difference between the two, which made them so nice to call the one by the name of the other? or was it verbal only? I answer, it was real. For the Altar of the true God, Θυσιαστήριον, was only (as the name implies) a Table for sacrifice; viz. in the Law, of those bloody Sacrifices which were then offered to God by Fire and Incense; in the Gospel, of the reasonable and spiritual Sacrifice, sent up unto God λόγῳ καὶ πνεύματι, only by the word of thanksgiving and prayer. But Βωμοὶ or the Altars of the Gentiles were Suggesta or Scabella sculptilium & simulacrorum, Idol-stools or Foot-stools of their Images, in respect of the accommodation the one had to the other; which was such, as their Idols were placed before, upon, or above their Altars. This may appear in some sort by those passages of S. Chrysostom which I now quoted, especially the latter. And by that of S. Anselm, Hom. 6. De verbis Domini, where he proves from this posture, that the Gentiles took and worshipped their Idol-statues for Gods, because they placed them upon their Altars. "Nam illi (inquit) quod Numen habebant & pro Numine accipiant illam statuum, Ara testatur. And this also the name Βωμός fitly intimates, as properly importing a Basis, whereon something standeth, quasi Βῆμα, of the word Βαίνω, as Eusebius notes; and is accordingly used by * Homer for the Basis whereon stood the gilded Statues of Boyes holding lights at a banquet;

This connexion between the Gentile-Altars and Idol-Statues or Images may also be gathered out of that * fore-cited passage of S. Cyprian, Epist. 55. where declaiming against some lapsed Christians, who having in time of Persecution sacrificed unto Idols, would for all that be admitted again into the Church without due satisfaction, If this be suffered, (saith he) "Quid superest, quam ut ECCLESIA Capitolio cedat, & recedentibus sacerdotibus, ac Domini nostri ALTARE remouentibus, in Cleri nostri sacrum venerandumque confectum (i. in sacrificium nostrum, seu * τὸ ἄγιον Βῆμα) SIMULACRA atque IDOLA cum ARIS suis transeant?"

In this not long passage are many things worthy observing. 1. Ecclesia used for the place of Holy assembly, and opposed to Capitolium, which stands here for any Gentile-Temple. 2. The place of the Clergie next the Altar, and distinguished from that of the Layety. 3. The coupling of simulacra and Idola cum Aris suis, as individui comites, and the opposition thereof to Altare Domini nostri, i. Christi. 4. That the Latin Fathers sometimes imitated the Greek, in distinguishing, as well as they could, the names of the Altars of Christ and the Altars of Idols, calling Θυσιαστήριον ALTARE, and Βωμὸς A R A. Which the Author of the vulgar Latine so far observes, that throughout the Canonical Scripture he never calls the Altar of the true God ARA, but the Altars of Idols only, as the Septuagint useth the name Βωμὸς.

I have prosecuted this observation of the difference between Θυσιαστήριον and Βωμὸς the more largely, because it will help us through those doubtful and stumbling passages which are found in Origen, Minutius Felix, Arnobius and Lactantius, in their disputes against the Gentiles. Who although they lived, the two first in the third Century, (after Tertullian;) the two latter about the beginning of the fourth seculum, in the days of Diocletian and Constantine, fifty years after S. Cyprian; (during all which time, it is apparent, confessed, and may be invincibly proved against such as shall deny it, That Christians had Oratories and Houses of worship to perform the Rites of their Religion in; as also, by those Testimonies alledged, that they usually called the HOLY TABLE there placed by the name of ALTARE and ΘΥΣΙΑΣΤΗΡΙΟΝ:) yet these Authors afore-named, when the Gentiles object Atheism to the Christians, as who had no Templa, no Ara, no Simulacra, are wont in their Apologies to answer by way of Concession, not only that they had none, but more, that they ought not to have. What should this mean? why this? They answer the Gentiles according to the notion wherein they objected this unto them; to wit, that they had no Βωμοί, no Idol-stools, or Simulacrorum scabellum; not that they had no Θυσιαστήρια. Therefore the word which Origen there useth is Βωμοί. And in all those passages you shall ever find Ara & Simulacra to go together. Origen; (a) “Ο

And as for Temples, their meaning was, they had no such claustra Numinum as the Gentiles supposed Temples to be, and to which they * appropriated that name, viz. Places whereunto the Gods, by the power of spels and magical consecrations, were confined and limited, and for the presencing of whom a Statue was necessary; places wherein they dwelt, shut up as Birds in a cage, or as the Devil confined within a circle, that so they might be ready at hand when men had occasion to seek unto them: That Christians indeed had no such dwellings for their God as these; for that their God or δ Εκκλησίας. For such the stories and monuments of those times expressly inform us they had; and the Gentiles themselves that objected this defect, knew it too well; as may appear by their Emperors Rescripts for demolishing them, and sometimes for restoring them, when the Persecution ceased. All which he that will may find in Ensebius his Ecclesiastical History, before either Arnobius or Lactantius wrote: Whither I refer them that would be more fully satisfied; yea to Arnobius * himself in the end of his 4. ## PSALM CXXXII. VII.

We will go into his Tabernacle, we will worship towards his Footstool.

O the Hebrew לְהָרוֹם רַגְלָיו is rightly rendred; and those who say Before his Footstool, imply the same, if it be rightly construed. The LXX. hath εἰς τὸ τόπον ὃ ἐξῆσαν οἱ πόδες αὐτοῦ, Toward the Place where his feet stand, which is a Periphrasis of a Footstool.

THE LORD'S FOOTSTOOL here mentioned was either the Ark of the Testimony it self, or the place at least where it stood, called DEBIR or the Holy of Holies, towards which the Jews in their Temple used to worship. The very next words following my Text argue so much, Arise, O Lord, into thy rest, thou and the Ark of thy strength. And it is plain out of 1 Chron. 28. 2. where David saith concerning his purpose to have built God an House, I had in mine heart to build an House of rest for the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord, and for the FOOTSTOOL of our God. Where the Conjunction [and] is Exegetical and the same with [that is.] According to this expression the Prophet Jeremy also, in the beginning of the second of his Lamentations, bewaileth that The Lord had cast down the beauty of Israel, (that is, * his glorious Temple) and remembred not his FOOTSTOOL, (that is, the Ark of his Covenant) in the day of his wrath. Verse 1.
Plal. 96. 6.

This to be the true and genuine meaning of this phrase of worshipping the Lord towards his Footstool, besides the confessed Custom of the time, is evidently confirmed by a parallel expression of this worshipping posture, Psalm 28. 2. Hear the voice of my supplication when I cry unto thee, when I lift up mine hands אֶל־רִבְיָר קְרָשָׁה towards thine HOLT ORACLE; that is, toward the most Holy place where the Ark stood, and from whence God gave his answers. For that the רִבְיָר DEBIR, which is here translated ORACLE, was the sanctum sanctorum or Most holy place, is clear out of the 6. and 8. Chapters of the first Book of Kings; where in the * former we read, that Solomon prepared the ORACLE or DEBIR, to set the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord there: in the * latter, that the Priests brought in the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord unto his place, into the Oracle of the House, to the most holy place, even under the wings of the Cherubims. Wherefore the Authors of the Translation used in our Liturgy rendred this passage of the Psalm, When I hold up my hands toward the Mercy-seat of thy holy Temple; namely, having respect to the meaning thereof. Thus you see that one of the two must needs be this Scabellum pedum or FOOTSTOOL of God, either the Ark or Mercy-seat it self, or the Adytum Templi, the Most holy place where it stood. For that it is not the whole Temple at large (though that might be so called) but some thing or part to those that are within it, the first words of my Text [We will go into his Tabernacles] do argue. If then it be the Ark, (whose Cover was that we call the Mercy-seat) it seems to have been so called in respect of God's sitting upon the Cherubims, under which the Ark lay, as it were his Footstool: whence sometimes it is described, The Ark of the Covenant of the Lord of Hosts, which sitteth upon the Cherubims. If the Ark, with the Cover thereof the Mercy-seat, be it self considered as God's Throne, then the place thereof, the DEBIR, may not unfitly be termed his Footstool. Or lastly, if we consider Heaven to be the Throne of God, as indeed it is, then whatsoever place or monument of Presence he hath here on Earth is in true esteem no more but his Footstool. * Verse 19.
1 Sam. 4. 4.

Thus the meaning of the Text is plain, which I thought good to make choice of for the Argument of my Discourse at this time, for our better information concerning the lawfulness of that practice of worshipping God towards the holy Table or Altar: For it becomes not us who live in such places as these, where Knowledge is taught, and should be derived to other parts of the Church, to be ignorant of the reason and quality of any thing, especially concerning the Worship of God, which either we do our selves, or see others do; lest in the first we be guilty of Imprudence, in the other of Uncharitableness in miscensuring others. And in this particular, Information is so much the more needful, because many scruple at this kind of posture in God's Worship; esteeming it little better than Idolatry, as being of like nature with worshipping God by an Image: wherein how much they are deceived I shall make now to appear.

Know therefore, That to worship God by an Image, and to worship him towards some place or monument of his Presence, are things of a differing nature: For the first is absolutely forbidden by the Divine Law; the latter we find continually practised by the people of God in the Old Testament, and that with his allowance and approbation. Thus in the Wilderness they worshipped him towards the Cloud, as the sign or monument of his Presence going with them, Exod. 34. 5, 8. In the Tabernacle and Temple they directed their posture toward the Ark of the Covenant, or most Holy place, as my Text (and that parallel place now alledged out of Psalm 28. for confirmation) witnesseth; namely, as to the place of his Throne and Footstool. Unto which I add for a third Testimony, that of Psalm 99. 5. Exalt ye the Lord our God, and worship towards his Footstool: There goes before it in the beginning of the Psalm, The Lord reigneth, let the people tremble; he sitteth between [or upon] the Cherubims. The same thing is meant or implied by that expression of worshipping the Lord toward his holy Temple, in the 5. and 138. Psalms; in the first whereof, v. 7. I will come into thine House (saith David) in the multitude of thy mercy, and in thy fear will I worship toward thy Holy Temple. Mark; I will come into thine House, and then worship, &c. This form the Jews at this day are wont to pronounce in the Adoration which they make at their entrance into their Synagogues, turning themselves at the same time toward an Ark or Cabinet, wherein they lay the Book of the Law, made and placed in imitation of the Ark of the Covenant with the Two Tables. In the other Psalm likewise, v. 1, 2. the Psalmist saith, Before the Gods (that is, the Angels) will I sing praise unto thee: I will worship towards thy holy Temple; that is, toward the place of the Ark or Mercy-seat. For we are to take notice, that the people or Layety came no nearer than into the Courts of the Temple only, and the Priests themselves entred no farther but when they were to order the Lamps, and burn Incense evening and morning, or renew the Shew-bread; otherwise they also stood and officiated without in the Court appointed for them, called the Priests Court: so that both (the people especially) standing in the Courts when they worshipped, they directed their faces toward the Temple or  $\text{N A O}$  strictly so called, where the Ark and Mercy-seat were. Hence comes this expression of worshipping the Lord toward his holy Temple: as much as to say, We will come into thy Courts, and worship thee toward the place where thy memorial, or monument of thy Presence is. With these places may be compared that of the 134. Psalm, where the Levites (standing namely in the Priests Court) are exhorted to lift up their hands toward the Sanctuary [LXX. eis ta agia. Targ. על רוכן קודשא toward his holy seat] and to blest the Lord.

Besides this, when they were absent from the Temple, yea though in a strange and foreign Country, and that far remote, yet when they prayed or worshipped, they turned their faces thitherward: as appears by 1 Kings 8. 44, &c. in the prayer of Solomon at the dedication thereof; and the example of Daniel, Dan. 6. 10. who opened his windows towards Jerusalem, and kneeling upon his knees three times a day, prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he was wont; yea, even then when the Temple and holy City were burnt and destroyed, and the Ark of the Testimony not then there, but only the place where it was wont to be. Zorobabel also, 3 Esd. 4. 58. lifted up his face to heaven toward Jerusalem, and praised the King of Heaven. And this custom the Jews in their devotions still observe unto this day. Yea all this may seem (for ought that can be shewed to the contrary) to have been done out of the use of mankind, without any special Precept to that purpose, which is no where to be shewn. For as for the prayer of Solomon (besides that Precepts are not wont to be given in prayers) it is there presupposed only as a rite of custom; \* Nature it seems having taught mankind, as in their addresses unto men to look unto their Face, so in their addresses unto the Divine Majesty to look that way, or toward that place, where his Presence is more demonstrated than elsewhere; whether  $\phi\upsilon\sigma\epsilon\iota$ , (if I may so speak) as in the Heavens; or  $\delta\epsilon\iota\sigma\epsilon\iota$ , as in Temples and like sacred places, where his Name and Presence either is, or is wont to be recorded. Hence it appears, that to worship God versus locum presentiae, towards the place where any sign or specification of his Presence is, is no Idolatry, nor forbidden by the Second Commandment: For surely that which was no Idolatry in the Old Testament, is no Idolatry in the New; whatsoever fault otherwise it might have.

Ad Concordia (sub. adem) conersut, &c. Sic emendat Scalig. quem vide in Collationis, & qua ibidem ex Livio adducit ad hanc rem facientia.

Pfal. 132. 7.

The reason of this difference, between worshipping God by an Image and worshipping him towards some place where his Presence is specified, is this, Because in the first the Creature is used objectively to the act of Divine worship, (that is, as the thing worshipped;) but in the other as a local circumstance of worship only. For we are to know that a Creature may be used in the act of Divine worship by way of Object, by way of Local circumstance, or by way of Instrument. The first, by way of Object, that is, as that to which the Act of worship is directed and terminated upon, without question is Idolatry. For the Lord our God is a jealous God, and cannot endure that any created thing should partake with him by way of Object in the Act of his worship. But he that useth an Image in the act of Divine worship as an Image, that is, interposing it in the same as the representation of that he worshippeth, makes it not the term of his posture only (as any other Creature might be, and some always will be,) but the Butt (as I may so speak) or Object of his Act. For in the act of worship, to look or attend unto any thing as that which representeth unto him the Object unto which he is tendering his act, is to make it an Object representative; and consequently, such as in part and as by way of intervention receiveth the Act which by it is tendered to the Prototype. Which although it be no more but to be only relatively worshipped, and for the examples sake, and not absolutely and for it self; yet is it more than the jealousy of God can endure, as is manifest by his so strict prohibition and frequent detestation thereof.

But as for the two other ways of using a creature in the act of God's worship, by way of Instrument only, or Local circumstance, neither of them is impious or unlawful.

First, Not to use it therein as (or by way of) an Instrument whereby it is performed: For then it would be unlawful to use a Table or a Chalice in the celebration of the holy Eucharist, or the like; to use a Book when we pray, sing, or give thanks unto God; to praise him with Instruments of Musick, as David * ordained; to use a Book to swear upon, when we take an oath; for to swear is as much an Act of Religious worship, and as much appropriated unto God in Scripture, as any other worship due unto him. Wherefore the Rites used therein (as to turn toward, lay our hands upon, and kiss the Book of the holy Gospels, as the Tables of the new Covenant of God with men in Christ) if they be well examined, will afford much light toward the decision of this Question of posture in our adoration of God in the Church: especially if it be considered that the very same Rites, for the same purpose, have been anciently used upon an * Altar. But this by the way.

Secondly, Neither is it impious or unlawful in God's worship to use a creature in way of a Local circumstance thereof; namely, as that whereby the place of our worship is determined: for then it would be unlawful to use Temples or Churches to worship God in, or to have any designed place there accommodated for the Priest to minister or officiate at. But this our practice shews we esteem and acknowledge lawful. Now if it be lawful to make use of a creature for the Ubi, or place where, of the worship we give unto God, why not as well for the place WHICH-WARD, or which-way we worship him? UBI & QUO Where and Which-way being both alike differences and relations of Place; and the worship of God no more communicated thereby with the Creature, whereby we determine the one, than whereby we determine the other. Indeed the Creature by this means is honoured and dignified; but that honour the Creature receiveth lies only in this, in being chosen and preferred before any other for such sacred use. Which honour, I trow, is of no other or higher nature, than what any Sacred thing according to the fitness and propriety it hath may be respected with.

Moreover, if it should not be lawful in Divine worship to direct our posture towards a Creature, and that too in great regard of some special relation it hath to Godward; it would be unlawful to set our faces and lift up our hands and eyes to Heaven in our prayers and invocations tendered unto the Divine Majesty; which I know not any that makes scruple of. And yet if the determination of our posture only by a creature in Divine worship be Idolatry; why might we not justly scruple, lest this posture of our hands and faces to Heaven-ward at such a time might make us guilty of worshipping the Host of Heaven, that is, the Sun, Moon, Stars and Planets, as the Gentiles and Israelitish Idolaters did? But for our warrant herein, our Blessed Saviour, in that Prayer he hath left unto his Church, hath taught us to say, Our Father which art in heaven. For without doubt, if we may without impiety determine the Divine presence thus in our speech, we may also (yea fit, I think, we should) do the like at the same time with our posture; which is no more but to express that visibly by our gesture, which we utter vocally with our mouths. For not that which is before us only in our posture, but that which is the terminus of our Act, is the Object of our Worship. Nor to determine our posture only by a creature, but to communicate the Worship we give unto God therewith, is that which the Divine Law forbiddeth. And that this difference must be admitted, is evinced by the severe and peremptory prohibition of the one, and the frequent examples of the other practised by holy men in Scripture. Besides that the admission thereof openeth the true way how to answer our adversaries, when they alledge the aforementioned places of Scripture in patronage of their Idolatrous worship.

Now then to apply all this to the Hypothesis: ἡ ἁγία τράπεζα, the HOLY TABLE or ALTAR, (for the difference is but verbal) in our Christian Churches, answers unto the Ark or Mercy-seat in the Jewish Temple, being Solum Christi, and in the language of Antiquity the Christian * Sanctum sanctorum; where the Book of the Gospels (by ancient custom laid thereon) parallels the *two Tables, the holy Eucharist the golden Pot of Manna, that is, the sacred Monuments and Symbols of the new Covenant those of the old. Why may not then a like respect be had to it in the posture of our Christian adoration, which the Jews in their worship had, not only to the Ark of the Testimony, but to the Altars which stood before it, yea even to the Temple it self, when they could not come to perform their devotions therein; and that too (as I have already observed) when that Ark which Moses made by God's appointment, with those two sacred Symbols (the two Tables and Pot of Manna) were no more there, as in the Second Temple they were not; but only the place ordained for them, or at the most (if that) some imitative Ark only with a Roll of the Law put therein, such as the Jews at this day are known to have in their Synagogues, and to direct their posture toward it when they worship, as formerly they did to that in the Temple? See Buxtorf. Synagog. Judaic. cap. 5.

Matt. 10. 12.

Lastly, all Nations and Religions have been wont to use some reverential gesture when they enter into their Temples. And our Blessed Saviour in the Gospel would not have his Disciples to enter into a man's house without some salutation; εἰσερχόμενοι εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν (saith he) ἀσπάζεσθε αὐτοὺς, when ye enter into an house, salute it. Why should we not think it to be a part of Religious manners to do as much when we come into the house of God? Now of all Gestures, Adoration or bowing of the Body seems to be the most comely and ready for that purpose; and of all postures in the doing thereof (and some posture there must needs be) that which is directed towards that which is the most sacred and of most preeminent relation to God in the Church; that, namely, where he is commemorated, and the blessed Symbols of his Body and Blood reached forth unto us, (who is our * Propitiatory through faith in his Blood, and by whom alone and whose Sacrifice we have access unto his Father,) the HOLY TABLE or ALTAR. What place then so fit to be both in our eye and mind, when we make our addresses unto Him, as this?

THAT the ancient Christians worshipped * towards the East, (that is, the same way they did their first homage to God * in their Baptism) is manifest to all that have but looked into Antiquity.

That their Altars also were usually placed toward the same in their Churches, is a Truth that can hardly be questioned.

It follows therefore that when they worshipped, they turned themselves or looked toward the Altar also.

If it be asked, Which of the two they respected in this their posture: I answer, they respected both; and therefore placed the Altar accordingly, to the Eastward, that both might be observed; even as the Jews placed their Altars both of Incense and

Burnt-

Burnt-offering toward the West, because they worshipped that way. But if they could not observe both, then they preferred the Altar; as in that Church at Antioch, where (if * Socrates say true) the Altar, or place thereof, the Chancel, (for so ὑστασις ἡγου sometimes signifies) stood toward the West, contrary (as he there acknowledgeth) to the manner of other Churches. Now he that considers well the Custome of Antiquity, and remembers that which Gregory Nazianzen testifies of his mother * Nonna, will not think it credible they should either turn their backs upon the Altar, or their faces from the Priest, whilst he officiated thereat, as then he always did; which yet they must needs do, if, notwithstanding that situation of the Altar, they had worshipped toward the East. Howsoever, if the nature of the things be considered, there can be no difference given, for the point of lawfulness, between the one and the other; nor why this should more intrench upon impiety and Superstition than that.

Thus much we find of the Christians posture in general, when they worshipped God. But what reverential Guise, Ceremony or Worship they used at their ingress into God's House in the Ages next to the Apostles (and some I believe they did) is buried in silence and oblivion. The Jews before them (from whom the Christian Religion sprang) used, as I have already shewn, to bow themselves down with their faces toward the Testimony or Mercy-Seat. The Christians after them, in the Greek and Oriental Churches, have, time out of mind, and without any known beginning thereof, used to bow in like manner, with their posture toward the Altar, or Holy Table, saying that of the Publican in the Gospel, Ὁ Θεὸς ἰλάσθητί μοι τῷ ἁμαρτωλῷ, God be merciful to me a sinner; as appears by the Liturgies of S. Chrysostome and S. Basil, and as they are still known, both Laity and Clergie, to do at this day. Which custome of theirs, not being found to have been ordained or established by the Decree or Canon of any Council, and being to agreeable to the use of God's people of the Old Testament, may therefore seem to have been derived unto them from very remote and ancient Tradition. Nothing therefore can be known of the use of those first Ages of the Church, farther than it shall seem probable they might imitate the Jews, God's people before them, or have given beginning to the custome of the Churches after them. And if kneeling, bowing or inclination of the head could be proved, or, for want of testimony, may be supposed to have been their gesture at their ingress; surely there were no reason why we should not believe they bowed, kneeled, or inclined their heads the same way then, which they used to pray and worship at other times.

In the Latin Church this gesture of bowing towards the Altar may seem to have been proper to the Clergy in their approaches to it, and recess from it, at least to such as came into the Quire; the Laity at their first entrance into the Church kneeling only. Card. Bessarion, (a Greek) in his * Epistle to the Tutor of the Sons of Thomas Palaeologus, instructing them how to carry and behave themselves among the Latines, In Ecclesiam Latinorum (saith he) cum ingredientur, in genua procumbentes preces dicant, ut Latinis mos est: When they shall enter into any Church of the Latines, let them kneel down and say their prayers, as the manner of the Latines is. For in Greece, as is aforesaid, their manner was to bow. Yet whether they used not some other gesture in Spain, would be enquired, because of those words of Isidorus Hispalensis, De Ecclesiasticis officiis lib. I. c. 10. concerning those that came into the Church after the Service or Lessons were begun; Si superveniat quisque (saith he) cum Lectio celebratur, adoret tantum Deum, & præsignatâ fronte aurem sollicitè accomodet: If any shall come into the Church when the Lesson is a reading, let him only adore God, and crossing his forehead attend diligently to what is read.

I will add here two the most ancient Testimonies, I think, extant of a Reverential respect used to be given to the Holy Table or Altar; and that, as I conceive, (if not both of them, one at least) of a more direct nature than that wherewith the same is honoured by being made the term only of our posture when we worship God.

One is out of Dionysius called Areopagita, (or whosoever were the Author, for sure ancient he is) Ecclesiast. Hierarch. cap. 2. De mysterio Baptismi, where he saith, That after the Hymn accustomed was sung, the Priest or Bishop ἀσπασάμενος. ἢ ἰσθάν τε ἀπελάων, having saluted or kissed (for either way may ἀσπασάμενος be rendred) the Holy Table, he goes thence and questions the party to be baptized, &c.

The other is of S. Athanasius, in fine Sermōnis adversus eos qui Humane in Christo Domino Naturæ confessores spem suam in Homine defigere dicunt, Edit. Commel. tom. 2. pag. 255. in these words; Quid? quid & nunc [ὅτι προσπίπτοντες ἀγίῳ ὑστασίῳ ἡγου] qui ad sanctum Altare accedunt, [περιπίπτοντες δὲ τῷ τοῦ, καὶ μετὰ φόβου καὶ χαρῆς ἀσπάζομενοι] ἀσπαζόμενοι ] illudque amplectuntur, & cum timore & letitia salutant (vel osculantur,) non in lapidibus aut lignis, sed in Gratia per lapides, aut ligna piis commemorata animo insistant. Understand here by ΧΑΡΙΣ, or GRATIA, the holy EUCCHARIST, for so the Fathers are wont to call it. See Casaubon. Exercit. 16. §. 46. The meaning therefore is, That those, who when they approach the holy Altar, do with fear and joy embrace and kiss it, (as the manner then was) attend it not as wood and stones, but as that whereby the Body and Blood of Christ is commemorated to his holy Ones.

CONCIO AD CLERUM
DE
SEU
DE SANCTITATE RELATIVA.

LEVITICI 19. 30.

U A L E M Philosophi Virtuti sedem posuerunt ab Extremis utrinque remotam, talem quoque Sacrae Scripturae stylus Pietatis laudat semitam; Viam nempe mediam, quā neque dextrorsum iter neque sinistrorsum: Hanc qui tenent, viam rectam insistere, perfectè coram Deo ambulare; qui verò ab ea aliquoversum deflexerint, tantumdem dicuntur à rectò deviàsse. Nos autem (heu miserum genus!) nescio quo naturæ nostræ vitio, dicam? an fato, tantum ferè ab aurea hac Mediocritate absumus, quantum ipsa ab Extremis suis Mediocritas. In arduo illo regulatæ Pietatis jugo vix momento consistimus, quin, ut decantatum illud Sisyphi saxum, ad ima vitiorum relabimur inquieti.

Hoc cum in aliis quamplurimis observatu est proclive, tum vel maximè in hac, de qua nunc agendum mihi est, Reverentia Sacra. Quid enim? naufragium hîc multorum video, his Scyllæ allisâ, illis Charybdî absorptâ nave; dum hi Venerationis prætextu Idololatriam, illi hujus fugâ Contemptum inducunt omnis rei Sacrae.

Mihi, (Viri Patres Fratresque) dum rem istam altiùs paulò cogitatiùsque mecum expendo utrique horum videntur in extrema abiisse nimis, & terminos movisse ab antiquo positos: Quos ego, pace Vestra, Viri Ornatissimi) aliquatenus dignoscendi & reponendi spe, naviculâ meâ, tenui licèt, audebo per hoc fretum; nullo (Deum testor καρδιογνώσκω) aut Superstitionis amore, aut Christianæ Simplicitatis odio, sed solius Veritatis investigandæ studio; neque tam ut mores obsoletos revocem, qui nobis fortasse ex usu non fuerint, quàm ut decoram rebus Christianis Majestatem asseram, & opportunam de aliorum factis judicandi modestiam charitati & prudentiæ Christianæ subjiciam.

Quod

Quod ut faciam, duo mihi hodie explicanda sunt ad totidem hujus Scripturæ Verba : Primum est De sanctuario Dei, alterum De Reverentia seu Veneratione Sacra. De Sanctuario duo dicam : primò Quid sit, deinde An locum usumque habeat sub Evangelio. Est igitur sanctuarium locus sanctus, id est, Locus Deo consecratus ad usus Divinos. Sancta autem quàm verè & quo sensu nuncupentur Loca hujusmodi, id verò ex diversa Sanctitatis notione eruendum est. Diversam dico, & quam triplici notâ disparaverim in Essentialem, Virtuosam & Relativam.

Levit. 19. 30.

Sanctitatis triplex notio.

Essentiali Sanctitate Deus ipse sanctus est, cujus Sanctitas non est aliud ab ipso. Virtuosam nos debemus, id est, Pietate, imbui ; qualitate nimirum sanctâ quam Virtutem viri pii, seu Virtutem finieris religiosam ; cujusmodi Græcis propriè Οσιότης dicitur, Latinis sanctimonia.

Atqui Locum, putâ rem inanimem, neque hâc neque illâ Sanctitate vel sanctum ducimus, vel dicimus sanctuarium, sed tertiâ solâ Sanctitatis notione, quam dixi Relativam. Hanc autem definitio Peculiaritatem rei versùs Deum à certo Præsentia ipsius aut Domini modo. Hujusmodi Sanctitatem Relativam appello : Qualitatis enim aut Virtutis nihil habet quod inhæreat, ut superstitiosuli multi credunt, sed pura puta Relatio est, cujus participes res Græci ιεγας, Latini sacras nominârunt ; nec facile in hac verbi notione alternârunt aut hi aut illi. Addo versùs Deum : neque enim quod cuivis peculiare, neque si Angelis ipsis, id sanctum ullo modo est habendum, sed quod soli Deo vivo & aeterno. Postremò subjungo, à certo Præsentia ipsius aut Domini modo : quibus verbis geminam Sanctitatis hujus efficientem designare volui, simulque innuere duos inde oriri sanctitatis modos, naturâ quidem diversos, re sæpenumero conjunctos, Præsentia & Proprietatis. Priorem ostendit illud Dei ad Mosem, Exod. 3. 5. Extrahere calcamenta de pedibus tuis ; Locus enim in quo stas, terra sancta est : propterea scilicet, quòd Deus illic visibili specie apparuit, & singulari modo præsentem se exhibuit. Alioquin quid, quæso, intereat inter istum Locum & reliqua illius Deserti loca ? Sola Præsentia Dei singularis hunc locum singularem fecerat, & adhuc facit omnem locum ubicunque habet singulariter. Alterius modi sunt, ut omnes olim sub Lege Oblationes, ita sub Evangelio Bona ( ut nunc loquimur ) Ecclesiastica. Hinc enim ( cùm in hominum Bonis amplius non sint ) Deo peculiare illud jus & Dominium acquiritur à quo sancta omnino sunt censenda.

Sanctitatis Relativæ definitio.

Quamvis jam Loca præcipuè sancta sunt. ob Præsentiam ; Templi tamen & sanctuarii ratio utrumque Sanctitatis hujus modum comprehendit : quâ enim Locus est, à Præsentia modo ; quâ Domus est Deo Divinisque addicta, à Dominio peculiari sacrum est. Ita Templum Hierosolymitanum utrâque ratione fuit sanctum ; tum à Dominio Dei, nam Dei Domus dicebatur, & Templum Domini ; tum à Præsentia singularitate, cùm * Dei habitaculum audiret, eò quòd ibi Deus cum hominibus colloqui, ibi homines Deum convenire, audire, orare, & de rebus obscuris consulere solebant : ut taceam, tot Sacrificia, tot rerum Typicarum Mytheria, totidem fuisse Dei præsentis Symbola.

* 2 Chro. 6. 2.

Duplicem hanc Templariæ Sanctitatis rationem mirum quàm pulchre Apostolus Paulus Fidelium corporibus accommodavit, primâ ad Cor. cap. 6. An ignoratis ( inquit ) corpus vestrum esse Templum Spiritûs sancti qui in vobis est, ( audite Præsentiam ) neque vos esse vestri juris ? audite Proprietatem. Item alibi, * Vos ( inquit ) estis Templum Dei viventis. Quare autem ? quia ( inquit ) dixit Deus, Habitabo in iis & inambulabo, ( hoc Præsentia est ) deinde quia dixit, Et ero illorum Deus, & ipsi erunt mihi populus ; hoc Dominii est.

* 2 Cor. 6. 16.

ATQUE ita Locorum Sanctorum indolem & naturam explicavi : Cujusmodi sub Lege obtinuisse cùm nemo dubitet, restat porrò inquirendum, an ulla Loca hujusmodi agnoscat Evangelium. Certè agnoscit Evangelium Ecclesias seu Templa Evangelica : habent Christiani & omnino habere debent sua Oratoria, sua ( sic loquar ) Eucharisteria, & Dei Domus, non ejusdem ( fateor ) cum Judaico rationis ; si tamen Typi rationem excipias, perinde atque illud sancta atque reverenda. sancta ( inquam ) non à Dominio Dei solo seu Proprietate, verum etiam à Præsentia peculiaritate. Anno enim in illis nos Deum quasi convenire solemus, & Deus nos Ministerii sacri ore compellare ? * Ubi sunt duo aut tres ( ait Servator ) congregati in nomine meo, ibi ego sum in medio illorum. Et verò, quod longè maximum est, ineffabili modo adest in mystico Panis & Vini Sacramento. Haud enim verebor dicere, in sacrosancta Eucharistia non minùs peculiariter & visibiliter nobis adeste Deum, quàm Mosè in ardenti Rubo : nec Templum aut Tabernaculum Judaicum magis Christi Corpus præfigurâsse, quàm hunc Panem nobis exhibere. Locus igitur Rubo circumpositus sanctus erat ; & non erit Sacra Mensa ? Templum Judæorum, & non nostra Eucharisteria ? Et quid si non ibi jugiter exhibeatur hoc Sacramentum ? Locus tamen sanctus erit, ubi solet exhiberi. Filij Pharaonis fas non erat habitare in domo domo Davidis, quia (ut dicitur 2 Chron. 8. 23.) sancta sunt ista, in qua ingressa est Arca Jehovæ. Annon multò magis nostra Eucharistia sacra (de sanctitate enim Relativa semper loquor) ubi vera Domini Arca exhibetur, cujus illa tantum umbra?

Breviter igitur & uno quasi icu sic concludo rem totam. Si ulla sint hodie usquam terrarum aut gentium Loca Deo magis peculiariora quàm omnia, aut verè hæc omnia sancta, id est sacra, dixero, aut sanctitatem Relativam nondum verè definivi.

At verò inquit in Evangelio nulli loco alligatum esse Deum, neque nos ad Deum colendum. Id enim unius Legis fuisse proprium, ut in uno loco invocetur & adoretur Deus, in Typum Mediatoris unici; hodie non ita. De nobis & nostris temporibus vaticinari Malachiam, in omni loco suffimentum offeretur Nomini meo, & munus purum; quia magnum Nomen meum erit in Gentibus, ait Dominus Sabaoth. Quin & Paulus ad * Timoth. in omni loco jubet orare Christianum. Ecce igitur Christianis promiscuè Deum colendum, non Templis, non Locis ad hunc usum Sacris: eodem illis loco habenda esse omnia omnino Loca. Secundò, (ut porro sciamus hoc Legis fuisse proprium) nulla primæva illa Christianitas hujusmodi Loca sacra novit, non vidit Apostolorum ætas: Quinimo in privatis domibus obibant illi sua Sacra; non certis, non sanctis, sed quibuscumque, ut occasio tulit, locis. Deniq; palmarium illud est, quo vel ex Gentibus erant qui oppugnârunt Tempia Gentium; ubique esse Deum, non habitare in Templis manufactis.

Videtis, ut in campum elicui & in aciem præcipuas Hieroclastôn copias: cum quibus nunc strenuè mihi confligendum; & proterenda singula eo quo produxi ordine. Aiunt, Legis fuisse proprium, ut loco certo, & peculiariter huc destinato, invocetur Deus; Evangelio liberum, ut in omni. Imò verò Legi fuit proprium, non tam ut certo, quàm ut unico Loco publicè colatur Deus; Evangelio liberum ut in multis, impossibile ut in omni. Quod igitur Paulus, omni loco orandum, de privata Oratione dixit, non de publica: Quod Propheta, in omni loco suffitum Deo offerendum, aut siquid simile ab aliis, de omnibus Locorum generibus aiunt, non de singulis omnium generum. Genera Locorum intelligo diversarum terrarum Loca; quasi dixisset Malachias. In omnibus terris erunt Loca ubi Gentes invocabunt nomen Dei. Nunquam enim futurum erat aut est ut in singulis singularum terrarum locis publico ritu invocetur Deus; sed tantum in aliquibus omnis terræ locis.

Præterea, Omnia Loca esse hodie æquè sancta, verum est de eo quod fas sit & liberum, non de eo quod sit actu. In Evangelio nullus Locus hoc privilegio gaudet, ut solus possit dici in usum Præsentia Divina: & tamen multa hodie sunt Loca quæ sola actu sacra sunt Præsentia Divina. Ut enim si quotamvis Bonorum partem liceat Deo consecrare, non idcirco dixeris omnes esse sacras; nec si quemvis Septimanæ diem liberum sit sacris Conventibus obligare, ideo omnem diem esse diem Festum: idem hinc putate; Omni quidem Loco fas esse, omnem tamen non esse sanctum.

In Lege Ministerium sacrum erat uni Familiae adstrictum; Ecclesia uni Genti. In Evangelio utrumque est Catholicum & commune; omni Familiae Ministerium, Ecclesia omni Genti: nec tamen sunt ex omni Familia Sacrorum administri, nec in omni Gente Ecclesia Dei. Idem hinc puta: liberum esse apud Christianos Deo Templum in omni Loco poni, non tamen positum esse in omni Loco.

Pergunt, & Apostolorum (inquit) ævo Tempia nulla aut Fana. Imò vos, inquam, Objectionum vani estis. Nam quid ingeritis mihi Tempora extraordinaria ad legem & mensuram ordinariorum? Sed non utar hoc effugio, quinimo fidenter assevero, Christianis jam Apostolorum ævo fuisse Loca sua Sacra seu sacella; neque in omni promiscuè loco ad publicum Dei cultum convenisse. sacella, inquam, habuerunt, in primis forsan initiis occulta illa, neque adeò vulgo Gentium conspicua; quia aut partes aut intra ambitum essent privatarum ædium; ipsa tamen nequaquam privata. Fallunt enim & falluntur qui, quasi publicum non esset quod semotum à conspectu publico, nimis importunè urgent, eò quòd palàm Synaxes suas non celebrârunt primi Christiani, ideo non publicis, & privatis convenisse Locis. At verò aliud omnino innuit Apostolus de Ecclesia Corinthiaca, 1 Cor. c. 11. De Ecclesie notione in hoc loco non contendam, an nempe Cœtum ipsum Paulus Ecclesiam dixerit, an Locum Cœtus; sed de re ipsa. Habuerunt, inquam, Corinthii Locum Sacris usibus peculiariter destinatum; non privati, sed publici juris. Quid enim? Annon objurgat eos Apostolus quòd propriam quiscque cœnam sumeret in loco sacro? Enimvero, inquit, num domos non habetis ad comedendum & bibendum? aut Ecclesiam Dei contemnitis? Ergò Ecclesia Dei, seu mavis, Locus Ecclesie, non erat domus ad comedendum & bibendum; ergò non privati juris, neque ad usus cujusvis privatos & communes. Iterum, Quòd si quis esurit; & τῆς ἐξίας, id est, domi, edat; nè ad condemnationem conveniatis: Ergò locus sacrorum Conventuum non erat ubi quispiam domi erat. Hæc enim duo adeò adjungit Apostolus, Apostolus, ut contrarium ei significet in omnia Loco ad Religionis Conventum sacro.

Ultimum mihi restat sternendum agmen, quod sub Omnipræsentia Vexillo. Ubique aiunt esse Deum, & ex Sacris Literis nos doceri non habitare eum in Templis manufactis. Rectè. At verò idipsum sub Lege dictum aio, & de Templo Solomonis: non magis igitur nobis Templi rationem adimet quàm Judæis ademerat. Certè, inquires, apud Jeremiam dicit Dominus, Ego cælum & terram impleo. Fateor: At tu interim mihi expedias velim, quare Cælum speciatim vocetur Dei Habitaculum, quare ipsum Templum Domus Habitationis Dei, 1 Reg. 8. quorsum illi Jacobi spectat Bethle à VISO Divino evigilantis, Certè, inquit, Jehova est in hoc loco; attamen ego nesciveram: Quid hic putas? an ignorasse Omnipræsentiam Dei? an nondum fortè satis evigilasse Patriarcham? Vide sis egò, quisquis es, Argumentator, quàm non privatim in nos tuum telum: imò, si te sequamur, quàm manifesta pugna, & indissolubilis planè nodus.

Nos idcirco totum hoc difficile hujusmodi expeditus responso: Nempe Deum in Templis habitare non dici inclusionem Essentia, sed speciali Præsentia suæ usu; apud Judæos quidem usu hoc ipsi loco astricto, & tantum non sacramentaliter alligato; apud Christianos verò libero, singulari tamen: Quod ad Essentiam quidem, ubique esse; quoad specialem Præsentiam modum, non esse ubique: illà cælum & terram implere, hoc in cælo singulariter habitare, in terra non adeò; in Locis Sacris, non in omnibus adeò Locis. Idcirco Jacob, qui Essentia Ubiquitatem probè didicerat, in Bethle tamen nesciverat præsentem fuisse Deum; nimirum tam speciali Præsentia modo. Enimvero hic est ille Præsentia Divinae modus, quem Faciem Dei nuncupat Scriptura, hic ille peculiaris præsentia Divinae usus, quò qui venerint, coram Deo venire, coram Deo stare dicebantur olim Hebraico & prisco usu loquendi. Quod quidem nos, quamvis non planè perinde atque illi, verè tamen & absque superstitione usurpemus de omni loco ubi solenni ritu Deum aut accedimus invocandum, aut convenimus audiendum.

A B S O L V I jam de Sanctuario. Transeo itaque ad alteram & longè maximam pensi mei partem, quæ de Veneratione est seu Reverentia Sacra; re profectò, siquid aliud, perplexa & obscura; sed & valde lubrica: de hac una re tumultuatur Orbis, de hac scinduntur Ecclesiae. Unde siquid ego in re tanta ac tali ex mea stultitia protulero, & non ex Dei Verbo & Orthodoxæ Fidei analogia, id omne pro non dicto haberi volo; adeoque nullius præjudicio exacerbari, sed omnium charitate tegi & emolliri cupio. Quà spe fretus, liberè dicam, sed breviter, & multa paucis. Quid enim vela pandam? hoc ipsum timide, quod pedem omnino pono in hanc cymbam.

Veneratio igitur universè mihi est Agnitio Eminentia habitata; eaque duplex, Interna & Externa. Internam finio, quam Mens & Affectus habent: Externam, quæ ab illis foras ostenditur actu aliquo externo; ab illis dico, Mentem autem innuo & Affectum; idque jure, Omnis enim Externa Veneratio aut Significatio, utut operosa, intrinsecus non oriunda, inanis est; nec Venerationem verè dixeris, sed larvam hujus.

Porrò utraque harum adhuc trifariam mihi dispertienda, in Religiosam, Sacram, Civilem. Religiosam voco, quæ Essentiali Sanctitati deferenda, & Eminentia super omnia sublimi, id est, Deo vero & vivo; & hanc Adorationem propriè dicimus. Sacram appello, quæ relative-Sanctis debetur; & hanc verà & nativà vi verbi speciatim Venerationem dicendam arbitror. Civilem, quæ Civili ratione eminentibus.

Jam ex hac Venerationis triga Sacram solam destinavi hodierno sermone illustrandam. Nec id quenquam moveat, quòd Sacram hanc dixi ad differentiam, quasi Religiosa etiam non esset Sacra: ad has enim angustias distinctionum cogit me verborum inopia; quam ut vos (Viri Ornatiissimi) rectà mente suppleatis, quæso sic capiatís meam mentem, Nimirum, Religiosam Venerationem Sacram esse, sed & plusquam Sacram: hanc autem à me speciatim dici Sacram, quæ sit nudè Sacra, non etiam Religiosa.

Utcunque sit, Trichotomiam hanc aliorum in negotio isto Dichotomiis prætuli, ut tutam magis & illustrem. Horrui enim Λατρείας & Δουλείας Acroceraunia; Divisionem principio & ex se non malam, nisi eà quidem usi malè; nunc certè à λογουαχίᾳ lubricam & perplexam. De altera quoque illa quorundam è nostris in Religiosam & Officiosam, vereor nimis ut illud Officiosum parùm absit à Civili: aut si Sacram admittat, non tamen pro bono aut claro hujus doctrinæ futurum, ut Sacrum Civili sic eamus confusum.

H A C T E N U S de Reverentia & Veneratione generatim dixi, deinceps de Veneratione Sacra in specie dicturus. Venerationem igitur Sacram definio Actum rem sanctam sanctè habendi; vel, Quà reverenter habemus rem sanctam. Quid verò sit rem sanctam sanctè habere, id ex Relative Sanctitatis natura & ingenio sic demonstrabo. Tria sunt

Levit. 19. 30.

Sanctitati Relativæ insita & nativa, Peculiaritas, Discretio, & Eminentia. Peculiaritas de essentia est Sanctitatis, ut ex Definitione est manifestum; duæ reliquæ Proprietates sunt. Discretio, quâ res in aliquo genere sanctæ discriminantur ab aliis in eodem genere rebus. Eminentia dignitas est rebus sanctis à Sanctitate adscita. Differunt res sacræ à non sacris, & præstant res sanctæ communibus. Unde tria hæc simul complexus est Moses, Dent. 26. ver. 18, 19. Jehova, inquit, stipulatus est à te sponsonem hodie; te fore ei populum peculiarem — ut efficiat te sublimem supra omnes Gentes quas fecit, laude, nomine, & gloriâ; & ut sis populus sanctus Jehovæ Deo tuo. Audite hîc populum peculiarem, sanctum, sublimem: Peculiarem, ideo sanctum; sanctum, ideo sublimem supra omnem populum. Hinc ergo apparet rem sanctam sanctè habere nihil aliud esse quàm habere prout sanctitatem condecet, id est, peculiariter, differenter, & sublimiter. Et hoc demum est ad meam mentem rem sanctam revereri & venerari; nimirum tum interno animi sensu, tum externo agendi usu eam præ aliis peculiariter, ab aliis differenter, & supra res communes eminenter & sublimiter habere.

Proinde Spiritûs Sancti verbo veneranter habere rem sanctam, sanctificare dicitur. sanctificabis diem septimum; id est, sanctè seu veneranter habebis, vel sanctè ages hunc diem. Ità 1 Reg. 8. ver. 64. sanctificavit internam partem atrii quæ erat ante Domum Domini, eò quòd parâisset ibi holocausta & munera; id est, non consecravit, (hoc enim jam antè factum) sed sanctè habuit, & quasi honoravit actibus ibi religiosis. Item sanctificare nomen Domini eodem sensu est nomen ejus sanctè & veneranter habere.

Sanctificatio duplex.

קרישׁ

Sciendum tamen est, non semper hoc sensu usurpari sanctificandi verbum: Imò aliquando sanctificare est ex non sancto sanctum facere, id est, Deo addicere & consecrare; hoc Hebræis, si rectè observavi, est * הקרישׁ in conjugatione Hiphal: Cùm verò significat, ut dixi, sanctè habere, seu sanctè uti, tum iidem * קרישׁ dicunt in conjugatione Piel. Quo conjugationum discrimine observato, facile erit conciliare duo Mosis loca alioquin apertè pugnancia, quod unum idemque & sanctificari præcipitur & prohibetur. Primus, Exod. 13. 1. Allocutus est Jehova Mosem, dicendo, קרישׁ Sanctifica mihi omne Primogenitum — ex hominibus & jumentis; meum enim est. At contrà est locus alter, Levit. 27. 26. Veruntamen, inquit, Primogenitum quod primum gignitur Jehovæ ex bestiis, nè quis sanctificato (לֹא יִקְרִישׁ) illud; Domini est. Hîc facilis, inquam, est conciliatio, si posterior locus de Consecratione loquatur, (non enim iterum consecrandum quod Deus semel sibi consecraverat; ) prior de sancto usu; sanctè enim usurpandum quod Deus sibi sanctum fecerat. Differentia hæc insignis est, ut minùs sit perpetua; & tamen ex iis quæ haud putares ad eam flectas multa. Ego verò me ad id à quo deflexi.

Confirmatur Venerationis sacræ Definitio.

Dixi Venerationem sacram positam esse in rem sanctam peculiariter & differenter habendo. Hoc quamvis sit de omni significatione honoris etiam civili verum, speciatim tamen monstrabo de honore Sacro. Primò igitur de Sacro unguento præceptum, Exod. 30. 31. ut veneranter & sanctè haberetur. Oleum, inquit, unctionis sanctæ est hoc mihi per generationes vestras; ideo vos usu peculiari illud sanctè habebitis. Carnem enim hominis (inquit) nè quisquam eo ungito, aut secundum confecturam ejus nè facitote simile ei. Rationem subjungit; quia nempe res sancta est; id est, Totum hujus confecturæ genus Deo & sanctis usibus addicatur; ideo (inquit) Res sancta esto vobis, id est, ideo vos sanctè & reverenter habebitis, peculiariter & differenter ab aliis unguentis utendo.

Idem planè de Suffitu sacro legitur vers. 37.

Atqui omnium apertissimè Ezech. 22. 26. Profanatio rerum sanctarum per Exegesin exponitur non discernere inter sanctum & profanum, hoc est, promiscuè habere utrumque. Et ut tandem testimoniorum desinam, hoc ultimum adducam ponderis non ultimi, Apostolum nempe Paulum profanationem Sacræ cœnæ non aliâ dictione expressisse quàm μὴ διακρίνειν σῶμα τῆς Κυρίας, id est, peculiariter non habere, neque discernere panem mysticum: Ut hinc discamus Discretionem rei Sacræ esse Venerationem ejus; discretim habere, venerari & sanctè uti.

S A T I S jam cognovimus quid sit & in quibus sita Veneratio sacra. At quî, inquires, patebit, hanc quam explicavi talem adhuc dum deberi rebus sacris? Quî, inquam, nisi quòd adhuc in re Christiana sunt res sacræ; ergo & debitum sacrarum rerum? Objectum enim quamdiu manet, manebit etiam officium circa ipsum. Hæc una ratio est, & firma; cui addo id ipsum à Deo mandatum in Quarto Decalogi Præcepto.

In hoc enim Præcepto de Peculiis Dei agi affirmo, id est, de quibuscvis rebus sacris, ut sanctificentur, id est, sanctè & reverenter habeantur. At, inquis, sola hîc mentio de Sabbato, seu de Tempore sacro; de reliquis omnino nulla. Mihi verò hoc satis est, quòd de Tempore sacro sanctificando præcipitur; cùm hæc sit Synechdoche Decalogi propria propria, ut ex una specie intelligeremus omnes ejusdem generis species, ex una rerum sacrarum specie omnes omnino res sacras. Quod quidem ex hoc ipso, de quo ago, versu est manifestum, sabbata mea sanctificate, & sanctuarium meum reveremini. Quorsum enim hic componitur sanctuarium cum sabbato, hujus sanctificatio cum illius Reverentia, nisi quod idem sit de utroque præceptum, & simile utriusque officium? Præterea, Particularis propositio rationem annexam habens æquipollet Universali quæ foret integri Syllogismi major. Ità hic, Dies Septimus est Dei dies, Ergò, Dies Septimus est sanctificandus. Enthymema hoc si compleveris, Major propositio erit, Omne quod Dei est jure peculiari, id nobis sanctè habendum est. Jam assumo, non solum Tempus sacrum, sed omnes res sacræ, Personæ, Res, Loca, Dei sunt: Ergò, Unumquodque horum est sanctè, id est, honorificè & veneranter, habendum.

AT QUE ita hactenus desinivi, illustravi & asserui Venerationem Sacram: sed id promiscuè & universè. Nunc ampliùs videndum, quid ea specierum habet, quid Divisionum; quas certè geminas ostendit tum ex se, tum ex Objectorum varietate sumendas.

Per se dividitur, ut omnis universè Veneratio, ità speciatim Sacra, in Internam & Externam. Internam hic speciatim dico, cum internè & animo rem sacram habemus peculiarem, differentem, sublimem, id est, uno verbo, sanctè. Externam cum idipsum externè præstamus actu aliquo externo, nempe Oris, Gestus, Operis. Ore, cum honorificè, & pro decoro sublimitatis Sanctæ, si Res fuerit, loquimur; si Persona, alloquimur. Gestu, cum corpus ipsum singulari & præcipuo quodam motu, situ, habitu, quod intus est Venerationis effigiat. Opere denique, cum item præcipuo tractamus modo, id est, Sanctis nec ut vulgaribus utimur, nec in iis quæ vulgaria.

De Interna Reverentia aut nulla, aut modica lis est; idcirco sufficiat posuisse, non evoluisse. De Externam multa & magna: tum, An sit in Evangelio seu rebus Christianis ullo modo ferenda; tum, si hoc constabit, Quomodo sit facienda. Prior lis iniquissima est, & procul ab omni ratione. Quæ enim cogitare fas, & affectu intus concipere, cur non & proferre liceret Ore, Habitu, Opere? Certè quæ istis ostentare & foras representare nefas, etiam concipere, etiam cogitare impium est. Argumentatio hæc solida est & ἀποδείκνυται. Sed rem aliis porro argumentis evincam, cum speciatim mihi ventum ad Venerationem Locis Sacris asserendam.

Altera de modo hujus Venerationis lis est, Quâ formâ, quo actuum externorum genere exhibenda. Eam quidem, nè cum Religiosa confundatur, ancipitem agnosco & magnis tenebris involutam: mihi quoque ut difficilem, ità nec adedò tutam explicatu. Quoniam verò mihi in integro jam non est ut sortem quam elegi diffugiam, libabo etiam hic aliquid, sed suspenso pede &, Homeri verbo, ὀπτεροχάδω.

Omnis itaque Externa Veneratio aut Personalis est, aut Realis. Personalem appello quæ actione transeunte absolvitur; idque vel motu gestive corporis; ut inclinando, incurvando, demittendo, item caput aperiendo, vel certis compellendi & appellandi formulis. Realem Venerationem voco, quæ præter actionem ipsam, rem aliquam inter agendum adhibet, aut agendo efficit, in honoris quem significat symbolum; ut qui Principem aut Dominum suum munere honoraverit, non transeunte ceremoniâ, sed præterea Realis honore ipsum afficit, quia Muneris rem adhibuit inter honorandum.

Ità Augurum more, partibus in hoc Venerationis cœlo signatis, venio jam ad Augurium ipsum; dicòque Personalem Venerationem extrinsecus indifferenti usu possè & Deo tribui, & creaturis; aliâ quidem atque aliâ mente fateor, utrique tamen rectè, si mens & intentio recta Venerantium. Ita Deo & hominibus promiscuè genu flectimus, inclinamus, caput aperimus, supplices manus attollimus, alia de externa specie similia promiscuè facimus.

At verò de Realis Veneratione alia ratio est; nam multa hic deprehenduntur ingenio & indole esse ad Deum solum & unicum spectantibus. Quæcunque nimirum aut De Re sunt, aut Ad Rem solius Dei propriam. De Re dico, id est, de Objecto in solius Dei potestate & jure: & Ad Rem, id est, ad finem ipsi peculiarem. In hoc genere est omnis Consecratio; est enim ad rem sacram faciendam. At res sacra Dei est solius, & ab respectu ad ipsum. Soli igitur Deo est consecrandum. In illo est sacrificium; est enim sacrificium de re Animæ quæ subjecta soli Deo: Soli igitur Deo est Sacrificandum. Eodem pertinet Primitiarum & aliarum quarumvis rerum oblatio; sive pro frugum & pecoris incremento, quæ Eucharistica est oblatio; sive pro exauditione precum, quæ Euclica & Votiva oblatio est: nam hæc de rebus sunt in solius Dei potestate ad conferendum. Unigigitur & soli Deo est de his rebus & similibus offerendum.

Porro etiam illi Venerationis Externæ modi, qui naturâ suâ sunt promiscuè & Deo & creaturis communes possunt restringi causâ vel Circumstantiâ, vel Moris. Causâ Circumstantiâ, Dei & sacrarum rerum sunt propria quæcunque fiunt inter ipsa sacra.

Levit. 19. 30.

De Externa
Veneratione
4. Consecraria.

Causâ Moris, Dei fiunt propria quæ more & instituto legitimo usurpantur erga solum Deum: rerum similiter humanarum quæ in solis humanis rebus.

Ex hisce fundamentis quatuor duco Consecraria, quibus de Externa Veneratione quid fas, quid nefas, si mihi censere fas, ita cenfeo.

1. Qui Creaturis venerandis adhibet quod naturâ & ingenio suo ad Dei solius honorem spectat, purus & propriè dictus Idololatra est: & tales assevero omnes qui sacrificant, qui consecrant, qui vota faciunt Creaturis.

2. Quam Venerationis ceremoniam vel omnium Gentium publicus, vel alicujus privatus mos Deo fecit propriam, extra Deum usurpare sacrilegium est, Ejusmodi forsân est (aliud in Gestu vix memini) Occulorum elevatio ad cælum. Sin minùs, tales certè dixerim istos Ecclesiasticæ melodix modos Psalmis Deo cantandis peculiariter consecratos.

3. Quod naturâ alioquin adiaphorâ, Circumstantiâ tamen causâ fit Dei aut rei sacræ proprium, qui tali circumstantiâ, si Dei fuerit, transfert ad creaturam; aut si rei sacræ, ad rem non sacram; in illo Semi-idolatra est, in isto profanator rei sacræ. Hoc Consecrarium damnat Salutationes, honoris delationes & allocutiones civiles inter sacra & in loco sacro: Nam quæ impietas est, cùm ad Deum cœperis, ad homines converti, nullo Deo? Quodcunque feceris tali loco, tali tempore, aut ad Deum solum, aut circa rem solius Dei erat faciendum.

4. Quod naturâ pariter & usu indifferens est, aut instituto humano privatim humanis datum, illud fas est Deo & sacris adhiberi; si tamen non abfuerit à decoro sacro. Ut si quæ fuerit Gestûs decori ceremonia adhuc in civilibus tantùm usurpatâ, potest ea, si Ecclesiæ videbitur, etiam Deo adorando & Sacris reverendis adhiberi.

Altera Divisio
Venerationis
Sacra, scil.
in Venerationem Personarum, Rerum,
Locorum, Temporum.

ABSO LVI de Divisione prima: insequor alterum quæ ex Objectis; unde quadruplex mihi exit Veneratio sacra, Personarum, Rerum, Locorum, Temporum; tot enim sunt Peculiorum Dei, seu rerum sacrarum, genera. Ubi in singulis, quæ genere una, specie diversa est Veneratio, propter accommodationem diversam: idque de Veneratione tam Interna quàm Externa verum. Suus est Internæ cuique in affectu modus; Externæ in effectu mos venerandi. Virum Dei veneror; etiam mensam Dominicam reverenter habeo; item alias res sacras. Atqui lapis est, qui eodem affectu lapidem veneratur quo debuit personam. Simile de Locis & Temporibus Sacris mihi cogitare.

Interim non negabo in Veneratione Interna, ut non facilè animadverti, ita difficilè explicari quam indico differentiam: Et certè quanta quanta est, non aliunde eris discernendo, quàm ex mente recta & recto de re veneranda sensu. Jam verò Externæ Venerationis admodum clara sunt discrimina. Ut enim in rebus naturalibus Formarum differentias vix aut nè vix assequimur; Materiarum oculis usurpamus: eadem hîc ratio; latet quod intus est; quod foras prodit, varium se prodit & multiforme. Quod quidem manifestum erit ex ternis istis quas dedi Externæ Reverentiæ partibus, Oris, Gestûs, Operis. Ab ea quæ Ore fit Reverentia incipiam. Ea duplex est, Loquendo, alloquendo. Loquendo cohonestamus cujusque generis res sacras; Alloquendo, personas solas: honorificè enim loqui oportet de omni re sacra; personas solas alloqui decet honorificè. Jam verò Gestûs sive Habitus aut totius corporis est, aut partium. Totius gestu, id est, incurvando, inclinando, procumbendo, gestu, inquam, ipso, aut fallor, aut personis solis exhibenda Veneratio: Partium verò sive gestu sive habitu, etiam non personis; ut Manuum lotionem, quam in sacris reverenter tractandis usurpant veteres; & Pedum nudationem, quæ solennis erat olim in calcandis locis sacris. At Tempori sancto honorando Gestûs ceremonia nequit adhiberi, nisi quis fortè usitatum illud Festis diebus ornandi & vestiendi studium eò referat. Reverentia denique seu Sanctificatio Externa quæ Opere fit, ea quidem, quod ad personas sacras spectat, in officio peculiari sita est, nempe aut ipsorum erga se, aut aliorum erga ipsos.

Quod verò ad Res, & reliqua sacrorum genera, Loca nimirum & Tempora sacra, eorum Sanctificatio & Veneratio sita est in usu eorum sacro; ita ut in omnibus hisce suis cuique proprius debeat us, opus proprium: Ut Personæ sacræ sint sacris reverenter tractandis & administrandis; Res personis sanctis inservirent sanctè; in Locis & Temporibus sacris Sacra fiant Locis & Temporibus dignè, id est, sanctè, decorè, ordinatè.

S E D omnia hæc non audeo sigillatim pertransire; adhuc littus tantùm legi. Faciam dehinc quod postulat hujus Scripturæ scopus. Unicum mihi excerpam Locorum & Templorum Reverentiam sacram; in quam altius penetrabo, ut exquisitè vobis renuntiem sensum mentemque horum verborum, Sanctuarium meum reveremini.

Primum igitur hujus Reverentiæ modos & genera indicabo: deinde muniam argumentis & autoritatibus tam Sacris quàm Ecclesiasticis.

Reverentia

Locorum Sacrorum Reverentia explicatur secundum ejus modos & genera.

Reverentia Loci sacri alia Rei est, alia Circumstantiæ rei. Reverentia Rei est, cum actio ipsa, seu res quæ sit, ad Loci ipsius honorem sit immediatè. Qualis apud nos est Capitis apertio; apud Orientales, præsertim Judæos, Pedum nudatio; ideo quod hæ corporis partes videbantur maximè Loci reverendis accommodatæ, quibus ipsa Loca insistimus & calcamus. Uterque ritus Locum spectat immediatè, neque ullo præterea respectu intuetur; unde mihi ex ipsa Re Veneratio est dicenda.

Levit. 19. 30.

Jam Reverentia Circumstantiæ est; cum Actio quidem ipsa Deum, eumque solum intuetur, Circumstantia verò agendi honorem loci. Hujusmodi sunt Preces, Sacrificia, Adoratio, & siqua præterea sunt similia officia sacra, dum in Loco sacro fiunt, aut, ut olim Judæorum ritu, versùs ipsum. Nam ipsæ quidem Preces, Sacrificia & reliquus cultus Religiosus Deum solum intuentur, & Deo soli fiunt, & ipso quidem cultu Deum veneramur solum: Circumstantia verò colendi, precandi, adorandi, quòd nimirum hic loci fiant, quòd huc vel illò versus, illud ipsi Loco honori est, quòd ex illo sanctè habetur & reverenter.

Ut qui Cælum versus orat aut adorat, non idcirco cælum adorat, sed Dominum cæli: ita neque Locum, neque mensam Dominicam, aut mysticum Sacramentum, qui in illo, aut coram illis, aut versùs illa. Ut autem cum ad cælum conversi adoramus, hæ gestûs circumstantia in honorificam prælationem expetit cælo: idem hic putandum, ità honorificè, veneranter, & ex decoro sanctitatis haberi Loca & Mysteria sacra, cum in ipsis habentur aut apud ipsa quos Deo soli præstamus actus religiosi. Cogitate mihi Tempus sacrum, ut invicem comparando illustrius fiat quod volo. Vult Deus ut sanctè habeatur, id est, dignè & veneranter agatur, Dies Septimus. At qui tandem hoc aut meliùs fiat, aut magis ex Dei voluntate, quàm solenni Religionis exercitio & cultu publico? Atqui nemo idcirco verè dixerit ipsum Diem religiosè coli, quin imò Deum in die. Idem hic censete: Cultu ipso Deum, Circumstantiarum accommodatione in cultu & ipsum Locum sanctè cohonestari; atque adeò debere, quia Dei locus.

Hinc ego (ut liberè dicam) sententiæ adeò severæ non sum, ut temerè Superstitionis damnam omniem precum etiam privatarum usum in locis sacris; mente modò rectà & sanà fiat, à recto & sano. Nam si quis ità utatur, Venerationis hujus quam ingero partem dixerim, & ab iis qui alterius fortè negotii causâ opus habuerint Templorum ingressu verè ex decoro sacro usurpari. Non quòd à Loco accedat precibus efficacia, sed quòd Loco honor & reverentia à precibus. Actibus enim civilibus & alienis, etiam privatis, profanantur Tempia: quidni ergo religiosi honorentur? Quod igitur Nuptiis conciones nuptiales, quod funeribus funebres, quod Martyrum cœmeteriis Synaxes veterum Christianorum; id sunt Loco sancto preces: Singulæ, inquam, singulis honori adjunctivè (sic loquar) non objectivè; non à re facta, sed à circumstantia faciendi.

DIXI de Modis Sacræ Locorum Reverentiæ. Jam asseram ipsam argumentis specialibus & privatis; nam communibus feci, cum de Reverentia Sacra dixi communiter. Aio igitur Reverentiam etiam Externam esse Sacris Loci exhibendam. Idque primò probo ab impari. Quid enim? Regiæ præsentia (ut vocant) Cameram reveremur nos caput aperiendo, suo modo alii: quantò magis locum Divinæ præsentia sacrum? Imò Solium Regium veneramur vel absente Rege, eò quòd ibi soleat Rex sese populo ostentare: quantò magis locum sacrum, etiam cum non fiunt sacra, ideo quia solent ibi fieri?

Loc. Sacr. Reverentia probatur Ratione, Preceptis & Exemplis.

At inquires, Præceptum aliquod mihi volo è sacris literis. An verò quidquam potest disertius præcipi quàm hoc ipsum, Sanctuarium meum reveremini? Audi etiam è rubo Mosi præcipientem Dominum, Exod. 3. 5. Extrahere, inquit, calceamenta tua à pedibus tuis: locus enim in quo stas, terra sancta est. Quod nè aliorum capias quàm de Loco ob præsentiam Dei sancto externâ ceremoniâ venerando, idem omnino scias à Gentibus factitatum, Iustino Martyre attestante, Apol. 2. Horsum spectabat tertium Pythagoræ Symbolum, Discalceatus nudisque pedibus sacrificato, adoratoque. Horsum illud Solomonis, Ecclef. 5. Custodi, inquit, pedem tuum, cum intraveris Dei domum. Cur autem pedem? ritum procul dubio indicat pedum excalceandorum; cujus usus etiam hodie manet apud Abissinos Christianos templa sua ingressuros: Et vestigia hujus moris hucusque cernere est in * Synagogis Judæorum & * Turcarum Moskitis. Quin & Ratio supra Mosi allegata observanda est; nam, inquit Deus, locus in quo stas, terra sancta est: ergò, inquam, omnis locus sanctus (hic major erit Syllogismi) externâ ceremoniâ honorandus est. Non ego tamen hanc vel illam Externæ venerationis formam urgeo, sed Externam tantum urgeo quacunque formâ, modesta modò sit, & Gentis cujusque moribus accommodata, & rebus Christianis decora.

Levit. 19. 30.
Gen. 28.

Si verò quis Exemplis ducatur magis, audiat mihi Jacobum Bethelæ à somno expectatum, timentem & talia referentem, מה נורא, &c. Quàm reverendus hic locus! quare autem reverendus? quia, inquit, Jehova est in hoc loco, Dei domus est & porta cæli. Verùm inquis, agnosco hîc Locum sacrum, agnosco Internæ Reverentiæ exemplum, Externæ nondum video. Non vides? quid? in talia verba prorupisse, statuam erexisse, oleo imbuisse, aut Externa sunt dicenda, aut ego tantundem video.

Pergo, & Israelitarum omnium Exemplum attexo, Exod. c. 19. ubi eos Moses ex Dei præscripto instituit quemadmodum sese compararent ad Deum in monte Sinai conveniendum. Sanctifices eos hodie & cras, inquit, id est, Jubeas eos se sanctificare, ver. 10. Estate parati, ver. 15. primò internè proculdubio, deinde verò externè. Primò abstinentiâ, nè accedite ad uxores: Secundò munditiæ plusquam ordinariâ; Lavent (inquit) vestimenta, ver. 10. Tertiò de gestu & habitu corporis singulariter sese & reverenter comparando, ver. 12. Cavete vobis nè ascendatis in hunc montem, attingatisve sinem ejus. Nimirum eo sine totum hoc factum est, ut mons ille, super quem Deus erat visibiliter descensus, peculiariter, differenter, & sublimiter haberetur, seu, uno verbo, sanctificaretur. Ita disertè Dominus ad Mosen, Terminum, inquit, pone huic monti, ut sanctifices illum, וְקָרַשְׁתָּו, id est, ut sanctè habeas seu reverearis ritu isthoc externò.

De altera jam Externæ Reverentiæ specie quam à Circumstantia dixi: ea duplex est, vel ab actibus sacris in loco sacro, vel ab iisdem versùs ipsum: posterioris exemplum adjungo de Israelitis, qui cùm Nubis columnam aspexerint descendentem ad ostia Tentorium suorum, adorârunt; ipsam quidem Nubem nequaquam adorantes, sed Deum: at Nubem versùs, quòd singulariter Deus in Nube. Eiusdem Reverentiæ sunt quæ apud Davidem in Psalmis: Adorate ad scabellum pedum ejus, Psal. 99. 5. Item, Adorabo versùs templum tuum sanctum, Psal. 5. Item, Adorate versùs montem sanctum, Psal. 99. 9. Quouique verò Christianis liceat hanc Venerationis formam imitari haud facillè dixerim; vereor enim ut aliqua Typi ratio hîc latuerit: hoc tamen scio, Idolatriam non fuisse viris sanctis apud Judæos solennem; neque Christianos olim ab hac forma penitus abhorruisse, cùm apud Dionysium lego Hierarch. cap. 2. τὴν ἱερὰν ἀσπασαῖν τετραπέζαν, sacram salutasse mensam; & nostros quoque sciam ad eandem tanquam quoddam presentia Divinæ solium conversos & Deum laudare, & fidem suam confiteri.

Nazianzenus refert de matre sua Nonna, eam quidem Templum Dei adeò esse reveritam, ut in eo nè quidem vocem emitteret, nisi de rebus mysticis & divinis; neque unquam tergum Altari obverteret, aut sacrum pavementum conspueret: planè Pythagoricè, ita enim ille Symbolo 1. Εἰς ἱερὸν ἀπὼν προσκυνῆσαι, μηδὲν ἄλλο μεταξὺ βιωτικὸν ἢ λέγει, ἢ πρὸς τὴν. Possunt forsan illa de pavimento & tergo Altari non obvertendo alicui aut levia aut superstitiosa videri; Nazianzeno tamen laudantur ut πίστεως εὐρήματα καὶ πνευματικῆς ζωῆς ἐγγεγραμμένα. penes alios judicium esto. PORRO Universam, quam Templis & sacris Locis assero Reverentiam, duplicem adhuc volo intelligi; Reverentiam nudam, & Ornatam. Reverentiam nudam appello quam hucusque exposui. Ornatam quoque sacrae Reverentiæ speciebus accenseo; quòd qui ornat, vel maximè videtur honorare. Ornatum idcirco requiro ad plenam locorum sacrorum Reverentiam; Ornatum quidem duplicem; unum ex Struttura, Splendore & Magnificentia, ex Munditie alterum.

De Templorum Magnificentia dicturus, ut caveam quæ in hac causa multi in hanc vel illam Ornatûs speciem importuni obijciunt, non simpliciter, sed comparatè definitio de modo & mensurâ Ornatûs sacri; nempe Dei domum esse debere æquè, imò magis quàm profana magnificam. In urbe Templum ædificas? pulcherrimum id sit omnium in urbe Palatiorum. In villa? æquet, imò vincat, reliquas in villa ædes. Ratio mihi talis, Quia Deo non fuerit dignum quod non sit in quocunque rerum genere optimum & dignissimum: contrâ si feceris, eandem apud Deum reportabis gratiam, quam qui claudum & cæcum obtulerunt in sacrificium; vultum tuum non suscipiet cœli Dominus; imò nedum in honoris, sed contumeliæ partem interpretabitur, quòd tu Terræ hujus incola Deo te ipsum anteposueris, cœnum cœlo, creaturam Creatori. Nam Deo sese meliorem & majorem facit, quisquis aut malum ei offert, aut minus suo bonum.

Satis

Satis mihi validum videtur hoc Telum, satis firmum Argumentum, quod à Dei ipsius excellentia est ad eorum excellentiam quæ sunt Dei. Quod si, ut fit, per se validum, à jacentis tamen manu videatur imbecille; agite iterum dabo non à mea, sed à sacra manu jaculatum. 2 Sam. 7. Ego, inquit David, habito in Domo cedrina, dum Arca Dei habitat inter aulæa; quasi diceret prorsus indignam rem esse ut Dei domus magnificentia cederet vel ipsis Regum Palatiis. Simile est Hag. 1. An tempus est vobis desiderare in domibus vestris contabulatis, cum Domus hæc mea vasta est? Eodem spectant Solomonis ad Hiramum verba, 2 Chr. 2. Domus quam edificaturus sum, magna erit, (rationem audi,) quia major est Deus noster omnibus Diis. Cui consonum est illud 1 Chr. 29. Opus verò hoc (inquit, Templi scilicet) magnum est, (rationem adverte) non enim hominis istud Palatium, sed Dei est. Unde 1 Chron. 22. Domum Jehovæ edificandam (ait) oportet esse summè magnificam.

Levit. 19. 30.

Alterum quoque Argumentum appono à Fine sumptum. Nam à Fine mensuram accipiunt media quæ ad finem. Cum igitur Finis sacer sit omnium Finium nobilissimus, & Loca huic Fini addicta debent esse aliis nobiliora Locis, id est, illustria magis & magnifica.

SE D Fumi aliquot Objectionum mihi tollendi, qui obfuscant hunc splendorem. Typicum aiunt fuisse hanc Magnificentiam; utque ipsum Templum Christum ἐνσάρκωσιν, & Deum in carne habitaturum, ita & Ornatum figurasse excellentiam & perfectionem hujus carnis seu humanitatis Christi. Audio; at verò neque omnis Templi finis Incarnationi figurandæ: quæ unicum, fateor, quæ sacrificiorum domus; non quæ Dei & orationum. Quid igitur tu Ornatum ad Typi solius partem refers? Apage conjecturas. Davide & solomone arbitris decidatur lis ista; quos operis sui finem pervidisse haud negaveris. Davidem roga, quare Opus illud tam Magnificum: respondebit, Quia Dei illud palatium est, non hominum. Solomonem: Quia, inquit, major est Deus noster omnibus Diis. At hi fines ceremoniales non sunt: ergo præcipuus saltem Magnificentie istius scopus fuit moralis condecencia, non verum rei in Christo futurae umbra.

2 Chron. 2.

At magnam nobis invidiam conflatum eunt de pauperum indigentia: Indignum enim esse, ut Auro splendent Tempia hæc externa, dum viva Spiritus sancti Habitacula fame contabescant & inedia; in pauperes ut simus lapides, nimium in lapides profusi. Fatebor equidem, nec invitus, in Tempia non infumendum quod alibi melius aut potius collocandum. Bonum enim quod efficit quò minus fiat quod magis bonum, bonum mihi non videtur; malum censeo. At interim meminerint velim hujusmodi sermonis autores, nos non absolute sed comparatè locutus de Templorum Ornatu, ut nè sint minus quam hominum ædes ornate. Deinde sciant non Tempia sola hoc quod intorquent ariete, sed & Regum conquassari Palatia, sed multas privatorum ædes. Pauperes egent? Quin igitur tu ædes tuas dirue, quin Regum & Nobilium palatia demolire. Pauperes egent? Quid igitur tibi tantus domi aulæorum & tapetum apparatus? Quid tot contignationum & concamerationum deliciae? Quid reliqua supellex otiosa, ornatus supervacuus? Aufer, aufer hæc, inquam, sine quibus & tibi satis erit domi, & pauperi inde multum eleemosynæ. Postea si indigeant pauperes, causam non dico quin Templis omnem auferas ornatum, imò ipsa: non enim pro Templis homines, sed pro hominibus Tempia sunt condita, ut in re Sabbatica dixit Servator.

Ut enim David, si aliunde habuisset quod comederet, sanctos panes non comedisset; ita neque tu extra hunc casum spoliabis Sacra. Dum aliunde Veritas potest confirmari, Deus non est eò advocandus Juramento; dum aliis res dubia disceptari modis, ad Sortes non est recurrendum: quippe hoc esset temerè Dei nomen sumere, & profanare quod sanctum est. Idem hîc puta; nisi extrema urgeant, nec spolianda Sacra nec minuenda.

Sed pergunt nobis adversari, & Patrum quosdam aiunt in hunc quæm nos tuemur Ornatum effatos multa. At verò Patrum dicta nihil ad nos, qui nullum Ornatum in specie ponimus, sed Sacra non sacris Ornatu & Magnificentia præire volumus ædificiis. Nec Patrum istorum argumentis Templorum modò, sed etiam civilium ædificiorum ornamenta perstringi. Denique, nego Patres istos Templorum Ornatum simpliciter damnare, sed immodestum, sed indecorum, sed gravioris momenti rebus prælatum, sed superstitiosum & malè mente susceptum. Ipsos videat cui otium est, & in verbis eorum disertè inveniet hoc ipsum. In summa; Quod Christus Phariseis menthæ & anethi decimationem satagentibus, & graviora Legis omittentibus, id illi ingerunt sui avi Phariseis; Graviora illa præcipuè faciendæ, sed minora hæc non omittenda.

ATQUE

Levit. 19. 30.

ATQUE ita jam plenè absolvi de Magnificentia; transeo ad alteram quam feci Ornatûs Templarii speciem, Munditiem scilicet, rem cumprimis ἱερόπρεπῆ & sacra decentem maximè.

Argumenta communia quæ multa possem, taceo: propria tantùm ingero. Et Primò, Præsentiam Divinam minimè decere Immunditiem. Id adeò verum est, ut Israelitarum Castris Munditiem mandaret Deus propter singularem suam in iis Præsentiam: Quia, inquit, Jehova indefinenter ambulat in medio castrorum tuorum, eripiendo te; ideo Castra tua sancta sunt, neque conspiciat in te turpitudinem ullius rei, nè avertat se à te, Deuter. 23. 14.

D. n. 3.

Secundò, Tempia honorificè habenda sunt; at Immundities contemptum maximum & vilissimam vilitatem arguit. Unde Jehu 2 Reg. 10. 27. Ædem Baalis contumelià quam potuit maximà affecturus, in Latrinam vertisse dicitur. At ille Baalis Idoleum, nos Christi (proh pudor!) Domus in Latrinas vertimus. Adeò nobis in Deum ignominia non est, quàm Nebuchadnezzar majorem non invenit, quàm Dei nostri blasphematorum ædes conspurcasset, quàm ut in latrinas & sterquilinia redigantur?

Postremò, adeò Templis Munditiem convenire putavit magnus ille Gentium Doctor, ut Corpora fidelium Templis assimilans, argumentum inde duceret de iisdem morum & vitæ impuritate non temerandis; Vos Templum estis Dei viventis — quapropter impurum nè attingite, 2 Cor. 6. Si imaginem Templi non deceat Immundities, certè non decebit ipsum.

THE CONTENTS.

- CHAP. II. Ἀποστασία in the Scripture imports Revolt or Rebellion : That Idolatry is such, proved from Scripture. By Spirits in the Text are meant Doctrines. Διδασκαλίας Δαιμονίων are to be taken Passively, for Doctrines concerning Dæmons : Several instances of the like form of Speech in Scripture. pag. 625
- CHAP. III. Dæmons ( according to the Gentiles Theologie ) were, 1. for their Nature and degree a middle sort of Divine Powers between the Sovereign Gods and Men. 2. For their Office they were supposed to be Mediators between the Gods and Men. This proved out of several Authors. The Distinction of Sovereign Gods and Dæmons proved out of the Old Testament, and elegantly alluded to in the New, 1 Cor. 8. pag. 626
- CHAP. IV. Dæmons were for their Original the Souls of men Deified or Canonized after death. This proved out of sundry Authors. Baal or Bel or Belus the first Deified King : Hence Dæmons are called Baalim. Another kind of Dæmons, such as never dwelt in Bodies : These answer to Angels, as the other to Saints. pag. 629
- CHAP. V. The manner of worshipping Dæmons and retaining their presence, viz. by consecrated Images and Pillars. The worshipping of Images and Columns a piece of Dæmon-doctrine, as was also the worshipping of Dæmons in their Reliques, Shrines and Sepulchers. pag. 632
- CHAP. VI. A Summary of the Doctrines of Dæmons : How these are revived and resembled in the Apostate Church. That the word Δαίμονιον is sometime used in Scripture according to the Theologie of the Gentiles : That it is so used in the Text, was the judgment of Epiphanius ; an observable passage quoted out of him to this purpose. pag. 634
- CHAP. VII. Why those words in the description of the Mystery of Godliness [ Received into Glory ] are set last. That praying to Saints, as Mediators and Agents for us with God, is Idolatry. To be prayed to in Heaven and to deal as an Agent between us and God, is a Prerogative and Royalty appropriate to Christ. How this was figured under the Law, by the High-priest's alone having to do in the most Holy place. That Christ purchased this Royalty by suffering an unimitable Death. That Saint-worship is a denial of Christ's Prerogative. How it crept into the Church. pag. 637
- CHAP. VIII. That Idolatry is the main Character of the Church's Apostasie, proved by Three Arguments. pag. 643
- CHAP. IX. That Pagan-Idolatry is not here meant, nor can the Saracen or Turk be the Antichrist meant in Scripture. An Answer to an Exception, viz. That Antichristianism cannot be charged upon those that acknowledge the true God and Christ. That Antichrist is a Counter-Christ, and his Coming a Counter-resemblance of the Coming of Christ ; shewed in several particulars. pag. 644
- CHAP. X. The Great Apostasie was to be a General one. That the word [ Τίς. Some ] does not ( in the Text and several other places ) imply a Few or a Small number. Wherein we and the Papists differ about the Church's Visibility. In what respects our Church was Visible, and in what Invisible, under the Reign of Antichrist. pag. 648
- CHAP. XI. That the Last Times in Scripture signifie either a Continuation of Time, or an End of Time. That the Last Times simply and in general are the Times of Christianity ; the Last Times in special and comparatively, or the Latter Times of the Last Times, are the Times of the Apostasie under Antichrist. pag. 652
- CHAP. XII. A more particular account of the Last Times in general, and of the Latter Times of the Last Times. That Daniel's Four Kingdoms are the Great Kalendar of Times. That the Times of the Fourth or Last Kingdom ( viz. the Roman ) are the Last Times meant in Scripture. That the Latter Times of the Last Times are the Latter Times of the Fourth Kingdom, wherein the Great Apostasie should prevail. pag. 654
- CHAP. XIII. The Duration and Length of the Latter Times, viz. 42 months, or 1260 days : That hereby cannot be meant three single years and an half. That the Latter Times take their beginning from the ruine of the Roman Empire. That the ancient Fathers by the το κατέχον ( 2 Thesl. 2. ) understand the Roman Empire, and by the little Horn ( Dan. 7. ) Antichrist or the Man of sin. pag. 655
- CHAP. XIV. Three main Degrees of the Roman Empire's ruine. The Empire divided into 10 Kingdoms. Who are those Three Kings whom the little Horn ( or Antichrist ) is said ( Dan. 7. ) to have deprest, to advance himself. pag. 658
- CHAP. XV. That Daniel's 70 Weeks are a lesser Kalendar of Times. That these Phrases in the Epistles to the converted Jews [ viz. The Last Hour or Time, The End of all things, The Day approaching, &c. ] are meant of the End of the Jewish State and Service at the expiring of the 70 Weeks. That the Apostles were not so mistaken as to believe the End of

of the World should be in their days, proved against Baronius and others. p.663.

CHAP. XVI. That the Spirit foretold the Great Apostasy ἡρώδης in Dan. 11. vers. 36, 37, 38, 39. These Verses exactly translated and explained. That by Mahoz and Mahuzzim are meant Fortresses, Bulwarks, Protectors, Guardians, &c. How fitly this Title is applicable to Angels and Saints. pag.666.

CHAP. XVII. A Paraphrase and Observations upon Dan. 11. v. 36, 37, 38, 39. That at the beginning of Saint-worship in the Church, Saints and their Reliques were called Bulwarks, Fortresses, Walls, Towers, Guardians, &c. according to the prime sense of the word Mahuzzim. pag.670.

PART. II. CHAP. I.

The Author's Reasons for his translating the Text differently from the Common Versions. That the Preposition [Ἐν] in the Text signifies Through or By. The like it signifies in other places of Scripture. pag.675.

CHAP. II. What is meant by The Hypocrisy of Liars: That this appeared in 3 things; 1. Lies of Miracles, 2. Fabulous Legends, 3. Counterfeit Writings under the name of Antiquity. That Lies of Miracles appear'd in 1. their Forgery, 2. Illusion, 3. Misapplication. What's meant by Having feared Consciences: Instances hereof. pag.676.

CHAP. III. That the Worship of Saints and their Reliques was brought in by Lying Miracles. No mention of Miracles done by the Reliques of Martyrs in the first Ages of the Church. That the Gentiles Demon-worship was advanced by Lying Miracles. pag.679.

CHAP. IV. That Saint-worship was advanced by Fabulous Legends. Reflexions upon Sim. Metaphrastes, and his Fables of s. Barbara, s. Blasius, &c. p.681.

CHAP. V. That Sim. Metaphrastes his living within the time of the great Opposition against Saint-worship, moved him to devise such stories for the help of the Cause then in danger. A brief account of the great Opposition in the Greek and Eastern Churches against Idolatry. A discovery of the slanders fastned upon the Council of Constantinople against Idolatry. pag.683.

CHAP. VI. That Saint-worship was promoted by Counterfeit Writings. That Image-worship and the Idolatry of the Mals were promoted by the Hypocrisy of Liars. A foul story made use of in the Second Council of Nice in behalf of Image-worship. pag.687.

CHAP. VII. That by the persons [Forbidding marriage and commanding to abstain from meats] are decyphered Monks and Friars. That the renouncing of possessions (another principle in Monkery) may be included under ἀπέχεσθαι βρωμάτων. Of the use of the word βρωμάτια in Scripture. pag.688.

CHAP. VIII. That Monastick life and Saint-worship began much about the same time. That Monks and Friars were the chief advancers of Saint-worship, Image-worship, &c. pag.690.

VII. Daniel's Weeks. pag.697.

VIII. Regnum Romanum est Regnum quartum Danielis. pag.711.

IX. Revelatio Antichristi: Sive De Numeris Danielis 1290, 1335. Cap. 12. vers. 11, 12. quo spectent; Eousque nempe Mysterium Extremorum Temporum, ejusque qui tunc rerum potiretur, clausum & obsignatum fore; deinceps resignatum iri. pag.717.

Vaticiniorum Apocalypticorum

SYNCRONISMUS ET ORDO

secundum res gerendas, nullius interpretationis Hypothesi, aut eventus rerum præjudicio innixus; sed ex ipsis Visionum characteribus à Spiritu S. dedita opera insertis firmiter demonstratus, juxtaque luculento Schemate ad intuendum propositus: ut sit tanquam Thesaurum filum in sacro hoc Labyrintho versaturis, & Lydius lapis ad veram interpretationem indagandam, & alienam redarguendam.

PRÆNOSCENDA.

SYNCHRONISMUM Vaticiniorum voco rerum in iisdem designatarum in idem tempus concursum; quasi contemporaneitatem dixeris & coætaneitatem: Prophetiæ liquidem de rebus contemporaneis συγχρονισμοι.

Reliquis igitur Vaticiniis primum inter se, deinde cum Sigillis per synchronismum comparatis, elucebit Ordo totius Apocalypseos: id quod nunc ostendere συνθεσιν aggredimur.

PARS PRIMA.

SYNCHRONISMUS I.

MULIERIS IN EREMO AGENTIS,
BESTIÆ SEPTICIPITIS INSTAURATÆ,
ATRII EXTERIORIS CALCATI A GENTIBUS, TESTIUM IN TERRA PROPHETANTIUM IN SACCO.

HIC ordior; primusque mihi Synchronismus erit nobilis istius quaternionis Vaticiniorum æqualibus Temporum intervallis insignium. 1. Mulieris in Eremo agentis per Tempus, Tempora, & dimidium, seu (ut ibidem explicatiùs dicitur) Dies 1260. 2. Bestiæ Septicipitis instauratæ rerumque potituræ Mensibus XLII. 3. Atrii exterioris (seu Civitatis Sanctæ) totidem Mensibus calcati à Gentibus. Denique, Testium in sacco prophetantium Dies 1260.

Hujus Synchronismi veritas ferè in confesso est, & tum astrui posse videtur, tum verò solet, ex ipsa æqualitate Intervallorum: Nam Tempus, Tempora, & Dimidium Temporis, i. tres Anni cum semisse (ut patet ex collatione vers. 6, & 14. Cap. 12.) efficiunt Menses XLII; Menses XLII Dies 1260.

Sed quoniam necessarium non est (utcumque in Visionibus eodem tempore oblati perquam verisimile) ut Tempora æqualia sint etiam συγχρονά, cum æqualitas non prohibeat prohibeat quin alia aliis priora, alia posteriora esse possint : ideo Character iste æqualitatis intervallorum non erit præfracto cogendo idoneus. Proinde Characteres mihi aliunde accersam, ex quibus demonstratione clarâ & invictâ rem sic conficio.

Pars I.

Tempora Bestiæ & Mulieris æmicolæ ab uno eodémque rerum termino egrediuntur, nimirum à Dracone rufo devicto & in terram deturbato : ergò, æqualia cum sint, toto intervallo concurrissè, & simul tandem curriculum suum absolvissè, necesse est.

Ab illo autem principio seu termino utriusque tempora inchoari, patet ex Cap. 12. Siquidem, cum jam dejecto Dracone per Michaellem, simul Mulier à facie ejus evadit in Eremum, [ ver. 6, & 14. ] iratus Draco, quòd ipsam eò jam ingredientem obruere incassum tentasset [ versibus 15, 16, 17. ] abiit ut gereret bellum cum reliquis ex semine ejus ; [ iis nimirum quos in Eremoparitura erat, v. 17. ] * stansque super arenam Maris, [ v. 18. ] Bestia Decemcornupeta inde ascendenti [ Cap. 13. 1. ] tradit virtutem suam, & thronum suum, & potestatem magnam ; ibid. v. 2.

Bestia & Prophetia Testium.

Tempora Bestiæ & Prophetia Testium, perinde æqualia, simul finiuntur ad exitum sextæ Tubæ : ergò simul quoque incepissè, ac per totum intervallum contemporassè, manifestum est.

Jam quòd simul cum sextæ Tubæ exitu finiantur tempora tum Bestiæ, tum Testium Dei in sacco & cilicio prophetantium, id verò liquet ex vers. 14. cap. 11. ubi tam ascensus Testium in Cælum ( qui pullatæ prophetia terminus est ) quàm Terræ motus iste magnus ( quo, Urbe regiâ disjectâ, de Bestiæ regno actum est ) signatur articulo, quo VÆ secundum ( i. Tuba vi. ) abierit, Væq; tertium ( seu Tuba vii. ) protinus adventurum esset. Quippe eo temporis momento, Testes ( quos testimonium suum in sacco jam jam finituros ( hoc enim est ὅταν τελώσωσι ) Bestia quæ ex Abyssu ascenderat, morte affecisset ) divinitus reviviscentes in cælum ascendissè ; [ ver. 7, 11, 12. ] factoque eadem horâ [ ver. 13. ] terremotu magno, Δικατον URBIS corruisse ; eoque rem devenissè, ut, septimâ Tubâ clangente, facta sint regna mundi Domini nostri & Christi ejus, ver. 15.

Tempora Testium & Atrii ( seu Civitatis Sanctæ ) occupati à Gentibus contemporare liquet, tum ex mente textûs, cap. 11. v. 2, 3. tum ex ira Gentium jam exturbatarum, ineunte Tubâ septimâ ; id est, à fine sextæ, quando Testium quoque dies exierunt, ut jam ostensum est. Nam non aliæ sunt Gentes quæ ver. 18. ad septimæ Tubæ clangorem irâ inflammari dicuntur, quàm quæ hætenus totis XLII. mensibus Atrium Templi exterius ( id est, Civitatem Sanctam ) conculcassent, quæque nunc ideo ab ira Dei perdendæ veniunt. Et hic quidem Synchronismus à nemine, quod sciam aut meminerm, in dubium vocari solet.

Si Atrii Civitatisque Sanctæ conculcatio contemporavit Prophetia Testium, contemporabit quoque Bestiæ, cui Testes contemporaverint ; ideoque etiam Mulieri Eremiticæ, cui contemporavit Bestia. Ità Mulier Eremitica, Domini Bestiæ, Calcatio Civitatis Sanctæ, & Prophetia Testium, singula singulis συγχρονίζουσι.

SYNCHRONISMUS II.

Cap. 13.

BESTIÆ BICORNIS ( QUI ET PSEUDOPROPHETA ) CUM
BESTIA DECEMCORNUPETA ( QUÆ ET IMAGO BESTIÆ DICITUR. )

Bestia enim Bicornis conditor est, seu instaurator, Bestiæ illius Septisipitis, decem cornua diadematis redimitæ ; quam scilicet, post lethalem plagam, ad pristini cujusdam statûs Imaginem magno cum Sanctorum malo redintegravit, & verò verò rerum totis mensibus XLII. potituram [ cap. 13. ver. 3, 5, 12, 14, 15. ] Quo facto, ipse in conspectu ipsius omnem potestatem ejus exercet; edit quoque, ( seu facit ) signa magna in conspectu ejus [ ver. 12, 13. & cap. 19. v. 20. ] Tandem verò eadem hæc Bestia Bicornis ( quam alias Pseudopropheta Joannes vocat ) unà cum Bestia illa altera, in cujus conspectu ediderat signa, tanquam comites individui apprehenduntur, & vivi coniecti sunt ambo in stagnum ignis ardens sulphure, cap. 19. v. 20. Cùm ergo Bestia Decemcornupeta ( fas enim mihi sit Bestiam illam Septicipitem redintegratam sic evidentia causâ appellare ) & Bicornis Pseudopropheta à se invicem neque ortu suo neque interitu separentur; quin etiam altera alterius potestatem ἐν ὀνόματι αὐτῆς, hoc est, in præsentia ipsius, administret: quis non videt illas omni ævo suo necessariò contemporare? Ut autem res tota rectè percipiatur, sciendum, nullum alium Bestiæ Septicipitis statum cap. 13. describi, quàm instaurationis, seu capitis novissimi, quo Decemcornupeta evasit; id quod tota descriptionis series evincit. Quicquid enim mali Bestia patràsse dicitur, quicquid cultûs & adorationis eidem ab incolis terræ delatum est, id omne post instaurationem ipsius, seu plagæ curationem, factum perhibetur. Porro, decem cornua ad caput seu statum Bestiæ novissimum ( qui status instaurationis istius est ) pertinere, ex Angeli interpretatione cap. 17. manifestum est. Siquidem ibi, cùm quinque capita cecidissent, id est, vices suas complevisent, sextum autem jam tum Joannis ævo vicem suam obiret; cornuum tamen tempus nondum advenisse dicitur. Ergo ad septimum seu novissimum caput pertinere necesse est.

Appendix de alternatione Nominum Bestiæ & Pseudoprophetæ; item Bestiæ & Imaginis Bestiæ.

De utraque enim monebat Titulus Synchronismi. Et primò, eandem esse Bestiam Bicornem atque Pseudopropheta, ex vetustissimis Apocalypseos interpretibus observavit Irenæus. Id quod ex collatione ver. 13, 14, 15, 16. cap. 13. cum versu 20. capitis 19. adeò clarum est & manifestum, ut ulteriori confirmatione non egeat.

Sed quod porro præfert Titulus, Bestiam Decemcornupeta nomine Imaginis Bestiæ aliàs signari solitam, id minùs liquidum est, & de quo Lectori non nimis forsàn attento nihil suboleret. Illud tamen ità esse, haud temere mihi observasse videor; ac proinde, ubicunque occurrit Bestia cum Pseudopropheta, ( id quod ter factum reperio ) ibi Bestiæ cognomento non aliam quàm Decemcornupeta Bestiam intelligi; cùm per Pseudopropheta, Bicornem designari satis liqueat. Contrà, ubi cum Bestia Imaginem Bestiæ componi videas [ ut cap. 14. v. 9, 11. cap. 15. v. 2. cap. 16. 2. cap. 19. 20. & cap. 20. 4. ] istuc per Bestiam, Pseudopropheta intelligendum esse; per Imaginem verò ejus, Bestiam Decemcornupeta, seu Septicipitem restitutam: Hæc enim, cùm Pseudopropheta instaurationem suam agnoscat, seque totam arbitrio ejus tanquam supremi Domini regendam permittat [ cap. 13. v. 12, 14, 15. ] non immeritò Imago ejus dicitur; non quidem cujus similitudinem gerit, Genitivo passivè sumpto ( eo namque respectu alius Imago est, Draconis fortè Septicipitis, aut statûs in quo viguit ante plagam, juxta cujus ideam scilicet de integro Deum blasphemar, bellumque gerit adversus Sanctos ) sed Imago, cujus Bicornis iste Draconiloquus & restituendæ author fuit, próque peculio suo vendicat, Genitivo nempe Agentem & Possessorem denotante; quemadmodum in iisdem illis locis Character Bestiæ non est qui ipsi Bestiæ imprimitur, sed quo Bestia eadem illa cultores suos inurit.

Et quidem rem ità se habere, ut dixi, de Imagine Bestiæ, argumento est primò, quòd cap. 13. ver. 15. dicitur, illam ipsam Imaginem Bestiæ, quam ibi animavit Pseudopropheta, facere ut quicunque non adorârint Imaginem Bestiæ, occidantur; imò alibi ( ut Bestiam agnoscas ) adorandi verbo ferè semper subjicitur, tanquam aliquid in quod adoratio competat. Cùm igitur duastantum, non plures, delineet Apocalypsis Bestias; hæc tam improba, cum non dispari sive jubendi sive cogendi potestate, Majestas non potest non earum alterutri convenire. Porro ubi Bestia simul adest cum Pseudopropheta, Imago Bestiæ, in eadem verborum constructione, non comparet, quasi nimirum tunc vicem ejus suppleret Appellatio Bestiæ. Denique, ejusdem illius esse dicitur Imago Bestiæ cujus est Nomen Numerusque, c. 15. 2. At verò Nomen & Numerus non alterius Bestiæ dici videntur, c. 13. quàm Bicornis: Ejusdem igitur ( utputa Architecti & Domini ) Imaginem quoque dici par est. Sed Imago hæc, sive sit, sive non sit Bestia illa Decemcornupeta, instituto nostro nihil officit quidquam: huic enim hypothese non innititur Synchronismus Bestiarum.

SYNCHRONISMUS III.

MERETRICIS MAGNÆ SEU BABYLONIS MYSTICÆ CUM BESTIA EADEM ILLA SEPTICIPITE DECEMCORNUPETA.

1. TEmpus Bestiæ est tempus Deserti [ Synch. 1. §. 1. ] Meretrix autem à Joanne conspicitur in Deserto, cap. 17. ver. 3, 4. Sed hic character non multum cogit.

2. Bestia Decemcornupeta portat Meretricem, seu mavis Mœchatricem, & Meretrix infidet Bestiæ: Ergò ambæ sunt unius ejusdemque temporis, ver. 3, 7.

3. Decemcornua Bestiæ (quibus scilicet [ N. B. ] supremum ejus novissimumque Caput frondescit, cujusque solius sub vicibus (quibus utique à lethali plaga revixit, reliquorum Capitum vicibus jam antea peractis) Meretrix Bestiam agit, Bestiæque Meretricem bajulat; hæc, inquam, decem Cornua sunt decem Reges, qui auctoritatem suam ut Reges ad unam horam accipiunt cum Bestia, restitutâ illâ videlicet, Mœchatricem bajulante, jamque Decemcornupetâ, hoc est, ultimi Capitis vices exercente. Hi, expleto tempore quo auctoritatem suam erant tradituri Bestiæ [ ver. 13, 17. ] id est, quando jam dissolvenda venerat compago Bestiæ, Meretricem odio prosequuntur, desertam illam reddunt & nudam, tandemque exurunt igne, [ ver. 16. ] Itâ igitur Bestia, quæ in Statu decacorni (quo solo eam Joannes prophetice contemplatur) cum Meretrice, hoc est, Mœchatrice, primum cœperat, Meretrici quoque non erit superstes, neque illi Meretrix: Ergò, Meretrix & Bestia illa universæ & ad amussim συγχρονίζουσι • ὁπερ ἰδὲν δεῖξαι.

SYNCHRONISMUS IV.

CENTUM ET QUADRAGINTA MILLE SIGNATORUM, VIRGINUM, CUM MERETRICE BABYLONICA ET BESTIA.

1. Primò enim Virgines dicuntur, atque ab eo laudantur, quòd meretriciis complexibus sese non coinquinassent, cap. 14. v. 4. Incidunt ergò in meretricia tempora Mœchæ Babylonicæ, quacum fornicantur Reges & incolæ terre, cap. 17. ver. 2. & 18. 3.

2. Ex Choro hoc Virgineo prodeunt qui ruinam Babylonis denunciant [ ver. 8. ejusdem cap. 14. ] quique absterrent homines ab omni communione Bestiæ, Imaginis, Characterisque ipsius: Ergò Cœtus iste Virgineus contemporat Babyloni & Bestiæ.

3. Hi denique sunt Vocati isti, electi & fideles Agni stipatores, ver. 4. cap. dicti, quibus comitatus (cap. 17. 14.) bellum gerit cum Regibus seu Cornubus Bestiæ Babylonicæ; quique ejus auspiciis (utpote Regis Regum & Domini Dominantium) victoriam tandem reportabunt [ ibid. ] Illa enim, de Domino Dominantium & Rege Regum, per parenthesin cenfeo legenda, ubi dicit Angelus, Hi cum Agno pugnabunt, & Agnus vincet eos (quoniam Dominus Dominorum est & Rex Regum) & qui cum eo sunt Vocati, & Electi, & Fideles: hoc est, Agnus, & qui cum eo sunt Vocati, Electi & Fideles, vincent decem Reges Babyloniferos.

4. Sed hæc nondum ad contemporationem plenariam & in solidum astruendam sufficiunt; possunt enim omnia vel cum partiali contemporatione consistere. Sic igitur in universum & ad amussim Cœtum Signatorum Agni Bestiæ contemporare demonstro. Cœtus iste Signatorum, Bestiæ seu Bestiasequarum universitatis Ἀντιστοιχίας cœvum est; copiarum videlicet sanctorum militum, tum cum cæteri Orbis incolæ desertores & transfugæ Bestiæ characterem accepissent, in Agni fide etiamnum permanentium. Patet ex textu. Unde, ut olim prisco ritu servi & milites, ejus cui fidem suam addixerant, stigmatibus notari & nomine inscribi solebant; itâ isti nomen Agni & Patris ejus in frontibus gestare perhibentur. Hoc cum itâ sit, sequitur, utrumque alteri commensum esse & pari omnino intervallo respondere. Poscit enim hujuscemodi ἀντιστοιχίας ratio, ut Cœtus Signatorum Agni, pro eo quod Viso isto intenditur, ex opposita Bestiæ ratione penitus æstimetur; citra cujus nempe oppositionem ipse, ex mente hujus Visi, rationem nullam habeat; proindeque cum eadem incipiente incipiat, desinenteque desinat.

5. Porro

5. Porro de finali Contemporatione, id etiam isto caractere ex cap 7. evinci potest: quia utriusque, tam Bestiæ tyrannidis, quam Cœtus istius Signatorum, limes est Turba Palmifera. Bestiæ, quia de Palmiferis ibidem dicitur, Hi sunt qui venerunt ex tribulatione magna: quâ verò tribulatione nisi Bestiæ Sanctos tribulantis? Ergo Bestiæ tyrannidem à tergo relinquunt. Cœtus Signatorum, quia cum Turba Palmifera continuò sequitur, ut ex Transitione ista * [Μετὰ ταῦτα εἶδον] manifestum est.

SYNCHRONISMO.

ITà Mulieri Eremicolæ, Conculcationi Civitatis Sanctæ, & Testibus interea sacro plangentibus contemporavit Bestia rediviva seu Decemcornupeta, Synch. I. Bestiæ Decemcornupetæ Bestia Bicornis, Synch. II. Utrique Meretrix, Synch. III. Meretrici & Bestiæ Virgineus Signatorum Cœtus, Synch. IV. Ergò omnia omnibus συνοχρηζουσι.

SYNCHRONISMUS VI.

ATRII INTERIORIS CALAMO DEI COMMENSI
DRACONISQUE SEPTICIPITIS INSIDIAM ET PRAELII CUM MICHAELE DE PUERPERIO.

Sunt enim proxima antecedentia contemporaneorum; Prælium Draconis ac Mulieris puerperium, Habitationis Mulieris in Eremo, Bestiæque Decemcornupetæ; Atrium interius (ejus enim periphrasis est quod de Ναὸ τῷ Θεῷ, Thyssasterio & adorantibus illic pro more Sacerdotibus, dicitur) Atrii exterioris seu populi, ubi gentes præter jus & fas stabulari perhibentur.

Primò enim utrumque, tam puerperium Mulieris quàm dimicatio Draconis cum Michaelē, in eundem omnino terminum impingit, Fugam Mulieris in Eremum; quæ utriusque rem gestam proximè excepisse dicitur. Nam Mulier, simul ac peperit, fugit in Eremum, ibi alenda dies 1260. cap. 12. v. 6. Similiter, Dracone deturbato, fugit Mulier in Eremum, ibi alenda à facie Serpentis, seu Draconis, per tempus, tempora & dimidium temporis, v. 13, 14. Propterea duo hæc, ut vides, in unum confert titulus Synchronismi, tanquam ejusdem temporis & junctæ omnino rei Visiones, quasque in hoc negotio separare adeò opus non fuerit.

Porro idem illud Duellum, quo Michael Draconem devicit, proximè antecessit Bestiam septicipitem redintegratam, seu Decemcornupetam: nam Draco, statim ut deturbatus est in terram, stans super arenam maris, Bestiæ indè emergenti de cætero tradit vices suas, i. virtutem suam, thronum suum & potestatem magnam: & (ut cum * Irenæo habet Editio Complut. unum ex capitibus suis quasi occisum ad mortem; cujus curatâ plagâ, Bestiam admirans sequuta est universa terra, cap. 13. v. 1, 2, 3.

28. al. 23. &
huic quoque le-

ctioni astipulatur textus apud Andream Cæsariensem in Codice Augustano; nec non Syrus Interpres qui nuper editus est. Imò apud Latinos Primasius illud (vidi) non legit, quamvis perinde accipit, addendo verbum [fuerit]. Illi impoluit, quod Latine Unum ex capitibus, &c. de casu ambiguum sit, non item Græcè.

Atque hucusque res plana & liquida est: sed de antecessu Atrii interioris ad Atrium exterius (quod unicum ad Synchronismum hunc conficiendum restat) paulò difficilior est probandi provincia, quia res diu aliter credita, ideòque præjudiciis impedita. Sic tamen ostendo. Atrium interius, ratione structuræ Templi, situ & ordine antecedit Atrium exterius, qui Throno Dei, seu τῷ Ναῷ (qui totius structuræ caput) proximus erat. Ergò, si res significatæ diversorum temporum sint (neque enim novum est, ordinem sitûs ordinem temporis denotare, ut in * statua quam somniavit Nebuchadnezar videre est;) sanè Interioris Atrii significatum Exterioris significato tempore prius esse, rationi consentaneum est. Esse autem Atriorum significata diversorum temporum, atque adeò Interioris Atrii significatum antiquius & prius altero, sic porro demonstro.

Pars I.

Quia Visio hæc Atrii Templi & Altaris, seu interioris, mensurandi, exordium est Prophetiæ repetitæ; quæ nempe (ut mox pluribus ostendetur) ab origine & quasi ab ovo relegit tempora Prophetiæ Sigillorum, quorum initium ab ipsa intervalli Apocalyptici Epocha accersendum, nemo dubitaverit: Oportet te (inquit) iterum prophetare (ita libri comesti symbolum explicat) populis, & gentibus, & linguis, & regibus multis. iterum, πάλιν, id est, ordine temporum, de quo antè prophetaverat, repetito. Incipit autem à dimensione isthac τὸ Νᾶς & Thyrsalterii, eorumque qui illic adorabant. Si igitur visio de Mulieris puerperio & Draconis prælio (quæ ipsa pars est Prophetiæ hujusce repetitæ) ad ipsum caput periodi, seu Temporis Apocalyptici ascendat, usque adeò, ut nihil eâ antiquius habeat Apocalypsis, quòdve altiùs originem ducat (id quod tum ex rei ipsius ingenio, quæ Partus est, tum ex hætenus firmatis & porro firmandis patebit Synchronismis:) quidni multò magis ejusdem Prophetiæ exordium, & prima omnium Visio eòdem ascendere putaretur? At Atrii exterioris Menses eò ascendere nequeunt; ut qui toti jam Bestiæ Decemcornupetæ contemporaverint. Ergò interioris Atrii τὰ ἐμμέτρῃ tempora exterioris τὰ ἀσυμμέτρῃ Menses non solum antecedere, sed ab origine Prophetiæ repetitæ, unà cum Visione de Puerperio & Dracone, duci debere, mihi quidem liquidissimum est.

Jam tria hæc, Mulieris habitationem in Eremo, Bestiam Decemcornupetam, Atrium exterius à Gentibus calcatum, contemporanea esse, patet ex primo Synchronismo: Ergò Atrii interioris commensi tempora, & Puerperium Mulieris, unà cum Draconis infidiis & Prælio cum Michaelē, sunt proxima antecedentia contemporaneorum; & consequenter ipsa quoque sibi invicem non possunt non contemporare; ὁπερ εἰς δειξαι.

SYNCHRONISMUS VII.

SEPTEM PHIALARUM

BESTIÆ BABYLONISQUE AD OCCASUM VERGENTIUM.

Effusio Phialarum affert ruinam & interitum Bestiæ, ut ex textu ipso manifestum est. Canunt enim victores Bestiæ canticum Moysi θνήσκιον, cap. 15. vers. 2, 3. Atque porro speciatim patet de Phiala prima [cap. 16. v. 2.] quæ ulceris plagam immittit in homines habentes charactērem Bestiæ & eos qui adorabant Imaginem ejus: De quinta [vers. 10.] quæ effunditur super thronum Bestiæ, & Regnum ejus reddit tenebrosum: Itēque de ultima, quæ effusâ, Babylon funditus excinditur, [vers. 19.] Ergò Effusio Phialarum contemporat Bestiæ & Babyloni finientibus.

PARS ALTERA.

Eregi Partem primam septem Synchronismis: sequitur Pars altera Sigillaris, in qua omnium hætenus dictorum, & si qua præterea sunt, Vaticiniorum connexionem cum Sigillis, aliis totidem Synchronismis demonstrabo; unde perspicuum evadet, (res observatione dignissima, & non parùm interpretaturo momenti, ni fallor, allatura) Apocalypsin totam indè à capite quarto (nam de Septem Ecclesiis jam nihil interpono) in duas dispertiri Prophetias principales, quarum utraque ab eadem Epocha & quasi carceribus egreditur, desinitque in eandem metam. Prima est Sigillorum, in iisque Tubarum; nam Sigillum septimum Tubarum est Sigillum; id quod ex Grammatico contextus sensu ubique pro concessio sumo. Neque enim qui in cæteris Sigillis omnibus sensus ordo tenetur, is septimo solo non convenire putandus est: ut quod Sigilli refectioni subjicitur visum, id Sigilli τὸ πρᾶγμα sit. Jam autem septimi refectionem excipit visio Angelorum septem cum septem Tubis. Altera Prophetia (seu mavis, Visionum Propheticarum Systema) est τὰ βιβλαρισία, seu Libri aperti, quæ ab eodem exorsa Temporis Apocalyptici principio, prioris, quæ Sigillorum est, Prophetiæ Tempora relegit, à versu 8. capitis 10. ad finem libri: Hancque Prophetiæ repetitionem indicari Transitione istâ vers. 11. cap. ejusdem, ubi Joanni ait Angelus, Oportet te iterum (πάλιν) prophetare populis, & gentibus, & linguis, & regibus multis. Porro illud quoque, Lector, animadversione tuâ fortasse non erit indignum; ad utriusque istarum, perinde inde atque primæ omnium Visionis de septem Ecclesiis, quasi trium integrarum Prophetiarum, initia singula Voxe tanquam Tubæ de Cælo cum Joanne loquentis proclamari: quasi hoc indice distinguere voluisset Spiritus Sanctus à reliquis Vaticiniis, harum principalium partibus, in quibus nihil tale fieri videbis.

Sunt autem hæc, de quibus moneo, Prophetiarum initia, Visionis quidem septem Ecclesiarum, cap. I. 10. his verbis, Fui autem Spiritu correptus die Dominico, & audi-vi à tergo vocem magnam tanquam tubæ dicentis, &c. Prophetiæ autem Sigillorum, cap. 4. vers. 1. hujusmodi, Et vox prima, quam audiveram tanquam Tubæ loquentis me-cum, dicebat, &c. Denique Prophetiæ Βιβλαειδίου, cap. 10. vers. 8. Et vox quam audie-ram è Cælo (scilicet tanquam Tubæ loquentis) rursus loquebatur mecum, & dixit, &c. Hactenus Præloquium fuit, neque id, ut spero, à re quam agimus alienum. Sequuntur jam Synchronismi.

CARDO SYNCHRONISMORUM,
SEU

SYNCHRONISMUS

SIGILLI SEPTIMI, QUOD AD PRIORES SEX TUBAS, CUM BESTIA DECENCORNUPETA, BICORNI, CÆTERISQUE CONTEMPORANTIBUS.

Primò enim, Initium Bestiæ contemporat cum initio Sigilli septimi, quod est Tubarum.

NEmpe quum Cœtus Signatorum, tanquam Bestiæ regnantis Ἀντιχρίστου, Bestiæ idcirco justè & ad amissim contemporet; idémque Cœtus Signatorum ineat ineunte Sigillo septimo, sive Tubarum; sequitur omnino Bestiam itidem inire cum eodem Sigillo septimo, sive Tubarum.

Jam verò Cœtum Signatorum Bestiæ in solidum & ad amissim contemporare, ostensum est synch. IV. Part. I. Eundem Cœtum Signatorum inire cum Sigillo VII. liquet ex cap. 7. ubi Signatio ista sexto Sigillo continenter subjungitur. Siquidem sexti Sigilli Viso transacto, cum septimum, quod Tubarum est, jam erat aperiendum, Electis Dei servis signaculo prospicitur, nè à calamitatum procellis, quæ (jam quatuor Angelis, quatuor mundi cardinum præsidibus, ventos, quos hucusque retinuerant, ad Tubarum sonitum laxaturis,) Orbi terrarum incubituræ essent, perderentur. Quibus deinceps quoque cavetur ad quintæ Tubæ clangorem, cap. 9. v. 4. ut vel eo indicio agnoscas, signationem istam ad Tubarum tempora pertinere. Esse verò finem & exitum Sigilli sexti initium septimi, extra omnem dubitationem est; cum Sigillorum ad invicem series interrumpi nec possit, nec debeat. Ergò Cœtum CXLIV M Signatorum, qui Sigillum sextum transactum excipit, cum Sigillo septimo, quod eidem Sigillo sexto haud minùs continenter succedit, inire necesse est. Atque ità mirabili consilio (sic sentio) Spiritus Sanct. per hujus Signationis characterem prospexit nobis de connexionione ineuntis Bestiæ cum initio Sigilli VII. cum alia ratio nulla reddi possit, cur hæc Visione Signatorum cap. 7. interposita, turbaretur alioquin non interrumpenda Sigillorum series.

Bestiæ autem Menses XLII, perinde ut contemporanei eisdem Dies 1260 luctus Testium, ad sextæ Tubæ exitum finiendos esse, jam suprà demonstratum est. Part. I. synch. I. §. 3. ubi ex capite II. ostenditur, cum Testes post triduanam mortem ad vitam denuo suscitati, atq; in cœlum subvecti, luctuosæ Prophetiæ suæ Dies complevisset, factòq; eadem horâ, seu tempore, ingenti terræmotu, Urbs magna ruinam passa esset, Bestiæque, truculentus Testium hostis, præ clade quam tunc sentiret animam ageret; ut sciremus ubi intervalli Sigillorum & Tubarum hoc acciderit, continuò sub-

junxisse Spiritum, V Æ secundum (hoc est; Tubam VI) jam tum abiisse, & V Æ tertium (Tubam scilicet VII) venturum citò. Quem ego Characterem alterum magni hujus Synchronismi indicem, vel eo præcipuè sine isthac loci insertum credo, ut alter quasi cardinum esset, quibus magna ista & universalis τὸ Βιβλαριδὶς & Sigillorum Prophetiæ commissura verteretur. Siquidem alioquin & hoc monitum, & qui protinus sequitur clangor Tubæ VII, recto & naturali ordine ad finem Prophetiæ Sigillorum cap. 10. collocanda fuissent. Sed Spiritus S. septimæ Tubæ mysterio eò loci, ad modum præconii, leviter tantum, & quantum tunc satis videbatur, præsignato, (fore nimirum ut, eà clangente, mysterium Dei Prophetis evangelizatum consummaretur) ipsius clangoris editionem & mysterii definitionem disertam aliquantisper (nec id proculdubio nisi gravi aliqua de causa) sustinere & protelare voluit; donec, nimirum, ad novam Βιβλαριδὶς Prophetiam transitione factâ [cap. 10. à vers. 8. ad finem] primam ejusdem Visionem, stadio Apocalyptico similiter emenso, ad eundem rerum exitum provexisset. Illud enim lector attentè admodum observet velim; unâ hâc capitis undecimi Visione (Prophetiæ utpote repetitæ primâ) Spiritum sapientissimum totum Sigillaris Prophetiæ intervallum, ceu tramâ stamen, percurrere; eandemque septimâ Tubâ, quasi fibulâ quâdam, seriei Sigillorum, temporis dirigendi causâ, subnectere. Quorsum autem, nisi ut primæ Visioni sic fixæ & cum Sigillis comparatæ, per suos quoque characteres connixis reliquisquæ sequuntur Βιβλαριδὶς vaticiniis, totum repetitæ prophetiæ systema cum Sigillis dextrè componi possit?

Porrò, nè illud fortè cuiquam scrupulum injiciat, quòd ea quæ in textu referuntur de Bestiæ consternatione, de ruina Urbis stragèque hominum à Terramotu facta, minimè videntur de omnimoda Bestiæ abolitione intelligi debere; aio, neque hoc ad eum de quo egimus Synchronismum postulari, sed ut accipiantur saltem de tempore potestatis & regni finièdo, quod mensibus XLII determinatur; quòsque, dato Bestiæ & Testium Synchronismo, simul cum Testium Diebus exire necesse est. Quod verò adhuc aliquantisper supererit Bestiæ, id adeò (ut hinc colligi datur) dissimili à priore specie futurum est, ut eodem censu non sit habendum; sed &, haud ità multò post, sub septima Tuba delendum & abolendum penitus, Factis regnis hujus mundi Domini nostri & Christi ejus.

SYNCHRONISMUS II.

CONTEMPORANTIUM ATRII INTERIORIS ET PRÆLII DRACONIS ET MICHAELIS
DE PUERPERIO CUM
SEX PRIMIS SIGILLIS.

Quia sunt proxima antedanea Contemporantium succedaneorum. Nam sex prima Sigilla proxima sunt antedanea septimi. Atrium Interius & dimicatio Michaelis cum Dracone proxima sunt antedanea Bestiæ & Cœtûs CXLIV M Signatorum. Jam verò Sigillum septimum, seu (quod perinde est) sex primæ Tubæ, Cœtûs Signatorum & Bestia sunt contemporanea; ut ostensum est priori Synchronismo.

SYNCHRONISMUS III.

PHIALARUM CUM

Septem Phialæ iræ novissimæ, cùm totidem sint ruinæ & occasus Bestiæ gradus [Synch. VII. Part. I.] proinde necessariò ineundæ sunt ab initio ruentis & occidentis Bestiæ. Bestiæ autem regnum, sextâ Tubâ adhuc clangente, adeò labefactari cœpit, atque eò demum processerat ruinæ, ut ad ejusdem illius Tubæ exitum fineretur potestas illa XLII. Mensium, quibus ipsi datum fuit dominari, & sanctos vincere [Synch. I. hujus.] Atqui eò ruinæ & fatalium calamitatum priùs delabi Bestia non non potuit quàm quinta saltem Phiala effunderetur: nam tum demum Sedem ejus concutiendam, & Regnum tenebrosum redditum iri, apparet cap. 16. v. 10. Ergò quinque ad minimum Phialarum effunduntur ante desitum sextæ Tubæ clangorem; credo quòd etiam sexta: Phiala verò septima, quæ consummationis Phiala est, [ ibid. ver. 17, 18. ] proinde concurret cum initio Tubæ septimæ, quæ itidem consummationis Tuba est. cap. 10. ver. 6.

SYNCHRONISMUS IV.

MILLE ANNORUM LIGATI DRACONIS SEU SATANÆ, CUM TUBA SEPTIMA, SEU INTERVALLO AD EXCIDIO BESTIÆ.

UT hoc de Satanæ ligatione eò melius intelligatur, illud demonstrationi præmittendum est; in * textu dici, Satanam tunc insuper non tantum in Abyssum con- * cap. 20. 3.
jectum, sed ibidem occlusum esse; adhuc signasse super eum Angelum, ut non seduceret amplius gentes, donec consummarentur mille anni; id est, firmiter munisse, nè ullatenus pateret exitus. Nam mos erat Hebræis & vicinis gentibus, quando firmiter munitum & obseratum volebant ostium, ut ei sigillum apponerent. Ità lapidem positum foveæ Leonum, quò Daniel conjectus erat, obsignavit Rex Darius annulo suo, & annulo procerum suorum, Dan. 6. In historia Apocrypha ministri Danielis adis Beli portas claudunt & obsignunt annulo Regis. Similiter Judæi Matth. 27. 66. sepulchrum Servatoris ἠσφαλίσαντο σφραγίζαντες τὸν λίθον μετὰ κηρώδους muniunt, seu tutum reddebant, obsignato lapide, &c. ubi observandum, ἀσφαλίζαν & σφραγίζαν sese mutuò explicare. Longè igitur aliud est, Cælo dejici, cap. 12. (quod adeò multi huic loco accomodant) aliud ligari, abyssu includi, obsignarique. Illud vagandi & nocendi licentiam non adimit; hoc de carcere suo nullâ ratione egredi patitur. Imò affirmare ausim, nihil prorsus eorum quæ referuntur capite vicesimo, in duodecimo comparere; neque vicissim de eo quòd capite 12º memoratur, ullum in vicesimo verbum exstare. Tantum abest ut idem utrobique representetur. Examinemus paulisper. Capite xx. quatuor de Dracone referuntur: Primum, ab Angelo qui cælo descendit apprehensum fuisse, 2. ligatum, 3. in Abyssum conjectum, 4. occlusum atque obsignatum fuisse. Horum verò nullum in duodecimo reperies. Vicissim quòd unicum narratur capite 12. de Draconis projectione de cælo in terram, de eo in vicesimo nè γρὺ quidem habetur. Imò ex ipso contextu apertè colligere est, illud nequaquam tunc factum esse. Dicitur enim ibi, Angelum qui Draconem ligatum veniebat, cælo descendisse: ergò Draco jam tum super terram fuit. Quorum enim alioquin Angelus cælo descendisset eundem apprehensum? Hinc c. 12. Michael cælo non descendit, sed in ipso cælo cum Diabolo manum conferuit. His ità præmissis, ad Synchronismi ἀποδείξιν veniamus.

Arg. I. Sub primis sex Sigillis Draco seu Satanæ liber fuit & solutus; itémque sub primis sex Tubis Sigilli septimi: Ergò restat ut Mille anni ligati Satanæ conjiciantur in Tubam septimam.

Non enim fuisse ligatum Satanam five Draconem primis sex Sigillis vicem suam adhuc decurrentibus, ex eo liquet, quòd omni isthoc intervallo, septem capitibus & diadematis rubens, in cælo dimicavit cum Michaele de puerperio Mulieris, ut modò demonstratum fuit synch. II.

Sed neque primis sex Tubis sequentis Sigilli id factum est: Nam hoc est Interval- lum Mulieris in Eremo, & dominantis Bestiæ Decemcornupetæ, ut constat ex synch. I. hujus. Sanè, Muliere in Eremo agente, multum absuit ut ligatus putaretur Draco, qui à Michaele de cælo præcipitatus, primò eam abiturientem eluvione aquarum, quam ex ore suo ejecerat, pessundare conabatur; deinde, cùm hoc ei ex sententia non successerit (terrâ flumen absorbente, & Muliere jam in Eremum receptâ) Irâ & furore accensus, abiit ad gerendum bellum cum reliquis ex semine ejus, observantibus præcepta Dei, & habentibus testimonium Jesu, cap. 12. ver. 13, 15, 17. Numquid hæc sunt ligati Satanæ indicia.

Sed de Bestia quoque videamus; & quàm fuit sub ejus Regno Draco victus, audi: Scilicet, Dedit ei Draco virtutem suam, & thronum suum, & potestatem magnam; & admirans universa terra sequuta est Bestiam, & adorârunt Draconem qui dedit potestatem Bestiæ, [ c. 13. v. 2, 3, 4. ] At potuit forsan hæc omnia ex carcere suo agere Satanæ? Certè occluso & obsignato non potuit. Sed ut nullus sit tergiversationi locus, & liquidò appareat quàm adhuc fuit Draco ad ea ipsa facinora liber & solutus, à quibus quibus in custodiam semel datus coercendus dicitur; en alterum ejus Alumnus Pseudopropheta, Decemcornupetæ comitem individuum & Bestialis potestatis Administratorem, de quo exsertè scriptum habes, quòd edat signa magna, quòdque seducat Incolas Terræ per signa quæ datum est ei facere. Ecquis jam facillè credat, Bestiis istis rerum potiuntibus, Draconem, hoc est, Satanam, fuisse vinctum, fuisse in Abyssum conjectum, & obsignatum super eum, ut non seduceret gentes amplius? juxta cap. 20. ver. 2, 3.

Quinetiam ex ipsis Tubis (de medio saltem tempore) liberi & soluti Diaboli non deest argumentum. Quid enim? Annon Rex ille Locustarum Tubæ quintæ, qui Angelus Abyssi cluet, cui nomen Hebraicè Abaddon, Græcè verò Ἀπολλύων, quémque τὸν ἐκ τῆς θανάτου πεπρωτότα, eum qui è cælo jampridem ceciderat in terram, Joannes indigitat, ipsissimus est Draco & Satan, quem Michael, nondum clangentibus Tubis, de cælo in terram deturbaverat? Neque enim in tota Apocalypsi de alio præter ipsum legi memini, in terram cecidisse; neque scio an in alium quenquam nisi in istum competere possint elogia illa Angeli Abyssi & Abaddonis. Utut sit, certè non fuit tunc temporis ligatus Satan, non puteus Abyssi (ut inibi dicitur) super eum oclusus & obsignatus; sed (ut videre est c. 9. 2.) apertus, idque adeò, ut fumus inde ascenderit ut fumus fornacis magnæ, & obscuratus est sol & Aer à fumo ejus.

Denique, quin hæc Draconis seu Satanæ in seducendis Gentibus libertas ad ipsum usque Bestiæ excidium perseverarit, ac proinde fuerit sex primis Tubis omnino cœva, eum dubitare neutiquam posse puto qui satis attenderit quid ab Effusione Phialæ sextæ factum legatur: quòd nimirum septimâ, hoc est novissimâ, mox effundendâ, atque ideo supremo Bestiæ fato jam tum instante, Ex ore Draconis atque Vicariorum ejus Bestiæ & Pseudoprophetae, tres spiritus impuri, spiritus demoniorum edentes signa abierint ad Reges terræ & totius mundi, congregatum eos ad prælium magni illius Diei Dei omnipotentis, cap. 16. v. 13, 14.

Ità Mille Anni ligati Satanæ, ut Gentes amplius non seduceret, neque sub primis sex Sigillis, neque sub primis sex Tubis locum habere possunt: Ergò relinquendi sunt Tubæ septimæ.

Arg. 2. Posteaquam, Mille Annis absolutis, Satan de carcere suo ad breve tempus solutus novus motus concitasset; igne cœlitus delapso consumptâ, quam collegerat, deceptorum gentium colluvie, ipse Planus captus & comprehensus mitti dicitur in stagnum ignis & sulphuris, ἐπὶ τὸ πῦρ καὶ τὸ θειεὶον καὶ ὁ ψευδοπροφήτης, ubi erat & Bestia & Pseudopropheta. Adverte hic, Lector, characterem chronicum, quo innuitur hoc quicquid est, de Satana post iteratam solutionem capto & damnato, id superioris capitis Visioni de Bestia & Pseudopropheta ab eo qui equo albo infidebat debellatis, captis, & perinde in stagnum ignis ardens sulphure conjectis, ut narrandi ordine, ità quoque tempore rei gestæ succedere. Non enim alioquin dictum foret, eò missum esse Satanam, ubi erat & Bestia & Pseudopropheta, nisi eò jam antè, & Bestia & Pseudopropheta missi fuissent.

Nec cordatus aliquis ad effugium dixerit, hoc capitis xx. post Mille annos Bellum non esse ab illo superioris capitis diversum; cum non tantum jam allatus character, sed & omnes utrinque circumstantiæ refragentur, partes, pugna, & modus cædis, illic gladio, hîc igne; imò & dissimilis, ut mox re demonstratâ patefcet, Belli utriusque eventus; illic Satanæ ad tempus duntaxat ligatio, hîc verò damnatio ad ignem æternum.

Bellum igitur, quo Bestia & Pseudopropheta capti mittuntur in stagnum ignis, quandoquidem diversum sit ab hoc novissimo, ad quod eodem tandem stagni mittendus Satan, statim à solutione sua Gentes concitasset, aut intra ipsos Mille annos gestum fuisse necesse est, aut illis nondum inchoatis. Intra Mille annos geri non potuit, quia tamdiu Satan vinctus fuisse dicitur & oclusus in Abyssu, ut Gentes non seduceret amplius, donec Mille anni consummarentur, cap. 20. vers. 3. At in Bello, quo de Bestia, Pseudopropheta & Sociis tandem triumphatum est, si unquam aliàs, liberrimus & solutissimus fuit ad decipiendum, ut ex iis constat quæ modò ex capite 16. de hujus Belli apparatu allegavimus; quòd nempe ab effusione Phialæ sextæ, cum jam septima, quâ Bestiâ penitus conficitur, in propinquo esset ut effunderetur, Ex ore Draconis, ex ore Bestiæ, & Pseudoprophetae, tres spiritus impuri, spiritus demoniorum edentes signa abierint ad Reges terræ & totius mundi, congregatum eos ad prælium magni illius Diei Dei omnipotentis.

Quoniam ergò Mille annorum ratio hujusmodi turbas & motus Satánicos nequaquam admittit; necesse est ut Bellum hoc Bestiale eodem tempore præcesserit. Atque ità decem Mille anni alligati Satanæ contemporabunt Intervallo ab excidio Bestiæ, quod erat demonstrandum.

Arg. 3.

Arg. 3. Denique, cum per eodem Mille annos quibus Satan in custodia detinetur, Christus cum suis Regnum illud augustum & magnificum regnasse dicatur; proinde eisdem argumentis & notis quibus alterutrius Synchronismus stabilitur, confirmabitur & alterius. Quod igitur Regnum illud Christi augustum cum septima Tuba ineat, seu ab excidio Bestiæ, jam est ut ostendamus.

Pars II.

SYNCHRONISMUS V.

MILLE ANNORUM REGNI CHRISTI AUGUSTI, ET
SEPTIMÆ TUBÆ SEU INTERVALLI AB EXCIDIO BESTIÆ.

1. Regnum Christi singulare & augustum, iterum & sæpius in Apocalypsi memoratum, deque cujus adventu Chorus Animalium & Presbyterorum ovantium hymnos & Doxologias Deo concinere solent, ubique succedit Bestiæ & Babylonis devictis & triumphatis. Primò enim illic ubi de hoc Mille Annorum Regno propriè agitur c. xx. ex numero eorum qui cum Christo regnant sunt Qui Bestiam non adoraverant neque Imaginem ejus, neque acceperant Characterem ejus in frontibus suis aut in manibus suis. Annon hæc verba satis indicat hoc Christi Regnum Regno Bestiæ, Imagini & Stigmaticis ejus successisse? Quorsum enim illis Regni filii hoc elogium tribueretur, quod Bestiam non adoraverant, &c. nisi Bestia jam præcessisset? Sanè enim benemeritum remunerationem & præmium tempore antecedit. Jam verò Regnum isthoc (prout series narrationis indicat) Sanctis, ut fidei suæ & constantiæ præmium, tribuitur; idque causâ eorum priùs in solenni Judicio cognitâ; cujus utpote confessus iis verbis describitur, Et vidi thronos, & sederunt super eos, & judicium datum est illis, id est, potestas judicandi facta, &c. Ergò tempus quo Sancti, Bestiâ rerum potiunte, fidem & constantiam suam Deo approbârunt, Judicium antecessit; remuneratio decretum tum factum sequitur.

2. Idem porro adhuc magis apparet ex Pæane Presbyterorum & Animalium cantato ad excidium Babylonis cap. 19. 6. Ἀλληλῆα ὅτι ἐβασίλευσε Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ὁ πάντοτε ὢν. vers. 7. Gaudeamus, & exultemus, & demus gloriam ei; quia venerunt Nuptiæ Agni, & Uxor ejus præparavit seipsam. Nam quin idem sit utrobique Regnum nullus dubito.

3. Sed omnium clarissimè ex cap. 11. vers. 15, 16. &c. ubi ad septimæ Tubæ clangorem, Testium diebus, Bestiæque & Gentium mensibus decursis, in cælo acclamatum est, Facta sunt Regna hujus mundi Domini nostri & Christi ejus, & regnabit in secula seculorum. Et viginti quatuor Seniores in conspectu Dei sedentes in thronis suis, ceciderunt in facies suas, & adoraverunt Deum, dicentes, Gratias agimus tibi, Domine Deus omnipotens, qui es, qui eras, & qui venturus es; quia accepisti potentiam tuam magnam, & regnum inieris.

Hæc est illa consummatio Mysterii Dei per prophetas evangelizati, quam sub septimæ Tubæ clangorem Angelus suprâ, cap. 10. futuram prædixerat; quando nec Bestiæ Menses, nec Testium lugentium Dies, neque omnino aliquid de Periodo temporis, temporum, & dimidii temporis supererit ampliùs, ver. 6, 7. Planè juxta quod Danieli prædictum fuit, cap. 7. ver. 25, 26, 27. & antè, de Dominatu Christi Oecumenico, seu Regno Sanctorum post eadem Tempora, eundemque prorsus Judicii confessum, futuro. Item quod cap. 12. ver. 7. ubi idem qui hîc apud Joannem Angelus, eodem certè gestu, ritu, iisdemque ferè (quod summè notandum est) jurisjurandi verbis asseverasse legitur, Finito demum intervallo isto Temporis, Temporum, & dimidii * Temporis, dispersionem populi sancti, cumque ea simul Novissimum illud mirabilem,

illa gentium?
Luc. 21. 24?

Qui ulteriorem confirmationem hîc desiderat, etiam superioris Synchronismi characteres adhibeat: nam mutuas, ut dixi, præstant operas.

SYNCHRONISMUS VI.

NOVÆ JERUSALEM AGNI SPONSÆ CUM
SEPTIMA TUBA SEU INTERVALLO AB EXCIDIO BESTIÆ.

1. Nuptiæ Agni & Regnum illud augustum Domini Dei omnipotentis, ambo ineunt ab excidio Babylonis, unde init Tuba septima. Constat ex Hymno Presbyterorum & Animalium, quem in superiori Synchronismo laudavimus, ex cap. 19. v. 6, 7.

P p

Halleluja,

Pars II.

Hallelujah, quoniam regnum iniiit Dominus Deus noster omnipotens. Gaudeamus, & exultemus, & demus gloriam ei; quia venerunt Nuptiae Agni, & Uxor ejus preparavit se ipsam. At Nova Jerusalem est sponsa illa Agni, ornata & parata viro suo, cap. 21. v. 2. Et civitatem sanctam (inquit) Novam Jerusalem vidi descendentem à Deo de caelo, sicut sponsam ornata viro suo: & ver. 9. Veni, & ostendam tibi Sponsam Uxorem Agni, &c. Ergo & illa inibit & contemporabit Tubæ septimæ.

2. Nova Jerusalem est Civitas dilecta; at dilecta illa Civitas, statim atque finiuntur Mille anni, à novissimis illis Satanæ tunc laxati copiis circumvallari dicitur, cap. 20. v. 9. Et circuerunt Castra Sanctorum & Civitatem dilectam: ergo, jam antè exstitisse eam oportuit, dum adhuc Satan ligabatur. Hisce duobus argumentis, sive confirmandis, sive illustrandis & ornandis, duo alia visum est adjungere.

3. Effusa Phiala septimâ, quâ prorsus conficitur & aboletur Bestia, prodiit vox magna è Throno dicens, IEFONE, cap. 16. ver. 17. Itidem, Is qui insidebat Throno dicit Joanni spectanti Novam Jerusalem è caelo descendentem, [cap. 21. v. 5, 6.] Ecce nova facio omnia — IEFONE, Ego sum A & Ω; Initium & Finis. Ergo Nova Jerusalem Agni Sponsa iniiit ab ultimo termino Phialarum IEFONE, jam extinctâ Meretrice; atque ita contemporat Intervallo ab Excidio Bestiæ.

4. Unus ex Angelis Phialarum [cap. 17.] ostendit Joanni iudicium Meretricis, utpote dum Phialæ effunduntur, & ab illarum saltem una, peragendum, idemque Phialarum Angelus [cap. 21. v. 10.] monstrat eidem Joanni Sponsam Agni Civitatem magnam sanctam Jerusalem; utpote Phialis jam defunctis, hoc est, Bestiâ Babyloneque extinctis, conspicuam futuram.

SYNCHRONISMUS VII.

TURBÆ PALMIFERÆ INNUMERABILIVM OVANTIUM EX OMNIBUS GENTIBUS, TRIBUBUS, POPULIS, ET LINGUIS, Cap. 7. v. 9.
Cum

TUBA SEPTIMA SEU INTERVALLO AB EXCIDIO BESTIÆ.

1. Turba Palmifera proximè succedit Cœtui CXLIV M Signatorum: Cœtus autem iste (ex opposita Bestiæ, cui contemporavit, ut ratione, sic duratione, metiendus) cum Bestia quoque periodum suam complevit [Synch. IV. Part. I.] Ergo Turba Palmifera utrumque consequitur; ac proinde cadet in Tubam septimam, quod est Intervallum ab excidio Bestiæ.

2. Turba Palmifera sunt cives Novæ Jerusalem: de ambobus enim dicitur, quod non esurient, neque sitient, amplius, &c. quod Agnus pascet eos, & ducet eos ad vivos fontes aquarum; quodque abstersurus sit Deus omnem lacrymam ab oculis eorum. Jam Nova Jerusalem contemporavit Tubæ septimæ; ergo & Turba Palmifera.

EPOCHA APOCALYPSEOS.

Epocha Apocalypseos, quâ de futuris vaticinium est, sive eam initio Christianismi statueris, sive in Excidio Politicæ & Ecclesiæ Judaicæ, sive in eo temporis momento quo Revelatio Joanni facta est, seu quomodocunque statuatur (nolo enim interpretem agere, instituti mei memor;) quin indè sigillorum, quod ad res inibi gerendas, initium deducendum sit, dubitaturum arbitror neminem. Sed & ab eadem Epocha arcessendum esse secundæ quoque Prophetiæ seu Βιβλαειδ'is initium, si cui ipsa contextus verba de Prophetia repetenda, & quæ præterea disseruimus suprâ, ad Synch. VI. Part. I. & in vestibulo Part. II. non satis persuaferint; is vel Synchronismi necessitate eò tandem adigetur, si, juxta jam factas ἀποδείξεις, singulas prophetias ordine & loco suo disponere tentaverit.

CLAUSULA SYNCHRONISMORUM ET APOCALYPSEOS.

Mille annos Regni & damnationem Satanæ excipit Universalis Resurrectio mortuorum, & Judicium ultimum cum Gehenna, c. 20. à v. 11. ad fin.

Novam Jerusalem descriptam c. 21. excipit Paradisus, quam scilicet, Edenis instar, hinc atque hinc ambit Fluvius, in medio habentem Arborem vitæ: sic enim capio verba cap. 22. 2. Ἐν μέσῳ τῆς πλατείας καὶ τοῦ ποταμοῦ, ὅντε ὕδεν, καὶ ὅντε ὕδεν, scilicet, τῆς πλατείας, ξύλον ζωῆς. Atque hic finis Seculi & Apocalypseos.

Quod superest, Lector, en tibi Ordinem & Seriem juxta res gerendas omnium in Apocalypsi Vaticiniorum, in isthoc Schemate ad oculum delineatam, & uno intuitu spectandam: quod ad amussim Synchronismorum jam demonstratorum, in meum & (si patiaris) in tuum construxi usum. Retegat Deus oculos mentis utriusque nostrum, ut intueamur mirabilia ejus. A M E N.

COROLLARIUM DE USU CLAVIS.

1. EX jam dictis constare arbitror, Apocalypsin juxta literam tantummodo spectatam, ac si nuda quædam esset rerum gestarum Historia, non item Vaticinium mysticis allegoriis & typis involutum, signis tamen & characteribus ejusmodi à Spiritu S. per totam narrationem insertis instructam esse, ut indè legitima Visionum omnium, juxta res suo quasque tempore gerendas, Series, Ordo, Synchronismi, erui, componi, & demonstrari possint, absque interpretationis ullius datæ hypothesei aut adminiculo.

2. Tum præterea, prout in Historiis fieri consuevit, ut res plures diversæque à pluribus & diversis simul eodémque tempore gestæ, simul tamen narrari nequeant, sed seorsim & deinceps; ita quoque in Prophetiis istis & Visionibus rerum gerendarum (utut ordine longè commodissimo sapientissimoque patefactis) usu venire: ut omnino frustra sint qui Apocalypsin ita interpretatum eunt, quasi eventus eodem ubique ordine & serie sibi invicem succederent quo Visiones.

3. Visionum enimvero Apocalypticarum mentem feliciter indagaturo, principio earum ad se invicem juxta res gerendas Series & Connexio, ex memoratis characteribus & notis pervestigata, atque intrinsecis argumentis demonstrata, constituenda est tanquam omnis solidæ & legitimæ interpretationis basis & fundamentum. Non enim (quod à plurimis perperam factum cernimus) ad Interpretantis arbitrium, pro qualicunque interpretationis concinnitate, Ordo ipse confirmandus est; sed ad jam præstructam, per Synchronismorum characteres, Ordinis hujus chronici Ideam, omnis interpretatio, quasi ad normam & perpendiculum, exigenda.

4. Absque hujusmodi enim fundamento, vix est ut ex Apocalypsi quidquam eruas quod interpretationis & applicationis suæ solidè fidem faciat, quodque autoritate divinâ, sed mendicatis principiis & puris putis conjecturis nitatur humanis. Contrà verò admissio, cum jam temporis ordinisque septa licenter & pro libitu vagari Applicationem non permiserint, illico tot variantium, imò & pugnantium, interpretamentorum multivia maximam partem sublata miraberis; paucis omnino in quibus adhuc mens, de generali saltem applicatione, anceps hæreat, iisque minoris ferè momenti, differentiis relictis: Aded ut ex hoc libro deinceps, perinde atque ex reliquis Novi Testamenti libris, argumenta peti possint, in re etiam Prophetica, de interpretamento securo, quibuscque, tanquam Spiritus S. oraculis, non humani duntaxat ingenii inventis, fides acquiescat.

Pars II.

6. Et nè fortè dubites, an usquam in Apocalypsi ex omnibus illis Visionibus ullam reperire sit ejusmodi, in qua, eo quo dixi modo, pedem tutò figas, undèque, tanquam ex Statione aliqua aut Specula, reliquam dimetiaris Apocalypsin; ecce huic quoque rei à Spir. Sancto sapientissimo consilio prospectum, Illustri illâ Visione de magna METRICE, quam nimirum unicam & solam omnium Visionum Angelus prætermorem suum interpretatur Joanni. Quorsum autem, nisi ut per eam ad reliquas, alioquin inaccesas, tanquam per januam, aperiatur aditus? Quid vis ampliùs? Hæc igitur, invocato Patre luminum, intrato; ingressus, ad cætera referenda Clavem adhibeto. Experire, expertus fateberis, admirabilem esse hanc Prophetiam, quâcum, repentiùs introspectâ, nulla Veteris Testamenti (sic decuit Evangelium) nè quidem ipsius Danielis, aut singulari patefactionis artificio, aut interpretationis, viâ & ratione eruendæ, certitudine sit conferenda.

Id extremum te volo, Lector, qui in hæc incideris, ut si mihi assidenti quid fortè revelatum esse perspexeris, aut tibi ipsi aut aliis ad hæc mysteria profuturum, id totum Dei in me misericordiæ acceptum referas; cui & ego, ob tantillum sapientiæ ejus radiolum, grates persolvere nunquam desinam: sin quid aberratum sit, id solum meum esse memineris, hominis quantillarum virium, & nullatenus ad hæc (quod probè mihi conscius sum) ex meipso idonei.

LECTORI BENEVOLO

Salutem.

ANNUS jam quintus agitur, Leſtor benevole, cum CLAVEM meam APOCALYPTICAM primitus typis dederim; ſed propriis Impenſis, inque amicorum ſolummodo gratiam. Nihil tum cogitabam de interpretatione adornanda; utpote cui me, tot ab eruditione præſidiis quæ ad eam rem requiri videbantur deſtitutum, plane imparem fore exiſtimavi, neque etiamnum parem puto. Sed cum opusculum illud pluribus quam ſperaverim placuiſſe intelligerem, nonnullique inſtarent ut ipſe, juxta methodum in CLAVE mea monſtratam, quæ quibus eventis, rebusque geſtis vaticinia applicanda eſſent, manuſductionis vice indicare vellem: illis morem geſturus ſententiam meam breviter in chartas conjeſci; quodque inde natum fuit, SPECIMINA INTERPRETATIONUM APOCALYPTICARUM indigiti. Hoc cum multis lectum & deſcriptum, necnon eo favore ſuſceptum comperi, ut induſtria mea qualiſcunque pænitendi cauſam non haberem, animos tandem mihi fecit, textum Apocalypſicum κατὰ τὸν ὅρον interpretandi. In hoc incepto cum aliquoſque progreſſus eſſem, & prout quodlibet perfeceram, amicis legendum tranſmiſiſſem; factum eſt ut Commentationes meas, immaturas adhuc, necdum ad umbilicum perducitas, in publicum protruſerit nimia quorundam importunitas; qui utrum judicio ſuo, an curioſitati potius, hac in re indulſerint, equidem neſcio: illud tamen vere teſtari poſſum, admodum moleſtum mihi accidiſſe, a concepta in contrarium ſententia dimoveri, quodque ipſe non probaram, id aliorum voluntati gratificari; nedum ut ambitio ulla aut gloriola ſtadium me huc impulerit. Non quod aliis inviderem, ſi quid forte eruiſſem quo myſtica illius Scripturæ ſtudioſi (quos * beatos pronunciat Spir. S.) juvari poſſint; ſed quod melius fore ſtatuſſem, privata communicatione contentum deliteſcere, quam publica editione, tot variantia hominum judicia, tot præjudicis partiumque ſtudiis agitata, cum meo periculo experiri. Hoc te monitum velim. * Cap. I. 3.

Alterum eſt quod te rogem: ut (quoniam minime tibi ignotum ſit in quam lubrico verſer argumento, quamque ad vanitatem temeritatemque prono) ne ſingula rigida nimis cenſura æſtimes; illud pro certo habens, niſi in hiſce talibus liberius paulo ſentiendi, imo & errandi, venia concedatur, ad profunda illa & latentia veritatis adyta viam nunquam patefactum iri! Sicubi autem a communi ſententia nimium fortasſe tibi divertiffe videbor, ibi rem totam ad Eccleſia Catholica Reformata & virorum in ea doctorem tribunal deſero: quodque ab illis mature excuſſum erroris deprehenſum fuerit, a me neque diſtum neque ſcriptum amplius haberi velle ſcito. Patronum operi meo neminem delegi; neque enim ſcio an Patrono dignum ſit. Tu, Leſtor, ejus deſectum ſupplebis, ſi te, prout ſpero, candidum & benignum cenſorem præbueris. Quod quidem, ſi bonus es, vel hac benevolentia tua fiducia promeritus videbor. Vale.

COMMENTATIONUM APOCALYPTICARUM AD AMUSSIM CLAVIS APOCALYPTICÆ

Pars prima in Prophetiam primam,

quæ Sigillis & Tubis continetur; præmisso

De Theatro Apocalypico.

VISIONUM Apocalypicarum mentem indagaturo, primùm de Theatro illo cœlesti, quò Joannes eas, tanquam in Scena, spectaturus evocatur; deinde de ipsis sigillatim Vaticiniis, ad Clavem Apocalypiticam examinatis, mihi agendum est.

Christe, Dei Sapiaentia, cui Apocalypsis à Patre data est, ut indicares servis tuis res futuras, illumina jubare tuo mentem meam, immunditiem sanguine deterge. Da, Te favente, Spirituque duce, ab-
Apoc. 1.

THEATRUM Apocalypiticum voco Confessum istum augustum Dei Ecclesiæque, capite 4. descriptum, atque ad prisca illius in deserto cum Israele castrametationis * typum ad amussim conformatum: id quod utriusque ordinem inter se conferenti * Num. 1. ver. 52. indeq; ad finem cap. 2.

Siquidem in medio castrorum Israelis collocatum fuit Tabernaculum, ceu Thronus Dei. In circuitu Tabernaculi, proximè castra metabantur Levitæ. Post Levitas demum, ad quatuor cœli plagas, reliquus cœtus Israelis in quatuor Vexilla tributus; ternis nimirum tribubus sub uno Vexillo missis, atque à primaria cohortis suæ tribu nomen sortitis. Unumquodque autem Vexillum signum præferebat: cujus etiam si Moses generatim tantùm meminit, nec, quæ cuique Vexillo inscripta esset effigies, omnino exprimit; Hebræi tamen ex vetusta Majorum traditione, (hâc parte non temerè aspernandi) rem integrè descriptum eunt in hunc modum.

Ad Occidentem Vexillum Ephraimi, signo BOVIS.

Ad Austrum Vexillum Reubenis, signo HOMINIS.

Ad Septentrionem Danis, signo AQUILÆ.

* Gen. 49. 9. * Deut. 33. 17.

Quamobrem verò horum Animalium effigies reliquis in hunc usum prælatæ fuerint, si quis fortè curiosius quærit; præter eam quæ ex Judæ & Ephraimi saltem benedictionibus haud ineptè peti soleat, istiusmodi rationem Talmudici innuere videntur. Quatuor, inquit, sunt superbi (vel qui emineant) in mundo; LEO inter Feras, BOS inter Jumenta, AQUILA inter Volucres, & HOMO cui Deus supra omnes pulchritudinem largitus est, ut omnibus imperaret. Ut ut de ratione sit, firmari potest hæc Judæorum traditio ex quadruplici Cherubinarum facie (cave enim tot capita imaginis) apud Ezechielem; quibus nempe significatum est, quî iisdem vehebatur Dominum fuisse & Regem quatuor cohortum seu castrorum Israelis. Quemadmodum enim Principum quadrigæ dominorum suorum fulgent insignibus; ita hîc Cherubini signis JEHOVÆ Regis Tetrarchiarum Israelis. Neque difficile admodum fuerit, ex Ezechielis & Cherubinarum ad invicem in isthac visione positu, quam quæque Cherubinarum Schindler, pag. 266. d.

Atque eadem quidem ratio suadet ut illos quoque Cherubinos qui Arcam Dei in Templi adyto obumbrabant simili, hoc est, quadriformi, facie fuisse existimemus; præsertim cum de iis qui in Templi parietibus cælabantur rem ita se habuisse, testetur quod apud eundem de dimidiata ipsorum sculptura legitur cap. 41. v. 19. ubi, duabus faciebus, ut in ejusmodi cælatura necesse fuit, in plano parietis absorptis, reliquæ tamen duæ, HOMINIS & LEONIS, hinc inde versùs palmas utrinque ascriptas, eminuissè perhibeantur. Et quorsum, obsecro, sculperentur Cherubini aliâ formâ quam fuissent?

Adde, quòd de quatuor Animalibus istis, totidem Israelis cohortum insignibus, quidam accipiunt illud Psalmi 68. 11. הַיְיָ יֹשֵׁב בָּהֶם. quod quidem Hieronymus, in versione illa quæ ab Hebraica veritate nomen habet, ita transtulit, Animalia tua habitaverunt in ea; nimirum, ut præcessit, in hereditate tua, i. castris populi tui quem per Eremum deduxisti. Similiter Septuag. &, quæ inde expressa est, Vulgata habent τὰ ζῴα σου, Animalia tua. Et sanè de illo tempore hic agi, liquidò ostendit quod huic & præcedenti versui præmittitur: Deus, cum egredereris coram populo tuo, cum incederes per desertum; terra tremuit, etiam cæli distillaverunt à facie Dei, &c. Itémque quod subjungitur de pluvia munifica, pluvia, ni fallor, Mannæ; ideòque vertendum, Pluviam munificam, seu liberalem, sparsisti, Deus, [quæ] hereditatem tuam etiam laborantem confortasti. Nè illud quoque dicam, principium hujus Psalmi mutuatum ex ea præcationis formula quâ Moses [Num. 10.] in processione castrorum Israeliticorum usus fuerat, Surge, JEHOVAH, & dissipentur inimici.

Cap. 4.

2. ET fui, inquit Joannes, in Spiritu, & ecce Thronus positus erat in cælo, & supra Thronum sedens. 3. Et qui sedebat aspectu similis erat lapidi jaspidi & sardio; & iris erat in circuitu Throni aspectu similis smaragdo.

4. Et in circuitu Throni sedilia viginti quatuor; & super sedilia viginti quatuor Presbyteri sedentes, circumamicti vestimentis albis, & in capitibus suis habebant coronas aureas.

5. Et de Throno procedebant fulgura, & voces, & tonitrua; & septem lampades ignis erant ardentes ante Thronum, qui sunt septem spiritus Dei: erat etiam à fronte Throni tanquam mare vitreum simile crystallo.

6. In medio autem Throni & in circuitu Throni quatuor Animalia plena oculis antè & retrò. 7. Et Animal primum erat simile Leoni; & Animal secundum simile Bovi; & tertium Animal habens faciem quasi Hominis; & quartum Animal simile Aquilæ volanti.

8. Et quatuor Animalia, singula eorum, habebant alas senas in circuitu, & intus plena erant oculis; & non interquiescebant die & nocte dicentia, Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus Dominus Deus Omnipotens, qui erat & qui est & qui venturus est.

9. Et quando dabunt Animalia illa gloriam & honorem & gratiarum actionem sedenti super Thronum, viventi in secula seculorum; 10. Procident viginti quatuor presbyteri ante sedentem in Throno, & adorabunt viventem in secula seculorum, & projicient coronas suas ante Thronum, dicentes, 11. Dignus es, Domine Deus noster, accipere gloriam & honorem & virtutem: quia tu creasti omnia, & propter voluntatem tuam sunt & creata sunt.

Annon hic singula singulis respondent? Primum enim, Tabernaculum quod attinet, Thronum hic in medio positum, cui Deus infidebat, non aliud quàm Templum aut Tabernaculum fuisse (utriusque enim historiæ, quod observandum, accommodatur descriptio) ostendunt tum septem lampades ante ipsum ardentes, tum Mare illud vitreum crystallo simile: quorum illæ Candelabrum septem quoque lucernarum coram Adyto ardentium, hoc Labrum illud immane in Templo Solomonis Mare dictum repræsentat; repræsentat ; sed hoc discrimine, quòd illud Solomonis aneum fuit, nostrum verò ex vitrea pellucidâque materia. Nescio tamen an hîc alludi ad vetustius illud Mosaici Tabernaculi labrum fas sit suspicari : quandoquidem & illud ex speculari, nescio quâ, materiâ, videlicet ex speculis mulierum convenientium ad ostium Tabernaculi, conflatum fuisse perhibetur, Exod. 38. 8. Videtis autem Templum Dei Throni nomine insignitum Eia. 6. ver. 1. Vidi Dominum sedentem super solium excelsum & elevatum, & fimbrie ejus replebant Templum. Item Jerem. 17. 12. Solium gloriæ altitudinis à principio locus sanctuarii nostri. Et Ezech. 43. 7. Locus solii mei & locus vestigiorum pedum meorum, ubi habito in medio filiorum Israel in æternum, &c.

Ad Cap. 4.

Atque hujusmodi solium fuisse quod Joannes in medio Presbyterorum & Animalium positum vidit, passim pro concessio habet Apocalypsis. Ubinam enim ille Altare coram vidisset, sub eoque animas mactatorum propter Verbum Dei, cap. 6. 9. nisi in Templo ? Undenam illi Altare aureum thymiamatis ante Thronum, cap. 8. 3. ni Templum aut Tabernaculum Thronus iste fuisset ? Quidve aliud innuere volunt Quatuor cornua Altaris aurei quod est in conspectu Dei ? c. 9. 13. Quid Templum, Atria Templi & Altare, quâ calamo Angelico metienda, quâ foras ejicienda ? cap. 11. 1. Quid apertum Templum Dei in cælo, inibique Arca Testimonii visui exposita ? cap. 11. 19. Quid Angelii è Templo prodeuntes ? c. 14. v. 15, 17, 18. idque etiam in cælo ? v. 17. Quid Citharædi in crepidine Maris seu labri vitrei insistentes, atque ὀρνιθίων cantillantes ? c. 15. 2. & id quoque in cælo ? v. 1. Quid ibidem versu 5. Templum Tabernaculi Testimonii apertum in cælo ? idemque Templum v. 8. fumo impletum à Majestate Dei ? Rem verò extra omnem contradictionis aleam ponit illud cap. 16. v. 17. Et vox magna prodiit ἀπὸ τοῦ Ναὺ τοῦ θρόνου ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ, i. è Templo Calie Throno.

Porro in hoc Throno seu Templo, nè quid fortè hæreas, Locus sessionis Dei, seu (prout Hellenistæ, 1 Reg. 10. 19. de Solio Solomonis loquuntur) ὁ Θεὸς & τὸ καθίσθεις, interior illa & sanctissima Templi pars fuit, quâ Arca Fœderis cum Propitiatorio condebatur. Ibi nempe Deus habitare dicebatur & sedere inter Cherubinos gloriæ. Quâ demum ratione, tum hîc septem lampades, tum postmodum Altare aureum thymiamatis, rectè dicuntur fuisse ante Thronum, putà ante adytum Templi ; prout id de utrisque totidem planè verbis habetur, 2 Par. 4. 20. & 1 Reg. 6. 20. quorum priore Septuag. habent τὰς λύχνους κατὰ τὸ πρὸσωπον τοῦ θαλαίρου (sic Hebraicè vocatur adytum) altero, θυσιαστήριον κέειται κατὰ πρὸσωπον τοῦ θαλαίρου, mente juxta cum Apocalypsi, ἐνώπιον τοῦ θρόνου & ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ. Ità reliquæ sive Templi sive Tabernaculi partes Throno speciatim sic dicto partim pro fulcris, partim pro gradibus erunt, partim pro scabello : cujusmodi seu partes seu appendices habuisse legitur augustum illud Solium Solomonis. Hactenus de Throno.

2. Thronum autem proximè cingunt viginti quatuor Presbyteri, qui Episcopos exhibent & Antistites Ecclesiarum ; respondentque & loco & ordine Levitis & Sacerdotibus in castris Israelis ; numerusque eorum 24. totidem ephemeris Sacerdotum & Levitarum, seu, quod eodem redit, principibus ephemeriarum. Unde, præterquam quòd Deo proximi sunt, ipsi quoque thronos suos habent ; præterea * coronas gestant ; quæ sunt dignitatis & potestatis à Deo tributæ insignia.

3. Tertio, idoneo post Presbyteros intervallo, quâ lineæ per medium Throni ductæ bifecant Throni latera circumquaque ad quatuor cardines cœli, quatuor visebantur Animalia ; primum figurâ LEONIS, secundum BOVIS (nam μόχθος Hellenistis * bos est) tertium effigie HOMINIS, quartum AQUILÆ volantis : repræsentandis nimirum Ecclesiis Christianis juxta quatuor plagas mundi ; respondentque quatuor Castris Israeliticis, eorundem Animalium vexilliferis. Quod enim in textu Apocalypico aliquantò obscuriùs dicitur, ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ θρόνου, & ἐν κύκλῳ τοῦ θρόνου, in medio Throni, & in circuitu Throni, per figuram ἐν διαδοχῇ Hebræis familiarem exponi debet ; quasi nimirum dictum fuisset, ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ κύκλου (id est περιόλου) τοῦ θρόνου, in medio ipsius circuitus seu ambitus Throni ; idque in hunc sensum : Si Throno, utpote quadrato, figuram quadrangulam parallelam quo deceat à Throno & Presbyteris eum cingentibus intervallo circumducas, in medio vel ad medium uniuscujusque quadranguli laterum (nam ἐν μέσῳ distributivè sumendum) quatuor sese exhibebant Animalia ; nempe in medio cujuscunque lateris unum.

Porro Animalia ista describuntur plena oculis antè & retrò, senas insuper alas habentia in circuitu, easdemque intus oculorum plenas. Tot oculi multitudinem denotant hominum oculatissimorum, & scientiæ mysteriorum Dei plenissimorum ; cujusmodi in Animalibus sunt, id est, Ecclesiis, quas Animalia repræsentant. Alæ agilitatem & alacritatem ad Dei imperium exsequendum. Alæ oculatæ zelum cum scientia & fide conjunctum. Sex denique alæ in circuitu, quaquaversum volaturientes denotant, id est, ad Dei mandata universaliter & integrè implenda paratissimos.

Ad Cap. 5.

*Summa hymni illius Eucharistici quo Ecclesia in omnibus veteribus Liturgiis Deum concelebrat; cuius initium Ἄξιον ἐστὶν, &c.

Additur postremò, cujusmodi esset officium utrorumque, tam Animalium quàm Presbyterorum circa Thronum; nempe huiusmodi, ut quotiescunque datura essent Animalia gloriam & honorem & gratiarum actionem Sessori Throni, id est, quoties Ecclesie sacras synaxes facerent; toties viginti quatuor Presbyteri, pro muneris ratione Animalibus præeuntes, *procidere soliti sint coram Deo, dicentes, * Dignus es, Domine, qui accipias gloriam & honorem & virtutem, quia tu condidisti omnia, &c.* Hæc autem interpretatione admissa, dictio Joannis, quam plerique hæc solæcismi insimulant, quasi futuris δόξασι, προσῆται, προσκυνήσουσι, pro præteritis abutentem, facillè sese tuebitur; cùm Hebræis (quorum notione Apostolus passim utitur) futura denotare soleant actum solitum aut debitum: ita ut Joannes nequaquam hæc referre putandus sit quid tum in visione ab Animalibus & Presbyteris factum sit, sed quid pro re nata faciendum esset, quòdque ipse postmodum in progressu visionum, si quando Deum celebrandi occasio incidisset, ab iisdem factum vidit.

Atque ita (ut jam tandem finiam) Thronum in augusto hoc Confessu, Tabernaculo seu Templo; Presbyteros Levitis & Sacerdotibus; quatuor Animalia quatuor Castris Israeliticis respondere; id est, totum Confessum prisce illius Castrametationis in cremo imaginem esse, luculenter ostendisse mihi videor. Quæ res eò quidem fusiùs mihi pertractanda fuit, quoniam ab ejus potissimum cognitione plurimorum in Apocalypsi typorum rationem pendere animadverteram: id quod quemvis, re penitus inspecta, juxta mecum sensurum non dubitem.

Ad Cap. 5.

Theatro in hunc modum adornato, is qui Throno infidebat Librum intus & à tergo scriptum, septemque sigillis munitum, dextrâ manu porrigit; simulque Angelus in scenam prodiens, editâ voce promulgat, ut, si cui aperiendi eum facultas data sit, quò quæ in eo continerentur inspicere & legi possent, in manus sibi fumeret atque adniteretur; rem proculdubio, si perfecerit, omnibus rerum arcanarum studio flagrantibus pergratam facturum.

Atque revera Liber erat dignissimus, in quo resignando quis omnes ingenii & industriae suæ nervos contenderet; Codex utpote fatidicus seu consiliorum Dei, quo series & ordo rerum gerendarum ad secundum illum & gloriosum Christi adventum pertexebatur. Ejusmodi enim certè esse liquet quæ deinde sequitur gemina rerum futurarum Prophetia, quam Codex iste continebat. Quæ causa est, ni fallor, cur Joannes, Visiones suas expositurus, adventûs istius gloriosi hypotyposin, tanquam stadii Apocalyplici metam, fronti historiae suæ præscripserit. Ecce (inquit cap. I.) venit cum nubibus, & videbit eum omnis oculus, etiam qui eum transfixerunt, & plangent super eum omnes tribus terræ; quasi dicat, Hic scopus est, hæc meta, quas narrabo, Visionum.

Sed cùm nemo eorum qui in cælo, qui vè in terra, qui vè subter terram, Librum resignare potuerit, resque jam conclamata videretur, ita ut Joannes præ dolore in fletum erumperet: ecce Agnus, specie tanquam qui occisus fuerat, id est, obitæ mortis signa & cicatrices gerens, in medio Throni, Presbyterorum & Animalium surrexit, Librumque resignandum patefaciendumque recepit; putà qui solus omnium ejus rei facultatem promeruerat.

Mart. 13. 32.

Hoc autem viso, continuò Chorus Animalium & Presbyterorum, unà cum circumstantibus Angelis & omnibus in universum creaturis, hymnum Agno Patrique gratulabundi decantant. In quo illud solum in præsentì observare lubitum est, quòd facultatem Libri resignandi merito passionis Agni manifestò acceptum referant. Dignus es, inquit, aperire Librum & signacula ejus; quoniam occisus es, & redemisti Deo nos in sanguine tuo ex omni tribu & populo & lingua & gente. Quo fortasse lux fieri possit dicto Salvatoris nec dum passi nec glorificati, De die verò illa & hora (puta secundi adventûs sui, citiùsne an seriùs futurus sit) nemo novit, neque Angeli in cælo, neque Filius, sed Pater solus: quippe, nondum Apocalypsin Christo à Patre datam, neque ordinem rerum ad adventum ipsius gerendarum patefactum fuisse. Nihil temere assero; rem secum Lector expendat.

Agno sic Librum resignante, ad singula ejus Sigilla singulæ rerum futurarum imagines exhibentur: quarum systema totum stadium Apocalypticum percurrit, adeoque primam Prophetiam universalem constituit. Cujus nunc interpretationem, Sessore Throni & Agno faventibus, aggrediemur.

De duabus Prophetiis Apocalypticis.

Prophetia prima, SIGILLORUM, complectitur fata Imperii; altera, ΒΙΒΛΑΡΙΔΙΟΥ, fata Ecclesiae seu Religionis Christianae: donec tandem utrumque coaluerit in Ecclesia regnante; factis regnis hujus mundi Domini nostri & Christi ejus. Quemadmodum enim in V. T. Daniel, secundum Imperiorum successiones, tum Christi adventum praesignavit, tum Ecclesiae Judaicae fata digessit: ita rem Christianam Apocalypsis, Romani, quod adhuc post Christum superfuturum esset, Imperii rationibus admetiri censenda est. Nec eventus abnuit. Primae enim Prophetiae interpretatio ex generali hac hypothese sic procedit.

De Prophetia prima, quae Sigillorum est: primoque,
De sex primorum Sigillorum significatis.

Septem sigillorum in universum scopus est, ut, discriminatis per eventorum characterestemporis fluxuri intervallis, indicetur, cujusmodi Imperii Romani casuum ordine decurso, futurum esset ut Christus mundi numina, quibuscum bellum susceperat, debellaret: sextâ nimirum vice, seu sexto Sigillo, Gentilis Imperii Romani Deos; septimo autem, cum Tubarum series ad novissimam pervenerit Tubam, quicquid etiam postea ibidem de novo subortum fuisset, aut uspiam adhuc in mundo esset, idolorum & demonum cultus destructum & deletum iri: nam oportet eum regnare, usquequo ponat omnes inimicos sub pedes suos, id est, omnem principatum, potestatem, & virtutem adversariam aboleverit. I Cor. 15. 24, 25. De priore periodo, prout ordo postulat, primo loco agemus.

Vid. Just. Mart.
Apol. 2. pag.
82. & Dial. cum

Prima igitur sex Sigilla, sextuplici eventorum characterem, (iis haud multum dissimilium quæ Servator, etiam tempori ruinæ Hierosolymorum designando, præstituerat) totidem distinguunt stantis adhuc & florentis Imperii Romani intervalla; quoad tandem sexto Christus potestatem idolorum & Deastrorum Gentilium in orbe illo funditus demoliretur. Characteres autem voco Casus Romani Imperii admodum insignes, quibus, tanquam emblematis, intervalla discernantur; eosque in prima hac periodo, non foris à Barbaris gentibus illatos, (cujusmodi erunt Imperii sub septem Tubarum plagis postmodum ruentis) sed casus intestinos, in ipsoque Imperio natos. Quod quidem discrimen idcirco à Spiritu S. institutum, uti dissimilibus notis dissimilia rei Romanae, hic vigentis, illic occidentis, tempora describantur.

Illud porro hic observandum venit: Cum Characteres isti casuum, quos dixi, vix aut rarè totum Sigilli intervallum pervadant, eoque intervallis suis certo initio & fine circumscribendis neutiquam per se sufficiant; propterea Spiritum S. in quatuor primis Sigillis (ubi id maxime, tum ob causam jam dictam, tum ob intervallorum inæqualitatem, opus foret) quatuor Animalia porro in eam rem adhibuisse; quorum unumquodque indicaret Sigilli Epocham cardini suo competentem. Id quomodo fiat, mox videbimus: nunc monuisse sat est.

1. ET vidi cum aperuisset Agnus unum ex septem Sigillis, & audiui unum ex quatuor Animalibus dicens, tanquam vocem tonitruum, Veni & vide. 2. Et vidi, & ecce Equus albus; & qui sedebat super illum habebat arcum, & data est ei corona; & exivit vincens, & ut vinceret.
3. Et cum aperuisset Sigillum secundum, audiui secundum Animal dicens, Veni & vide. 4. Et exivit alius Equus rufus; & qui sedebat super illum, datum est ei ut tolleretur pacem de terra, & ut invicem sese interficiant; & datus est ei gladius magnus.
5. Et cum aperuisset Sigillum tertium, audiui tertium Animal dicens, Veni & vide: Et vidi, & ecce Equus niger; & qui sedebat super illum habebat stateram in manu sua.
6. Et audiui vocem in medio quatuor Animalium dicentem, Chœnix tritici denario, & tres chœnices hordei denario; & vinum & oleum nè leseris.
7. Et cum aperuisset Sigillum quartum, audiui vocem quarti Animalis dicentem, Veni & vide. 8. Et ecce Equus pallidus; & qui sedebat super eum, nomen illi MORS, & Infernus sequebatur eum: & data est illis potestas super quaternitatem terræ interficiendi gladio, fame, & morte, & bestiis terræ.

Primus Imperii Romani casus, & sanè insignis, primordium est VICTORIÆ Christi; quā Dii Romani debellari, eorumque cultores, sagittis Evangelii confixi, passim deficere, Christoque victori colla submittere incipiunt. Ἐξήλθε (inquit) νικῶν, καὶ (N. B.) ἡ νικῶσα. id est, Nondum jam plenè vicit, sed fundamenta jecit victoriæ, deinde magis magisque complendæ.

Hujus Sigilli index est Animal primum, effigie Leonis, statione ad Orientem: monstratque ex suo cardine prodire Equitem, id est, Imperatorem, à cujus in equum ascensu ad equitandum, id est, imperii ingressu, ineundum sit primi Sigilli intervallum; nempe ab exaltatione gloriosa Domini nostri Jesu Christi: cujus ab Oriente Imperatoris ductu & auspiciis bellum hoc geritur, victoriæque vincitur. Sequentium quidem Sigillorum initia Imperatoribus Romanis diriguntur; sed ubi Christi res gesta describitur, ejus solius Imperatoris ratio habenda fuit.

Jam verò, hoc Sigillo circumacto, Deorum oracula per totum orbem Romanum obmutuere; & Joannes, duodecim Christi Apostolorum ultimus, expletis militiæ suæ stipendiis, ex hac vita commigravit, coronam immarcescibilem in cœlis, unā cum coapostolis fratribus suis, ob rem fortiter & feliciter gestam, accepturus.

Quòd autem equo vehi potestatis symbolum sit, eorumque qui rerum habenas moderantur, vel ex Hellenistarum interpretatione Psal. 45. 5. videre est; quibus Prosperare & equita est, κατενοδῶ καὶ βασιλεύω, prosperè procede & regna: neque ab hoc sensu abit Chaldaeus, qui transfert, ut equites super thronum regni. Itā Mulier Bestiæ inequitans c. 17. exponitur ab Angelo πόλις ἡ ἔχουσα βασιλείαν. eadēque notione adhibetur equitandi verbum, Deut. 32. v. 13. Εἰς. 58. v. 14. Psal. 66. 12.

De SIGILLO II.

Secundus Imperii Romani casus memorabilis, secundi Sigilli emblemata, est Ἀλλο-λοσφαιγία; Cædes & laniena intestina; cui vix alia similis in omni historia Romana. Et datum est, inquit, sedenti in hoc Equo, ut auferat pacem à terra (id est, ut, illo Sessore, pax à terra auferatur,) καὶ ἡ ἀλλήλους σφαλίωσι, & ut se invicem homines mactarent. Quæ postrema sententiæ pars firmat explicationem prioris. Nam quo demum sensu caperentur ista, datum esse sedenti in equo, ut homines se invicem interficerent? nisi, datum esse, seu factum, ut, eo quidem sessore, homines mutuis cædibus & lanienis sævirent.

Sigilli hujus index est Animal secundum, effigie Bovis, situ ad Occidentem: dumque in Visione ad se respiciendum jubet, eo monet, Sigillum hoc inire cū Trajanus Hispanus rerum habenas capefferet, Imperator ab Occidente. Dion; Trajanus homo Hispanus, nec Italus erat nec Italicus: ante eum nemo alterius nationis Imperium Romanum obtinuerat. Atqui ab eo deinceps in eadem generis serie regnatum est ad Commodum usque, ubi Sigilli hujus intercapedo definit.

λοσφαιγίας casum. Res verò gesta est, tum Trajano tum successore ejus Hadriano Imperii clavum tenentibus, à Gentibus & Judæis, tunc unā per orbem Romanum cohabitantibus. Quid sub Trajano factum, cape non meis, sed junctis Dionis & Orosii verbis. Incredibili, inquit Orosius, motu sub uno tempore Judæi, quasi rabie efferati, per universas terrarum partes exarserunt. Nam & per totam Libyam adversus incolās atrocissima bella gesserunt: quæ adeò tunc, interfectis cultoribus, desolata est, ut nisi postea Hadrianus Imperator collectas illuc aliunde colonias deduxisset, vacua penitus, abraço habitatore, mansisset. Qui circa Cyrenem habitabant, (Dion loquitur) Andream quodam duce, Romanos pariter atque Græcos concidunt, vescuntur eorum carnibus, eduntque viscera; tum oblinuntur eorum sanguine, & pellibus induuntur. Multos à vertice ferris discidere medios, multos objecere bestiis, multos etiam certare inter se coegerunt; ita ut interierint hominum ad DUCENTA VIGINTI MILLIA. Pergit; Præterea in Ægypto consimilis cædes facta est, & in Cypro, Artemione duce; ubi etiam perierunt DUCENTA QUADRAGINTA MILLIA. Salaminem urbem Cypri, interfectis omnibus accolis, deleverunt. [Orof. Euseb.] In Alexandria autem commissō prælio victi & attriti sunt. [Orof.] Tandem & ab aliis, & maximè à Lysio, quem Trajanus miserat, subacti sunt. In Mesopotamia tamia quoque rebellantibus, jussu Imperatoris bellum illatum est. [ Oros. Euseb. ] Atque ita multa millia eorum vastâ cade deleta sunt.

Ad Cap. 6.

Hactenus quæ sub Trajano. Sed an, inquires, quicquam sub Hadriano cum istis conferendum? Fuerintne paria, Lector judicet: audeo dicere, haud multò minora. Nec dum enim aliquid de rebellionem ista famigerata, BARCHOCHÉBA Pseudomessia duce, retulimus. Audi igitur illam quoque ejusdem Dionis verbis: Cum, inquit, Hadrianus in Urbem Hierosolymam coloniam deduxisset, ac quo loco Dei Templum fuerat, alterum Jovi Capitolino edificari curavisset; magnum & diuturnum bellum inde moveri ceptum, totam Judeam commoveri, Judeos omnes ubique gentium tumultuari, multa damna occultè apertèque Romanis inferre, cumque iis complures alias gentes lucri cupiditate conjungi, atque ea de re omnem ferè orbem terrarum commotum esse. Pergit; Hoc Hadrianus, optimis quibuscque ducibus adversus eos missis, sed (multitudine eorum & desperatione cognita) non nisi singulatim eos adorari ausis, serò tandem oppressit fregitque; cæsis in excursionibus præliisque non minùs QUINGENTIS ET OCTOGINTA MILLIBUS. Eorum autem qui fame, morbo, & igne interiere, tanta fuit multitudo, ut numerus indagari non potuit. Sed num ea victoria Romanis facilis fuit & incruenta? Minimè verò: tot enim, ait, ex Romanis quoque in eo bello periere, ut Hadrianus, cum scriberet ad senatum, non est usus illo exordio quo uti Imperatores consueverunt, SI VOS LIBERIQUE VESTRI VALETIS, BENE EST, EGO QUIDEM ET EXERCITUS VALEMUS. Hæc ille de motu Judæorum sub illo Stellæ, ut vocarunt, seu mavis, Stellionis filio: quem Eusebius porro scribit nolentes sibi Christianos adversum Romanum militem ferre subsidium omnimodis cruciatibus necavisse.

Quòd si cui lubitum est Judæos ipsos audire cladem suorum æstimantes; author libri Juchasin scribit Hadrianum duplo plures Judæos in hoc bello trucidasse quàm egressi sint ex Ægypto. Alius libro qui inscribitur מלכ'י רומ, quem Drusius laudat, narrat, Non sic affixisse eos Nebuchadnezzarem neque Titum, sicut Hadrianus Imperator. Pag. 125. Adeò hæc clades tribulationis istius inaudita, quam Servator Judæis eventuram prædixerat, gravissimus omnium paroxysmus fuisse videtur; ideòque non immerito cum tam gentis, quàm tam illustri complementi nomine præcelluerit, secundo huic intervallo signando præ aliis omnibus illius temporis eventis à Spiritu Sancto electus.

De SIGILLO III.

Hujusce autem Sigilli rem plerique Famem esse volunt, sive annonæ caritatem; ducto argumento tum à colore Equi nigro, tum ab indicatura frumenti, Chanix tritici denario, & tres chanices hordei denario: cui quoque trutinam in manu Sessoris inservire putant; quippe non tam mensurandam quàm appendendam præ nimia penuria annonam.

Et sanè hanc interpretationem (adeò primâ fronte concinna est visa) nunquam in dubium vocâssem, si eventus ei respondisset. Sed nihil hoc ævo, hæcque Sigillorum serie de Fame reperio singulare, & characteris officio dignum. Nam quod ex Tertuliano ad Scapulam affertur, id nequaquam magni ducendum arbitror. Neque enim si, quod ille perhibet, messis aliquando Hilariano præside in Africa defecerit, illico id aut generale per orbem Romanum fuerit, aut Severi ævo. Hinc factum, dum Symboli rationem paulò propiùs intueor, ut aliò potiùs spectare, haud omnino vanis indiciis, colligere mihi visus sim. Quippe non, ut illa interpretatio exposcit, statim cum Chanice satis aptè componi posse videtur; quum Libra ponderando, Chanix verò mensuræ nomen sit. Præterea, quum reliquorum Sigillorum significatis admodum congruat conditio Animalis indicantis; Victoria, Leonis; Maestationi, Bovis; subsequenter Sigilli Cadaveribus, Aquila; hinc nulla futura esset societatis ratio. Quæ enim Homini cum Fame convenientia? Color verò niger nec naturâ suâ, nec veterum Prophetarum usu, uni fami alligatus est, sed æquè tristitiæ, squalori & terrori figurando inservit.

Sit igitur hujusce Sigilli Res, non Famæ aut annonæ caritas, sed JUSTITIÆ per orbem Romanum procuratio & severitas, præ quàm in ullo retro aut subsequentium intervallorum, insignis & notabilis. Nam quod ad figuram attinet, color Equi

Justitia severitati convenit. Libram esse Justitiæ symbolum, translatitium est; ut hodieque Justitiam cum Libra pingi nemo nesciat. Illud verò quod de indicatura subjungitur, si auscultes, ita tinnire videbitur; Nè cuiquam tritici aut hordeum, nisi justo pretio persoluto, aufero: similem quoque justitiæ legem in vino & oleo servato: quasi nimirum contra fures caveret, & dixisset, Nè furator. Denarius enim fuit operis diurni merces ordinaria, quod ex * Evangelio liquet; fuit etiam diurnum stipendium militum. * Chœnix significat demensum diurnum, ἡμεροεσιδα, sed incertâ admodum mensurâ: variavit enim pro ratione gentium, locorum & hominum. Chœnix militaris (ut minores chœnices prætermittam, opilionum, villicorum, vinitorum) quatuor fuit sextariorum. Sed veteri Lexicographo Græcolatino χοῖνιξ est semimodium, id est, militaris duplum: imò Hellenistis Ezech. 45. 10, 11. Χοῖνιξ est Bathus, amplissima Hebræorum mensura. Ex tam incerta Chœnicis mensura quæ potest aliquid de fame & annonæ caritate exculpi? Chœnicem igitur hic accipio pro quolibet demenso diurno, & Denarium pro quolibet demenso pretio. Ità interpretationis quam dedi ratio constabit.

Jam eventus, mirum est, quàm interpretationi faveat, rerum potiuntibus Severo & Alexandro, maximè inclytis Equi nigri sessoribus. De Severo quæ sparsim apud Aurelium legas, retentis Authoris verbis, in unum colligam; idem postmodum Lampridio facturus de Alexandro. Severo, inquit Aurelius, præclarius in republica fuit nemo, legum conditore longè æquabilium. Implacabilis delictis, strenuum quemque præmiis extollebat. Nulli in dominatu suo permisit honores vendari. Nè parva quidem latrocinia impunita patiebatur, in suos animadvertens magis, quod vitio ducum aut etiam præfectorum fieri vix experiens intelligeret. Aurelio adstipulatur Spartianus, dum eum & implacabilem delictis, & latronum ubique hostem vocat.

Sed hæc nullo numero fuerint præ iis quæ de Alexandro Mammeæ filio Lampridius; in quibus proinde characteris hujus Sigilli summa collocanda videtur. Is, inquit, leges de jure populi & fisci moderatas & infinitas sanxit, neque ullam constitutionem sacrauit sine viginti jurisperitis. Severissimus iudex contra fures, appellans eos. Nem quotidianorum scelerum reos, & damnans acerrimè; ac solos hostes inimicòsque reipublicæ vocans, jussit (de iudicibus furibus, ni fallor, loquitur) in civitatibus nunquam videri, & si essent visi, deportari per rectores provinciarum. Referebat, inquit, Eucolpius, (quo ille familiarissimè usus est) illum, si unquam furem iudicem vidisset, paratum habuisse digitum ut illi oculum erueret. Addit Septimius, qui vitam ejus non mediocriter exsequutus est, tanti stomachi fuisse Alexandrum in eos iudices qui futurorum famâ laborassent, etiamsi damnati non essent, ut si eos casu aliquo videret, commotione animi stomachi cholera evomeret, toto vultu exardescente, ut nihil possit loqui. Jussit imò per præconem edici, ut nemo saluaret principem qui se Furem esse nõsset, nè aliquando detectus capitali supplicio subderetur. Pergit; Si quis militum de via in alicujus possessionem deflexisset, pro qualitate loci, aut fustibus subiciebatur in conspectu ejus, aut virgis, aut condemnationi; aut, si hæc omnia transiret dignitas hominis, gravissimis contumeliis; cum diceret, Visne in agro tuo fieri quod alteri facis? clamabátque sapius, quod à quibusdam sive Judæis sive Christianis audierat, & tenebat, idque per præconem, cum aliquem emendaret, dici jubebat, QUOD TIBI FIERI NON VIS, ALTERI NE FECERIS. Quam sententiam usque adeò dilexit, ut & in palatio, & in publicis operibus præscribi juberet.

Potest & hæc tritici & hordei, &c. indicatura de procuratione rei frumentariæ per hæc tempora insigni intelligi. Nam videri potest hanc quoque verbis istis inesse mentem; Ità rei frumentariæ de copia prospiciendum esse, ut annona æquo, & cui quisque solvendo sit, pretio vaneat. Chœnix tritici Denario, i. Demensum diurnum tritici diurno laboris pretio aut stipendio aut redditu venditor: ut nè scilicet cui opus sit, plus dietim ad victum erogare quàm ei dietim suppetat erogandum. Illud quoque, Tres Chœnices hordei denario, videri possit ad æquationem pretii, pro qualitate mercium, pertinere. Si cui istiusmodi interpretatio placuerit, eventus hic quoque ad amussim respondebit.

Spartianus de Severo; Rei, inquit, frumentariæ, quam minimam repererat, ita consuluit, ut excedens ipse vitâ septem annorum Canonem populo Romano relinqueret: ita ut quotidiana septuagena quinque millia modiorum expendi possent. Populo Romano

Quasi nimirum implere voluisset quod hic adjicitur, Καὶ τὸ ἐλαίον καὶ τὸ οἶνον μὴ ἀδικήσῃς, In oleo quoque & vino nè sis injustus. Similia habet Lampridius de Alexandro: Commeatum, inquit, populi Romani sic adjuvit, ut cum frumenta Heliogabalus evertisset, vicem de propria pecunia loco suo reponeret. Oleum quoque, inquit idem, quod Severus populo dederat, quodque Heliogabalus imminuerat, integrum restituit, addidit & oleum luminibus Thermarum.

De SIGILLO IV.

Sigilli quarti index est quartum Animal, effigie Aquilinâ, statione ad Aquilonem: quo monstratur, initium Sigilli ducendum ab Imperatore illic oriundo, id est, Maximino Thrace Septentrionis alumno. Julius Capitolinus; Maximinus de vico Thraciæ vicino Barbaris, Barbaro etiam patre & matre genitus.

Hujus Sigilli character est Concursus GLADII, FAMIS & PESTIS unâ, ut aliàs nunquam, sævientium. Unde Equi sessori Mortis, id est, notione Hebræorum, qui abstractis pro concretis utuntur, Θανατοφόρος, seu Mortiferi nomen inditum esse dicitur, eò quod tot Mortes secum in Orbem inveharet. Nam iisdem quoque Hebræis, Prophetis præsertim, nomine vocari idem quandoque valet atque esse vel existere, sed eximio & præcipuo quodam modo: ut Esa. 7. 14. & 9. 5. Jerem. 23. 6. & 20. 3. Zach. 6. 12. & hic in Apocalypsi cap. 19. 13. adeò ut Mortis nomen habere nihil aliud hoc loco sit, quàm esse singulariter & insigniter Θανατοφόρον vel Mortiferum: cui rei quoque est illud, quod Orcus eundem tanquam libitinarius comitetur.

Jam de eventu videamus. Et sanè nunquam ex quo Sigilla cœpere, hæc tria junctim tamque insigni modo sæviere. A Cæde incipiam, & omitto quæ ab externo hoste De Gladio pertulit hoc ævum, sanè gravissima; Barbaris universum ferè imperium, sub Gallo & Volusiano Imperatoribus, rapinis & cædibus exhaurientibus: non enim ista in hunc censum veniunt; quærimus intestina & domestica. Decem igitur plùs minùs Imperatores & Cæsares, qui legitimi habentur, Sigilli hujus intercapedine, id est, triginta trium aut paulò plurium annorum spatio, gladius, non hostium, sed suorum, absumpsit. Per idem intervallum, sub unius Gallieni Imperio, triginta illi Tyranni, de quibus Pollio, aut uno aut altero fortè pauciores, in diversis orbis Romani partibus exorti sunt: atque hi plerique omnes aut à suis, aut à se invicem cæsi, aut ab Imperatoribus legitimis trucidati fuere: ut non immeritò de hac plaga dixerit Orosius, eam non per vulgi cædem, sed per vulnera mortisque Principum exaltatam esse.

Denique Imperatores ipsi, primus Maximinus, & in novissimis Gallienus, quantâ sævitiâ fuere? Maximinus, Julio Capitolino teste, tam crudelis fuit, ut illum alii Cyclopem, alii Eufriidem, alii Scironem, nonnulli Phalarin, multi Typhonem vel Gygem nominarent. Senatus eum tantum timuit, ut vota in Templis publicè privatimque, mulieres etiam cum suis liberis, facerent, nè ille unquam Urbem Romam videret. Audiebant enim alios in crucem sublato, alios animalibus nuper occisis inclusos, alios feris obiectos, alios fustibus elisos; atque omnia hæc sine delectu dignitatis. Pergit idem: Ignobilitatis tegendæ causâ, omnes conscios generis sui interemit; nonnullos etiam amicos, qui ei sæpe misericordiæ & pietatis causâ pleraque donaverant; neque enim fuit crudelius animal interris. Denique, inquit, sine judicio, sine accusatione, sine delatore, sine defensione omnes (factionis Magni cujusdam, viri consularis) interemit, omnium bona sustulit, & plus quatuor millibus hominum occisis se saturare non potuit.

Audi etiam quid de Gallieno Trebellius Pollio, libro de 30. Tyrannis. Occiso, inquit, Ingenno, qui à Mæsiacis legionibus Imperator est dictus, in omnes Mæsiacos, tam milites quàm cives, asperrimè sæviit, nec quemquam suæ crudelitatis exsortem reliquit: usque adeò asper & truculentus, ut plerasque Civitates vacuas à virili sexu relinqueret. Idem in vita Gallieni: Scythiis, inquit, in Cappadociam pervadentibus, milites iterum de novo Imperatore faciendo cogitaverant; quos omnes Gallienus more suo occidit. Ad-dit in fine: Fuit nimis crudelitatis in milites: nam & ternâ millia, & quaternâ millia singulis diebus occidit. Refert quoque in eadem Gallieni vita Pollio memorabile admodum lanienæ Byzantinæ exemplum, quâ à militibus, quâ ab ipso Gallieno editum. Nè quid, inquit, mali deesset Gallieni temporibus, Byzantinorum Civitas, clara navalibus bellis, & claustrum Ponticum, per Gallieni milites itâ omnis vastata est, ut prorsus nemo superesset. Quorum cladi ulciscendæ, Gallienus vicissim Byzantio receptus, omnes mi-lites

De Fame.

Habes de Cædibus: ad PESTEM venio, quæ hic ex usu Orientis θάνατος dicitur. Ità Chaldaus Paraphrastes pro כָּרָר peste amat ponere מֹרֶת mortem, & Hellenistæ plerumque vertunt θάνατος, similisque notione Ecclesiasticis scriptoribus mortalitas dici solet; quæ jam in multas linguas vernaculas migravit. De Peste autem res adeò notoria est & manifesta, ut oraculi fidei astruendæ non opus sit multa congerere: verbo expediam. Zonaras author est, nec cæteri tacuere, sub Gallo & Volusiano Imperatoribus Pestem ab Æthiopia exortam omnes Romanas provincias pervasisse, & per quindecim continuos annos incredibiliter exhaustisse. Nec alia unquam major lues mihi lecta (inquit vir nostro ævo celebris) spatio temporum, sive terrarum.

Apud Euseb. Histor. lib. 7. c. 17.

Supereft adhuc ex triga illa calamitatum FAMES. Quam quidem ab hoc ævo abesse non potuisse, etiamsi nemo veterum id prodidisset, quivis indè colligat, quòd omne ferè Imperium à Scythis per hæc tempora rapinis & vastationibus adeò attonsum & attritum sit, ut nulla, si Zosimo fides, Romanae ditionis gens ab iis libera permanserit; omnia ferè oppida manibus destituta, & iisdem destitutorum maxima pars capta fuerint. Qui fieri potuit ut non hujusmodi vastationibus defererentur agri, negligenter aratio, & quicquid uspiam erat ad victum repositorum pessundaretur?

Atque ità quidem reverà evenisse, liquet ex Dionysii Alexandrini, qui tum vixit, epistola ad fratres; ubi diram istam, de qua egimus, Luem bello & fami successisse testatur. Post hæc, inquit, id est, persecutionem quæ sub Decio fuit, (nam eam intelligit quæ præcessit pestem) & πόλεμος & λιμός ἐπέλαθεν, & Bellum & Fames secuta sunt, quæ unà cum Ethnicis pertulimus, & paucis interjectis, At ubi, inquit, cum nos, tum ipsi respiraveramus, invasit Lues ista; res illis quovis terrore terribilior & calamitate quacunque lamentabilior, nobis verò exercitatio & exploratio nullis reliquis inferior. Ad stipulatur Cyprianus Apologià ad Demetrianum: Cum dicas, inquit, plurimos conqueri, quòd bella crebrius surgant, quòd LUES, quòd FAMES sevant, quòdque imbres & pluvia serena longa suspendant, nobis imputari, tacere ultra non oportet, &c.

De Bestiis autem quod porò in textu additur; si quidem à superioribus diversum sit, & non potiùs innuat, Tyrannos, qui instar Ferarum per ea tempora in Orbe Romano sævirent, calamitatibus istis causam daturos; indicabit solenne Orientalibus & Australibus regionibus in hoc casu malum: ut nimirum Fame & Peste sævientibus, Bestiæ contra homines invalescerent, eosque occiderent; ut videre est Levit. 26. Ezech. 14. 15. 21. Sed priori sententiæ magis favet Syntaxeos mutatio, & ὑπὸ τῶν θηρίων ᾗς, si reddas, atque id per Bestias terræ.

Tò τέταρτον ᾗς, quartam partem terræ, in quam Orco & Morti potestas sæviendi data fuisse dicitur, (nisi si quis vulgatum Interpretem hinc defendi posse putet, apud quem τέταρτον ᾗς est τετραδίων, id est, quaternio, seu quatuor partes, terræ) expono de potissima & multò maxima Orbis Romani parte. Quum enim tertia pars terræ (ut suo loco dicetur) Orbis Romani amplitudinem designet, consequens est, quartam terrarum partem esse eandem Ditionem Romanam quartâ parte minùs: eoque trigam istam seu quadrigam calamitatum tres Orbis Romani quadrantes pervasisse, hoc est, ferme totum, unico tantum quadrante ejus immuni. Et certè Orosius astruere videtur, Pestem non ultra sese extendisse quàm (ut ejus verbis utar) ad prostigandas Ecclesias edita Decii cucurrerunt. De cæteris nihil habeo dicere. Atque hac de quarto Sigillo.

De SIGILLO V.

DUO quæ sequuntur Sigilla nullum habent, ut superiora, de exordii sui tempore ab Animalibus subsidium; proindèque nulli hinc equorum Sessores videndi amplius, unde illud Animalium indicium pendebat. Utriusque igitur intervallum illic auspicandum est ubi antecedentis Sigilli casus defierit. Quod quidem facile admodum sit, ubi casus, ut hinc, ejusmodi fuerint, ut eorum determinatio ob insignem evidentiam latere nequiret.

Quintum proinde Sigillum inibit ab Imperio Aureliani, anno CC LXVIII. ad quod tempus, quæ diutissima fuit prioris Sigilli calamitatum, quindecim annorum Pestis extincta est.

Jam maximè insignis sub hoc Sigillo rei Romanæ casus, quique omnibus aliis illius temporis eventis præcelluerit, est PERSECUTIO illa Christianorum à Diocletiano

cletiano incepta, ab aliis continuata, longè omnium quæ unquam fuerant acerbissima. Nihil præ isthac viderunt priora secula, Omnibus ferè antea (verba sunt Orosii) diuturnior & immanior fuit. Nam per decem annos incendiis Ecclesiarum, proscriptionibus innocentium, cadibus Martyrum incessabiliter acta est. Initio statim decennii istius, intra dies triginta ad septendecim hominum millia mactata feruntur, nec progressu temporis mitigavit persequentium furor. In una Ægypto (quantulâ Romani Imperii particulâ?) si Domino Ignatio Patriarchæ Antiocheno, apud * Scaligerum, fides, mactata sunt centena & quadraginta quatuor hominum millia; septingenta autem in exilium acta: unde Æra Diocletiana apud Ægyptios nomen invenerit, ut hodièque Æra Martyrum nuncuparetur. Quid jam censes factum in reliquis per orbem Romanum provinciis? Omnis ferè sacro Martyrum cruore orbis infectus est, inquit Sulpitius Severus. Nullis unquam bellis mundus sanguine magis exhaustus est, neque majori unquam (verba sunt ejusdem) triumpho Ecclesia vicit, quàm cum decem annorum stragibus vinci non potuit.

Est enim * Martyrum genus quoddam sacrificii. Unde illud Apostoli ad Timotheum, instante jam Martyrio suo, Εγὼ ἤδη σπένδομαι, Ego jam libor, & tempus resolutionis meæ instat, 2 Tim. 4. 6. Quòd porro ad Deum voce magnâ clamare dicantur, ultionem sanguinis sui poscentes; periphrasis est crudelitatis extremæ judicioque maturæ, tanquam quæ jam præ immanitate sua ipsam Dei patientiam sollicitaret ad vindictam. <sup>a</sup> Usque quò, inquit, Domine, sanctus & verax, non judicas, & vindicas sanguinem nostrum de iis qui habitant in terra?

DE SIGILLO VI.

Hujus autem Sigilli casus est, COELI TERRÆQUE MOTUS admirabilis; quo mirifica illa per Constantium M. ejusque successores Agni signiferos rei Romanæ Ethnicæ mutatio & subversio figuratur: quâ putà omnes Gentilium Dii cælo suo excussi, Pontifices & Sacerdotes exaugurati, dejecti, reditibusque suis in perpetuum exuti; Tempia, fana, & delubra Dæmonum per omnem Romanum Orbem conquassata, direpta, inflammata, demolita. Adhæc Imperatores, Reges, Dynastæ, qui Diis suis tam enormiter periclitantibus subvenire, bellum Christi Vexilliferis indicare, ingentibus copiis decernere, etiam prælio superati bellum vi summâ instaurare, in animum induxerint; inauditis stragibus cæsi, fusi, fugatique; donec tandem, re desparatâ, nemo ampliùs Religioni Romanæ, tanto fragore ruenti, suppetias laturus reperiretur. Ità brevi verborum ambitu complexus mihi videor quicquid sublimibus istis istis ad hoc Sigillum Allegoriis Spiritus Sanctus depingere voluit. Atque hoc VICTORIAE Christi, cujus primo Sigillo jactum erat fundamentum, primum complementum est: cui, quâ Imperii ætate futurum esset, designando, præsignatis temporis quod interea fluere discriminibus, quæ hæcenus præcesserint Sigilla inservire. Restat jam ut datam interpretationem singulis Allegoriæ propheticae partibus applicemus, rationemque ejus ostendamus: id quod faciemus, integro prius contextu ob oculos posito; qui sic habet.

12. Et vidi cum aperuisset Sigillum sextum, & ecce terra motus magnus factus est, & Sol factus est niger tanquam saccus cilicinus, & Luna [tota] facta est sicut sanguis.

13. Et Stellæ cæli ceciderunt in terram, sicut ficus abjicit grossos suos, cum à vento magno commoveretur; recessitque cælum sicut liber qui convolvitur. 14. Et omnis mons & insula de locis suis motæ sunt.

15. Et Reges terræ & magnates & tribuni, & divites & potentes, & omnis servus & liber absconderunt se in speluncis & in petris montium: 16. Et dixerunt montibus & petris, Cadite super nos, & abscondite nos à facie sedentis super thronum, & ab IRA AGNI. 17. Quoniam venit DIES MAGNUS IRÆ EJUS, & quis poterit stare?

Maiemonides, More Neb. Part. 2. cap. 29. Arabes, de eo cui singulare aliquod infortium accidit, dicunt quod Cælum ejus in Terram convertitur sit, vel super Terram ejus ceciderit. Confer Thren. 2. 1.

Solennes sunt istæ horridiorum cladum & rerum, ut ita loquar, susque deque conversionis imagines, Prophetis de more Orientis usitatæ; ut nostris quoque Poetis sua sunt schemata, suæ picturæ. Ità Jeremias (cap. 4. 23, &c.) excidium Judææ depingit, ac si omnia iterum in antiquum chaos reditura essent. Aspexi terram, inquit, & ecce והוּ ובהו inanis erat & vacua; & cælos, & non erat lux in eis. Vidi montes, & ecce movebantur, & omnes colles conturbati sunt. Vide cetera. Similiter Joel (cap. 2. 10.) de horrenda ejusdem vastatione ab exercitu Locustarum Aquilonarium, à facie ejus, inquit, contremuit terra, moti sunt cæli; Sol & Luna obtenebrati sunt, & stellæ retraxerunt splendorem suum. Sed distinctius agamus de singulis.

Ecce, inquit, Terræ motus magnus factus est. Græcè σεισμός, id est, Cæli terræque motus ut in sequentibus palam est: vox enim Latina Græcæ vim non adæquat. Terræ motus autem istiusmodi, teste Apostolo, Heb. 12. de loco Haggæi [Adhuc semel & ego commovebo cælum & terram] denotat τῆς σαλευομένης τῆς γῆς μεταστροφῆς, mutationem eorum quæ commoventur. Quod firmari potest ex eodem Haggæo, ver. 21 & 22. ejusdem capitis, ubi ipse hanc parabolam de regnorum mundi mutatione & conversione ἐκκλησιαστικῶς interpretatur: Ego commovebo cælum & terram, & subvertam solium regnorum, & desperadam fortitudinem regnorum Gentium, &c. Nos igitur, ut alibi in Apocalypsi, ita hîc quoque, Terræ Cælique motum, pro rerum ruina & quasi susque deque mutatione accipiemus.

Jam verò Mutationis hujusce, perinde ut priorum quoque sub Sigillis casuum, Obiectum est Imperium Romanum: at non quâ politicè à Cæsaribus gubernatum (hæc enim sui formâ nondum solvendum est;) sed quâ Satanæ Principi, ejusque Angelis Dæmonibus, religioso nomine subditum. Hanc scilicet Imperii Romani Dæmonarchiam, quæ hoc Sigillo tempestas incumbit, maximo cum fragore eversum atque dissipatum ibit.

Et Sol factus est niger ut saccus cilicinus, & Luna facta est ut sanguis: id est, per ellipsin adjectivi, rubicunda ut sanguis. Periphrasis autem est deliqui Luminarium, in quo Sol ater apparere soleat, Luna verò rubicunda. Cui planè geminum est illud Isaia cap. 13. 10. de vindicta Babylonis; Obscurabitur Sol in ortu suo, & Luna non splendere faciet lumen suum. Septuag. Καὶ ἡ σελήνη ἡ δώσει τὸ φῶς αὐτῆς, ut Matth. 24. 29. Nec alium omnino sensum habet, juxta Aben Ezræ sententiam, illud apud * eundem cap. 24. de clade quâ Dominus in Jerusalem regnaturus (prorsus ut in hoc Sigillo) visitaret militiam cæli in excelsis, & reges terræ in terra. Erubescet, inquit, Luna, & pudore suffundetur Sol (id est, uterque, quasi pudore vultum tegeret, tenebris obducebatur) cum regnabit Dominus exercitum in monte Sion & in Jerusalem, & in conspectu senum suorum gloriosè. Sed quid hæc, inquires, ad Dæmonarchiam Romanam? Aulculta, & dicam. Prophetis (ut in sequentibus quoque Visionibus subindè audies) omne Regnum & Corpus Imperii Mundum refert; ut partes quoque, Cælum, Terra, Stellæ pro illa imagine sint. Cui evincendo (ut alia taceam) vel unicus ille locus apud Isaia sufficit, cap. 51. 15. Ego sum Dominus Deus tuus, qui divisi mare (mare autem rubrum) & personuerunt fluctus ejus, Dominus exercituum nomen ejus. ⁂ fundarem terram, (id est, Te regnum, ceu Mundum politicum, constituerem) ⁂ dicerem Sioni, Populus meus es tu. Sermo est de liberatione quā liberavit Deus populum Israeliticum ex Ægypto, ut ex eo sibi Regnum sive Rempubicam conderet in Terra promissā. Ex quo, quid sit quoque apud eundem (cap. 65, & 66.) Cælum novum & Terra nova, haud difficile erit colligere; nempe novus ejusdem rationis mundus. Pro hac igitur imagine, <sup>a</sup> Cælum notione Prophetica denotabit quicquid in Regni aut Reipublicæ alicujus universitate, ceu Mundo politico, celsum est; <sup>b</sup> Terra, contrā, quod infimum; stellæ verò eos qui in Celsitudine ista locum obtinent obeuntque. Quā ratione sol & Luna, præcipua cæli lumina, iste primam summamque, hæc à prima proximam regni Majestatem & ἀξίωμα indicabit. Quod quidem adeò verum est, ut Paraphrastes Chaldaus in Prophetis subindè pro sole & Luna, regnum & gloriam substituat; ut Isa. 60. 20. Jer. 15. 9.

Vel cælum evanuit, &c. id est, Stellæ cæli disparuere, quemadmodum literæ evanescunt, libro, veterum more, convoluto. Ellipsis enim est utrobique prioris substantivi Hebraismo familiaris, ut Deut. 20. 19. 2 Reg. 18. 31. & alibi passim: ita ut hoc de cæli disparitione, & illud de stellarum casu, mutuo sese explicent; neque ab invicem sejungi, ut perperam distinctum est, sed eodem commate includi debuissent. Integer autem locus desumptus ex Isaia cap. 34. v. 4. ubi eadem planè imagine, sed inverso ordine, depingit Spiritus Sanctus cladem & ruinam regni Edomitici, quā hîc regni Idolorum. Convolverentur (inquit) sicut liber cæli, & totus exercitus eorum (id est, stellæ) decidet ut folium è vite, & ut deciduus grossulus è ficu. Cujus sententiam aliquantò clariorem reddere voluit Spiritus Apocalypticus duplici verborum additamento; illinc τὰ ἀπεχωρέοντα, hinc ὑπὸ μεγάλῃ ἀνέμῳ σεισθήσονται. Porro de eadem ruina Edomitica haud mitioribus quàm Isaia circumstantiis agunt Obadiah, Jerem. 49. à versu 7. ad 22. Ezech. 35. per tot. & 25. 12. quod idcirco moneo, nè quis Isaia descriptionem non nisi magno illi universalis judicii Diei convenire putet. Jam verò, ut ad Apocalypsin redeam, STELLÆ Cæli Deastrorum Romani fuere, tum Dii ipsi, Regni istius sub Satana principe suo Summates, tum, inferiori licet gradu, procures sacerdotes: namque & stellæ stellis gradibus & sublimitate differunt. Hi ergò sunt qui in motu hoc mirabili rei Romanæ, sedibus suis excussi, cecidērunt in terram, sicut ficus abjicit grossos suos, cū vento magno concutitur.

Neque hanc de Diis & Deorum Sacerdotibus STELLARUM interpretationem usq; adeò mirabitur, qui meminerit tum Deos gentium passim in Scriptura sacra Exercitum cæli audire, tum apud Daniele, Terra Decoris seu populi Israelitici Sacerdotes & primores, quos Antiochus Epiphanes in terram dejecerat, isto nomine appellari: * Magnificavit se, inquit, adversus Exercitum cæli, & dejecit in terram de exercitu & de stellis, & conculcavit eas. Quod ille impiè in populo Dei veri, hoc ipsum piè fecerunt Imperatores Christiani in populo Draconis: eo tamen discrimine, quòd illic unus tantum fuit Exercitus cæli princeps, JEHOVA, qui fecit cælum & terram; contra quem ut sese Antiochus magnificare potuit, cælo tamen deturbare non potuit; hic autem in COELO Romano plurimi fuere principes sive Dæmones, quos in universum omnes imperatores Christi signiferi deturbavere. Adde quòd firmetur hæc expositio Synchronismo Draconis de cælo cum satellitio suo dejecti cap. 12. Draco pugnabat & Angeli ejus; sed non prævaluerunt, neque locus eorum amplius inventus est in cælo. Nam dejectus est Draco ille magnus, qui vocatur Diabolus & Satanas, & Angeli ejus (id est, Dæmones Deorum nominibus culti) cum eo, &c.

Sequitur, Et omnes montes & insule locis suis emotæ sunt. Possent fortasse Montes & Insule de celsioris & humilioris conditionis hominibus accipi, qui statim proximo versu enumerantur, nisi Insule nomen minùs huic interpretationi faveret. Magis igitur probandum videtur, si quidem hæc eatur, ut utrumque celsioris conditionis homines designet, quòd utrumque emineat; Montes in terra, Insule in mari. Sed quid si Insulas hic intelligamus non terras in medio aquarum eminentes, quinimo edes, cujusmodi dictæ sunt quæ circuitu publico privatove cinctæ, communibus cum vicinis parietibus non utebantur? Utrumque deinde, tam Montes quàm Insulas, de Templis & Delubris Idolorum hoc turbine per Orbem Romanum disturbandis accipiamus? Quàm enim, hujusmodi interpretationi prona sit Montium notio, nemo non videt, cui modò ignotum non sit idololatriæ id in more positum, in editoribus ejusmodi locis Aras & Delubra Diis suis exstruere. Unde passim in V.T. nomen Excelsorum frequentatum; imò Jerem. 3. 23. ipsorum Collium & Montium de Sacellis idolorum. Verè, inquit, mendaces erant colles & multitudo montium, &c. Jam neque Insule pro edibus, ab hujusmodi interpretatione abhorrent; quandoquidem Templis id vel maximè proprium est, ut sint c instar Insularum; neque communione, vel etiam contactu parietum aliarum ædium polluantur. Sin illud fortè non placuerit, ut unum idèmq; duobus nominibus figuretur; Montes, si vis, & si placet, de Sacellis ruri & in agris, Insulas de Templis Idolorum in urbibus accipito. Sed in hisce talibus minutiae ejusmodi satagendæ non videntur; ut neque fortasse in universum quævis Allegoriarum propheticarum momenta tam sollicitè ad eventum exigenda: sat est, si summa rei utrobique conveniat.

Facta est autem hæc Delubrorum & Templorum demolitio, auctore eodem piissimo Agni signifero Theodosio. Nam Constantinus Magnus Tempia Deorum tantum clausit, non abolevit, nisi Constantinopoli & vicinis locis: Julianus iterum aperuit: Hic tandem funditus demoliri jussit. Historia cuivis obvia est, neque opus ut quæ ea de re apud Ecclesiasticos Scriptores memorantur hic ascribam. Fortè tamen non injucundum erit Zosimum, Historicum paganum, de hoc tam acerbo Deorum suorum fato quiritantem aut indignantem audire. Deum, inquit ille, sacraria per omnes urbes & agros oppugnabuntur; adeoque periculum cunctis imminabat qui Deos esse putabant, vel in cælum omnino suspiciebant, & quæ in eo conspiciuntur adorabant. Sanè, quemadmodum Dominus, veterem Israel de servitute Egyptiaca educiturus, judicium exercuisse dicitur in Deos Egyptiorum, (Exod. 12. 12. Num. 33. 4.) ita hic populum Christianum à tyrannide Romana liberaturus, judicium exercuit in Deos Romanorum.

Sed nullos, inquires, quando sic turbatum est, & cælum terræ miscebatur, habuerunt Dii Atlantes, qui cælo suo ruenti humeros supponerent, Christi quæ vexilliferis sic omnia sternerentibus contravenirent? Imò verò habuerunt; sed similem cum Dæmonibus suis fortunam expertos. Nam reges terræ, inquit, & magnates & tribuni, & divites & potentes, & omnis servus & liber, id est, Maximianus Galerius, Maxentius, Maximinus cum Martiniano Cæsare, Licinius, Julianus, Imperatores (adde etiam, si vis, Eugenium & Arbogastem tyrannos) cum omnibus infidelitatis suæ sociis, cujuscunq; ordinis & gradûs, qui religionem avitam tueri, rei Deorum pessum eunti subvenire, jamq; collapsam & perditam restituere vi manûque conabantur, eò tandem redacti sunt angustiarum, ut absconderent seipsos in speluncis & in petris montium, dixerintque montibus & petris, Cadite super nos, & abscondite nos à facie sedentis super thronum & ab IRA AGNI; quoniam venit Dies magnus iræ ejus, & quis poterit stare? Fœda imago est quæ fugientium & latitantium, quæ præ rerum suarum desperatione vitæ

Hic verò Lector illud imprimis observet, contineri verbis istis clavem toti visioni referandæ ; agi nempe hic de splendida aliqua AGNI victoria, quâ hostes suos clade internecinâ domuit & everit. Porro cum AGNUM hostem fugiant hi quorum describitur clades, scilicet ab ejus ira occultatos velint ; indè liquere potest cladem illam, etiamsi nullo Synchronismo dirigetur, ad Reges Christianos nequaquam accommodandum esse, sed à Christo alienos ; proindeque de cladibus à Gothis reliquisque barbaris nationibus Imperio, jam recens Christiano, illatis exponi non debere.

Quod verò ultimò addunt Reges, proceres, tribuni, quique in eadem cum ipsis cymba fuerunt gentiles cæteri, advenisse diem magnum iræ Agni, neminemque stare posse ; verba sunt hominum Christi, quem ad hoc usque tempus præ Diis suis contempserant, rant, potentiam agnoscentium, irritumque deinceps fore omnem Christianis obfistendi conatum reipsâ sentientium. Et reipsâ quidem senserunt omnes : Galerius verò, Maximinus, Licinius, etiam apertâ confessione gloriam vel inviti Deo tribuerunt.

Author enim, cum aliis, Eusebius, Galerium (à quo Christus in hoc judicio initium fecit) fœdissimo & horrendo morbo correptum, quo, vermibus nimirum scaturientibus, corpus intolerabili fœtore computruit ; conscientiam demum scelerum quæ contra Ecclesiam admisisset percussam esse, Deoque culpam suam confessum, à persecutione contra Christianos destitisse, legibusque & edictis Imperatoriis Ecclesiarum illorum exædificationem maturasse, consuetasque pro ipso preces obire mandasse ; pauloque post animam tantæ, quantæ nullius unquam, in Christianos sævitæ ream effudisse. Euseb. de vita Constantini lib. 1. cap. 50.

Maximinum hostem Christianorum immanissimum, magiæ, divinationibus idolorum, demonumque oraculis ad omnia quæcunque ageret nixum, à Licinio nihilominus, fidem Christianam adhuc cum Constantino collega propugnante, semel iterumque victum, abjectis Imperii insignibus fugisse, in agris & vicis aliquandiu servili habitu latuisse ; tandemque, Tarso Ciliciæ inclusum ac furore accensum, multos sacerdotes & prophetas Deorum, quorum oraculis impulsus bellum susceperat, tanquam præstigiatores, veteratores, denique salutis ipsius proditores, trucidasse ; deinde Christianorum Deo gloriam tribuentem, decretum pro eorum libertate promulgasse : sed à Deo, pœnas tot scelerum in Christianos exigente, diro & lethali angore subito percussum, carnemque universâ peditentim exesâ & absumptâ, tandemque & oculis (justâ supplicii quod in Christianos excogitaverat talione.) præ æstu quo totus ardebat exsiliens ; Domino se confessum esse, istaque propter amentiam & temeritatem contra Christum meritò se perpeti agnoscentem, animam effluisse. Vide eundem Histor. Eccles. lib. 9. cap. 8, & 10. & lib. 8. c. 27. Item de vita Constantini lib. 1. cap. 51, 52.

Denique Licinium, Christianorum, quorum partibus sese aliquandiu cum Constantino addixerat, desertorem, deque multitudine Deorum suorum contra unicum illum, eumque novitium & peregrinum (sic enim vocabat) Constantini Deum magnificè apud milites suos gloriantem ; duobus praliis ingentibus devictum, (quorum uno, ex exercitu centum & triginta millium, vix triginta millia evaserant) tandem, cum adhuc quiescere nollet, à Constantino unâ cum suis belli jure condemnatum, debito supplicio addictum fuisse. Quum verò qui prælii contra Deum suscipiendi authores fuissent, pariter cum tyranno ad locum supplicii adducerentur, sicut antè, spe in Diis vanis locatâ, insolenter sese extulissent ; ita nunc Constantini Deum, qualis & quàm admirabilis esset, reipsâ intellexisse, huncque verum & solum Deum se agnoscere confessi sunt. In hoc libello videre est plerasque imagines propheticas, quæ nostris hominibus tantum negotii facessunt, gentibus Orientalibus familiares, certè in Divinationibus non insuetas exstitisse. Authorum verò, unde collectio facta est, antiquissimus omnium videtur Tarphan Ægyptius; ut qui non solum se Pharaonis interpretem nuncupet, sed passim in interpretamentis suis pro Rege Pharaonis nomen usurpet; ut tum vixisse videri possit dum adhuc Ægyptus reges suos habuit, iidemq; Pharaones dicebantur. Perfa, cum rege suo Saganissa, Diocletiani, ut dixi, coætaneus fuit. Indus citerioris est ævi, ut qui se passim Christianum prodat. Sed mirus est utriusque cum Ægyptio consensus.

Quum igitur à gentibus istis, populo Hebræo olim finitimis, moribusque & sermonis usu magis cognatis, verborum & phrasium in Sacris literis usum haud illibenter discamus; cur idem hic in figurarum & imaginum propheticarum significatis (cùm juxta Hebræorum magistros deciduum prophetiæ sit somnium) dedignaremur? Nemo igitur vitio mihi vertat, si ex hoc autore ascribam quæ ad modò explicatorum Sigillorum figuras intelligendas facere mihi videntur; idem postmodum in Tubis cæterisque Visionibus (sicubi occasio tulerit) bona cum Lectoris venia facturum.

Si quis in somnis visus sibi fuerit Equo agili ac lasciviente vehi, coram populo famam & existimationem amplissimam & eminentiam & decus inveniet.

Cap. CCXLIX. juxta Persarum & Ægyptiorum interpretationes, si quis tela cum Arcubus tenuisse visus sibi fuerit, cum gaudio suis hostibus insultabit.

Plura habet eodem pertinentia: ut cap. CLII. ex disciplina Indorum de magna & longa Equi cauda, significante potestatis comites & pedissequos; de cauda præcisa, significante tam libertatis quàm principatûs amissionem, si nempe princeps fuerit qui se tali equo vehi somniaverit. Similiter cap. CCXXXIII. descensus ex equo, si sponte fiat, de spontanea potestatis diminutione; sin invitè, de successore in dignitatem surrogando exponitur.

Tertio Sigillo allucebunt ista.

Cap. XV. ex disciplina Indorum, si quis in somnis Stateram vel Campanam quod vocant (genus est stateræ) loco quodam librari viderit, ea de persona Judicis intelligat. Quod si litem habet, ac inter librandum ea viderit exæquari; jus suum obtinebit.

Cap. CLXVII. ex Indorum, Persarum Ægyptiorumque monumentis, SOL ad Regis personam interpretando refertur, & ad principis à Rege secundi personam LUNA; Venus ad personam Augustæ; itidem alia maxima sidera ad viros Regis amplissimos.

Hæc dum lego, parum abest quin existimem, titulum istum famosum Saporis Regis Persarum in literis suis ad Constantium Imperatorem datis, [REX REGUM SAPPOR, particeps Siderum, frater Solis & Luna, Constantio Cesari fratri meo salutem] quem Ammianus marcellinus fastui Persico deputat, haud aliud fuisse quàm stylum genti vernaculum ex hujusmodi imaginibus natum. Quod eò minùs mirum cuiuspiam videri debeat, quum etiam faciales nostros videamus, Imperatorum & Regum insignibus enunciandis, Solis, Lunæ, reliquorumque Planetarum nomina adhibere. Huc quoque quoque referendum Jacobi interpretamentum somnii Josephi filii sui, de solē, Lunā, & undecim stellis ipsum adorantibus : quod ille protinus, tanquam parabolarum Orientis minimè ignarus, familiæ suæ applicat; Solem & Lunam de se & uxore, ceu Rege & Regina, stellas de filiis, tanquam Familiæ proceribus, interpretando. Gen. 37. 10. Sed ad Achmetem nostrum redeamus, pergit autem ille eodem capite :

Ad Cap. 6.

Si quis Solem in cælo luce radiisque carentem videre visus fuerit, ad personam Regis calamitas & ad opes spectat.

Si quis absque lumine Solem, Lunam & Sidera congregata videre visus fuerit; si de magnatum numero est, propter istas tenebras omnino ruit in interitum; si Rex est, circumdatus ab universis bello petetur, & magnam in afflictionem incidet.

Cap. CLXVIII. ex observationibus Persarum & Ægyptiorum, si quis sidera per exiguo prædita lumine, disiecta & sparsa caliginosæque videre visus fuerit, hoc ad Nobilium & opulentorum calamitatem & ad Regis præsidem refertur.

Absoluto sigillo sexto, protinus ad septimum septuplici plagâ secundum ordine pergendum foret, ut quod cum sexto continuo nexu cohæreat. Sed Spiritus Sanctus certo consilio gradum paulisper sustinendum duxit; donec Cœtus cujusdam ei contemporantis statum ob oculos poneret, sub plagis ejus cum incolumis futuri, tum etiam superaturi. Ei igitur Visioni prius interpretationis, quam possumus, faciem præferemus : deinde cœptum Sigillorum ordinem continuabimus.

Postea, inquit, (id est, sexti Sigilli visione transactâ, septimoque, quod Tubarum est, jam inituro) vidi quatuor Angelos stantes super quatuor angulos terræ, retinentes quatuor ventos terræ, nè flaret ventus super terram, neque super mare, neque in ullam arborem.

Sensus est, Vidit Angelos qui præessent ventis, id est, bellorum & calamitatum procellis, quacunque ex mundi plaga proditura essent, quousque Deo visum, coer- cendis; ad ejus verò nutum, signum siquando daret, in Orbem terrarum laxandis: non quidem eosdem cum Tubarum Angelis, sed qui ad illorum tamen sonitum Ventos istos modò ex hac, modò ex illa mundi parte laxaturi essent, Rei Romanæ dissipandæ ac prosternendæ. Ventorum enim parabola apud Prophetas motus bellicos & hostiles impetus atque impressiones designat: ut Jer. 49. 36. Inducam super Elam quatuor ventos à quatuor plagis cæli, & ventilabo eos in omnes ventos istos; & non erit gens ad quam non perveniant profugi Elam. Vide cætera. Item cap. 51. 1, 2. Ecce ego, dicit Dominus, excitabo super Babel, & c. ventum corruptentem. Et emittam in Babel ventilatores, & ventilabunt eam, & evacuabunt terram ejus. Adde quoque cap. 18. 17. Sicut ventus Orientalis dissipam eos (id est, Judæos) coram inimico, hoc est, Rege Babylonis. Huc quoque referendum videtur illud Danielis cap. 7. 2, 3. Ecce quatuor venti cæli pugnabant in mari magno; Et quatuor Bestiæ grandes ascendeabant de mari: id est, ex gentium undique bello ferroque inter sese concurrentium, de ditioneque & imperio concertantium conflictu, nata sunt quatuor Regna magna.

Et vidi, inquit, alium Angelum ascendentem ab ortu solis, habentem sigillum Dei vivi: (fortè igitur Christus Dominus est) & clamavit voce magnâ quatuor Ange- lis, quibus datum est (ventos nempe laxando, quos retinuerant) ledere terram & mare, dicens, Nè ledite terram, neque mare, neque arbores, quousque signaverimus servos Dei nostri in frontibus suis.

Id est, Ventos nè laxetis, nève iisdem in Orbem eundi, furendi potestatem faciatis. Terram autem, mare & arbores nominat ventorum imagini congruenter, utpote quibus venti damnum inferre soleant; terræ, ædificiorum ruinis; mari, naufragiis; arboribus, strage & laceratione multifariâ. Sustinete, inquit, quousque signaverimus servos Dei nostri in frontibus suis: id est, notâ impressâ discreverimus, ceu electum Dei Cœtum, in quem perditoribus istis ventis, reliquam hominum societatem in exitium daturis, nihil juris sit; sed cui, sigillo suo animadverso, Providentia Divina jugiter invigilaret, nè hæc rei Romanæ ruinâ, quam afferrent Tubæ, sancta ipsorum progenies extingue- retur. Ità enim rem comparatam fore, ut neque impunè laturi sint qui læserint, tan- quam juris à Deo concessi limites transgressi; porro damnum, si quod datum fuerit, à Deo protinus refarciretur. Allusum verò est ad locum Ezechielis cap. 9. ubi ab An- gelo signantur suspirantes, & exclamantes propter abominationes Jerusalem, ad hoc, nè parem cum impiis & reprobis cladem à percussoribus sustineant.

Et sanè, eventum quod atinet, si quis temporum de quibus hîc agitur statum per- penderit; miraculi instar videbitur, fieri potuisse, ut Imperio Rom. tanta cum urbium atque incolarum suorum strage dissipato & destructo, ità ut, veteribus incolis prope- modum extinctis, à barbaris & à Christo alienis gentibus habitaretur; Ecclesia tamen ibidem in mediis hisce malis, & quasi mundo in caput ipsius corruente, perennaret; imò etiam, Bestia eodem tempore (ut suo loco audiemus) universum Christianismum cultu idololatræ incestante, Cœtum nihilominus (qualis hic est) illibatum, eò- que nomine Deo curæ, in situ suo foveret. Tanti erat Dei signaculi munitam fuisse.

Et audiui, inquit, numerum signatorum; centum quadraginta quatuor millia signati sunt ex omnibus tribubus filiorum Israel, id est, duodecies duodecim millia, ex singulis tribubus duodena millia.

Quemadmodum enim initio, Theatrum Visionum seu Confessum Apocalypticum pro veteris Synagogæ imagine statûque descriptum vidimus, magnâque pars hujus libri Typorum eodem spectat, adeò ut etiam Pseudo-Christiani in Epistolis ad Eccle- sias ea de causa * Pseudo-Judæi audiant; ità quoque hic Ecclesia gentium catholica, sigillo Dei munienda, figuratur typo Israelis; duodecim illius Apostolis totidem hujus Patriarchis commodè respondentibus.

Nec id quidem immeritò fit, cum alias ob causas, tum maximè quòd Ecclesia, quæ indè à reiectione Judæorum hucusque ex Gentibus colligitur, in Israelis vicem successerit, sitq; ut ità loquar, surrogatus ISRAEL; eòq; loco apud Deum tantif- per habenda, dum, veteri populo suo denuo misericordiam consecuto, plenitudo gentium introierit; id est, Turba illa innumera ex omnibus gentibus, tribubus, populis & linguis, quam, finitâ demum Israelis hujusce signaturâ, Joannes se vidisse testatur. laudes Deo &

Agno concinentem. Hoc enimvero illud est, ( de surrogatione loquor ) quod Apostolus Paulus docere voluit ad Rom. c. 11. dum inculcat, ruinam Judæorum salutem attulisse Gentibus, & eorum abjectionem fuisse reconciliationem mundi. Non quod aliter Gentes suo tempore vocandæ non fuissent; ( cum totus Prophetarum chorus elamet, Gentes ad gloriam Israelis aggregandas, & ad Dominum convertendas fuisse; quod neque ipsi Judæi jam olim, neque hodie diffitentur: ) sed quod non hæc, quæ per anticipationem, surrogationem, & ad Zelotypiam facta est, vocatione, nisi Judæi Christo renunciassent. Intelligens sciet quid velim. Vobis necesse fuit, inquit Apostolus Act. 13. primum exponi Verbum Dei: postquam autem ipsum repellitis, & indignos vos ipsos decernitis eternam vitam; ecce, convertimus nos ad Gentes. De Gentium verò conversione anticipata ( id est, quæ Judæorum instaurationem præcederet ) accipiendum videtur ( ut hoc quoque moneam ) testimonium illud Amosi à Jacobo in Concilio Apostolorum Act. 15. laudatum; eoque fortasse nomine cæteris, quæ de Gentium in populum Dei cooptatione aliàs haberi potuissent, vaticiniis tunc prælatum. Innuit enim, non tantum nomen Domini super gentes invocandum fuisse ( id est, futuras ei Gentes in populum; ) sed etiam illud ex parte tunc futurum, dum adhuc tabernaculum Davidis collapsum jaceret, id est, regnum Israelis nondum per Christum instauraretur. Posthæc, inquit, revertar, & reedificabo tabernaculum Davidis collapsum, & diruta ejus reedificabo, & erigam illud: ut requirant cæteri hominum Dominum, & omnes gentes super quas ἐπικέκληται invocatum esset nomen meum; hoc est ut reliquæ hominum, unâ cum gentibus istis super quas jam antea nomen meum invocatum esset, tum demum me verum Deum requirerent & colerent. Pro eo enim quod nunc in textu Hebraico habetur, למען ירשו את שארית ארם, id est, ὅπως ἀνκατακληρονομήσωσι τὸ κατάλοιπον τῆς Ἰερμαίας, olim scriptum lectum videtur, למען ירשו את שארית ארם id est, ὅπως ἀνἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῆς ἀνθρώπων τοῦ Κυρίου. Quinimo ex Hebraica lectione quæ nunc obtinet, idem de anticipata gentium in Dei populum cooptatione colligi posse videtur; nempe isto sensu: Judæos reduces, tum cum tabernaculum Davidis collapsum denuo instauraretur, reliquias Edom, necnon Gentes super quas nomen Domini jam antea invocatum esset, hæreditario jure adituros: ergo Gentium aliquas in Dei populum futuras ante instaurationem tabernaculi Davidici. Sed de istis satis.

Numerum signatorum quod attinet, Duodenarius numerus Apostolici generis insignis est; qui tribuum tam singularum, quàm universarum millenos multiplicando progeniem denotat Apostolicam; progeniem putà, licet in plures millenos auctam, minimè tamen degenerem, sed parentes suos fide & sanctitate exprimentem. Nimirum, quemadmodum Bestiæ numerum habere, * ( ut postea audiemus ) gentem Bestianam seu Bestiæ sectatricem; ità & Apostolorum numerum gerere, legitimam Apostolorum sobolem designat. Hanc esse duodenariæ illius multiplicationis verissimam mentem, ostendit analogia novæ Jerusalem; in cujus structura & dimensionibus portarum, fundamentorum aræ, murorum ambitus, longitudinis, latitudinis, altitudinis, idem duodenarius numerus, aut duodenaria multiplicatio adhibetur. Et nè ampliùs hæsitaremus duodenarius iste quorsum tandem respiciat, ecce de duodecim muri fundamentis disertè dicitur quod inscripta fuerint nominibus duodecim Apostolorum Agni, cap. 21. 14.

Ex tribu Judæ, ex tribubus Reubenis, Gad, Aseris, Nephthali, Manassis, Simeonis, Levi, Isacharis, Zabulonis, Josephi, Benjaminis, ex singulis signata sunt duodecim millia.

Nusquam alibi in tota Scriptura hoc ordine Tribus recensentur, etiamsi aliàs numerentur diversimodè. Præterquam enim quod Dan prorsus non compareat, neque Ephraimi nomen audiatur; in cæteris ab omnium quæ alibi habentur recensitionum lege disceditur, neque aut nativitatis, aut dignitatis natalium, aut habitationis ordo servatur; sed extremæ permiscuntur mediis, & ancillarum filii natu minores semel atque iterum majoribus natu uxorum liberis præponuntur: ut minimè dubitandum sit, quin præcipuum aliquod Typi mysterium in ordine tam novo ac insolito lateat. Hoc, Deo coëptis adspirante, aliquatenus eruisse videmur; nempe hujusmodi.

Número sic constituto, uxorum & ancillarum filii, insuper habitâ natalium dignitate, permiscuntur, ac ancillarum liberi in Dominarum adoptantur. In Christo enim neque servus est, neque liber, sed omnes unius rationis sunt.

Ad Cap. 7.

Cum igitur Lea filii, quæ naturales, quæ adoptivi, duplo plures sint quàm Rachelis; illius nempe octo, hujus tantum quatuor: proinde ordo iste in recensendo observatur, ut duplâ quoque ratione quaterni Lea filii alternatim cum binis Rachelis conferrentur: utrobique autem eæ Tribus reliquis, tanquam potiores, præferantur, quas factum aliquod suum aut suorum, in sacris literis memoratum, de vero Dei cultu & erga eundem zelo commendaverat. Primum verò agmen ducit prosapia Lea propter Christi, Principis Cœtus, prærogativam, ex ejus utique stirpe oriundi: hoc modo.

Primus quaternio filiorum LEAE.	1 JUDA	Alter quaternio filiorum LEAE.	7 Simeon
	2 Reuben		8 Levi
	3 Gad		9 Isachar
	4 Aser.		10 Zabulon.
Prima biga filiorum RACHELIS.	5 Nephthali	Altera biga filiorum RACHELIS.	11 Joseph
	6 Manasse.		12 Benjamin.

Ratio ordinis filiorum Lea.

EX LEAE, ut vides, filiis primum quaternionem constituunt Juda, Reuben, Gad, Aser, utpote præ cæteris eo nomine, cui Typus figurando est nobilitati.

In istis primus locus, ut par est, tribuitur Juda, ob Christum Regem fidelium eâ tribu profeminatum.

Secundus Reuben, quem illustris illa protestatio de altari μνημονευτικῶν ad Jordani ripam exstructo nobilitavit; quæque meruit, nè nativitatæ prærogativam (primogenitus enim fuit) alii quàm Juda, tribui regia submitteret.

Tertium locum sortitur Gad, utpote Reuben in celebri ista protestatione de vero Dei cultu retinendo socius; & porro Eliâ Prophetâ & Jehu Rege Baalismi destructoribus, insignis.

Quartum denique, & in hoc quaternione novissimum, locum capeffit Aser, viduâ Sareptanâ, quæ Eliam pavit, illustris, (nam ad Aseris sortem spectavit Sarepta) necnon Annâ Prophetissâ Aseritide, quæ Christo, cum in Templo juxta Legem sisteretur, testimonium perhibuit, nobilis; sed tribus præcedentibus, quod utraque foemina esset, nequaquam comparandus.

In ultimum quaternionem rejiciuntur Simeon, Levi, Isachar, Zabulon; nempe aut nullis, aut paucioribus nominibus condecorati, aut, si quæ habuerint, scelere aliquo postmodum oblitteratis. Siquidem Levi zelum, quo se in deserto probavit, (ut taceam de seditione Korachi) oblitteravit ejus cum apostatis & idololatriis Israeliticis indè ab initio consortium. Tam enim Michæ Ephraimitæ quàm furibus Danitis, primis à morte Josuæ idololatriis, Jonathan Levites Moysis nepos operam suam in idolorum cultu condixit, Jud. 17. 10. & 18. 30. Fieri etiam potest ut Levi in postremum quaternionem detruserit substitutio in locum Danis.

Porro, cum nihil habeant hujus quaternionis fratres quo alii aliis præcellant; ideo nativitatæ ordinem servant immutatum, & quo quisque ordine natus est, juxta eum recensetur.

Inter RACHELIS autem posteros familiam ducit biga Nephthalis & Manassis; agmen claudunt Joseph & Benjamin. Præferuntur Nephthali & Manasse; quia ille, ut Baraco Siseræ Cananæi debellatore, ita Hiram instrumentorum & supellectilis Templi Dei artifice ex patre Nephthalita, (1 Reg. 7. 14. cum 2 Chron. 2. 14.) sed & majori adhuc nomine (de quo postea) inclutus; hic Gideone Baalis subversore, & Elisæo Prophetâ nobilis fuit.

Nephthalim verò, licet ancillæ filium, supra Manassen extulit gloria incolatûs Christi; qui utique munus suum orsurus, in nobilissima Nephthalitica sortis urbe, totiusque Galilææ metropoli, Capernaum, domicilium & prædicationis suæ sedem fixit: unde tanquam ex urbe Episcopali totam Galilæam cum Apostolis suis semel iterumque obivit, in omnibus Synagogis & vicis docens Evangelium regni & miraculis sanationum coruscans.

Id enim Lector, ex Evangelica historia notes velim (quia multos fugit) Servatorem nostrum omni tempore quo in terris versabatur in Galilea habitasse; in Judea verò, præcipuâ tum gentis tum tribus suæ sede, non nisi festis temporibus conspectum fuisse. ## SEPTEM TUBARUM.

Uerunt SEX PRIMA SIGILLA, quibus stantis adhuc & vigentis Imperii status, usque dum potestas Idolorum rueret, casibus intestinis describebatur: Succedit Septimum, cujus το πρῶτον, S E P T E M T U B Æ, quo Imperii labantis & cadentis fata, septuplici plagarum ordine, bellicum canentibus Tubis, ruituri, consuetis ad eam rem imaginibus panduntur; Deo nempe sanguinis tot Martyrum, Romanis auspiciis effusi, isthac Ruinâ pœnas exigente.

Qui enim nè brutis quidem animantibus, si quando hominem imaginem suam occiderint, parci velit, annon ille sanguinem servorum suorum ab Imperio tot annis Martyricidâ reposceret? Neque sera Christianorum Imperatorum ibi rerum potiuntium pietas justitiæ Dei intercedere debuit, non magis quàm pietas Josiæ ut regnum Judæ, sanguinis à Manassæ effusi rerum, excidium à Deo decretum effugeret. Hanc ultionem animæ Martyrum, sub immani illa Sigilli quinti laniena gementes, precibus efflagitarunt: hanc Deus promissit, quamprimum Tyrannus Romanus, eorum accessione qui tum adhuc jugulandi restabant, mensuram suam implèssent, cap. 6. 11. Hoc tempus jam advenerat. Quapropter preces istas Angelus cœli Sacerdos ad Altare thymiamatis (ut moris erat precibus populi in Templo factis) suffitu ad Thronum Dei transmittit, eique in memoriam revocat. Interea silentium in celo factum est ad semihoram; pro Templi nempe ritu in istiusmodi sacro obeundo. Constat enim, in sacris ubivis ferè Gentium silentium de Religione fuisse. Favere linguis, dicebant. Id à populo Dei observatum, tum cum Incensum fieret. Dum enim Sacrificia offerebantur, (quæ a prima pars λετρυγίας fuit, Templum canticis, tubis, aliisque instrumentis musicis personabat, 2 Chron. 29. 25. usque ad 28. At tempore incensi omnia <sup>b</sup> filebant, & populus tacitè secum precabatur, Luc. 1. 10. Huc igitur allusum est, dum Angelo ad Altare aureum sacra futuro, factum esse dicitur in Cælo silentium ad semihoram, id est, toto tempore Incensi.

Nempe, ut hoc ritu indicaret quorsum spectarent preces istæ, quas ad Deum commeantes grato odore perfuderat; scilicet ad vindictam in Terricolas impetrandam, qui Sanctos læserant, imò sanguinem eorum effuderant.

Preces autem continuò responsum ferunt. Nam facta sunt, inquit, (scilicet ex Throno seu adyto Templi, ut cap. 4. 5.) Voces & tonitrua & fulgura & d terra motus. Quibus verbis describitur oraculum בַּת קוֹל BATH KOL, id est, Filia vocis seu tonitruum, quo Deus olim in veteri populo responsa dabat, eodémque hinc precibus Sanctorum annuit. Ad Cap. 8.

Scilicet Deus ut plurimum cum tonitru placita sua edebat, quemadmodum & Legem tulit, Exod. 19. 16. imò unicum id oraculum Judæis reliquum post captivitatem Babylonicam mansit. Cujus exemplum est apud Evangelistam nostrum, cap. 12. 28. cum dixisset Dominus, Πάτερ, δόξα σὺν τῷ ὀνόματι, Pater glorifica Nomen tuum; venit, inquit, φωνὴ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, Καὶ ἰδοὺ ἔσται, καὶ πάλιν δόξα σοι. Sequitur ibi, Et turba quæ astabat & audierat, dicebat, Tonitru esse factum. Alii dicebant, Angelus ei locutus est. Id est, alii קול ברוך, tonitru Divinum, seu conjunctum cum voce Divina, Filiam nempe tonitruum, dicebant; alii verò, Angelum loqui. Atque hinc est quòd in Apocalypsi, non hoc tantum loco, sed alibi passim, cum oraculis vocibusque Divinis tonitru conjungitur; ut cap. 4. 5. cap. 6. 1. cap. 10. 3. Videtis Clarissimi Danielis Heinssii Aristarchum sacrum, pag. 277, & 455.

Sacro sic peracto, & Deo voce tonitruum Sanctorum precibus annuente, Septem Angeli qui habebant septem Tubas, præparaverunt se ut clangerent. Verse 6:

Opera Divinae providentiæ & gubernationis Angelis ministris geri, apud omnes Theologos in confesso est. Angeli igitur in Visionibus istis eorum locum tenent, quibus ad res gerendas à Deo præponuntur; quòdque communibus operis tam Angelorum quàm hominum geritur, id Angelis authoribus, tanquam auspiciis & ducibus, geri dicitur. Ut omnino à scopo aberrare mihi videantur qui sub istis Angelorum nominibus aliud aliquod mysterium latere putent. Angeli igitur Tubicines, de quibus hic sermo, sunt qui ad gubernandas Tubarum plagas, adhibitis ad gerendum, per quos Deo decreta sua exsequi visum, hominibus, constituti sunt.

Harum verò Tubarum quatuor primæ angustiorum & minorum plagarum sunt; utpote quibus, Orbi Occidentali seu Latino maximam partem incumbentibus, sanandis fuit Episcopus Romanus, dehinc Orbi saltem isti in caput futurus. Quarum imaginibus ritè accommodandis, hic quoque Lector observet, Universitatem Romanam cum reliquis Orbis Imperiis à Spiritu S. tacitè assimilari Systemati Mundano, cujus partes sunt Terra, Mare, Flumina, Cælum, Stelle; eà ratione, ut Imperii cujusque Systema suam quoque Terram habeat, quæ sit instar illius Telluris, nempe imum quoddam & Basin cui totius politiæ moles incumbat: Mare item, quod, Terram suam circumfundendo, Maris similitudinem (hæc Ditionis amplitudo seu extensio est) omnimodò gerat: Flumina quoque politica, quæ aliorum fluminum ritu ex Mari suo originem ducat eodemque revertantur; cujusmodi sunt Magistratus provinciales caterique ditionis administri, unà cum illorum Fluminum alveis provinciis ipsis: solem denique aliasque stellas in Supremæ potestatis cælo, solem, Lunam, stellasque in cælo mundano referentes. Hæc analogiâ observatâ, Interpretatio, ut similibus veterum Prophetarum figuris omnimodò munita, ità proclivis erit & reigestæ omnino appositissima.

Quod autem passim de Tertia parte, ut de tertia parte Arborum terræ, tertia parte Maris, Fluminum, Cæli, inculcatur, id de finibus Imperii Romani accipio, tertiam Orbis terrarum Joannis ævo cogniti partem abitu suo complectentis. Id quod ex eo probari posse videtur, quòd postea cap. 12. DRACO ille Septiceps decacornis (id est, Imperium Romanum Ethnicum) tertiam partem Stellarum Cæli caudâ suâ traxisse & in terram abjecisse dicitur; id est, tertiam partem Principum & Dynastarum Orbis Imperio suo subjecisse. His ità positis, ad singularum interpretationem veniamus.

7. Et primus Angelus clauxit, & facta est GRANDIO & IGNIS mista sanguine, & missa sunt in TERRAM: & tertia pars terræ combusta est, & tertia pars arborum concremata est, omnisque * herba viridis exusta est.

8. Et secundus Angelus clauxit, & tanquam MONS MAGNUS igne ardens missus est in MARE; & facta est tertia pars maris sanguis: 9. Et mortua est tertia pars creaturarum in mari animas habentium, & tertia pars navium periit.

10. Et tertius Angelus clauxit, & cecidit de cælo STELLA MAGNA, ardens tanquam lampas, ceciditque in tertiam partem FLUMINUM, & in FONTES aquarum.

11. Et nomen STELLÆ dicitur ABSINTHIUM: & facta est tertia pars aquarum in absinthium; & multi homines mortui sunt ex aquis, quòd amara facta essent.

12. Et quartus Angelus clauxit, & percussa est tertia pars SOLIS & tertia pars LUNÆ & tertia pars STELLARUM; ità ut obscuraretur tertia pars eorum, & diei non lucret pars tertia, & noctis similiter.

TUBA I.

PRima septimi Sigilli Tuba ab Idolarchia Romana sexti Sigilli exitu jam prorsus disturbatâ atque excusâ init; primâque Imperio jam ruituro plagam datura, TER-RÆ trientem horrifico *GRANDINIS cum Igne Sanguinè*que nimbo pefundat: id est, Territorium populûmve Orbis Romani (universi scilicet illius politici basin & Tellurem) terribili & cruentâ Gentium Septentrionalium irruptione depopulatur, magnates plebeiósque profternit absumitque.

Videfis eodẽm spectantem Grandinis imaginem, ad impressionem, inquam, hostilem, Isai. cap. 28. v. 2. Ecce validus & fortis Domino, (Salmanassarẽ indigitat) sicut tempestas GRANDINIS & turbo excisionis, sicut tempestas aquarum multarum inundantium deiciet in terram fortiter. Pedibus calcabuntur Corona superbie, temulenti Ephraim. Item Isaia 30. 30. de clade Assyriis ventura, Et audiri faciet Dominus majestatem vocis sue, & descensionem brachii sui ostendet in ira furoris & flamma ignis consumentis, dispersione & turbine & lapide GRANDINIS; quia à voce Domini conteretur Assur, &c. Hic observandum, quia Grando cum fulmine, in calidioribus præsertim regionibus, esse soleat; ideo cum Grandinis mentione ignem conjungi, cum hîc apud Joannem & Isaiam, tum Psal. 18. 13, 14. imò in historia Exod. 9. 23. sed Joannes sanguinem quoque præter naturam commiscuit, ut Imaginem totam hoc indicio ad eadem spectare innueret. De Grandinis imagine videat quoque Lector Isai. 32. 19. ibique Chaldaem Paraphrastem.

Adhæc, Arbores in parabolis propheticis significare Magnates & divites, docet idem Paraphrastes; qui pro quercubus Basan, Isai. 2. 13. substituit principes provinciarum; pro cedris, Isai. 14. 8. divites; pro abietibus, modò principes, Isai. 37. 24. modò reges, Isai. 14. 8. Qui quoque illud Zach. 11. 2. Ulula abies, quia cecidit cedrus, quoniam magnifici vastati sunt: Ululate quercus Basan, quia cecidit sylva munita, sic ωαεαεζα. Ululate Reges, quia contriti sunt principes; qui opibus erant divites, vastati sunt: Ululate Satrapæ provinciarum, quia vastata est regio fortitudinis vestre. Unde ex analogia facillè colligitur, HERBAS de Plebeiis capiendas, quando, ut hic, cum Arboribus componuntur.

Jam, ut de eventu aliquid ex historia delibemus, initium hujus Tubæ, donec certius quid constiterit, ducam à morte Theodosii primi, id est, ab anno Christi CCC XC V; quòd tunc Religio Christiana de Diis Gentilium planè triumphasse videtur; & simul, tanquam in superioris Sigilli desinentis & hujus incipientis communi quodam termino, Barbarorum irruptiones nonnihil antehac tentatæ, sed proximis annis, pacato iterum Imperio, compressæ, horribiliter denuo cieri, & universo fere Orbi Romano ferro & igne continuè & immaniter vastando populandoque incumbere cœperunt.

Hoc ipso enim anno ALARICUS primùm, cum ingenti Gothorum aliorumque Barbarorum exercitu, ex Thracia in Macedoniam irrumpit, nullis neque oppidis neque hominibus parcens. Indè per Thessaliam progressus, Thermopylarumque angustiis occupatis, in Graciam, id est Achaiam, descendit, quasvis urbes præter Thebas & Athenas exscindit. In Peloponnesum irrumpit, Corinthum, Argos, Spartam vastat. Indè in Epirum sese intulit, ubi easdem populationes & vastitates edere pergit.

Anno sequenti Epiro egressus Achaiam incurfavit, eamque cum Epiro finitimisque provinciis quadriennio toto incendiis & populationibus fœdè vastare contendit.

Cum sic per quinquennium immanibus Orientem direptionibus vexasset, animum ad invadendum Occidentem adjicit, in Dalmatiam & Pannoniam transit, easque regiones latè populatur. Tristissimum hujus temporis statum, hucusque grassante tempestate, audi deplorantem, qui tum vixit, Hieronymum, Epist. 3. Inter Constantinopolin & Alpes Julias quotidie Romanus sanguis effunditur; Scythiam, Thraciam, Macedoniam, Dardaniam, Daciam, Thessaliam, Achaiam, Epiros, Dalmatiam, cunctasque Pannonias Gothus, Sarmata, Quadus, Alanus, Hunni, Vandali, Marcomanni instant, rapiunt. Quot matrone, quot virgines Dei, & ingenua nobiliisque corpora his bellis fuere ludibrio? capti Episcopi, interfecti Presbyteri, & diversorum officia Clericorum: subversa Ecclesia, ad altaria Christi stabulati equi, martyrum effossæ reliquie. ROMANUS ORBIS RUIT. Quid putas nunc habere animi Corinthios, Athenienses, Lacedæmonios, Arcadas, cunctamque Graciam, quibus imperant Barbari?

Anno verò sequenti, Christi 401, idem Alaricus, Gothis, Alanis, Hunnisque subsequentibus, in Italia quoque bellum gesturus, Noricum perumpit, & per Tridentinum saltum in Venetiam venit, eas urbes brevi tempore in potestatem redigit, Honorium Imperatorem Hastæ obsidet; adeò ut omnes ferè in Italia jam de relinquendis sedibus cogitarent. Sed hinc tandem Stilico Honorii Dux, magno comparato exercitu, furorem ejus sufflaminavit, & semel iterumque victum atque adversis præliis fatigatum in Pannoniam, unde venerat, pedem referre coegit. Ex qua paulò post, sedere percussus, atque militari præfecturâ ab Honorio honoratus, in Illyricum Orientis provinciam secessit.

Quiescente aliquantisper Alarico, nè tamen ullo deinceps tempore Occidens seriretur, statim anno 404. memorabilis altera Barbarorum irruptio in Italiam est instructa, Radagaiso homine Scythâ duce; qui cum Gothorum, Sarmatarum & Germanorum exercitu ad ducenta millia, præsidii in Alpibus dejectis, in Venetiam regionem, Æmiliam & Hetruriam transit, Florentiam obsidet; ubi à Stilicone ingenti strage devictus capitur atque obtruncatur.

Hoc hoste, utcuque terribili, brevi temporis spatio & minori cum damno sublato, statim anno 406. tertia, eaque gravissima maximèque exitiosa, in Occidentem irruptio Vandalorum & Alanorum, assumptis secum Marcomannis, Herulis, Suevis, Alemannis, Burgundionibus, aliorumque Barbarorum colluvie, facta est; quâ Gallia primum, inde Hispania, & postremò Africa sunt occupatæ, & omnis generis calamitatibus afflictæ. Quas clades ita Hieronymus Epistolâ II. partim expressit, partim significavit: Innumera, inquit, & ferocissima nationes universas Gallias occuparunt: quicquid inter Alpes & Pyrenæum est, quod Oceano & Rhodano includitur, Quadus, Vandalus, Sarmata, Alani, Gipedes, Heruli, Saxones, Burgundiones, Alemanni, & hostes Pannonii vastarunt. Magunciacum capta atque subversa est, & in ecclesia multa hominum millia trucidata. Vangiones longâ obsidione deleti; Rhemorum urbs præpotens, Ambiani, Atrebates, Morini, Tornacens, Nemeta, Argentoratus translati in Germaniam. Aquitania, Novémque populorum, Lugdunensis & Narbonensis provinciæ, præter paucas urbes, populata sunt cuncta. Non possum absque lacrymis Tolosæ facere mentionem, quæ ut hucusque non ruerit, sancti Episcopi Exuperii merita præstiterunt. Ipsæ Hispaniæ jam jamque periturae contremiscunt. Roma vitam auro redimit.

Atque hic fuit terribilis iste Grandinis cum igne & sanguine Nimbus; Imago quidem applicationis adeò obviæ, ut Nicephoro Gregoræ lib. 2. c. 7. de Apocalypsi nè cogitanti unquam, sed de Scythis tamen agenti, adeò concinnum quid exciderit, ut non possim non ascribere: Ut, inquit, terrores de cælo sæpe hominibus à Deo incutiuntur, ut fulmina, incendia, & crebri imbres, &c. ita hi à Deo asservantur Septentrionales & Hyperborei terrores, ut pro pœna, quando & quibus Providentiæ visum fuerit, immittantur. Sed corollarium quoque ex Achmete adjiciam, adhuc magis confirmando Lectori.

Si quis videre visus fuerit grandinem alicubi delapsam, hostilem impressionem subitam expectet.

Si videre visus fuerit grandinem, quæ frumenti hordei que culmos læserit; in eo loco, prout culmi fracti fuerint, bellicæ cædes evenient.

Eidem cap. CLIX. ex Indorum, Apotelesm. CLX. ex Persarum & Ægyptiorum explicatione, Ignis interitum, bellum, pugnas, punctionem & afflictionem significat, si quid aut quem urere visus fuerit.

Item cap. CLI. Persæ, Indi, Ægyptii Arbores de hominibus, præcipuè Magistratibus, proceribus, & viris amplissimis interpretantur: ut,

Si arbores diuturnitate temporis vitiatæ ac putrefactæ corruerint, naturali morte proceres Regis morientur.

TUBA II.

Secunda Tuba Mundum Romanum, terrâ suâ jam satîs vastatum, graviore adhuc plagâ labefactura, MARE impetit; cujus qui eò pertinebat trientem, MON-TIS magni ei antiquitus imminenti, jam verò conflagranti casu, totum cruentum reddit; magnâ cum ibi degentium animantium seu piscium, tum navigiorum, strage. Hoc est, ROMÆ urbis magnæ, semel iterumque captæ, spoliata, atque hostilibus flammis ardentis, clades in amplitudinis ditionis jurisdictionisve Romanæ interitum erupit; provincias ejus, præ capitis sic afflictæ debilitate, jam pro libitu rapientibus, atque in nova Regna diserpentibus Barbaris; irreparabili cum legionum inibi ad tutelam degentium strage, omniumque potestatis retinendæ & sustentandæ (quasi negotiandi) administratorum jacturâ.

MARE mundi politici, ut dixi, est Ditionis illa amplitudo incolas universos ejusdem juris politici communione amplectens. Hâc imagine Babylonis Ditio exprimitur Jer. 51. 36. ubi minatur Dominus se exsiccaturum MARE ejus, & arefacturum venam ejus: quod v. 44. exponitur eâdem retentâ metaphorâ, non confluxuras ad eam amplius Gentes. Amplitudo quoque Regni Assyriaci sic describitur Ezech. 31. 4. Aquæ crescere fecerunt eam, (scilicet cedrum Assyriacam) Abyssus seu Mare exaltavit eam. Fortè etiam Pharaonis Ditio Mare est, Isai. 19. 5. ubi de Regni ejus interitu dicitur, defecturas aquas de Mari ejus, id est, ablatum iri ditionem ejus. Indè Imperia illa magna apud Danielelem conspiciuntur ex MARI ascendere, id est, ex Ditionis amplitudine oriri.

Quòd autem tertia Maris pars, id est, MARE Romanum, sanguineum factum dicitur; sciendum, Sanguinem primò pro cade usurpari, deinde pro morte etiam sine sanguine: Mortem autem in genere pro interitu sumi, etiam rei vitæ carentis. Vide Ezech. 14. 19. & 3. 18, 20. & 18. 13. Amos. 2. 2. Rom. 7. 9. Unde sanguinem vel sanguineum fieri imago est rei interitum passæ, quasi nempe cruore manantis instar animalis occisi aut laniati. Quòd igitur hîc Mare montis magni casu cruentum factum dicitur, nihil aliud denotat quàm mortem quandam seu interitum violentum illo casu passum esse. Id quod in Phialis, ubi eadem est imago, aliquantò apertius dicitur, factum esse quasi sanguis mortui, i. occisi. Mens est, Ditionem seu Amplitudinem Romanam cladem passam esse, truncatam, dilaniatam, perditam esse.

Simile etiam Montis symbolum urbi significandæ, de veteri Babylone reperire est Jerem. 51. 25. Ecce ego ad te, MONS pestifer (seu corruptor) qui corrumpis universam terram, & extendam manum meam, &c. & dabo te in MONTEM COMBUSTIONIS: ubi Septuag. habent ὄρος ἐμπυρροῦσθαι, eodem sensu quo hîc Joannes ὄρος πυρὸς καὶ ὀψύρον. De eadem Isai. 13. 2. super MONTEM eminentem levate vexillum. Targum, Super civitatem habitantem confidenter. Item c. 37. 24. ad Sennacheribum regem Assyriæ, Exprobrasti, inquit, Domino, & dixisti, In multitudine quadrigarum mearum ascendi altitudinem Montium: Targum, Ascendi in munitionem Civitatum eorum. Sed an rectè dubito.

Porro, quod Mons hîc in Mare mitti seu projici dicatur, τὸ πρέπον est figuræ, cum non aliâ ratione Mons Mari nocere posset quàm si in ipsam projiceretur. Atque hoc in sequenti quoque Tuba, de Stella cadente, locum habere memineris.

Historiam quod attinet, Roma primùm capta est Anno 410. idque ab eodem Alarico Gothorum rege, qui in priore Tuba fati quasi præludium exhibuerat: jam verò post mortem Stiliconis novos motus ciente, novamque & fatalem in Italiam expeditionem adornante; quâ quidem Honorium in tantas angustias redegit, ut ipse Barbarus novum Imperatorem, Attalum nomine, Romæ daret, quocum Honorium Augustum Ravennæ obsideret, jam, præ rerum suarum desperatione, in Orientem, Occidente relicto, fugere cogitantem. Sed hostis pœnitentiâ ductus, Attalo Imperio abrogato, Honorium in integrum restituit.

Hanc urbis Romæ cladem Ditionis Romanæ dilaceratio continuò sequuta est. Testem advoco Sigonius: Romanam cladem, inquit ille, miserabilis Italiæ vastitas, continua Galliæ atque Hispaniæ bella, ac nova demum Barbarorum in utraque provincia regnum imperia exceperunt.

Primùm enim Honorius, ut Romam cum Imperio recuperaret, fœdere cum Alarico isto, Gothis sedes & regnum in Galliis permittere coactus est.

Biennio post, Anno 412, Hunnis quoque sese in Pannonia, quam Gothi reliquerant, rant, effudentibus, idem, viribus ad resistendum in tantis difficultatibus destitutus, Ad Cap. 8.

foedus cum iis, datis acceptisque obsidibus, fecit.

Deinde Anno 413, Constantius, ejusdem Honorii Dux, Burgundiones, qui, sic turbatis prioribus hisce annis rebus, unà cum Vandalis in Galliam sese contulerant, nè in aliquam fortè belli difficultatem incideret, libenter in amicitiam recepit, atque sedes ad Rhodanum assignavit.

Anno denique 415, idem Honorius, ( ut tradit Procopius ) cùm Gothi paulò post in vicinam Hispaniam transiissent, Vandalis quoque cum Rege suo Gunderico ex Gallia à Francis nuperrimè expulsi, sedes quas occuparunt concessit habitandas, pacto Gothis bellum inferendi. Qui plura scire cupit, consulat paulò antè nominatum Sigionium de Occidentali Imperio, lib. 10, & 11. unde nos hæc desumpsimus.

Atque ità deinceps Amplitudo Ditionis Romanæ quotidie magis magisque laniata atque distruncata est, donec, iterum Româ Anno 455. à Genferico Vandalo captâ atque directâ, sequenti statim anno, aut non ità multò post, totum Imperii corpus in decem omnino regna divisum apparuit : quæ, unà cum populorum regumque nominibus, & provinciis quibus regnatum est, adhæc quibusdam ex historia annotatis ad majorem lucem faciendam, sequens Tabella exhibebit.

CHRISTI 456. & deinceps.

8 Alemannorum	In Germaniæ tractu qui Rhætia dicebatur.	Sumanus.	Ostrogothis etiam in Italia successerunt Longobardi, à Narsete, postquam Ostrogothorum regnum destruxerat, evocati anno 567. Sedes autem suas in Pannonia Hunnis & Avaribus deinceps frundas tradiderunt.
9 Ostrogothorum	In Pannonia, debellatis Hunnis : nec seculum hoc exierat, cùm iidem in Italiam quoque regnum propagarint.	Theodemirus.

Ad Cap. 8.

cap. 8. 8.

Atque hoc demum modo Decem illa regna, in quæ Romanum Imperium novissimè divisum iri, tum apud Daniele tum Joannem Spiritus S. prænuñciaverat, supputanda videntur; neque ex tot Regionum aut terræ tractuum nudis, ut vulgò fit, nomini-bus, quinimo Regnis, in quæ Ditio & Dominium Imperii dilacerandum foret, omnino æstimanda. Interim tamen non tam rigidè Denarii istius circumscriptionem interpretandam putamus, ut plura quovis tempore regna, aut cui cui modi Dynastias, excludat: sed quòd in decem ad minimum, vel in decem præcipua Regna, Imperium scindendum esset. Id quod jam indè à primordiali isthac quam repræsentavimus dilaceratione, usque ad nostrum seculum, sub tot variantium Rerumpublicarum & Regnorum fati & conversionibus, semper verum fuisse opinor; licèt oraculi fidei astruendæ sufficeret, si vel initio solum in tot Regna divisum fuisset, ut ut postmodum fortasse imminuto numero. Ità autem ut dixi, nec aliter, intelligendam esse circumscriptionem istam Decadis regnorum, simile de Monarchiæ Alexandræ dilaceratione Vaticinium nos edocere potest: in qua, licèt ultra * quatuor illa præcipua, Macedoniæ, Asiæ, Syriæ & Ægypti Regna, etiam quintum Thraciæ, conditore Lyfimacho, accesserit; Spiritus S. tamen multiplicatam istam quaternario definierit: tot putà ad minimum futura essent, aut tot præcipua regna. Regno enim Thracico, licèt simul cum reliquis cœperit, & ad 40. annos duraverit, successum non fuit, sed cum primo rege Lyfimacho exspiravit; ideòque in numerum non referendum. Similiter huic de decuplici divisione Romana judicandum. Propterea neminem moveat, si præter enumerata modò in Gallis regna, etiam Alanorum Aurelianensium regnum, item Armoricarum Civitatum Dynastiam, ibidem fortè invenerit, usque ab Honorii Imperio ad hæc tempora permanentia. Hanc siquidem modicæ admodum ditionis fuisse; illud modico deinceps tempore, nempe decem plurimum annos, durasse comperiet. Neutrum igitur cum reliquis pari loco & ordine habendum est, nec si cujusdammodi quid alibi inveniri possit.

TUBA III.

TUBA tertia fulgidam stellam, HESPERUM scilicet Romanum seu OC-CIDENTIS Cæsarem, jam indè ex quo Gensericus Vandalorum Rex Romam captam spoliaverat præcipitem, & morti aliquantisper sub istis nihili Cæsarum, Aviti, Majorani, Severi, Anthemii, Olybrii, Glycerii, Nepotis, mutuis insidiis & lanienis intereuntium, nominibus quasi oblectatum, tandem anno 476. sub fatali Augustuli nomine extremum spiritum ducentem, Odoacre Herulorum Rege immisso, de Cælo potestatis suæ revulsus penitus deturbavit atque extinxit; amarissimo Fontium & Fluminum, id est, Urbium & Magistratuum provincialium, fato.

Cæsarem Hesperium hic eum intelligo qui, à firmata, jam indè à morte Theodosii primi, Imperii in Orientis & Occidentis divisione, Romæ antiquæ & Occidenti adhuc Imperator mansit, sed brevis admodum ævi; utpote post annum 91 de cælo suo ad hujus Tubæ clangorem penitus lapsurus.

Quòd enim Episcopus Romanus annis plusquam trecentis & viginti, postquam Cæsar iste Hesperius in Augustulo occiderat, Reges Francorum (qui postea Germanorum) in id nominis & titulum de novo subrogavit; nihil aliud effecit quàm ut hoc quasi Cæsaris redivivi, ceu sexti capitis Bestiæ adhuc regnantis, oppanso velo, nè ipse pro capite novissimo, id est, Antichristo, tandem à minis perspicacibus tam liquidò haberetur.

Atqui Cæsar iste Papannus ad capita Bestiæ Romanæ non pertinet; verum ad cornua seu regna in quæ sexti capitis Imperium, jam capiti novissimo vices cessurum, dilacerandum fuerat. Neque enim post tantum temporis intervallum quantum est annorum 325 (tot autem sunt ab Augustulo ad Carolum Magnum) Hesperiorum Cæsarum quasi seriei continuandæ succedi potuit.

Verse 10:

Sed age, textui Joannis porrò faciamus lucem, ut interpretationis ratio constet. Et cecidit, inquit, è cælo stella magna ardens ut lampas. Stellam crinitam seu Comitam describere videtur, cujus inter species à Plinio recensitas est Lampadias speciatim sic dicta. Et profectò non incommodè Cæsar Occidentis hujusmodi stellâ figuretur, ob brevem durationem. De quo idcirco cap. 17. dicitur, Oportere eum cum venerit ad exiguum tempus manere. Stella autem magna fuit; utpote summæ Majestati aptius figurandæ, cujus splendorem aliàs sol in parabolis propheticis repræsentet. Et sanè notum est, Cometas fuisse qui vel Solem magnitudine æquasse visi sint; cujusmodi & hanc Stellam fuisse, fortè non aberrabit qui diceret.

Similem

Similem autem stella cadentis parabolam, nè de applicatione dubites, adhibet Isaïas, cap. 14. 12. de casu Regis Babylonis: Quomodo, inquit, cecidisti de cælo, Lucifer fili auroræ? resectus es in terram qui debilitasti gentes? Alibi quoque, ut loco Isaïæ cap. 34. 4. jam antè laudato, stella cælo cadentes de Principum & Summatarum ruina intelliguntur. Stella igitur singularis & inusitata magnitudinis, supra communem sortem Principum Principem designat, hoc est, magnum & eximium. Sequitur Et nomen STELLÆ dicitur ABSINTHIUM. Schema est propheticum, quo, nominis quasi proprii impositione, rei aut personæ de qua agitur qualitas aut fatum indicetur; cum aliàs etiam in Hebraismo פְּנִיָּהּ פְּנִיָּהּ sit το πρῶτον, ut Luc. 1. 37. Non est impossibile Deo πᾶν πῶτα & Vocari idem valeat quod Esse vel Existere, ut Isa. 56. 7. Domus mea Domus orationis vocabitur; pro quo Luc. 19. 46. Domus orationis ὅτι, est, erit, habebitur; & Gen. 21. 12. In Isaac vocabitur tibi semen, id est, erit. Videsis quoque Septuag. Isaï. 14. 20. Ruth. 4. 11. Schematis autem quod dixi exempla passim obvia sunt. Sic enim Isaï. 7. 14. de Christo, Vocabitur nomen ejus Emmanuel; i. Θεάνθρωπος &c. erit. Et cap. 9. 6. Vocabitur nomen ejus Admirabilis, Consiliarius, Deus fortis, Pater futuri seculi, Princeps pacis; id est, erit hæc omnia. Item Jerem. 23. 6. Et hoc est nomen quo vocabunt eum, DOMINUS JUSTITIA NOSTRA. Et Zachariæ 6. 12. Ecce vir GERMEN nomen ejus: sequitur, quia ex loco suo germinabit, &c. Adde Apocalypf. 19. 13. Vocatur nomen ejus VERBUM DEI; id est, ipse est Verbum illud Dei. Istis gemina sunt quæ habentur Jer. 20. 3, 4. Non Pashurem vocat Dominus nomen tuum, sed Magor-missabib, [id est, formidinem circumquaque] Nam sic ait Dominus, Ecce ego inditurus sum tibi formidinem, tibi & omnibus amicis tuis. Et Ezech. 23. 4. Nomina earum (id est, Mulierum Samariæ & Jerusalem) Abolab & Abolibab. Adde Isaï. 8. 3. Hof. 1. 6, 7.

Simili omnino figurâ stella hæc lapsa abunda ABSINTHIUM dicitur, id est, (notione Hebræorum, quibus abstracta pro concretis adhibeantur) ABSINTHITES, Princeps nempe amaritudinum & erumnarum. Cujusmodi reverâ fuit, si quis unquam, Cæsar iste Hesperius, perpetuis ærumnis à primo exortu suo ad finem usque exercitus. Quo nimirum rerum potiunte, Imperium Romanum ruiturum esset: cujus imò constitutione occasio ruinæ data, eò quòd, investâ istiusmodi Imperii divisione, via Barbaris patefacta, resque Romana in atrocissimas calamitates conjecta fuerit. Annon hic propter amarum sibi & aliis sortem Absinthium meritò diceretur? juxta illud Naomi, Nè vocate me Naomin, vocate me Maran; eò quòd amaritudine affecit me Omnipotens, Ruth 1. 20.

Sed priusquam hinc abeam, de Civitatis reique Romanæ, post istum Cæsaris sui casum, statu aliquid dicendum est, ut via sequentis Tubæ interpretationi muniatur. Cæsare igitur Occidentis sic deturbato atque extincto, interea Odoacer Herulus Italian annis 16 Regio nomine obtinuit; qui Romæ & Occidenti Consulatum, quem tamen initio iratus ademerat, post biennium restituit, adhucque conservavit. Hunc excepit Ostrogothorum Rex Theodoricus; idque, ut refert Paulus Diaconus, Imperatore Orientis Zenone Italiam ei per pragmaticam tradente, ac sacro velamine capiti imposito confirmante. Qui, Odoacre devicto ac trucidato, præter Dalmatiam & Rhætiā, quæ Odoacris provinciæ erant, Siciliam quoque regno adjecit, Urbis Romæ mœnia nonnullaque ædificia, ingenti ad eam rem pecuniæ summâ collatâ, refecit; adeò ut ad præteritæ fortunæ fastigium nihil desiderari posse, exemptâ Urbis direptæ atque incensæ infamiâ, videretur: regnum sapientissimè ordinavit, nullum Romanum institutum mutavit, sed Senatū & Consules, Patricios, Præfectos prætorio, Præfectum urbis, Quæstorem, Comitem sacrarum largitionum, Comitem privatarum, & militiæ, Comitem domesticorum, Magistros peditum & equitum, ceterosque qui fuerant in Imperio magistratus retinuit, eosque Romanis hominibus tantum mandavit. Id quod à successoribus quoque, Athalarico, Theodohato, Vitige, regibus Italiæ Ostrogothicis, aliquandiu servatum est. Vide Sigonium de Imperio Occidentali lib. 15. anno 479. lib. 16. annis 493, 494, 500.

Romæ defecerat; deinde ipsa à Totila semel iterumque capta, incensa, tertiâque sui parte demolita, incolis insuper omnibus (memorandum fortunæ ludibrium!) destituta, à Narsete tandem post tot funera & clades recepta, verum turbine paulò post & fulguribus prostrata; Urbium quondam REGINA Consulari potestate, Senatûs auctoritate, reliquisque, quibus tanquam stellis Orbem hætenus irradiaverat, Magistratibus nunc demum orbata, in nescio quem ignobilem Ducatum ex tanto gloriæ fulgore dilapsa est, Ravennæ, cui olim imperaverat, deinceps sub Exarchatu servire coacta (heu tenebras!) & tributa pendere.

Atque hæc fuit quæ * hic memoratur Solis, Lunæ & Stellarum tertiâ parte percussio, quâ factum est ut tertiâ pars diei non luceret, & tertiâ pars noctis similiter. Ubi Diei nomine vocatur Lumen diurnum, quod Solis est; Noctis verò, Lumen nocturnum, quod Lunæ & Stellarum; juxta illud Jerem. 31. 35. Qui dat solem in lumen Diei, & statuta Lunæ & Stellarum in lumen noctis. Sol Romæ fulsit, quamdiu Consularis dignitas & Regnum super alias urbes & provincias penes ipsam fuit: Luna & stellæ ibidem luxerunt, quamdiu pristina Senatûs reliquorumque Magistratuum auctoritas adhuc mansit. At his omnibus sublati, (quod hæc Tubâ factum est) quid nisi tenebræ & Luminis tam diurni quàm nocturni omnimodum deliquium fuit? nempe quod ipsam attingebat, cui tertiâ pars Luminis Cœli debebatur.

Frequentissima est hæc mente Solis, Lunæ & Stellarum Imago apud Prophetas. Ut Isai. 13. 10. item 60. 20. ubi pro, Non occidet ultra Sol tuus, & Luna tua non minuetur, &c. Targum habet, Non cessabit amplius Regnum tuum, (Jerusalem alloquitur) & gloria tua non auferetur. Etiam Jerem. 15. 9. ubi de Jerusalem, Occidit Sol ejus, cum adhuc esset Dies: Targum vertit, Migravit gloria eorum in vita eorum. Et Ezech. 32, 7. idem Paraphrastes illud de Pharaone, Operiam, cum extinxero te, cælos, & Stellæ nigrescere faciam, vertit, Operiet te tribulatio, cum extinxero splendorem gloriæ regni tui, &c.

Transferat huc Lector etiam quæ suprà ex Achmete notavi, ad lucem Sigillo sexto faciendam: quæ mirum est quàm convenient.

DE TRIBUS

VÆ-TUBIS.

Vers. 13.

REstant adhuc tres Tubæ omnium maximæ & gravissimæ, ideóque trium VÆ appellatione à prioribus discriminatæ. Nam post quartæ Tubæ ἐξήκοντα, Vidi & audiui, inquit, Angelum quendam volantem per medium cæli, dicentem voce magnâ, VÆ, VÆ, VÆ habitantibus super terram, à reliquis vocibus Tubæ trium Angelorum qui deinceps clauduri sunt. Item cap. 9. 12. & 11. 14. Nimirum, cum Christiani Romani Orbis incolæ, interim dum priores Tubæ clangerent, novorum idolorum cultu sese contaminassent, duplici jam peccato vindicando, quæ supererant Tubæ auctiores factæ sunt. Nam istud quoque Romani Orbis peccatum, cum priori cædis Martyrum, deinde in criminis vindicandi censum venire, apparet ex eo quodd secundo VÆ subnectitur elogium; nempe, Reliquos homines qui istis plagis (scilicet, ut ego quidem intelligo, VÆ isto & priore) occisi non fuerint, non respicuisse ab operibus manuum suarum, ut nè adorarent demonia, & simulacra aurea, & argentea, & area, & lapidea, & lignea, quæ neque cernere possunt, neque audire, neque ambulare. Cap. 9. 20.

PRIMA VÆ-TUBA, SEU TUBA V.

PRIMA VÆ-Tuba jamdudum præterit. Ea horrenda LOCUSTARUM agmina ex tartareo Abyss, jam SATANÆ operâ adaptæ, fumo scaturientium, Orbi vastando emisit; id est, SARACENOS sive ARABES (gentem populosam & numerosam Locustarum instar) stupendâ Muhammedis Pseudopphetiâ in tot Gentium exitium concitatos. Ad Cap. 9.

Fumus enim ex infernali puteo ascendens Mahummedismus est, quem Nebulones Muhammedani Islamismum vocant. Hic Orbem terrarum, Christi Solis justitiæ imperio & disciplinâ, discussis Gentilium errorum tenebris, jamdudum illuminatum novâ caligine obduxit. Vers. 2.

Et eò quidem concinnior est LOCUSTARUM typus, quia Locustæ quoque Vers. 3. Ægyptiacæ ex eadem Arabia venerunt, Ægypto nempe ad Orientem conterminâ. Itâ enim Exod. 10. 13, 14. Dominus adduxit ventum Orientalem in terram — & apportavit locustas; & ascenderunt locustæ super totam terram Ægypti, resederuntque in ora tota Ægypti. Adhæc Arabes, propter insignem Gentis multitudinem, locustis assimulantur. Judic. 7. 12. Midianitæ & Amalekitæ, & omnes filii Kedem seu Orientis, jacebant in convalle tanquam locustæ multitudine; camelisque eorum non erat numerus, sicut arena quæ est in littore maris multitudine. Ubi observandum, Arabes in Sacris literis peculiariter Filios Orientis nominari, ut & Arabiam ipsam קֶדֶם KEDEM seu Orientem; utique respectu Ægypti, ubi Israelitæ sic loqui didicerant. Videtis Gen. 10. 30. & 25. 6. 1 Reg. 4. 30. Isai. 11. 14. Jer. 49. 28. fortè & Matth. 2. 1. Eâdem planè ratione, quâ hodie Asia minor Natolia dicitur, & Arabia felix reliquis Arabiis ad Austrum sita, Ayaman, i. Meridies. Unde Regina Austri, Matth. 12. 42. Sed hæc obiter.

Similem autem Locustarum Imaginem, de Assyriis Babylonisque Judæam vastaturis, videre est apud Joëlem, duobus primis capitibus: unde hunc typum mutuatum esse non negabit qui utriusque descriptionem contulerit.

Ejus verò interpretationem ad hostiles copias referendam esse ostendit ex usu Orientis Achmetes, cujus verba hoc loco inferenda putavi. Sic igitur ille cap. CCC. ex Indorum, Persarum & Ægyptiorum disciplinis:

LOCUSTA generaliter ad hostium multitudinem haud dubiè refertur. Sic enim in Sacris literis perscriptum est, Locustas jussu divino ad vastationes regionum instar alicujus exercitus proficisci. Hoc de sacris literis, Indorum solorum est, ut quicquid in hoc libro Religionis Christianæ notitiam sapiat, sicut legenti apparebit. Pergit:

Si quis aut Rex, aut potestate præditus, LOCUSTAS adversus aliquam regionem profectas videre visus fuerit; eo in loco multitudinem hostium cum magna potentia expectet; quantumque Locustæ damni dederint, tantundem & illi nocebunt.

Jam igitur firmatâ imagine, de reliqua descriptione videbimus.

Data est illis (inquit ver. 3.) potestas qualem habent terrestres Scorpia: nam habebant (vers. 10.) caudas similes scorpionibus, in iisque aculeos quibus nocerent; & (vers. 5.) tormentum earum ut tormentum Scorpia, quando percusserit hominem.

Id est, non solum potestatem haberent Locustis propriam, regiones quas permearent erodendi & depopulandi; sed, quod monstri simile, Caudas instar scorpionum, quorum ictu venenum quoque diffunderent. Mira res, Locusta scorpia! Quid autem mali innuat, loqui videtur speciei Serpentinæ symbolum: siquidem Scorpia serpentine generis est. Hujus autem speciei, quâ primùm genus humanum decepit, à Deoque avertit Diabolus, amat ipsum Spiritus S. porro homines seducturum introducere. Unde est illud, Ὁ ὄφις ὁ ἀρχαῖος ὁ παλαιὸς τὴν οἰκουμένην, cap. 12. 9. & 20. 2. Cauda igitur scorpionis cum aculeo Diabolicæ illius Pseudopphetiæ Muhammedicæ propaginem cum toto apparatu suo denotat, quibus LOCUSTÆ ARABICÆ, haud minùs quàm vi bellicâ fretæ, ubi ubi gentium grassatæ sint (infandum!) nocuere. Imo hoc fœdissimorum errorum syrma primi post homines natos post se traxerunt SARACENI; nec simili (credo) de religione imposturâ, prætextuque destruendi Idolorum cultûs, ulla unquam gens ante hos subnixa, ad Orbis Imperium contenderat.

Ad Cap. 9. sed ipsis dictum est, "Ἰνα μὴ ἀδικήσωσι τὸ χόρτον τῆ γῆς, ἡ δὲ πᾶν χλωρόν, ἡ δὲ πᾶν δένδρον· εἰ μὴ τὸς ἀνθρώπους μόνους, homines solos qui non haberent signum Dei in frontibus suis.

Rom. 14. 14.
& alibi.

Pro significatione particulæ εἰ μὴ, sensus est vel exceptivus, ut nullam neque herbam (nam hæc est χόρτος. Hellenistis) neque viridi neque arborem læderent, nisi eas herbas solas, arbores & viridia quæ Dei signo non erant inscripta (nempe ut homines, ac herbae, arbores & viridia mutuo sese explicent : ) Vel potest non exceptivè, sed adversativè exponi, pro usu particulæ εἰ μὴ in Hellenismo * sacro pro ἀλλὰ. nempe quod dictum sit ipsis, non ut, pro vulgario Locustarum more, aut herbas, aut arbores, aut ullum omnino viride depalcerent ; quinimo ut, illis insuper habitis, homines solos depopulerentur ; ex eorum scilicet numero quos Angeli Sigillum initio Tubarum ab earum plagis immunes non fecerat.

Utro utro modo accipiatur, de significatione & discrimine Graminis viridis & arborum frustra essemus solliciti ; utpote quæ ad τὸ πᾶν figuræ referenda sint, in quo mysterium non est quærendum. Sic enim de Locustis Ægyptiacis Exod. 10. 15. Operiebant superficiem totius terræ, ita ut obscuraretur terra ; absumebantque omnem herbam (Septuag. χόρτον) terræ & omnem fructum arboris, neque residua facta est ulla viriditas (χλωρόν) in ulla arbore aut in herba agri per totam terram Ægyptiorum. Quod verò nostræ Locustæ homines ipsos affligerent, hinc patet non esse eas ex Insectorum genere, putà naturales Locustas, sed symbolicas. Quā occasione operæ pretium erit regulam istam semel ponere, Quando quid Typo prophetico tribuitur quod eidem per naturam non competat, id ad rei typo significatæ intellectum manuducere, proutque ejus conditione interpretationem faciendam monere. Id quod quater ad minimum in hac Visione fieri animadvertes ; ut cùm Locustis tribuitur non tantum potestas homines ipsos invadendi, sed & facies humana, capilli muliebres, corona aurea, lorica ferrea : quibus omnibus innuitur, non insecta, sed homines designari ; eosque minime cucullatos, ut multi autumant, sed omnino qui armis in aliorum perniciem grassentur. De quibus Locustis porro dicitur,

Datum esse illis, non ut occiderent homines, sed ut torquerent eos menses quinque. Nempe hoc differunt LOCUSTÆ ARABICÆ ab Equitibus Euphratais, de quibus in sequenti Tuba. Datum erat Saracenis, Romani nominis gentes diu & immaniter cruciari ; sed ipsum Triental, ut ita loquar, Romanum alterutra ex parte vitā spoliare, nequaquam datum erat. Nam cùm, interea dum priores Tubæ clangerent, ex politici statûs ruinis, Regnum novum Pontificale veteris Romæ, quasi pari cum alterius ruina passu, succreverat : neque hujus, neque novæ illius Romæ Constantinopolis Regnum Saraceni delere potuerint. Contrà Turcæ, urbe regiâ captâ, Constantinopolitanum funditus è medio sustulere, ut in sequenti Tuba audiemus. De mensibus autem quinque, quibus iste à Locustis cruciatus definitur, commodiùs dicemus ubi ad eorum repetitionem ventum v. 10.

Per eos dies homines querent mortem, & non invenient eam : & cupient mori, & fugiet mors ab iis ; id est, Tanta esset istorum temporum calamitas, ut homines vitæ suæ tæderet.

Nè enim putes nudis persuasionibus aut deceptionum præstigiis actum fuisse ; armis, idque ex ipsius Muhammedis instituto, rem gessere. Quorum apparatus satis quidem terribilis, unâ cum dominationis acquirendæ amplitudine, Gentisque belligerantis habitu, luculentâ imagine depingitur. Bellicus apparatus ita : Et figuræ locustarum similes equis (id est, equitibus) paratis ad prælium. Dentes earum ut Leonum (id est, fortes erant ad devorandum, Joel. 1. 6. Dan. 7. v. 7, 23.) Et habebant loricas ut loricas ferreas ; & sonitus alarum ipsarum ut sonitus currum, equis multis currentibus ad bellum. Tota descriptio ex Joële petita est, unde ipsa, ut dixi, Locustarum Imago. Vid. cap. 2. 4. cap. 1. 6. cap. 2. 5. Successum & dominationis acquirendæ amplitudinem indicant Impositæ capitibus earum tanquam corona similes auro. Neque sanè immerito. Nulli unquam Genti tam latè regnatum fuit, neque tam brevi temporis spatium unquam tot regna, tot regiones, sub jugum missa. Incredibile dictu, verissimum tamen est ; Octoginta, aut non multò plurium, annorum spacio subjugarunt illi & Diabolico regno Muhammedis acquisiverunt Palæstinam, Syriam, Armeniam utramque, totam ferme Asiam minorem, Persiam, Indiam, Ægyptum, Numidiam, Barbariam totam ad Nigrum usque fluvium, Lusitaniam, Hispaniam. Neque hîc stetit illorum fortuna, aut ambitio, donec & Italiæ magnam quoque partem adjecerint, ad portas usque Urbis Romæ ; quinetiam Siciliam, Candiam, Cyprum & reliquas Maris mediterranei insulas. Deus bone, quantus hic terrarum tractus ! quot hîc coronæ ! Unde dignum quoque observatu est, non hîc, ut in cæteris Tubis, Trientis mentionem fieri :

Restat de Gentis belligerantis habitu. Et facies earum, inquit, ut facies hominum. Fuerunt Locustæ istæ facie humanâ, id est, reverâ homines, (nè quis fortè de Insectis agi putet) habentes capillos ut capillos mulierum, id est, natione ARABES, qui, inquit Plinius, intonso utuntur crine, & (mulierum more) mitrati degunt, Plin. lib. 6. capite 28. quibus hodièque moris est, ut peregrinatores affirmant, ituris in prælum, ex proprio capillo sibi cornua & cincinnosnectere; Camerar. Operum subcis. Tom. 1. c. 93. Unde perspicuum evadit, locum à Brightmanno nostro ex Herodoto in Thalia, quasi pro Arabum tonsura, laudatum, non de capitis, sed aut de barbæ tondendæ ritu aliquo Arabibus Bacchi imitatione usitato (cujus & Plinius aliquatenus meminit, cum barbam iisdem abradi solitam dicit, præterquam in superiori labro) aut de extremorum crinium rotundatione, citra integram capitis tonsuram, accipiendum esse. Quorum utrumque, fortè quia Bacchi, vicini ipsis Deastri, cultorum insigne fuit, Deus populo suo vetuit, Levit. 19. 27. & 21. 5. Ut ut sit, quin Plinius Arabes Romæ vidisset, nullus dubito.

Sequitur de plagæ duratione, quæ quidem Quinque mensibus determinatur, pro typo Locustarum, quæ totidem mensibus durant; nempe ab exortu Vergiliarum (veteribus exitu Veris dicto, uno circiter ab Æquinoctio verno mense) quando ex ovis in terra per hyemem relictis in lucem emittuntur, usque ad initium Autumni, quando, alteris ovis ad subsequens anni sobolem in terram depositis, statim moriuntur. Videtis Plinium lib. 11. c. 29:

Voluit tamen Deus hanc temporis notationem non modò typo sed etiam antitypo convenire, cum principem terrarum Italiam, & peccati quod plagam attraxerit antesignanam, Locustis Saracenici infestandam tradidit, ab anno 830 ad annum 980, id est, annis 150, seu mensibus annalibus quinque.

Alibi quidem terrarum diutiùs, sed ordine quodam, & aliis atque aliis temporum intervallis, incubuit plaga; maximè regionibus Orientalibus, Syriæ, Ægypti, atque minoris Asiæ, quæ capiti imperii istius quod Damasci primùm, deinde Bagdadi fuit, conterminæ, in anteriores quasi corporis Saracenici partes per multa secula cessere.

Utque illud notem; Licet quascunque occupârunt terras, earum incolas venenato illo Caudæ Scorpionie, quem dixi, ictu cruciavere; tamen Itali aliâ nescio quâ & singulari ratione Caudæ Locustarum ictum sensisse videntur. Toto enim examine corpori assimilato, anterioribusque partibus, ut par est, Orienti assignatis; quid agmina Africana erunt, tanto à capite intervallo in Occidentem porrecta, nisi Caudæ? Atqui ab istis omnis Italiæ calamitas, quam utique obliquo (vide Scorpionum ingenium) per Mare mediterraneum, ejusque insulas Sardiniam & Siciliam, ictu continenter teriebant: quasi huc nimirum digitum intenderet Spiritus S. cum, iteratâ mentione Mensium, dixerit, Et habebant caudas similes Scorpionibus & aculeos; & in caudis suis habebant potestatem nocendi hominibus MENSES QUINQUE. * Ità enim legit Codex Complutensis, suffragantibus Syro, Primasio, Andrea, & Areta. Cujusmodi interpretatio licet temporis designationi non inconcinna foret; tamen aliam esse, multoque latius sese diffundentem, Syrmatis illius serpentine significationem, jam suprà dixi, neque hîc muto. Si quis de secundo alioquin sensu (cujusmodi ego haud facillè admittere soleo) persuaderi sibi patietur, per me quidem licet.

Atque hæc una ratio est quâ Quinque menses typi Locustarum, rei gestæ aptari possint. Est & alia, si modò ex eo quodd Menses isti quinque * bis ponantur, geminetur calculus: quasi nimirum voluisset Spiritus Sanct. quinarium numerum adhibere, propter analogiam & τὸ πρῆπον Typi; duplicare verò, ut antitypo insigniori aliquo intervallo responderet. Quorsum enim alioquin Mensium istorum notationem iisdem penè verbis iteraret? Annon mysterium aliquod huic iterationi subest? Simile enim alibi, in continua ejusdem Typi descriptione, factum non memini.

Si quæras adhuc, quorsum Spiritus S. integram plagæ Saracenicæ durationem numeris hisce non comprehenderet, cum ante hunc Abasidarum principatum, ab anno nempe 630, Saraceni continuis successibus adeo imperium propagassent, ut jam quasi ad αὐτὴν suam pervenisset: responderi potest, quia numerus iste quinque mensium, magis typi Locustarum fuit, quàm antitypi Saracenorum; ideoque qui illis propriè compete-bat, sat erat si in istis insigniori aliquâ intervalli ratione exhiberetur, etiam si non integre mensuraret. Nihil tamen hic statuo, sed aliis, quibus plus à Deo datum fuerit, amplius disquirendum relinquo. Hæc interim difficultas interpretationi de Saracenis nihil præjudicat. Nam quæcumque interpretationem sequeris, eadem difficultas te urgebit.

Videtur Spiritus Sanctus, quod Angelum Abyssî Regem dicit, innuere, Locustas hæc fore Gentem, non Christianam, sed infidelem quæ Christo nomen non dedisset. Dicuntur enim Paulo, Ephes. 2.2. filii incredulitatis, seu Pagani, Principi subesse cui potestas est aeris; qui non alius est quàm Abyssî Angelus: contrà, qui Christiani fiunt, è Satanæ potestate erepti ad Deum converti, Act. 26. 18.

Quicquid sit, res est disquisitione dignissima, cur hunc Abyssî Principem hîc nomine planè novo & inaudito appellet; neque, ut solet, Diabolum, Satanam, Serpentem, aut Draconem: aut, si à perdendi notione maluisset, cur non potius Asmodeum, nomine ἰσχυροῦ, quocum Judæi vocare jam assueverant; Abaddonem verò nunquam. An quia, cum Muhammedani gloriarentur non alium se Deum colere & adorare quàm unum illum & solum Deum Demiurgum seu Factorem Universi, qui Chaldaïs & Syris עבדא ABUDA audit, ipsique adeo Arabibus epitheto אבדי ABDI, id est, æterni, insignitur; iis Spiritus Sanctus occurrere voluerit contrarii sensûs, sed similis soni, vocabulo? quo nimirum innueret, tantum abesse ut illi (quicquid contendat) ABUDAN vel ABDIN, æternum illum Mundi opificem, venerarentur, ut Dei ipsius æstimatione, quem μονοθεὸς esse volunt, neque per Christum adeundum, non ipsum, sed Angelum nequam ABADDONEM, id est, Mundi non Factorem, sed Perditorem, Regis seu Numinis loco haberent. Sic cum putarent Jeroboamita se Deum Israelis in vitulis suis coluisse; ait tamen Scriptura, eos Dæmonibus sacrificasse, 2 Par. 11. 15.

An verò allusum esse dicemus ad commune Regum Arabiæ nomen ejus tractûs, unde Muhammedes primitus cum Locustis proditurus erat; qui à prisco Rege OBODA in Deorum numerum à suis relato, cujusque à sepulchro OBODA regioni Nabathæorum nomen mansit, OBODÆ deinceps, potestatis nomine, dicti sunt; sicut Ægypti Reges Pharaones & Ptolemæi, Romanorum Cæsares, Parthorum Arsaces, & contermini Petræorum Arabum Reges Aretæ? Stephanus enim Byzantinus, ex Uranii, rerum Arabicarum scriptoris, lib. 4. ὈΒΟΔΑ, inquit, ἡγεῖται * Ναβαθαίων, ὅπως ὈΒΟΔΗΣ, ὁ βασιλεὺς, ὃν δεσποῦνται, τέτραπται. Ab hoc autem deinceps istius tractûs Reges communi nomine OBODAS dictos, fidem mihi faciunt Strabo & Josephus. Quorum hic duos ejus nominis commemorat: <sup>b</sup> unum bellicosum, nimiumque Judæis clade Alexandri Jamnei regis sui notum; quem nempe OBODAS iste Arabs, toto exercitu ejus in Galaadensi regione caeso, Hierosolymam fugere coegit, annis ante Christum plus minùs nonaginta; quem non immerito Judæi levi immutatione ABADDON, id est, Perditorem, vocare potuissent. <sup>c</sup> Alterum segnem & inertem, Herodis magni ὁ ἡγεῖται, cujus Procurator Syllæus (qui res ejus pro libitu administrabat) Salomen Herodis sororem in matrimonium sibi deposcebat: sed voto frustratus, atque inimicus Herodi factus, eundem calumniis apud Augustum in non exiguum discrimen adduxit. Hujus OBODÆ semel atque iterum meminit Strabo in Ælii Galli expeditione Arabica, idque cum eadem pigritiei nota; aitque eundem vicino Regi Aretæ (commune & hoc nomen, ut dixi, conterminorum Petræ Regum fuit) affinitate conjunctum fuisse. Ex eodem colligere est, OBODÆ regnum magis Austrum versùs situm ad mare rubrum pertinuisse: quo terrarum tractu Ismaelitas & Saracenos habitasse credo. Certè enim Nabathæos, quorum tractus, Uranio teste, OBODAM regionem complectebatur, Ismaelitas fuisse constat, à <sup>d</sup> Nabaiotho Ismaelis primogenito id nominis sortitos. Addit Josephus, OBODA vitâ defuncto, Aretam, favente Augusto, regnum ejus suo adjunxisse.

Si quis igitur, tantâ rerum convenientiâ & concinnitate permotus, opinabitur Spiritum S. hoc nomen ABADDON de industria adhibuisse, ut παρωμασισ quadam nominis Regii ad eam Gentem digitum intenderet, cui in more positum Reges suos, imò & Deos, simili appellatione cognominare; ego quidem eum veniâ dignum putem;

Angelos alligatos jubet solvi, ut qui, durante adhuc superiore plagâ, in Romanas regiones irrumpentes, ad Euphratem aliquot seculis cohibiti fuerant, nè porro pro libitu grassarentur. Principio quidem paulò ulteriùs sunt progressi, ad Nicæam Bithyniæ usque; sed ab Argonautis Christianis in expeditione Hierosolymitana, devicto Solimanno, denuo ad Euphratem compulsi.

Porro Angeli quatuor totidem Sultanias seu Regna significant, in quæ Turcæ, cum primùm, trajecto Euphrate, in vicinos Asiæ & Syriæ tractus sese effudissent, disperiebantur. Hæc ex Scilicet authore Græco sic enumerat Christophorus Richerius de origine Turcarum; Asianum, Alepiense, Damascenum, & quartum Antiochenum. Quorum primum Asianum seu minoris Asiæ, exordium suum debuit Cutlumuso, (Elmachino, ni fallor, alio nomine Sedjduddaulæ dicto) Tangrolipicis illius qui Bagdadum primus ceperat, propinquo. Is, eodem teste, Cæsareâ Cappadociæ circa annum Christi 1080 expugnatâ & Romanis ademptâ, sibi & posteris suis, in Asiæ partibus Euphrati conterminis, regnum inchoavit. Cujus fines deinde ampliavit successor Solimannus ad Nicæam Bithyniæ usque; sed à nostris in famigerata illa expeditione Hierosolymitana devictus, universam quam acquisierat regionem relinquere & ad Euphratem recedere coactus est. Atque hujus Tetrarchiæ sedes, etsi initio alibi, maximam tamen partem, Iconii in eadem Cappadocia fuit.

Tertia Tetrarchia, metropoli Damasco, conditorem habuit (eodem teste) Tagjuddaulam Nisum Togrulbeci (seu Tangrolipicis) nepotem, qui Damascum subjugavit eodem anno 1079. Hujus successor Ducathes seu Decacus fuit, Roduwani Sultani Alepiensis frater, anno 1095. Cui, inquit Scilix, parebat omnis regio Decapoleos. Hæc autem Euphratem attingebat.

Hic quartam annumerat Scilix Antiochenam, modicis finibus contentam. Nam, inquit, Laodiceam usque Syriæ Caliphas Ægypti è gente Saracenica possidebat regiones. Sed cum regnum illud Antiochenum, ut ab Euphrate paulò remotius, ita non nisi quatuordecim annis duraverit, Antiochiâ statim, Boamundo duce, à nostris captâ; præstitit forsan, eo expuncto, Imperium Bagdadense seu Persicum ab altera Euphratis Atque iste rerum Turcicarum status fuit cum primum Euphratem trajecerant, & quasi irruptionis in terras Romanas specimine dato, præstitutis ad Euphratem carceribus coercerentur. Ut ut autem iste Sultaniarum quaternio ad tempus laxationis integer non permanerit, sed varias mutationum vices subierit: tamen Spiritus Sanct. gentem æstimat ex primæ irruptionis statu, quo, Euphrate trajecto, ligati sunt ad tempus constitutum.

Et soluti sunt quatuor isti Angeli, parati ad horam & diem & mensem & annum, ut occiderent tertiam partem hominum.

Solutio hæc Turcarum contigit paulò ante annum 1300, Caliphatu Bagdadenfi (quocum V Æ primum penitus exspiravit) jam à Tartaris ann. 1258 extincto, & Turcarum reliquiis, qui ab altera Euphratis ripa rerum in Perside hucusque potiri fuerant, ab iisdem ann. 1289, quasi ex funda, in regiones Romanas cis Euphratem ejectis. Sic enim rebus comparatis, accidit quoque ut eodem tempore Latini, qui primis Turcarum irruptionibus, jam ducentis ferè annis, fræna & compedes injece- rant, ex Syria & Palæstina, anno utique 1291. expellerentur. Interea Turcæ, licet in varias adhuc Satrapias distracti, totam ferè Asiam minorem incurfare, inter sese hæreditario jure possidendam dividere, tandemque sub unius Othomanni imperio coeuntes, omnimodò laxatis habenis immanè grassari, in Europam trajicere: neque ullà ampliùs vi iisdem obisti potuit, donec Imperium Constantinopolitanum univer- sum miserandis stragibus excidissent.

Sed & hujus cladis Constantinopolitanæ tempus quoque, ni fallor, designat Ora- culum: fore nempe eam post Diem, Mensem, & Annum, id est, annos 396, quam Turcæ, dato iis Imperio Saracenicò, à Deo parari cœperant; id est, à Bagdado ab iis- dem capta. Hoc enim irruptionis Turcicæ initium fuit, quo Imperium Saracenicum demoliri cœptum, & Ditio Romanorum affligi; ita tamen, ut vis mali ad præstitutum laxationi tempus coercenda esset. Intervallum certè temporis ad unguem congruit. Refert enim is, quem jam aliquoties laudavi, Elmachinus historicus Arabs, quo ne- mo temporum momenta accuratiùs annotavit, Togrulbecum salghucidem, Turcarum principem, (hic est qui nostris Tangrolipix dicitur, ex familia Zelzuccia) captâ regiâ urbe Bagdado, à Calipha Cajimo Biamrilla veste imperiali indutum, atque regno in- auguratum fuisse, ann. Hegiræ 449, id est, Christi 1057. tunc, inquit, stabilitum ei fuit imperium. Ab hoc igitur tempore Turcæ, datâ iis Imperii Saracenicì arce cum tota ditione Transeuphratensi, præparati sunt ut post Diem, mensem & annum propheticum occiderent tertiam partem hominum; id est, anno Christi 1453, Imperii Romani in Oriente Oriente reliquum, captâ regiâ urbe Constantinopoli, funditus excinderint. Intervallum enim, ab anno 1057 ad annum 1453 captæ Constantinopoleos, est præcisè annorum 396. quorum Dies efficit unum, Mensis 30, Annus 365. Tanta est hîc accuratio calculi, ut facilè quis in suspensionem deveniat, etiam Horam (quæ juxta cæterorum rationem quindecim dies efficeret) eventui pariter responsuram, si mensis quoque inaugurationis Togrulbecianæ perinde atque annus proditus fuisset. Interim, donec illud constiterit, Ora hîc sumi potest, non pro vicesima dici parte, sed pro tempore opportuno, & conjunctio Kai exponi ἐνῆντικῶς, quasi Parati in tempus opportunum, nempe, in diem, mensem & annum, ut occiderent tertiam partem hominum. Quot verò anni deinceps currebant ad Regni Turcici excidium, nusquam habetur; tantummodo, ad finem temporum BESTIÆ id futurum dicitur; nempe V Æ secundum tunc abiturum quando V Æ tertium Regno BESTIÆ abolendo immineret, cap. 11. vers. 14, 15.

Sed priusquam hinc abeam, illud haud sanè invitus fatebor; Ni tam exacta prophetiæ cum re gesta convenientia quasi manus mihi injiceret, aliam, nempe istiusmodi, interpretationem haudquaquam displicituram fuisse; Angelos istos ad omnem occasionem paratos & instructos fuisse, sive horâ sive die, sive menfe, sive etiam anno ad rem gerendam opus fuerit. Sed an verisimile sit, tam accuratum temporis responsum, qualem hîc eventus exhibet, casu contigisse, penès alios judicium esto. Erit fortè cui religio erit existimare.

Sequitur de qualitate & numero copiarum: Et numerus, inquit, τὸ ἰππικόν, exercitus equestris, duæ myriades myriadum. EQUITATUM nominat, nec quid præterea copiarum in tota plagæ descriptione; quasi hic hostis ab Euphrate totus Equitatus esset. An quia in militia Turcica Equitatus peditatum tantum superet, ut hic præ illo nullo numero sit? Imò (quod Spiritum S. præcipuè respexisse credo) quia hic ipse character est, jam dudum ab Ezech. sacratus, Gentis MAGOG, quâ Turcæ oriundi sunt. Sic enim illa in prophetia illa celeberrima de GOGO (nomen hoc fuit Ezechielis avo Regum Magogicorum * commune, sicut Pharao Ægyptiorum) gentem eam describit ab Equestri militia. cap. 38. 4. Et educam te, inquit, & omnem exercitum tuum, EQUOS & EQUITES, lorice vestitos universos. Iterum v. 15. Et venies de loco tuo à lateribus Aquilonis, tu & populi multi tecum, ASCENSORES EQUORUM UNIVERSI, &c. Porro GOGUS iste vocatur princeps primarius Mesheck & Tubal, id est, qui finibus suis egressus, utrique Armeniæ, ultracitrâque Euphratem, imperitaret. Citerioris hîc Armeniæ nomine Cappadocas comprehendo, antiquitus Meschinus & Moschos nuncupatos, ubi & oppidum primarium Mazacha, postea Cæsarea dicta, & in eodem tractu Moschici montes incolarum à Mesheck oriundorum non obscura indicia. Ulterior seu major Armenia est, quæ hodie à Turcarum incolatu Turcomania dicitur; in qua olim Urbs Thelbalana, Tibareni & Balbiteni populi, Teleboas fluvius, & alia nominis Tubal vestigia. Non tamen, quod Ezechiel narrat, bellum de hac quam Joannes describit Turcarum irruptione capiendum, (hanc ille tantummodo innuere videtur) verùm de alia sub Judæorum reditum novissima, idque, si fas est conjicere, hâc quæ nunc occupat prius nonnihil recedente, intelligendum est.

Sed de Equitatus typo est & aliud quod bona Lectoris cum venia adjiciam: sed pacto, ne quis me putet nominum & etymologiarum ludificationibus plùs nimio indulgere. Cibi etiam solidi & bene præparati, cum condimento suaviores esse solent. Nè igitur fastidiat Lector, si ejusmodi quid apponam: Turcas scilicet, ante solutionem, longo jam incolatu Persas fuisse, eoque nomine Byzantinis historicis passim appellatos. Certè Nicetas, qui maximam temporis partem, quo apud Euphratem cohibiti sunt, historiâ complexus est, serè semper Persas vocat, rarissimè Turcas. PERSÆ autem, si attendas, vel ipso nominis sono EQUITES sunt; quandoquidem פֶּרֶס PARS, quo nomine in Sacris libris vocatur Persia (quacum eadem est, aliâ tantùm pronunciatione, Parthia) tribus linguis Orientalibus, Hebraicâ, Chaldaicâ, Arabicâ, Equum vel Equitem designat. Hâc igitur ratione EQUITES Euphratei sunt TURCO-PERSÆ, id est, Euphratis accolæ gentilitio nomine Equites dicti.

Nec deesse videtur (si quis fortè insolentiam objiciat) hujusmodi allusionis exemplum apud Daniele cap. 8. ubi Macedones, qui tunc temporis ÆGEADES (hoc est, Caprini) dicebantur, typo Caprarum, Rêxque Hirci figurâ designatur. Ecce, inquit, HIRCUS Caprarum (id est, caprarum maritus) venit ab Occidente, &c.

Innuit autem Alexandrum Magnum, Ægeadum regem. Illi Macedones sunt. Ità enim Gens ista vocabatur quà prima Regni sedes erat, à Carano conditore, ducentis plus minùs ante Daniele annis. Occasionem nominis ex Trogo refert Epitomator Justinus lib. 7. cujus verba ascribere non gravabor. Caranus, inquit, cum magna multitudine Græcorum, sedes in Macedonia responso Oraculi jussus querere, cum in Æmathiam venisset, urbem Edessam, non sentientibus oppidanis propter imbrum & nebule magnitudinem, gregem Caprarum imbrem fugientium secutus, occupavit: revocatusque in memoriam oraculi, quo jussus erat ducibus Capris imperium querere, regni sedem statuit; religiosèque postea observavit, quocunque agmen moveret, ante signa easdem Capras habere, captorum duces habiturus quas regni habuerat authores. Urbem Edessam ob memoriam muneris E G E A S, populum E G E A D A S vocavit. Vide cetera.

Tanta est hinc concinnitas, ut quis suspicari possit, etiam Arietis de Rege Persarum in eadem Visione typum, ad nominis E L A M (quod alterum duorum est quo ea Gens appelletur) significatum alludere. אֵיל enim Hebraeis (unde nomen אֵיל אֵרִיס Aries) & אֵל atque אֵלִי Chaldaeis, idem significant, nempe Fortem seu robustum esse. Fortè igitur אֵלִי ELAM istis, ut illis אֵיל Arietem sonabat, indèque Rex ELAM hoc typo Danieli figuratur. Ut ut sit, quando res ipsa aliunde firmatur, non potest non hujusmodi nominum cum typo convenientia harum rerum studiosis pio oblectamento esse; sive id casu, sive secus accidisse credendum sit. Atque hæc obiter.

Jam iterum in viam ad Equites Euphrateos redco; quorum numerus, inquit, Δύο μυριάδες μυριάδων, duæ myriades myriadum. Alii, μυριάδες μυριάδων, expuncto δύο, ut c. 5. 11. Significatur autem multitudo immensa, ut Psal. 68. 17. Curram Dei duæ myriades, millia duplicia. Est enim Μυριάς רַבְּבָא vel רַבְּבָא ex iis vocibus numerabilibus quæ in Hebraismo solent indefinitè sumi, ut apud Latinos sexcenti; neque decem millium numerum, sed ingentem quemcunque denotare, præsertim cum sic geminetur, ut Dan. 7. 10. videre est. Quantæ autem, quàmque immensæ in expeditionibus suis Turcarum copię fuerint, hodièque esse soleant, nemini ignotum est.

Et audiui, inquit, numerum eorum. Siquidem quæri potuit unde Joanni de numero constiterit, ut quem in Visione subducere haud ei fuerit possibile. Audiui, inquit. Simile in aliis quoque Visionibus fieri existimandum, quoties narratur aliquid quod Viso exhiberi non poterat; nempe de eo voce admonitum fuisse Apostolum.

Vers. 17.

Sequitur de armatura: Atque ità vidi, inquit, equos aspectu, & qui insidebant ipsis, habentes (scilicet) thoraces igneos, hyacinthinos & sulphureos; & capita equorum quasi capita leonum, & quasi ex ore eorum prodierat ignis, fumus & sulphur; à quibus occisa fuit tertia pars hominum.

Nusquam apud ullum Prophetarum aut alibi in Sacris literis occurrit Imago hujusmodi de Igne, fumo hyacinthino, & sulphure. Quare juxta literam accipio, de novo illo & ante hanc Tubam prorsus incognito armorum genere, quibus hostes isti Euphratæi statim post solutionem suam usuri essent: Bombardas intelligo, ignem, fumum & sulphur evomentes. Pulvis enim bombardicus pulvis est ignivomus, fumo hyacinthino, materia sulphurea: quo qui in bello utantur, hostium sese sensibus ingerunt quasi loricis igneis, hyacinthinis & sulphureis obtectos, ob medium igne, fumo, & sulphuris odore corruptum: ob quod & Equorum capita truci & terribili specie cernuntur, quasi Leonum. Hinc Joannes dicit, se vidisse Equos & equites, non reverà, sed aspectu tales; aspectu, inquam, ὡς ὁράσει, non reverà, habentes thoraces igneos, hyacinthinos & sulphureos; aspectu, habentes capita instar Leonum; denique aspectu, non reverà, ex ore equorum prodierat ignem, fumum & sulphur; quippe res ità ex adverso intuentibus apparere solet. Hæc est vis τὸ ὡς ὁράσει, quod bis hoc sensu usurpatum Capite quarto, vers. 3. Ομοίᾳ ὁράσει λίσσῃ ἰάσωσιν, & ἰεὺς ὁμοία ὁράσει μαχαλίδιν. Neque alibi, nisi semel tantum, vox illa in N. T. comparet.

A Triga verò ista bombardica, Ignis, fumi & sulphuris, addit, occisam esse tertiam partem hominum, id est, qui ex TRIENTE illo hominum fuerant quem Orbem Romanum diximus. Neque enim necesse est hinc aut alibi, ubi Trientis mentio, universum Trientem intelligi, sed partitivè sumi. Cujusmodi Ellipseos vocolæ partitivæ cum alibi in his literis, tum in hoc libro occurrunt exempla: ut Jud. 12. 7. Sepultus est Jephthe in Urbibus Gilead, hoc est, aliquà urbium; & Apoc. 17. 16. Decem cornua odio prosequuntur meretricem, id est, aliqua ex illis. Sic Occisa fuit Tertia pars (τὸ τρίτον) hominum, id est, qui ex tertia illa parte.

Hoc autem in Constantinopolitano excidio quis nescit abundè impletum esse? Annon Urbs illa nobilissima, TRIENTIS hominum caput, machinis istis ignovimis expugnata & internecioni data fuit? Audi Chalcocondylam. Mechmetes, inquit, in expeditione contra Byzantium Bombardas fieri curavit maximas, quantas novimus eà tempestate tempestate nunquam existisse—Eas undique per castra dispersit, ut globulos in Græcos jacerent—Quarum unius tanta fuit magnitudo, ut à septuaginta jugis boum & à viris bis mille trabenda fuerit—Huic ab utroque latere aliæ duæ quoque maximæ adjuungebantur, quarum singulæ lapidem emittebant cujus pondus erat dimidium talentum—Eas sequebatur Bombarda illa admiranda, quæ torquebat globum cujus pondus continebat tria circiter talenta, & magnam muri partem sternebat—Cujus tonitru tantum fuisse traditum est, ut finitima regio usque ad quadraginta stadia concuteretur—Hæc Bombarda interdum septem ejaculabatur globos, nocturnum, qui diei signum erat, & indicabat ubinam eo die globos torqueri oporteret, Qui plura scire desiderat, utque etiam in oppugnatione maritima Bombardæ adhibitæ fuerint, utque mœnia quadraginta diebus Bombardis fortiter quassata tandem corruerint, utque LONGUS Genuensium Dux cum suis Bombardarum globulis isti locum deseruerint, atque viam Turcis in urbem patefecerint, adeat Chalcocondylam ipsum. Ab eodem quinetiam discet, iisdem armis ab Amurathe, Mechemetis hujus patre, Isthmum Peloponnesiacum quoque expugnatum, & Peloponnesiacos imperata facere coactos; à Mechemete autem ipso, statim post captam Constantinopolin, vi quoque ignivomâ expugnatâ Corintho, penitus subjugatos fuisse.

Ad Cap. 9.

Huic de armis subjungitur aliud de Equorum & Equitum ingenio. Potestatem ipsorum esse non in ore tantum (de qua hætenus) sed & in caudis. Nam caudas eorum similes esse serpentibus, habentes capita per quæ ledunt. Hoc est, idem quod de SARACENIS supra dictum fuit, de TURCIS quoque obtinere: eos nempe non vi modò hostili, sed & Muhammedicæ imposturæ sÿrmate, perniciem ubi grassentur afferre. Unde non minùs hi quàm LOCUSTÆ saracenicæ (quarum religionem imbiberant,) caudâ serpentes sunt. Quòd verò alia his, alia illis attribuitur Caudæ serpentinae species, id ex naturali effigiei utriusque, Locustarum & Equorum, diversitate nascitur; quâ illis spiculata Scorpionum cauda, his caudæ serpentinis capitibus conveniebant maximè.

Vers. 19.

Caterum reliqui hominum, qui non occisi sunt his plagis, (seu qui has plagas evaserant) non respuerunt ab operibus manuum suarum, ut nè adorarent DÆMONIA, & simulachra aurea & argentea & ærea & lapidea & lignea, quæ neque cernere possunt, neque audire, neque ambulare, &c.

Vers. 20.

Qui verò isti sint haud difficile erit colligere; cùm in toto Orbe Romano, aut cis Euphratem, nulli jam sint qui simulachra colant (proh pudor & dolor!) præter Christianos, Annon igitur iidem illi Demonia quoque colant necesse est, cùm utrumque iisdem hoc loco ascribatur? At quæ tandem Demonia? inquires. Non sanè quæ ipsimet pro impuris spiritibus habeant, sicque vocitent (quis enim hos sciens volensque coleret Christianus?) sed quæ hoc nomine à Gentilium Theologis intelligebantur, Deafstros, quâ Angelorum, quâ mortuorum nominibus consecratos, tanquam Mediatores inter Deum & homines, Πάν τὸ Δαιμόνιον, inquit * Plato, μέλας τε καὶ ὀνύχων. DÆMONES mediū sunt inter Deos & mortales. Item, Θεὸς ἀνθρώπων ἢ μὴ γινώσκει, ἀλλὰ διὰ Δαιμονίου πᾶσά ἐστιν ἡ ὁμιλία καὶ ἡ διάλεκτος. Θεοῖς περὶ ἀνθρώπων. Idem cæteri Platonici, & plerique aliarum sectarum Philosophi, Epicureis exceptis. Apuleii solius verba ascribam, quibus Platonis & reliquorum sententia plenè & perspicuè continetur. DÆMONES, inquit, sunt mediæ Potestates, per quas & desideria nostra & merita ad Deos commeant, inter mortales cælicolâsque vectores, hinc precum, inde donorum; qui ultrò citròque portant, hinc petitiones, inde suppetias; seu quidem utrinque interpretes & salutigeri. Neque enim, inquit, pro Majestate Deū cælestium fuerit, hæc curare. Scilicet duplices Deos habuere: Cælestes, qui in cælo & stellis perpetuò residentes, neque ad hæc terræna prope se demitterent, neque eorum contagione temerandi (hi propriè & singulariter Dii dicebantur;) Alios Demones, qui, tanquam medioxuma numina, & cælestium seu summorum Deorum administri, res humanas procurarent. Illos Scriptura sacra (si quid conjicio) Exercitum cæli; hos (præsertim qui ex mortuis siebant) BAALES vocat, à Rege Babyloniorum sive Assyriorum Baale, sive, Chaldaicâ pronunciatione, Belo, qui primus post mortem à suis in DÆMONEM consecratus est; unde postea factum ut istiusmodi numina BAA-LIM, id est, Baales, dicerentur, ut Baalpeor, Baalberith, Baalzebub, Baalmoloch (Jer. 19.) quemadmodum à primo Imperatore Julio Cesare reliqui deinde Imperatores Romani Caesares dicti sunt. Quàm autem hæc DÆMONUM Theologia conveniat cum Sanctorum & Angelorum cultu apud Pseudo-christianos, res ipsa loquitur: hoc tantum discrimine, quòd illis plures erant Dii supremi seu cælestes; nobis tantum unicus est, Pater omnium. Et verò unicum quoque Mediatorem esse oportuit, Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum, nisi quòd Pseudoprophetæ plures instar DÆMONUM introduxerint. Planè juxta quòd Paulus prophetavit, Praconium.

Ad Cap. 10. Absoluto sextæ Tubæ Viso (nam unius Tubæ unicum tantum Visum est, sicuti & Sigillorum & Phialarum) proximus locus ordine rerum debebatur clangori Septimæ. Quo tamen Spiritus S. in Prophetiam ΒΙΒΛΑ ΠΙΔΙΟΥ, quò jam transiturus est, dilato, nè quid interea Prophetiæ SIGILLORUM modò finiendæ ad complementum sui deesset, vicem clangoris differendi supplet juramento, quo eventus Tubæ saltem de genere indicatur. Fore nimirum, cùm Angelus iste clanxerit, ut Bestiâ Romanâ, finitis novissimæ capitis temporibus, delatâ, Mysterium Dei consummetur, sicut annuntiavit servis suis Prophetis. Ità enim jam olim Danieli prædictum fuit, Bestiâ quartâ interfectâ, Regem Sanctorum universo Orbi terrarum imperaturum (c. 7.) unâque promissum illud gloriosum de instauratione Israelis impletum iri, (c. 12.) Quin enim Regnum hoc illud sit quod Mysterii Dei complementum vocat, dubitare non sinet acclamatio illa eidem Tubæ postmodum clangenti subjuncta, Facta sunt regna hujus Mundi Domini nostri & Christi ejus, & regnabit in secula seculorum: ut mirum sit, reperiri potuisse qui id aliorum acciperent. Igitur nec tempus illud, cujus hic jurat Angelus nihil superfore ampliùs, aliud esse potest quàm aut Tempus 4. Monarchiarum universè, aut (quod vero propius, sed tantundem est) novissimæ Regni, id est, Romani, periodus novissima TEMPORIS, TEMPORUM, & DIMIDII TEMPORIS: cùm idem quod hìc apud Joannem dicitur futurum cùm tempus non erit ampliùs, id apud Daniele tum futurum ostendatur cùm periodus ista novissimorum temporum absolvetur.

Atque hæc quidem consummatio MYSTERII Dei Septimæ Tubæ τὸ πρᾶγμα est; cui comites adduntur Septem Tonitrua: non enim sunt πρᾶγμα ipsum quod exhibet Tuba, sed contemporaneum ejus. Scilicet, dum Angelus præconium suum de Tubæ Mysterio exequitur, Septem tonitrua voces suas edunt. Clamavit, inquit, voce magnâ, sicut Leo rugit; & cùm clamasset, loquuta sunt septem tonitrua voces suas: id est, cùm ille præconium suum jam exorsus esset, Septem quoque tonitrua cœperunt loqui. Neque non Tubæ septimæ contemporare possunt; cùm quod sextam Tubam sequitur, necessariò in septimam incidat. Vox autem tonitruum quid? num קול בַּתְּחִלָּה BATH KOL? Si hoc, erunt Septem Tonitrua ORACULA totidem, quibus septimæ Tubæ intervallum quasi periodis quibusdam distinguetur; sed ignorandæ omnino rei, nec nisi suis temporibus percipiendæ. Quod innuit, Joanni voces tonitruum scripturo cœlitus facta prohibitio, Obsigna quæ locuta sunt septem tonitrua, & nè ea scribas. Frustrâ igitur nos inquirendo erimus quæ Deus occulta esse voluit, & suis temporibus reservanda.

Atque itâ Tubæ septimæ suo loco & ordine commodè satis inservitum fuit, licet clangoris ipsius patefactione, quâ totum Mysterium plenè referatur, aliò rejectâ. Cujus Rejectionis consilium, cum toto dispositior hujusce artificio, tametsi de eo in CLAVE APOCALYPTICA monitum, tamen hìc denuò & paulò fusiùs reponere nec supervacaneum nec infructuosum fuerit; quum plerosque interpretum de eodem ratio fugiat. Facem mihi primùm hìc alluxit, atque etiam tibi, Lector, ni fallor, allucebit, Systematis Visionum Apocalypticarum per Synchronismorum characteres constructi diligens contemplatio. Res verò (ut eam quâ possim orationis tum perspicuitate tum compendio recludam) sic se habet.

Atque hinc factum est ut Translationis istius negotium non ab aliquo Tubarum Angelo procuratum sit, sed ab Angelo illo magno & illustri qui BIBΛAPIΔION, secundæ Prophetiæ symbolum, manu teneret, Joanni mox devorandum. Ejus nempe intererat qui secundam Prophetiam revelaret, ut istius clangoris patefactio, qui utriusque Prophetiæ Catastrophem contineret, eosque differretur. Imò si Angelus iste, ut ex augustiori amictu totoque apparatu colligi posse videtur, Christus Dominus sit; nulli magis jus hoc clangorem novissimum in alterius Prophetiæ gratiam suspendendi competet, quam ipsi, qui utriusque Prophetiæ author erat. Hactenus quidem Agni formā apparuerat, nunc verò Angeli personam induisse videtur; quippe idem Consummationis mysterium Joanni revelaturus quod olim Danieli, eadem Angeli specie, eodemque jurisjurandi ritu & verbis, revelaverat. Videbis Daniele cap. 12. vers. 6, 7. cum ver. 5. capitis decimi.

SYSTEMATIS ALTERIUS VISIONUM APOCALYPTICA- RUM INTERPRETATIO, ad amussim Clavis Apocalypticæ.

PERACTO SIGILLORUM curriculo, quo Res Imperii describebantur, ad alteram Prophetiam itur, multò nobilissimam, utpote ECCLESIE seu Religionis fati continentem. Ad eam instituitur Joannes traditione & comestione Libri aperti, quasi Doctoratu facultatis propheticæ imbuendus.

Et vox, inquit, quam audieram de cælo, rursus loquens est mecum (vox nimirum illa tanquam Tubæ loquentis, cap. 4.) & dixit, Abi, & accipe libellum illum apertum in manu Angeli stantis super mare & super terram.

Abi igitur ad Angelum, dicens ei, Da mihi libellum, & dixit mihi, Accipe, & devora eum, &c.

Porro cum Prophetia modò revelanda, ut solet omnis rerum Divinarum & arcanarum, præsertim futurarum, cognitio, præceptu quidem suavis & jucunda foret; sed, propter calamitosum Ecclesiæ statum, tanquam aloen, in abdito ejus contentum, aut ipsarum fortè allegoriarum typorumque quibus tegitur obscuritatem, enucleantis & in sensa ejus penetrantis animum haud mediocriter lancinaret; ideo Liber comedendus dicitur Apostolo futurus in ore quidem dulcis, id est, primâ facie primoque gustu mentem ejus oblectaturus; in ventre verò receptus & concoquendus amaritudinem allaturus: Et amaritudinem, inquit, adferet ventri tuo, sed in ore tuo erit dulcis tanquam mel. Tota autem imago ex Ezekiele petita est; nisi quòd ibi dulcedinis quidem in ore, at amaritudinis in ventre aut nulla aut obscura mentio.

prioris tramitem relegeret, à Christo accipiendæ, inque Ecclesiæ notitiam deferendæ, munus impositum esse.

Et accepi, inquit, libellum è manu Angeli, & devoravi eum: eratque in ore meo dulcis tanquam Mel; sed cum devorassẽ eum, amaruit venter meus.

Verbis istis, Oportet te (nd-xiv) iterum prophetare,

Tum dixit, Oportet te iterum prophetare (hæc mens symboli) coram populis, & gentibus, & linguis, & regibus multis.

Sic fuit Joannis inauguratio; sequitur Prophetia, quæ ab ejusdem circa Templum Dei factò inchoat; eoque duplicis Atrii imagine, unius dimensi, alterius ob Gentium prophanationem rejecti, duplicem Ecclesiæ statum ordine futurum commonstrat.

ATRII INTERIORIS

calamo Dei dimensi.

Verf. 1.

ATRIUM TEMPLI interius cum inibi adorantibus, calamo divino mensurabile, Statum Ecclesiæ Christianæ primævum denotat, ad verbi Divini regulam examinatum & examussim sanctum; necdum verò, ut postea, (cùm ad Exterioris Atrii tempora perventum) cultus idololatriæ contagione ἀσύμμετρον, quinimo Deum per aliquot secula in unico Mediatore Jesu Christo normaliter colentem.

Hujusmodi enim commensum etiam Angelicæ dimensionis apud Ezechielem typo propositum fuisse, ex eo colligere mihi videor quod eidem dicitur cap. 43. indè à verf. 7. ad 10. & deinceps; Tu autem, fili hominis, ostende domui Israel Templum, & erubescant propter iniquitates suas, & metiantur exemplar. Videtis locum. Sin quis aliter senserit, & maluerit dimensionis typum ad ædificationis significationem referre, ut quod Architectis graphis seu γεγραμμένον, futuri nempe operis designatio, id sit Deo apud Prophetas mensuratio; ad eundem tamen sensum collineabit. Nam quid tum denotabit Atrium hoc divino calamo dimensum, quàm Ecclesiæ statum eo figuratum facturam Dei esse, ædificatam super fundamentum Apostolorum & Prophetarum, Christo angulari lapide? contrà quàm Atrium sequens, quod Deus pro structura sua non agnosceret, ideòque Joannes ipsum metiri prohibetur. Hoc aut illo modo interpreteris, res, ut vides, eodem redibit. Sed qui in diversum sensum interpretabitur, aut fallor, aut nullum è Scriptura interpretationis suæ exemplum proferre potest. Quàm verò appositè Altaris in hoc Atrio situs, frequentes sub eo Ecclesiæ statu Martyriorum hostias adumbret, id tum ex re ipsa, tum ex contemporanea DRACONIS rursi cum MICHAELE de Mulieris puerperio pugnantis Visione, tunc cùm ad ejus interpretationem ventum, patebit.

ATRII EXTERIORIS CUM

Civitate S. a Gentibus conculcati, proindeque in dimensione negligendi forasque ejiciendi.

Allosum est ad prophanationem Antiochi, quam describit Psal. 79. Videtis 1 Macc. 7. 17. & Psal. 79. verf. 1, 2, 3, &c. Deus, venerunt Gentes in hereditatem tuam, posuerunt Templum sanctum tuum, posuerunt Jerusalem in acervos, &c.

ταπαύμενον &amp; Vers. 51. ἀγία σε καταπαύεται καὶ βιβήλωται &amp; cap. 4. 60. μήποτε τὰ ἱερὰ καταπαύσονται.

Quorum verborum mentem ut dextrè percipiamus, sciendum, ΤΟ ἹΕΡΟΝ (quo nomine universum Templi ædificium complector) duplici Atrio distinctum fuisse: uno Interiori, in quo Ναὸς seu Templum ipsum (unà cum Altari holocausti proforibus ejus) situm fuit, patebátque solis Sacerdotibus & Levitis; altero Exteriori, quod 2. Paralip. 4. 9. Atrium magnum dicitur, Ezechieli plusquam duodecies חצר החיצונה, id est, Ἀυλὴ ἡ ἔξωθεν seu ἔξωτις. Hoc Israelitarum erat seu populi Israelitici, ideóque Israelis Atrium haud incommodè dicendum, licèt Judæis speciatim sic vocabatur ea hujus Atrii pars quæ virorum erat. Prius Atrium nominibus Templi & θυσιαστηρίου indicatur. Surge, inquit, & metire Templum Dei (Ναὸν) & Thyssasterium. Ubi θυσιαστήριον non Altare tantum holocausti, quod ibi situm, sed spatium etiam circumjectum, id est; totum Altaris & sacrificii locum designat; ut ex verbis ei proximè coherentibus colligitur, καὶ περισκυρῆσαι ἐν αὐτῷ, id est, ἐν τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ. Quomodo etiam θυσιαστήριον sumitur cap. 14. v. 18. & cap. 16. 7. Vide Bezam. Unde Lexicon vetus Græcolat. θυσιαστήριον interpretatur Altarium, sacrarium: & vice versâ Glossarium Philoxeni, sacrarium, ἥρων θυσιαστήριον. Hoc autem θυσιαστήριον, unà cum Templi, id est, τῷ Ναῷ, Area, nomine Interioris Atrii rectè comprehendi, ex Tabernaculi descriptione disco; ubi similiter totum illud Septum quod חמשים Habitaculum ac Altare Holocausti ambibat, unius Atrii nomine censetur: ut liquet. Exod. 40. 33. Tantum de Atrio priore, quod Joannes metiri jubetur. Atrium autem posterius satis clarè nomine suo designatur, Ἀυλὴ ἡ ἔξωθεν τῷ Ναῷ, id est, per Ellipsin prioris Substantivi, Ἀυλὴ ἡ ἔξωθεν τῆς Ἀυλῆς ἡ περιβολὴ τῷ Ναῷ, Atrium quod est extra Templi & altaris septum. In hoc cum Gentes, præter jus & fas admittæ, stabularentur, nequaquam mensurari, sed ejici jubetur & pro prophano haberi.

Sed inquires, non Atrium exterius, sed Civitatem sanctam à Gentibus conculcatam dici. Respondeo, Atrium exterius & Civitatem sanctam sese mutuò explicare, cum Atrium exterius locus fuerit Civitati sanctæ, seu populo Israelis, ad Divina conveniendi; imò in Deserto, unicum tantum Atrium habente Tabernaculo, (quod non nisi Sacerdotibus ac Levitis ordinariè ingredi fas erat) Atrium exterius nullum fuit, præter Castra Israelis seu Civitatem sanctam. Perinde igitur sensus est ac si diceretur, Atrium quod extra Templum est ejice foras, & ne metiaris illud: nam datum est Gentibus, & calcabunt (illud) mensibus XLII. Pro Relativo autem (illud) substituitur Substantivum, & quidem ejusmodi quod rem Antecedenti designatam declarèt; Civitatem, inquit, sanctam calcabunt mensibus XLII. Enallage autem Substantivi pro Relativo sæpe, tum in hoc Libro, tum alibi, occurrit; nempe cum aut Substantivum quod præcessit loco Relativi repetitur, aut ejus synonymum Relativi vice substituitur. Posterioris modi exemplum hic habes, & Act. 25. 21. Et sanè quid aliud esse dicemus Gentibus dari, hoc est, occupandi potestatem fieri, quàm calcari? & quid tandem calcarent Gentes nisi id quod eis datum fuerat? ut hæ quoque voces, non minùs quàm Atrii & Civitatis sanctæ, sese mutuò explicare videantur.

Ita Socrates θυσιαστήριον vocat, non sacram mentem, sed ἱερατεῖον. Vid. lib. 1. cap. 25. Gr. λέγει & confer cum Theodoro, lib. 1. cap. 14. Vide & Canon. Trull. 69. Zozimum lib. 5. τῶν πρὸς τὴν καλῶμενα θυσιαστήριον. Item Nicephorum lib. 8. cap. 30. disertis. Imò Josephus etiam vasa, quorum in Sacrificiis usus, appellare videtur θυσιαστήριον, ut ex collatione Antiquit. lib. 12. cap. 7. cum 1 Mac. 1. 22. apparere potest.

GEntibus in Atrio populi Dei seu Civitate sancta stabulantibus, TESTES seu PROPHETÆ à Deo binì prædicant pullati & amicti succis. Hi sunt veritatis Divinæ Interpretes & Assertores, qui sædam illam & lacrymabilem Ecclesiæ Christi contaminationem assiduis querulis deslerent, quosque Deus indefinenter Orbi Christiano cum Gentibus scortanti monitores, Sanctisque suis fidem servantibus duces, excitaturus esset. Nempe ad instar Parium illorum illustrium sub Veteri Testamento, MOSIS & AARONIS in Eremo, ELIÆ & ELISÆI sub Apostasia Baalitica, ZOROBABELIS & JESUÆ sub servitute Babylonica. Ex illorum putà numero, conditione, potestate, réque gesta, Testes isti Apocalyplici manifestè describuntur; quemadmodum & Ecclesiæ status in quo prophetarunt, Israelitico congruenter, Babylonis, Eremi & Gentilismi seu Baalismi imaginibus figuretur. Οὗτοί ἐσιν αἱ δύο Ἐλαῖαι καὶ δύο Λυχνῖαι, αἱ ἐνώ- πιον τοῦ Κυρίου τῆς γῆς ἵσῶσαι. vers. 4.

Jam ad textum accedamus. Et dabo, inquit, duobus Testibus meis, ut prophetent diebus MCLX amicti saccis. Ubi illud primò notandum venit, totam quæ sequitur prophetiam, ab hoc commate ad clangorem Tubæ septimæ, rei naturâ sic postulante, non viſo exhibitam, sed ab Angelo Christi personam ſuſtinente Joanni dictatam fu- iſſe; id quod obſervâſſe, ad genium allegoriæ ſeu typi rectiùs percipiendum haud parùm facit.

Duobus Testibus meis ] Duos dicit propter typum, qui, ut dixi, binorum eſt; acſi dixiſſet, Dabo Zorobabeli & Jeſuæ meis, Eliæ & Eliſæo meis, Moſi & Aaroni meis. Cui accedit quòd Teſtes eos vocat, Teſtes autem ex Lege * duos eſſe oportuit ad ſta- biliendum omne verbum. Adde, quòd Duo dici poſſint, pro numero Tabularum Dei, quas in prophetia ſua adhiberent, Veteris & Novi Teſtamenti, quaſi duorum Teſta- mentorum Teſtes. * Deut. 17, 15.

Diebus 1260 ] Quot nempe in menſibus 42. continentur. Quos non eſſe dies hora- rios liquet, tum ex tribus illis diebus & dimidio, horum dierum partibus, paulò poſt Teſtimoni mortis assignandis; quos pro diebus horariis accipi non poſſe, arguunt quæ tunc gerenda prædicuntur: tum ex eo quòd Beſtia (cujus item duratio ſint) Cætui 144 M. Signatorum; Cætus autem Signatorum ſex primis Tubis contemporet, Tu- barum verò res tantillo tempore, quantum eſt dierum 1260 horariorum, ſeu triennii & ſemeſtris, decurri non poſſint. Sed cur, inquires, Gentium profanatio Menſibus, Teſtium autem purum Dei cultum aſſerentium prophetia Diebus menſuretur? Nem- pe, quia cultus Idolorum omnéque peccatum & error poteſtatis tenebrarum & noctis ſit, quibus Luna præſidet; contrà Religio vera Luci & Diei comparetur, quarum penes Solem præfectura eſt. Ideo Act. 26. 18. Pauli miſſio ad Gentes ab idolis con- vertendas dicitur, ad convertendum eas à Tenebris ad Lucem, à poteſtate Satanae ad De- um, Quâ mente eſt & illud, * Quæ ſocietas luci cum tenebris? Jam verò Menſes L U- NÆ, tenebrarum dominae; Dies & Anni S O L I S, qui luci præſidet, motu dirigun- tur. Eadem de cauſa, ut * poſtea videbimus, Beſtiæ blaſphemia, ſimiliter ad motum * L U N Æ, menſibus; Mulieris verò in Eremo manſio, annis & diebus, ad motum * S O L I S, numerabitur. * 2 Cor. 6. 14. * Cap. 13. 5.

Id eſt, ſunt inſtar ZOROBABELIS & JESUÆ, quos olim Domimis unxe- rat ad Eccleſiam Judaicam, ſub captivitate Babylonica perditam, denuo inſtaurandam, atque Teſtibus hiſce conſimiliter ſub Gentium ſervitute procurandam. Alluſum enim eſt ad duas iſtas oleas quas Zacharias viderat utrinque Candelabri aurei crescentes, oleumque Lucernis ejus ſuppeditantes, Zach. 4. de quibus Angelus rogatus, quid ſibi vellent; Hi ſunt, inquit, duo filii olei ſtantes coram Domino totius terræ; indigitans duo Eccleſiæ ſub Gentibus tum ſervientis capita, ZOROBABELEM ducem & JESUAM Pontificem, de quibus paulò antè prophetaverat.

Candelabrum enim ibi ſeptem lucernarum Templum designabat, ejusque typo illius temporis Eccleſiam: cujus inſtaurationem conſervationemque duo Uncti iſti procura- turi eſſent, non copiis, non robore, ullòve adminiculo humano, ſed virtute ſolius Dei, modo quodam inviſibili & mirabili operantes; quemadmodum Oleæ iſtæ Candelabro utrinque aſſiſtentes oleum luminibus ejus ſufficiebant viâ planè extraordinariâ nec perceptibili. Zach. 4. 6.

Ad Cap. 11.

At quorsum, inquires, hic apud Joannem non unius, ut apud Zachariam, sed duorum Candelabrorum mentio, quibus itidem, & non Oleis duntaxat, duo isti Prophetæ assilari videntur? Fateor me hic hæzere, necdum satis expeditam & liquidam hujus discriminis rationem invenisse. Interim in verbis puto Hebraismum latere, eisque acsi dixisset, Hi sunt due illæ Oleæ, ad vel juxta duo candelabra, coram Domino terra consistentes: ita ut Testium solummodo cum Oleis comparatio fiat, Candelabrorum verò adjectio non nisi ad Olearum descriptionem pertinere judicetur. Nam copulativa Hebræis quandoque vice et præpositionis est, id est, pro cum, juxta, apud; ut 1 Sam. 14. 18. Quia erat arca Dei in die illo & filii Israel, id est, cum filiis Israel. Vide Lexicon Schindleri. Sed manebit nihilominus difficultas de duobus Candelabris. Anigitur dicendum unicum illud apud Zachariam Candelabrum hic pro duplici censi, propter nempe geminum ab utraque parte scapi lucernarum ordinem, & duas oleas utrisque seorsim oleum infundentes? Est quoque apud Zachariam septem & septem, i. bis septem, infusorum mentio; sed quorsum spectet non satis liquet. An verò binarium istum putemus ad Ecclesiæ Christianæ conditionem designandam privatim pertinere? nempe, aut quasi ex duobus populis, Judæis & Gentibus, congeminantis; aut, quod verò forsitan propius, quia tempore quo Testes pullati ingemiscerent, unâ cum Imperio Romano, in Orientis & Occidentis dividendâ? Ut ut sit, certum est, Candelabra, non Prophetas aut Antistites Ecclesiarum, sed Ecclesias ipsas denotare, ex eo quod suprâ cap. 1. Angelus septem Candelabra totidem Ecclesias interpretetur: septem, inquit, Candelabra quæ vidisti, septem Ecclesiæ sunt.

Vers. 5.

Quos si quis voluerit ledere, ignis prodit ex ore ipsorum & devorat inimicos eorum: Et si quis voluerit eos ledere, ita oportet eum occidi.

Non manu, non ferro aut pugionibus sese ulciscuntur Testes, si quando ab hostibus læsi fuerint; sed ex ore ipsorum prodit vindicta, id est, oralibus telis inimicos configunt; dum nempe iram Dei, ministrorum ejus violatoribus impendentem denunciant, aut precibus & gemitibus suis ultionem impetrant. Ignis enim hic, qui ex ore Testium egredi perhibetur, Ultionis verbum est; juxta illud Domini ad Jeremiam cap. 5. 14. Ecce ego do verba mea in ore tuo in IGNE M, & populum istum in ligna, & vorabit eos. Moses quidem & Aaron, & postmodum Elias; illi in seditionis Korachicæ conjuratos, hic verò in Ahaziæ Regis Baalicolæ ministros, ignem propriè dictum cælo devocarunt: at nostrorum Testium ignis mysticè interpretandus est, cum, monente mox Spiritu S. Ægyptus nostra, proindeque Eremus, πνευματικῶς accipiantur. Porro quod Prophetæ in nomine Dei denunciant, idem & ipsi patrare dicuntur, ut ostendit quod ad eundem Jeremiam ait Dominus, c. 1. 10. Præfeci te, inquit, gentibus & regnis, ad extirpandum & demoliendum, & ad perdendum & destruendum, ad edificandum & plantandum: nè quis jam miretur, quod ex ore Testium prodire dicatur ignis seu vindicta Divina, penes quos tamen sola denunciandi aut à Deo impetrandi potestas sit.

Ita propriam injuriam ulciscuntur Testes: Sequitur, quâ ratione etiam contumeliam Templo Dei illatam. Videlicet Dicam planius. Spe vitæ æternæ, solis puris Dei cultoribus promissæ, novos istos Idololatrias ex verbo Dei arcent; donec, stipulationis in Baptismo memores, ad unius Dei cultum per unicum Mediatorem Jesum Christum, abjectis Satanæ cultibus, redierint, sicque finem lugubri Testium Prophetiæ imposuerint. Quemadmodum & Elias non prius Israelitis, siccitate jam propè enectis, pluviam reddiderit, quàm Baalis prophetæ ejusque cultus exterminarentur.

Hujusce autem potestatis Testium exemplum habemus infrâ cap. 14. 9. Si quis, inquit, adoraverit Bestiam & imaginem ejus, & acceperit charactèrem in fronte sua aut manu sua; Bibet hic ex vino ira Dei, ex mero misto in calice ira ipsius, & cruciabitur igne & sulphure, in conspectu Angelorum sanctorum & in conspectu Agni: Et fumus tormenti ipsorum ascendet in secula seculorum, &c.

Cujusmodi nempe potestatem exercuerint Moses & Aaron Israelem ex Ægyptiaca servitute educaturi. Unde colligo, potestatem Testium, typo isthoc figuratam, non ad omnes Prophetiæ pullatæ dies, sed ad finem eorum pertinere, seu tempus Phylarum; larum; quando nimirum Testium seu Prophetarum istorum auspiciis, quasi Moſis & Aaronis, populus Chriſtianus, plagis Ægyptiacarum imagine expreſſis, ſimiliter de Beſtiæ tyrannide atque ſervitute educendus eſt. Siquidem prima phialarum plaga terram ulcere percutit; ſecundâ & terciâ aquæ in ſanguinem vertuntur; cæteræ aliis adhuc gravioribus Beſtianos ſeu gentes in Atrio Templi ſtabulantes plagis conficiunt. Quorum omnium interpretationem ſuo loco ſervamus. Sufficiat hîc, noviſſimam hanc poſteſtatem ad Phialarum effuſionem retuliſſe. Sequitur,

Sed cùm finituri ſunt teſtimonium ſuum, Beſtia quæ aſcendit ex Abyſſo faciet adverſus eos bellum, & vincet eos, & occidet eos. Verſ. 7.

De munere & poteſtate Teſtium hætenus; ſequitur jam de fato quod ad finem prophetiæ ſuæ experirentur. Cujus deſcriptio ex hiſtoria Paſſionis Dominicæ tota conſtata eſt. Dominus enim Jeſus conſimiliter, cùm prædicationem ſuam toridem circiter, quot Teſtium prophetia, dierum finiret, à Præſide Romano Beſtiæ hujus qua cum Teſtibus bellum eſt ( ſed ſexti capitis ſui vice ) legato occiſus eſt. Tertio poſt die, factò item terræ motu magno, reſurrexit; paulòque poſt, die nempe quadrageſimo, in cælum nube receptus aſcendit. Quæ omnia in hac Teſtium ſeu Prophetarum ipſius clade voluit Deus repræſentari: ut ſicuti in muneris ſui ſtatu Parium iſtorum illuſtrium ( de quibus antè ) ſimilitudinem geſſerant; ità in perfeſſione & morte Chriſto Domino ſuo, Teſti illi fideli, conformes efficerentur; quod quidem ipſis in mediis ærumnis ſuis & ſolatio eſſe debet & gloriæ.

Sed textui lucem faciamus. Cùm finituri ſint, inquit, teſtimonium ſuum ( ſic enim ὅταν τελέσωσι vertendum, non de præterito, cùm finierint ) Beſtia quæ aſcendit ex abyſſo faciet cum iſis bellum, & vincet eos, & occidet eos: Id eſt, cùm jam, parte Civitatis Sanctæ ſeu Orbis Chriſtiani incolarum, de idololatriis & abominationibus ſuis, agnitâ Gentiliſmi ſœditate, reſipiſcente, & Templum Dei apud ſeſe repurgante, Teſtes gratulabundi ſaccum exuere & diuturno planctu ſuo deſungi inciperent, nondum tamen penitus deſuncti eſſent; BESTIA illa Romana ſepticeps vicis noviſſimæ ( de qua cap. 13. ) uſque eò pullatorum iſtorum concionem valuiſſe indignata, faciet eis bellum, vincet & occidet eos. Quorum primum, de Teſtium planctu finiri cœpto, ab initio Eccleſiæ reformatæ hucusque continuè factitatum eſt.

Alterum, de bello & cæde, etiamnum futurum eſſe ſuſpicor. Brightmannus quidem noſter illud jamdudum, in Bello nimirum Smalcaldico, ſub Carolo V. Cæſare, impletum cenſuit. Alii modernæ Eccleſiarum Germanicarum ſtragi accommodant. Et quis tam triſtem Eccleſiæ Caſum non multò magis præteriſſe mallet quàm adhuc metuendum ſuperſeſſe? Sed non eſt ex voto noſtro interpretatio dirigenda: imò majori cum periculo in partem iſtam quàm è contrâ errabitur: plus ſiquidem ad pietatem valet calamitatis futuræ expectatio, quàm credula nimis de ea quaſi jam tranſacta ſecuritas. Adhuc autem metuendam eſſe cladem iſtam noviſſimam duo mihi perſuadent. Primum, quòd luſtuofa illa Gentium Civitatem Sanctam ſeu Religionem Chriſtianam conculcantium tempora, ſive MENSES XLII, tantisper dum Beſtia regnaverit, periodum ſuam compleviſſe dici non poſſint; proindeque neque contemporanei accoævi iſdem Teſtium in ſacco & cilicio plangentium DIES. Alterum, quòd hac Teſtium clades proximè anteceſſura ſit ( ut paulò poſt audiemus ) cladem & ruinam Urbis magnæ, id eſt, Romæ, quam tam propè abeſſe non patitur Phialarum ſeries; utpote quarum quartam ( quamvis in præſenti rerum motu id agi ſperandum ) nondum præterveſti ſimus, ut ibi docebitur. Atqui Urbis ruinam ad quintam ſpectare mox oſtendimus: cujus idcirco prodromam fore cladem iſtam de qua agimus, admodum verò conſentaneum eſt; præſertim cùm Chriſto Imperatori noſtro ſolenne ſit, non niſi crucimethodo hoſtes debellare & victoriam ſuis largiri. Neque tamen, ex eo quòd clades hæc noviſſima ſit atque etiamnum futura, quicquam de gravitate ejus ſupra omnes quæ præceſſerunt certò ſtatui poteſt. Fortè enim, non tam gravitatis nomine ( certè non diuturnitatis ) quàm quòd in ſignum eſſet protinus tunc finiendi luſtus Teſtium, atque instantis ruinæ Romanæ Urbis, ideo ſola ex omnibus quibus Beſtia Sanctos contritura eſſet cladibus ſingularem mentionem & deſcriptionem meruit: perinde nempe ut circundatio Hieroſolymorum ab exercitu Ceſtii Galli, paulò ante fatalem per Titum obſidionem, in excidii ejusdem tunc instantis & pro foribus ſignum prædicta fuerit: Ut quemadmodum Apoſtoliſ, de temporis illius excidii ſignis quærentibus, dixerit Servator, Cùm videritis circundari ab exercitu Jeruſalem, tunc ſcītote quòd appropinquavit deſolatio ejus: ſimile hîc innui putetur de excidio Babylonis; Cùm videritis triennalem iſtam & dimidii anni Teſtium cædem, ſcītote quòd appropinquavit deſolatio Urbis magnæ.

Ad Cap. 11.

Cædem autem quâ Testes à BESTIA sternendi prædicuntur intelligi puto significatione generalissimâ, quâ necem etiam comprehendat metaphoricè seu analogicè dictam. Mori enim eâ notione dicitur, qui in quocunque statu constitutus, sive Politico sive Ecclesiastico, seu quovis alio, definit esse quod fuit; unde & occidit qui tali morte quemquam afficit. Siquidem in stylo sacro Vivere subindè est Esse, Mori Non esse. Quâ mente Satana & peccato mori dicimur, cum eorum mancipia in posterum esse definimus; & Christo vivere, cum ejus esse incipimus. Et omnino poscere videtur oppositionis ratio, ut cujusmodi futura sit post patratam cædem resurrectio Testium ad vitam, talis foret & ipsa cædes: Illam verò analogicam esse pater, quia nulla resurrectio propriè dicta futura sit ante Christi adventum sub Tuba VII. hæc verò sit, currente adhuc sextâ.

Testium igitur in bello occubitus, si ad istiusmodi intelligendi normam exponamus, videbitur esse illorum ab officio & statione quam in Ecclesia, vi prædicationis suæ reformatâ, aliquantisper consecuti sint, deturbatio & dejectio; sive ea cum morte corporali conjuncta sit, sive secus: adeò ut vitam, qualem tum vixerant, propheticam deinceps non vivant, muniâve ejus exerceant ampliùs. Quo simul necesse est futurum ut, columnis suis subductis, Bestiæque pseudoprophetis in locum prophetarum Christi postliminiò substitutis, tota Ecclesiæ Reformatæ politia, quàm latè hoc acciderit, in terram concidat. Quod citiùsne anseriùs futurum sit, solus ille novit in cujus manu sunt tempora & opportunitates.

Interim, nè fortè quis decipiatur, illud accuratè animadvertendum, Bellum hoc BESTIÆ novissimum non esse ejusdem generis cum eo quod adversus Sanctorum cœtum hucusque continuè gesserat (de quo nempe in BESTIÆ historia dicatur cap. 13. quòd datum sit ei bellum gerere cum sanctis, & eos vincere;) sed omnino diversi. Quorsum enim illud tanquam ultimis Bestiæ temporibus peculiare narraretur, quod si non ab incunabulis suis, saltem jam indè ab ἀρχῇ sua, ei solenne fuerat? Aliud igitur est bellum quod Bestia gessit contra sanctos universè, aliud quod in novissimo suo gerit cum Prophetis, qui jam cilicio exui planctumque suum propheticum finire cœpissent, id est, Antistitibus Ecclesiæ parte suâ reformatæ. Id quod ampliùs ex diverso utriusque belli eventu manifestum est; illic sanè prospero, hîc admodum funesto. Illic enim potestatem consequuta est Bestia in omnem tribum, linguam & gentem, &c. hîc verò subitam & fatalem sibi ruinam accersit, ut in textu videre est.

Et cadavera eorum (jacebunt) in πλατεία URBS magna, quæ vocatur spiritualiter Sodoma & Ægyptus, ubi & Dominus ipsorum crucifixus est.

URBS illa cognomine Magna, ROMA est, sic dicta, non tam quantitatis intuitu, quàm quòd aliarum Urbium regina esset; juxta illud Angeli cap. 17. ult. Mulier quam vidisti est URBS illa MAGNA, quæ regnum habet super reges terræ. Quemadmodum nomine REGIS magni (quomodo Deus appellatur Ps. 48. 3. & Matth. 5. 35. quique titulus olim peculiariter Regibus Assyriorum & Persarum competeat) innuitur Rex regum, qui in alios reges potestatem habet. Unde per totam Apocalypsin, quocunque aliàs nomine ROMA appellatur, sive Babylonis, sive Meretricis, semper hoc titulo Magna insignitur; ut Babylon illa Magna, Meretrix illa Magna. Adde, quòd in tota Apocalypsi nulli præter ipsam urbi titulus iste tribuitur, nisi, demum post excidium ejus, Novæ isti Jerusalem de cælo descensuræ, in cujus lumine deinceps ambulant Gentis: quam qui hîc significari putaret, ei sanè helleboro opus esset. Atqui nec Jerusalem Joannis ævo fuit, neque ulla alia Jerusalem præter ipsam unquam futura est Urbs Magna, seu aliarum Orbis urbium caput & regina.

Cap. 21. 10.

Additur, Quæ vocatur spiritualiter Sodoma & Ægyptus: Ægyptus, ob tyrannidem in populum Dei, instar Ægyptiacæ; Sodoma, ob scortationem, scilicet spiritualem. Est autem hic (quod Lector diligenter observet) CLAVIS allegoriæ, (cujusmodi plures in hoc libro occurrunt) quâ nempe Spiritus Sanct. semel innuere voluit, quicquid uspiam de plagis Ægyptiacis aut Sodomorum clade in hisce Visionibus exhibeatur, id omne πνευματικῶς, id est, mysticè, interpretandum esse; cum nempe ROMA, statûsve rei Romanæ, plagarum istarum omnium subjectum, Sodoma sit atque Ægyptus mystica. Occurrunt autem, de plagis Ægyptiacis, in descriptione Tubarum & Phialarum, necnon in hac ipsa Testium historia; de Sodomorum clade, in Judicio Bestiæ, c. 19. 20. & 20. 10. quorum omnium sensus hæc Clave aperiendus est. Hinc etiam demonstrari potest, Tubarum subjectum esse ditionem Romanam: quoniam ex earum plagis quædam Ægyptiacæ sint; cui autem plagæ Ægyptiacæ inferrentur nisi Ægypto? atqui hæc, Spiritu S. authore, Roma est.

Ita de Urbe magna res plana est. Sed quid sit πλατεία illa Urbis, cujus hic mentio, non adeò scitu facile est. Sanè enim pro vico, aut eo quod Latine plateam dicimus, mus, aut foro, aut loco quovis alio intra Urbem, sumi non posse videtur; idque obsequentes rationes.

Ad Cap. 11.

Primò enim Christus Dominus, qui in hac πλατεία crucifixus dicitur, neque in Urbis Romæ neque Hierosolymorum vico aliquo, aut foro, aut arcæ crucifixus est; quinimo extra hujus portam, (Hebr. 13. 12.) in illius autem provincia duntaxat, à Pilato Præfide. Ergò πλατεία τῆς πόλεως τῆς μεγάλης non est vicus aliquis, aut via latior, intra alterutrius Urbis mœnia, sed locus extra Urbem.

2. Πλατεία singulari numero positam, ejus generis rem designare verisimile est, cujusmodi unicam Urbs habeat, non plures. At vici in qualibet Urbe, saltem insigniori, plures sunt.

3. Ibi jacere corpora Testium putandum est ubi bello victi sunt. At bello congregari non solet intra Urbis mœnia; sed, si non in hostico, saltem in regione & provinciis Urbi subjectis.

4. Quorum occisorum cadavera, per tres dies & dimidium, populi, tribus, lingue & gentes coram intueri potuerint, & curare nè sepelirentur; ea non in Urbis magnæ vico aliquo aut platea jacebant, sed aut dispersa fuisse, aut circumlata per provincias videntur; ad quas idcirco significatio τῆς πλατείας accommodari debeat. Et si quis dixerit, exercitum Βεστια, quo Testes fusi cæsiq; sunt, ex variis populis & linguis conflatum esse, ideòque facillè cadavera eorum cernere potuisse quos ceciderant: ad argumentum superius recurrendum est, Cum tantis exercitibus congregari non solere intra Urbis mœnia. Nam omnino res ita explicanda est, præsertim ubi nulla allegoriæ ratio obtendi potest, ut nè sensui literali quid absurdi insit.

Quid igitur hîc aliud dicemus, quàm πλατεία nomenclaturâ regionem & territorium univèrsam Urbis ditioni subiectum designari; idque significationis vel ab Hebraico רצח traxisse, cui sæpe in versione Septuag. respondeat? nimirum pro more & usu linguæ Hellenisticæ, quæ vocem Græcam voci Hebrææ πολυσήμε unâ significatione juxta usum suum nativum respondentem, etiam alteri significationi adhibere soleat; ut multis exemplis probari possit, si res esset hujus instituti. Jam verò רצח Hebræis significat quicquid omnino extrâ sit; sive extra ædes, ut vicos & vias in urbibus; sive extra urbem, ut χωρὰν regionem seu agrum circumjectum. Sanè Job 5. 10. ubi in Hebræo est רצח פניו ל, Chaldæus reddit, Qui dat pluviam super faciem terræ, & mittit aquas super faciem provincie seu regionis populorum. Vel à notione latitudinis, ut sit idem quod πλάτος τῆς γῆς, Isa. 8. 8. Et extensio alarum ejus (id est, Assyrii) implebit latitudinem terræ tue, o Immanuel: & Apoc. 20. 9. de Gog & Magog, ἀνέβησαν ἐπὶ τὸ πλάτος τῆς γῆς, & ἐκύκλωσαν — τὸ πᾶν τὸ ἡγαπημένον. Huc enim facit quòd רצח quæ vox altera est quam Septuag. πλατεία transferunt, & רצח quæ latitudinem seu πλάτος significat, eandem omnino literas habeant, & utraque Chaldæis unâ eademque voce רצח dicatur. Vel denique notione latitudinis, quæ voci πλατεία nativa est, innuere voluit Spiritus Sanctus amplitudinem ditionis Urbis illius magnæ, quâ omnes Urbes superaverit, hodièque superet: ac si ἐπὶ τῆς πλατείας positum esset pro ἐπὶ χωρὰς τῆς πλατείας, &c. Sanè vox πλατεία Adjectivum est Substantivè positum, proindeque subintelligi aliquid debet; & verò aliud atque aliud potest, ad significationem ejus explanandam: nec scio an illa vici significatio apud veteres scriptores Græcos admodum reperiatur.

Jam verò autem, cui hæc interpretatio sese probaverit, ei ampliùs obscurum esse non potest, aut quâ ratione Christus in πλατεία urbis Romanæ crucifixus dicatur, aut ubi Testium occisorum cadavera abjicienda sint; nempe non in Urbe Roma, sed intra ditionem Romanam. Scio equidem, complures nostrorum, ut ad eundem scopum perveniant, hîc Urbis nomine totam Urbis ditionem intelligere. Sed quid tum, amabò, πλατεία erit? Nam quorum alterutrum ut sit propè necessarium videtur, neutrum esse potest. Non ditio, ut quæ jam ipsius Urbis nomine designetur: Non provincia aliqua, ut quas Urbs magna plures habeat; πλατεία verò unum quid & singulare, singulari numero positum, innuat. Atque hæc de πλατεία τῆς πόλεως τῆς μεγάλης notâsse sufficiat: jam pergamus ad reliqua.

Et cernent (homines) ex tribubus & populis & gentibus cadavera eorum per tres dies & dimidium, & cadavera eorum non sinent poni in monumentis. Vel, Et erunt * ex tribubus & populis & gentibus qui cernent cadavera eorum, &c.

Verf. 9. * De partitiva hæc locutione Hebræis & Syris familiarissima vid. Ludovic. de Dieu Com. in Evangel. p. 134. in fine.

Utrum hoc in immanitatis, an verò beneficii partem accipiendum sit, in ambiguo est; nec nisi ex prophetiæ complemento determinandum. Potest enim accipi vel tanquam ab hostibus profectum, hoc insuper ignominie, ad cumulum quam patraverant cædis, adjicientibus, ut intersectorum corpora sepulturâ prohiberent: Vel tanquam ab amicis & fautoribus Testium, hæc nimirum ratione, quasi mox revicturis consulentibus. Ut ut enim maximæ alioquin immanitatis sit non sepelire mortuos, & insepultum abjici, præsertim apud Judæos, pro summa ignominia habebatur; tamen qui ita occubuerunt ut non planè desperatum sit quin adhuc vitæ restitui possint, eos sepulcri claustris tantisper prohibere in beneficii loco ponendum est. Si prius statuendum; innui hoc typo videtur aliqua infamiae aut ignominiae nota quæ Bestiani, sustulisse Testes haud contenti, eisdem insuper multabunt. Sin posterius; subsidiis aliquid à populis Reformatis, quorum formidine, utpote multitudinis longè maximæ, ideòque, recenti adhuc vulnere rebûsque nondum confirmatis, ad desperationem haud impunè provocandæ; aut saltem operâ & favore occulto, futurum sit, nè ita cum Testibus agatur ut nulla spes sit reviviscendi. Achmetes ex Indorum disciplina, Apotel. 130. Si quis in somnis visus sibi fuerit sepultus, sepulcrum ipsum ad plenam certitudinem interitus ejus spectat. Si videre visus fuerit defectum aliquem rerum ad sepulturam pertinentium, is defectus ad spem refertur. Si jam quæras, ecquid in textu appareat quod ad hanc interpretationem potius inclinet quàm ad illam? Ego verò illud in hujus rei argumentum traherem, quòd cum diverso modo & verbis suppositum hîc enuntiet atque cum de hostibus sequenti versu agat, non eisdem hîc atque illic intelligi velit, sed diversos; illic quidem hostes, hîc verò amicos Testium. Nam de hostibus in sequenti versu exultantibus & munera invicem mittentibus dicit, Οἱ κατοικῶντες ἐν τῇ γῆς de istis verò qui Testium cadavera non sinent in monumentis, Ἐκ τῶν φυλῶν καὶ λαῶν καὶ γλωσσῶν καὶ ἐθνῶν, partitivè, quasi certos quosdam notaret diverso à reliquis ingenio. Judicet Lector.

Id est, ut videtur, triennium semestrem. Nam de diebus horariis intelligi non posse arguunt quæ tunc gerenda prædicuntur. Ecquis enim credat, tridui & dimidii diei spatiolum aut famæ necis Testium per Orbem disseminandæ, aut Legatis cum muneribus ultrò citròque inter gentes mittendis, sufficere? Imò nè parandis quidem sufficeret. Adde quòd dimidium diei horarii, seu horæ duodecim, hujusmodi actibus determinandis prorsus ineptum sit. Non enim ad horas res istiusmodi observari solent, quinimo ad menses, saltem ad dies integros. Interim animadvertendum, tempus hîc computari non Testium occidendorum, sed quo jacebunt mortui & inanimés postquam jam occubuerint. Quamdiu autem bellum ipsum durabit, quantumque temporis dabitur Prophetis interficiendis, non nisi Vaticinii complementum docebit.

Vers. 10.

Et qui habitant super terram gaudebunt super illis, & hilares erunt, & munera mittent invicem, quòd hi duo Propheta torserant habitantes super terram.

De more mittendorum munerum in publico gaudio aut in magna lætitia, vide Estheræ c. 9. 19, 22.

Vers. 11.

Sed post tres dies & dimidium, Spiritus vitæ à Deo ingressus est in illos, steteruntque in pedes suos; & metus magnus cecidit in eos qui spectarint ipsos.

Qualis erat Testium mors, talis erit excitatio à mortuis seu resurrectio, nempe restitutio in statum pristinum; idque non tam operâ aliquâ aut auxilio humano, quàm digito Dei, qui mirabilis est in operibus suis. Hoc enim innuit, Spiritus vitæ à Deo ingressus est in illos. Achmetes Apotelesm. 6, & 7. ex Ægyptiorum & Persarum disciplina: Si quis in somnis suscitationem mortuorum videre visus fuerit, eares vincitorum liberationem ac bellorum finem significat. Apot. 6. ex calamitatibus ereptionem. Videtis Ezech. cap. 37.

Vers. 12.

Et audierunt vocem magnam de cælo dicentem ipsis, Ascendite huc. Ascenderuntque in cælum per nubem (vel in nube;) & conspexerunt illos inimici eorum.

* Targ. in nube gloria sua.

Non restituentur solummodo Testes in locum & stationem pristinam, quinimo evenientur in sublimiorem aliquem honoris & potestatis gradum. Id enim nube vehi & in cælum ascendere significat. Vide Dan. 7. 13. Isai. c. 14. 13. & * 19. 1. Unde in Apotelesmatis infomniorum, quæ ex priscis Ægyptiorum & Persarum monumentis collegit Arabs ille quem toties laudavi, Apomalar an Achmetes? legitur, Si Rex in nubibus consedissee sibi visus fuerit, & vehi quòcumque libeat, barbari hostes ei servitutem servient, quibus ipse cum imperio præerit. Item, Si Rex ad cælum quasi volasse visus sibi fuerit ubi sidera essent, super Reges ceteros eminentiâ potiatur & famâ. Item, Si Rex visus sibi fuerit sursum profectus in cælo consedissee, regionem eâ majorem quam possidet in potestatem rediget. Apotel. 162, & 164. Hæc eò adduco ut ostendam, parabolam istam eâ quam dico significatione, apud Dei Prophetas, ex usu Orientis adhibitam. Non igitur, ut antea, ministerium Testium despiciatui erit, neque ipsi pro abjectæ & contemptæ sortis hominibus habendi. Aded illud quod Salvator de seipso dixit Luc. 24. 26. Nonne hæc oportuit pati Christum, & [deinde] introire in gloriam suam? in Prophetis quoque suis vim suam & veritatem consequetur. Et quis novit annon Ec-clesia Reformata probrum Christo hæc parte illatum, Testium ad tempus sublatione, luitura sit; quòd eos pro legationis dignitate, dum fruebantur, non habuissent? Notum est nimis quid ab Ecclesiis Reformatis in hanc partem peccatum sit: utque dum Prophetæ Christi Templo Dei repurgando strenuè incubuere, alii interim, gazis ejus expilandis oblationibusque intervertendis, sanctissimum opus commaculârunt; nè alimentis quidem alicubi (magno veræ Religionis dedecore) relictis, quibus Ministri ejus honestè & pro ordinis sui dignitate sustentarentur; nedum ut quod superabundaret, ad Rei reformatæ amplificationem, belli sacri necessitates, afflictorum fratrum subsidium, aliòsque pios usus seponerent. Annon verò id genus fuit prævaricatio illa, ob quam olim Templum Judaicum Antiocho Epiphani prophanandum, atque Religio veri Dei triennio similiter conculcanda data fuerit? Exercitus, inquit Daniel, dabitur ei contra jube sacrificium propter prævaricationem, & projiciet veritatem in terram, & faciet, & prosperabitur, cap. 8. 12. Vide autem historiam lib. 2. Mac. ab initio cap. 3. ad 5. & judica. Sed nolo amplius unguem in hoc ulcere. Hoc tantùm adjiciam, Fortè hoc honoris & potestatis augmentum Testibus à resurrectione sua, supremi magistratûs jussu (quæ vox illa de cælo esse videtur) obventurum, tanquam in infamiae illius atque ignominiae compensationem, quâ eisdem Bestiani mortuos multaverant; si modò id significatum fuerit prohibitione istâ sepulturæ.

Et in illa hora factus est terræ motus magnus, & decima pars Urbis (puta illius magnæ) cecidit, & occisa sunt in terræ motu nomina hominum septies mille. Vers. 13.

Quo tempore Testes seu Prophetæ in vitam redierunt atque ascenderunt in cælum, factus est terræ motus magnus, i. magna gentium commotio & rerum politicarum conversio; quâ nempe Testibus via aperta, atque facultas data sit in vitam redeundi, cum tanto dignitatis & potestatis auctario. Eo gentium motu ΔΕΚΑΤΟΝ Urbis corruit, & occisa sunt nomina hominum septies mille. Quorum verborum sententiam ut, quantum in re futura fieri possit, vero quàm proximam assequamur, duo nobis præstruenda sunt & probanda. Primum, cum nullus non Bestiæ ruentis casus Phialarum aliquâ contineatur, eandem igitur hic Bestiæ cladem describi quæ ad effusionem Phialæ quintæ. Argumento est idem utrobique plagæ subiectum; illic sedes seu thronus Bestiæ, hic URBS illa magna. Essè enim URBEM illam magnam, ROMAM nempe, Bestiæ sedem, notius est quàm ut probari opus sit. Firmatur amplius, Quia clades quæ hic describitur tam propè antecedit plenariam Bestiæ abolitionem ad Tubam VII, ut nihil interea intervenisse narretur præter abitionem V Æ secundi. Jam verò omnimodo Bestiæ abolitio opus est Phialæ novissimæ; Abitio V Æ secundi, seu plagæ illius ab Euphrate, Phialæ sextæ. Ergò Urbis magnæ clades, quæ abitionem istam proximè antevertat, competit in Phialam quintam. Alterum à nobis præstruendum, est, Urbis magnæ casum istum essè ipsissimam Babylonis cladem, quæ cantatur cap. 18. Probatûr, quia ex eodem capite certum est istam Babylonis seu Urbis Romanæ cladem prægressuram essè plenarium Bestiæ excidium, & augustum Christi regnum cum VII Tuba ineundum. Jam verò quæ hic narratur Urbis ejusdem clades idem illud regnum tam propè antecedit, ut Spiritus, nullius præterea cladis mentione injectâ, ad Regnum illud & Tubæ VII descriptionem statim transeat. Necesse est igitur eandem utrobique Urbis illius cladem describi. Quis enim in animum sibi inducat, ut credat Spiritum S. cladem illam maximam omnino prætermisurum fuisse, minoris alicujus cladis mentione interpositâ, & cum illa nullo modo comparandæ?

His ita se habentibus, sequitur, hujus loci interpretationem ad illius normam dirigendam, & quasi ad Lydium lapidem probandam essè; adeoque istiusmodi horum verborum mentem quærendam quæ cum cladis illius Babylonicæ descriptione consentiat. Quod quâ ratione fieri possit jam videamus. Philippus Nicolai, Augustanæ confessionis Theologus, vir doctus & acutus, per ΔΕΚΑΤΟΝ & πόλεω: intelligi putat Decarchiam URBIS, seu decem Regna ditioni ejus subdita, quæ nempe in hoc gentium motu, à Roma, cujus imperiotot annis suberant, successu facto, deficerent, jussa ejus deinceps non factura. Idipsum nimirum quod alibi dicitur, Decem Reges qui potestatem suam tradiderant Bestiæ, tum cum sermones Dei completi fuerint, odio habebunt Meretricem, solitariam eam efficient & nudam, carnes ejus comedent, ipsamque exurent igne. Sed hujusmodi notio vocis Δέκατον, ut ut mihi ipsi de hujus loci sententia cogitanti prima sese obtulerit, & rei ipsius concinnitate valde ablandiebatur, postea tamen rem propiùs intuenti duriuscula visa est & insolens; ut verear nè iis qui simplicem & incoactam interpretationem desiderent hæud facillè sese sit probatura.

Aliam igitur interpretationem quæro. Et primò animum subit, Δέκατον fortasse Tributin nomen essè; sive ejus quod Pontifex ex toto Bestiæ regno, sive ejus quod ex latifundiis suis URBS ipsa domini jure accipit. Hanc URBIS decimam in magna ista verat, non ampliùs futura esset, putà Regni Bestiani metropolis, aut Pseudoprophetae sedes. Notum est enim, Tributum esse domini symbolum, ejúsque nomine plerasque sub antiquæ Romæ imperio provincias omnium fructuum partem decimam quotannis persolvisse. Quod in Orientis quoque regnis solenne fuisse, tum ex I Maccab. cap. 10. 31. & 11. v. 35. tum ex illa juris regii summula, I Sam. 8. (cave enim quod de decimis ibi dicitur, de decimis sacris accipias; Regiæ fuerunt, regibus tanquam Vice-diis pendi solitæ) probati potest; quod & Aristoteles confirmat Oeconomicorum l. 2. Non igitur insolens videri debuit si quis hîc affirmaret, nomine decimæ, speciei tam vulgatæ, quodvis in genere URBIS tributum significari posse. Sed eò devenire non est opus, cùm in Italia ea tributî ratio necdum obsoleverit, & præterea Pontifex Romanus in Imperio suo Ecclesiastico imaginem ejus jam olim instauraverit, omnium beneficiorum Ecclesiasticorum partem decimam quotannis exigendo. Atqui huic interpretationi obstat, quòd tunc potiùs Δεκάτη dicendum fuisse videtur quàm Δέκατος. Præterea vox ἐπεσε, quâ necesse est effectum aliquem terre motui congruum designari, hujusmodi interpretationi non satis obsequens est. Imò si stare posset, ruinam tamen Babylonis, quacum eandem esse præsupponimus, nimis obscurè & dilutè, nec ut par erat, exprimere videretur.

Vers. 15, &amp; 17.

Tandem igitur, donec quis certius aliquid & textui magis consonum edocebit, eò dilabor, ut existimem per ΔΕΚΑΤΟΝ ἡ πόλις partem quidem Urbis intelligi, verùm non hodiernæ Urbis partem aliquam, sed totam; totam dico ROMAM Pontificiam, quæ decima pars est illius antiquæ. Quod quidem ità esse, neque veteris illius Romæ qualis Joannis ævo fuit hodie superesse plusquam decimam, ex sequenti ratiocinio perspicere licet.

Siquidem ROMAM illam veterem, qualis Joannis ævo fuit, adstruit Lipsius, formam quod attinet, propemodum rotundam fuisse, haud tamen justè; semidiametrum ejus, à milliario aureo in capite Fori Romani statuto ad extrema ædificiorum, habuisse ad septem millia passuum, ambitum denique fuisse milliarium 42. Cùm igitur exactè rotunda non fuerit, ad aream ejus metiendam minuamus semidiametrum uno milliari (quantum scilicet in figura sexangula pro perpendiculari in latus minuendum esset) erit 6. quæ cum 21 dimidio peripheriæ multiplicata dabit aream Urbis 126.

Jam verò ROMA hodierna seu Pontificia ambitum habet non nisi 13, aut 15 milli-rium, ut nòrunt, inquit Lipsius, qui dimensi sunt; formam, ut ex ichnographia ejus videre est, quadrangularem proximam, oblongam, proportionem quasi duplâ. Cui idcirco dimetiendæ constituatur parallelogrammum rectangulum, cujus perimeter sit 15, longitudo ad latitudinem dupla: cujusmodi nimirum erit ex lateribus 2½, & 5. quibus inter sese multiplicatis, prodibit Area 12½. Jam numerus 126 numerum 12½ decies comprehendit. Est igitur Area posterior prioris, ideòque ROMA hodierna illius antiquæ, pars decima; quod erat demonstrandum. Non possumus quidem hic omnia ad lineam & regulam examinare; sed mirum est, id quod possumus tam propè convenire. Urbis autem hodiernæ ambitum definio, quibus ea nunc cingitur muris: nam extrà, contrà quàm olim, hodie non habitat, sed tota quanta quanta est muris includitur; muris verò quos ei Hadrianus I & Leo IV Pontifices, seu Pontificalis regni sedi jam factæ, terminum fatali quasi instinctu posuere. Nam ita tradit Blondus, muros qui nunc exstant ab Hadriano I centenis aureorum millibus è Thuscia contractis exstructos. Eos postmodum, ut ex aliis notum, Leo IV, ad annum Domini 850, sive refecit, sive perfecit, & Transtiberi seu Leoninâ Civitate adjectâ, Urbem in eam quâ nunc cernitur formam & ambitum complevit. Et quamvis spatii muris inclusi multum habet vacuum & desertum, tamen cum muri in præcipuis Urbis operibus numerandi sint, Urbs ipsa muris suis angustior putari nequit; amplior quidem esse potuerit, si, ut olim vetus illa, continentibus ædificiis quaquaversum extra muros porrigeretur.

Ut jam tandem finiam, summa huc redit; Id dicere sive innuere velle Spiritum Sancti. tantum Urbis magnæ, quantum ad hunc terræ motum superfuerat, id temporis ruinam fecisse, videlicet δέκατον τὸ πᾶλιν: neque enim amplius eousque superfuturum esse. Novem partes multis antè seculis casuræ erant, & verò nos vidimus cecidisse; partim cladibus & vastationibus quas Barbari tot vicibus intulerint, partim vetustate nimia fatiscences, partim etiam (ut ad quartam Tubam indicavimus) fulminibus disturbatas: DECIMA Pontifici Romano fato servata fuit, novi Imperii caput constituenda & Meretricularum Christianarum mater. Hanc terræ motus iste, qui cum Tessium resurrectione conjunctus erit, funditus demolietur.

Nec tamen fortasse necessarium fuerit ut Spiritum S. de Urbis decima parte locutum tam rigide, ut fecimus, ad leges Geometricas interpretemur: sat fuerit si, ut olim cum de populi Judaici excidio apud Isaiam agens dixerat, Decima ejus servatum iri, ac in Is. 5. 13. terram suam reducem fore; ita hic intelligamus, non tam justè decimam, quàm partem aliquam minimam, quasi decimam, de pristina illa Romane Urbis amplitudine ad Bestiæ hujus sedem & cladem novissimam superfuturam esse.

Hic si nomibus hominum hominum capita, seu singulos homines, intelligamus; nimirum exilis videtur numerus, neque pro magnitudine cladis quam alibi innuit Spiritus S. Ecquid enim in excidio Babylonis non longè major erit occisorum numerus quàm septem millium hominum? Et num effusionem Phialæ quintæ in THRONUM Bestiæ tantillâ hominum strage abituram verisimile est? Huic scrupulo ut aliquo pacto satisfiat; primò advertendum est, Urbis nomine hic intelligi non Cives & incolas, sed ædificia ac mœnia, id est, Regiam Bestiæ; sicque duplicem BABYLONIS interitum in hisce Vaticiniis describi: primò BABYLONIS pro Urbe Bestiæ Regia, puta, URBE Romana, ad Phialam quintam; deinde BABYLONIS pro civibus aut Civitate Romana, quam nimirum constituit Papa cum Cardinalium purpuratorum senatu, reliquæque

Ad cujus nempe effusionem dicitur, præter alias, ubivis terrarum, Gentium & Civitatum, in terrâ motu illo longè omnium qui unquam fuerunt maximo, ruinas, etiam BABYLONEM illam magnam venisse in memoriam coram Deo, ut daret illi calicem indignationis iræ suæ: cum tamen BABYLONIS illa crematio & excidium, quod capitibus 18, & 19 describitur, omnino plenariam Bestiæ & Pseudoprophetæ exterminationem antevertat, ut in textu ibidem manifestum est. Scio quosdam aliter hunc nodum expedire, dicendo, BABYLONEM, cujus ad Phialam novissimam mentio, esse Constantinopolin, Turcarum metropolin: sed nunquam mihi persuadebunt Spiritum S. in primaria & præcipua omnium imagine tam insigni homonymiâ usum, & duas, non verò unicam semper & eandem, licet duplici respectu, BABYLONEM intelligere. Ad propositum igitur ut veniamus. Fieri fortasse potest ut prior illa BABYLONIS clades, id est, Romanæ Urbis devastatio & excidium, absque immani aliqua, nedum totali, civium nece peragenda sit. Et quamvis fumus ejus ascensurus sit in secula seculorum, id est, ipsa tota in cineres vertetur, & solo æquabitur, nunquam iterum habitanda; tamen magnam partem Civium ex Urbis clade evasuram; vel quia fugâ sibi tempestivè consuluerint, vel alia de causa, quam eventus manifestam faciet.

Vid. Isa. 34. 10.

Atque hæc una ratio est, quâ scrupulo de exili nimium cæsorum numero satisfieri possit. Altera est, si dicamus per ὀνόματα ἀνθρώπων fortasse designari ἀνθρώπους ὀνοματωμένους, Viros nominis. Hujusmodi enim Hypallage in Scripturis non infrequens est, ut in rectiōne nominum id quod epitheti loco est præcedat. Testantur Argentum scilorum Lev. 5. pro siclis argenti seu argenteis; immunditia hominis, pro homine immunditiei, i. immundo, ibid. c. 7. lex justitiæ, pro justitia Legis, Rom. 9. divitiæ gratiæ, pro gratia divite; & similia. Nomen autem pro celebritate omnibus ferè linguis familiare est, præsertim sanctæ; in qua וְשֵׁם אֱלֹהֵינוּ Viri nominis sunt Viri illustres: Filii בְּלִי absque nomine (Job 30.) ἀτιμοί, ignobiles, Chaldaeo Idiota. Unde Beza in annotationibus ad Ephes. 1. 21. & Phil. 2. 9. de exaltatione Christi super omne nomen, ut & Heb. 1. 4. nomen accipit significatione dignitatis & ἀξιώματα. Hujusmodi interpretationem si sequamur, (nec video quid opponi possit) nomina hominum erunt ἀξιώματα ἀνθρώπων, dignitates hominum; ὀνομαστοί, Viri nominis, homines illustres & dignitate præcellentes; quorum ad septem millia (& quid si pseudoprophetici ordinis, quem illi Ecclesiasticum vocant?) in hoc rerum gentiumque motu concidentur: numerum tamen septem millium ita definitum esse opinor, ut paulò major vel minor pro more Scripturæ intelligi possit. Ex plebeiis quantus numerus in hoc bello casurus esset, nihil attinebat dicere, cum illud ex illustrium clade conjici potuerit, nec Spiritus S. ad faciem occisorum calculo subducendam descendere voluit.

Sed & alia adhuc interpretatio dari potest, ut non opus sit ad hominum capita devenire: nempe si nomina hominum hominum cætus & societates interpretemur, propriis suis nominibus haud minùs quàm singulares homines appellari solitos, ut sunt Civitates, municipia, parœciæ, pagi, cœnobîa, & similes communitatum humanarum tituli. Hæc enim quid aliud sunt, si rem putare velimus, quàm ὀνόματα ἀνθρώπων? Sic enim Æschini Thebanorum politia vocatur Θεσβίων ὄνομα, & nomen Romanum ponitur pro Romanis. Quid si igitur ex istis communitatum humanarum titulis, quicunque tandem sint; & sive Romæ, sive in Statu quem vocant Ecclesiæ, ad septies mille in hoc gentium motu occidendi sint, id est, adversæ potestati succubituri, quod Scriptura pro more suo necem vocaverit? Sed non est quid temerè de re futura pronuntiandum, cum prophetiæ commentarius sit eventus rerum prædictarum. Hæc tamen eo fine in medium attuli, ut appareat multò hic, quod verba attinet, liberiores interpretationem esse quàm fortè vulgò putetur; cum Nominis vocabulum Scripturæ usus ad unam aliquam & certam significationem non astringat. Nec enim ὀνόματα ἀνθρώπων conjunctim extra locum quem præ manibus habemus usquam reperire est; nec ὀνόματα simpliciter de capitibus hominum, nisi bis tantum, Act. 1. 15. Apoc. 3. 4. alibi aliâ atque aliâ significatione adhibetur. Restat,

VÆ secundum abiit, & ecce VÆ tertium venit citò.

Sententia est, Terræ motum istum magnum ad exitum VÆ secundi sive Tubæ sextæ continuatum iri, cum eoque unâ lugubrem Testium prophetiam tandem finiendam esse; liquidem siquidem post tantam de Bestianis victoriam, ipsorumque in cælum potestatis & honoris ascensum, sacco non induentur amplius. Si jam autem VÆ secundum, seu Tubæ sextæ plaga, sit illa Turcarum ab Euphrate jam olim in Orbem Romanum exundatio, ut ibi interpretati sumus; fieri vix potest quin hæc ejusdem plagæ abitio sit exsiccatio illa aquarum Euphratis futura ad effusionem Phialæ quintæ, quò paretur via regibus ab ortu solis venturis, cap. 16. 12.

Ad Cap. 11.

A quo quidem Regum Orientis adventu (nè hiatus alioquin inter utramque Tubam relinquatur) inire videtur Tuba septima; adeoque mirificum illum Draconis, Bestiæ & Pseudoprophetæ, ad bellum Armageddunte gerendum, apparatus, (ibidem ver. 13, 14.) unâ cum eventu ejus ad Phialam novissimam (ver. 17, &c.) in ejusdem septimæ Tubæ initium conjici debere. Et sanè admodum congruum videtur, ut apparatus ad bellum ad eandem, quò prælium ipsum, Tubam pertineat.

Sed ex hoc dubitatio oboritur quæ solutionem exposcit, ideoque silentio haud prætereunda. Cùm enim idem sit Mensium XLII Bestiæ terminus qui est Dierum 1260 luctûs Testium, & verò Dies isti luctûs Testium ad abitionem plagæ Tubæ sextæ, seu VÆ secundi, finiantur; quæri non immeritò potest quare Bestiæ menses non ulterius putarentur, cùm post istum terminum, haud modicum Bestiæ etiamnum superfit, non nisi inchoatâ Tubâ septimâ abolendum.

Responderi potest, hoc fieri vel quia tunc Conversio Israelis & novum quasi Regnum inît (nuncupantur enim REGES ab ortu solis;) vel quia in Bestiæ duratione ad Romanæ Urbis imperium potissimum attenditur. Urbs verò illa magna Bestiæ regia in isthoc terræ motu capitur & disjicitur: usque adeò ut Bestia deinceps formam quasi mutaverit, cùm, Metropoli suâ sic depulsa, pro septem montium Regno (quæ altera septem ejus capitum significatio est) amplius haberi nequiverit.

Supereft in textu de clangore Tubæ septimæ, & augusto Christi Regno in MAGNO ILLO DIE JUDICII. Cujus interpretationem ad calcem Libri differemus, ut omnia eò pertinentia Vaticinia ibi simul & quasi uno intuitu repræsentemus.

Ad Cap. 12. Signum verò & imago pulcherrima ECCLESIAE primitivæ puerperæ; Christi nimirum Justitiæ solis fide circumfulgentis, elementa mundi (umbræne Legales, an Gentilis superstitionis tenebras?) pedibus conculcantis, Apostolicæ denique originis insignibus gloriosæ.

Methodum apud Andream Cesar. hujusmodi quid quasi per transennam vidit, ubi utramque interpretationem conjungit hisce verbis. Καὶ ὁ (inquit) ἑστηκὼς πρὸς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ὡς ὁ ἀνθρώπος ὁ ἐκ τῆς ἐκκλησίας ἀλλὰ καὶ ὁ ἐκ τῆς ἐκκλησίας καὶ ὁ ἐκ τῆς ἐκκλησίας. Ecce enim legalem nocte-lucis Luna lucem, etiamque mundanam quæ instat Luna mutabilis Inconstans existit, sub pedibus prostratam tenet.

Verf. 2.

Plerique LUNAM symbolum esse volunt rerum terrenarum & mutabilium, quas Ecclesia Christi infra se despicit. Quod etsi verum sit, tamen nusquam, ut opinor, in tota Scriptura LUNA de hac proprietate celebratur. Symbolorum autem Prophetarum interpretatio haud faciliè aliunde petenda est quàm ex iis proprietatibus quibus Scriptura alicubi attestetur. Jam verò illud certum est, pleraque Festorum, quibus cultui typico operabatur, ad Lunæ motum descripta fuisse, ut Novilunia, Pascha, Pentecoste, Festum tabernaculorum; imò totius anni Ecclesiastici rationem ab ejus motu pependisse; quò fortè spectat illud Psal. 104. 19. fecit Lunam לְמִשְׁרֵי, id est, eis septuaginta. Quidni igitur LUNÆ symbolum ad cultum Mosaicum referri potest? quem nempe Ecclesia revelatione Christi quasi prostratum cernit & pedibus suis subjectum: juxta illud Apostoli ad Colossenses cap. 2. 14. asserentis, Christum delevisse quod adversum nos erat chirographum rituum, & cruci suæ affixum è medio sustulisse.

Porro, cum Deus Solem luminare majus ad dominium diei creasse dicatur, Lunam verò luminare minus ad dominium noctis; quidni LUNÆ noctis præfecturam sortitæ symbolum, quod est potestatis tenebrarum seu apparatus caliginis, id est, satanæ demonumque ejus in idolis cultum, significet? Ità quidem ut res tota ad Baptismum transferri possit, quo Ecclesia illuminanda Christumque induturæ, cultum idolorum, Satanæ, ejusque Angelorum, cultuum & pomparum abrenunciatione, proculcat. Hæc enim omnia vetus abrenunciationis formula disertè continebat; & præterea abjuraturi ad Occidentem convertebantur, tanquam ad plagam cæli unde Nox oritur; sicut è contrario fidem Christo & Deo vero Uni-trino professuri, ad Orientem, tanquam plagam unde Sol abacta nocte reducit diem. Utri tamen interpretationi potiùs accederem in ambiguo sum, & an alterutri tantum, an utrique. Sanè Apostolus ad Galatas, cap. 4. utrumque, tam pædagogiam Mosaicam quàm cultum idolorum Gentilium, promiscuè Elementa mundi vocare videtur; utrumque Ecclesia Christi pedibus suis subjectum gloriatur. Utatur Lector judicio suo.

Et in utero habens, clamabat parturiens, & distorquebatur ad pariendum.

Ecclesia, quæ universè & abstractè velut Idea spectatur, Mater est; quæ verò respectu singulorum, qui in ea continuo gignuntur, sobolem habet, quam Deo parturire & parere dicitur. Hoc in Prophetis adeò obvium, ut de eo non opus sit amplius verbum addere. Videtis Ezech. cap. 16. usque ad v. 21. item cap. 23. v. 4. Isai. cap. 54. Hoseam c. 2. v. 4, 5. Non est igitur allegoria hæc parte cujusvis importunitate vexanda, quòd scilicet Matrem à sobole distinguat, quæ tamen alioquin in unam eandemque Ecclesiam coalescant. Kimchi ad Hof. 2. v. 2, 3. Comparatur Synagoga, seu Congregatio, Matri על רך כלל viâ universalitatis; at הַפְּרִטִּים singuli quique, filiis.

Ὡδίνες verò istæ & cruciatus, ob quos clamabat Puerpera, persecutiones illæ gravissimæ fuerunt quas Ecclesia primitiva inter pariendum experta est. Notum est enim, tribulationes & angustias parturientium doloribus assimilari. Unde verba illa Isaiæ cap. 66. 7. Antequam parturiret, peperit; antequam veniret partus ejus, peperit masculum, Chaldaus παρὰ τὴν γενέσιν, Antequam veniat ei tribulatio, redempta erit; antequam veniat ei tremor sicut dolores parturientis, revelabitur Rex ejus, id est, MESSIAH. Jeremias verò cap. 30. v. 6, 7. ipse imaginem hanc interpretatur. Interrogate, inquit, & videte si pariat masculus. Quare ergò vidi omnis viri manum super lumbum suum, quasi parturientis, & conversæ sunt universæ facies in auriginem? In omnibus hisce locis in Hebræo est פֶּהֶם, quam vocem LXX, Symmachus & Hieronymus Draconem interpretantur; & verò Syrus interpres Draconem in Apocalypsi semper eã voce nuncupat. Hic autem tribuuntur Christo mystico seu homini Christiano, Ecclesiæ apud Gentes partui, qui ad Christi capitis sui typum pingitur; cuique ejusdammodi suæ similem potestatem se aliquando daturum esse sub nomine Thyatirensis Ecclesiæ pollicetur Dominus: Qui vicerit, Non הָרַעַם

inquit, & observaverit ad finem opera mea, dabo ei potestatem in gentes, & reget eos virgã ferreã, & tanquam scissilia conterentur; sicut & ego accepi à Patre meo. Juvabit hîc nonnihil, audire Andreæ verba quibus ex Methodii mente ad hunc locum commentatur: Ecclesia, inquit, per eos qui Baptismo initiantur, citra intermissione generat Christum; utpote in illis formandum usque ad consummatam spiritualis ætatis plenitudinem. Filius masculus est Ecclesiæ populus — per quem Christus Deus manibus Romanorum, quasi ferrum robustis, gentes regit. Alludit ad typum Regni 4. apud Danielem, de quo ei non assentior; (quomodo enim eo David spectasset?) cæteroquin haud multum abest à scopo, ut jam apparebit.

Vide, ut pulchre rem hanc explicat Author Operis imperfecti in Matthæum, Homil. 49.

 Ad Cap. 12. Ἐρ δὲ αὖθις, pro Ad thronum Dei. Raptus est Mulieris Filius ad thronum Dei, id est, ad Solium Romanum subvectus, ubi, eâ quâ dicebatur potestate rector, gentes regeret. Verè quidem Christus Mariæ ad solium Dei subvectus est; sed Christus mysticus seu formatus, quem Ecclesia Apostolica peperit, analogicè: siquidem Thronus potestatum (ut * Apostolus vocat) supereminentium Thronus Dei est, terrestre cælum: Non est, inquit, potestas nisi à Deo. Unde in Apotelesmatis infomniorum, si quis sibi in somno visus fuerit ad cælum subvehi, de regia sublimitate interpretantur. Notum quoque est, in lingua sancta Magistratus מַלְאָכִים, id est, Deos, appellari: * Stetit Deus in synedrio Dei, in medio Deorum judicat: item, Dixi, Vos Dii estis & filii Excelli omnes. Quemadmodum igitur in Mosis cathedra sedere dicuntur qui doctrinam docent à Mose traditam; ita in Dei throno, qui vices ejus in terris obeunt. Quod ideo partus Ecclesiæ Apostolicæ dicitur rapi seu recipi ad thronum Dei, tantundem est atque eò celsitudinis subvehi, ut quasi juxta Deum sedeat; quod, inquam, regie sublimitatis est. Hoc autem impletum fuit, cum jam sub CONSTANTINO magno & successoribus ejus, Christiani, deturbato DRACONE, rerum potiti sunt.

Verùm, inquires, cum Christus iste mysticus Gentes quibus imperitaret, perinde ac Christus Dominus, ferreo sceptro rector dicebatur, quali demum bello quibusve præliis (si hac ferrei illius sceptri significatio sit) PARTUS ISTE Ecclesiæ Apostolicæ Orbem Romanum sibi subjugavit? Aio verò duplici bello: Primo spiritali, mirabili & divino, adversus Damones Orbis illius principes & Deos; quod quidem, exercitu Angelorum cælestium secum adversus hostes dimicante, viriliter gessit; de quo in sequentibus agitur: Altero verò, cum jam solium apprehendisset, etiam corporali; quod testantur tot illustres victoriæ, partim Constantini adversus Maxentium, Maximinianum & Licinium, partim Theodosii illius magni adversus tum alios, tum Eugenium & Arbogastum, Damonum vexilliferos, priusquam Gentilium Draconicularum imperio Christiano rebellium contumacia & superbia penitus fracta & contrita conquieverit.

Sed priusquam hinc abeamus, unum adhuc monendum restat; nempe, non statim atque editus est MULIERIS partus, ad thronum Dei subvectum fuisse, verùm quamprimùm regno maturuisset. Ideo dicitur peperisse filium, ὅς μὲν δὲ ποιμαίνει, nempe non statim, sed cum adolevisset. Quemadmodum & Christus Mariæ, Dominus noster, (cujus imaginem in omnibus exprimit Christus iste mysticus, Ecclesiæ partus) non simulatque natus erat, sed cum similiter ad justam ætatem pervenisset, ad thronum Dei sublatus regnum adiit, ibi sessurus donec posuerit inimicos suos scabellum pedum suorum. Sequitur, Verf. 6. Mulier verò fugit in desertum, ubi habet locum paratum à Deo, ut ibi alerent eam diebus M C C L X.

Quod cum postea repetendum, & aliquantò plenius describendum sit, eò explicationem differemus.

Verf. 7. Et factum est prælium in cælo; Michael & Angeli ejus præliati sunt cum Dracone, & Draco pugnavit & Angeli ejus: sed non prævaluerunt, neque locus eorum amplius inventus est in cælo.
 Verf. 8.

Dictum est, Puerperam, partu suo salvo, Draconis insidias effugisse. Sed qui factum sit ut qui eam tam diligenter observarat, conatu tamen suo exciderit, jam demum commemorari incipit. Scilicet id Michaelis operâ atque auspiciis contigisse, qui Draconem insidiantem strenuè oppugnavit, eumque, superior tandem factus, de cælo deturbavit in terram. Indè Mulieris filium non tantum salvum evasisse, sed ad thronum Dei evectum esse, ipsamque in tutum à Draconis furore locum secessisse.

Et factum est, inquit, prælium in cælo, &c. ] nempe, dum pareret Mulier, non postquam peperisset, ut multi accipiunt. Nam certum est ex v. 14. bellum hoc gestum esse ante Mulieris fugam in Eremum. Mulier autem in Eremum non fugit priusquam peperisset, & Filius ejus raptus sit ad thronum Majestatis, v. 5, & 6.

Michael & Angeli ejus præliati sunt cum Dracone ] non soli, sed adhibitis, quorum gratiâ dimicabant, Christi regis sui Martyribus & Confessoribus; de quibus proinde paulò post in Epinicio cantabitur, quod vicerunt eum propter sanguinem AGNI & propter sermonem testimonii sui, neque dilexerunt animas suas usque ad mortem: id quod de nudis & solis Angelis dici non potest.

Sed quis, inquires, est iste MICHAEL? Non, opinor, Christus ipse, sed, ut apud Daniele, ni fallor, liquet, ex principibus primariis, seu septem Archangelis, unus, imò primus, cap. 10. nempe Angelus ille magnus qui apud eundem stare dicitur à partibus populi Dei, cap. 12. quémque adeò Christus magnus ille Archistrategus, Angelorúmque perinde atque hominum Rex, Satanæ ejúsque satellitii contra suos furori opposuit. Mittuntur enim Angeli ob salutem eorum qui sunt Dei heredes, Heb. 1. ult. eóque pro suo agendi modo, abscondito & invisibili, contra malos Spiritus, qui in hominibus, Dei Christique sui hostibus, operantur, protegunt & tuentur, etiamsi visibili specie non appareant. Ità in hoc quo de agitur bello primitivæ Christi Ecclesiæ contra Draconicos Romanos partes suas egerunt Angeli Michaelē duce; quā nempe sanctos Christi Martyres & Confessores contra tyrannorum minas & vim tormentorum corroborando, & in agonibus ipsorum dolores minuendo, quandoque & doloris sensum planè adimendo; quā Spirituum adversariorum impetus frangendo & debilitando, persecutoribúsque, qui eorum instinctu agebantur, nunc obstacula & impedimenta ex improvviso objiciendo, conatus elidendo, nunc terrores aliáve mentis alienationes injiciendo, ità ut incepto subindè desistentes, Ecclesiæ vel inviti inducias & respirandi spatium concesserint; donec tandem, post trecentum annorum bellum, cum Christo suos jam satis exercuisse visum esset, atque Angelis suis plenam victoriam largiri vellet; Partu Mulieris, Christianis rerum potiuntibus, in Imperii solio collocato, Diaboli regnum expugnatum mirabili ruinâ concidit. Hoc enim est quod inquit, Draco non prævaluit, neque locus ei amplius inventus est in cælo, id est, cum omnibus copiis suis fusus fugatúsque cælo exutus est. (In dictione Non prævaluit Hebraïstinus est, de quo postea.)

Id est, ipse cum omnibus Dæmonibus suis, hæcenus pro Diis cultis, de culmine divinitatis quo gaudebant in imum execrationis & contemptus devoluti sunt. Ut, quod olim in liberatione Israelis à tyrannide Pharaonis Ægyptii, cujus Draco iste imaginem gessit, factum legitur, * exercuisse Deum judicia in Deos Ægyptiorum; idem hic saltem κατὰ τὸ πᾶν locum invenerit. Tradunt Judæi, quòd etiam illic. Vide enim utrumque Targum, R. Salomonem, R. Aben Ezra, cum R. Mose ben Nachman, &c. Nec est quòd quis clara Scripturæ verba aliò detorqueat, præsertim cùm eò alludi videatur Iai. 19. 1.

Non prevaluit, pro devictus est, figura est, ut dixi, Hebraica, quæ adverbia negandi ejus cui adhibentur contrarium significant; prout in hac ipsa Visione paulò post habetur, Non dilexerunt animam suam usque ad mortem, id est, nihili fecerunt vitam suam, seu prodegerunt, pro Christo. Est enim hoc dicendi genus Hebræis non ἐκάρωτικόν, sed αὐξήτικόν. Sic Prov. 12. 3. Non stabilitur homo in improbitate, id est, radicatus commovetur & eradicatur. Ibid. 10. 2. Non profant thesauri iniquitatis, id est, nocent, damnosi sunt. 17. 21. Non letabitur pater stulti, id est, mœrore afficietur. Et I Cor. 16. 22. Si quis non amat Dominum Jesum Christum, sit anathema, id est, quisquis odit & exsecratur. Vide Buxtorf. Thesaur. Gram. lib. 2. cap. 19. Ità hic, Non prevaluerunt Draco & Angeli ejus, idem est atque, prorsus devicti sunt.

Pleniorum autem hujus victoriae historiam jam dedi ad interpretationem Sigilli sexti, quocum casus iste DRACONIS contemporat; imò Sigilli illius argumentum est, quantum ad insignem Imperii Romani mutationem spectat. Quod autem de Partu mulieris in Imperii folio collocato & Christianis tunc rerum potiuntibus dixi, id verò ex Epinicio quod subjungitur clarum & expeditum est.

*Audiui, inquit, vocem magnam in cælo dicentem, Nunc facta est salus & potentia & Verſ. 10.
regnum Dei noſtri, & poteſtas Chriſti ejus; quoniam projectus eſt Accuſator fratrum noſtrorum, qui accuſabat illos ante conſpectum Dei noſtri die & nocte.*

Sed ipsi vicerunt eum per sanguinem Agni, & per Verbum testimonii sui, & non dilexe- runt animas suas usque ad mortem — Ver. 12.

Quæ verba, ut sunt clarissima & absque omni allegoriæ velo prolata, ita Clavis sunt totius Visionis interpretandæ. Nam hinc liquidò perspicui potest, tum quæ fuerit illa Partus Mulieris ad Thronum Dei subvectio, nempe, salutis, potentia, & regni Dei, & potestatis Christi ejus in Solium Romanum introductio; tum quo hoste debellato ad regnum pervenerit, nempe deturbato Κατηγορῶν seu Accusatore illo qui dies noctesque fratres calumniatur & traducit coram Deo; denique cujusmodi secum copias adhibuerint Michael & Angeli ejus in isthoc adversus Draconem ejusque satellitum prælio, sancto Et verò omnino impossibile est ut illa Partus Mulieris evectio, Draconis deturbatio, Regniue Dei & Christi introductio, non ad unum & eundem rerum eventum collineent; cùm ab omnibus, tanquam ab uno quodam rerum termino, incipiat Mulieris Fuga in Eremum, vers. 6, & 14.

Quòd verò Satanās hīc nomine novo Κατήγορ seu Accusator nuncupetur, qui antea Draco & Diabolus audiit; sciendum & hoc ab Hebræorum usu profectum esse, quibus eodem quidem nomine, quod illi suum fecerunt, jam olim appellatus est. Dicunt enim קטניור Kategor. R. Juda in libro Musar, citante Drusio, Kategor, inquit, est Satan, adversarius vel calumniator malus, qui adversatur homini, aut calumniatur eum coram Creatore benedicto. Maiemonides ad Pirke Avoth, (ubi in Gnome R. Eliezar & hæc & contrariæ significationis vox Paraclit, à Græcis quoque derivata, occurrit) פרקליט הוא מליץ טוב על האדם למך: קטניור הוא הפך זה רהוא המלשין אדם ומשתרל למיתו. Id est, PARACLIT παρῃκλντ dicitur, qui interpellat in bonum pro homine apud Regem: cujus contrarium est KATEGOR; is enim est qui traducit hominem apud Regem, & conatur occidere eum. Et sanè, si aliàs unquam, durante hoc puerperio & bello, Satan Κατήγορ & calumniatoris nomen digne promeruit. Quod testantur tot convitia & probra quibus Christianos toto hoc tempore Draconicolæ obruebant, objicientes iis Thyestæas cœnas, incestus Oedipodios, adulterium, promiscuas libidines, homicidia, conjurationes in Principes, pestes, famem, incendia, & quicquid publicæ calamitatis erat. Sed videtur hīc potius respici ad historiam Job, ubi Satanās calumniando & accusando effecit ut Job sibi à Deo temptationibus & tribulationibus probandus permitteretur. Id quod hīc quoque innuit Spiritus Sanct. ab eo pro more suo factum esse. Sciens intelliget quid velim. Sequitur in Epinicio, Propterea latamini celi & qui habitatis in iis (id est, sancti Angeli & beati spiritus, quorum feliciter navatâ operâ victoria hæc parta est.) Vae incolentibus terram & mare, (id est, Orbem terrarum) nam descendit Diabolus ad vos, habens iram magnam, (ideoque novum aliquod malum machinaturus) ut qui sciat se exiguum tempus habere.

Nam licet indè usque à Constantino Magno folio Romano dejectus fuit, aliquandiu tamen apud populum hæsit Draconis cultus: unde cùm, haud ita multò post, se tandem quoque expellendum, & universum Orbem Romanum Baptismo Christi imbuedum fore, rebus eousque progressis, præsentisceret; totus irâ & furore percitus, consilium iniit Ecclesiæ victoriam, quacunque adhuc ratione potuit, in discrimen adducendi, & si conatu excideret, vel ejectus, eam novo aliquo machinamento subruendi. Quorum utroque sibi non defuisse nequissimum spiritum jam videbimus.

MYSTERIUM MULIERIS

EREMICOLÆ.

MULIER Puerpera, debellato DRACONE, deinceps degit in Eremito: quo Ecclesiæ ab Ethnica tyrannide liberatæ status usque ad Tubam septimam & secundum Christi adventum figuratur; non latentis invisibilis, sed quasi mediæ cujusdam conditionis typo, Israeliticæ in deserto peregrinantis similis, ab exitu ex Ægypto ad ingressum Canaanitidis; status utique ejus à DRACONIS illius rufi, tanquam Pharaonis, furore tutæ, nondum tamen eò gloriæ appulsæ quò tandem, reliquis hostibus debellatis, quasi ad Canaanæ possessionem, perventura est. Status equidem qui Ethnicæ illius tyrannidis servitute (ex qua tanquam ex servitute Ægyptiaca populus Christianus Christi potentiâ emerfit) extrinsecus melior esset; utpote potestate exinde, Christianorum Imperatorum & Regum auspiciis, factâ Christum liberè colendi, similiter atque Israelitis Eremicolis JEHOVAM; Templis quoque, ceu cultûs Christiani Tabernaculis, magnificè exstructis, Ecclesiæ politiâ regibus, redditibus sacris, decimis oblationibusque constitutâ: sed Apostasiâ multimodâ, non minùs quàm Israel Eremicola Vitulo, Baalpeoro, Balaamo, Koracho.&c. infelix. Neque illud fortasse prætereundum fuerit, Mulieris hujusce Christianæ

Eremicolæ Menses XLII. totidem Israelis in Deserto mansionibus respondere. Vid. Num. 33.

Ad Cap. 12.

Typi ratione & indole sic expositâ, textum particulatim illustremus, reique gestæ aptemus.

Cum igitur vidisset Draco quod projectus esset in terram, persecutus est Mulierem quæ peperit masculum. 14. Siquidem data sunt Mulieri duæ alæ Aquilæ magnæ, ut volaret à facie Serpentis in desertum in locum suum, ubi aleretur per tempus & tempora & dimidium temporis. 15. Ejecit autem Serpens ex ore suo post Mulierem aquam tanquam flumen, ut eam à flumine abripi faceret.

Vers. 13.

Hic primus Satanæ dejecti, nondum verò penitus ejecti, sed in imo aliquantis per hærentis, conatus fuit; ut MULIEREM, rerum potiunte partu ejus, in Eremiticum statum concedentem, si quo modo posset, obrueret, antequam penitus eò à furore ipsius tuta se reciperet. Non enim statim ut evadere cœpit, sed aliquâ temporis morâ interjectâ, in Eremum pervenit: quemadmodum & Israel, in protectione sua eodem ex Ægypto susceptâ, aliquantum temporis insumpsit. Verba autem hic posita ita concipienda sunt, ut ad illud quod superius de eadem MULIERIS in Eremum fuga dictum erat aliquo pacto referri videatur, hæc aut simili sententiâ; Cum vidisset Draco quod dejectus esset in terram, persecutus est MULIEREM quæ peperit masculum. Nam cum (ut suprâ dictum) MULIERI post editum & in thronum subvectum partum ejus datum fuit (nempe aliis duabus Aquilæ magnæ eidem commodatis, quasi volatu quodam) in Eremum concedere, ubi aleretur per tempus, tempora, & dimidium temporis; ejecit ille ex ore suo post eam aquam tanquam flumen, ut eam à flumine abripi faceret. Itâ quoque Pharaô populum Israeliticum de ditione sua in Eremum contententem persecutus est, sed alio flumine.

Aquila magna Imperium est Romanum. Alæ ejus duæ, duo Cæsares bipartiti jam Imperii, Occidentis & Orientis, quorum tutelâ & auspiciis Ecclesia in Eremiticum statum concessit. Notum est enim, Imperium Romanum, simul ut fidem Christianam suscepit, bipartitum evasisse, & geminis quasi Cæsarum alis volasse. Hanc interpretationem nemini non obviam facit Aquila Imperii Romani insigne. Sed quid vetat etiam ex scriptore Apocrypho typi prophetici significationem confirmare? Is est Edras propheta, (hoc enim eum nomine Clemens Alexandrinus laudat, Strom. lib. 3. paulò ante finem) apud quem Aquila typus Regnum quartum significat, duodecim alæ pennatæ totidem ejus Cæsares primos. Vide cap. 11. & 12. Sed dic, Lector, annon etiam hic respici dixeris ad illud Domini de exitu Israelis ex Ægypto, Exod. 19. 4. Vidistis, inquit, quæ fecerim Ægyptiis, ut portaverim vos super alas Aquilarum, & adduxerim ad me, scilicet in Desertum?

Verum aliud adhuc hoc versu est quod enodari postulet: Quorsum Tempus incolatus MULIERIS in Eremo, quod paulò antè Diebus numerabatur, hic in Annos convertatur, seu tempus, tempora, & dimidium temporis. Ego verò aliam alternationis istius causam indagare nequeo, quàm ut Clavis esset similis apud Daniele tempore notationis, nòsque moneret, in iis ipsis temporibus nunc versari Ecclesiam quæ ille temporis, temporum & dimidii temporis periodo definiverit. Et sanè absque hoc indice illa temporis designatio incertissima & inexplicabilis fuisset. Unde enim aut quo demum indicio sciri potuerit, tempus denotare Annum? aut si hoc, tempora non plures quàm biennium? Jam verò ex hac commutatione clarum est, intervallum illud in Dies 1260 resolvendum esse, eoque significare Annum biennium, & semestrem.

Istis verò in hunc modum illustratis, dispiciamus tandem quid Aqua illa fuerit, quam instar fluminis DRACO ex ore suo eructaverit, ad Mulierem dum in Eremum contenderet submergendam. Oris scaturigo est sermo & doctrina; juxta illud Prov. 18. 4. Aquæ profundæ verba oris viri, torrens scaturiens est vena sapientiæ. Unde verbum ῥυζω, quod ἀποβλύζειν & instar fontis scaturire significat, de doctrina adhibetur: ut Psal. 78. 2. Aperiam in parabolis os meum, eructabo vel scaturiam abscondita à constitutione mundi: id quod de doctrina Servatoris allegatur Matth. 13. 35. Itâ Prov. 1. 23. Sapientia prædicare dicitur in plateis, Eructabo vobis spiritum meum. Scire faciam vos verba mea. Quid igitur scaturigo ex ore serpentis, Bestiæ venenatæ, nisi doctrina pestifera, id est, hæresis, erit? juxta illud Prov. 15. 28. Os impiorum eructabit, vel scaturiet, mala. Eam verò hujus temporis historia instar fluminis ex ore Draconis prodeuntem exhibet; Arrianismum dico & sobolem ejus. Hoc Flumine suo DRACO Mulierem penè abripi fecerat; voluit certè. Et profectò mirum fuit ni Imperatores Romani, qui tum recentes Christo nomen dederant, necdum rem Christianam plenè confirmarent, tam horrendo inter Christianos (vel tantillum à persecutione respirantes) dogmatum in re tam primaria dissidio, tam internecinis partium odiis, tumulti-

bus, credulitate in fratres, vel illam Ethnicorum exæquante, offensi atque abalienati fidem abjecissent.

Ad Cap. 12.
Vers. 16.

Sed succurrit Terra Mulieri; nam aperuit terra os suum, & absorpsit flumen quod egerat Draco ex ore suo.

Id est, Multitudo Christianorum in Conciliis orthodoxâ fide prævalentium inundationem Diabolicam exhausit; quemadmodum Terra aquam solet, cum siccitate prævaluerit. Nam si Aqua (sed venenata & pestifera, qualis ex Serpentis ore prodit) heresim repræsentet; omnino postulabat analogiæ ratio, ut quod eandem absumptum atque abolitum iret terrâ figuretur, ut quæ eluviones aquarum ariditate sua soleat exhaurire. Quod quidem hac in re eò commodiùs ad rem gestam significandam accidit, quia etiam aliàs in oratione historica & simplici Terra passim pro terra incolis poni soleat. Vide Gen. 41. 57. 1 Sam. 14. 25. Deut. 9. 28. & passim alibi.

Ad Cap. 13.

MULIEREM Eremitæ fines ingressam nova malorum scena invasit: nam in Bestiam continuo incidit geminam, specie quidem minimè reformidandam, quippe Draconis aut Serpentis, cujus solius horret figuram, nihil, sed Pantheram aut Agnem præ se ferentem; reverâ tamen Draconis illius dejecti fiduciarum, ejusque vice soboli quam in Eremita paritura erat magnas æumnas daturam.

Et iratus est Draco adversus Mulierem, (indè enim capitis hujus historiam accerso) & abiit bellum facturum cum reliquis ex semine ejus, (iis nimirum quos in Eremita paritura erat) qui custodiunt mandata Dei, & habent testimonium Jesu Christi; stetitque super arenam maris.

Id est, Cum vidisset Draco (ille qui Romano imperio jam modò exutus erat) se, ad obruendam Mulierem in Eremitum contendentem, Arrianismi eluvione nihil profecisse, quin salva nihilominus in Eremitum pervenisset; præterea, neque amplius passurum Romanum Orbem ut ipse proprio nomine rerum ibi, ut olim, potiretur: aliâ ratione eum aggreditur, nempe Regnum vicarium sibi tacitè substituendo; eoque fine stetit super arenam Maris, ut novam Regni Romani faciem tunc orituram vicariam sibi faceret. Duplicis autem BESTIÆ rem Romanam gesturæ historia sequitur, unius DECEMCORNUPETÆ, alterius BICORNIS, summâ necessitudine inter sese devinctarum, utriusque simul, eadèmq; Orbis ditione, regnantis. ## De BESTIA DECEMCORNUPETA.

BESTIA Decemcornupeta seu secularis, est UNIVERSITAS illa Decem plus minùs regnorum (in quæ Cæsarem, post exturbatum Draconem, Imperium Barbaricâ plagâ defilierat) in unam denuo Rempublicam Romanam, redintegratâ Draconis impietate, coalescentium.

Eadem hîc Bestia describitur quæ infrâ cap. 17. MERETRICEM bajulat: Bestia autem septiceps Romana sub vice capitis novissimi. Vidi, inquit Joannes, typum Regni Regni Romani statûs illius novissimi, quo nimirum sub septimo capite agens in decem regna divisum esset, adhucque, perinde atque sub prioribus capitibus suis fecerat, Deum Opt. Nomen blasphemiae idololatriæ nota. Cornibus (quæ solius novissimi capitis sunt) imposita diademata, Regnum illud sub novissimi capitis vice exhiberi ostendunt; id quod reliquâ BESTIÆ descriptione amplius confirmabitur.

Et Bestia quam vidi erat similis Pardo, & pedes ejus ut Ursi, & os ejus ut os Leonis.

Id est, Regnum hoc, partim regiminis & statûs, partim indolis suæ respectu, ita comparatum esset, ut tres istas Monarchias, olim Danieli hisce Bestiis figuratas, confuso quodam temperamento effingeret. Siquidem reliquâ corporis specie Græcum esset; pedibus, ut Persarum regnum, incessu gestionēque insisteret; ore, instar Babylonii, facienda ediceret. Pardus enim Regni Græcorum, Ursus Persarum, Leo Babyloniorum typus est.

Primum igitur, Regnum istud corpore suo planè Græci instar esset, puta Regnum instar illius in plura Regna divisum, Dan. 7. 6. & 8. 8, 22. Græcum enim quadrifidum, Romanum hoc novissimum in decem regna secandum erat; cui typo est decem cornuum gestamen in capite Bestiæ novissimo, quæ Angelo postea interprete cap. 17. sunt decem reges, seu regna in quæ Imperium Romanum sexti capitis dilaceratum, in novum regnum sub septimo coalesceret, MERETRICI bajulandæ. Esse autem Cornua illa decem solius capitis novissimi, id est, septimi, neque, ut vulgò putatur, promiscuè omnium; sic demonstro. Florente capite florescunt cornua; quo occidente, etiam cornua indè enascentia occidere necesse est. In primis igitur quinque capitibus cornua inesse non poterant, quia quinque illa capita, aiente Angelo cap. 17. jam Joannis ævo abierant, & unà cum capitum vicibus cornuum quoque iisdem innascentium vices abiissent; neque in sexto, quoniam eo Joannis ævo (ut etiam disertè affirmat Angelus) regnante, cornuum tamen tempus nondum advenerat; nam, inquit, decem cornua sunt decem Reges qui regnum nondum acceperunt. Relinquuntur igitur Capiti novissimo. Apagite igitur pictores, qui hîc pro libitu decem cornua in septem capita distribuitis, aliis singula, aliis, pro liberalitate vestra, bina largientes: quod quàm inconcinnum sit & omni textûs fundamento procul, imò Angeli interpretationi planè repugnans, nemo qui jam monitus rem secum seriò perpenderit non confitebitur. Pro vero igitur & certo habendum, solum caput septimum, in illa capitum sese invicem scandentium scalâ situ summum, vice novissimum, cornuum gestamine superbire. Jam igitur pergo reliquam ejusdem BESTIÆ novissimæ effigiem exponere.

Ea verò Pedibus, quibus corpus innitur, quibus movetur inceditque, quorumque anteriores Bestiis pro manibus brachiisque sunt, tractando, rapiendo, pugnando, pedibus, inquam, Persarum imperium admodum refert: cùm, sicut illi in rebus gerendis Magorum suorum consiliis innitebantur, ita Regnum Romanum statûs novissimi, Monachorum Clericorumque idololatricorum, Magis illis simillimorum, autoritate regitur. Quò illud spectat quod de BESTIA illa altera Pseudoprophetica * postmodum * viz. verf. 12. dicetur, quòd totam Bestiæ hujus DECEMCORNUPETÆ potestatem exerceat in conspectu ejus. Pedes enim hîc non ut infima & indigniora corporis membra considerandi, sed cujusmodi sint in Bestiis, non tantùm incessûs sed & pugnandi prædandique organa; in quibus & Ursi (de pedibus anterioribus loquor) præcipuum corporis robur inest. Neque pedes hîc intelligendi sunt ea tantùm pars quæ vestigium ponit in solo, sed quod cum pede illo minore dicto crura quoque & brachia comprehendit.

Denique BESTIA Decemcornupeta Ore Babylonico facienda ediceret; scilicet Deastrorum & Imaginum cultum jubendo, pœnâ mortis & vivicomburii abnudentibus indicâ; perinde ut Nebuchadnezar ille Judæis Imaginem auream, quam Belo suo erexerat sexaginta-cubitos longam, adorare nolentibus, Dan. c. 3. Interim aliorum interpretationi nihil hâc meâ præjudicatum velim; eorum nempe qui ad naturalem potiùs trium harum Bestiarum indolem respiciendum putent; quarum omnium ingenium vel feritatem DECEMCORNUPETA exprimeret. Utatur quisque judicio suo.

Et tradidit ei Draco (dejectus ille qui stetit super arenam Maris) potentiam suam (id est, vires seu copias suas וְהִי וְהָיָה vel וְהָיָה וְהִי) & thronum suum & potestatem magnam.

Δύναμις Hellenistis copias sive exercitum significat, ex usu, ut videtur, וְהָיָה Hebræorum, quo utrumque, tum robur & virtus, tum exercitus denotatur. LXX Exod. 14. 28. de exercitu Pharaonis submerso, Operuerunt Aquæ πᾶσαν τὴν δύναμιν Φαραὼ. omnem exercitum Pharaonis; & 15. 4. τὴν δύναμιν αὐτὴ ἐπὶ τὴν εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, exercitum ejus ejus dejecit in Mare; & sic passim: nec apud eos solos, sed etiam apud profanos scriptores. Ab hac notione sunt, Κύριος. δυνάμεων, Dominus exercituum; & Matth. 24. 29. δυνάμεις τῶν οὐρανῶν σαλευθήσονται, copie seu exercitus caelestes commovebuntur: item ver. proximo, Filius hominis venturus dicitur in nubibus caeli, μετὰ δυνάμεως καὶ δόξης πολλῆς. quod * capite sequente exponitur, ἐν τῇ δόξῃ αὐτῆς, καὶ πάντες οἱ ἄγγελοι μετ' αὐτῆς, in gloria sua, & cum omnibus sanctis Angelis suis. Ità hoc loco, Tradidit Draco, [ seu Satanas, ] BESTIÆ Decemcornpetæ τῷ δυνάμει αὐτῆς, id est, copias suas, seu exercitum suum. Satanæ autem copie sunt Angeli ejus seu Dæmones, & idola Dæmonum receptacula. Has ille copias scilicet BESTIÆ huic novissime tradidit excolendas ornandasque, unā cum throno suo & potestate magna; id est, uno verbo, potestatem illam universam quā nuper per Michaelē & sanctos Christi Martyres & Confessores victus & debellatus exciderat. Ità quidem ut Draco seu Satanas, in hac novissimi statūs BESTIA, pristinum suum dominium quod in Rufa exercebat quodammodo recuperaret; sed adeo dissimili à priore specie, ut MULIERIS in Eremita SEMEN id minimè statim animadverteret. Non enim jam Draco draconis, ut antea, specie se ingessit, id est, se eum esse qui fuit professus est, juratum Christiani nominis hostem. Hoc enim si fecisset, statim eum agnovisset, sibi que, tanquam ab hoste sævissimo, cavisset Mulieris semen; ex innata videlicet ἀντιπαθείᾳ illa quam Deus jam inde ab exordio mundi inter utrumque fore edixerat; Ponam, inquit, inimicitiam inter te & Mulierem, & inter semen tuum & semen ejus. At verò cum se, non Serpentis, sed alterius Bestiæ nequicquam cognationis cum Serpente habentis, formā induisset, haud ità difficile ei fuit, Mulieris semini, id est, Ecclesiæ Christianæ, ob nuperam victoriam latæ, jamq; Draconis iecuræ, imponere atq; ad morem sibi gerendum allicere. Quod quidem tam tectè & subdolè, sub Bestiæ sibi non amatae larva, fecit Veterator, ut non nisi serò demum sese ab antiquo hoste deceptam, atque sub hac larva Draconem venerari, Ecclesia agnosceret. Quis enim suspicatus esset sub Pardalis seu (quod idem est) Pantheræ figura latrassē Draconem, id est, sub specie illius animalis quod, cum cetera Bestiæ sive cutis pulchritudine, sive odoris suavitate illectæ, accedere & contemplari ament, solus penè Draco horrere & fugere dicitur? Vel, ut aliquantò clariùs rem explicem, Quis sub Imperio Religionis Christianæ, Idolorum demolitricis, cultum præ se ferente, Idololatriam nefandam & antiquatum pridem Ethnicismum immani studio instaurari, legibus & edictis promoveri existimasset?

Et vidi unum ex capitibus ejus (sextum nimirum) quasi cæsum fuisset ad mortem, (hoc factum in prælio cum Michaelē & sanctis Martyribus) & plaga lethalis ejus curata fuit, scilicet vicariæ hujusce potestatis pharmaco.

Fuisse autem Draconem illum septicapitem (Imperium utique Romanum ab antiquo Serpente infestum, id est, Ethnicum) sexti capitis BESTIAM, tum ex eoliquere potest quod infra cap. 17. de capitibus istis dicitur, Quinque jam Joannis ævo cecidisse, unum (quod sextum est) tunc temporis rem Romanam gessisse; tum maxime, quod BESTIA hæc vicis novissimæ eidem proximè in eodem throno successerit. Draco, inquam thronum suum hinc celsissimè dicitur BESTIÆ vicis novissimæ seu capitis septimi; Ergò proximus ejus Deceßor fuit, seu penultimi capitis BESTIA. Nec id quemquam moveat, quod adhuc sub sexti capitis vice septicaps tamen illic in Visione apparuit. Quamvis enim non simul, sed ordine & deinceps, Capita vices suas egerint; tamen BESTIA cum toto capitem & cornuum suorum apparatu, sub quovis statu exhibetur, ut unum idemq; Regnum Romanum, aliis licet atque aliis Dynastiæ vicibus, ubique designetur.

Sed ad textum redeamus; ubi Editio Complutensis, suffragantibus Irenæo, Areta, Syro Paraphraste nuper edito, & inter Latinos Primasio, illud [ Vidi ] non agnoscit, sed verba μίαν ἐκ τῶν κεφαλῶν conjungit cum verbo εἶδον, quasi in hanc sententiam; Tradidit ei Draco vires suas & thronum suum & potestatem magnam, & unum ex capitibus suis lethali plagâ sauciatur, ut curaretur. Suspicio & vulgatam Latinam olim sic legisse, propter illud [ de capitibus suis; ] nam alioquin [ de capitibus ejus ] dicturus videretur. Lectio verò hæc an alteri præferenda sit, haud temerè affirmārim; illud tantum, admodum eam antiquam videri, ut mirer non esse à R. Stephano annotatam. Sed quicquid sit, Lectio recepta, si rectè & prout res ipsa omnino poscit interpretemur, eundem planè sensum reddet: Vidi, inquit, unum ex capitibus ejus ὡς ἐσφαγμένον εἰς θάνατον, i. quasi cæsum fuisset ad mortem; nempe, non tunc vidente Apostolo, sed priusquam hæc specie ex mari emergeret, ὑπερσυντελικῶς seu sensu plusquam perfecti: Quemadmodum suprā. c. 5. v. 6. se vidisse dixerat in medio Presbyterorum & Animalium Agnum stantem ὡς ἐσφαγμένον, i. tanquam qui mactatus fuisset, non ipso tunc vidente mactatum,

Quod

Quod autem de plage curatione additur, id aut, dum adhuc è mari emergit BESTIA, factum vidit, aut simulac indè emerfit. Neque enim (quod à plerisque tamen hucusque creditum est) sanatio isthac fatum aliquod posterius fuit, sed ipsa nativitas BESTIÆ novissimæ. A reliquorum capitum singulis ad capitis succedentis vicem absq; plaga transitum fuit; atqui in transitu à sexto ad novissimum BESTIA lethali vulnere decubuit: à cuius aio sanatione, nec prius aut citius, BESTIAM Decemcornu-petam, seu novissimæ vicis, exordium sumpsisse, neque altius originem suam ducere. Id quod ita esse tota sequentis narrationis series evincit. Quodcunque enim mali BESTIA patrâsse memoratur, quicquid cultûs & adorationis ei ab incolis terræ tributum, id omne post plagæ istius curationem factum dicitur. Vidi, inquit, unum ex capitibus ejus quasi cæsum fuisset ad mortem, & plaga mortis ejus, seu lethalis, sanata fuit; & admirans universa terra secuta est Bestiam, nempe jam sanatam, & adorârunt Draconem, &c. Tunc quoque datum est ei os loquens grandia & blasphemias, &c. Et aperuit os suum adversus Deum, &c. Omnia ista post sanationem facta sunt: ante verò istam nulla BESTIÆ prædicantur facinora, nullius ei à Gentibus delatæ subjectionis aut honoris mentio. Quicquid antea commemoratur, partim ad BESTIÆ formam, partim ad ortûs occasionem modumque pertinet. Et quorsum, obsecro, Bestiam Antichristianam nobis fingeremus, cujus per aliquod tempus nulla narrentur facta, nulla memoretur persecutio? Imò, si Irenæi & Complutensem lectionem sequamur, expuncto Vidi, nullus erit amplius ejuscemodi interpretationi locus.

Et admirata est universa terra post Bestiam.

Id est, summâ approbatione & consensu iverunt in partes Bestiæ.

Quis similis Bestiæ? quis poterit pugnare cum ea?

Hoc est, non BESTIAM simpliciter adorârunt, quâ Bestia, sed etiam quâ Draconis vicaria; eoque non solam BESTIAM, sed sub Bestiæ larva Draconem quoque ipsum venerati sunt. Nam BESTIAM, nisi quâ Draconis vicem agebat Idololatria, adorare, quo sensu hic dicitur, non magis impium fuisset quàm cuivis potestati mundanæ morem gerere. Scilicet Bestia regnum denotat. Bestiam autem adorare, ex Hebraismi & Orientis usu, nihil aliud est quàm eidem subijci: quod non obscure ostendit ἐξήγησις illa Adorandi verbo subijuncta, Adorârunt, inquit, Bestiam, dicentes, Quis similis Bestiæ? quis potis est pugnare cum ea? Quasi dixerit, in BESTIÆ sese obsequium sponte dederunt, tanquam quæ potestate superârît adeò, ut nemo ei resistendo esset aut belligerando. Quo eodem sensu v. 12. Terra ipsa, non modò incolæ ejus, BESTIAM adorâsse dicitur, id est, in ditionem ejus concessisse. Καὶ ἐποίησεν, inquit, τὸ πλῆθος τῶν ἐν αὐτῇ καλοικούντων, ἵνα προσκυνήσωσι, &c. Ità in benedictione Jacobi, Gen. 27. 29. Serviant tibi populi, & προσκυνήσωσάν σοι, adorent te nationes: esto Dominus fratribus tuis, & προσκυνήσωσί σοι, & adorent te Filii matris tue. De hac porro notione τῷ προσκυνεῖν vide Gen. 37. 7. & 49. 8. in benedictione Judæ, item Isai. 45. 14. At verò BESTIÆ juxta constitutionem suam religiosam subijci, quâ Draconem septicipitem referat, id verò in Deum blasphemum est & impium. Unde qui sic Bestiam adorant, Bestiam adorando Draconem adorare dicuntur.

Datumque est ei os loquens grandia & blasphemias, & data est ei potestas faciendi menses quadraginta duos. Verf. 5.

Haftenus de constitutione & statu BESTIÆ: deinceps exponitur, quibus demum rebus commissam sibi à Dracone potestatem exseruit; scilicet duabus, blasphemiam in Deum, & persecutione Sanctorum. Tota autem descriptio petita est ex prophetia Danielis cap. 7. ubi de eadem agitur, quâ hic, Bestiâ Romanâ statûs novissimi. Sed quæ ibi Danieli ab Angelo succinctius narrantur, ea hic Joanni, interjectâ quasi explicatione, fusiùs diducuntur.

Datum est ei, inquit, os loquens grandia. Os loquens grandia, Danielis est; sed hic verba illa grandia explicantur per blasphemias: quo nomine cultum idololatricum designari, rem utpote summæ in Deum contumeliæ, mox dicitur. Porro ait, Bestiam sic blasphematuram menses XLII, annales scilicet; eodem prorsus temporis spatio quo Atrium Templi exterius sive Civitatem sanctam conculcarent Gentes. Nec immeritò, cùm illa Gentium prophanatio in eandem omnino impietatem collineet cum isthac BESTIÆ blasphemiam; utraque potestatis tenebrarum & noctis rem designet, ideoque non annis aut diebus, ad motum solis, sed mensibus, ad motum Lunæ quæ præest nocti, mensuratam. Et sanè, nisi Spiritus S. temporis designationem ad blasphemiam referri voluisset, quorsum eam hoc loco, statim post mentionem blasphemiam, inseruit? Non igitur ab initio truculentia aut belli contra Sanctos, sed blasphemiae, numerandi sunt BESTIAE Menses. Ut si verbum Faciendi certum aliquem potestatis Bestiae actum statimve significaret, (cujusmodi quid Agendi seu Faciendi potestatem hic vocari nonnulli autument) id omnino ad blasphemandi actum referendum esset. Sed videtur potius τὸ ποιῆσαι durandi seu permanendi significatione adhiberi, ut aliàs solet cum vocabulis temporis. Sic enim Act. 15. 33. ποιήσαντες δὲ χρόνον, facto aliquanto tempore; & 18. 23 ποιήσας χρόνον τινα, cum egisset aliquod tempus, seu aliquandiu; & 20. 3. ποιήσας τε μήνας τρεῖς, cum fecisset menses tres; 2 Cor. 11. 25. νυκθήμερον ἐν τῷ βυθῷ πεποίηκα, noctem ac diem in profundo egi. Adde Jacob. 4. 13. Hodie vel cras ibimus in illam civitatem, & ποιήσομεν ἐκεῖ ὅμιλον ἡμῶν, & faciemus ibi annum unum. Ubi Drusius annotat, sic רשע usurpari Eccles. 6. 12. & facere in Latio. Seneca Epist. 67. Quamvis paucissimos unā fecerimus dies. In tabella marmorea, Cum qua fecit annos ix. Apud Alfenum 1. c. Is servus fugerat, & annum in fuga fecerat, id est, egerat, manserat, finierat, transegerat. His ita se habentibus, quidni BESTIA fecit menses quadraginta duos, sit, vixit totidem, mansit, blasphemando peregit? Cujus locutionis vim qui non intellexerunt illud [πόλεμον] quod in quibusdam exemplaribus exstat, textui inferuisse videntur.

Jam quod dixi, hic nomine Blasphemiae, quasi per excellentiam, idololatriam seu scortationem spiritualem designari, id duplici aut etiam triplici argumento evinci potest. Primò, quod BABYLON, BESTIAE hujus Metropolis, Mater scortorum audiat, cum eaque scortari dicantur reges & incolae terrae. Atqui BESTIA, qua de agimus, nihil aliud est quam Regum istorum & incolarum universitas. Secundò, ejusmodi blasphemiam esse oportet quae in proximè antecedentis, imò omnium reliquorum capitum vices competat; omnibus enim indita fuerunt nomina blasphemiae, ver. 1. Adde quod BESTIA isthac vicis novissima ex impietatis Deceffloris sui vicis sextae redintegratione nata & conflata est. Quae autem istis omnibus communis dari potest blasphemia praeter unam idololatriam? Omnino nulla.

Accedit usus Scripturae, Idololatriam veteris populi hoc nomine exprimentis. Quod ut intelligatur, sciendum tria in Hebraeo esse verba ab interpretibus Graecis & vulgatâ Latinâ Blasphemiae notione reddita, נאץ, נאץ, & נאץ, quorum nullo non Idololatriam signatam leges.

Verbo נאץ Isaia 65. 7. *Qui sacrificaverunt super montes, & super colles הרפני probo affecerunt me. Nostrates, Blasphemed me. Et certè נאץ ad unguem respondet Græco βλασφημείν, ut Theodotion transtulit Prov. 14. 31. nam utrumque significat contumeliâ seu probo afficere. Unde 2 Reg. 19. 22. cum נאץ jungitur tanquam synonymum, ut & Psal. 44. 16. Septuag. utrumque reddere solent per ονειδίζω, παροξύνω. utrumque etiam Chaldaus per suum חרם. Porro (ut hoc quoque addam) non Isaia solum, sed & ceterioris ævi Judæis usitatum fuisse, probi seu blasphemiae nomenclaturâ idolorum cultum intelligere, vel ex Hagiographorum Paraphraste colligi potest; ubi Psal. 69. 10. pro verbis illis, Opprobrium exprobrantium tibi cecidit super me, Chaldaus habet, Vituperia impiorum qui vituperant te, dum participia faciunt idola sua gloriae tuae, ceciderunt super me.*

Superest de verbo נאץ, quod è duobus alterum est cui apud LXX respondet βλασφημείν. Forstero est, Contumeliis, convitiis, verbis maledicis incescere. Hieronymus in Psalmis juxta veritatem Hebraicam, quoties occurrit, (occurrit autem quinquies) semper transfert blasphemare: aliis est contemnere, aut contemptim irritare; adeò ut verissima significatio ejus esse videatur, probris & contumeliis provocare ad iram. Hoc, inquam, verbo perinde Idololatriam designari ac prioribus, liquere potest ex Deut. 31. 20. Cum comederint, inquit, & saturati fuerint, avertentur ad Deos alienos, & servient eis, נאץ detrahentque mibi. Sic quidem hoc loco Vulgata, sensu blasphemandi, licet non voce. Nam quid aliud est Deo detrudere, quam eundem blasphemare? Sed alibi vocem quoque exprimit, ut Jer. 23. 15, 17. A Prophetis Jerusalem egressa est pollutio super omnem terram Dicunt נאץ his qui blasphemant me, (de Idololatriis autem sermo est) Locutus est Dominus, Pax erit vobis & omni qui ambulat in pravitate cordis sui.

pro נאץ נאץ benedicens idolo, LXX ha-bent eis βλασφημίας.

Istis, si placet, addi possunt, numpe illustrandi causâ, quod Antiochi profanationes quibus Templum Dei & sacra ejus polluerat, appellentur βλασφημίας, 1 Mac. 2. 6. & 2 Mac. 8. 4. Item quod Kimchius haud dissimili notione illud Gen. 4. 26. Tunc profanatum fuit invocando Nomen Domini, interpretetur, Tunc errarunt homines post post idola, & invocatio Nominis Divini fuit polluta & profanata. Quàm verò rectè non inquiri; sic tamen vertit & accepit.

Ad Cap. 13.

Hinc apud Doctores Scholasticos tres sunt blasphemiae species: una, cum attribuitur Deo quod ei non convenit; altera, cum ab eo removetur quod ei convenit; tertia, cum attribuitur creaturae quod Deo appropriatur, ut in idololatria. Nam sicut uxor adultera probro afficit maritum, ita Ecclesia idolis se prostituens, Deum; cum sit idololatria spirituale adulterium.

Et aperuit os suum ad blasphemiam adversus Deum, ut blasphemaret Nomen ejus, & tabernaculum ejus, & eos qui in caelo habitant. Vers. 6.

Quod antea in genere de blasphemia dixerat, hic speciatim exsequitur, triplicemque BESTIAE idololatriam distinguit. Primò enim Nomen Dei blasphematur; scilicet in cultu imaginum, Incommunicabile Nomen lignis & lapidibus imponendo, Sap. 14. 21. vel Nomen dei, i. est personam (fas sit sic loqui;) quod tunc fit, cum quicquam præter ipsum Deum Divino honore colitur. Secundò, Tabernaculum ejus, i. humanam Christi naturam in qua Deitas υποστατικῶς habitat. Ο ἦν λόγος & σὰρξ ἐγένετο, & ἐσκήνωσεν ἑν ἡμῖν, Joan. 1. 14. Et apud eundem, 2. 19. Solvite templum hoc, & in tribus diebus excitabo illud. Locutus est autem, inquit Evangelista, de Templo corporis sui. Annon etiam huc spectat illud, [manuscripto perfectum multò Tabernaculum?] Heb. 9. 11. Hoc, inquam Tabernaculum blasphematur BESTIA, dum Christi corpus ex pane à Transubstantiatore sacrificulo quotidie factum credit, eoque Panem pro Christo Tabernaculo Dei adoratur; imò in sacrificium propitiatorium pro vivis & mortuis oblatum suspicit, quasi de integro Christum crucifigens. Etiam Caelites blasphematur, id est, Angelos & sanctos Caelicolas, dum eorum nominibus vocat quos colit Dæmones & Idola. Quantum hoc in beatos Spiritus convitium est? imò in Christum etiam Dominum ipsorum contumelia? in cujus prærogativæ & gloriæ diminutionem, vel inviti, mediatores & interpretes apud Deum, patroni & præsides mortalium Ethnico ritu constituentur. Vide quæ ex Gentilium Theologia de Dæmonibus eorumque officiis scripsimus ad finem Tubæ sextæ. Neque hoc sola contenta BESTIA, insuper contumeliosis & improbis fabulis & miraculis beatos Spiritus dehonestat; ut dubites, cultūne, quem se iisdem exhibere videri vult, an fabularum contumeliis, peccet magis.

Hactenus de Blasphemia; sequitur de altera parte impietatis BESTIAE, quæ se Draconis illius rufi vicariam ostenderet, Persecutione Sanctorum.

Nam insuper datum est ei, inquit, bellum facere cum sanctis, & eos vincere. Vers. 7.

Daniel sic; Faciebat bellum cum sanctis, & prævalebat eis. Cum sanctis autem? i. e. cum semine quod Mulieri in Eremita obvenerat. Jam licet tota BESTIAE dominatio quoddam sit contra Sanctos bellum, (juxta quod initio dicebatur, abiisse Draconem iratum, ut sub Bestiæ hujuscelarva bellum faceret cum reliquis de semine Mulieris custodientibus mandata Dei, & habentibus testimonium Jesu) tamen aliudmodi bellum hic intelligitur; ut apparet v. 10. ubi de talione aliquando BESTIAE reddenda dicitur, si quis in captivitatem agit, &c. si quis gladio occiderit, oportet eum gladio occidi. Bellum idcirco est quod cæde & sanguine geritur. Adde quod in BESTIAE, non Ecclesiastica, sed secularis descriptione adhuc versamur, in quam alterius generis bellum per se vix competat.

Bellum autem isthoc non statim ab initio suo gessit BESTIA, sed postquam jam ad æmulum suam pervenerat, currente seculo à Christo nato duodecimo. Prima ejus expeditio incubuit in Albigenes & Waldenses, & si quo alio nomine tunc appellati sint veri Christi cultores: quorum tanta strages edita fuit, ut per Galliam solam, si P. Perionius in ejus belli historia rectè calculum inierit, occisa sint ad DECIES CENTENA HOMINUM MILLIA. Non enim vivicomhuriis tantummodo, bonorum jacturis, exiliis, aliisque id genus suppliciis grassatum fuit; sed, ne quid tam immani persecutioni ad justum Belli nomen deesset, integri exercitus adversus eos conscripti, & Caucatis illis expeditionibus, contra Saracenos primitus institutis, jam in castæ puræque religionis Christianos qui BESTIAM adorare abnuent conversis, ad annos circiter septuaginta furore & immanitate incredibile sævitum. Hujus lanienæ historiæ præter sunt, ad quas Lectorem remitto. Lubet tamen Thuani, clarissimi, sed aliarum partium, historici verba ascribere: Contra Valdenses (inquit, Præfat. hist. sui temp.) cum exquisita supplicia parum proficerent, & remedio quod intempestivè adhibitum fuerat, malum exacerbaretur, numerusque eorum indies cresceret; jussu tandem exercitus conscripti sunt, nec minoris molis bellum, quàm quod antè nostri adversus Saracenos gesserant, contra eos decretum est; cujus is exitus fuit, ut potius cæsi, fugati, bonis & dignitatibus ubique spoliati, atque huc illuc dissipati sint, quàm erroris convicti respuerint. Itaque qui armis se initio tutati fuerant, postremò armis victi in Provinciam apud nos & Gallicæ ditionis Alpes vicinas confugerunt, latebræque vitæ & doctrine suæ iis in locis repererunt: pars in Calabria concessit, atque in eam, atque ad eamque ad PII IV. Pontificatum, se continuit: pars in Germaniam transit, atque apud Boemos, in Polonia, & Livonia larem fixit: alii ad Occidentem versi in Britannia perfugium habuerunt.

In hoc verò bello illud quoque memoratu dignum accidit, quòd ipsi Albigenes à Simone Monfortio Crucelignatorum duce magnà clade aliquando ad Morellum victi, hanc de Sanctis à Bestia vincendis prophetiam in argumentum solatii & constantiae arripuisse visi sint. Nam cùm * Episcopus Tolosanus stragi intercedens, eos qui adhuc residui in tentoriis fortè manserant, missò quodam Religioso, admoneret, ut tanto quasi Dei irati & contra eos pronunciantis flagello convicti, jam tandem, feritate deposita, ad fidem quam vocant Catholicam converterentur: illi verò, SE POPULUM CHRISTI VICTUM retorquentes, hoc quasi clypeo, tentationis impetum frustrati sunt, atque ad unum omnes à recurrentium militum manu interfecti fortiter occuberunt.

Post hoc in Waldenses & Albigenes bellum, adversus tum alias atque alias ipsorum, aliisque in locis, reliquias, tum ceteros ubicunque terrarum ejusdem castae Religionis socios, variis modis saevitum fuit: donec tandem nihilominus post annum 1500. integra Regna, Principatus, Respublicae, Reformatis Ecclesiis, à BESTIAE ditione in partes sanctorum secesserint. Contra quos deinceps bellum geritur, hodieq; durat, nec finietur donec BESTIA in exitium ierit.

Cap. 6. n. 41.

Jam si quis totam laniens hujus seriem, annis paulò ampliùs quadragintis & quinquaginta comprehensam, animo diligenter metiatur, numerumque occisorum ad calculos revocet; aut fallor, aut BESTIAE persecutionem decem illas Ethnicas (cùm Draco proprio adhuc nomine rerum potiretur) non modò æquasse, sed & superasse, mirabitur. Albigentium & Waldensium caesorum numerum DECIES CENTENIS hominum MILLIBUS aestimatum jam antea monuimus. Exinde ad Ecclesiae Reformationem, partim flammis, partim gladio, partim aliis cruciatibus absumptorum nemo calculum inivit, cùm tamen numerum haud exiguum fuisse notum sit. Ab origine Jesuitarum ad annum 1480, hoc est, paulò pluribus quàm 30 annis, orthodoxorum NONGENTA ferè MILLIA fuisse trucidata, notat Balduinus de Antichristo. In Belgio solo, idque manu solùm carnificis, saevus ille Pugil Romanae Sedis Dux Albanus, ad 36 animarum millia, seu authore, intra paucos annos sublata gloriatus * est. Testatur a Vergerius, qui optimè novit, Inquisitionem, ut vocant, haereticae pravitatis, vix triginta annorum spatio, CENTUM QUINQUAGINTA Christianorum MILL. diversis afflictionum generibus consumpsisse. Fatetur b Sanderus, infinitos Lolhardos & Sacramentarios in tota Europa ignibus traditos fuisse; quos tamen ait ille non à Papa & Episcopis, sed à politicis Magistratibus neci datos fuisse. Nimirum sic juxta prophetiam rem geri oportuit: nam de Seculari BESTIA dicitur, quòd sanctis bellum faceret, eosque vinceret, & de decem Regibus, cap. 17. eos AGNO & electis & fidelibus ejus bellum illaturos; de BESTIA verò Ecclesiastica, non quidem ipsam gladio occidere, sed facere ut quicumque Imaginem Bestiae non adoraverint, ab ipsa Imagine gladio occidantur, ut paulò post videbimus. Sequitur, Et data est ei potestas in omnem tribum, & linguam, & gentem.

Quae autem haec potestas? num debellandi Sanctos? quasi ea sese extenderet quàm latè pateat Ditio Romana: nam fortè non de dominiis, sed persecutionis amplitudine sermo est. Sin quis alterum malit, sensus erit, Tantam fore BESTIAE auctoritatem ut nulla tribus, lingua, aut gens impietati ejus refrageretur. Non autem de singularibus hic intelligi vult, (quippe quorum multi omni seculo reperti sunt qui Agno fidem servarint) sed de integris tribubus, linguis, & gentibus, id est, politiis hominum; quarum verissimum est nullam repertam esse, quàm non BESTIA in impietatis suae obsequium flexum per multa secula detinuerat: adeò ut qui hic illic per BESTIAE provincias dispersi degerent veri nominis Christiani, soli per id temporis Ecclesiam illibatam atque Virgineam constituerent; ut quae nullam professionis suae civitatem, rempublicam, nedum principatum aut regnum (prohdolor!) habuerit. Hic autem animo tenendum, BESTIAE formam esse impietatem illam Draconi succenturiatam; cujus utique communione plura illa, ut diximus, ditionis Romanae Regna in unam Bestiam coalescunt. Hanc igitur qui susceperint, in potestatem BESTIAE concedere dicuntur: quod fecerunt omnes tribus, linguae & gentes.

Et adorabunt eam omnes incolae terrae, quorum non sunt scripta nomina in libro vitae

BESTIA ALTERA BICORNI,

sive Pseudopropheta.

BESTIA Bicornis, sive Pseudopropheta, PONTIFEX est Romanus cum suo Clero; cornua quidem habens instar AGNI, cujus se potestatis ligandi & solvendi in terris Vicarium jactat, sed loquens idololatrias & Sanctorum lanienas ut Draco. Hæc enim BESTIA BESTIÆ illius Decemcornupetæ, Draconi à tyrannide & blasphemis sub Christianæ professionis larva succenturiatæ, author fuit & conditor. Cujus proinde, ut potestate, Hierarchæ munere, fungitur, ità quoque Pontifex ipse ejûdem. non minùs quàm Cleri sui, quocum seorsim BESTIAM Pseudopropheticam constituit) sese Caput & Monarcham gerit, septimum illud novissimûmq; Rei Romanæ caput in URBE septicolli exhibens. Qui nempe Signis & Miraculis quæ ei cum Clero suo facere ut fingere datum est, Excommunicationis præsertim tanquam cœlestis vindictæ fulmine, eò sensim Reges ex dissipato Cæsarum Imperio nuper in Orbe Romano natos induxit, ut sibi, cassaq; jam alioquin imperio Romæ, colla unanimiter submittentibus, pristini jamque demoliti Imperii Ethnici IMAGINEM induerent. Id quod ei tam commodè processit, ut non tantum BESTIA illa Romana capite Cæsareo fauciata in IMAGINE ista planè revixerit, sed & IMAGO ipsa ad PSEUDOPROPHETÆ nutum in quoscunque formæ suæ reclamantes incidisset, gladio seculari animadverteret, perinde ut PSEUDOPROPHETA spirituali.

Et vidi, inquit, aliam Bestiam ascendentem de terra, & habebat duo cornua similia Agni, sed loquebatur ut Draco. Verf. 17.

Vidit aliam Bestiam, Pseudopropheticam nempe, seu Pseudoecclesiasticam, quam constituit, ut diximus, PONTIFEX Romanus cum suo Clero. PONTIFEX enim per se & solus, ut Pseudopropheta dici possit, Bestiam tamen non efficit, nisi adscito suo Clero; cum Bestia cœtum hominum quodam membrorum ordine instar animalis gaudentem denotet, non singularem hominem. Vidit autem ascendentem de terra: id est, non, ut prior illa, ex mari seu Orbis ditionibus, nobiliori scilicet origine, progeneratam; sed ex ima rerum conditione editam: vel potius, non exercituum populorumve bello decertantium confluge, ut SECULARIS illa, genitam; sed tacite & sine strepitu, iustar herbarum & stirpium de terra nascentium, succrescentem. Mare enim, ut quamvis populorum in unam ditionem conflugem, ita in bello exercitum significat. Et habebat duo cornua similia AGNI: id est, potestatem illam bipartitam ligandi & solvendi, Petro ceterisque Apostolis à Christo delegatam, atque eatenus quidem ipsius AGNI similem, quatenus dixit, Sicut me misit Pater, ita & ego mitto vos. Hanc quidem potestatem BESTIA præ se fert, sequē in ea Christi vicariam agere: sed loquitur ut Draco, Draco verò rufus, quem Michael paulò antè deturbaverat atque Imperio Romano exuerat; dum quidem, ut ille, Deastrorum & idolorum cultui autoritate & decretis suis patrocinatur, parique modo veros & castos AGNI illius mactati cultores persecutionibus & lanienis exterminari facit.

Nam potestatem prioris Bestiæ omnem exsequitur in conspectu ejus.

Potestatem Draconis fiduciarum illam priori BESTIÆ conceditam, inque idololatriæ cultu sitam, exsequitur BESTIA Bicornis, tanquam Hierarcha, cujus est obsequiis sacris præesse. In conspectu autem Bestiæ idem est ac apud ipsum sive in gratiam ejus; quasi dicat, BESTIA hæc Bicornis BESTIÆ Decemcornupetæ à sacris est, ut mirum videri non debeat si loquatur ut Draco. Ità enim Hebræorum דָּבָר cui עֲוֹפִיּוֹן respondet, nonnunquam æquipollet dativo personæ cui aliquid acquiritur vel in cujus gratiam fit; ut pro eo quod 1 Sam. 2. 18. dicitur, Erat samuel λειτουργῶν ἐνώπιον τῷ Κυρίου, est cap. 3. 1. λειτουργῶν τῷ Κυρίῳ. Speciatim verò PONTIFEX Romanus hujus BESTIÆ caput, illius quoque BESTIÆ supremum regimen exercet.

Adhæc facit ut terra & habitantes in ea adorent Bestiam primam, cujus plaga mortifera curata est.

Id est, quicquid omnino est BESTIA illa prior, quicquid obsequii à gentibus impietati ejus delatum est, id omne Hierarchæ huic tanquam parenti acceptum refert: cujus nimirum operâ effectum sit ut terra & incolæ ejus adorarent BESTIAM illam primam, quæ plagâ mortiferâ sanatâ è Mari emerferat. Id qua ratione, quibus mediis machinisve effectum dedit, id particulatim ἐν τοῖς ἑξῆς exponit.

Vers. 13.

Etenim, inquit, facit signa magna, aded ut etiam ignem faciat è cælo descendere in terram in conspectu hominum.

Vers. 14.

Et seducit incolas terræ propter signa quæ datum ei facere in conspectu Bestiæ, dicens incolis terræ ut faciant Imaginem Bestiæ quæ gladio vulnerata fuit: Et revixit.

Etenim facit, καὶ ποιεῖ. Vau enim Hebræorum & indè καὶ in Scriptura Conjunctio est non tantum copulativa, sed & disjunctiva, rationalis, causalis, ordinativa, explanativa, prout sensus ratio exigit: id quod semel monuisse sufficiat. Jam ad rem. BESTIA Pseudoprophetica seu Pontificia author gentibus BESTIÆ illius Decemcornupetæ quæ Draconis potestas revixit constituendæ. Signis enim & miraculis iisdem persuasit, ut secum in Imaginem Bestiæ sexto capite mactatæ fabricandam consentirent. Quæ demum ad nutum ejus efformatâ, Plaga illa statu Draconis accepta, novâ idololatriæ & tyrannide ad priorum similitudinem introductis, curari, Bestiæque Draconicola renovari visa est: nam BESTIA Romana capitis novissimi est IMAGO Bestiæ sexto capite mactatæ. Dixit, inquit, incolis terræ, ut facerent Imaginem Bestiæ quæ habebat plagam gladii; id est, imaginem ejus eâ quæ fuit conditione cum accipiebat plagam. Καὶ ἔζησε, id est, atque ita demum BESTIA revixit seu redintegrata fuit. Verba enim ista non pertinent ad descriptionem Bestiæ cujus erat imago exprimenda, quasi verba loquentis Pseudoprophetæ; sed sunt Angeli eventum consilii istius referentis sive subjicientis, nempe sic Bestiam illam cæsam revixisse. Estque ac si plenè diceretur hoc modo; λέγων τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ποιῆσαι εἰκόνα τῷ Θεῷ ὃ ἔρχετο πληγὴν τῆς μαχαίρας. [οἱ δὲ ἐποίησαν ἕτοιμα] καὶ ἔζησε, Dicens incolis terræ ut faciant Imaginem Bestiæ quæ habebat plagam gladii; [illi verò fecerunt ita] & revixit. Ut 2 Reg. 20. 7. Dixit Isaias, Tollite massam ficum. Et tulerunt, & posuerunt super ulcus: καὶ ἔζησε, Et convaleuit, scilicet Ezechias vel ulcus.

Nimirum hoc illud est quod in BESTIÆ illius secularis descriptione dicebatur, tradidisse ei Draconem copias suas & potestatem magnam, eoque plagam illius lethalem convaleuisse; id est, impressisse Draconem cultus & potestatis suæ formam Bestiæ religionis alienæ, dum Angelos suos seu Dæmones non quidem, ut olim, iis titulis quibus se Christi Domini nostri hostes profitebantur, sed sub tegmine religionis Christianæ, Sanctorum & Angelorum bonorum, imò & Christi ipsius (vah blasphemiam!) nominibus supposuit colendos. Nam Idola qui colit, quocumque nomine vocet, colit Dæmonia.

Imò, nè quid ad plenam Bestiæ casæ, id est, Draconis, imaginem deesset; quod Imperatores Draconicolæ quidam fecerant, ipse quoque PONTIFEX sibi deferri curavit, honores scilicet divinos & auctoritatem Deo peculiarem: adeò ut in Templo Dei tanquam Deus sedeat, præ se ferens se esse Deum, ut Paulus inquit. Quod etsi Joannes, seu Angelus ipsi BESTIÆ historiam pandens, hic speciatim non attingit; tamen generali Imaginis nomine, tanquam similitudinis istius partem quâ Bestia casæ refertur, comprehensam voluit.

Ad Cap. 13.

Atque hæcenus de Imaginem fabricanda; jam de Signis ad suasionem ejus adhibitis. Facit, inquit, Signa magna, adeò ut etiam ignem faciat è cælo descendere in terram. Haud invitus hic irem in sententiam Graferi, si modò illa ex Hebræorum scriptis confirmari posset, hoc de Ignis deductione de cælo hyperbole proverbiali dictum esse, eis αὐξήσιν ejus quod præcessit: ac si dictum esset, Facit signa magna, imò talia ac tanta, ut vel ab ipsius Eliæ miraculis quibus veri Dei cultum asseruit haud longè abesse videantur. Judæi enim vulgò, inquit Graferus, isti Eliæ miraculo tantum tribuunt, ut proverbialiter illud de omnibus stupendis factis, in quibus nempe Dei dignitas elucet, usurpent.

Sed cui hoc non placuerit, is lectionem Complutensem, aliis quoque exemplaribus testatam, sequatur, [ ποιῶν σημεῖα μεγάλα καὶ τὸ πῦρ ἵνα ἐν τῷ ἑρῶν καταβαίῃ, facit signa magna & ut ignis è cælo descendat in terram ] atque adeò, tanquam eorum quæ deinceps fusiùs exponuntur summa hisce verbis proponeretur, de duplici mediorum genere interpretatum eat quibus PSEUDOPROPHETA usus esset ut Orbis Christiani incolas induceret ad Imaginem BESTIÆ sexto suo capite casæ refingendam; Miraculorum scilicet apparatu, & Excommunicationis fulmine: quorum altero gentium animos in errorem pelliceret; altero, immorigerorum contumaciam & superbiam frangeret. Etenim de horum utriusque quorsumque spectarent, in sequentibus ordine agitur. De Signis quidem verbis istis, Et seducit incolas terræ per signa quæ datum est ei facere, dicens incolis terræ ut faciant IMAGINEM Bestiæ quæ gladio vulnerata fuit, & quæ sequuntur ad v. 16. De Excommunicatione verò istis, Facit ut omnes accipiant characterem in manu dextra aut in frontibus suis, & ut nè quis possit emere aut vendere, nisi qui habuerit characterem aut nomen BESTIÆ, aut numerum nominis ejus. Locutio Synecdochica, quâ, ex interdicto aliorum commercio, Anathematis Ecclesiastici censura innuitur. Nec ea sanè inconcinne igni cælesti seu fulmini assimilatur. Quid enim est, obsecro, in Dei nomine æterno illi igni quempiam addicere, quàm ignem cælo devocare? præsertim cùm impiorum illa à Deo profectura pœna lacu ignis & sulphuris, seu Asphaltite, ubi Sodomæ & Gomorrhæ igne cœlitis depluto conflagarunt, semel iterumque in hoc libro figuretur. Imò conflagrationem istam docet Apostolus Petrus, 2 Ep. 2. 6. constituisse Deum ὑπόδειγμα μελλόντων ἀσεβῶν, id est, per ellipsim prioris substantivi in Hebraïsmo usitatam, ὑπόδειγμα κατὰ τὴν μελλόντων ἀσεβῶν, exemplar pœnæ eorum qui impiè viçturi sunt: Et Judas hîc Petri mentem clariùs efferens, πῦρ αἰώνιος δίκην ὑπέχειν, id est, ignis æterni similitudinem seu typum sustinere, seu ignis æterni pœnam exhibere. Ità enim, vel in sensum aliquem similem, Judæ verba interpretanda esse, utriusque Apostoli verborum invicem collatio & rei ipsius ingenium attento Lectori persuadebunt.

Jud. 7.

Quâ occasione & illud quoque addere mihi liceat, Propterea memorabile admodum fuisse, & triste Judæis jam à Deo rejectis omen, quod in ipso initio fatalis istius Belli iis accidisse narret Josephus, clade ad trajectum Jordanis è regione Jerichuntis acceptâ: Nempe cùm alii ab hoste in flumen projicerentur, alii vim eorum non sustinentes sponte eò defilirent, Lacum ASPHALTITEM pronoflumine devolutis cadaveribus oppletum fuisse: quo casu, inquit, plaga, licèt per se gravissima, Judæis tamen seipsâ major visa fuit.

Sed eventum Vaticinii quod attinet; De Signis quidem res notissima est, universam quæ in Bestiæ regno jam à duodecim plùs minùs seculis obtinuit idololatriam, tum primogenitam illam in Sanctorum demortuorum, reliquiarum & Angelorum cultu sitam, tum proximum natu cultum imaginum, denique novissimam illam Dei panacei blasphemiam, denso signorum agmine, curationibus putà & visionibus miraculosis, coercionibus specie tenus dæmonum, aliisque non unius generis mirandis effectibus, infelicibus Christianis primò quasi commendatam, deinde persuasam & confirmatam esse. Quæ quidem omnia BESTIA Bicornis, seu PONTIFEX Romanus cum satellitio seu Pseudoprophetico, fecisse dicitur; quatenus vel ipsi confinxerunt, vel ab aliis conficta auctoritate suâ approbârunt, vel quæ malorum dæmonum reverâ operationes & præstigiæ fuerint, pro veris & Divinis miraculis Orbi Christiano seducendo obtruserunt. Scilicet hoc illud ipsum est quod Apostolus Paulus ad Thessalonicenses prædix-Nempe in controversia illa Iconomachica apud Græcos anno circiter 720 exorta, atque per annos 120 ingenti fervore & idololatriarum persecutione agitata, dici vix potest in quantum discrimen Imago illa Draconis cæsi, tunc adhuc rudis & imperfecta, nec ultimam artificis manum consecuta, adducta fuerit. Nec enim in illa controversia, ut vulgò creditur, Imaginum solarum cultus, sed & Sanctorum demortuorum & Reliquiarum strenuè oppugnabatur. Leo Isauricus (inquit Theophanes hist. Miscel. lib.

Unum commemorare lubitum est admodum insigne, & quod Imaginem, de qua fabricanda agitur, tam propè attingat, ut vel solum ad Prophetiae hujus veritatem astruendam possit sufficere.

Imò adhuc sub Theophilo, quinque Imperatorum Iconomachorum ultimo, Sanctorum cultum oppugnatum apparet ex Hymno illo Theodori, quo Ecclesia Constantinopolitana victricis tandem Idololatriæ memoriam quotannis (proh scelus & dolor!) recolere solebat. Ibi namque Ode 8. habetur, Τα ἱερὰ τῶν ἁγίων λείψανα, καὶ τὰς εἰκόνας αὐτῶν, Ἀντίξ ὁ δεινὸς ἅμα τῷ Ἰωάννῃ ἐδ' ὅλως προσκυνεῖσθαι ἐφασκον αἰόμωι, οἱ ἀρνῦνται τὸ εὐσεβεῖν. id est, sacras Sanctorum reliquias, & ipsorum imagines, Lezius ille ferus unà cum Joanne (hic fuit Patriarcha Constantinopolitanus sub Theophilo) nullo pacto venerandas impiè afferebant, pietatis desertores.

Quid igitur hinc PONTIFEX Romanus? Succurrit IMAGINI Bestiana, immane quantum de fractione periclitanti: & cum literis & minis nihil proficeret, ad fulmineas artes se convertit. Leonem Isaurum Iconomachorum antesignanum anathemate percutit, subditos in Italia ab obedientiae juramento absolvit, Exarchatu Ravennate & reliquâ eò loci ditione, quantum quidem in ipso erat, privavit. Quo factò, ut Idololatriæ in Oriente factioni animos addidit, ità Reges Occidentis tempestivè absterruit nè quid simile conarentur. Eodem fulmine Albigeneses, eorumque defensores, receptores afflandos sanxit & verò afflavit Synodus Lateranensis 280 Episcoporum sub Alexandro III. Idem quoque fulmen Concilium Lateranense magnum sub Innocentio devocandum cernit in Dominos temporales, qui requisiti & moniti ab Ecclesia terras suas ab iisdem purgare neglexerint; nempe, ut per Metropolitanos & ceteros comprovinciales Episcopos Excommunicationis vinculo innodentur; & si satisfacere contempserint, per Pontificem Rom. vasalli eorum à fidelitate sua denuncientur absoluti, & terræ eorum exponantur Catholicis occupandæ.

Datumque est ei dare spiritum Imagini Bestiæ, ut & loquatur Imago Bestiæ, & faciat ut quicumque non adoraverint Imaginem Bestiæ occidantur.

Ni vitali facultate prædita fuisset IMAGO, non ejus effitione Bestia cæsa revivisset. Neque enim Bestia draconicola, quam referre debuit, Bestia iners fuit; sed quæ strenuè admodum sese movere, & in quovis genio suo contrarios impetum facere solebat. Ejusmodi igitur imaginem eam esse oportuit in qua denuo revivisceret. Proinde PSEUDOPROPHETÆ datum dicitur, non solum ut populum Christianum ad Imaginem ipsius in Bestia vicis novissimæ fabricandam pelliceret; sed ut ipse vitam eidem largiretur, quâ & edictis pari modi juberet quæ ad dignitatem suam tuendam opus essent, tum in inobsequentes & constitutioni ipsius religiosæ subesse detrectantes, gladio, gladio, seu nece seculari, animadverteret. Et sanè totam illam potestatem quam habet IMAGO, seu Bestia secularis idololatrica, in Sanctos saviendi, cam non nisi à BESTIA Pseudoprophetica sibi traditam exercet. Ità enim res geritur, ut quos BESTIA Pseudoprophetica hæreseos ( ut vocant ) seu Imaginis violatæ condemnaverit, eos demum BESTIÆ seculari potestatem facit occidendi : cujusmodi scilicet à sese nullam habet, nisi ab Ecclesiastico judicio pendentem. Atque hæc est illa quam vocant Traditionem potestati seculari in historiis carnificinæ Bestianæ nullibi non obviam. BESTIA scilicet Pseudoprophetica, ut quidem videri vult, non occidit ipsa, sed tamen sententiâ suâ damnatos Seculari tanquam Carnifici tradit occidendos.

Vers. 17.

Quid sibi velit emendi & vendendi interdictum ( ut πρωτότης incipiam ) jam antè ostendi ; nempe Papalem Excommunicationem notari, in quam qui incidunt, reliquorum civium consuetudine & commercio arcentur. Ità Canon iste Concilii Lateranensis sub Alexandro, cujus paulò antè mentio facta, contra Waldenses & Albigenes editus, sub anathemate prohibet signanter, Nè quis eos in domo vel in terra sua tenere vel fovere, vel NEGOTIATIONEM cum iis exercere præsumat. Et Synodus Turonensis in Gallia sub eodem simili interminatione prohibet, Nè ubi cogniti fuerint illius ( ut vocant ) hæreseos sectatores, receptaculum quisquam eis in terra sua præbere aut præsidium impertiri præsumat ; sed nec in VENDITIONE & EMPTIONE aliqua cum iis communicatio habeatur. Et quid ? nonne hic quoque loquitur PSEUDOPROPHETA ut Draco ? Draco enim Diocletianus simile edictum edidit, Nè quis quidquam Christianis venderet aut subministraret, nisi priùs thura Diis adolevisset : de quo in Hymno Justinii martyris ità canit Beda ;

Hanc autem locutionem Synecdochicam propterea fortasse Spiritus S. adhibuit, ut innueret, anathema illud Papale, licèt sese abscissione ab interna & invisibili Christi communione venditet, reverà tamen ultrà vim non habere quàm ut ab externo & visibili aliorum civium commercio excludat.

Jam quod de Character dicitur ; Character Bestiæ non est propriè nisi Nominis ; ideo dicitur Character seu Nomen Bestiæ, & capite sequente Character Nominis ejus. Nempe allusum est ad morem veterem, quo Servi Dominorum, milites Imperatoris sui nominibus ( atque illi quidem præcipuè in fronte, isti in manibus ) inscribi solebant. Itaque pari ratione AGNI quoque Satellitium capite sequenti, quod satellitio BESTIÆ ἀντιστοιχεί, Agni & Patris nominibus in fronte scribuntur ; eodem utrobique typi sensu, ad indicandum cujus Domini sit, cuique militet uterque Cætus ; illos Bestiæ & Imaginis ejus, hosce Christi & Patris ejus sese servos profiteri.

Numerum quod attinet, is Nominis seu Characteris Bestiæ appendix potiùs censendus est quàm Character ; & quidem reverà non tam Nominis Bestiæ, quàm Bestiæ ipsius Numerus est ; quomodo etiam statim vocatur. Numerus autem Nominis ideo tantùm dicitur, quòd Nominis Bestiæ literis in numeros relatis, Deo ità disponente, contineatur. Neque tamen sequitur, quia cum Nomine Numerus tam intimè cohæreat, ideo Numerum Bestiæ cum Nomine confundendum esse : Exigit enim ἀντιστοιχίας ratio, ut, quemadmodum in Agni Cætu Character Nominis à Cætûs Numero distinguitur, ità quoque in Cætu Bestiano fiat. Adde quòd diversæ omnino rei sunt, significationis, inquam, Character Nominis atque Numerus, si ad aliorum locorum analogiam interpretationem dirigamus. Alter enim, Character Nominis, cui Domino sese addixerint qui gestant ; alter, putà Numerus, quâ prosapiâ undèque genus suum deducant qui eodem insigniuntur, ostendit : ut numerus duodenarius, exque duodenario multiplicando factus, tam in Cætu Virgineo quàm in structura & dimensionibus Novæ Hierusalem emicans, Apostolici generis atque indolis symbolum est.

Est

Ad Cap. 13. Est verò, quod jam tum cum Apocalypsis adhuc recens scripta esset nonnulli suspicati sunt, decantatum illud ΛΑΤΕΙΝΟΣ. Hoc enim nomine, post imperii divisionem & decem Reges in provinciis ejus exortos, neque prius, Pseudopropheta Romanus, cum reliquis Occidentis incolis, discriminis ergò appellatus est; idque ab illis ipsis, quibus Apocalypsis scripta est, septem Asiæ Ecclesiis. Namque Græci & reliqui Orientales, penes quos in dilaceratione illa Imperii nomen manserat, seipsos solos Romanos dici voluere; nos, cum Pontifice nostro & sub eo Episcopis, Regibus, Dynastis, fatali quodam instinctu LATINOS dixere. Atque hoc ipsum Nomen, literis suis Græcorum & Hebræorum more subductis, numerum conficit à Spiritu S. notatum, numerum autem mysticum; quo indicatur cujus profapia sit BESTIA, quamque falso sese chori Apostolici successorem venditet, cum sit reverà Draconis.

Numerus enim NOMINIS Bestiæ est 666. Quem si ex duodenario, Apostolici generis Symbolo, deducere satagas, frustra laborabis; nunquam enim indè, quomodo-cunque multiplicaveris, 666 efficies: At verò è senario, qui DRACONIS illius ru-ff, putà BESTIÆ sexti capitis, numerus est, facillimè; cum ex senariis totus, quantus quantus est, conflatus sit, monadum, decadum, hecatontadum; quasi Draconis illius sperma totum BESTIÆ hujus novissimæ corpus omnesque artus ejus pervassisset.

Quem quidem omnino ad eum quem dixi modum computari debere, videor mihi colligere ex Coëtus Virginei analogia, cujus Numerus 144, contrà quàm Bestiæ, totus Apostolicus est, ex duodenario in seipsum multiplicato genitus. Contrariorum autem contraria est ratio. Atque ibi quidem utrumque, tam Nomen inscriptum quàm inscripti Coëtus numerus, Spiritus Sanctus expressit; hic verò Nomen ex Numero conjiciendum reliquit.

Est igitur, ut rem in pauca conferam, Nominis BESTIÆ characterem accipere, ejus potestati se addicere, & Dominium confiteri; Numerum verò, impietatem ejus, Draconis traducem, idololatriam nempe LATINAM, amplecti. Unde illud fortè consideratione non indignum erit; Licet nemo potest Nominis Bestiani characterem accipere, seu ejus potestati subditus esse, quin simul quoque Numerum ejus accipere, hoc est, impietati communicare, necesse habuerit: posse tamen fieri ut quis Numerum seu impietatem Bestiæ admittat, Characterem verò seu Nomen respuat. Id quod in Græcos jamdiu competit, qui utut eandem impietatis formam Draconis traducem seu idololatriam Latinam amplectantur, eamque primitus PONTIFICIS Latini, IMAGINEM Draconis cæsi illic quoque erigi adlaborantis, auspiciis in Concilio isto altero Niceno apud se confirmatam; Pontifici tamen Latino subesse, seu Nomen ejus ut olim (antequam schismate facto secesserint) gestare, jam à septingentis annis recusant.

cap. 7.

COETUS Virgineus AGNI Sionei satellitium, idemque selectum illud Israelis ex Gentibus surrogati Agmen, de quo ad initium SIGILLI septimi, (geminà namque Visione, ut ibi monuimus, Prophetiæ SIGILLORUM cum ΒΙΒΛΑΠΙΔΙΟΤ connectendæ causâ, describitur) significat Ecclesiam, in medio illo Christiani nominis Orbe Bestiam affectantium, AGNO fidelem, subque BABYLONE Virginem: germanam illam nec degenerem duodecim Apostolorum Apostolicè multiplicatam progeniem; solam utique, ad exemplum Chori cœlestis, AGNUM PATREMque cantu Evangelico castè ritèque celebrare edoctam; quod nemo Bestianorum malo suo fato addiscere potuit: Adhuc populum non uni alicui, ut Bestiani, sedi addictum, sed AGNUM comitantem quocunque gentium ierit: Bestiæ cultores denique, de cultus Evangelici præscripto, Deique in Idololatrias patefacta severitate sæpius & acriter commonescentem; tandemque démque omnibus, ni in æternum perire velint, ut ab ejus commercio quantocyus se subducerent, denunciarent. Hæc Visionis summa est. Jam textum ad ejus normam elucidemus.

* Vers. 1.

* Et vidi, & ecce AGNUS stabat supra montem Sion, & cum eo centum quadraginta quatuor millia.

Ex numero 144 seu duodecies duodecim millium apparet, eundem hîc Cœtum describi qui ad septimi Sigilli ingressum signabatur; nimirum legitimam illam nec degenerem Apostolorum sobolem, numerum hunc duodenarium tanquam generis sui insignie gerentem. Recolat Lector quæ illic notavimus.

Comment. in cap. 7.

Mons Sion autem solium fuit Regni Davidici, idémque Civitas Davidis dicta, quod eum ille Jebusæis ereptum extus mœnibus novis, intus arce regiâ, vicis, plateisque construxerat. Ergo hîc parabolicè adhibitus, illum terrarum locum designabit quem Christus, debellato DRACONE, Regni seu Ecclesiæ suæ domicilium fecerat, id est, Christiani nominis Orbem. In hoc Orbe Ecclesia Virginea mansionem habet, inibi-que AGNO fidem & pudicitiam illibatam etiamnum servat, quum omnia stupris ac cædibus Bestia contaminâsse, pessundèdusse, nihilque integrum aut intactum reliquisse videretur.

Habentes nomen Agni, & nomen Patris ejus scriptum in frontibus suis.

Malè è quibusdam exemplaribus excidit illud nomen Agni, quod agnoscunt Vulgata, Primasius, Andreas, Aretas, Editio Complutensis, Syrus Interpres; ut eam veram lectionem esse non sit dubitandum: quin ut ita legatur rem ipsam postulare, in progressu interpretationis clarè patebit. Alluditur enim (ut in Bestiæ quoque historia notavimus) ad ritum priscum, quo tam Servi Dominorum, quàm Milites Imperatoris sui nomine aut stigmate olim inscripti cernebantur; atque servi quidem præcipuè in frontibus (teste Rhodigino lib. 5. 33.) milites verò in manibus. Vegetius lib. 2. 5. Victuris in cute punctis milites scripti, & matriculis inserti jurare solent. Aëtius autem l. 8. 12. Stigmata vocant quæ in facie aut alia parte corporis inscribuntur, qualia sunt MILITUM in manibus. De militum verò inscriptione plenius nos instruet Liplius, lib. 1. de Milit. Rom. dialog. 9. Sub principibus, inquit, tirones jam captos compungebant, & in cute signabant [Romani.] Verahæc stigmata erant & manibus militum impressa. Erant inscripti nomine Imperatoris: hinc Augustinus regium charactèrem vocat, & Chrysostomus σφραγίδα. Petium hoc vel ab eo, quod olim nomen Imperatoris in scutis, hastis, vexillis inscribi solitum, atque eo exemplo in cute: vel à sacris; quos enim Deo consecrabant vel initiabant, hos stigmatibus inurebant. Ad rem igitur. Illi nomen Agni & Patris ejus in frontibus suis gerunt, qui fidem quâ se Agno, seu Imperatori & Domino, & Patri ejus in Baptismo manciparunt, non frangunt, neque ad Satanae ejusque Angelorum cultum pompasque, quæ semel ejurarunt, relabuntur. Ità enim antiquitus (ut illud ad pleniorum dicendorum lucem hoc loco inseram) Abrenunciatio-nis in Baptismo formula in plerisque Ecclesiis * concipiebatur: Ἀποτάσσομαι τῷ Σατανᾷ, & πᾶσι τοῖς ἔργοις αὐτοῦ, & τοῖς ἠρώμασι αὐτοῦ, & πᾶσι τῇ λατρείᾳ αὐτοῦ, Renuncio Satanae, & omnibus operibus ejus, & pompis ejus, & omni cultui ejus. In multis, istique antiquissimis, Liturgiis additum, & τοῖς ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ, & Angelis ejus. In aliis, Et omnibus inventis ejus, & omnibus qui sub ipso sunt. In aliis eodem sensu, Et mundo ejus. Quæ omnia stylo Apocalypticæ expeditè efferre licet, Ἀποτάσσομαι τῷ Δεσπότῃ, & πᾶσι τῇ δυνάμει αὐτοῦ, Renuncio Draconi, & omnibus copiis ejus, id est, ut Cyrillus d Alexandrinus Baptismi formulam explicat, Demoniorum turbis valedico, omnem pompam eorum & cultum respuo. Romana Ecclesia hîc aliis paulò contractior fuit: Sola enim apud eam Satanae, pomparum & operum ejus mentio: ubi sub Satanae, tanquam Principis, nomine, Angelos quoque ejus; pomparum & operum, cultum idololatricum omnemque apparatus ejus intelligit.

Esse jam Baptismi Sacramentum, utpote quo fidem Agno & Patri solenniter profite-mur, quoque nomen eorum suscipimus & Christiani dicimur, Dominicum signaculum, passim Patres, idque à prima Ecclesiæ antiquitate, prædicant. Hinc illud * Origenis, Immortale LAVACRUM portemus in frontibus nostris; cum Demones viderint, contremiscent. || Augustinus etiam regium charactèrem vocat, charactèrem Imperatoris, charactèrem Redemptoris. Idem porro signaculum hoc idololatriæ & superstitione induci & quasi obliterari docent. Tertullianus de Spectac. cap. 4. de Baptismo sub signaculi nomine agens; Cum, inquit, aquam ingressi Christianam fidem in legis suæ verba profite-mur, renunciasse nos DIABOLO, & POMPÆ & ANGELIS EJUS, ore nostro contestamur. Quid erit summum ac præcipuum in quo Diabolus & Pompæ & Angeli ejus censentur, quàm Idololatria? & cap. 24. Nonne ejeramus & rescindimus SIGNACULUM rescindendo testationem ejus? Ad Cap. 14.

Non convenit signo Christi & signo Diaboli. Similiter August. Tract. 7. in Joan. Perdidit signum Christi, accipit signum Diaboli. Non vult Christus communionem, solus vult possidere quod emit. Cum istis facit Isidor. Origin. lib. 18. cap. 59. de Spectaculorum execratione; Deum negat qui talia præsūmit, & fidei Christianæ prævaricator effectus est qui id denuo appetit cui in lavacro jam pridem renunciavit, id est, Diabolo, pompis & operibus ejus.

Omnes igitur qui BESTIÆ characterem acceperint, Christi & Patris abnegarunt, egerunt, irritum fecerunt, ac pro eo habentur acsi nunquam accepissent. Soli centum isti & quadraginta quatuor mille qui ad BESTIÆ castra non transfugerant, sed Agno firmiter adhærebant, Characterem Dominicum etiamnum in frontibus suis ostendunt.

Unum adhuc monendum restat; nempe illud, Quod licet Signati utrobique, tam hic quàm cap. 7. iidem sint, tamen signaculi rationem non utrobique eandem esse; idque ex diverso signandi fine: Illic enim tutelæ res agebatur, hic servitii & fidelitatis. Sed nec opus est ut propterea aliud ibi signaculum quæramus à Baptismi Sacramento planè diversum: nam utrumque præstat Baptismus. Siquidem, præter illud quod est professionis nostræ, Deus aliud, gratiæ nimirum suæ, signaculum superaddit, quo pro suis agnoscit qui tinguntur, inque tutelam suam suscipit. De hoc igitur in priori signatorum Visione; de illo in præsentī, ni fallor, agitur. Atque huic sententiæ favet, quod Clemens Alexandrinus apud Eusebium lib. 3. cap. 17. Baptisma nuncupet τέλειον φυλάκιστον, perfectam custodiam: Item quod Nazianzenus, Orat. in sanctum Baptisma, idem sigillum dici, ὡς σφραγισμὸς, quia conservatio est: Denique illud Basilii Exhortat. ad Baptismum, Nisi signatus sit super te vultus Domini, nisi characterem in te agnoscat Angelus, quomodo pro te pugnabit, aut ab inimicis vindicabit? ubi Nicetas Scholias, Quia per eum consignati, cujusnam Domini simus agnoscimur, atque ab insidiis tuti conservamur. Jam pergamus ad reliqua.

Vers. 2.

Et audiivi vocem de cælo, tanquam vocem aquarum multarum, & tanquam vocem tonitruī magni: & vox quam audiivi erat sicut citharædorum citharizantium citharis suis.

3. Et cantabant quasi canticum novum ante thronum, & ante quatuor Animalia & Presbyteros, &c.

Cap. 5. 11.

Vocem verò indicat & canticum Angelorum cœlestium, Patrem & Agnum glorificantium; quomodo fecisse leguntur cum primū Agnus Librum fatorum resignandum suscepisset. Ad hos Angelos utique respiciens, mox versu 6 dicit, Et vidi alium Angelum volantem in medio cæli, id est, alium à præcentoribus istis. Nullius enim ante hunc Angeli meminisset, nisi dicamus symphoniacos istos Angelorum chorum fuisse.

Vid. R. D. Kimch.

Vox autem aquarum multarum & tonitruī instar, non significat aliud quàm vocem numerosæ & confertæ multitudinis; cujusmodi in Templo, dum adhuc florebat, audiri solet, cantorum Levitarum, voce & instrumentis musicis Dei laudes resonantium: quorum præ multitudine, simul & acclamantis populi, sonitus reddebatur, quasi marinorum fluctuum & fragoris tonitrualis. Non conjectura est, sed res manifesta; quippe quod in epinicio cap. 19, ubi eadem est parabola, disertè exprimitur. Audiivi, inquit, quasi vocem turbæ multæ (audi, turbæ multæ) & sicut vocem aquarum multarum, & sicut vocem tonitruorum magnorum, dicentium, Hallelujah. Hinc apud Ezechiel. cap. 43. 2. ubi in Hebræo simpliciter est, Vox ejus (i. gloriæ Dei Israelis) quasi vox aquarum multarum, Septuag. paraphrastice reddunt, Φωνὴ τῶν παρευεσόντων, ὡς φωνὴ διπλάσια ζόντων πολλῶν, Vox castrorum ejus, quasi vox geminantium multorum. Chaldaus similiter, Vox benedicientium nomen ejus, sicut vox aquarum multarum. Adde illud ex eodem Propheta de Cherubinis cap. 1. 24. Audiivi, inquit, vocem alarum eorum, tanquam vocem aquarum multarum, tanquam vocem Omnipotentis, vocem loquelæ tanquam vocem castrorum. Denique ab hac notione est, quod in descriptione personæ Filii Dei exordio Apocalypseos ex Daniele expressa; pro quo apud Daniele est, Vox multitudinis, à Joanne substituitur, Vox aquarum multarum. Quod enim Daniel habet, Pedes ejus quasi species æris candentis, & vox verborum ejus sicut vox multitudinis; id Joannes enuntiat, Pedes ejus similes aurichalco, sicut in camino ardenti; & vox ejus tanquam vox aquarum multarum.

Apocal. 1. 15.

Canticum porro novum est, cujusmodi post Christum mūdo exhibitum Deo canitur: quo nempe Sessori Throni & Agno, unā solisque, redemptio, potentia, divitiæ, sapientia, fortitudo, honor, gloria & benedictio religiosè & evangelicè deferuntur. Hujus cantici formula exstat cap. 5 *, idque titulo cantici novi: ut eò hic respici vix dubitandum sit, cum nusquam in hoc libro alibi cantici novi mentio audiatur. Dignus est, est, inquit, AGNUS qui occisus fuit ( id est, prout ante a Presbyteris & Animalibus paulo explicatius dicitur, propterea quod occisus fuit ) accipere potentiam, & divitias, & sapientiam, & fortitudinem, & honorem, & gloriam, & benedictionem. Sedenti igitur super thronum & AGNO sit benedictio, & honor, & gloria, & robur in secula seculorum, Amen. Hæc novæ cantici formula est, quam si Deus aliquando penitus intelligere dederit, latius fortasse explicando diducam: alius enim in animo meo insedit, universum cultus Evangelici mysterium eo contineri.

Quod appositi rationem attinet, Novum dicitur videtur, vel quasi alterum & diversum ab eo quod Christo nondum missio canebatur ( sub hoc enim, secundum effatum illud Apostoli, Vetera transierunt, & ecce facta sunt omnia nova ) vel ob novum in adventu ejus beneficium, priorum mundi ætatum nulli, sed temporibus tantum novissimis concessum: de quo verò beneficio Deus exinde, tam ab Angelis, quam hominibus δοξολογῆται. Et huic quidem nominis rationi firmandæ erit tum illud Isaia cap. 42: 9, 10. Novæ ego annuntio, Cantate Domino canticum novum: tum quæ in Psalmis occurrunt aliquoties cantici novi appellatio, haud aliter, ut videtur, intelligenda, quam aut de eo quo Divinum numen ob novum aliquod, liberationis præsertim, beneficium celebratur ( juxta illud Psal. 40. Eduxit me de luto cæno, &c. & indidit ori meo canticum novum ) aut saltem quod, ad istiusmodi canticorum morem, cum lætitia & jucunditate haud vulgari canitur: quorum utrumque canticum Evangelicis convenire haud est cur multis ostendere conarer, res in aperto est.

Et nemo poterat discere Canticum illud, nisi illa centum quadraginta quatuor millia, qui empti sunt de terra.

In toto Orbe Christiano nemo, quamdiu Bestia rerum potiretur, canticum Angelorum cantare sciret, præter eos qui de numero centum istorum quadraginta quatuor millium Agni assecrarum fuerint: Siquidem hi soli, citra omnem idololatriæ labem, Patrem & Agnum glorificant in terris, sicuti beati Angeli in cælis; id ipsum nimirum, quod in Oratione Dominica Ecclesia ab omnibus ut fiat, Patrem indefinenter rogat, Fiat voluntas tua, sicut in cælo, sic etiam in terra. Adeo Divinum Numen legitime ritæque colendi idea exemplumve absolutum aliunde quam à cœlitibus peti nequeat.

Id est, cum mulieribus impudicis seu meretricibus non consueverunt. At quænam istæ mulieres sunt? Sanè, non quæ vulgariter sic dicuntur, sed, Prophetarum more, Civitates; atque ex Christiani quidem nominis, sed idolis deditæ, quarum regina est B A B Y L O N illa magna, mater scortorum dicta, quacum fornicantur Reges & incolæ terræ. Cum talibus, qui ex Agni Cœtu sunt non consueverunt, hoc est, incestu idololatriæ sese non contaminarunt. Virgines enim sunt, id est, ab omni idololatriæ labe immunes. Omnino enim postulat analogiæ ratio, ut eodem sensu isti Virgines dicantur quo ceteri, Reges & populi, cum Babylone scortari perhibentur. Præterea, cum Babylon ista scortorum mater audiat, consequens est ut filia ipsius, reliquæ civitates, scortilla quoque sint, quibuscum incolæ cuique subditi spiritali scortatione polluantur.

Hoc est, fidelissimè ei adhærent, neque ullâ occasione deserunt; ductâ Metaphorâ ab iis qui à latere cuiuspiam nunquam recedunt, sed comitantur omni loco. Vel sic; In quacunque civitate, regione, territorio Agnus tentorium suum fixerit, eo eundem sectantur: contra quam reliqui hominum, qui licet Christiani audiant, Agnum tamen, nisi Romæ apud Petri sedem habitârit, alibi quærere & sectari nolent.

Id est, ex reliqua turba prophana redempti, ut essent Deo & Agno peculium sacrum, instar primitiarum. Neque enim, ut vulgò creditur, ἀπαρχὴ seu Primitiæ primitivos tantum fructus denotant, sed etiam in genere quicquid prophanis usibus exemptum Deo consecratur; id ipsum nempe quod Hebræis תרומה, quo nomine cum ipsas decimas, tum quicquid oblationum fuit, præter ignitas, Scriptura comprehendit. Unde Chrysostomus, quas Abrahamus Melchisedeco solvit decimas, * ἀπαρχὰς In Epist. ad Heb. Hom. 12. Vide quoque eundem Hom. 35. in Gen. vocat: Itaque Irenæus, quas sibi in Ecclesia asserit Deum etiamnum exigere creaturæ suæ primitias, contendit non debere esse minores decimâ: cum Christus, inquit ille, naturalia Legis non dissolverit, sed extenderit; & verò Christiani non minorem, sed maiorem, quàm Judæi spem habeant. Vide eum advers. Hæres. lib. 4. cap. 27, & 34. juxta editionem Fevardent. Quid, quòd Callimachus etiam, Hymno in Delum, decimas Apollini mitti solitas ἀπαρχὰς δεκατημόριος, id est, primitias decimiferas, nuncupet? Ex quibus omnibus appareat vocem ἀπαρχὴ non primitivorum duntaxat oblationem, quæ Hebræis est תְּרוּמָה vel תְּרוּמָה, sed & quamvis aliam denotare; nominisque rationem inde esse, quia Deo portio sua prius reddenda sit quàm aliquid in nostros usus infumatur. Porro, quoniam vox Primitiarum quorundam partis definitionem non includit, hinc factum ut veteres Christiani καρποφορίας suas, seu fructuum oblationes, licet minores esse non debere putarent quàm partem decimam, tamen ἀπαρχὰς seu primitias appellare maluerint quàm decimas; tanquam scilicet nomine libertatis, non servitutis. Hæc, licet ad institutum meum plerumque ex parte non facientia, annotare tamen volui, ut iis qui apud nos Decimarum in Ecclesia Christiana solvendarum antiquitati & juri ex Patribus & Conciliis eruendis quandoque navant operam, gratum, si possim, facerem. Interim (ut eò redeam unde paulisper digressus sum) satendum est, strictiorem quoque primitiarum significationem huic loco non malè convenire; nempe, ut COE T U S Virginis dicantur primitiæ respectu Turbæ palmiferarum eum aliquando auctiori numero excepturæ. Liberum itaque Lectori judicium suum esto.

Et in ore eorum non est inventum mendacium [ Ità Vulgata, Syrus, Complutensis, Aretas, & in exemplari Palatino Andreas; aliis dolus ] sine macula enim sunt.

Non est inventum mendacium. Cujusmodi nimirum invenitur in ore Bestianorum seu Christiani nominis idololatrarum omnium; qui se quidem Agnum & Patrem colere præ se ferunt, reapse tamen honorem Divino Numini proprium creaturis tribuunt. Sanè omnis idololatra mendax est, cum pro Deo colat quod non est Deus. Quò spectat illud Apostoli ad Rom. 1. 25. Commutarunt veritatem Dei in mendacium, dum coluerunt & servierunt creaturae αἰσθητὰ καὶ ἀκατασκεύαστα, prout Creatori. Unde idola dicuntur mendacia: ut Amos. 2. 4. Errare fecerunt, sive seduxerunt, eos mendacia ipsorum (Vulgat. idola) post quæ abierunt patres eorum. Similiter Isai. 28. 15. posuimus mendacium spem nostram. R. Sal. עֲבָרָה וְיָרָה. Item Jerem. 16. 19, 20. Veniunt gentes à finibus terræ, & dicent, Verè mendacium possederunt (Chaldaus מְדַבְּרִים coluerunt) Patres nostri, vanitatem in qua non est utilitas. Numquid faciet sibi homo Deus, & ipsi non sunt Dii? Hinc autem Apoc. 21. 8. Idololatra & mendaces, itemque verf. 27. facientes abominationem & mendacium, & αἰσθητὰ καὶ ἀκατασκεύαστα seu tanquam synonyma poni videntur. Porro, quum quorumvis hominum idololatria mendacium sit, tum verò eorum, qui se interim veri Numinis cultores simulant, propriissimè dolus est, seu mendacium fraudulentum: ut si Bestianorum, quorum oppositione Cœtus iste signatorum Agni describitur, attendamus hypocrisin; lectio quæ dolum, alteri quæ mendacium habet, præferenda videbitur; quamvis ad rem ipsam haud ità multum intersit. Interim, ad pleniorum hujus loci intellectum, conferat Lector illum Zephan. 3. 13. sanè huic quàm simillimum: Reliquiæ Israel non facient iniquitatem, nec loquentur mendacium, & non inveniatur in ore eorum lingua dolosa.

Verf. 6.

Et vidi alium Angelum volantem ἐν μεσσηνίᾳ, in fastigio cæli, habentem Evangelium æternum, ut evangelizaret habitantibus super terram, & omni genti, & tribui, & linguae, & populo.

Finita Cœtus descriptione, sequitur rerum, eo Ecclesiæ statu, quæ à Cœtu, Agni Ducis sui auspiciis, quæ ab Agno ipso, intransfugas & perduelles gerendarum historia. Harum ordo duplex: primò Admonitionis trigeminæ ad Bestianos, totidem Angelorum celeusmatis repræsentatæ; secundò Vindiciarum, parabolâ Messis & Vindemiæ. Monitorum Angelorum primus est iste quem hic alius dicit: alius verò, ut dixi, ob Angelos symphoniacos paulò antè memoratos, quorum è numero Evangelistes iste non fuerit. Atque hic in memoriam revocandum est, (quod jam in superioribus monui) Angelos in hujusmodi Visionibus eorum vicem repræsentare quorum gubernationi præsent; quòdque communibus utrorumque operis geritur, id Angelis authoribus, tanquam rei gestæ auspiciis & ducibus, factum dici. Hinc verò protinus suspicari datur, Angelum tam sublimè volantem (si modò & illud in censu parabolæ deputari debeat) non cuiusvis sortis hominum, sed celsioris conditionis præsidem esse, talibusque in Evangelio suo annunciando usurum. Porro Evangelium illud αἰώνιον seu æternum dicitur; idque, ut opinor, non tam futuri, quàm præteriti respectu; quasi quod ἀπ' αἰῶνος, id est, à seculo, seu ab origine mundi, promissum fuerit; scilicet, semen mulieris aliquando contritum caput serpentis, i. Christi adventu destruendum regnum Diaboli,

PRImus Angelus, jam tempus regni Dei adesse commemorans quo judicium ejus in idola & idololatrias exercendum sit; adeoque, jam prostratis & solio Romano exutis Dæmonibus, exerceri cœperit; eapropter hortatur gentes, tribus, linguas & populos, qui exinde in nomen Christi concesserant, ut hujus rei memores, unicum illum verum Deum Creatorem, prout in Evangelio annunciat, colant, caveantque ab idolis: Deum, inquit, timete, id est, reveremini, & date ei gloriam, gloriam verò adorationis & cultûs religiosi; ut sequentibus verbis exponitur. Quia venit tempus judicii ejus ] hoc est, quo Christus per crucem suam exspoliavit imperia & principatus, Gentibusque, quas per tot sæcula siverat in viis suis ambulare, annunciavit per Apostolos & Evangelistas ut ab idolis converterentur: sin minùs, morte aternâ, ipso de cœlis redeunte, plectendos fore. Quorsum igitur Christiani, qui in hunc Judicem & Dæmonum triumphatorem Jesum Christum fidem profiteantur, ad idola & dæmones coeundos postliminò reverterentur?

Potuit fortasse tempus judicii hic strictiùs accipi, de judicio nimirum Dei pridem in DRACONEM ejusque assecras exerto, quo Ethnicismus corruit: sed mallem illud latiùs extendere, & universè accipere, de Regno Christi temporibus novissimis inito & promulgato, in quo idola ampliùs non sint ferenda; juxta nimirum illud Salvatoris apud Joannem in Evangelio cap. 12. 31. Nunc Judicium est mundi hujus, nunc princeps mundi hujus ejicietur foras. Vide & cap. 16. 11. A quo enimvero Judicio Paulus quoque Apostolus (quomodo hic Angelus) argumentum duxit Paganos Athenienses ab idolorum cultu dehortandi, Act. 17. 30, 31. Deus, inquit, temporibus ignorantie hucusque neglectis, nunc demum mandat omnibus ubique hominibus ut respiciant; Eò quòd statuit diem quo justè judicaturus est Orbem terrarum per eum virum quem designavit; fide ejus rei palàm factà omnibus, illo ex mortuis suscitato. Cui gemina est ejusdem commonefactio ad Lycaonios, cap. 14. 15, 16. Annunciamus, inquit, vobis, ut à vanis istis rebus convertamini ad Deum vivum, qui fecit cælum & terram, & mare, & omnia quæ in iis sunt; Quique præteritis ætatibus fuit omnes gentes (nempe, judicio suo nondum iis manifestato) suis ipsarum viis incedere. Supplendum est, Jam verò judicium suum omnibus promulgat: id quod Angelus hic expressit, dicendo, Venit tempus judicii ejus.

Sed quando, inquires, & ubi gentium, quibusque tandem ministris, Angelus iste prædicatione suâ functus est? Præludia quædam ejus edita sunt cùm primùm superstitione ad memorias & circa reliquias Martyrum in Ecclesia gliscere cœperit; ut patet ex historia Vigilanti, quocum istiusmodi superstitioni intercedente plures alios, etiam ex Episcopis ejus temporis, sensisse, testis est adversarius Hieronymus, qui cum immeritò hoc nomine exagitat.

Sed omnium manifestissimè præconium hoc impletum liquet ab anno Domini 720 in Ecclesiis Græcis & Orientis, ubi omnino Angelus Evangelistes volavit ὡς μεσσηνίας, in cæli fastigio, id est, loco celso & sublimi; quippe qui Evangelii sui ministris usus est, non imæ & vulgaris sortis hominibus, sed summis in Orbe Christiano potestatibus; Imperatoribus putà Constantinopolitanis, Leone Isauro, Constantino Iconomacho, Leone Armenio, Michaeli Balbo, & Theophilo; qui omnes, potissimum autem primi, pro cultu Religionis uni Deo Creatori exhibendo, contra cultum creaturæ, non solum qui in veneratione Imaginum, sed etiam qui circa Divos eorūque reliquias exercebatur, edictis & decretis suis acerrimè protestati sunt. Repetat Lector testimonia quæ hac de re ex Theophane laudavi, cùm de Bestia Bicorni agerem. Porro autem secundi auspiciis Concilium Constantinopoli convocatum est Episcoporum 338, concordibusque suffragiis Imaginum adoratio impietatis accersita & damnata. Dices, Lector, silegere non pigebit, Definitionem Synodi ipsissimam Angeli hujus concionem esse, eodémque quo illius, juxta interpretationem nostram, fundamento subnixam. Quum verò nonnullorum fraude ibi contigerit, qui in Imaginum quidem damnationem cum reliquis consenserant, Divorum verò invocationi adhuc faverent, ( neque enim paribus suffragiis in hanc atque in illam superstitionem itum est, ) ut duo Canones, unus de Beata Maria Deipara, alter de reliquis Sanctis coelitis religiosâ invocatione colendis, Concilii decretis initio immixti fuerint ; eos Constantinus Imperator cum sanioris sententiæ Patribus cùm advertissent, illico erroris arguerunt, inque iudicii sui testimonium induci, atque de codice deleri curaverunt. Cujus facti testem habeo, si quis dubitet, primò Authorem refutationis Definitionis istius Constantinopolitanæ, Actis Concilii Niceni secundi insertæ ; qui cùm primam ejus editionem sibi refutandam sumpisset, ad istos Canones sic infit : Μετά τ' ἐκδοσιν αὐτῆς ταύτης, καὶ τ' ὑπὲρ σεβασίων ἐν πρεσβυτέρῳ τῷ θεῷ προσαγωγῇ ἀπεβάλοντο, λειώσαντες ταύτην ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς συγγραμμάτων. καὶ τὸτο ἴσασιν πάντες. Post hanc editionem suam, inquit, etiam intercessionum Deo acceptabilem oblationem abjecerunt, delentes hanc ex hoc scripto suo. Deinde Acta Stephani Monachi pseudomartyris ; apud quem cùm Episcopi, qui ad eum convincendum ab Imperatore missi fuerant, Concilii decretum recitare inciperent ; ille verò statim excipere adversus Concilii titulum, sancti ; illud sanctum dici non debere, propterea quòd sancta proscripisset. Annon, inquit, sacram suppellectilem imaginibus exornatam concerpisset ? Annon adjectivum hoc ἁγίου ab omnibus justis, ab omnibus Apostolis, à Prophetis, à Martyribus piisque viris abjecisset ? Sanctum enim à vobis est, ô generosi viri, ut cùm quisquam ad horum aliquem adiret, ex eoque quæreretur quòd abiret, responderet, Ad Apostolos, Ad quadraginta Martyres ; sive unde veniret, itidem responderet, Ex Templo Martyris Theodori, ex Templo Martyris Georgii. Annon hæc vestra doctrina sunt ? Quonam ergò pacto qui sancta proscripisset, sanctum Concilium coegisset ? Hæc Stephanus ipsemet. Audiamus porrò Actorum ejus descriptorem ( qui eodemque tempore vixit ) in eisdem ob Deiparæ cultum imminutum tragicè exclamantem : Quonam pacto, Christe, lenitatem illam tuam, quæ nullis verbis explicari potest, non admirer ? Quonam pacto benignitatis tuæ, quæ vim sermonis omnem superat, abyssum exponere queam ? Adhuc porrò audacissima illa lingua eò prurperunt, ut ingens quoque illud & improbum eloqui non dubitarent ; nimirum illam ipsam Dei genitricem Virginem, inutilem quandam post mortem & commodi omnis expertem rem esse, nec cuiquam omnino adjumento ac præsidio esse posse. Adhuc istis testem adduco Cedrenum. Refert ille Constantinum Legem universalem edidisse ( proculdubio ex Concilii sententia, cujus Acta hodie præter solam Definitionem desiderantur ) nè quisquam prorsus servorum Domini ἁγίου diceretur ; sed, ut eorum reliquæ repertæ contemnerentur : ( nè superstitione venerarentur, Cedrene, etiam si veræ fuerint ; sin falsæ, ut è Templis abjicerentur ) nève ipsorum intercessio posceretur ; nihil enim valere. Adjecit etiam scelestus, inquit, Nè Mariæ quidem intercessionem quisquam imploret. Jam liceat mihi Lectorem convenire, annon ex hisce testimoniis clarum esse putet, aliquid in Concilio isto actum adversus sanctorum cultum & reliquiarum. In hoc autem probando aliquanto diutius immoratus sum, quoniam non est, ut illud de Imaginibus, perinde omnibus notum.

Sed nondum hîc defuncti sumus : prius illa de epitheto sancti justis, quasi per diminutionem & contumeliam, abjudicato, calumnia detergenda est. Palàm enim est ex ipsa Definitione Synodi ( quæ hodièque in Actis Niceni secundi exstat ) Apostolos & justos à Patribus istis passim sanctitatis titulo honorari ; non igitur simpliciter prohibuisse credendi sunt quod ipsimet facitarent. Sed, ut conjicere datur, illius seculi opinione nomen ἁγίου ( nam de hoc solo sermo est ) videbatur intercessionis honorem inferre : unde, ut superstitioni quovis pacto iretur obviàm, illius usu in communi sermone de Templis, præsertim cùm eò precatum ibant, interdictum fuit. Nempe ἁγίου ab ἁγίου deflexum videtur : quâ voce significatur σεβασμα ἢ σεβάσματ. ἅγιον, Veneratio, aut res veneratione & adoratione digna. Unde Helychio, ἅγιοι, σεβάσμοι • utrumque ab ἁζω, veneror, colo. Imò, quod ad cultum mortuorum manifestò ducat, communis est originis cum ἐναγίζεν, sacra mortuis facere, parentare, & cum ἐνάγισμα, parentatio, inferiæ. Præterea ( ut illud quoque bona Lectoris cum venia, & citra futilitatis notam, adjiciam ) fieri potuit ut nomen ἁγίου Græcorum vulgo ( quippe similibus vulgi hallucinationum exempla apud nos quandoque observare est ) sonare videretur, licet falsò, δι' ἣν εὐχαὶ ἡμῶν πρὸς Θεὸν ἄγονται, eum per quem preces nostræ Deo offeruntur, id est, προσαγωγία, admissioalem & interpretem apud Deum : quomodo Gregorius Nazian. Christum Dominum nuncupat ; juxta Apostoli illud ad Ephes. 2. 18. δι' αὐτοῦ ἰεροῦ προσαγωγῇ πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα.

Quicquid sit, illud ex allatis modò testimoniis apparet, tum temporis existimatum fuisse, hujusce vocis usu superstitionem illam erga sanctos vitâ defunctos ali atque foveri. Cui ut omni ratione & machinâ occurreretur, ejus usu interdictum fuit : non quidem simpliciter & universè, quod adversarii calumniantur ; sed in Templis appellandis solummodo, modo, quæ Apostolorum & Martyrum memoriis nuncupabantur. Errori, ut videtur, minuendo, quo, vel ea loca esse, creditum est, Deum per Martyrum intercessionem ad-undi, vel eorum, quorum nominibus ferebantur, venerationi sacra. Ideo in vicem cognominis Ἀγίων, illud Apostolorum & Martyrum, non minus certè honorificum, substitui visum fuit. Satisne verò consideratè & consultò, illius est judicare qui temporis illius circumstantias factique rationes omnes probè plenèque perspectas habuerit. Interim Ecclesiæ virginitati aut puritati nihil quicquam detrahit, si fortè aliquando in talibus quæ ad rationem & modum rei gerendæ spectent minus sapienter judicaverit. Non enim necesse est ut perpetuò aut prudenter agat aut loquatur, quæ casta sit. Simili ferè de causa sacerdotis vocabulum de Presbyteris Evangelicis, sacrificii de Sacramento Eucharistiæ, ( nè huiusmodi alia nomen ) apud plerasque Ecclesias reformatas in desuetudinem abire iussa sunt. Nec id quidem omnino temerè, nisi quòd ( ut quibuldam videtur ) in prioris locum non commodum satis vocabulum substitutum, Ministrorum ; quo licèt omnes qui sacro fungantur munere, ritè & ex Scripturæ usu appellentur ; non tamen eo Presbyteri à Diaconis distinguuntur. Annon igitur Presbyteros potiùs dixissemus nomine Apostolico, si noluissemus sacerdotes ? Sed hæc alterius loci sunt.

Ad Cap. 14.

Porro, non in Oriente solum, verum etiam in Occidente, fremente licèt Pontifice Romano, Angeli huius præconium insonuit ; non quidem plenis, ut illic, buccis, voce tamen publicâ & solenni. Primum, anno 790, in Synodo Francofurtiana sub Carolo M. 300 ferè Episcoporum, præter Abbates & alios : ubi cultus & adoratio Imaginum, unà cum Concilio Niceno secundo quod eam stabiliverat, quòdque Hadrianus Papa per Legatos suos rexerat & approbaverat, damnata sunt. Iterumque in Synodo Parisiensi, anno 825, iussu Ludovici congregatâ : in qua tum ex autoritate Divina tum Patrum sententiis prolixè ostenditur, adorationem Imaginum rem nefariam ac impiam esse, Synodumque Nicenam ejusmodi superstitionis ream reprobendam esse. Adde Commentarium à Carolo Magno ad Hadrianum Pontificem, idolorum propugnatorem, post Concilium illud Francofurtense, missum ; ut hîc quoque Angelum in Celi fastigio volasse agnoscas. Atque hætenus primi Angeli hortamentum percepimus : jam secundi præconium auscultemus.

Habetur in
 pag. 1123.

Secundus Angelus ROMAM, ob spurcitiem & multitudinem idololatriarum quibus, primi Angeli hortatione spretâ, tum ipsa sese contaminaverat, tum ut idem secum facerent cunctis in Orbe suo gentibus author & princeps extiterat, è civitate Dei in BABYLONEM versam denuntiat ; ea-propter, sententiæ Divinæ in omnes Idololatrias latæ jam penitus per impenitentiam suam obnoxiam factam, diutiùs non ferendam, sed irrevocabili decreto perdendam atque excindendam esse ; eique excidio usque ab hoc præconio apparatus continenter & assiduè institutum iri.

Atque huius quidem præconii administri exstiterè, verbo partim, partim facto, Waldensium & Albigenium Cœtus, ut qui omnium mortalium primi Ecclesiam Romanam ab idololatria seu scortatione mystica renuntiârunt BABYLONEM esse Apocalypticam ; iidemque primum quoque ei ad ruinam fecere gradum ; quandoquidem sic detectam extemplò magna hominum multitudo eam abominari, privatimque per omnes ditionis ejus provincias defectionem facere ; adhæc authoritatem ejus exinde indies magis magisque labefactari, ruinamque tunc fieri cœpisse, quæ non stitura sit donec tandem ad Urbis ipsius cremationem sit devenit. Verbo dicam ; ab hujusque Angeli præconio quasi delectus sanctorum militum Babylonis diruendæ continenter fieri cœpit.

Quasi dicat, Jam nunc Ruinæ Babylonis jaciuntur fundamenta : ab hoc enim tempore Belli contra ipsam gerendi apparatus suscipietur. Imitatur autem Isaiam cap. 21. qui iisdem planè verbis, nec dissimili rerum occasione, veteris illius Babylonis interitum non jam factum retulit, sed, ut hîc, jactis rerum fundamentis, certo certius futurum prænunciavit. Quippe, ut docet Chronologia, eodem tempore Isaias hoc vaticinium suum edidit quo Medi, Babylonem aliquando vastaturi, excusso Assyriorum jugo, sese in libertatem asseruerint, conditâque sub novo Rege Dejoce Ecbatanâ, Regni tum Nini tum Babylonis fatalis fundamina posuere.

i. Fel Draconum vinum eorum, & venenum aspidum insanabile. Item Job 20. 16. Θυμὸν δρασπόντων θηλάσειεν, ἀνέλοι δ' αὐτὸν γλῶσσα ὄφεως, id est, Venenum draconum sugat, occidat eum lingua serpentis. Adde Psal. 58. 4. Θυμὸς αὐτοῖς κατὰ τὴν ὁμοίωσιν τῷ ὄφεως, Venenum illis secundum similitudinem serpentis. Vide etiam, si lubet, Deut. 32. 24. Job. 6. 4. Imò ubicunque in V. T. veneni significatio occurrit, eam aliter quam aut hanc aut voce χολῆς non nisi semel tantum expressam videbis.

Duplicis autem in Apocalypsi οἶνον τῷ θυμῷ, seu vini ejusmodi potionati, mentio habetur: οἶνον τῷ θυμῷ τὴν πορνείας, quo, ut dixi, amatorium virus seu philtum designatur (juxta quod idem cap. 18. 23. φαρμακεία, seu veneficium, consueto ad eam rem vocabulo, nuncupatur;) & οἶνον τῷ θυμῷ τὴν ὀργῆς, quæ supplicio afficiendorum potio est: siquidem illo spiritualis scortationis illecebra, ex consuetudine Meretricum philtis amorem conciliantium, spiritus Sanctus expressit; hoc ad morem Judæorum alludit, qui morte afficiendis, ut torporem iis inducerent, calicem vini, cui myrrha, aut aliud id genus aroma amarum immixtum fuerit, præbere consueverant. Cujusmodi proinde potionem Servatori cruci jamjam affigendo iidem exhibuisse perhibentur; sed ille bibere recusavit: Matt. 27. 34. Dederunt ei, inquit, vinum μετὰ χολῆς μεμιγμένον, cum felle mixtum, id est, οἶνον τῷ θυμῷ. Χολὴ enim & θυμός idem valent. Voce autem χολῆς Evangelista speciem amarā in genere designavit, pro Hellenistarum usu (quibus & Absinthium χολὴ dicitur.) Hanc Marcus myrrham fuisse determinat; Et dederunt ei, inquit, bibendum vinum myrrhatum. Myrrha verò, Hebraicè מר, Syriacè מר, ab amaritudine summa nomen traxit. Atque hinc factum videtur ut Prophetæ in cladibus depingendis toties * Calicis parabolā uterentur; utpote qui ex more gentis perituris porrigi solet. Sic fuit Angeli secundi præconium, quem mox excepit tertius. Is quid novi adhuc moniti superaddat, pronis auribus excipiamus.

Tertius Angelus, priores duos supergressus, Bestiæ cultores admonet quàm horrendum eisdem impendeat periculum, siquidem ejus sequaces adhuc esse perrexerint; idèoque suadet ut, omni cunctatione abjectā, protinus sese à consortio ejus subducant, hocque pacto salutis suæ consultum eant; neque enim qui posthac ei adhæserint, salvos esse possent. Quod quidem præconium maximè omnium in signe, Lutheri sociorumque ejus & successorum operā, superiori seculo felicissimè adimpletum est: quod nimirum eximia illa quam cernimus Ecclesiarum Reformatio est consecuta; hominibus non jam singulatim, ut ad præcedentis Angeli vocem factum erat, sed provinciatim & tributim, asserendæ & repurgandæ Religioni, passim Bestiæ jugum excutientibus.

Verf. 9, &c.

Et tertius Angelus, inquit, sequutus est illos, (i. priores duos) dicens voce magnā, Si quis adoraverit Bestiam & imaginem ejus, & acceperit characterem in fronte sua aut in manu sua; Hic bibet de vino iræ Dei, [τῷ οἶνον τῷ θυμῷ] quod mixtum est mero in calice iræ ipsius, & cruciabitur igne & sulphure in conspectu Angelorum sanctorum, & ante conspectum Agni; Et fumus tormenti eorum ascendet in secula seculorum: nec habent requiem die aut nocte qui adorant Bestiam & imaginem ejus, & si quis acceperit characterem Nominis ejus.

Pœnæ atrocis atrox descriptio, cui vix quicquam simile habet totius Canonis ambitus. Οἶνον τῷ θυμῷ τὴν ὀργῆς supplicii potio est perituris dari solita, ut ad verf. 8. monuimus. Vinum merum, id est, aquā non dilutū, fortius inebriat, adhucque magis si diversa vinorum genera misceantur: cujusmodi igitur nonnulli hanc intelligi volunt verbis istis κεκερασμένον ἀκράτου, id est, meri mixti; cum alioquin pugnantiā diceret. Sed magis sese mihi probat, ut ἀκρατον κεκερασμένον idem sit quod merum myrrhā, felle, thure, similive saporis amari pharmaco mixtum, quod in poculo Judæis maledictionis dicto, ex more gentis, usitatum; allusumque ad illud Psalmi 75. 9. juxta Septuagint. ποτήριον ἐν χειρὶ Κυρίου οἶνον ἀκράτου πλῆρες κερασμάτων. Ubi Chaldaeus habet, Calix maledictionis in manu Domini, & vinum forte, plenum mixtione amaritudinis, ad tollendum per illud scientiam improborum. Diximus enim, potionem illam exhibitam ut morituro rationis usus tolleretur. Pro eo autem quod Septuaginta habent, οἶνον ἀκράτου, in Hebræo est יין רב vinum rubens, nempe quod aquæ admixtione colorem non perdiderat. Erant enim vina in Terra sancta rubra. Reliqua descriptionis per se patent.

Juvabit autem hic triplicis istius præconii gradus paulisper observare, utque posterior priorem gravitate superet. Primus enim Angelus solius officii admonuit, Deum ritè ex Evangelii præscripto colendi; culpam hanc parte commissam non exprobravit. Secundus ulterius progressus, Mœchationis spiritualis crimen intentat, atque id inte-ritu & exitio inevitabiliter luendum; sed quod soli adhuc Babylo[n]i, criminis principi & Architec[t]æ, nondum participibus ejus, comminetur. Tertius verò, omnibus gravitatis numeris expletis, universæ Bestiæ cohorti cunctisque in obsequio ejus permanfuris horrendos atque infandos cruciatus, eosque nec finem nec remissionem ullam habituros, denuntiat. Sequitur

Quasi diceret, Hoc præcocium Lydius lapis erit: probandæ tum patientiæ tum *obedi-

Scio plerisque pronuntiatum hoc cœleste ad superiora referre, tanquam consolandis Sanctis jam gravissima quæque à Bestia, præcedenti celeusmate irritatâ, passuris. In qua sententia & ipse pridem fui: Nunc verò, re accuratiùs perpensâ, eò inclino, ut ad sequentia potiùs referendum putem, tanquam commonescationem jam instantis Resurrectionis & Judicii sub Tuba septima; cujus utpote apparatus in sequenti Visione agi inciperet. Ità ut illud ἀνάρτι, ab hoc tempore, dicatur, non respectu rei præcedenti Visione exhibitæ, sed proximè sequenti exhibendæ; quam nimirum protinus exciperet Resurrectio mortuorum & Judicium. Quasi dixisset, Nunc ad illud deventum est quod unicum restat implendum, ad tempus illud quo Mortui in Domino ad beatam vitam suscitabuntur. Sic enim in Evangelio Matth. 23. vers. ult. Dominus ad Judæos, Non me videbitis ἀν' ἀρτι, donec dicatis, Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini; id est, non à temporis momento quo hæc loquutus erat, sed à tempore Paschatis, quod tunc celebratum ibat: post quod vulgo Judæorum non ampliùs se conspiciendum præbuit. Ratio autem mihi sic, ut dico, sentiendi triplex est. Primùm, quòd non meminerim uspiam in sacra Scriptura diem mortis * Diem mercedis indigitari, sed Diem solum Resurrectionis & Judicii. Secundò, Denunciatio de cœlo, cum mandato scribendi, non nisi ad insigne aliquod rerum momentum indicandum videtur adhibitum. Certè ejusmodi mandatum alibi nusquam, præterquam initio totius Prophetiæ, reperire est. Denique pronuntiatio huic, si bene attendatur, sensu omnino convenit cum illo ad clangorem Tubæ septimæ,* cap. 11. quando tempus affore dicitur quo mortuorum (nempe, propter Christum) causa judicabitur, Deusq; redditurus sit mercedem servis suis Prophetis, & Sanctis, & timentibus nomen ejus parvis & magnis, & perditurus eos qui perdunt terram. Ità hic, Beati, inquit, ab hoc tempore mortui qui in Domino mortem occubuerunt, ut requiescant à laboribus suis, id est, vitam deinceps pristinorum malorum & calamitatum securam degant (quo sanè hostium & tyrannorum exterminium innuitur: ) & opera eorum sequuntur eos, id est, perpeffionum suarum & rectè factorum omnium mercedem consequentur beatissimam.

Interim, hæc interpretatione admissâ, de sensu verborum Οἱ ἐν Κυρίῳ ἀποθνήσκοντες nihil muto; adhuc ea cum prioris sententiæ sequacibus, non de quibusvis in Christi fide obdormientibus, sed speciatim de Martyribus, intelligendo, qui vitam pro Christo profuderunt (talibus enim constat * Resurrectio prima: ) ut cum Beza reddendum putem, qui propter Dominum seu Domini causâ, moriuntur. Quemadmodum ad Ephes. 4. 1. Δόξαι ἐν Κυρίῳ, Vincit in Domino, est Vincit propter Dominum; idem scilicet quod Δόξαι τῷ Χριστῷ, cap. 3. 1. Quo eodem sensu veteres ( ut ex Tertulliano conjicere datur ) acceperunt illud 1 Thes. 4, 16. Mortui in Christo resurgent primi, id est, Martyres, qui propter Christi confessionem neci dati fuerint. Videsis eum de Anima c. 55. Quippe notum est, Latinis ablativum, & Græcis perinde dativum, qui aliàs instrumentum & modum agendi significat, etiam causam ob quam sive propter quam denotare; ut, Verberat odio, invidiâ pulsus est, & similia. Hunc autem ablativum ablativum five dativum cùm Hebræi per præpositionem ׀ enunciant, & eorum imitatione Scriptura Græca per EN; indè factum ut EN quoque ibidem causam propter quam designet. Rarior quidem est hæc significatio cum hac particula; sed non dubito quin plura suppeditarit * exempla observatio diligens, quàm mihi nunc in promptu sint.

Verf. 14.

Et vidî, inquit, & ecce nubem candidam; & super nubem sedentem similem Filio hominis, habentem in capite suo coronam auream, & in manu sua falcem acutam. 15. Et alius Angelus exivit de Templo, clamans voce magnâ ad sedentem super nubem, Mitte falcem tuam & mete; quia venit hora metendi, quoniam aruit Messis terræ. 16. Et misit qui sedebat super nubem falcem suam in terram; & demessa est terra.

Matt. 9. 37.

Messis nomen tria complectitur; segetis defectionem, collectionem, & trituram. Unde factum ut duplicem in sacris, contrariique sensûs parabolam constituat: modò stragis & excidii, quasi defectionis & tritura; modò restitutionis & salutis, pro collectionis ingenio. Illius exemplum obvium apud Jeremiam, cap. 51. 33. ubi sic de clade Babylonis, Filia Babylonis quasi Area, tempus triturae ejus: adhuc modicum & veniet tempus messionis ejus. Item Isaïa cap. 17. 3, &c. de excidio Damasci, & clade Israelis per Thiglath-pelesarem, Cessabit adjutorium ab Ephraim, & regnum à Damasco, &c. Erit perinde ac si colligeret messor segetem, & brachium ejus spicas demeteret. Hujus verò exemplum vix alibi quàm in N. T. reperire est. Messis, ait Salvator, magna est, operarii verò pauci. Non desunt tamen qui ab hac notione interpretentur querelam istam Israelis apud Jerem. 8. 20. Præterit Messis, consumpta est aestas, & nos non sumus salvati; i. Transiit tempus quo putavimus nos salvos fore, & non salvati sumus. Utrius autem figuram MESSIS hoc loco sustineat, eruamus, si possimus, ex rerum gerendarum ordine quas alibi Spiritus Sanct. de iisdem Ecclesiæ temporibus representaverit.

Calcationem torcularis, quâ Vindemia MESSEM istam subsequens defungitur, eandem esse cum strage illa cruenta ab Equialbi Sessore patrandâ cap. 19. palam est ex eo quod ejusdem Sessoris descriptioni inseritur; Is est qui calcat torcular furoris iræ Dei omnipotentis. Jam verò hoc dato & posito, necesse est parabolas propheticas, quæ utramque pariter immediatè, & nullo ampliùs Viso interveniente, prævertant, aut rem eandem denotare, aut si diversas, tamen aliquo pacto inter se conjunctas & devinctas. Cùm idcirco hîc Vindemiam proximè antecedit MESSIS ista; illic verò Stragem eam atrocem Apparatus nuptiarum Agni, unâ cum Excidio Babylonis: sequitur omnino, aut apparatus istum, aut Excidium, esse MESSEM quam quærimus, aut eodem cum MESSE, aut cum iis MESSEM, pertinere.

Si dixerimus Vastationem Babylonis MESSEM esse, id tum Typi ingenio, qui defectionem & trituram subindicat, satis consentaneum foret; tum præsertim subblandiretur Jeremiæ exemplo veteris quoque Babylonis casum eadem figurâ prædicentis. Locus est quem paulò antè laudavi: Filia Babylonis quasi area, tempus triturae ejus: adhuc modicum & veniet tempus messionis ejus. Huic quoque accedit quòd cùm utraque, tam Messis quàm Vindemia, quòd Annum absolvant, rerum finem & consummationem denotet; Messis verò Vindemiam tempore præcedat: ideo, si consummationi tyrannidis Romanæ significandæ utramque deservire compertum esset; sanè appositè admodum MESSIS Urbis ipsius cladem, tanquam excidii plenarii Præmetium; VINDEMIA Messis succedens universi Regni Bestiani interitum, haud longo eam intervallo subsequendum, designatum iret.

Nec sanè quicquam est quod huic accommodationi obstet præterquam illud unum, quòd Stragem illam internecinam cap. 19. Vindemiae quoque imagine expressam, non Babylonis vastatio, ut hætenus præsupposuimus, sed alius rerum eventus, (Babylonis vastationem (ut videtur) subsequens) Apparatus nempe Nuptiarum Agni, seu Sponse ejus exornatio, proximè anteire deprehenditur. Annon igitur MESSIS apparitioni istius significandæ erit, aut (si hoc incongruum) rei alicui cum ea gerendæ?

At quænam, inquires, Apparatio illa Sponse est? quidve illud quod cum ea simul gerendum sit? Sanè Apparatio illa Sponse, nondum video quid aliud esse possit quàm illa tot seculis seculis expectata conversio & collectio Israelis; illius quæ olim (juxta Salvatoris parabolam) ad nuptias Filii Regis invitata, venire recusavit, nunc verò tandem prompta & parata accurret. Non enim Gentes Sponsa illa dici posse videntur, cum illæ jam olim & à multis seculis Christo desponsatæ fuerint. Judæi idcirco sunt, qui adhuc Agni Sponsa futuri expectantur.

Cum hac autem Conversione & Reductione Israelis (quæ illa in Cætum Agni Virgineum cooptabitur, ejusque pars fiet) conjuncta erit Turcici Imperii demessio seu excidium; juxta quod ad Phialam sextam legitur, sed aliâ figurâ, Aquas magni illius fluminis Euphratis exsiccandas esse, ut paretur via Regum ab ortu solis. Tempus enim hujus Phialæ planissimè ad tempus Apparationis istius Sponsæ convenit; cum sicut illa excidio Babylonis & stragi hostium novissimæ interjecta sit, ita hæc Phiala Phialæ quæ in Thronum Bestiæ effunditur, & Phialæ novissimæ media intervenit. Nempe Ecclesia Christi, ut conversione Israelis quasi gemina evasura sit; ita utraque pars proprium & peculiarem id temporis hostem videtur habitura: illa BESTIAM Romanam origine incircumcisâ; hæc Imperium MUHAMMEDICUM circumcisæ Gentis, atque ortu Ismaelítico Isaacidis ominoso. Quorum utriusque exterminio sub adventum Christi peragendo, quidni hujus MESSIS, illius autem VINDEMIA repræsentando deserviat?

Porrò huic MESSIS interpretationi si minùs firmitudinem, speciem saltem aliquam, conciliet Vaticinium illud * Joelis, unde utraque Imago tam Messis quam Vindemia desumpta est. Illic enim de tempore convertendi Israelis agi, vel ex primis Oraculi verbis manifestum est. In diebus illis, inquit, & tempore illo quo reducam captivitatem Judæ & Jerusalem; Congregabo omnes gentes in vallem Josaphati, & disceptabo cum iis ibi super populo meo & hereditate mea Israel, quos disperserunt in nationibus, terramque meam dividerunt. Deinde in apparatûs bellici hypotyposi sequitur, Immittite falces, quoniam maturavit Messis: Venite & descendite, quia plenum est torcular, exuberant torcularia, quia magna est malitia eorum. Utcunque igitur in hac Figurâ MESSIS accommodatione id observare liceat, rem gerendam ita comparatam esse ut ei utraque Messis notio, tam desectionis & tritura quam collectionis, aptari possit; hæc ex parte Israelis in Ecclesiæ horreum colligendæ, illa stragis hostium cum ea conjunctim futuræ: tamen cum de Ecclesiæ contra hostes assertionem novissima hic agatur, ideo omnino desectionis & tritura notionem præferendam censeo.

Sed quicquid MESSIS futura sit, certè Dominum ejus & messionis Auspicem, ipsum Christum Regem fore arguit descriptio. Ecquid enim ulli præter ipsum Regi Titulus iste * FILII HOMINIS cum NUBIS carpento in universa Scriptura tribuitur? Ut minimè tutum sit, meâ quidem sententiâ, id aliò torquere. Potius colligendum videtur, Divini Numinis potentiam in MESSE isthac defungenda, sicut & in proximè futura VINDEMIA, magis conspicuam & illustrem futuram quam in ullis hæcenus operibus factum est eorum quæ Angelorum tantum nominibus gerebantur.

HACTENUS de MESSE conjectavimus; pergamus nunc ad VINDEMIAM. Quam uti in Anni tempestatibus fieri consuevit, ita hic ordine rei gerendæ MESSEM sequi, rationi consentaneum est.

Et alius Angelus exiit de Templo quod est in cælo, habens & ipse falcem acutam. 18. Et alius Angelus exiit de altari, qui habebat potestatem in ignem: & clamavit voce magnâ ad eum qui habebat falcem acutam, dicens, Mitte falcem tuam acutam, & vindemia botros vineæ terræ; quoniam matura sunt uvæ ejus. 19. Et misit Angelus falcem suam acutam in terram, & vindemiavit vineam terræ, & misit in lacum iræ Dei magnum. 20. Et calcatus est lacus extra Urbem, & exiit sanguis de lacu usque ad frænos equorum per stadia mille sexcenta.

Hæc VINDEMIÆ descriptio est. Ad cujus interpretationem eò certius collineabimus, quòd hic parabolæ significatio minùs in ambiguo posita, & expressior habetur botrorum calcandorum designatio. Siquidem Calcatio vindemialis in Scriptura parabolica cladem atrocem, cruentam & internecinam constanter denotat. Hoc primum. Deinde cladem, qua de hic agitur, eandem esse cum Clade illa magna cap. 19. ostendunt (ut paulò antè admonui) verba illa de calcando torculari iræ Dei descriptioni ejus inserta. Ergo eadem quoque erit cum Bello magni illius diei Dei omnipotentis ad Phialam novissimam: quocum Cladem illam internecinam cap. 19. eandem esse, illud dubitare non finit, quòd utraque ejusdem omnino hostis clades novissima sit; utraque enim in Bestiam, Pseudoprophetam, eorundemque Confœderatos ultimò incubitura est. At eorundem clades ultima non potest esse nisi una. Jam si Vindemia nostra eandem cum istis cladem designet, in eisdem quoque hostes incubituram necesse est; ergo ergo in Bestiam & Pseudoprophetam. Vitis igitur, seu Vinea terræ, cujus hic mentio, Bestiæ ditio est. Uva ad vindemiandum maturæ, Bestiani sanguinis reatu turgentes, maturi judicio. Lacus denique seu Torcular, Locus cædis; idem nimirum qui ad Phialam septimam Hebraicè interpretatus ARMAGEDDON dicitur, forsan quod ibi ad internecionem Bestiæ turmæ seu copię delebuntur. ARMA enim חרמה excidium sonat; GEDON seu GEDDON גרון turmam, exercitum, seu exercitus eorum. * Congregavit, inquit, eos in locum qui vocatur Hebraicè ARMAGEDDON. (libri à Plantino excusi simplici Δ ARMAGEDON) Et septimus Angelus effudit Phialam suam in Aerem: & exivit Vox magna è Templo Cæli è Throno, dicens, Factum est.

Ubi autem hic Lacus seu locus futurus sit calcandarum Uvarum, adhuc in Dei arcanis est; nec igitur nobis curiosè nimis satagendum, nedum definiendum, donec aut eventus ipse patefecerit, aut eidem proximior rerum status aliquod ejus fortasse indicium prabuerit. Illud tamen monere fas erit citra temeritatis notam, Ex tam diligenti intervalli per quod Cædes extenderetur dimensione, videri posse Spiritum Sancti ad regionem ejusmodi aliquam digitum intendere, quæ stadia mille sexcenta in longitudinem pateat: per tot enim stadia stragem faciendam esse docet extra URBEM, hoc est, ni fallor, in regione seu ditione URBIS. Hinc factum ut quidam circuitione istâ Terram sanctam designari putarent, ut quæ tot ad amussim stadia longitudine suâ colligat, i.e. Italica milliaria ducenta, Græca verò non ampliùs centum sexaginta; quantam esse Terræ Sanctæ longitudinem perhibet Hieronymus Epistolâ ad Dardanum. Græci enim, inquiunt illi, milliæ suum metiebantur stadiis decem, quorum singula erant passuum centum; passus autem (quam orgyam appellant) pedum Romanorum sex: ita in universum continebat milliæ Græcum 6000 pedes Romanos. E diverso Romani passum quinque pedibus definiunt, stadium passibus 125, milliæ octo stadiis, id est, pedibus tantum 5000. Unde factum ut milliæ Græcum, tametsi mille passuum numero cum Romano conveniret, Romano tamen quintâ parte majus esset. Quâ ratione milliaria Romana 200 efficiunt non ampliùs 160 Græca. Hæc ratiocinii summa est. Præterea, nec illud conjecturæ omnino nihil momenti addit, quod loci nomen ARMAGEDDON Hebraicè nuncupetur, quasi futuri in Terra Hebræorum. Sed quâ tandem ratione hoc fieri poterit? Sanè illis qui Antichristum ex Oriente proditurum opinantur, hæc sententia facilis admodum & expedita est; nobis non item: nisi quis fortè illud verisimile existimet, Pseudoprophetam post everfam Romanam in Orientem migraturum, ibique sedem collocaturum: quod quidem ex ipsis Bestiæ assèclis non desunt qui affirmant; nempe, ante supremum Judicii diem Pontificem Romanum Hierosolymis sedem habiturum. Nam illud certè, Bestiam, rebus suis domi in Occidente in tali qualis supponitur statu & discrimine constitutis, iterum (ut olim in expeditione Hierosolymitana) exercitum in Palæstinam ducturam, tot hostibus à tergo relictis, atque ibi demum funditus deletum iri, nullâ verisimilitudine affirmari posset. Quinimo, nè nos qui Occidentalem Antichristum asserimus, illis qui Orientalem ab hac parte inferiores sumus, in vicino item locus est cui dictus stadiorum numerus perinde convenit; putà STATO DELLA CHIESA, seu Ecclesiæ Romanæ Latifundium, quod ab Urbe Roma usque ad ultimum Padi ostium & paludes Veronæ porrigitur spatio milliæ Italicorum ducentorum, id est, stadiorum 1600.

Sed quò abeo? fibulam tandem curiositati imponamus, cui forsan hætenus nimis indulgimus. Ad alia deveniamus, in quibus majus sit operæ pretium. Atque adeò illud imprimis attendat Lector, Non eundem esse hîc botrorum putatorem atque calcatorem torcularis; sed prout diversa sunt munia Vindemiatoris & Torcularis, ita quoque diversos authores habere; Vindemiationem seu putationem, Angelum falce vinitoriâ instructum; Calcationem, Christum ipsum Regem equitatu cœlesti comitatum: id quod ex Visione capitis 19, (nam aliquoties laudavi) liquidò constare potest. Illic enim vidit Joannes * Cælum apertum, & ecce Equus albus; & qui sedebat super eum vocatur fidelis & verax, & cum justitia judicat & pugnât—Et vestitus erat veste aspersâ sanguine, (sanguine autem uvarum) & vocatur nomen ejus VERBUM DEI. Et exercitus qui sunt in cælo sequebantur eum in equis albis, vestiti byssino albo & mundo. Et de ore ejus podrit gladius acutus, ut in ipso percuteret gentes: Ipse enim regit eas virgâ ferreâ; & is est QUI CALCAT TORCULAR VINI FURORIS DEI OMNIPOTENTIIS,—&c. Ecquid clariùs dici potuit? Proindeque in contextu, cui lucem pro virili facimus, neutiquam dicitur, Angelum qui vindemiavit sive putavit botros eundem quoque Lacum calcasse; sed solummodo botros putatos in Lacum misisse; quo facto, calcatum esse Lacum extra Urbem, A quo autem nisi à Christo Rege, è cælo cum cœlesti Equitatu prodeunte? Id nimirum est quod Spiritus Sanctus significare voluit, statim additâ Equorum mentione: Et exivit, inquit, sanguis è Lacu usque usque ad frenos Equorum. Quorsum enim illud de Equis insertum, nisi ut hoc indicio submoneret, ab eo Lacum calcatum esse ad quem comitatus iste equestris pertinebat? Ad Cap. 14.

Urgitur rem in pauca conferam; hæc Visionis istius Vindemialis summa est: Angelus Vindemiator, adhibitis Sanctis, quorum ad hoc negotium ei præfectura demandata est, botros Bestianos putabit abscindetque; eaque putatione suâ faciet in ARMAGEDDUNTEM congregari; congregatos demum calcabit Dominus Jesus in adventu suo: juxta quod Paulus ait de Homine peccati, (qui ipsissima hæc Bestia est) eum à Domino destruendum fore, ὁ κατατρώγων τὴν παρυσίαν αὐτοῦ.

2 Thes. 2. 8.

Utraque autem tam MESSIS quàm VINDEMIA precibus impetratur: illa quidem (ut videtur) Ecclesiæ in universum; unde qui supplicum personam ibi sustinet Angelus, è Templo generatim prodire dicitur: hæc verò magis Martyrum & Confessorum, in quos Ianicinis atque tormentis sævierint impii, ac Christo victimam fecerint; propterea qui ad hanc inclamat Angelus, è Thyfiasterio seu Altaris septo egreditur, atque in ignem potestatem habere dicitur, ignem autem martyrii. Notum verò illud in vulgus est, sanguinem Martyrum ad Deum pro vindicta clamare. Sanè enim passim testatur Scriptura, Divinum numen Ecclesiæ, neque res secundas, neque in hostes vindictam, citra preces suorum largiri velle. Ità ad preces Danielis solvitur Captivitas Babylonica: & in parabola de Vidua iniquum Judicem clamoribus suis fatigante, apodosis est, Deum similiter precibus electorum suorum adactum tandem aliquando ad vindictam surrecturum esse. Adde quòd, cùm Tubæ clancituræ essent demoliendæ rei Romanæ, prius Martyrum preces, facto suffitu, Deo in memoriam revocantur.

Luc. 18.

Audi igitur, ô Christe Rex, & in memoriam apud Patrem tuum revoca tot supplices tuorum pro regno tuo preces, tot afflictorum & interfectorum pro nomine tuo gemitus, & cùm tempus quod tibi opportunum videbitur advenerit, Surge, mete & vindemia. Cap. 81

METROPOLI ΑΠΟΣΤΑΣΙΑΣ CHRISTIANITATIS, BABYLONE MYSTICA.

Metropolis Αποστασίας BABYLON μυστήριον seu mystica, Urbs ROMA Ad Cap. 17: est, seu, ut nunc loquimur, SEDES ROMANA, ex Sponsa olim Christi facta non solum Meretrix, sed & Μητηρ τῶν πορνῶν, METROPOLIS MERETRICULARUM, id est, caput Christiani nominis Urbium cum ipsa spiritualiter fornicantium. Ubi illud, Lector, vel imprimis observes velim, (quoniam in ipsa jam Arce versamur Apocalypseos) non aliis hæresibus aut erroribus ullis, quàm illà tantopere veteri quoq; Israeli exprobratà MOECHATIONE spirituali, magnam illam & catholicam visibilis Ecclesiæ Christianæ Αποστασίαν à Spiritu Sancto definitam & consignatam esse. Hanc igitur unicam, tanquam Cynosuram, ab eo spectari oportere, quisquis Apostasiæ Christianitatis initium, progressum, statum & decrementum, ex rerum Ecclesiasticarum tabulis pervestigare voluerit.

quā à Joanne in præfenti Visione confpecta est; cujus nimirum ætate dici potuit, Et jam olim eam fuisse, necdum tamen natam esse. Olim enim fuerat BESTIA sub priorum quinque, partim etiam sexti, capitum vicibus; nondum tamen fuit novissimi illius (puta Pontificii) Capitis vice, quā demum bajularet MERETRICEM.

Ad Cap. 17.

Applic. Nunc igitur, Lector, ausculta. Si sextum BESTIÆ Romanæ caput, quod Joannis ætate in Urbe septicolli regnabat; jam à duodecim ferè seculis ibidem regnare desiit; necesse est eum qui nunc ibi rerum potitur (quum nequaquam illud quasi-septimum, brevisque ævi Caput dici possit) esse novissimum illum, longævum & verè septimum Septem collium Dynastem; proindeque Statum illum, seu Rem-gentium-publicam, cui ROMA nunc incubat diuque incubavit, Dynastiam illam esse quam Joannes præviderat MERETRICEM bajulaturam.

Decem Bestiæ cornua, novissimi Capitis insignia, decem sunt Regna, Joannis quidem ævo nondum nata, sed in quæ tandem BESTIÆ Romanæ corpus vice suā novissimā ex Capitis Cæsarei vulnere dilaceraretur; quæque omnem potestatem suam unanimiter conferrent BESTIÆ, sub Capitis istius novissimi imperio, integrandæ restituendæque.

Applic. Atqui nisi jam indè ex quò Cæsares ROMÆ regnare desierint, Romanum Imperium in decem plurave Regna (etiam Gentium Joannis ævo ab Imperio alienarum barbararumque) divisum & dilaceratum sit; quando, quæso, unquam, quæve tandem ratione illud dividendum exspectabimus?

Decem autem illa quæ ita coaluerint Regna, Pseudoprophetæ Capitis sui auspiciis, cum AGNO pugnabunt, victoriā tamen tandem penes AGNUM Dominium nostrum futurā.

Applic. Illud dudum factum est, hodièque etiamnum fit: Hoc etiam aliquatenus factum, sed multò gloriosiori victoriā quandoque impletum iri speramus.

Siquidem ex iisdem decem cornibus seu Regibus erunt qui MERETRICEM, cui tamdiu bajulandæ inservierint, odio tandem prosequuntur, (quod partim impletum cernimus) desertam illam reddent & nudam, carnes ejus comedent, ipsamque exurent igne. Deus enim, cujus providentiā factum est ut tam mirabili consensu in hanc novissimi capitis Bestiam, usque ad tempus ei præstitutum, coalescerent; idem aliquando cordibus eorum indet, ut voluntatem quoque ipsius in Metropolin suam MERETRICEM exsequantur. Hæc Angelus.

Quod verò præterea in Parabolæ descriptione habetur, MERETRICEM istam poculum aureum in manu sua tenere, plenum abominationibus & immunditiâ scortationis suæ; item, nomen suum in fronte scriptum præferre, id Angeli interpretatione non egebat: siquidem utroque allusum est ad Meretricum & Lupanarium olim consuetudinem; quorum illæ in calice aureo philtrea amasiis suis propinare solebant; in istis cellæ meretricum nomine inscribebantur, uti docet Tertulliani illud Lib. de Pudicitia — sub ipsis libidinum januis, sub ipsis libidinum titulis; sed clariùs Seneca Controvers. 2. lib. 1. Meretrix (ait) vocata es, in communi loco stetisti, superpositus est cellæ tuæ titulus. Vide & Martialem lib. 11. Epigr. 46. Quinetiam, si famosa esset meretrix, videtur non tantum in cella, sed in fronte, nomen & elogium scriptum prætulisse. Innuit id Seneca loco citato: Nomen, inquit, tuum pependit in fronte, pretia supri accepisti, & manus, quæ Diis data erat sacra, capturas tulit. Quò & Juvenalis forsan respexit, Sat. 6. de Messalinæ Augustæ impotenti libidine,

Quòd si illud Senecæ de cellæ fronte accipiendum sit, potest & hoc de Babylone sic accipi; neque id durum erit, propter figuræ ingenium, quæ utrumque, tam Meretricem quàm locum seu fornicem in quo prostat, comprehendit.

Deinde ad Angelorum amictum apparatusque, Phialasque speciatim describendas, acceditur, ab illis versûs 6 verbis, Καὶ ἐξῆλθον οἱ ἐπὶ τὰ ἄγλαοι οἱ ἔχοντες τὰς ἐπὶ τὰ πλάγας, ἐκ τοῦ ναοῦ, &c. Et exierunt septem isti Angeli habentes septem plagas, è Templo, induti lino mundo & splendido, & præcincti circa pectora zonis aureis, id est, habitu & cinctu * Sacerdotali ornati. Cave enim nè verba, quæ posuimus, cum illis versûs præcedentis conjungas: siquidem quod ibi dicitur de Templo Tabernaculi testimonii in celo aperto, id non ad initium, sed eventum Phialarum pertinet; scilicet Templum quod, interim dum Phialæ effundebantur, impletum erat fumo à Majestate Dei & à virtute ejus, adeò ut nemo ingredi posset, ver. 8. (allusum est tum ad Tabernaculi, Exod. 40. 34. tum ad Templi dedicationem septiduanam, 1. Reg. 8. 10. 2. Paralip. 5. 13.) peractis demum Phialis ita serenabit, ut ipsa Arca testimonii [Christus] conspicua futura sit: uti habetur ad septimæ Tubæ clangorem [cap. 11. ver. ult.] quacum novissimam Phialarum contemporare ostensum est Synch. III. Part. 2.

De PHIALIS singillatim Hypotheses.

Ad Cap. 16. 1.

Effusio Phialarum significat Ruinam BESTIÆ Antichristianæ. Apparet ex textu; de quo vide Synch. VII. Part. I. Quemadmodum enim prior illa & antiquior Regni Romani Πολιτεία, Tubarum; ita novissima hæc, Phialarum plagis subruenda est. Hæc tantæ inter utrasque similitudinis causa est, cum & prioris Politicæ Romanæ postrema hæc imaginem gerat.

2. Septem Phialæ totidem sunt istius Ruinæ gradus. Sicut enim BESTIA gradatim succrevit, ita gradatim quoque abolenda est.

3. Quicquid tandem sit in quod Phialarum quæque effunditur, id damnum & jacturam patitur à Phiala; cum Phialarum effusio sit Effusio iræ Dei [cap. 15. v. 1.] Nulla igitur interpretatio hic stare potest, quâ Phialæ effusio in bonum ejus cedat in quod effunditur.

4. Terra, Mare, Fluvii, sol, aliquid sunt de BESTIA Antichristiana, instar Terræ, instar Maris, instar Fluviorum, instar Solis. Nam Phialæ omnes in BESTIAM effunduntur: ergo & singulæ in aliquid BESTIÆ, aut saltem quod BESTIÆ saluti in-nexum, ejusque interest.

5. Totum BESTIÆ corpus, seu Universitas Antichristiana, à Spiritu Sancto, similiter ut in Tubis factum, tacitè comparatur Systemati mundano cujus partes sunt

Terra,

Terra, Mare, Flumina, Cælum, Luminaria: ita ut Terra in Universitate Pontificia dicatur id quod sit instar Telluris in Mundo physico; Mare, quod sit Maris instar; Fluvii, quod Fluviorum; Sol, quod Solis.

6. Denique (ut jam semel iterumque monuimus) quoniam Deus Angelos adhibet providentiæ suæ, in rerum humanarum motibus & conversionibus ciendis gubernandisque, ministros; idcirco quæ multorum manibus peraguntur, Angelo tamen, tanquam rei gerendæ Præsidi & Duci, pro communi loquendi more, tribuuntur.

Expositio Phialarum ad amussim Hypotheseon.

PHIALA I. IN TERRAM

Universitatis Bestiana.

Terra in Universitate Antichristiana designat populum, sive vulgus Christianum, scabellum (proh pudor!) Antichristi; cui tanquam Basi superstructa moles illa Hierarchico-papana, instar Turris Babylonice—vertice ad auras Ætherias tendit.

In hanc Terram Bestianam effusa Phiala; eam ab effusione affectionem contraxit; ut Bestiæ sectatores furiis & intemperiiis tanquam ulceribus impleteret, iisdemque tetrissimè & malignis, ut sanari non potuerint, sed nec cicatrice ullâ obduci, quâ non disruptâ illico renovarentur.

Hoc impletum cum vulgus Christianum, Waldensium, Albigenium, Wiclifitarum, Hussitarum, aliisque nominibus appellatum, authoritati Bestiæ passim renunciare cœpit, Romam BABYLONEM Apocalypticam clamitans, Papam Antichristum. Quo Terræ suæ jam zelo Dei torridæ afflatu pulsati Bestiani, doloris & indignationis ulceribus toti excanduerunt; quibus in rabiem acti ferro & flammâ per annos complures mirabiliter sævierint: sed frustra; quippe ulcere malo & insanabili percussi, quod, quò magis sese commovebant, eò indies ingravescere magis. Sic olim Terra Ægypti pulvere cinereo divinitus coaspersa, Pharaonitas omnes cum jumentis suis ulceribus oppletos reddidit. Orbis autem Bestianus jam capite II. Ægyptus πνευματικῇ perhibetur; proindeque hic plaga ulceris πνευματικῆς, id est, mysticè & ex analogia, interpretanda: id quod in duarum quoque sequentium Plagarum figuris, ex eadem historia petitis, diligenter observandum est.

Exod. 9. 8, 9.

PHIALA II. IN MARE

Mundi Bestiani.

Mare in Mundo Antichristiano est communionis Pontificiæ comprehensio, quâ non singuli tantum Christiani, sed integræ gentes, populi, regna, provinciæ, diœceses, alioquin inter se disjuncta divulsæque, in unum congregantur: vel sic, Mare Antichristianum est Jurisdictionis seu Ditionis Pontificalis ambitus, homines & gentes Christicolæ circumplectens & involvens, sicut Mare Terram.

In hoc Mare Phiala secundâ effusa, factum est illico ut crur cadaveris, seu sanguis gelidus & concretus, qualis mortuorum & occisorum, seu membri abscissi, esse soleat, cum soluto cum vitali fonte commercio, spiritus calorisque influxu destituitur. Sensus est, Mare Pontificale quasi morte, truncatione, lanienâ mactatum esse.

Hoc autem impletum cum Lutheri cæterorumque illustrium illius ævi Ecclesiæ Reformatorum operâ, Deo cœptis mirabiliter aspirante, non jam è Christianitatis vulgo solummodo singulæ aliquot personæ, quinimo integræ Provinciæ, Diœceses, Regna, Nationes, Urbes communioni Bestianæ renunciârunt, magnâque amplissimâ olim Ditionis mutilatione factâ, à corpore Bestianò avulsæ recesserunt. Quo casu Mare ditionis Pontificiæ evasit magnâ suâ parte mortuum, instarque cruris cadaveris, in quo Animalia Pontificia spirare amplius & vivere non potuerint.

PHIALA III. IN FLUMINA ET FONTES

Mundi Bestiani.

Flumina & Fontes aquarum Orbis Bestiani sunt Jurisdictionis Antichristianæ Ministri & Propugnatores; sive Ecclesiastici, ut Jesuitæ aliique Sacerdotes emissarii; sive etiam Seculares & Laici, ut Pugiles Hispanici: quorum utrisque ut à Jurisdictione ista causam, quam Catholicam vocant, procurandi promovendique mandatur munus, perinde ut Flumina originem suam ducunt ex Mari; ita quoque eidem amplificandæ & conservandæ operam & opes suas conferunt, sicut & Flumina ad Mare revertuntur.

Hæc autem Flumina dum alveos suos, quò jam illis ultrà integrum non erat, temerè prosequuntur, justo Dei judicio à tertiæ Phialæ effusione cruentanda veniunt, quomodo & ipsi Sanctos Dei & Prophetas ejus jam olim cruentassent. Nempe ab hac Phiala res Bestiana in eum statum deventura esset, ut Ministri & Propugnatores ejus, jam mutatis vicibus, easdem cædes perferre cogerentur quibus Sanctos & Prophetas Dei, florente ipsorum dominatione, mactare consuevisent: ut disertè habetur ver. 5, 6. tanquam Clavis parabolæ referendæ.

Quod de Emissariis Ecclesiasticis cum affeculis suis tunc impletum opinor, cùm in Anglia nostra, gloriosæ memoriæ Elisabethâ regnante, atque etiam postea, sanguinarii isti autoritatis Bestianæ procuratores, etiam latis eo nomine legibus, procuratorem suam sanguine (quod iis antea nunquam sic acciderat) luerunt. Nec isti solum, sed qui istis multò formidabiliores fuerint, causæ Bestianæ Pugiles Hispani, suam Ecclesiæ Romanæ ditionem armis recuperaturi, sanguinem sitientes, sanguinem, clade præsertim illâ memorabili anni 88 & sequentium aliquot annorum, plenis haustibus biberunt; Anglis & Belgis, terrâ marique, calicem potenti Dei manu affatim infundentibus. Adeò ut iustis & veris Dei in utrosque judiciis, non ab Insulanis tantummodo ipsis, sanguinem suorum olim effusum jam ulciscantibus; sed etiam à vicinis Gallis sub cruce adhuc & Altari, imò recenti tum lanienâ anni 1572, gementibus, mirificè acclamatum fuerit. Atque hucusque Phialæ progressæ videntur: reliquæ adhuc effundendæ supersunt.

PHIALA IV. IN SOLEM

SOL quid sit in Mundo Bestiano ut indagemus, priùs quid Cælum ibi sit pervidendum est, nè alioquin analogiæ filo destituti, nimium quantum à scopo aberremus. SOL enim non nisi in Cælo sibi congruo ponendus aut concipiendus est. Cælum igitur Mundi Antichristiani vel est ipsa Suprema & Universalis potestas Pontificia, vel omnino quicquid uspiam est sublimioris regiæque potestatis in Mundo isto Bestiano, id est, in tota Universitate Provinciarum Pontificem Romanum pro Capite agnoscentium. Ità enim in Mundo physico totum id quod sursum est, supràque terram & aquas, notatione Hebræorum & Spiritus Sancti Cælum appellatur. Jam in isthoc Cælo Antichristiano (ad naturalis Cæli typum) plurimæ sunt stellæ, diversæque magnitudinis, Principes, Duces, Præsules, Reguli, Reges; sunt & magna Luminaria instar Solis & Lunæ: quæ omnia Cæli istius motu circumaguntur, ex ejusque lege vicissitudines suas obeunt. Ex istis verò splendidissimum, & longè omnium, quæ in Papali firmamento radiant, maximum Luminare est Imperium Germanicum, Domûs Austriacæ jam à ducentis plùs minùs annis peculium. Annon igitur hic SOL est illius Cæli?

Atque ecce, dum hæc quæ pridem commentatus eram in lucem edo, fama totum Christianum Orbem, piis gratulantibus, implevit, advenisse jam tandem Vindicem Dei

ab Aquilone, ut afflictae & laboranti Germaniae succurreret; Regem Pium, Felicem, & quaqua venit Victorem, cujus successus Aquilae volatum superent. Annon hic est quem Dominus exercituum ad hujusce Phialae opus exsequendum destinavit? Ita spero, & precor animitus. Accingere igitur gladio tuo, REX MAGNE, prospere procede & regna, propter veritatem, mansuetudinem & justitiam; nam deducet te mirabiliter dextra tua.

PHIALA V. IN THRONUM BESTIAE.

Phiala quinta in Thronum seu Sedem Bestiae effundenda est; hoc est, in ROMAM ipsam: ubi nullo amplius Spiritus Sanctus rem abscondit figurarum aut allegoriarum velo; fortè propter ingens tunc oriturum Vaticiniis istis lumen, hoc quasi Mercuriali signo conspecto, quo non ultra erit ambiguum quantum itineris Phialae jam confecerint, quantumve adhuc iis conficiendum restet.

In Geogr. Arab. كِرَامَت Curia (i. Throni seu Sedes) quatuor; Roma, Antiochia, Alexandria, & Domus Sanctuaris. كِرَامَت Sedes maxima Roma. Vid. Schindl. p. 879.

Hac verò URBIS Romanae clade (quam illam ipsam esse puto quae Testium resurrectionem ascensionemque exceptura dicitur, cap. 11. v. 13.) Nomen Pontificium non quidem penitus interibit, sed gloria & splendore suo deinceps spoliabitur, adeò ut linguas mordeant pra dolore: interim tamen, in impoenitentia sua adhuc obfirmatis animis perseverantes, doloribus suis ad ulteriorem blasphemiam abutentur.

PHIALA VI. IN EUPHRATEM.

Phiala sexta effundetur in Flumen illud magnum EUPHRATEM, ut, eo exsiccato, transitus paretur novis Bestiae hostibus ab Oriente venturis, hoc est, Israelitis ad puram Christi fidem cultumque mirabiliter convertendis, jamque Regni tot seculis promissi candidatis. Quos Bestiani forsàn, sic ulciscente Deo erroris perviciam, pro fictitii Antichristi sui ex Judaeis oriundi exercitu sint habituri; cujus & nos prodromos esse hodièque asserere non dubitant.

Hosce autem Reges ab ortu solis, ut dicitur, venturos, ut de Judaeis accipiam, duo faciunt. Primò, quòd penultima hac Phiala est; ad quam proinde nisi Judaei converterentur, necessariò futurum esset ut cum reliquis Christi hostibus, in quorum numero & ipsi adhuc essent, in magno illo universalis ultionis & Judicii Die, quam proxima & novissima Phiala superinducet, perderentur. Deinde me huc adducit eòdem spectans Isaia locus, unde hunc Apocalypseos mutuatum esse perquam verisimile est: Et desolabit (inquit cap. 11. v. 15, 16.) Dominus (malim, Quemadmodum desolavit Dominus) Linguam Maris Aegypti, & (malim, ita) levabit manum suam super FLUMEN (Targ. Flumen Euphratem) in fortitudine spiritus sui, & percutiet eum in septem rivos, ita ut transeant per eum calceati. 16. Et erit via residuo populo meo, qui relinquetur ab Assyriis, (ergò Euphrates intelligitur) sicut fuit in die illa quā ascendit de Terra Aegypti. Videat Lector Zach. 10. ver. 10, 11. ibique Chaldaeam Paraphrastem.

Sed quid tandem Euphratem hunc esse, cujus aquae siccabuntur, dicemus? Annon enim juxta literam id accipiendum sit, praesertim in Isaiae loco, aliquatenus dubito. Interim huic Apocalypseos malim parabolae & allegoriae nonnihil, nec tamen adeò multum, aspergi; ut reliquarum Phialarum analogia de effusionis objecto hinc quoque sarta tecta maneat. Habitura enim videtur, non secus ac vetus illa, suum quoque Babylon mystica Euphratem; Imperium, opinor, Ottomanicum, unicum futurum novis istis ab Oriente hostibus obstaculum, Bestiaeque ab ea parte munimentum. Neque hujusmodi Euphratis intellectus absque Isaiae ipsius exemplo erit, qui cap. 8. ver. 7. simili Euphratis parabolā Assyrium exercitum ejusdem Fluminis accolam expressit. Dominus, inquit, faciet ut ascendant contra istos (Syros & Israelitas) aqua illius FLUMINIS (sic Euphrates xar' ἑοχλῶς dici solet) fortissima & amplissima, REX ASSYRIAE & omnis gloria ejus. (Targum, exercitus ejus,) &c. Quidni jam pari ratione Euphrates iste Phialarum de Turcis acciperetur? non minùs utique quàm Assyrii, Euphratis, ante exundationem suam, accolis, imò ejusdem tractus incolis. Huc non parum facit, quòd Solutionem ingentis illius & diu victi ad Magnum Flumen Euphratem exercitus equestris, ad sextae Tubae clangorem, cap. 9. ver. 15. de TURCIS inde in Orbem Romanum exundaturis, Tubarum seriem reique concinnam veritatem secuti, interpretati sumus.

Ad Cap. 16.

Per sextam igitur Phialam exsiccabitur Diluvium isthoc Euphratenum. Planè juxta quod c. 11. dicitur, proximè post illam URBIS cladem in magno terræ motu futuram (quam superiori Phialæ ibi aptavimus) VÆ secundum, id est, sextæ Tubæ plagam, abiturum. Id verò quâ ratione, quibûsque tandem authoribus sit futurum, (utrûmne ab ipsis Judeis (quod forsan Ezechiel innuit cap. 38. & 39.) Terram sanctam postliminiò occupaturis; an ex dissidio aliquo intestino horum reditum commodè præcessuro; an utroque forsan, sed ordine & deinceps; an aliâ causâ) frustrâ conjectando, utpote re adhuc totâ futurâ, laborabimus. Quicquid sit, hoc obice remoto, viam aliquò eundi parari dicitur novis istis ab Oriente Christianis; idque expeditionem, ut videtur, contra Bestiam facturis, cujus exitio Phialæ omnes inferviunt. Unde enim alioquin & quamobrem tanta ab hac siccatione trepidatio & pavor Bestianos, imò Dæmones, ut videtur, ipsos è vestigio incesset, ut tam horribili & inaudito ad bellum apparatui, qualis hîc describitur, causam daret; nisi ipsi jam cum tota cohorte Diabolica extrema quæque à novorum istorum Orientis Regum accessione metuerent?

PHIALA VII. IN AEREM.

SEptima & novissima Phiala in Aerem effunditur, id est, in POTESTATEM Aeream, seu Satanæ; non Bestiæ tantummodo, sed omnium ubicunque terrarum Christi Domini nostri hostium Ditiones sinu suo complectentem atque animantem. Ex hac autem ut spiritum & vitam jam ab initio duxit Bestia, ita ejus præcipuè virtute & auspiciis nitentur novissimæ Bestianorum fortunæ: id quod tum ex tot scæderum auxiliorumque in Phialæ hujus novissimæ bellum apparatu, artibus, ut perhibetur, Diabolicis conciliando, constare potest; tum ex eo quòd Draco Satanæ jam, non solum per Vicarios suos, Bestiam & Pseudopphetam, res suas in Exercitu isto Oecumenico conflando satagat, sed ipse per se, tanquam in ultimo Regni sui discrimine, partes quoque proprias & peculiare videatur habiturus [v. 13.] illis præsertim in belli hujus societatem evocandis, apud quos alioquin Bestia & Pseudoppheta, ut nequaquam autoritate, ita nec gratiâ, aut communis forsan periculi representatione, valuissent.

In tot igitur hostes, Aeræ Potestatis auspiciis, in unum congregatos, atque Armageddunte quasi in cavea conclusos, Phiala septima, non humanâ jam ampliùs manu, sed cœlesti & fulmineâ vindictâ (magni enim illius Diei, & Dei omnipotentis prælum est) detonabit. Hâc Bestiæ excidium penitus consummabitur; neque cellæ tantum, seu Urbis Babylonis, ut priùs sub Tuba quinta, sed Civitatis ipsius, id est, Senatûs populi que Babylonici, ubi ubi post Urbis cladem superfuerit; adhæc Regum Civitatûmq; omnium eousque cum idolis & Deastris fornicantium, reliquorumque Sanctam Christi Ecclesiam unâ oppugnantium tyrannorum, exterminium in solidum peragetur.

DE MILLE ANNIS TUBAE SEPTIMÆ, CÆTERISQUE EIDEM

Ad Cap. 20. &amp;c.

HIC breviter, Lector, quod sentio absolvam; neque in re ob inveterata jamdiu præjudicia incredibili, omniumque totius Scripturæ prophetica abstrusissimâ maximèque admirandâ, orationem nimis diducam. In tanto mysterio sat erit rem generatim tenere, neque singulorum rationes curiosius inquirere: nè liberius fortè quàm par est exspatianti illud Solomonis occinatur, In multitudine verborum non deerit prævaricatio.

Prov. 10. 19.

Rem verò ipsam quod attinet, ea irrefragabili ordinis Apocalyptici sequelâ, quam antea demonstravi, nititur; eandemque reliquarum Scripturarum, præsertim Propheticarum, consensus mirificè confirmat. Id adeò proximi post Apostolos seculi Christianis Christianis fuit perspectum, ut Justinus Martyr non seipsum solum, sed, si qui essent tunc temporis orthodoxæ per omnia sententiæ Christiani, summâ idipsum consensione credidisse attestetur. Ad Cap. 20, &c.

Quam tamen primorum Christianorum sententiam, five assumentis quibusdam postmodum deformatam, five iniquè & perperam (ut quidem arbitror) intellectam, rejecerunt eorundem post unum & alterum seculum posteri: eoque tamen, priusquam res confici potuit, progressu (quod merito mireris & doleas) contentionis ardore; ut qui aliter sese ab adversariæ sententiæ vi, Apocalypseos fundamento subnixâ, expedire nequissent, divinissimam, omnibûsque Apostolorum discipulis proximisque eorum successoribus testatam & consignatam Prophetiam, in dubium potius vocare, imò confictis in eam rem præsumptionibus auctoritatem ejus apertè & audacter elevare, quàm succumbere & victas manus dare, maluerint: donec tandem commodam MILLENNII istius interpretationem (ut ipsi quidem tum rebantur) nacti, incolumi relicta Apocalypseos auctoritate, ab incepto, impietatis crimini haud facilè eximendo, posterisque tremendo, quieverunt. Dial. cum Tryphone.

Ego verò, Lector, (nè te diutius in vestibulo distineam) ità rem totam expediam, ut à sententia recepta de Die adventûs Christi, excidium Antichristi evestigiò secuturo, quàm minimùm fieri possit abiisse videar. Tu rem, omni semoto præjudicio, in Dei timore expendas, mihi que, sicubi erravero, ex charitatis judicio ignoscas. Sic igitur habeto.

TUBAM SEPTIMAM cum tota ΧΙΑΙΕΤΗΡΙΑΙ, cæterisque eodem spectantibus oraculis, designare MAGNUM illum, priscæ Ecclesiæ Judaicæ, Christoque & Apostolis ejus celebratum JUDICII DIEM יוֹם דִּינָא רַבָּא, non breve aliquot (ut vulgò creditur) horarum spatiolum, sed (pro more Hebræorum, Diem pro * tempore usurpantium) continuatum multorum annorum intervallum, duabûsque Resurrectionibus, tanquam terminis, circumscriptum: DIEM, inquam, à particulari primùm & quasi matutino Antichristi cæterorumque vivorum Ecclesiæ hostium Judicio, per gloriosam Domini nostri ἐν πυρὶ φλογὸς ἐμφανείαν, inchoandum; tandèmq; post MILLE ANNORUM regnum Novæ Jerusalem, Sponsæ suæ sanctissimæ, in his terris indultum, novorumque adhuc suboriturorum, DIE magno advesperascente, Satanæque iterum soluto, hostium πανωλεθρίαν, Universali demum omnium mortuorum tum Resurrectione tum Judicio absolvendum. Quibus peractis, Impii in Gehennam æternùm cruciandi, Sancti verò in Cælum cum Christo æternùm victuri transferentur. * Apud Prophetas passim (ut cum dicunt, In die illo) & alibi in V.T. In Novo autem Matth. 6. 11. cum Luc. 11. 3. Joan. 16. 26. 2. Cor. 6. 2. Heb. 3. 8, 9, 13, &c. item cap. 4. denique 2. Per. 2. v. ult. ubi ἡμετέρας διαβόας.

Hic est DIES ille Judicii & perditionis impiorum hominum, de quo Petrus 2 Epist. c. 3. v. 7. locutus, statim subjicit, Unum verò hoc non lateat vos, charissimi, (nempe quod Diem modò dixi) unum Diem apud Dominum esse sicut Mille anni, & Mille annos sicut unus Dies. Quo eodem enim verò Die Apostolus cum fratribus & contribulibus suis Judæis (ad quos scribit) Novam illam rerum faciem futuram expectat, de qua * mox inquit, NOVOS VERO COELOS ET NOVAM TERRAM, secundum promissum * Vers. 13. ejus, expectamus, in quibus justitia habitat. Nota, secundum promissum ejus. Ubi autem extabat hæc de Cælis novis & Terra nova Promissio (cùm nondum Joannes Apocalypsin vidisset) nisi Isaïæ cap. 65. 17. & 66. 22? Quam certè Promissionem qui legerit, mirarer si eam alibi quàm in histerris existimaret impletum iri.

Hoc quoque est Regnum illud cum Christi Mundum judicaturi ἐμφανείᾳ conjunctum, de quo Paulus ad Timotheum, 2 Epist. cap. 4. v. 1. Obtestor te coram Domino nostro Jesu Christo, qui judicaturus est vivos & mortuos in APPARITIONE sua & REGNO suo. Nam post ultimam ac universalem Resurrectionem, eodem teste, 1 Cor. 15. Christus Morte, hostium ultimo, sublatâ, Regnum tradet Patri, ut ipse subjiciatur ei qui ei subjecit omnia; nedum ut tunc novum aliquod regnum inire dicatur. Quod igitur Regnum neque ante Domini nostri ἐμφανείαν, neque post ultimam Resurrectionem est futurum, id necessariò inter utrumque est concludendum.

Hoc est Regnum illud quod Daniel vidit, Filii hominis, expletis CORNU Antichristiani temporibus, seu finitis temporibus Gentium (Luc. 21. 24.) apparituri in nubibus cæli, quando ei dabitur potestas, gloria & regnum; ut omnes populi, nationes & linguæ ei serviant: seu quando (ut Angelus mox exponit) Regnum, potestas, & amplitudo regnorum subter omne cælum [N. B.] dabitur populo sanctorum Altissimi. Dan. 7. 13, 14. item 18, 22, 26, 27. Neque enim (ut modò dixi) Regnum hoc post ultimam Resurrectionem est futurum; quandoquidem tunc FILIO hominis non regnum ineun-

Primum, quod utrumque ab eodem termino, nempe Bestiæ quartæ seu Romanæ exterminio, ineat: illud Danielis, quando Bestia sub novissimo illo Cornu oculati regimine agens neci data fuit, & corpus ejus traditum combustioni ignis, Dan. 7. 11, 22, 27. illud Apocalypseos, cum Bestia & Pseudopropheta (improbum illud Cornu apud Daniele os & oculos capitis instar habens) apprehensi sunt, & ambo vivi missi in stagnum ignis ardens sulphure. lorum, Sanctos cum eo Mundum judicatuuros, Antichristum abolendum ὅτι τὸ ἐν ἡμῶν
ἔσται παροικία αὐτοῦ, &c. Ut omnino fidei Evangelicæ de glorioso Christi adventu co-lumnæ subductum eant qui, vetustâ Ecclesiæ traditione neglectâ, Prophetiam istam aliò transferre conantur.

Denique, ut finem faciam, Hoc est Regnum illud amplissimum, quod, Daniele interprete, in Statua illa quatuor Regnorum fatidica, Nebuchadnesari præmonstratum fuit: Non illud LAPIDIS, superstitute adhuc Monarchiarum serie ex monte abscissi, (nam hic præsens Regni Christi status est;) sed LAPIDIS, iisdem funditus comminutis & deletis, in MONTEM evasuri atque universum impleturi terrarum Orbem.

Hæc ità, Lector, differui, non temerè asserui. Rem verò totam Ecclesiæ ex verbo Dei ar-bitrandam defero: cujus judicio, ut par est, meam de hoc mysterio sententiam lubens submitto.

DIALOGO CUM

TRYPHONE JUDÆO

Locus insignis de Millennio Regni Christi emendatus & notis illustratus.

JUSTINUS.

Non sum eò miseriæ redactus, ô TRYPHO, ut alia quàm sentio loquar. Confessus sum tibi & <sup>c</sup> antea, me quidem & alios complures mecum sentire id, sicut planè scitis, futurum. Πολλοὶ δ' αὖ καὶ ἡμεῖς [ὅ] καθεστὸς καὶ ἐστὲς ὅλων Χριστιανῶν γνώμη, πῶτο μὴ γνωρίζαν, ἐσημανάσοι. τὴν γὰρ λεγομένην μὴ Χριστιανὸς, ὅντας ὁ ἀθέος καὶ ἀσεβὴς αἰρεσιώτας, ὅτι κατὰ πάντα βλάβος καὶ ἀθέος καὶ ἀνόητος διδάσκαλος, ἐδήλωσά σοι. i. E contra verò, eorum <sup>d</sup> qui puræ piæque Christianorum sententiæ [non] sunt, multos hoc non agnoscere tibi significavi: eos enim tibi designabam qui nomine quidem Christiani dicuntur, sunt verò athei & impii hæretici, quòd omnino blasphema & impia & stulta doceant. Ut autem non tantummodo apud vos me hoc dicere sciatis, disputati- onum harum nostrarum omnium, quoad potero, opus componam: ubi hoc ipsum me profiteri, quod coram vobis fateor, conscribam. Non enim homines aut humanas do- ctrinas, sed Deum & disciplinam ab eo traditam consecrandam mihi esse statuo.

in nostris libris intercidit. Sed omnino cum negatione legi oportere manifestum est, tum ex verbis proximè per epexegetin subjunctis (subdit enim, se eos intellexisse qui nomine quidem Christiani dicuntur, sunt verò athei & impii hæretici;) tum ex sequenti orationis serie, ubi eadem quæ hic de contrasentientibus dixerat, denuo & quidem satis fuisset inculcas, esse nimirum tantum nomine tenui Christianos, & eodem sensu ha- bendos quo Sadducæi & similes hæretici sunt apud Judæos. Hac tamen, utis manifesta, cum Interpres non viderit, neque aliis ex epexegeti quam dixi ullum sensum congruum elicere potuerit, transferendo immutavit. Sed non agred feramus unius particula iudicium, quòd forsitan effectum est ne totus hic locus (utpote sic satis multatus) penitus expungeretur. Non enim nostro primum auctore nata est ars expurgandi: anti- qua res est, quæ olim in hujus dogmatis memoria ex antecessorum Patrum scriptis eliminanda tyrannicum fecit, postquam nimirum per complures annos non exiguo partium fervore agitata, tandem Damasci Pontificis auctoritate succubuerat; id quod ex bodiænsis Irenæi, Victorini Picta- vionensis, & Sulpitii Severi exemplaribus, cuius manifestum est.

turniniani, Ophiti, Carpocratiani, Colabarsiani, Cerdoniani, Marcionitæ, Apellitæ negarunt resurrectionem carnis; iidemque omnes cum Menandrianis & Cerinthisianis, blasphemarunt Deum Legi & Prophetarum, supremum cum Deum fuisse negantes, sed aut Angelum, eumque malum & turbulentum, aut Virtutem nescio quam inferiorem dicentes; Christumque homines ab ejus potestate liberatum venisse. Atque hinc videtur Tertullianus isthoc de Millennio dogma asserat contra Marcionitæ & itemque Irenæus Tract. contra omnes hæreses. Quamvis enim id negare hæresis non fuerit, (cùm de modo & qualitate secundi adventus Christi quæstio sit, non de re ipsa;) illi tamen temporibus videtur ab hæreticis quis dixi præcipuè, si non solis, negatum fuisse, idque privatam ob causam; nè scilicet hac admissio, confiterentur & carnis resurre- ctionem, & Deum Legi & Prophetarum esse Patrem Domini nostri Jesu Christi.

starum, & Meristarum, & Galilæorum, & Hellenianorum, & Phariseorum baptistarum, ( nè cum molestia me omnia quæ sentio dicentem audiat ) sed Judæos quidem appellari & filios Abrahæ, & confitentes labiis Deum, cor autem illorum ( ut ipse Deus clamat ) longè abesse ab eo. ΕΓΩ ΔΕ, ΚΑΙ ΕΙΤΙΝΕΣ ΕΙΣΙΝ ΟΡΘΟΓΝΩΜΟΝΕΣ ΚΑΤΑ ΤΑΝΤΑ ΧΡΙΣΤΙΑΝΟΙ, ΕΓΩ ΑΥΤΕΜ, ET SI QUI SUNT PER OMNIA <sup>a</sup> ORTHODOXÆ SENTENTIÆ CHRISTIANI, & carnis resurrectionem futuram novimus, & MILLE ANNOS in Jerusalem instauratâ & exornatâ & dilatâ ; sicut propheta Ezechiel & Esaïas & alii promulgant.

Articulos exci-
piat, nescio an simili Testimonium asserri possit de ullo dogmate Christiano.

Magnum hoc præjudicium est, seculo ab Apostolis proximo omnes Orthodoxos ita sensisse. Factus enim est Iulianus ex Philosopho Christianus annis circiter triginta à morte Joannis Apostoli ; quo tempore plus quam verisimile est, plures adhuc superstites fuisse qui ipsos Apostolos docentes audierunt. * Illa. 65. 17.

Sic namque Esaïas de Mille istorum annorum tempore [ <sup>ωσεί τ' χιλιονταετηρίδ' ταύτης</sup> ] loquutus est. * Erit enim Cælum novum & Terra nova, & non recordabuntur priorum, neque eorum illa venient in corda : sed letitiam & exultationem invenient in his quæ ego creo. Quia ecce facio Jerusalem exultationem & populum meum letitiam, &c. ad finem capitis. De illo verò [ Nam secundum dies <sup>b</sup> ligni vitæ, dies populi mei ] subjungit. In his verbis Mille annos arcanè designari intelligimus. Ut enim Adæ dictum est, quo die de ligno comedisset, eo die moriturum etiam esse ; scimus eum mille annos non implevisse. Novimus quoque [ pergit ] dictum illud, quod * dies Domini sit sicut mille anni, huc pertinere. Et Vir apud nos quidam, cū nomen Joannes, <sup>c</sup> ē duodecim Apostolis Christi unus, in ea quæ illi exhibita est Revelatione, Christi fideles nostros Annos mille Hierosolymis peracturos esse prophetavit ; ac postea universalem & ( ut semel dicam ) sempiternam omnium unanimiter simul Resurrectionem, & Judicium futurum : id quod & Dominus noster dixit, quod nuptum neque daturi, neque accepturi, sed Angelis æquales futuri sint ; utpote filii Dei resurrectionis. Apud nos enim huc usque etiam prophetica exstant dona, &c. *

Sine verò solida an scias, alius judicet. Interim videtur Iulianus existimasse, Vitam ligni vitæ, seu hominū in statu Paradisi, futuram fuisse Mille annorum ; id est, tantū hominē, si non peccasset, vixitū fuisse in hoc mundo, postea in beatorem locum & conditionem transferendum. Jam autem, quod peccasset Adam de fructu vitæ comedendo, neque ipsum, neque ex posteris ejus aliquem, qui maxime longævus fuerit, istum annorum numerum attingisse, sed intra magnum illum diem mortuum esse.

Locus alius ibidem eodem spectans.

In cujus secundo adventu, nè existimetis Esaïam aut alios Prophetas admonere ut sacrificia sanguinis aut libationum super altari offerantur, sed veræ atque spirituales laudes & gratiarum actiones.

qui cum Dionysio tuo Alexandrino Millenariorum dogmati promiscuè affingit Circumcisionis injuriam, Victimarum sanguinem, ceterisque Legis ceremoniis postliminò instaurandas. Scilicet quæ Judæi, aut forte ex Judaismo hæretici ( si modò vera sint quæ ex Gaio nescio quo de Cerintho asserta ) de suo Millenario seminarunt, vos Christianis edicere impingit. Hæcine verò candorem vestrum decuit ? Imò tu, Hieronyme, vel teipso judice, produs criminationem istam falsam esse. Sic enim scribis in Jeremiam, cap. 19. v. 10. Post captivitatem quæ sub Vespasiano & Tito, & postea accidit sub Hadriano, ulque ad consummationem seculi ruinæ Hierusalem permanſuræ sunt : quanquam sibi Judæi auream atque gemmatam Hierusalem restituendam putent ; rursusque victimas & sacrificia, & conjugia sanctorum, & regnum in terris Domini Salvatoris : quæ licet non sequamur, damnare tamen non possumus ; quia multi virorum Ecclesiasticorum & Martyrum ista dixerunt. Unusquisque in suosensu abundet, & Domini cuncta judicio referentur. Hæc verba tua sunt, Hieronyme. Sed dic sodes, An viri isti Ecclesiastici & Martyres sanctissimi dixerunt, circumcisionem & victimas in regno illo Christi restituendas ? cave dixeris. Aut si ita credidisse scires, an non sine cunctatione damnaret ? Quod autem Cerinthum attinet, si quid hujusmodi erraverit, ex Judaismo attulit ( Judæus enim fuit ) Christiani non imputandum. Mirum tamen est de hac Cerinthi hæresi apud Irenæum & Tertullianum nè γὰρ quidem reperiri, qui tamen expresso de erroribus ejus scripserunt. Totum hoc nititur fide cujusdam Gaii, hominis obſcuri, quem nescio an ex Alogorum hæreticorum numero fuerit, quos testatur Epiphanius tam Joannis Evangelium quàm Apocalypſin Cerintho adscripsisse. Certè eodem tempore vixit : & Apocalypſin quod attinet, ab eorum sententia non abhorruisse, quicumque verba ejus apud Eusebium haud oscitanter legeris, fatebitur.

REGNO MESSIÆ TUNC FUTURO.

Eptimum Millenarium ab universa Cabbalistarum Schola vocari MAGNUM DIEM JUDICII, asserit Carpentarius Com. in Alcinoium Platonis pag. 322. quod tunc arbitrentur (inquit ille) Deum cunctorum animas judicaturum. Cabbalistarum nomine innuit (ni fallor) Doctores Talmudicos; apud quos, non uno auctore, traditionem istam celebrari compertum est.

Ita enim legitur in Gemara Sanhedrin, Perek CHELEK. אמר רב קטינא שית אלפי שנה הוי עלמא וחר חריב שנאמר ונשנב יהוה לברו ביום ההוא. Dixit R. Ketina, Sex annorum millibus stat mundus, & uno vastabitur; de quo dicitur, ET EXALTABITUR DOMINUS SOLUS DIE ILLO. Vastationem verò intelligit quæ futura est per ignem, quo mundus ut aurum excoctus repurgabitur, atque à servitute maledictionis, sub qua nunc propter hominis peccatum ingemiscit, asseretur in libertatem gloriæ filiorum Dei, Rom. 8. Sequitur paulò pòst, תניא כותיה רב קטינא כשם שהשיעיה משמטה שנה לשבעה שנים כך העולם משמט אלף שנים לשבעה אלפים שנה שנאמר ונשנב ה' לברו ביום ההוא ואומר מומור שיר ליום השבת יום שכולו שבת ואומר כי אלף שנים בעיניך כיום אתמול. Id est, Traditio ad stipulatur R. Ketina: Sicut è septenis annis septimus quisque Annus remissionis est; ita è septem millibus annorum mundi, septimus millenarius millenarius remissionis erit, quemadmodum dicitur, ET EXALTABITUR DOMINUS SOLUS DIE ILLO. Dicitur item (Psal. 92.) PSALMUS CANTICUM DE DIE SABBATI; id est, de die qui totus quies est. Dicitur etiam (Psal. 90.) NAM MILLE ANNI IN OCULIS TUIS VELUT DIES HESTERNUS.

Hic duo notet lector. Primum, veteres Judæos prophetiam illam Isaia cap. 2. ubi verba illa [ Et exaltabitur Dominus solus Die illo ] bis habentur, de Die Judicii magni & Christi regno accepisse: à quorum vestigiis nec posteriores Rabbinī abeunt. ביום ההוא הוא יום הרין, inquit R. Schelomo, IN DIE ILLO, id est, in Die Judicii. Item, Cum surrexerit ad conterendum terram, id est, inquit, ליום הרין, in Die Judicii, quo conteret Dominus impios terræ. Rabbi David Kimchi, ביום ההוא, IN DIE ILLO, id est, in diebus Messie, quando exsequitur Deus judicium in improbos. Idem, ET EXALTABITUR DOMINUS SOLUS IN DIE ILLO; perinde est ac si dixerat, והיה יהוה למלך, Et erit Dominus Rex super omnem terram. Alterum notandum est, Titulum Psalmi 92, ליום השבת, à Magistris istis ad Psalmi argumentum spectare putatum, atque de Mille annorum Sabbatismo intelligi debere.

Jam verò ex istis palàm esse arbitror, priscos Judæos DIEM, quem Judicii nominarunt, millennio definiisse: id quod ampliùs confirmatur ex Midrasch tehillim, super illud Psal. 90. 15. LÆTIFICA NOS PRO DIEBUS (vel secundum dies) QUIBUS AFFLIXISTI NOS: videlicet (inquit) per Babyloniam, per Græciam, & per Romanos, idque in diebus Messie. Et quot sunt dies Messie? R. Jebosus dixit, quod sunt DUO MILLIA annorum; sicut dictum est, SECUNDUM DIES [ כימור ] QUIBUS NOS HUMILIASTI, id est, secundum duos Dies. DIES ENIM UNA DEI SANCTI ET BENEDICTI SUNT MILLE ANNI; juxta illud, QUONIAM MILLE ANNI IN OCULIS TUIS TANQUAM DIES HESTERNA. Dixerunt etiam Magistri, quod seculum futurum (ὃν οἱ καὶ μὲν τῇ μελλόντι, Heb. 2. 5.) DIES MESSIÆ erit una. Deus enim sanctus & benedictus in futuro [ in seculo futuro ] faciet ei Diem unam, de qua dictum est (Zach. cap. 14.) ET ERIT DIES UNA, ET IPSA EST NOTA DEO, NON DIES NEQUE NOX; ET ERIT, AD TEMPUS VESPERI ERIT LUX. Hæc dies est SECVLUM FUTURUM & vivificatio mortuorum.

Huic consentaneum est quod in libro Berachoth cap. מאימתי קורין (fide Petri Galatini) ita legitur; Dixit Ben Zuma, Futurum est ut Israel non faciat memoriam exitus ex Aegypto in FUTURO SECVLO & in diebus Messiae. Et quid est hujus reciprobatio? Quod scriptum est [Jerem. 23.] ECCE DIES VENIUNT, ET NON DICENT ULTRA, VIVIT DOMINUS QUI ASCENDERE FECIT FILIOS ISRAEL DE TERRA AEGYPTI, &c. Dixerunt sapientes, Non quod evellendum esset nomen Aegypti de loco suo, sed quod mirabilia quae fient in diebus Regnorum (i. quando Messias regna mundi destruet) erunt principale קרי, & Aegyptus erit טפלה, i. accessorium.

Ex his & similibus discat Lector cur Hieronymus Millenariis toties Judaismum exprobet; quod quidem adeo studiosè facit, ut hoc ei palmarium argumentum fuisse videatur quo dogma illud erroris convincat. Sed utut de dogmate sit, perperamne sentierint Patres isti, an secus; sanè cum Judæis sentire non semper in vitio ponendum est. Sin aliter, quin igitur Seculum futurum, Gehennam, Paradisum quoque explodimus? annon enim hæc cum Judæis communia tenemus Christiani? Numquid non nomina ipsa (sicut & Regni cælorum, & Diei Judicii) à Judæorum Magistris tradita accepimus? Ubi enim illa in Veteris Testamenti Canone comparent, quæ tamen apud Doctores Judæorum frequentissima sunt?

Præterea, quis jam, veterum Hebræorum dogmate de Millennio Diei Judicii audito, non statim se ad credendum sollicitari sentiat, Apostolum Petrum apud eisdem (nam utraque Epistola ad Judæos data est) de Die Judicii differentem, & continuo ad ejus mentionem subicientem, Hoc vos non lateat, Unum Diem apud Dominum esse sicut mille anni, Magistrorum ea de re traditionem confirmare voluisse? præsertim cum verba illa non ex Psalmo, (ut vulgò persuasum est) sed ex formulâ Judæorum de Die illo loquentium trita mutuata esse videantur. Imò ampliùs cogitabit, Nisi Christus Dominus & Apostoli ejus nomen DIEI JUDICII à Judæorum Magistris profectum, eadem cum ipsis mente frequentassent, quorsum id nè verbulo quidem uspiam indicarent? Annon enim periculi plena res est, imò proclivis ad fallendum via, errantium verba & phrasas inter docendum adhibere, absque omni cautione aut dissimilis sensus indicio?

His ita se habentibus, viris doctis & de hujusmodi in Theologia mysteriis judicare valentibus expendendum relinquo, annon hæc optima & facillima cum Judæis agendi ratio esset; non ut clarissimæ illæ de rebus in secundo & glorioio Christi adventu Prophetiæ ad primum torqueantur; verum ut illis persuadeatur, nullum alium Messiam ipsis expectandum esse qui ista omnia, mutatis nempe mutandis, (neque enim hic Christiano cum Judæis penitus, sed ad fidei Christianæ libellam sentiendum) impleret, quàm Jesum illum Nazarenum, quem Majores ipsorum crucifixerunt: id quod Apocalypsis passim tamque studiosè inculcat. *Ecce, (inquit statim ab initio) [JESUS CHRISTUS, primogenitus ille ex mortuis, qui dilexit nos & lavit nos à peccatis nostris per sanguinem suum] venit cum nubibus, & videbit eum omnis oculus, etiam qui eum transfixerunt, & plangent coram eo omnes tribus terræ. Ego sum A & Ω, principium & finis, dicit Dominus, qui est & qui erat & qui venturus est, &c. Item, dum passim Regnum illud augustum AGNO, id est occiso illi Jesu, tribuit: ut c. 7. de Turba palmifera, AGNUS pascete eos, &c. cap. 17. 14. AGNUS vincet illos, quia Dominus dominantium & Rex regum est; cap. 19. 7. Venerunt nuptiæ AGNI, &c. cap. 21. 9. de Nova Jerusalem, Ostendam tibi sponsam AGNI, &c. & ver. 23. Lucerna ejus est AGNUS, &c. Dum enim nos clarissimas illas de rebus in secundo Christi adventu Prophetias ad primum torqueamus, Judæi nos derisui habent, & in infidelitate sua magis obfirmantur.*

Hanc Judæos convertendi rationem, nisi nimium fallor, secutus est Apostolus Petrus, Act. 3. v. 19, &c. *Respicite, inquit, & convertimini, ad delenda peccata vestra; ut * veniant tempora Refrigerii à facie Domini; Et mittat prius prædicatum vobis JESUM CHRISTUM; Quem oportet quidem cælos capere ad tempora Restitutionis omnium, de quibus loquutus est Deus à seculo per os omnium sanctorum suorum Prophetarum.*

C L A V I S A P O C A L Y P T I C Æ.

Vobis Præcognitis ( quorum unum est Nominis, alterum Rei ) valere jussis, video quatuor in primis in toto hoc discursu Chronologico præsupponi quæ censuram merentur.

Primum, Quod Liber ille clausus & obsignatus sit hic ipse Liber Apocalypses. Hanc ego opinionem ut erroneam validissimis argumentis confodi in Notationibus meis præmialibus ad Visionem secundam. Demonstravi insuper per eundem illum librum nullum alium intelligi posse, quàm librum veterum Prophetarum clausum & obsignatum cæcis ac obstinatis Judæis, durante hac eorum reprobatione; juxta id quod prædictum erat ab Esaia cap. 29. v. 11. Et erit vobis visio omnium sicut verba libri signati.

Secundum, Quod nullæ fiant futurorum prædictiones ante refectionem Sigilli primi. At contrarium liquet ex ipso capite quarto, & quinto, quæ Sigillum primum antecedunt, & visiones continent non præparationis, sed prædictionis: multa enim in illis futura prædici constat ex Græcis codicibus; Requiem non habebunt; cum dederint; procident, & adorabunt; projicient coronas, &c. in quibus omnino servanda est temporis proprietas: In primis verò manifesta in futurum prophetia est in illis verbis Seniorum, Apoc. 5. 10. Regnabimus super terram.

Tertium, Quod Tubæ necessariam habeant connexionem cum Sigillo septimo. Sed hoc partim est impossibile, partim absurdum. Impossibile, Quia Sigillum sextum tempus est secundi adventus; uti apparet ex illis verbis, quoniam veniet dies magnus iræ ejus, Apoc. 6. 17. Græcè est ἡ ἡμέρα ἡ μεγάλη, ille dies, ille magnus, id est, notus ac celebris; hanc enim Emphasim habet articulus duplicatus: item ex prognosticis illius adventus, Matt. 24. 29. quæ hoc Sigillo repetuntur: At Tubæ saltem sex priores secundum Domini adventum præcedunt. Absurdum, Quia Turba palmifera gaudentium in fine capitis septimi incidit, ipso Synchronistâ consistente, in Tubam novissimam. Quomodo ergo cum ea connectuntur sex Tubæ priores? quæ tamen necesse est fieri, si necessariam habeant connexionem cum Sigillo septimo.

Quartum, Quod quadraginta duo illi menses sint tota duratio sex Tubarum. Atqui menses illi rejiciuntur in finem sextæ, Apoc. 11. 2. Quomodo ergo se extendunt usque ad initium Tubæ primæ? Quemadmodum Sigillorum non est turbanda series; sic nec Tubarum: Turbatur autem cum eventus posteriorum in priores transfunduntur. Et certum est menses illos propriè & secundum literam accipiendos esse de mensibus dierum, non annorum; ut qui propterea in dies resolvantur, Apoc. 11. 3. nemo autem facile dicet tempus sex priorum tubarum exhausti spatii quadraginta duorum mensium propriè dictorum.

His præmissis, venio ad ipsos Synchronismos: quorum primus est Mulieris in Eremita, Bestiæ septicipitis instauratæ, Atrii cum civitate sancta calcati, Testium interea prophetantium in sacco.

In quo primum noto, Bestiam diu fuisse Septicipitem antequam fuit instaurata; ac proinde non bene hac conjungi tanquam synchrona. Antecedens ex eo liquet, quod Joannes viderit hanc Bestiam e mari ascendentem sub capite suo septimo, Apoc. 13. 1. Nam sextum caput ipsius tempore exstabat, Apoc. 17. 10. Et grassata est Bestia aliquandiu sub septimo illo capite antequam plagam gladii accepit; ac aliquandiu sub accepta illa plaga genuit antequam ex ea revixit, quæ hic dicitur illius instauratio. Vide Apoc. 13. 3. Septiceps ergo fuit ante instauracionem.

Secundò, Instauratio Bestiæ initium quidem sumit cum initio peregrinationis Mulieris in deserto; ipsa tamen longius perduravit: nam post exspiratum tempus peregrinationis eremiticæ, Bestia instaurata non nisi certis gradibus & tractu temporis declinavit ad interitum, donec tandem totaliter ac finaliter exstirpata fuit ad effusionem Phialæ septimæ: Ortu itaque contemporant, non interitu.

Tertiò, Quadráginta duo menses non sunt tota duratio regni Bestiæ instauratæ, nedum Septicipitis; sed tantum regni sævissimi, & novissimæ persecutionis. Potestas enim faciendi menses quadráginta duos, Apoc. 13. 5. non est potestas regnandi simpliciter, sed potestas grassandi pro libitu, & persequendi sanctos: ut constat ex quibusdam Græcis exemplaribus, quæ legunt ωδευον, i. e. faciendi bellum.

Quartò, Atrium à Gentibus calcatum esse nescio unde hauserit Synchronista, cum nulla ejus mentio fiat Apoc. 11. 2. Dicitur quidem Atrium exterius Gentibus esse datum, sed datum esse ad conculcandum non dicitur. Alibi per Atrium illud exterius intelligit Atrium Israelis; quod atrium erat exterius respectu atrii sacerdotum, quod erat interius. Sed atrium Israelis comprehenditur sub illis verbis, Et adorantes in eo. Præter illud atrium Israelis, erat adhuc aliud atrium Gentium, in quod ingrediebantur immundi Judæi & Gentes alienigenæ: & hoc est Atrium exterius, quod nolit mensurari angelus, quia mirum est Atrium Gentium, & non Israelis.

Quintò, Prophetia Testium, licet initium sumat cum instauratione Bestiæ, non tamen cum eadem terminatur: nam Bestia duos illos Testes vincet & occidet, ac cadaveribus eorum aliquandiu insultabit, Apoc. 11. 7, 9. Imò nè quidem cum exitu Tuba sextæ præcisè terminantur tempora Bestiæ; sed potius cum initio & progressu septimæ, in quam incidit effusio Phialarum, ut suo loco demonstrabitur. Aliud enim est Urbem decimâ sui parte concuti, Apoc. 11. 13. aliud verò Bestiam finaliter interire: quamvis certus sim illum qualemcunque Urbis casum certissimum fore prænuncium ruina statim certis gradibus secutura sub Tuba septima; sub qua mysterium Dei de restitutione regni Israelis, & everfionis omnium regnorum adversantim, consummabitur, Apoc. 10. 7.

Secundus Synchronismus est Bestiæ Bicornis (quæ & Pseudopropheta) cum Bestia Septicipite (quæ & Imago Bestiæ dicitur.)

At Bestia Bicornis ortu posterior est Bestiâ Septicipite: unde hæc prior appellatur, Apoc. 13. 12. Et nata demum videtur circa instaurationem illius Bestiæ prioris; utpote quæ fecerit adorare bestiam primam, cujus curata est plaga, Apoc. 13. 12.

Deinde Bestiam Bicornem conditorem seu instauratorem esse Bestiæ Septicipitis, nescio unde colligat author. Illius certe nec conditor nec instaurator est. Non conditor, quia illa tempore prior est, hæc posterior. Non instaurator, quia opus illud disertè attribuitur Draconi, qui hoc nomine simul cum ipsa adoratur, Apocal. 13. 4. Bestia quidem Bicornis Bestiæ Septicipiti imaginem posuit, sed Bestiæ instauratæ, cujus curata erat plaga, Apoc. 13. 14.

Præterea, Bestiam Septicipitem nomine Imaginis bestiæ aliàs signari solitam, verum est Synchronistæ somnium: aliud enim Bestia est, aliud Imago bestiæ; & hæc passim ab illa distinguitur, Bestia & Imago ejus. At inquit, Nomine bestiæ, ubi cum bestia imago bestiæ componitur, intelligitur Bestia Bicornis. Fallitur, ut liquidd constat ex eo ipso loco quem citavit. Apoc. 14. 9. Si quis adoraverit bestiam & imaginem ejus; Bestiam intellige Septicipitem, quam bestia Bicornis fecit adorari, faciendo ei imaginem, quam adorari voluit, Apoc. 13. 15. sic ut adoratio cultus sit & honor conferendus bestiæ Septicipiti, non Bicorni. Opinionem tamen suam probare nititur tribus argumentis.

Tertiò, Quia ejusdem dicitur Imago bestiæ cujus est nomen numerûsque: At nomen numerûsque non alterius sunt quàm bestiæ Bicornis.

*Verùm hæc omnia inepta sunt & frivola. Imagini bestiæ adscribitur quod Pseudopropheta fecit, illius imaginis author, Metonymiâ effecti pro efficiente: quod apparet ex Regio exemplari Montani, in quo legitur, & ωοις, & facit (nempe Bestia Bicornis.) Quam lectionem sequuntur Andreas, Aretas, & alii.*

Interdum & Imago bestiæ comparet ubi Bestia adest cum Pseudopropheta: ut videre est Apoc. 19. 20. ubi hæc tria memorantur, Bestia, Pseudopropheta, Imago bestiæ.

Nomen numerûsque non Bestiæ est Bicornis, sed Bestiæ Septicipitis; quæ passim simpliciter & absolute Bestia nominatur: à qua ut Bicornis distingueretur, passim in sequentibus non Bestia sed Pseudopropheta nuncupatur; in quo conspirant omnes interpretes.

Denique, falsum est Bestiam Septicipitem restitutam totam se arbitrio Pseudopropheta tanquam supremi sui domini regendam permittere. Univerfa terra admirata est post bestiam septicipitem, Apoc. 13. 3. & omnes reprobi eam adorârunt, Apoc. 13. 8. At Pseudopropheta non se ipsum, sed Bestiam Septicipitem adorari voluit in imagine tanquam supremum dominum, & in omnibus illius causam promovit ut ipsius procurator & minister, Apoc. 13. 12. ut bene observavit Irenæus, quem statim laudavit Synchronista; hinc eam vocat Antichristi armigerum.

Tertius

Tertius Synchronismus, Meretricis magnæ seu Babylonis mysticæ cum Bestia eadem illa Septicipite Decemcornupeta, necessariâ indiget castigatione. Mulier enim meretrix est urbs Roma ab ipsis temporibus Joannis; ut apparet ex illis verbis, Mulier quam vidisti est civitas magna, quæ habet regnum super reges terræ, Apoc. 17, 18. At Bestia Septiceps nondum exstabat temporibus Joannis in septimo suo capite; ut liquidd constat ex istis, Quinque ceciderunt, unus est, & alius (septimus) nondum venit: Mulier ergo ista cum Bestia Septicipite quæ tali non συγγενίηται.

In primis suspecta mihi est lacinia ista, Decemcornupeta; quasi Bestia demum facta esset Decemcornupeta sub septimo, id est, novissimo suo capite. Verba Apocalypseos clarè & disertè docent decem illa cornua ipsis temporibus Joannis exstitisse; Decem cornua sunt decem reges, qui (in præsentia) regnum nondum acceperunt, quia nimirum Romano imperio nunc erant subiecti, sed potestatem tanquam reges accipient in futuro, Apoc. 17. 12. Certum est ex historiis, Imperium Romanum, dum hæc scriberet Joannes, ex decem regnis, sive regalibus provinciis, tanquam totidem partibus principalibus, constituisse, quas hoc modo enumerat ipse Strabo; Italia, Hispania, Gallia, Germania, Hungaria & Bulgaria, Græcia, Natolia sive Asia minor, Syria & Assyria, Ægyptus, Africa: de quibus consulendus Molinæus in Complemento prophetiarum. Quomodo autem singula quæ in Apocalypsi de decem cornibus dicuntur, decem illis regnis seu regionibus conveniant, explicatum dedi in annotationibus meis præmialibus ad Visionem sextam.

Quartus Synchronismus, Centum & quadraginta quatuor mille Virginum, capite 14. cum Meretrice Babylonica & Bestia, eodem vitio laborat quo duo antecedentes. Non enim in solidum contemporant hæc, sed tantummodo ex parte. Meretrix exstitit ipso tempore Joannis; quemadmodum & Bestia sub sexto suo capite. sed centum & quadraginta quatuor mille Virgines sunt recentioris originis. Incidunt quidem in tempora meretricis Babylonica, utpote quæ laudantur quia se illius complexibus non coinquinârunt; sed in tempora illius postrema, nempe quia Primitiæ sunt in restitutione, post finitam novissimam Bestiæ Septicipitis instauratæ persecutionem, Apoc. 14. 4. quando ipsa declinavit ad interitum, Apoc. 14. 8. Et quemadmodum recentioris sunt originis, sic longioris erunt durationis, ut quæ Meretricis & Bestiæ futurae sunt victrices, ac proinde illis sunt superviduræ.

Quintus Synchronismus, de generali omnium hætenus dictorum Synchronismo, præterquam quod superiorum errores recapitulet, prorsus est supervacaneus, cum non contineat nisi nudam repetitionem memoratorum: ideoque omitti potuisset, nisi numerum septenarium attingere voluisset author. Si duos sequentes Synchronismos similiter repetat, habebimus numerum octonarium.

Sextus Synchronismus, Atrii interioris calamo Dei mensurabilis & Prælii Draconis cum Michaelē, peccat, primò ἀνεπὶλογία verborum; nam Apocalypsis expressè non meminit Atrii mensurabilis; ideo malim retineri nomen expressum Templi mensurabilis: nec si expressè illius meminisset, ullum hæc aliud intelligendum foret atrium, quàm atrium Israelis, quod authori est atrium exterius. Suprà enim monui atrium Israelis Spiritui Apocalypstico esse interius; ut qui nomine exterioris atrii intelligat atrium Gentium. Deinde peccat confusione temporum: nam licet prælium Michaelis incidat in tempus Templi mensurabilis; Templum tamen non prius & citius mensurandum fuisse quàm commissum fuit prælium Draconis, nescio quo argumento confirmari possit. Non enim quia proximè antecedentia sunt contemporaneorum, idcirco est necesse utriusque originem æquè altum deducendam esse. Equidem fateor Apocalypsin nihil habere antiquius, quodve altius originem ducat Muliere puerperâ, cujus partui insidiatus est Draco; attamen ipse partus quem excipit prælium Draconis multo est recentior; cum partus sit novissimi temporis, in finali Judæorum conversione, ut postea demonstrabitur: quemadmodum etiam est recentior Templi commensuratio, quæ incidit in novissima tempora Tubæ sextæ. A qua exordium velle ducere Prophetiæ repetitæ, quæ nempe tempora Apocalyptica ab origine & quasi ab ovo relegat, est cum ratione velle insanire, ut mox pluribus ostendetur.

Septimus Synchronismus, qui & ultimus partis primæ, Septem phialarum & Bestiæ Babylonisque ad occasum vergentium, est verissimus & certissimus: ac proinde progredior ad Synchronismos partis secundæ, initio sumpto ab examine Præloquii quod illi præmittitur.

Quinimo illud prælium commissum & absolutum fuit in ictu oculi, ut postea demonstrabitur: At templi commensurationem non est facta in ictu oculi.

Striçturæ in partem Secundam.

IN Præloquio partis secundæ inepta est illa totius Apocalypseos in duas partes principales partitio: quarum prior sit Sigillorum, in iisque Tubarum; posterior τὸ Βιβλαεδίου seu Libri aperti, à versu octavo capituli decimi usque ad finem libri: quæ omnium errorum mihi videtur esse præcipuum fundamentum. Ineptam eam voco, & reprobendam puto ob sequentes rationes.

Primò, quia confundit finem unius prophetiæ cum principio alterius. Finis prophetiæ Sigillorum est in Turba illa palmifera gaudentium; utpote quæ ipso Synchronistâ teste incidat in Tubam novissimam. Nè verò vel tantillum dubitarem in Turba illa gaudentium esse finem Sigillorum, statim post eam sit mentio silentii in cælo facti quasi mediâ horâ: quâ profectò nihil aliud significatur, quàm Joannem à visionibus præcedentis prophetiæ ad medium horæ quiescere; ac proinde eam absolutam esse. Ergò hic finis unius prophetiæ principium alterius est in Tuba prima, quæ clangere cœpit statim post ignem ex cælo in terram missum, Apoc. 8.5. qui certè nullus est alius quàm de quo ipse Christus dixerat Luc. 12.49. Ignem veni mittere in terram, & quid volo nisi ut ardeat? Nè verò hîc etiam hæsitarem in Tuba prima initium esse novæ prophetiæ, præmittitur ei visio preparatoria post factum in cælo silentium: hîc itaque principium alterius prophetiæ, quæ tamen cum fine præcedentis hæc partitione confunditur.

Secundò, quia discerpit membra unius ejusdemque prophetiæ artissimè coherentia: nemo enim dubitat in Tubis recto ordine continuari unam eandemque prophetiam; sic ut ibi desinat quinta ubi incipit sexta, & sexta ibi desinat ubi incipit septima. At hæc partitio finem sextæ Tubæ divellit ab ipsius principio, & sic divellit, ut ex fine Tubæ sextæ constituat novam prophetiam, quæ altius assurgat quàm Tuba prima, imò originem suam trahat à Sigillo primo; principium enim sextæ Tubæ fuit in fine capituli noni, & illius finis incidit in principium capituli undecimi: quod tamen (ut dixi) fingitur esse initium novæ prophetiæ, quæ inchoatur à prima temporis Apocalyplici periodo.

Tertiò, quia commiscet duas ad minimum integras prophetias toto cælo à se invicem distinctas: Nam certum est prophetiam Libri aperti terminari cum fine Tubæ septimæ, quæ est novissima: Nec minus certum est prophetiam de Muliere parturiente esse novam prophetiam, ut quâ muliere nihil prius & antiquius habeat Apocalypsis, quemadmodum fatetur ipse Synchronista: Quomodo ergò hæc eadem est cum prophetia Libri aperti? Fuerunt qui sibi persuaderent Tubas prodire ex sinu Sigilli septimi; sed quando perveniunt ad caput duodecimum, coguntur agnoscere initium novæ prophetiæ. Invenias ergò aliquos qui totam Apocalypsin dividunt in duas partes principales: sed, qui posteriorem partem inchoat à principio capituli undecimi, invenias neminem.

Profectò Mulier parturiens cap. 12. est Synagoga Judaica, quæ patrem habet Jacobum, qui assimilatur Soli; matrem Rachaelem, quæ comparatur Lunæ; & descendit à duodecim Patriarchis, qui similes esse dicuntur duodecim stellis: gravida illa fuit ab ipsis diebus Joannis, & clamavit parturiens, & cruciabatur ut pareret, postquam templum eorum & urbs funditus à Romanis fuisse eversa; quemadmodum id ipsa Synagoga confitetur sub hac eadem Allegoria, Esa. 26. 17. Sicut quæ concepit, cum appropinquaverit ad partum, dolens clamat in doloribus suis; sic facti sumus à facie tua, Domine. Nondum tamen ipsa peperit, sed inopinatus aderit illius partus in finali Judæorum conversione; cujus mentio fit apud eundem prophetam, Es. 66. 7.8. Antequam parturiret, peperit; antequam veniret partus ejus, peperit masculinum.—quia parturivit & peperit Sion filios suos. Esse enim hunc partum ultimi temporis apparet ex Joanne, qui hunc partum immediatè docet præcedere fugam Mulieris in desertum, quæ incidit in novissima tempora Tubæ sextæ, Apoc. 12.6. cum Apoc. 11.3. collatis. Hinc Micheas de eodem partu verba faciens, eundem expresse refert ad tempora novissima, cap. 5.3. Propter hoc dabit eos, viz. Judæos in manibus hostium suorum, usque ad tempus in quo parturiens pariet; & reliquæ fratrum ejus revertentur ad filios Israel. Sic enim judico superiores prophetas interpretandos esse, ex collatione eorundem cum Apocalypsi, quæ Clavis est omnis Scripturæ prophetiæ. Atque hinc apparet dictam prophetiam de Muliere parturiente provehi ad caput & originem periodi Apocalyplici; ac proinde in ea inchoari novam prophetiam.

Redeo

Redeo ad rem ipsam. Præmissâ hâc partitione, affirmat Synchronista posteriorem Apocalypseos partem, quæ est τὸ Βιβλαγίδις seu Libri aperti, ab eodem temporis Apocalyp-tici principio exordiri unde prior illa quæ est Sigillorum, & illius tempora relegere à versu octavo capitis decimi usque ad finem. Verum & ista omnia pro libitu conficta & prorsus absurda sunt. Septem Sigilla fuerunt aperta; clangerunt quinque Tubæ, sexta clangorem inchoavit; descenditur ad illius finem, quem proximè excipit septima; & in fine Tubæ sextæ inchoabitur nova prophetia, quæ originem ducat ab ipso Sigillo primo.
Quis credet istis, nisi cui libitum est posteriora prioribus & summa imis miscere? Et quo-modo superiora tempora relegantur à versu octavo capitis decimi, cum ab illo versu usque ad finem illius capitis nulla omnino tempora legantur? Quæ verò tempora sequuntur in principio capitis undecimi, aut tempora sunt finis Tubæ sextæ, aut tempora illius nulla sunt. Attamen recapitulationem illam temporum putat Synchronista indicari transitione istâ, v. II. cap. 10. Oportet te iterum (παλιν) prophetare. Sed longè aliud est iterum prophetare; aliud iterum prophetare eadem, aut ab eodem exorsa temporis principio. Hæc duo multùm differunt. Ego hoc dictum fuisse existimo Joanni in typum rei hoc tempore eventuræ; quòd nempe Ecclesia nunc ante exitum Tubæ sextæ sit reformanda, & de novo prophetatura, tum contra, tum apud populos multos: quæ in re mibi assentientem habeo doctissimum Paræum. Joannes, inquit, non tam in sua, quàm in omnium præconum veritatis qui sub finem Tubæ sextæ futuri erant persona, Li-brum devorare, iterumque prophetare, jubetur. Et est sensus, oportere ut ubi Antichristus satîs sævierit, prophetia adversus eum restituatur.

Tandem relabitur Synchronista ad bimbrem suam partitionem, ednque confirmari opinatur ex eo, quòd hîc idem sit prophetiæ initium quod fuit prophetiæ de septem Ecclesiis, item de septem Sigillis: quas nemo dubitat esse novas prophetias. Sunt autem hæc initia visionis quidem de Septem Ecclesiis cap. 1. 10. Audivi vocem magnam à tergo tanquam tubæ dicentis. Prophetia autem Sigillorum cap. 4. 1. Et vox prima quam audiui, tanquam tubæ loquentis mecum. Denique Prophetiæ Βιβλαγίδις cap. 10. 8. Et vox quam audieram è cælo (scilicet tanquam tubæ loquentis) rursum loquebatur mecum. Verùm hæc posterior vox non eadem est cum prima illa, cum hoc nomine non indigitetur: nec dicitur audita fuisse instar tubæ loquentis; sed vox fuit proximè è cælo audita, vers. 4. ejusdem capitis. Audivi vocem de cælo dicentem mihi, Signa quæ locuta sunt septem tonitrua, & nē scribas ea. Eadem ergò vox quæ v. 4. veterat scribere, nunc v. 8. jubet devorare libellum & prophetare, ut bene monet Paræus. Nolo tamen hac de re acrius cum quoquam contendere. Dato itaque eandem esse vocem cum illa priore, non tamen inde sequetur, Quia aliàs alibi inchoavit novam prophetiam, ideo id quoque hoc loco fecisse. Certiora sunt indicia novæ prophetiæ, ut, quòd singule aut inchoentur novæ visione, aut terminentur mentione secundi adventûs: quæ indicia sunt rerum, non aucupia verborum.

Visio Ecclesiarum terminatur mentione novissimæ cænæ, Apoc. 3. 20. quæ cæna est se-cundi adventûs, Apoc. 19. 9. Visio Sigillorum terminatur mentione Turbæ palmiferae gaudentium, quæ incidit in novissimam Tubam visionis Tubarum, quam Paulus esse docet tubam secundi adventûs, 1 Cor. 15. 52. Visio Mulieris terminatur mentione Mellis, Apoc. 14. 15. quam ipse Christus interpretatur consummationem seculi, Matt. 13.
39. Visio Phialarum terminatur interitu Babylonis, Apoc. 16. 19. quæ incidit in secundum adventum, Apoc. 16. 14, 15. Eodem termino clauditur visio Meretricis, Apoc. 19. 2, 3, 4. Visio denique Christi vincentis clauditur mentione universalis Resurrectionis, & duplicis novæ Hierosolymæ. Septem itaque erant Visiones, tanquam totidem totius Apocalypseos partes principales. Sed hæc sufficiant ad Præloquium: venio ad ipsos Synchronismos partis secundæ.

Synchronismum primum appellat cardinem Synchronismorum; ego verò eundem voco cardinem vanitatum: aded nihil est in eo veri, nihil certi. Synchronismum esse vult Sigilli septimi quoad sex priores Tubas, cum Bestia Septicipite, Bicorni, cæterisque contemporantibus. Sed jam antea demonstravi sex Tubas non pertinere ad Sigillum septimum; demonstravi insuper Bestiam Bicornem Bestiæ Septicipiti & cæteris non in omnibus nec ad amussim contemporare. Nunc demonstrabo initium Bestiæ Septicipitis non contemporare cum initio Sigilli septimi, quod præcipuum est hujus Synchronismi fundamentum eversum ire. Bestia Septiceps est ipsissimum regnum Antichristi, sub novissimo, i. e. septimo, suo capite. Atqui Antichristus demum in lucem producit sub Tubæ sextæ, Apoc. 11. 7. vel (quod ego malim) sub Tubæ quinta, Apoc. 9. 11. ubi Angelum Abyssi eundem esse puto cum Bestia ascensura ex abyssu, Apoc. 11. 7. Et proculdubio est Antichristus, cum vocetur nomine Antichristi in Græca Ecclesia recepto, Ἀπολλών, vel υἱὸς ἀπωλείας, 2 Thessal. 2. 3. Hebraicè autem nomen habet ABADU,

ABADU, Servus ille κατ' ἐξοχὴν sic dictus, i.e. Servus servorum. Sic enim Hebræus & Syrus legunt. Quod si quis malit legere cum correctioribus exemplaribus Græcis Abbadon, hoc idem significat quod Papa-Dominus: quam lectionem etiam retinuit vulgatus Latinus. Rectius itaque Bestia Septiceps contemporabit cum Tuba quinta. Sigillum quintum tempus est persecutionis Sanctorum, ut certum est ex illis verbis, Donec compleantur conservi eorum—qui interficiendi sunt sicut & illi, Apoc. 6. 11. Atqui hoc proprium munus est Bestiæ: ipsa itaque rectius dicetur contemporare cum Sigillo quinto.

Initium septimi Sigilli est in obsignatione Cætus illius virginalis cap. 7. ipso Synchronista confitente: atqui obsignatio illa sequitur illustrem Domini adventum, qui describitur Sigillo sexto, & in quem incidit Bestiæ interitus, ut apparet ex collatione Apoc. 6. 15, 16, 17. cum Apoc. 16. 14, 15, 16. Impossibile itaque est Bestiam Septicipitem contemporare cum initio Sigilli septimi.

At (inquit ille) Cætus illius obsignationem supra ostendi contemporare ad amissum cum Bestia Septicipite, parte primâ, Synchronismo quarto. Respondeo; Contrarium liquet ex nostra ad eundem censura. Quod porro existimet obsignationem illam factam esse, nè grassantibus in orbe Tubarum calamitatibus electi Dei servi extinguerentur; gratis fingitur sine ullo fundamento: obsignationem illam dico factam esse ad novas nuptias Agni in illustri Domini adventu celebrandas, ut manifestum ex hujusce loci collatione cum 4. Esdræ 2. 38. Videte numerum signatorum in convivio Domini; ad quem hic certus est respectus. Scio Librum istum esse Apocryphum; sed potest liber Apocryphus interdum continere quasdam antiquas & veras narrationes.

Denique falsum est, obsignationem illâ turbari non interrompendam Sigillorum seriem: ipse enim Synchronista fatetur illam pertinere ad finem Sigilli sexti, sive ad initium septimi; & merito, quia expresse dicitur Apoc. 7. 1. Μετὰ ταῦτα, id est, post hæc nempe, quæ acciderunt Sigillo sexto. Ego judico obsignationem virginum & Turbam palmiferam gaudentium esse totum mysterium Sigilli septimi, quod demum narratur apertum fuisse initio cap. 8. cùm capite septimo præmissum sit illius mysterium; quemadmodum primum Væ demum narratur præterisse post præmissam illius calamitatem, Apoc. 9. 12.

Sic ergo corrui omnium sequentium Synchronismorum fundamentum, eorum nempe qui ex primo isto deducuntur: quos tamen etiam examinabo, nè quis queratur aliquid à me præteritum esse aut neglectum.

Synchronismum secundum ait esse contemporantium Atrii interioris & Prælii Draconis & Michaelis de puerperio cum sex primis Sigillis. Atqui dimensuratio Templi (sic enim loqui malim, quia Textus expresse illius meminit) tempore prior est prælio Draconis, ut visum supra Synchronismo sexto, parte primâ; & neutrum contemporat cum sex primis Sigillis. Non dimensuratio Templi; quia jubetur Joannes Templum metiri sub finem Tubæ sextæ, Apoc. 11. 1. Jam verò finem Tubæ sextæ contemporare cum Sigillo primo quis dixerit? Non Prælium Draconis; quia illud commissum & absolutum fuit brevissimo temporis spatio, puta in momento, ictu oculi. Nam statim fuit commissum post raptum partum, & absolutum fuit ante fugam Mulieris in desertum; Apoc. 12. 13, 14. At Mulier statim & immediatè post raptum partum fugere debuit in desertum, Apoc. 12. 5, 6. Itaq; tantummodo momento perduravit. Quomodo ergo potuit contemporare cum sex primis Sigillis?

Accedo ad Synchronismum tertium, Phialarum cum Tuba sexta. Dicendum erat, ni fallor, cum initio Tubæ septimæ: nam Tuba septima est Tuba novissima; septem autem Phialæ continent novissimas calamitates, Apoc. 15. 1. pertinent ergo ad Tubam novissimam: Tuba etiam septima est Tuba consummationis, quia sub ea consummabitur mysterium Dei, Apoc. 10. 7. septem autem Phialæ sunt plagæ consummationis, utpote in quibus consummetur ira Dei, Apoc. 15. 1. pertinent ergo ad Tubam septimam. Sed hæc parùm ad rem.

Regnum verò Bestiæ sub sextâ Tuba labefactari cœpisse, nescio unde eruat Synchronista. Finita quidem tunc fuit potestas illa quadraginta duorum mensium; sed illa non fuit simplex potestas dominandi, sed dominandi pro libitu: nec simplex fuit potestas vincendi sanctos, sed persecutionis novissimæ; ut supra à nobis fuit ostensum.

Synchronismum quartum, Mille annorum ligati Draconis, seu Satanæ, cum Tuba septima, seu excidio Bestiæ, non possum non laudare, cùm sit verissimus & certissimus. Argumenta tamen validiora & magis cogentia ad illius confirmationem proferri desiderarem. Certè Draco etiam fuit ligatus toto tempore parturitionis Mulieris, cùm toto illo tempore steterit ante Mulierem, ut, cùm peperisset, filium ejus devoraret, Apoc. 12. 4. neque ligatus fuit post partum ejus; cùm ab illo tempore è cælo fuerit projectus, jeſus, & graſſatus fuerit in terra & mari, Apoc. 12. 12. ſic ut Mulierem ſit perſecutus, & ſemen ejus, Muliere latitante in deſerto, Apoc. 12. 16, 17. ac conſpiraverit ad ſanctorum internecionem cum beſtia maris, dando ei omnem ſuam poteſtatem; unde ſimul cum ipſo ſpatio quadraginta duorum menſium & ultra adoratur, Apoc. 12. 18. & 13. 3, 4. Non ita diu poſt finitos illos menſes Draco cum Beſtia & Pſeudopropheta ac Regibus totius terræ congregatur in prælium, Apoc. 16. 14. tandem in illo prælio Beſtia & Pſeudopropheta viſi mittuntur in ſtagnum ignis, Apoc. 19. 20. & Draco ligatur in Abyſſo mille annis, Apoc. 20. 2, 3. Mille itaque anni ligationis Satane inchoandi ſunt ab excidio Beſtiæ.

Ligatur Satanas, nè ſeduceret ampliùs gentes, Apoc. 20. 3. Nempe eà ſeductione cujus ſtatim facta erat mentio, quam proximè ſecutum eſt Beſtiæ excidium, Apoc. 19. 20. Ergò Ligatio inchoanda eſt à Beſtiæ excidio. Ligatur Satanas, ut per mille annos regnent illi qui Beſtiam adorare noluerint, Apoc. 20. 4. Inchoanda itaque Ligatio ab excidio Beſtiæ: nam uſque ad excidium ipſius ſemper fuerunt aliqui qui Beſtiam noluerint adorare & ideo fuerunt occiſi. Ligatur denique Satanas, ut poſt mille annos illos ſolvatur, & conjiciatur in ſtagnum ignis, in quem jam antea conjeſti erant Beſtia & Pſeudopropheta, Apoc. 20. 10. Sic enim legendum eſſe patet, non tantum ex Græcis exemplaribus, ſed etiam ex interpretibus Hebræo & Syro. Ergò ligatus fuit poſt illorum excidium, quod incidit in Tubam noviffimam.

Sequitur Synchroniſmus quintus, Mille annorum regni Chriſti auguſti & ſeptimæ Tubæ ſeu intervalli ab excidio Beſtiæ: quem non ſolum laudo, ſed ſimul etiam approbo ſerè omnia & ſingula quæ ad illius confirmationem dicuntur: nullus enim dubito quin ad ſingulare illud & auguſtum Chriſti regnum pertinent quæ dicuntur Apoc. 11. 15, 16, 17. & Apoc. 19. 6, 16. & in illo regno proculdubio eſt conſummatio myſterii Dei per prophetas evangelizati, quam ſub ſeptimæ tubæ clangorem Angelus Apoc. 10. futuram prædixerat; quando nec Beſtiæ menſes, nec Teſtium lugentium dies, neque omnino aliquid de periodo temporis, temporum & dimidii temporis ſupererit ampliùs, planè juxta quod Danieli prædictum fuit c. 7. v. 25, 26, 27. & c. 12. v. 7.

De

N secundo Christi Adventu videtur considerandus esse longissimus quidem temporis tractus, quemadmodum in Adventu ejus primo: ut probari posse videtur ex sequentibus Sacrae Scripturae testimoniis.

Primò, ex Esaïæ 34. 8. & 63. 4. ubi tempus secundi adventus appellatur dies ultionis Domini, annus retributionum judicii Sion. Et certum est in eo respectum haberi ad veteris Testamenti Jubilæum. Tempus itaque erit ad minimum unius anni: alioqui Synecdoche partis esset de nihilo. Idem Propheta, Esa. 65. 17. meminit novi cæli & novæ terræ, quæ in secundum Domini adventum rejiciuntur, 2 Pet. 3. 13. & in illis necessario considerandus est longissimus quidem temporis tractus, propter illud quod apud Prophetam sequitur, Non erit ibi puer infans aut senex qui non impleat dies suos: nam puer infans centum annorum morietur, & peccator centum annorum maledictus erit.

Secundò, ex Luc. 17. 22. Venient dies quando desideretis videre unum dierum, sive unum ex diebus, Filii hominis, & non videbitis. Quod intelligendum esse de diebus secundi adventus rectè statuit glossa ordinaria ex Beda. Idem apparet ex duobus. Primò, quia dies illi intelliguntur quos conabuntur ostendere Pseudoprophetae dicendo, Ecce hic, Ecce illic. vers. 23. Secundò, quia dies illi intelliguntur qui gloriosi futuri sunt & illustres, sicut fulgur cornescans de sub cælo, v. 24. qui dies sunt, non præteriti adventus primi, sed futuri adventus secundi. Profecò frustra discipuli desiderarent dies præteritos, qui certi erant de futuris, quos præ foribus semper adesse putabant, & cervicibus suis imminere.

Tertiò, ex Act. 3. 20, 21. ubi tempus secundi adventus appellatur in plurali tempora refrigerii, & tempora restitutionis omnium, de quibus locuti sunt omnes prophetae. Velle autem id accipere de temporibus æternis, est cum ratione velle insanire; cum de talibus temporibus Prophetae non sint locuti, ut constat liquidò ex vers. 22, 23. Ipsum audietis juxta omnia quæcunque locutus fuerit vobis: Et omnis anima quæ non audiverit illum, exterminabitur de plebe: quæ prophetia est de finali Judeorum conversione.

Quartò, ex Act. 15. 16, 17. ubi docetur, Tabernaculum David, sive regnum Israël, restituendum esse in Domini reditu, & omnes Gentes esse ad illud aggregandas; quod certè brevi temporis spatio non perficietur: esse enim ibi sermonem de secundo Domini reditu apparet potissimum ex duobus argumentis. Primò, quia reditus ille futurus dicitur post primam vocationem Gentium: Visitavit primum sumere populum ex Gentibus; sicut scriptum est, Postea revertar. Item, Ut requirant eum cætera Gentes, super quas invocatum est nomen meum; nempe jam antea in prima Gentium vocatione, quam secutura est vocatio universalis. Secundò, quia ipse Dominus promissam regni Israël restitutionem passim rejicit in tempora secundi adventus, ut videre est, Matt. 10. 23. & 23, 37, 38. Lucæ 21. 28, 31. Act. 1. 6, 7.

Quintò, ex Rom. 11. 26, 27. Omnis Israel salvus fiet, sicut scriptum est, Veniet Redemptor ex Sion : quibus verbis docetur novissimam Judæorum salutem, sive redemptionem, incidere in secundum Domini adventum. Atqui eadem illa Scriptura in eodem illo Domini adventu, versu statim sequenti, mentionem facit pangendi novi fœderis cum illis quod ad minimum duraturum est per tres generationes. Esa. 59. 21. Hoc fœdus meum cum eis ; Verbum & Spiritus non recedat de ore tuo, & de ore seminis tui, & de ore seminis seminis tui, à modò usque in sempiternum.

Sextò, ex Matt. 12. 32. ubi docetur Messia seculum esse duplex, unum præsens, alterum futurum ; & in utrumque incidere remissionem peccatorum propriè dictam. Non remittetur ei neque in hoc seculo, neque in futuro. Neque enim, ut rectè Augustinus, lib. 21. De civ. Dei, cap. 24. de quibusdam veraciter diceretur, quòd non iis remittatur neque in hoc seculo, neque in futuro, nisi essent quibus, etsi non in isto, tamen remittetur in futuro : ubi vim faciunt verba ista, etsi non in isto, nè quis id de sola remissionis patefactione interpretetur.

Septimò, ex 2 Pet. 3. 8. ubi de die Judicii loquens & perditione impiorum hominum, ait, quòd unus Dies apud Dominum sicut mille anni : nè quis putaret tempus secundi adventus nimis breve esse ad judicandum & perdendum impios, eò quòd in Scripturis vocetur unus dies. Et sic verba interpretatus est Augustinus, vel quisquis ille author est Sermonum de Sanctis, qui Augustino attribuuntur. Nec immeritò. Stultum enim est cogitare velle unum diem naturalem, vel artificialem, esse apud Deum sicut mille annos. Ad tempus verò quod antecessurum est Judicium pertinent verba sequentia, Et mille anni sicut dies unus : nè quis putaret tempus Judicii nimis diu tardari, si per mille annos & plures differatur : Deus enim tempus mille annorum unum diem vocat in Scripturis. His postremis verbis Propheta quoque usus est, Psal. 90. 4. de toto vitæ nostræ tempore : quæ licet per mille annos duraret, attamen apud Deum esset brevissima, qui tempus mille annorum vocat unum diem.

Octavò, ex Heb. 3. 7, 8, 9. ubi docet, Diem terminatum esse apud Davidem in voce Hodie, qui futurus sit populo Dei novus sabbatismus ; non quidem æternus, sed temporalis ; utpote in quem solum quadret illa commonefactio Davidis, Hodie si vocem ejus audieritis, nolite obdurare corda vestra.

Nonò, ex fine Apoc. 19. collato cum principio Apoc. 20. Nam in fine Apoc. 19. describitur secundus Domini adventus, ut manifestum est ex tribus. Primò, ex illis, Reget eas in virga ferrea : quod Joannes futurum prædixit in secundo adventu, Apoc. 2. 27. Secundo, ex istis, Reges terræ & exercitus eorum congregatos ad faciendum prælium : quod prælium est faciendum in secundo Domini adventu ; utpote futurum in die illo magno omnipotentis Dei, ad quem venturus est Dominus sicut fur, Apoc. 16. 14, 15. Denique ex ultimis illis verbis, Vivi missi sunt hi duo in stagnum ignis : quibus indicatur Bestia Romana, id est, ipsius Antichristi, interitus ; quem ipse Paulus rejicit in secundum Domini adventum, 2 Thess. 2. 8. ubi illud quoque notandum, Et spiritu oris sui interficiet impium : quod prorsus idem est cum isto, & cæteri occisi sunt in gladio oris sui, Apoc. 19. 21. Atqui certissimum est in illo adventu numerandos esse mille istos annos pacis & regni sanctorum qui sequuntur, Apoc. 20. 4.

Denique, ex Apoc. 20. 8, 9. collato cum Ezech. 39. 9, 13. ubi rejicit Joannes in secundum Domini adventum Gogi & Magogi interitum ; post quem tamen Ezechiel docet numerandos esse ad minimum septem annos, & totidem menses certissimè finiendos. Ergò secundus Domini adventus complectitur longissimum aliquem temporis tractum. Tale quid * Beza suspicatus est de secundo Domini adventu, qui eundem putat inchoatum fuisse à promulgato inter Gentes Evangelio : at nos enim rectius putamus inchoandum ab interitu Antichristi, sive excidio Bestie.

DANIELIS LAWENI
STRICTURAS
CLAVEM APOCALYPTICAM.

ON videtur, Clarissime Domine, A. Lawenus vester aut meum in Clave Apocalyptica propositum, aut quibus eam subnixam esse volui fundamentis, satis attendisse: alioquin non putasset argumentis ex interpretationum pharetra depromptis me cessurum. Quorsum enim, obsecro, me istiusmodi telis oppugnare satageret, qui ipse interpretationem nullam præsuppono? imò nec istiusmodi sive præjudiciis sive hypothesebus ullis in hoc negotio locum esse debere contendo. Sed hæc ejus παραφραση nimis in præsentia omisâ, (qua de aliâs passim erit monendi occasio) accedo ad Censuram ipsam, & primò Generalem.

Ad Censuram Generalem.

Primò, quòd Liber ille clausus & obsignatus sit ipse Liber Apocalypseus. Miror unde hoc colligat. Num ex istis precatiunculæ meæ verbis, Qui solus dignus eras Librum hunc accipere & aperire? At allusio esse potuit, non sententiæ argumentum: Certè hypothesis non fuit. Rem ipsam quod attinet, ego Librum illum obsignatum, sigillorum librum esse puto, Apocalypseus non puto. Sed esto me putasse; non tamen huic fundamento quidquam Synchronismorum meorum superstruxi. Nec certè si Apocalypsis nihil aliud sit quàm compendium quoddam & comportatio veterum prophetiarum quæ adhuc implendæ post Christi adventum supererant, (quæ ipsius Laweni sententia est) adeò multum intererit an quis Librum obsignatum, cum eo, Librum veterum Prophetarum esse dicat, an, cum aliis, Librum Apocalypseus. Sed hanc opinionem in notationibus suis procæmialibus in Apocalypsin ut erroneam validissimis argumentis se confodisse refert: mihi verò, qui legerim, nè verisimilibus quidem id fecisse videtur. Judicet alius.

Secundò, ait à me præsupponi, nullas fieri futurorum prædictiones ante reversionem Sigilli primi. Ego verò hoc nusquam præsuppono, imò contrarium potius præ se ferunt verba mea in * præloquio Partis secundæ, lin. 8. Quid, quòd ibidem nè septem quidem Ecclesiarum Visionem negavi futurorum prophetiam esse, sed in medio reliqui, nec quid de eo me interponere velle dixi?

Sed (ut sententiam meam aperiam) ita quidem sentio; Saltem nihil esse prophetiæ, in capitibus istis quarto & quinto Sigillorum reversione antiquius, quòdve altiùs ratione rei gerendæ ascendat: & hoc quidem ad institutum meum satis erat; nec id puto Dominum Lawenum negaturum. Addo ampliùs, Nec esse Visionem ibidem exhibitam rei futuræ prophetiam, sed prophetiæ exhibendæ apparatus. Utut enim in Cantico Presbyterorum & Animalium inseratur aliquid de re futura; Visionem tamen ipsam Prophetiam esse de futuris, id verò non magis indè sequi, quàm eandem esse historiam de præteritis, ex eo quòd in eodem Cantico verba illa, Occisus es & redemisti nos Deo per sanguinem tuum, de præterito loquantur: non enim si quid in visione

visione aliqua incidenter dicatur aut cantetur, statim illud τὸ πρᾶγμα visionis est. Sed in quarto capite ( inquit ) futura prædicuntur, quia verba illa, Dederint, proci- dent, & adorabunt, &c. sint futuri temporis, Græcè δώσουσι, προσήνται, προσκυνήσουσι. Respondeo, Futurum in Hebraismo ( ejus autem notione passim utitur Apostolus ) significare actum solitum vel debitum; ita ut hoc loco Joannes referat non quidem quid tum factum sit, ( ut à nonnullis exponitur ) sed quid Animalibus & Presbyteris istis ex officio pro re nata faciendum esset, quodque ipse postmodum in sequela Visionum semel atque iterum ab iisdem factum vidit.

Tertiò, ait me præsupponere Septem Tubas esse Visum Sigilli septimi: hoc enim vult, cum ait me præsupponere Tubas necessariam habere connexionem cum Sigillo septimo. Et hoc quidem verissimè dixit, me præsupponere. Præsuppono autem, & quidni præsupponerem? Annon Grammaticum contextus sensum, quo vix alius est in Apocalypsi de rerum narratarum serie clarior & luculentior, necesse fuit præsupponi? Ad præcedentium Sigillorum omnium apertionem Visum aliquod subjicitur rem sigillo significatam exhibens. Ad apertionem primi, Aspexi, inquit, & ecce equus albus, &c. Ad apertionem secundi, Prodiit Equus rufus, &c. Ad apertionem tertii, Aspexi, inquit, & ecce Equus niger, &c. & sic in quarto, quinto, & sexto. Quis igitur pari ratione non credat, quod Septimi sigilli resignationi subjicitur, esse ejus Sigilli Visum? Quomodo absurdum non est affirmare, solius Sigilli septimi aut Visum nullum esse, aut ejus descriptionem Sigilli apertioni præmitti, præter omnium Sigillorum, imò Tubarum & Phialarum, morem? Cum aperuisset, inquit, Sigillum septimum, factum est silentium in cælo quasi per semihoram: & vidi septem Angelos stantes in conspectu Dei, & data sunt illis septem Tubæ. Aut hic clarum est Rem Sigilli septimi describi; aut omnino fatendum nihil esse in hoc Libro de ordine certi, sed quidvis cuivis pro libitu præponendum & postponendum, nullâ sensus Grammatici ratione habitâ. Hoc viderunt ex veteribus Andreas & Aretas; ex Pontificiis Lyranus, Aureolus, Ribera, Alcazar, Viega, Cornelius à Lapide; ex nostris Junius, Graferus, Brightmannus, Napierus, Reverendissimus Episcopus Aberdonensis, Clarissimus Alstedius: Qui omnes pro concessio habent, Rem seu Visum Sigilli septimi esse mysterium Tubarum. Nec crediderim quemquam interpretum id unquam negaturum fuisse, nisi in Visionum dispositione magis ad apparentem nescio quam interpretationis concinnitatem, quàm ad naturalem & simplicem Textus sacri mentem, respexissent.

At hæc dispositio, inquit, absurda est, ex ipsius Synchronistæ hypothese; utpote cui Turba Palmifera ( cap. 7. ) incidat in Tubam novissimam; quomodo ergo cum ea connectuntur sex Tubæ priores? quod tamen necesse est fieri, si, &c. At verò Synchronista nusquam connectit Turbam palmiferam cum prioribus sex Tubis. Fallitur Lawenus si me Cætum centum & quadraginta quatuor mille obsignatorum, & Turbam palmiferam innumerabilium gaudentium, pro iisdem habere putat. Diverfa sunt & diversorum temporum. Quæ quidem junctim totum Sigilli septimi, id est Tubarum, intervallum pervadunt: seorsim verò Cætus obsignatorum cum sex primis Tubis, Turba palmifera cum Tuba septima συνεχρονίζει. Inspice sodes Schematismum meum.

At impossibilis est. Quid ita verò? Quia Sigillum sextum Tempus est secundi adventus. At Tubæ saltem sex priores præcedunt adventum Christi. Hoc scilicet est ( quod dixi ) Visionum ordinationem ex privata interpretatione suspendere: Ego verò pernego Sigillum sextum esse Tempus secundi adventus. Neque hujusmodi interpretamentum ex verbis illis * ὅτι ἡλθεν ἡ ἡμέρα ἡ μεγάλη τῆς ὀργῆς αὐτοῦ, aut ex prognosticis * Apocal. 6. 17. illis Matth. 24. 29. exculpi potest: non ex appellatione Diei magnæ; eam enim integram habes Zeph. 1. 14. de clade Judææ usurpatam, ἡ ἡμέρα Κυρίου ἡ μεγάλη, & vers. 15. ἡμέρα ὀργῆς ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνη. Alibi quoque similis est apud Prophetas de Judicii particularibus diei Domini usurpatio: ut Isa. 13. 13. Dies iræ furoris Domini, de onere Babylonis; Jer. 46. 10. de clade Egyptiorum, Dies ille Domini Dei exercituum, dies ultionis. Quod verò hic urget de geminato articulo ἡ ἡμέρα ἡ μεγάλη, nullius est ponderis; fit enim ex consuetudine linguæ cum adjectivum postponitur: Diem humanum dixit pro Judicium humanum. 1 Cor. 4. 3. quod Græci respuunt. Nec incertâ hujus Sigilli descriptione omnino quicquam est quod non aliis, citra magnum illum Universalis Judicii diem, rerum conversionibus & ruinis describendis à Prophetis jamdudum adhibitum fuerit. Communes sunt hæ magnarum calamitatum & horridiorum cladum imagines Orienti usitatæ, ut nostris quoque Poetis sua sunt schemata, suæ picturæ. Videamus de singulis.

Ecce, (inquit c. 6. v. 12.) Terræ motus magnus factus est, Græcè σεισμός, id est, Cæli terræque motus. Terræ motus autem hujusmodi (teste Apostolo Heb. 12. de loco Haggæi, c. 2. v. 6, 7. Adhuc semel, & ego commovebo cælum & terram) denotat τῶν σαλευομένων τῶν μετάδεσιν, mutationem eorum quæ commoventur. Idem nos de hoc Cæli terræque motu in Apocalypsi putemus. Sequitur, Et Sol factus est niger ut saccus cilicinus, & Luna facta est ut sanguis, id est, per ellipsin adjectivi, rubicunda ut sanguis. Periphrasis autem est deliquii Luminarium, ubi Sol ater apparere soleat, Luna verò rubicunda: cui planè geminum est illud Isa. c. 13. v. 10. de vindicta Babylonis, Obscurabitur sol in exortu suo, & Luna non splendere faciet Lumen suum; LXX. καὶ ἡ σελήνη ἐδώσει φῶς αὐτῆς, ut Matth. 24. 29. Adde Ezech. 32. 7. de clade Pharaonis, Et operiam cælos, & nigrescere faciam stellas ejus; Solem nube tegam, & Luna non dabit lumen suum, &c. Item Joel. 2. 10. de horrenda Judææ vastatione ab exercitu locustarum Aquilonarium, A facie ejus, inquit, contremuit terra, moti sunt cæli: Sol & Luna obtenebrati sunt, & stellæ retraxerunt splendorem suum. Sed ohe! jam sat est. Vide tamen Jer. 4. 23, 24, &c. de excidio Judææ; ubi omnia in antiquum Chaos rediisse putares.

Verf. 13, 14. Et stellæ cæli ceciderunt in terram, sicut ficus abjicit grossos suos cum vento magno concutitur. Et cælum abscessit sicut liber convolutus; vel Cælum evanuit, &c. id est, Stellæ cæli disparuere, quemadmodum literæ evanescunt libro (veterum more) convuluto. Ellipsis enim est utrobique prioris substantivi Hebraismo familiaris, ut Deut. 20. 19. 2 Reg. 18. 31. & alibi passim: ita ut hoc de cæli disparitione, & illud de stellarum casu, mutuò sese explicent. Integer autem locus desumptus est ex Is. 34. 4. ubi eadem planè imagine, sed inverso ordine, depingit Spiritus sanctus cladem Idumææ: Convolutentur, inquit, sicut liber, cæli, & totus exercitus eorum (id est, stellæ) decidet ut folium è vite, & ut deciduus grossulus è ficu. Cujus sententiam aliquantò clariorem reddere voluit Spiritus Apocalypticus duplici verborum additamento; illinc τὰ ἀπεχωρίσθη, hinc ἀπὸ μεγάλου αἰέμου σειομένη. Porro de eadem clade Edomitica haud mitioribus quàm Isaias circumstantiis agunt Obadias; Jer. c. 49. à verf. 7. ad 22; Ezech. c. 35. per tot. & 25. verf. 12. Quod idcirco moneo, nè quis hunc quoque locum, cum mysticorum sensuum admiratoribus, ad magnum illum Universalis Judicii diem detorqueat.

Omnes montes & insulæ è suis locis emotæ sunt; scilicet, ut in terræ motibus fieri nonnunquam contigit. De montibus autem similem imaginem vide Jer. 4. 24. Ezek. 38. 20.

Restant verf. 15, & 16. Reges terræ & magnates, &c. absconderunt se in speluncis & petris montium; dixeruntque montibus & petris, Cadite super nos, & abscondite nos à facie sedentis super thronum, & ab ira Agni. Foeda imago est quâ fugientium & latitantium, quâ præ rerum suarum desperatione vitæ tadentium: cui similem habes de clade Hierosolymorum Luc. 23. 30. item Hof. 10. 8. de clade Samariæ ejusque idolorum; sed integram Isa. 2. 18, 19. Hæc autem paulò fusiùs ostendere visum fuit, nè Dominus Lawenus me absq; ratione negasse putaret Sigillum sextum esse Tempus secundi adventûs: cujus verò temporis, & cujusmodi rerum conversionibus & ruinis applicandum sit, non est hîc dicendi locus. Pergo ad cætera.

Quartò, Hypothesibus meis annumerat, quòd Quadraginta duo illi menses sint tota duratio sex Tubarum. At hæc Hypothesis non est, sed conclusio ex præmissis Synchronismis necessariò sequens. At (inquit) menses isti rejiciuntur in finem sextæ Tubæ, Apoc. 11. 2. Nego: non est caput undecimum pars visionis Tubæ sextæ, sed nova prophetia, ut postea videbitur. Sed certum est (inquit) Menses illos propriè & secundum literam accipiendos esse de mensibus dierum, non annorum; proindeque istis temporum angustiis sex Tubarum intervallum includi non posse. Magnum verò postulatum: miror illud doctissimo viro certum esse, quod à plerisque nostrorum non modò negari, sed & magno studio impugnari noverit. Hoccine autem pro concessio sumendum fuit? Mihi contrà inter alia illud argumento est, Menses istos secundum literam accipi non posse, quòd Bestia, cujus duratio sint, Cœtui centum quadraginta quatuor mille obsignatorum, Cœtus autem obsignatorum sex primis Tubis contemporet; Tubarum verò res tantillo tempore decurri non posse. Adhæc, si tres isti dies & dimidium mortis Testium, quæ pars sunt dierum 1260, seu mensium 42, literaliter accipi nequeant; tum neq; dies 1260, seu menses 42, sic accipi debent. At tres istos dies & dimidium diei literaliter accipi non posse, patet ex iis quæ tunc gerenda prædicuntur. Quis enim credat tridui & dimidii diei spatium, aut famæ necis Testium per orbem disseminandæ, aut legatis cum muneribus ultro citroque inter gentes mittendis, sufficere? imò nè parandis quidem muneribus sufficeret. Adde quòd dimidium diei, seu horæ duodecim, si literaliter accipias, actionibus hujusmodi determinandis prorsus ineptum sit: non enim ad horas istiusmodi res observari solent, quinimo ad menses, saltem ad dies integros.

Responsio ad Censuram specialem, &amp; primò,

Ad Censuram Synchronismi I.

AD primum Synchronismum, Mulieris in Eremita agentis, Bestiæ Septicipitis instaurata, Atrii calcati, & Testium Prophetarum in sacco, primum illud notat, Bestiam diu fuisse Septicipitem antequam fuit instaurata, ac proinde non bene hic conjungi tanquam Synchrona. Putat scilicet me nomine Bestiæ Septicipitis Bestiam sub novissimo tantum seu septimo capite agentem intellexisse. In quo fallitur. Ego enim Bestiam Septicipitem vocavi διαχρονικῶς Bestiam illam primò descriptam, quocunque statu; quia cum tot capitibus eam Spiritus ubique, etiam sub sexto capite, videndam exhibuerit. Quamvis enim non simul, sed ordine & deinceps, Capita vices suas egissent, tamen Bestia ipsa una eademque censetur omni statu. Addidi autem [instauratam], ut novissimum ejus statum designem; nè quis me cum Bestia simpliciter, & omni statu, Synchronismum hic astruere velle existimet, sed tantum novissimo. Sed nè sic quidem in tuto res est. Nam inquit Bestiam etiam aliquandiu sub septimo illo & novissimo capite grassatam esse antequam plagam gladii accepit, ex eaque denuo revixit, Ad hæc, Menses quadraginta duos nec esse totam durationem regni Bestiæ instaurata, sed severissimæ & novissimæ persecutionis. Et hic quidem sibi nudè affirmanti credi postulat; argumentum enim nullum affert.

Ego verò contrà assero nullum alium Bestiæ Septicipitis statum cap. 13. describi quàm instauratæ; esseque eum statum integrum Bestiæ capitis novissimi. Quicquid enim mali Bestia fecisse dicitur, quicquid cultus & adorationis eidem ab incolis terræ delatum est, id omne post instauratæ ipsius seu plagæ curationem factum legitur: Et vidi, inquit, unum ex capitibus ejus ὡς ἐσφαγμένον ἐν δάματι, quasi lethali occisum fuisset; (nempe non nunc vidente Joanne, sed ante hunc exortum suum) sed plaga ejus sanata fuit: (nimirum statim ab exortu suo, aut in ipso) & admirans universa terra secuta est Bestiam, (nempe jam sanatam) & adorarunt Draconem, &c. Tuncque datum est ei os loquens grandia, & blasphemias, &c. & aperuit os suum adversus Deum, &c. Omnia hæc post sanationem facta sunt; sed ante sanationem nihil est quod fecisse legitur, nec ei quicquam honoris à Gentibus delatum. Fuit igitur instauratio ista Bestiæ novissimi capitis (quo eam statu Joannes è mari emergentem vidit) non fatum aliquod posterius, sed ipsa nativitas. A reliquorum enim capitum singulis ad caput sequens sine plaga transitum est. Atqui in transitu à sexto ad novissimum, lethali vulnere decubuit Bestia; quo eam vulnere fauciam (id est, sexto capite vulneratam) Joannes è mari emergentem vidit: non vidit eam cum vulneraretur; siquidem τὸ ὡς ἐσφαγμένον sensu plusquam perfecti accipiendum est, quemadmodum suprà c. 5. v. 6. Vidit in medio Presbyterorum & Animalium Agnum stantem ὡς ἐσφαγμένον, quasi maçtatus fuisset, non eo tunc vidente maçtatum. Hic sensus simplicissimus est, quem litera & ordo contextus ultro suppeditat; à quo temerè recedendum non est, ubi nec ratio nec necessitas ulla ad id compellit. Frustrà igitur est Dominus Lawenus, dum Bestiæ instauratæ unaq; menses illos quadraginta duos ad supremam & novissimam Bestiæ persecutionem rejiciat; nisi eodem quoq; rejicere velit Bestiæ adorationem, grandiloquentiam, blasphemiam, & (ut verbo dicam) omnia in universum Bestiæ facinora; sicque Bestiam nobis cudet Antichristianam, cujus per tot secula nulla prædicantur facta, nulla persecutio. Sed nihil agens nè cogitari quidem potest quod sit. Sed, quod ferè prætermiseram, De Mensibus Bestiæ in novissimam ejus persecutionem rejiciendis, lectionem Complutensem sibi favere putat; quia scilicet, pro potestatem faciendi menses quadraginta duos, legit potestatem bellum faciendi. Hoc verò ut neutiquam ei patrocinatur, (cum totum Bestiæ dominium non aliud sit quàm quoddam contra Sanctos bellum;) ita cum neque interpres Latinus neque Syrus eam vocem agnoscant; ad hæc, cum ex quindecim Stephani exemplaribus duo tantum eam haberint, omnino in eam sententiam devenio, à Sciolo aliquo additam esse, qui vim verbi ποιῆν vivendi & durandi significatione cum nominibus temporis ignoraverit. De qua vide Act. 15. 33. 2 Cor. 11. 25. Jac. 4. 13.

De Bestia &amp; Muliere.

Huic Synchronismo speciatim opponit, Instaurationem Bestiæ initium quidem sumere cum initio peregrinationis Mulieris in deserto, ipsam tamen longius perdurare. Sed si eadem sint & æqualia tempora Mulieris & tempora Bestiæ, ut ipse quidem fatetur; quæ fieri possit ut quæ eodem tempore incipiant, non etiam simul desinant, fateor me non capere. Sanè apud Mathematicos magnitudines æquales sunt etiam congruæ, id est, prima primis, media mediis, extrema extremis respondent.

De Atrio Exteriori à Gentibus calcato.

Atrium à Gentibus calcatum esse se nescire, ait, unde hauserit Synchronista, cum Apoc. II. tantum dicatur illud Gentibus datum esse. Dicam unde hauserim. Putabam Atrium exterius & Civitatem sanctam sese mutuò in hac Visione explicare: quia nimirum Atrium exterius locus fuit ubi Civitas sancta conveniret, proindeque dictum Atrium Israelis. Imò in deserto, unicum tantum Atrium habente Tabernaculo, (quod non nisi Sacerdotibus & Levitis ordinariè ingredi fas erat) Atrium exterius nullum erat præter castra Israelis ceu Civitatem sanctam. Accepi igitur acsi scriptum fuisset, Atrium quod extra Templum est nè metiaris; nam datum est Gentibus, & calcabunt illud mensibus quadraginta duobus. Nam Enallage Substantivi pro Relativo non infrequens est, tum in hoc libro, tum alibi; nempe aut Substantivum quod præcessit repetendo, aut ejus Synonymum loco Relativi substituendo: cujus exemplum vide Act. 25. 21. Et sanè quid aliud esse dicemus Gentibus dari, hoc est, occupandi potestatem fieri, quàm calcare? & quid tandem calcarent Gentes nisi id quod datum fuerat? Adeò ut hæ quoque voces non minùs quàm Atrii & Civitatis sanctæ mutuò sese explicare videantur.

Sed ut adhuc magis vapulem, addit præterea, Atrium hoc exterius apud Joannem non esse, quod ego sentio, Atrium Israelis, sed Atrium Gentium; Atrium verò Israelis sub illis verbis intelligi, ET ADORANTES IN EO. Sed hîc mirum est quàm fallitur. Nusquam enim in tota Scriptura Atrium illud Gentium (quod prophanum erat, non sacrum) Atrii exterioris nomine intelligitur; sed Atrium Israelis, id est, populi Israelitici. Neque populus in eo Atrio adoratum veniebat ubi altare situm erat, sed Sacerdotes & Levitæ: quod eum Drusius docere potuit ad hunc locum. Res sic se habet.

[Vide reliqua in Comment. Apocal. ad cap. II. I, 2. pag. 479, 480.]

De Bestia &amp; duobus Testibus.

Prophetia Testium, inquit, licet initium sumat cum instauratione Bestiæ, non tamen cum eadem terminatur. Hoc ego tantundem intelligo, quantum illud de Bestia & Muliere. Nam si dies 1260 initium sumant cum mensibus 42, quæ fieri potest ut non simul terminentur? si simul, ergò cum exitu Tubæ sextæ aut ineunte septima; nec enim ulterius prorogari potest Testium prophetia.

Ad Censuram Synchronismi II.

Bestiæ Bicornis, inquit, ortu posterior est Bestiæ septicipite. Fateor, quæ septiceps est; non quæ Decemcornupeta. Neque ego hîc Bestiam Bicornem cum Septicipite compono alio quàm instaurationis seu capitis novissimi statu. In transitu à sexto capite ad novissimum lethali vulnere decubuit Bestia, ut jam antea dixi; quo vulnere omnino periisset, nisi medicam ei manum commodè adhibuisset Pseudopropheta. Hoc Hoc autem statu (Instaurationis nimirum) fatetur Lawenus Bestiam Bicornem Septicipiti coævam esse. Aitenim, Nata demum videtur circa instaurationem Bestiæ prioris, utpote quæ fecerit adorari Bestiam primam, cujus curata est plaga. Hoc cum ipse dixerit, non video cur me reprehendat quod Bestiam Bicornem Septicipitis (instaurata nimirum) conditorem seu instauratorem vocaverim. Annon qui de novo adorari fecit, post potestatem ex lethali plaga intercisam aut collapsam, instaurare censendus est? At, inquit, Bestia illa prior dicitur. Scilicet, non temporis, sed narrationis ordine. Nullum enim hinc Bestiæ Septicipitis statum agnosco à Joanne visum, præterquam instaurationis. At opus illud instaurationis, inquit, Draconi tribuitur, non Pseudoprophetæ. Respondeo; Cessit quidem Draco potestatem suam Bestiæ; sed eandem Bestiæ conciliavit Pseudoprophetæ, tum cum orbis incolis persuaserit ut facerent Imaginem Bestiæ vulneratæ, Imaginem (ut videtur) ejus statûs quo plagam acceperat; quâ imagine factâ, Bestia illa pridem sauciata revixit. Sic enim referri & exponi possunt verba [ ἐξ ἧστε ] v. 14. quamvis etiam non incommodè referri possunt ad descriptionem Bestiæ prius factam, eo sensu acsi diceretur Joannis personâ, ut facerent imaginem Bestiæ, Bestiæ nimirum illi quâ ego sauciata denuoque sanata me vidisse dixi.

Ita enim sentio, Joannem utramque Bestiam simul emergentem vidisse; hanc ex mari, illam ex terra: prius autem ejus quæ ex mari capite sauciato ascenderat historiam describere, deinde ejus quæ ex terra. Nam quæ simul gesta sunt, simul tamen narrari non potuerint, sed seorsim & deinceps. Primò igitur Septicipitis sanatæ tyrannidem & blasphemias recensere; postea ut ei vulneratæ Bicornis medicam manum adhibuerit, populos in obsequium ejus flexit, eique potestatem conciliavit cujus ipsa præfecturam gereret, cæteraque quæ fecit in conspectu ejus.

Ad Censuram Appendicis de alternatione nominum Bestiæ, Imaginis Bestiæ, & Pseudoprophetæ.

JAM Appendix illa de alternatione nominum non somnium fuit, sed conjectura probabilibus argumentis subnixâ. Ejus duæ quasi partes. Una, Imaginem quæ dicitur Bestia, esse ipsam Bestiam septicipitem sub instaurationis statu. Altera, Ubiunque Bestia cum Imagine Bestiæ conjunctim legitur, ibi Bestiæ nomine non Decemcornueta, sed Bicornem intelligi. De primo, Quod dixi, Imaginem Bestiæ esse ipsam Bestiam septicipitem sub instaurationis statu; eo sensu dixi quo dici solet Anima cujusque est quisque. Ità enim etiamnum vigilans sentio, Imaginem illam esse (non, quod Lawenus vult, Idolum magicum, sed) Bestiæ instauratæ formam, juxta quam instaurari dicitur. Bestia scilicet novissimi capitis, Pseudoprophetâ auspice, facta est Imago Bestiæ sexto capite mactatæ, id est, Draconis septicipitis, qui idcirco quasi revixisse dicitur. Esse enim Draconem septicipitem (septicipitem dico, non simplicem) sexti capitis Bestiam, ex eo liquere potest, quod eidem novissimi seu septimi capitis Bestia in eodem throno proximè successerit. Sic enim colligo; Draco thronum suum cessit Bestiæ capitis novissimi; ergò decessor ejus fuit, seu penultimi capitis Bestia. Hujus imaginem (Draconismum, si libet, voca; aut quid si Dæmonolatram?) novissimi quoque capitis Bestiæ, Bicornis iste Draconiloquus adeò insculpi curavit, ut qui eam adoraverit, Draconem pridem debellatum quasi de novo adorâsse dicatur.

Sanè citra Imaginem istam (juxta quam Bestiam adorabant ii quorum nomina non sunt scripta in libro vitæ Agni) Bestiam adorare (quo sensu hic dicitur) non magis impium fuisset, quàm cuivis alii potestati mundanæ morem gerere. Hoc autem ostendo; quia Bestiam adorare ex Hebraismi & Orientis usu nihil aliud est quàm eidem subijci: id quod ex eo apparet, quod verbo Adorandi ἑξουσιαστικῶς subjungitur vers. 4. Et adorârunt Bestiam, dicentes, Quis similis Bestiæ? & quis potis est belligerare cum ea? Bestiam igitur adorare est Bestiæ se dedere tanquam potentiori, & cui nemo sit resistendo & belligerando. Quo eodem sensu terra ipsa, non modò incolæ ejus, Bestiam adorare dicitur vers. 12. id est, ei subijci: Καὶ ἐποίησεν (inquit) τὴν γῆν καὶ τὴν ὕδρα τὴν ἐν αὐτῇ κατοικῆντα; ἵνα προσκυνήσωσι, &c. De hac notione verbi προσκυνεῖν, vide Gen. 27. 29. & cap. 37. 7. & cap. 49. 8. item Isa. 45. 14. At Bestiæ juxta imaginem suam subijci, quâ Draconem septicipitem referat, id verò in Deum blasphemum est & impium. Unde qui sic Bestiam adorant, in Bestiam adorando Draconem adorare dicuntur, vers. 3. 4.

Ad alteram Appendicis partem venio. Dixi, Ubiunque Bestia & Imago ejus tanquam jugales audinntur, ibi Bestiæ nomine Bicornem intelligi. De hoc fatebor ingenuè me ipsum meipsum jamdudum dubitare cœpisse, ex quo observaverim copulationem istam, Bestiam & Imaginem ejus, per figuram Ἐν δὲ αὐτῇ exponi posse, quasi Bestiam in imagine, vel juxta imaginem ejus, vel quid simile: quod tamen alium forsitan non movisset.

Utut sit, in neutro videtur Lawenus argumentis meis satisfacisse. Ad id quod de Imaginem Bestia adduxi, Dici eam facere ut quicumque non adorârint Imaginem Bestia (id est, seipsam,) occidantur, id verò alterutrius Bestiæ opus videri; respondit, Imagini Bestia adscribi quod Pseudopropheta fecit Imaginis illius author, Metonymiâ effectus. Mira verò Metonymia! quâ actio agentis circa objectum tribuatur objecto in seipsum; cujusmodi credo Metonymiæ exemplum nullum dari posse. Scio quidem effecto nonnunquam tribui actionem causæ principalis in objectum ab utroque diversum; sed non cum effectum ipsum actionis objectum fuerit. Porro huic responso præsidium quærit in Editione Complutensi, quæ unâ cum Andrea (diceret Areta) legit καὶ ποιεῖ, & facit, nempe Bestia Bicornis. Sed dixerim lectionem hanc corruptam videri, & fortasse Aretæ ævo natales suos debere. R. Stephanus non annotavit, quia, ut conjicere est, in nullo suorum codicum reperit, aut conjunctionem καὶ ante verbum ποιεῖ pro depravatæ lectionis argumento habuit, ut quæ in sequenti membro postulare videatur καὶ ποιεῖ.

Quod dixi, Ubi Bestia cum Pseudopropheta simul adsit, ibi Imaginem Bestia non comparere; opponit Apoc. 19. 20. ubi simul comparent Bestia, Imago Bestia, atque Pseudopropheta; ut ibi Bestia nomine Pseudopropheta intelligi nequeat. Respondeo, In eodem quidem versu comparere, sed combinatione & sententiis diversis. Prima combinatio est Bestia & Pseudopropheta illis verbis, Et comprehensa est Bestia & cum ea Pseudopropheta. Secunda est Bestia & Imaginis ejus, ubi dicitur, Seduxit eos qui acceperant characterem Bestia, & adoraverant Imaginem ejus. Possum igitur affirmare primâ combinatione Bestiam dici septicipitem Bestiam, secundâ verò Bicornem. Quod verò paulò post obtendat, Adorationem soli Bestiæ septicipiti, non Bicorni competere, utpote de qua illud solummodo dicatur, quod fecit adorari Bestiam septicipitem; respondeo, De Bicorni Bestia & illud quoque dici, quod exerceat omnem ἐξουσίαν Bestia septicipitis in conspectu ejus; hujus autem ἐξουσία: partem, vel præcipuam, esse adorationem accipere, ut apparet v. 7, 8. Præterea, cum Bestiam adorare nihil aliud sit quàm homines sese imperio ejus subicere; constat Bestiam absque adoratione Bestiam esse non posse.

Quod porro ait ad tertium meum argumentum, Nomen numerumque Bestia, Bestia septicipitis esse, non Bicornis; novit doctissimus Vir, illis contrarium videri qui solam Bestiam Bicornem pro Antichristo habent, Bestiam autem primam pro Imperio Romano Ethnico: quibuscum tamen ego de interpretatione non sentio.

Denique falsum esse ait (quod mihi etiam in hac dissertatione excidit) Bestiam septicipitem restitutam totam se arbitrio Pseudoprophetae tanquam supremi Domini regendam permittere. Ego verò id ipsum verbis illis innui puto quibus dicitur, eam omnem potestatem Bestia prioris exercere in conspectu ejus. Sed hæc omnia interpretatione multò magis clarescerent, nisi quod ab ea, juxta instituti mei legem, hîc prorsus abstinendum sit.

Ad Censuram Synchronismi III.

Tertius Synchronismus, inquit, MERETRICIS ET BESTIÆ SEPTICIPITIS DECMECORNUPETÆ, castigatione indiget; quia Mulier meretrix, id est, Urbs Roma, jam tempore Joannis extabat, quando Bestia Septiceps capitis novissimi adhuc futura erat.

Respondeo; Mulier quidem Joannis ævo fuit, & ante Joannis ævum, eadēque toto illo tempore Bestiæ regina; sed Meretrix non fuit Mulier nisi Bestiā demum novissimi capitis agente vicem. Siquidem Meretricis nomine Scriptura Mecha intelligit; jam Mecha non est nisi quæ fidem conjugalem violaverit. At Civitas illa magna nondum Joannis ævo Christo in manum convenerat, ut Mecha dici potuerit. Dixi ergo Meretricem, non Mulierem, Bestiæ non septicipiti simpliciter, sed ei jam Decemcornupetæ contemporare.

Sed suspecta est mihi, inquit, lacinia ista, DECMECORNUPETÆ; quasi Bestia demum facta esset Decemcornupeta sub septimo, id est, novissimo, ejus capite. Itā est omnino. Pictores quidem hîc pro libitu decem cornua in septem capita distribuunt, aliis singula, aliis aliis pro liberalitate sua bina largientes. At hoc non tantum inconcinnum est, sed etiam falsum. Joanni enim solum caput septimum, in illa capitum sese invicem scandentium scala situ summum, vice novissimum, cornuum gestamine superbit : id quod sic probatum dabo. Florente capite florescunt cornua; quo occidente, etiam cornua inde enascentia occidere necesse est. In primis igitur quinque capitibus hæc cornua inesse non poterant; quia quinque illa capita jam abierant, & una cum capitum vicibus cornuum quoque vices abiissent; neque in sexto; quoniam eo Joannis awo regnante, cornuum tamen tempus nondum advenerat. Relinquuntur igitur capiti novissimo.

At, inquit Lawenus, Verba Apocalypsed's clarè & disertè docent, decem illa cornua ipsius temporibus Joannis extitisse. Imò contrarium docent clarissimè & disertissimè. Decem cornua, inquit Angelus, sunt decem reges qui regnum nondum acceperunt. [SUNT] autem in hujusmodi sententiis copulativè sumitur, non ὑπαρκτικῶς, quod Logici nōrunt. Alioquin concludendum quoque esset, Omnes septem reges Joannis temporibus extitisse, quia de septem quoque capitibus dicitur, Septem capita sunt septem reges, Βασιλεῖς ἐπ' αὐτῶν.

Sed & ab eventu sententiæ adversanti præsidium quærit: Certum enim est, inquit, ex historiis imperium Romanum, dum hæc scriberet Joannes, ex decem regnis sive regalibus provinciis tanquam partibus constituisse. Imò certum est, si Straboni fides, (qui solus hic laudari solet, quémque Lawenus hujus rei authorem laudat) Imperium Romanum eo seculo non in decem tantum, sed in viginti provincias divisum fuisse; quarum nempe decem Imperator sumebat sibi, alteras decem populo Rom. tribuebat. Inspiciat Strabonem ipsum, & de numero provinciarum, & quæ fuerint; ut videat quàm non nimis tutum sit alienis oculis fidere.

Ad Censuram Synchronismi IV.

Synchronismum CENTUM QUADRAGINTA QUATUOR MILLE VIRGINUM SCUM MERETRICE BABYLONICA ET BESTIA eodem vitio laborare ait: Quia Cætus CXLIV M virginum in solidum non contemporat Meretrici & Bestiæ, sed temporibus earum postremis. Respondeo; Cætus Virgineus in solidum contemporat Meretrici, non Mulieri. Neque, quod vult Lawenus, exsuperat Bestiæ regnum, sed ut cum eo cœpit, ita quoque (quod statum illum obsignationis attinet) cum eodem desinit, migratque postmodum in statum novum Turbæ Palmiferæ. Quæ nimirum est massa illa numerosa Agni post devictam Bestiam sequacium; cujus respectu Cætus ille CXLIV M Virginum sub Bestiæ adhuc blasphemantis tyrannide Agno adhærentium, * Primitiæ tantum dicebantur. Sed video Dominum Lawenum duas istas Visiones hic * Apoc. 14.4 & ubique confundere; quas tamen diversas esse constat & diversorum temporum. Cætus enim Virginum numeratus est; Turba Palmifera innumerabilis: Ille sub Bestia rerum potiunte gemit; hæc post Bestiam occisam ovat; * Hi sunt, inquit, qui venerunt de tribulatione magna, id est, de tyrannide Bestiæ Sanctos tribulantis. Unde illis sigillo prospectum fuit nè læderentur; istis obsignatione istiusmodi nihil opus erat. Nec si fortè personæ ipsæ in utroque statu aliquatenus eadem sint, proinde diversi rerum status confundendi sunt. Ecclesia semper una est, sed fortunâ & conditione pro temporum statu dissimilis. Quæ diversæ Ecclesiæ, ut ita dicam, facies diversis visionibus exhibentur. * Cap. 7. 14.

Ad Censuram Synchronismi V.

Quintus Synchronismus, inquit, DE GENERALI ANTEDICTORUM SYNCHRONISMO, potuisset omitti. Fateor. Sed potest etiam retineri, & suum usum mihi habere visum, ut tot Synchronizantium vaticiniorum systema uno intuitu exhibeatur. Prætereanon est, quod ait, nuda præcedentium Synchronismorum repetitio. Nihil enim adhuc de Meretricis cum Muliere Eremitica & Testibus, aut de Cætu Virgineo cum iisdem, Synchronismo dictum fuit. Nec pari ratione duo sequentes Synchronismi repeti potuissent, cum illi nequaquam contemporent; ut proinde quod scitè à se dictum putat de octavo Synchronismo, ut non urbanè admodum, ita nec verè dixerit.

Ad Censuram Synchronismi VI. -

Porro, ait peccare hunc Synchronismum confusione temporum. Licet enim ex eo quod ambo sint antedanea contemporaneorum, illud sequatur, Prælium Draconis incidere in tempus Templi mensurabilis; Templum tamen non prius & citius mensuratum fuisse quam Prælium illud commissum fuerit, eo argumento probari nequit. Fateor. Neque id in Clave mea celavi. Inspice sodes p. * 10. l. 20. At ex eo quod sint proxima antecedentia contemporaneorum, sequitur ea communem exitus sui terminum fortiri. Quod verò ut in fine, sic etiam initio concurrant, alio argumento, eoque mihi sat verisimili, astruere conatus sum. Cujus quidem fundamentum de initio Prophetiæ repetitæ hic insanix deputat Censor, & paulò post se refutaturum pollicetur. Ibi igitur responsum habebit.

Quinimo, inquit, Prælium illud Draconis commissum & absolutum fuit in ictu oculi; ideòque cum Templi dimensionatione, utpote continui temporis prophetiâ, contemporare nequit. Respondeo; Etsi in toto hoc negotio ab interpretatione Vaticiniorum abstinuerim; tamen necesse fuit sensum aliquem Grammaticum præsupponi, & pro fundamento rebus demonstrandis subterni. Ex hac autem Objectione demum perspicio me non satis cautè locutum esse. Draconis insidias & dimicationem pro iisdem habui; Dominus Lawenus distinguit. Utut sit, ad rem ipsam parùm interest. Intellego enim Draconis molitionem (ita posthac vocabo) durante Puerperio, quicquid tandem fuerit, sive Prælium, sive aliud. Hanc, puto, non est dicturus in ictu oculi peractam: Non enim potest, nisi etiam Puerperium momentaneum dicat. Denique, si saltem Puerperii cum Atrio mensurabili Synchronismum mihi concesserit, de Dracone non pugnabo. Neque certè eum hic alio argumento impugnat (dum dimensionationis initium puerperii multò recentius asserit) quàm ex privata interpretationis hypothese; cui ut respondeam non est opus.

Responsio ad Striaturas in Partem Secundam.

HIC à Præloquio meo incipit; quod miror admodum cur tantopere exagitet, innocuum certè & nihil mali meritum. Neque enim mihi animus fuit in eo demonstrare quicquam, imò nec fundamentum subternere Synchronismis mox demonstrandis: sed tantummodo Lectorem præmonere quid, singulis Visionibus juxta mox futuras Synchronismorum ἀποδείξει ritè dispositis, tum ipse observaverim, tum ille observare poterit; nimirum Intervallum seu periodum Apocalypticam bis tantum integrè percurri; primùm Prophetiâ sigillorum, secundò eâ quæ à Libro aperto incipit; atque eâ ratione Apocalypsin indè à capite quarto ad finem in duas Prophetias principales dispertiri. Dixi Prophetias, non Visiones. Sciebam Visiones esse plures, sed ex iis non nisi duo Prophetiarum syntagmata confieri, quibus periodus Apocalyptica integrè percurratur. Id verò est quod affirmavi, atque etiamnum affirmo. Quid peccavi? numquid affirmabit Lawenus, pluries, id est, septies, periodum Apocalypticam percurri? Haud facilè credo. An negabit Partitionem istiusmodi ex Synchronismis meis secuturam? Non potest. At ego hoc solum in Præloquio meo volui. Ergò cum larvis hic pugnat, & potuit omni labori isti pepercisse. Nam si Synchronismos meos refutasset, Partitio hæc bimembris Visionum Apocalypticarum per se concidisset; utpote quæ ex Synchronismis istis exstructa structa est, non verò iis pro fundamento subtrata. Sed voluit fortè hanc Præloquii mei flagellationem vice præloquii esse ad stricturas sequentes.

Videamus igitur quomodo Partitionem meam destruat. Primò, (inquit) confundit finem unius Prophetiæ cum principio alterius. Intelligit, ni fallor, finem Prophetiæ consummantis. Alioquin enim vitiosum non est, fini unius Prophetiæ continuari principium alterius. Ità Visioni Draconis rufi-Septicipitis finienti continuatur Visio Bestiæ marinæ redintegratæ: Visionem Phialarum vult Lawenus concatenari fini Tubæ sextæ. Sed visioni consummantis (ità voco quæ finem periodi Apocalyptica attingit) fateor non posse aliam Visionem continuari. Sed inquit, Partitione meâ continuari initium prophetiæ Tubarum cum fine prophetiæ Sigillorum, prophetiæ consummantis, nempe cum fine Sigilli septimi. Ego verò illud nego, & aio prophetiam Tubarum esse ipsummet Sigillum septimum, ideòque à me nec confundi nec continuari cum fine Sigilli septimi, sed, ut æquum erat, conjungi cum fine sexti. At, inquit, Finis prophetiæ Sigillorum est in Turba Palmifera, idque fatente meipso. Respondeo; Aliud est, esse finem prophetiæ Sigillorum contemporando, aliud, (ut ità loquar) exhibendo. Fateor prophetiâ Obsignatorum & succedaneâ prophetiâ Palmiferorum (quas Lawenus mihi confundit) totum Sigilli septimi intervallum percurri contemporando: sed in illis exhiberi visionem Sigilli septimi, id verò pernego. Visio Sigilli septimi ea demum est quam exhibet apertio Sigilli septimi; Visio, inquam, Tubarum, ut suprà ostendi. Visio autem gemina illa Obsignatorum & Palmiferorum est Visio interposita in uum characteris; quò scilicet sciremus secuturus post Βιβλαειδ'is comestionem Visiones reliquas cum Sigillorum prophetia aptè connectere; ut monui Synchron. I. Part. II.

Quod porro ait de * Silentio illo semihoræ ad initium prophetiæ Tubarum, seu apertionem Sigilli septimi, esse illud novæ prophetiæ indicium; gratis dicit, nec ad rem quicquam facit. Neque enim ego negârim visionem Tubarum esse novam prophetiam, & à præcedentibus Sigillis diversam; sed esse Prophetiam de novo repetitam, illud verò est quod inficias eo: ideòque novitate suâ non obstante, aio præcedentibus Sigillis ratione rei gerendæ continuandam esse. Id quod Alstedius mihi dubitavit, qui tamen de numero Visionum Apocalypticarum juxtà cum Laweno sentit. Sed unum est quod non capio. Silentio semihoræ ait nihil aliud significari quàm Joannem à visionibus præcedentis prophetiæ ad medium horæ quievisse. Quid hoc est? an igitur Joannes videndo aut audiendo sonitum fecit? Hoc aio me non capere.

Sed quoniam tantum causæ suæ præsidium in hoc Silentio Lawenus ponit; videamus annon ea sit Silentii hujus mens, quæ commentum illud de Tubarum prophetia à Sigillis abjungenda nedum juvet, sed penitus destruet, cui ille astruendo servire putet. Notum est in sacris ubivis ferè Gentium, Silentium de religione fuisse. Favere linguis dicebant. Id à populo Dei observatum tum cum Incensum fieret. Dum enim sacrificia offerrentur, Templum canticis, tubis aliisque instrumentis musicis personabat, 2 Chron. 29. 25, &c. At tempore Incensi omnia filebant, & populus tacitè tecum precabatur, Luc. 1. 10. Huc igitur allusum esse videtur, dum, Angelo ad Altare aureum sacra facturo, factum esse dicitur in cælo Silentium ad semihoram, id est, toto tempore Incensi. Ità quoque apud veteres mos erat, teste Servio, ut lumine incenso Silentium praberetur.

Quod denique addit Lawenus de Igne è cælo in terram missio, eundem esse de quo Salvator dixerat Luc. 12. 49. interpretamentum est, ideòque ab hac dissertatione alienum. Atque ità ab hoc ariete Partitio mea firma manet & inconcussa. Videamus an non eadem quoque facilitate eorum qui supersunt impetum sustinere possit.

Secundò, inquit, Partitio hæc discerpit membra unius ejusdemque Prophetiæ arctissime inter se coherentia; nempe finem Tubæ sextæ divellit ab ipsius principio. Respondeo, Peti principium. Tantum enim abest ut aut Libri comestio aut Templi mensuratio sit pars Tubæ sextæ, ut ad eam nullo prorsus modo pertineant. Quid enim? an quicquid narrandi ordine sequitur, statim pars est ejus quod præcessit? Cur non igitur septem tonitruum voces etiam pars essent Tubæ sextæ? quod tamen negat. Quod propius illius Tubæ clangorem excepit, eò non pertinebit; & pertinebit, imò pars erit, quod remotius est? Quis hic discerpit membra unius ejusdemque Prophetiæ? Egone, an Lawenus?

Tertio, inquit, Commiscet hæc Partitio duas ad minimum integras prophetias toto cælo à se invicem distinctas: Nempe prophetiam Libri aperti, & de Muliere parturiente; quoniam hanc illius partem facit. Hæc enim, ni fallor, est quam intelligit commistio prophetiarum; cum me prophetiam de Muliere parturiente eandem facere dicit cum prophetia Libri aperti. Ego verò, ut jam antè monui, prophetiam Libri aperti voco, non unicam aliquam Visionem, sed totum illud Visionum Syntagma quas Joannes vidit, postpostquam ei, libro devorato, dictum fuerit, Oportet te iterum prophetare, &c. Annon autem hujus Syntagmatis seu Prophetiæ iteratæ pars est Visio Mulieris parturientis? Ipsum Lawenum appello in notationibus suis proœmialibus in Visionem quartam Apocalyp. Certum est, inquit, hanc Visionem ( de Muliere parturiente, Bestia marina, &c. XL IV Mille obsignatorum ) partem quoque esse illius prophetiæ de qua Joanni dictum fuit, Oportet te iterum prophetare gentibus, populis, ac linguis, & Regibus multis. Hæc sunt ipsissima Laweni verba; si modò is sit ( quod audio ) qui se Theocritum Justum appellat. Quomodo tunc certum erat, quod nunc pro errore manifestario traducit? Adeone cum duo affirmant idem, non est idem? Aut valde fallor, aut hic vir doctus præ nimio stringendi calore sui oblitus est. At, inquit, certum est, prophetiam Libri aperti terminari cum fine Tubæ septimæ; prophetiam verò de Muliere parturiente, quæ hanc sequitur, prophetiam planè novam esse, quæ nihil antiquius habet Apocalypsis. Quomodo igitur hæc pars erit Libri aperti? Hoc scil. argumento suam meamque sententiam labefactatum it. Sed respondeo pro meipso & pro Theocrito Justo; omnino facillimè. Prophetia enim Libri aperti non est una aliqua prophetia continua, sed multarum, ut dixi, Visionum, partim continuantium, partim contemporantium, Systema; quarum una sola, id est, prima, totum intervallum Apocalypticum pervadit, reliquæ huic tanquam partes contemporantes annectuntur. Ità Visio de Muliere parturiente pars est prophetiæ Libri aperti, non continua, sed primæ Visioni ( quæ in communem illam Tubæ novissimæ catastrophæ definit ) contemporanea & parallela.

Quæ porro subjungit de interpretatione Visionis de Puerperio, Mulierem parturientem esse Synagogam Judaicam, quæ patrem habuit Jacobum, qui assimilatur soli; matrem Rachaelem, quæ comparatur Lunæ, &c. ut nimirum demonstret Visionem istam provehi ad caput & originem periodi Apocalypticæ, ac proinde in ea novam prophetiam inchoari: hæc ( inquam ) & similia sicco pede pertranseo; cum, ut sæpe jam monui, nullus sit in hoc examîne id genus interpretamentis locus concedendus.

Absolutâ interpretatione Puerperii, redit ad rem ipsam; & solito commotior, quasi stimulum alicunde sensisset, acerrimè invehitur in id quod bimembri meæ Partitioni subjunxerim, nempe posteriorem Apocalypseos partem, quæ est τὸ Βίβλας ἐξ ἑσθλῆς, ab eodem temporis seu periodi Apocalypticæ principio exordiri unde prior illa quæ est Sigillorum. Hic qui Visionem Tubarum, ad septimi Sigilli apertionem exhibitam, ad primi Sigilli initium retraxit, & Sigillorum tramitem relegere fecit, mihi tamen pro immani crimine impingit, quod post finitam sextæ Tubæ descriptionem, ( nam uniuscujusque Tubæ, ut dixi, visum tantum unicum est ) postque septimæ Tubæ præconium disertè exhibitum de consummatione mysteriorum Dei tum futura, postquam etiam septem tonitrua voces suas edidissent, quas ipse ad septimam Tubam pertinere affirmat; voluerim tamen ex sequentibus Novæ prophetiæ initium facere; cum illud non modò ex Synchronismorum meorum syntaxi necessariò secuturum advertissem, verùm eodem etiam præter opinionem facere viderem verba illa longè disertissima, Oportet te iterum prophetare populis & gentibus & linguis & regibus multis. Ille sibi silentium semihoræ sine ratione aut exemplo interpretanti credi postulat, quod sit novæ & repetitæ prophetiæ indicium; mihi Spiritui Sancto id disertis & perspicuis verbis affirmanti credere non licet. Sed plus ego, Lawene, hujusmodi verborum aucupii ( sic enim vocas ) fido, quàm cujusvis hominum interpretamentis, nisi ea quoque verba perspicuè consentientia habuerint: Ut omnino frustrà sis, qui mihi hîc pro verbis clarissimis, Δὲ σε πάλιν πρὸς φητεῖσαι, interpretationem maximè dubiam & incertam ( alius violentam dixerit ) obtruseris.

Ad objectum de currente adhuc, nec dum absolutâ, sextæ Tubæ descriptione, respondeo, Finem Tubæ sextæ esse ad finem capitis noni, nec ultrâ protendi visionem ejus: nam unicum esse cuique Tubæ visum, sicut & Sigillis & Phialis; non duo vel plura. Deinde primam partem capitis decimi ad septimam Tubam pertinere; quod ipse, quod ad septem tonitrua, non diffitetur, & Angeli verba manifesta sunt. Quod reliquum est hujus capitis cum capite sequente ad novam prophetiam pertinere, monente id ipsum Spiritu Sancto. Ità prophetiam Sigillorum & Tubarum propriè & reapse claudi magno illo Angeli tonitruum, de tempore ad clangorem Tubæ septimæ finiando, & mysterio Dei consummando, præconio. Sed quoniam Mysterium illud communis foret tum hujus tum alterius Prophetiæ catastrophe, tum maximè ut sciretur quâ demum ratione sequens Prophetia cum hac Tubarum connectenda esset; ideo clangoris ipsiusmet de præsentis exhibitionem & evolutionem plenior ab Angelo eoque suspensam, donec & altera Prophætia, primâ suâ visione ad idem temporis Apocalypticum momentum provectâ, tanquam limes Synchronisticus & communis utriusque prophetiæ exitus interfereretur. Dicam ( si possim ) planiùs, quoniam video me me à Domino Laweno non intelligi. Utraque Prophetia tam Sigillorum quam Βιβλιαειδὶς uno eodémque rerum exitu clauditur, quem exhibet Tuba novissima. Cui indicando, Spiritus Sanctus, Tubæ septimæ mysterio suo loco in Tubarum serie, quantum tunc satis erat, designato, clangorem ipsum distulit, donec ad novam Βιβλιαειδὶς prophetiam transitione facta, primam ipsius Visionem ( studio Apocalypticum similiter emenso ) ad eundem rerum exitum provexisset. Tuncque Mysterium illud Tubæ septimæ, utriusque Prophetiæ clausula communis, in priori Prophetia de genere tan-tū promulgatum, hīc, clangore edito, plenius evolvitur: idque commodissimè; cū alioquin, absque utriusque Prophetiæ præcognitione; quod ab utraque penderet intelligi non potuisset.

Et profectò ni hæc Spiritus Sancti mens fuisset, nec juramentum de septimæ Tubæ clangore & mysterio eò loci inferuisset, nec verba statim Joanni de prophetia repetenda fecisset. Quorsum enim hæc, nisi ut duplici isto indicio certos nos faceret de fine prophetiæ Tubarum illic indubiè statuendo; non obstante quod postmodum de clan-gore Tubæ septimæ novæ isti prophetiæ interferendum esset? Ego tamen ( ut quod initio dixi iterum repetam ) nihilominus huiusmodi discursibus bimembrem meam Partitionem non superstruxi, neque in Præloquio meo tanquam fundamentum proposui;
sed solummodo monui eam confectarium fore Synchronismorum mox demonstrandorum, eique apprimè convenire Angeli verba, & Visionem cap. 10. exhibitam. Nisi igitur quos demonstravi Synchronismos istiusmodi Partitionem conficiant, causam non dico quin prorsus eliminetur.

Postremū addidi & illud Lectoris animadversione non indignum fore; Ad utriusque istarum, perinde atque primæ omnium Visionis de septem Ecclesiis, quasi trium integrarum Prophetiarum, initia singula voce tanquam Tubæ de cælo loquentis proclama-ri, &c. Hīc mihi opponit Lawenus multò certiora novæ prophetiæ indicia, ut quod sin-gula aut incipiuntur novæ visionē, aut terminentur mentione secundi adventūs. Sed annon quæ ego attuli sunt novarum Visionum initia? aut dicat quo tandem signo internoscatur novæ Visionis exordium; præsertim si illud [ Δὲ σε πάλιν προφητεύσαι ] pro huiusmodi signo non habendum sit. Sed vult, ni fallor, eam Visionem pro nova habend-am esse quam proximè præcessit mentio secundi adventūs. Neque huius notæ tribunal Partitio mea recusabit. Quid enim? annon Angeli septem tonitruum præconium de consummatione Mysterii Dei ( quod Libri comestionem præcessit ) ad secundum adventum pertingit? Sed quorsum hæc omnia? non enim hīc de novæ Visionis aut pro-phetiæ cujuscumque initio quæritur; sed de initio prophetiæ repetitæ. Num ubicumque mentio secundi adventūs præcessit, ibi initium est prophetiæ repetitæ, id est, quæ eun-dem tramitem propheticum à capite remeat? Non credo. At de ejusmodi initio inter nos agitur. Interim ut non diffiteor secundum adventum, si dextrè accipiat, esse certissimum indicium prophetiæ consummantis; eoque visionem quæ sequitur ejusmodi esse, quæ priori continuari non possit? ita nego hunc adventum pro unico visionis no-væ secuturæ indicio habendum esse. Nego item cujusvis interpretamentum pro secundi adventūs argumento admittendum. Mihi quidem persuasissimum est Sigillum sextum non esse de secundo adventu; & novit Dominus Lawenus me non paucos suffragatores habere, & in eorum numero esse Andreā Cæsariensem: nihil tamen ei superstruo, quia interpretamentum est; ideoque negari possit nisi aliunde firmetur. Et Messē illam c. 14. v. 15. esse secundum Christi adventum, quo argumento negantem convinceret? Nam alia quoque est Salvatoris Messis præter consummationem seculi:
Messis, inquit, multa, operarii verò pauci. Imò si Messis c. 14. sit consummatio seculi; quid tandem erit Vindemia, quæ Messē sequitur? Eadem quoque de Cæna dici possunt c. 3. 20. nec ignorat Dominus Lawenus hæc ab aliis aliter interpretata esse. Unicum illud de Universali Resurrectione & Judicio c. 20. clarum & disertum est, ideoque indubium. Videt igitur Dominus Lawenus quàm huiusmodi argumenta imbellia sint.
Interim ego non nego Septem esse in Apocalypsi Visiones insigniores, fortè etiam plures: neque hoc bimembrem meam divisionem quatit, ut quæ aliò spectavit; neque Visiones distinxit, sed syntagmata Visionum.

Ad Cenſuram Synchroniſmi I.

Sigilli ſeptimi, quod ad priores ſex Tubas, cum Beſtia ſepticipite, Bicorni, ceteriſque contemporantibus.

IN huius demonſtratione Lawenus totus interpretationum præjudiciis occæcatus nihil omnino veri cernere potuit. Adjuvabo igitur, ſi poſſum, admoto lumine. Summa demonſtrationis hæc fuit, quæ de initio, quæ de fine.

De initio ſic. Cum Cœtus obſignatorum, tanquam Beſtiæ regnantis ἀντιſτοιχον, Beſtiæ contemporet; idẽmque Cœtus obſignatorum contemporet initio Sigilli ſeptimi ſeu Tubarum; ſequitur Beſtiam quoque contemporare initio Sigilli ſeptimi ſeu Tubarum.

De fine autem ſic. Cum Teſtium in ſacco lugentium dies 1260 finiantur ad exitum Tubæ 6, ſeu ineunte ſeptimâ; ibidem quoque Beſtiæ menſes 42 finiſſe neceſſe eſt; & per conſequens illam Beſtiæ tyrannidem intra ſex primarum Tubarum ambitum contineri.

Fatetur Lawenus Cœtum obſignatorum contemporare Sigillo ſeptimo; vult enim obſignationem illam eſſe totum Sigilli iſtius myſterium: quod quidem nimium eſt, ſed indẽ ſumo quantum mihi ſatis eſt, nempe Cœtum illum Sigillum ſextum proximẽ ſequi, atque ita inire cum ſeptimo. Hoc autem poſito, nulla ei ampliũ elabendi copia ſuperẽſt, niſi aut negando ſeptem Tubas Rem eſſe Sigilli ſeptimi, aut Cœtum Virgineum cum Beſtia (ſemper Beſtiam noviffimi capitis intelligo) in ſolidum contemporare. Illud jam oſtenſum eſt in Textu diſertiffimẽ haberi, neque in re tam manifeſta ut cedam, ullis unquam fidiculis extorquebit. Alterum de Cœtus Virginei & Beſtiæ in ſolidum contemporatione, quoniam eam in Clave mea non ſatis ab omni parte munitam dedi, jam porrò firmiũs demonſtrabo, quæ de initio, quæ de fine. Nam de contemporatione ſimpliciter dubium non eſt.

Initialem igitur contemporationem ſic oſtendo. Cœtus iſte Virgineus (prout nuda ejus deſcriptio cap. 14. attento Lẽctori fidem faciat) copiæ ſunt ſanctorum militum in Agni fide (tum cum ceteri orbis incolæ deſertores & transfugæ Beſtiæ characterem accepiſſent) firmiter permanentium: unde ut olim priſco ritu milites ſtigmatẽ aliquo notati, & Imperatoris ſui nomine inſcribi; ita iſti Agni & Patris nominibus in fronte ſcribuntur; imò cap. 13. v. 8. in Agni quoque codice ceu matriculã exſtare dicuntur. Hi nimirum ſunt Sancti iſti quibuſcum belligerat Beſtia, quique ſoli ex omnibus orbis incolis ipſam adorare abnuerint. Neceſſe eſt igitur eodẽm Beſtianis cœvos eſſe; quandoquidem inceſta Beſticularum coitio, eodẽm tempore illibatum Agniſequorum cœtum neceſſario diſcrimine progenuerit.

Secundò, Si Cœtus Virgineus cum Beſtia initio non contemporet; aut Beſtia antiquior eſt, aut recentior. Utramcunque dixeris, illud abſurdi ſequitur, ut aut Cœtus aut Beſtia nimium diſſimilibus rerum ſtatibus contemporet. Si enim Cœtum dixeris Beſtiã antiquiorem, illud ſequitur, ut Cœtus partim Beſtiæ decemcornupetæ, partim verò Puerperio & Draconi ruſo contemporet. Nam quod ultra Beſtiæ exortum aſcendit, illud neceſſariò in Draconis & Puerperii tempora impingit; ut quæ nempe Beſtiæ exortus continuò ſecutus eſt. At quĩ tam uniformis prophetia tam diſſimilibus rerum ſtatibus aptabitur? quæ ἀντιſτοιχίας ratio tam diſſimili parallelifmo conſtabit?

Sin Cœtum Beſtiã recentiorem dixeris, ſequetur ut Beſtia partim ſex primis Sigillis, (eorum nempe ultimis) partim verò ſeptem Tubarum, Sigillo diſſimilis proculdubio rei, contemporet; ubi eadẽ planè abſurditatis ratio rem omnem circumſpicienti apparebit.

Initialem contemporationem firmavi: reſtat de finali; quæ non modò, ut prior, ex ἀντιſτοιχίας ratione, ſed porrò ex eo oſtenditur, quòd utriuſque, tam Beſtiæ tyrannidis quàm Cœtus virginei, limes ſit Turba Palmifera. Beſtiæ, quia de Palmiferis dicitur, Hi ſunt qui venerunt ex tribulatione magna: quæ verò tribulatione, niſi Beſtiæ Sanctos tribulantis? ergò Beſtiæ tyrannidem à tergo relinquunt. Cœtus virginei, quia eum Turba Palmifera continuò ſequitur; ſicut ipſe Cœtus ſecutus eſt Tubam ſextam: id quod ex eadẽ utrobique tranſitione * Μετὰ ταῦτα εἶδον manifeſtum eſt, vel ipſo Laweno iudice.

Poteſt & hæc finalis contemporatio ſic demonſtrari: Quia utriuſque limes eſt exitus Tubæ ſextæ; Beſtiæ, ut ex cap. undecimo oſtenſum eſt Synchron. I. § 2. part. I. Cœtus, quia cum excipit Turba Palmifera, quæ contemporat Tubæ ſeptimæ.

Atque

Atque hinc, credo, apparet Synchronismum Sigelli septimi, quod ad priores sex Tubas, cum Bestia septicipite novissimi capitis ceterisque contemporantibus non esse (quod acerbiusculè dixit) cardinem vanitatum, sed istiusmodi censuram fuisse omnino vanam.

Ad objecta non opus est ut respondeam, cum nihil novi præter interpretamenta asferat; ut de Antichristo sub Tuba quinta primum in lucem prodeunte, utpote Angelo illo Abyssi, Apollyone & Abaddon; proindeque minimè, quod ego vellem, cum ipso Tubarum clangore nato. Item de Cætu obsignatorum demum post illustrem Domini adventum (Sigillum sextum esse vult) exhibendo. Hæc igitur omnia (utut argutum illud sit de Abaddon quafi אבדון Pater Dominus) uno spiritu dissilabo, scilicet negando. Quorum enim aliter refutarem quæ & aliena sunt & solido fundamento carent?

Illud tamen unum præterire non debeo, quod Obsignationem eam C XLIV mille (cap. 7.) factam esse dicat ad novas nuptias Agni in illustri Domini adventu celebrandas; idque manifestum esse ex collatione cum 4. Esd. 2. 38. me verò perstringat, eò quod existimârim illam factam esse, nè grassantibus in orbe Tubarum calamitatibus electi Dei servi extinguerentur. Sed inspicere (sodes) textum, Lawene. Annon Angelus illic ab ortu Solis clamavit ad Angelos quibus datum est lædere terram & mare, dicendo, Nè lædite terram, neque mare, neque arbores, quoadusque obsignaverimus servos Dei nostri in frontibus suis? Sintne calamitates illæ Tubarum necne, haud multum laboro. At de calamitatibus, quæcunque tandem sint, orbi superventuris, electis Dei servis (quibus omnia in bonum cedere debèant) omnino hic caveri dico. De nuptiis verò planè nihil audio. Imò qui Tubarum Synchronismum, & quod porò in eandem omnino rem ad Tubam quintam habetur c. 9. v. 4. consideraverit, calamitates quæ à Tubis sunt in hunc censum venire haud gravatè mihi concessurus est.

Ad Censuram Synchronismi II

Nentrum horum, inquit, neque Templi sive Atrii interioris mensuratio, neque Prælium Draconis cum Michael, cum sex primis Sigillis contemporat. Non dimensuratio Templi, (quomodo loqui malit) quia jubetur Joannes Templum & Altare metiri sub finem Tuba sextæ. Non Prælium Draconis, quia illud in ictu oculi commissum & absolutum fuit.

Ad primum respondeo; Licèt post Tubæ sextæ historiam Joannes jubeatur metiri Templum; hanc tamen dimensurationem ad Tubam sextam non magis pertinere quàm ad septimam; quia illius quoque præconium & septem tonitruum, quæ eodem pertinent, voces eandem dimensurationem aequè præcesserint. Ratio est, quia (ut in superioribus dixi) abrupta post vers. 7. Sigillorum & Tubarum, id est, totius Libri figillati, tractatione, deinceps ad novam prophetiam, Libri nimirum aperti, transitus fiat.

Ad secundum dico, Prælii Draconis appellatione intellexisse me totam Draconis molitionem durante Puerperio, quam non credo eum dicturum in ictu oculi peractam fuisse. Putabam enim illà Draconis & Michaelis dimicatione describi insidiarum istarum statum, quomodoque factum sit ut machinatio illa Draconis adversus Mulierem parturientem incassum cederet; quia nempe Michael adversarium toto tempore expertus est. Sanè eodem cum Visione Puerperii pertinere ex eo censebam, quòd utriusque rem gestam continuò secuta est Mulieris fuga in eremum. Ità tunc sensi. Jam objectione istà cautior factus locutionem corrigo, & Draconis non Prælium, sed Molitionem, vocabo; sed tamen mentem cur mutem nondum video. Si posthac videro, gratias de hoc monitu Laweno debebo. Utut res se habet, sinte Prælium illud Draconis ejusdem adversus Mulierem parturientem Molitio necne, à qua eam Michael liberavit, certè cum ea molitione contemporabit. Valde enim infirmum est, quia Prælii istius descriptio narrandi ordine sequatur Mulieris partum, fugam verò ejusdem idem tempore antecedit, ex eo cum Laweno concludere velle, illud momento tantum durasse, quasi utrique interjectum. Cur enim non potius cum Puerperio contemporaret, quocum exitum communem sortitur? Pugnat in coelo, dejicitur Draco, cantatur ἐννίκιον, Draco dejectus irascitur, persequitur Mulierem, illa in eremum fugit. Omnia hæc in momento fugæ facta sunt? Annon dum adhuc parturiret? nam statim à partu fugit in eremum.

Ad Censuram Synchronismi III -

Phialarum cum Tuba sexta.

Synchronismum Phialarum cum Tuba sexta non quidem in solidum, sed ex parte tantum, astruxi; idque quia viderim Bestiæ dominatum ante septimæ clangorem haud parum labefactari coepisse. At quo loco Tubarum, initium Phialarum præcisè statuendum sit, id nullo caractere eruere potui. De fine hoc certum mihi visum, Phialam saltem novissimam ad novissimam Tubam pertinere.

Quid ad hæc Dominus Lawenus? Finitio, inquit, mensum XLII ad sexta Tuba exitum non arguit tum labefactatam fuisse dominationem Bestiæ. Quid ita? quia (inquit) potestas XLII mensum non est simplex potestas dominandi, (rectius forte dixisset existendi) sed dominandi pro libitu, & novissimæ persecutionis. Esto. Annon igitur si Bestia ab hac potestate ceciderit, imperium ejus meritò labefactari censebitur? Quod verò ait, mensæ XLII non esse totius dominationis Bestiæ sub statu novissimo, sed solummodo novissimæ persecutionis, id à me suprà refutatum est. Neque hîc multum interest sive ita sit, sive aliter. Namque etiam novissimæ, ut dixi, dominationis seu persecutionis finitio non potest non esse magna potestatis Bestianæ labefactatio. Interim omnimodam Bestiæ abolitionem egomet ad ineuntem Tubæ septimæ clangorem tum hîc tum in confirmatione Synchronismi primi hujus Partis expressè retuli.

2.

3.

DE quatuor postremis istis Synchronismis ait se prorsus mecum sentire; de quo certè est quod mihi gratuler, cum sint omnium παράδοξοι. In reliquorum plerisque, quod à communi interpretum tramite haud ita longè recedant, complures suffragatores habeo; in istis paucissimos: ut omnino jam æquiori animo seram doctissimum virum à me in reliquis dissentientem, quod istis saltem album calculum adjecerit. Deum verò Optimum Maximum veneror, ut utrique nostrum ad veritatem ejus cernendam oculos, magis magisque deterfis præjudiciis, aperiat.

Ad Censuram de Epocha Apocalypsæ.

IN hac Censura pleraque, ut mihi videntur, sunt planè ἀπεροδιόνοια, ut sanè nesciaman mentem meam de Epocha intellexerit. Utut sit, errorum meorum, quos putat, catalogum texit; quos ego, ni fallor, suis locis ostendi errores non esse, sed veritatem verissimam. Nimirum 1. Septem Tubas esse τὸ πρῶτον Sigilli septimi. 2. Menses XLII esse totam durationem Bestiæ sub capite novissimo, seu statu instaurationis; ideoque literaliter accipi non posse. 3. Decem Bestiæ cornua esse septimi seu novissimi capitis propria, juxta illud cap. 17. 12. Decem cornua sunt decem decem Reges, qui sub sexto capite regnum nondum acceperant. 4. Coetum Virgineum succedere Sigillo sexto, eundemque contemporare Bestiæ statui novissimo. Hæc si obtinuerō, reliqua haud agrè sequentur. Illud tamen mirari subit, cur Synchronismum Turbæ Palmiferæ cum Tuba septima hîc erroribus meis annumeret, quem in proximè præcedente censura mihi assensus erat. Dicamne esse ἀμαρτυρία μνημονικόν? Sed jam supersedeo, & Domino Laweno de Stricturis suis gratias ago. Quibus etsi non eò adductus sim ut sententiam mutem; fateor tamen me hâc velitatione, dum mentis aciem, ut solet, ad singula paulò acriùs intendo, non parùm profecisse.

Utque ei de nobilissima illa Quæstione per appendicem tractata, De Magno illo Secundi Adventûs die, non unius aut paucorum dierum naturalium angustiis arctando, sed de longiori multò quàm putatur temporis tractu accipiendo, gratiam referam, ipse quoque Specimen aliquod meum non absimile, jampridem cum amicis quibusdam communicatum, de Interpretatione Tubbæ Septimæ, ceterisque contemporantibus rerum mirabilium Visionibus, adicere non gravabor.

Animadversiones nonnullas in Clavem &amp; Comment.

Apocalyp.

Amplissime atque Ornatissime Vir,

Andem ad te redit tuus Medus, ob cuius concessum hactenus usum ingentes beneficia tuæ humanitati gratias ago: quod tamdiu apud me hæserit, mea fuit negligentia; quamut benigne condones etiam atque etiam rogo. Prodit scriptum Authorem non tantum diligentissimum sed & doctissimum, rerum divinarum cognitione largiter perfusum, & omnis politioris literaturæ ornamentis instructissimum. Reperio autem in schedis meis paucula jamdudum cum primum legendum dedisses à me observata, de quibus, humanitate tuâ provocatus, agere tecum audebo; eâ tamen lege, ut si majoribus distractum gravent, negligere per me liceat.

Dicit in Clavi pag. * 6. sub finem, Ubi cum Bestia imaginem Bestiæ componi videas, (ut cap. 14. v. 9, 11. cap. 15. 2. cap. 16. 2. cap. 19. 20. & 20. 4.) isthuc per Bestiam Pseudopphetam intelligendum esse, per Imaginem verò ejus Bestiam Decemcornupetam seu Septemcipitem restitutam. At repugnare videtur versus 14. cap. 13. ubi Bestia bicornis sive Pseudoppheta dicitur λέγειν τοῖς κατοικοῦσιν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ποιῆσαι εἰκόνα τῷ θανάτῳ ὃ ἔχει τὴν πληγὴν τῆς μαχαίρας, καὶ ζῆσαι. Si enim imago esset Bestiæ bicornis Imago, dicendum fuerat ποιῆσαι εἰκόνα αὐτοῦ, ut facerent imaginem sibi. At jam jubet Bestia bicornis fieri imaginem Bestiæ, alteri nimirum à se. Cui verò? Sequitur, quæ habet plagam gladii, & revixit, id est Bestiæ Decemcornupetæ restitutæ. Agnosco quidem eum pag. * 205. illud [καὶ ζῆσαι] aliter construere, quasi non sint verba Pseudopphetæ, sed Angeli, referentis Bestiam istam casam per novam hanc imaginis structuram revixisse. Sed repono; Antequam ulla imaginis fieret mentio, jam antè dictam fuisse sanatam è plaga, v. 3, & 12. Nec dubium videri quin Bestia hæc Decemcornupeta, quæ ab initio capitis hucusque fuit descripta, fuerit Imperium Romanum restitutum. Cum ergò hinc Bestiæ imaginem fieri jubet, restitutæ jubet fieri: & si hæc imago Bestiæ est ipsa Decemcornupeta, non satis commodè videtur jam injungi incolis terræ ut eam faciant, quandoquidem jam antè eam è mari ascendisse viderat. Satis hæc sunt intricata, explicatiora tamen fortassis futura, si mentem doctissimi viri plenius perspectam haberemus.

Parte I. De Sigillis * pag. 6. suspicari se ait, Apoc. 4. ubi de Mari vitreo agitur, alludi ad labrum non Solomonis, quod æneum, sed Mosaicum, quod ex speculari quadam materia, videlicet ex speculis mulierum, conflatum fuisse perhibetur, Exod. 38. 8. Fateor ex materia speculari, at nullo modo vitreâ, sed æneâ. Moyses enim allato loco expressè dicit, וַיַּעַשׂ אֶת הַכִּיּוֹר נְחֹשֶׁת, Et fecit labrum æneum. At, quid ergò est quod additur de speculis mulierum? Respondeo, fuisse specula merè ænea, sed ex ære adeò polito, ut species incidentes aptè recipere & reddere posset: planè ut Ezech. 1. 7. facies animalium dicuntur כַּעֲרֵי נְחֹשֶׁת קָלִיל, micantes aut scintillantes instar superficiei æris politi.

Ibid. pag. * 8. ait Apocal. 4. 6. verba illa [ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ θρόνου, καὶ ἐν κύκλῳ τοῦ θρόνου] exponenda per ἐν διαστάσει, quasi nimirum dictum fuisset, ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ κύκλου (id est, περιελάττω) τοῦ θρόνου. Quæ sanè dura videtur expositio; mollior futura, si legeretur ἐν μέσῳ καὶ κύκλῳ τοῦ θρόνου. At cum expressè & distinctè bis exprimatür vox θρόνου, consultò innuī videtur, medium ejus distinguendum ab ejus ambitu. Deinde, ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ κύκλου (seu περιελάττω) τοῦ θρόνου distributivè sumere, quasi sensus esset, In medio uniuscujusque quadranguli quod est intra ambitum throni, adeoque quatuor media pro numero quadrangulorum statuere, id magis etiam durum. Velim itaque verba Joannis κατὰ πόδα accipere, nempe nempe vidisse cum quatuor animalia duobus in locis, primum in medio throni, deinde in ambitu ejusdem. Quod ad ea quæ viderit in ambitu throni, rectè docet Vir doctissimus, alludi ad quatuor Animalia vexillis Israeliticis olim impressa, secundum quæ castrametabantur circumcirca Levitas, & mediantibus Levitis circumcirca Tabernaculum. Sed quò referemus eadem 4 Animalia in medio throni seu Tabernaculi? ad locum Ezech. 1. 10. ubi Prophetam 4 ista Animalia vidisse intra, non extra, Templum, patet ex Ezech. 10. v. 3, 4, 5. collatis cum v. 14, ubi 4 rotæ depinguntur 4 vultibus 4 ista Animalia representantibus: nisi quòd pro פני שור vultu Bovis, qui memoratur Ezech. 1. 10. hîc sit פני כרוב vultus Cherub. Quæ collatio (ut obiter hoc injiciamus) suspicionem injicit, כרוב Cherub significare Bovem, à Chaldaico Syriacòque כרב Cherab, aravit; Boves enim arationi adhibebantur. Nisi fortè Hebræi firma sententiæ suæ fulcra habeant, cum Cherubim imagines fuisse statuunt formâ humanâ, & quidem puerorum. Quod enim compositum esse volunt ex כב similitudinis, & Chaldaico רבי puer, puerile est & frivolum. Imò si forma Cherub fuit humana, duæ rotæ habuerint formam eandem Ezech. 10. 14. cùm tamen quaternæ dicuntur habuisse quaternos vultus, & vultus Cherub expressè distinguatur à vultu hominis. Quicquid sit, pulchrum mihi & magni solatii esse videtur, quatuor Animalia, quæ univèrsam Ecclesiæ corpus designant, non circa thronum tantum, sed & in ipso ejus medio conspecta fuisse. Etsi enim ratione externi ministerii à 24 senioribus erga corpus fidelium administrati sint tantum in ambitu throni, imò in ambitu ipsorum seniorum; ratione tamen communionis cum Christo, qui throno ipse insidet, rectè & ipsi intra thronum constituuntur, & per 4 Cherubinorum facies intra tabernaculum coram Deo consistentium representantur.

Pag. * 56. Pro eo quod nunc Amos. 9. 12. in Textu Hebræo habetur, למען ירשו את שארי ארם, olim scriptum lectum videri ait aliter, additque ex Hebraica lecti-one quæ nunc obtinet. Aliterne igitur Scriptura Hebraica nunc habet quàm olim? Absit. Si enim ubicunq; LXX interpretes à verbis Textus Hebraici abeunt, aliter olim scriptum lectum fuisse dicendum est, hui quàm incertum & infinitis in locis immutatum habemus Verbum Dei! Nec legerunt LXX אל pro את: Nomen enim Dei non exprimunt, quod Jacobus ad supplendum sensum addidit. Quomodo autem locus Prophetæ cum verbis Jacobi conciliari possit, in Notis nostris in Acta Apostolorum, quæ lucem nondum viderunt, sententiam nostram sic dicimus; Verba Prophetæ verti solere, Ut possideant reliquias Edom, & omnes Gentes, &c. Hanc versionem difficillimam mihi videri quæ cum loco Actorum concilietur; facilem autem, si את non accusandi, sed, ut alibi sæpe faciendum, nominandi casu accipiat, ac vertamus, Ut possideant (nempe restauratum tabernaculum Davidis, de quo versu præcedenti) reliquias Edom, & omnes Gentes super quas invocatum fuerit nomen meum. Nec dubium mihi est quin sic acceperint LXX Interpretes: transferunt enim ὅπως ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων, καὶ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, &c. Ut requirant ceteri hominum, & omnes Gentes, &c. quæ verba nullum habent sensum, nisi subintelligas quidnam sint requisiti, nempe id quod jam dixerat, dirutum instauratumq; tabernaculum Davidis; pro quo Jacobus non malè substituit τὸν Κύριον: sive enim eos instauratum tabernaculum, sive istius tabernaculi instauratorem Dominum requirere dicas, idem dicis. Adde, quod tabernaculum istud non propter ipsum, sed propter Dominum, essent requisitæ Gentes. Indagandum hîc quoque cur pro ירשו possideant, dixerint LXX ἐκζητήσωσιν, requirant. An quòd sive ex incuria, sive ob exemplar minus accuratè exaratum, legerint ירשו Sic existimatur vulgò, nec repugnans; licet tamen aliud conjectare. Tenendum, apud omnes ferme Orientales verba quæ significant esse, sæpe etiam significare fieri, id est, moveri ad esse: ut פתח aperire & solvere, quia Solutio motus est ad Apertionem; קנה possidere & emere, quia Emptio est motus ad Possessionem; aliq; sexcenta: sic ירש non tantum est possidere, sed etiam movere se ad possidendum. Exemplum sit illud Deut. 2. 24. החל רש והתנר בו מלחמה. Incipe, posside, (id est, possessionem adi) & conflice cum eo bello: non poterant incipere actu possidere, antequam conflixissent & superâssent hostem. sensus ergò est, Incipe adire possessionem. Et clariùs etiam v. 31. החל רש לרשת את ארצו, quæ si vertas cum Pagnino, Incipe possidere, ut possideas terram ejus, Tautologia mera est: nequaquam verò si vertas, Incipe adire possessionem. Ità & hoc loco, למען ירשו. Ut possideant, non tam ipsam possessionem, quàm possidendi studium, denotare existimârunt LXX, quòd requirendi verbo satis feliciter expresserunt. Neque mirum, quòd שארי ארם verterint οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων. Fortassis enim legerunt ארם; aut potius, ut alibi sæpe, hîc quoque Edom latius quàm de propriè sic dicto populo accipiendum sunt arbitrati. Sicut enim duorum Rebecca filiorum minimus Jacob Ecclesiam, maximus natu Esau sive Edom omnes reliquos homines ab Ecclesia alienos adumbrabat: quamobrem in scriptis Rabbiorum Imperium Romanum, præsertim Cum ergò hìc à Propheta Tabernaculo Davidis, id est, Reipublica Israelis, opponantur reliquiae Edom; satis commodè per eos reliquos homines intellexerunt. Nec obstat quòd Apoc. 1. 20. Septem Candelabra exponantur per 7 Ecclesias; diversâ enim ratione & Ecclesiae & Ministris eadem vox tribui potest: ut & aliâ notione Apoc. 2. 5. Pag. * 252. Armageddon cum Drusio vult esse quasi הרמא גֶּרֶן excidium exercitus eorum. Drusius scripsit, non גֶּרֶן (id enim nihil significat) sed גֶּרֶן הָהוּן, ubi הָהוּן est Affixum Chaldaicum. Verùm גֶּרֶן pro turma sive exercitu Chaldaeis non usurpatur, sed pro fortuna. Itaque verisimile non est vocem hanc compositam esse ex Chaldaico הרמא Hebraeo גֶּרֶן, & rursus Chaldaico affixo הָהוּן. Nos resolvimus in הָהוּן מֶנֶרֶן, Montem gloriae vel gloriosum Judica: aut in מֶנֶרֶן הָהוּן, Hostem gloriosum judica, Arabibus מֶנֶר in genere gloriam significat; ut & verbum מֶנֶר, gloriosus fuit, unde apud Hebraeos מֶנֶר res quævis præstantissima & laudatissima, non tantum in genere fructuum, sed & auri, argenti, vestium, ceterarumque rerum quæ laudari solent. Ità sensus erit, cladem inimicorum Ecclesiae futuram in tali loco, cui nomen pii precibus suis facient, dicentes, Montem (vel Hostem) gloriosum judica, Domine, Vel si הָהוּן pro infinitivo accipiamus, & hoc pro nomine, ad verbum erit, Mons gloriae judicii, id est, mons gloriosi judicii. Sic intelligitur Mons Sion, & Synecdochicè Terra sancta; quod laudo.

Plura non addo, Vir amplissime, nè prolixior quàm par est, humanitate tuâ, quâ literarum mearum alloquium benignè admittis, abuti videar, & in salutare illud monitum quod vulgatissimo & eleganti proverbio apud Arabes circumfertur peccare, אֶדָּא כֹּאן, חֶעֱכֵךְ מִשְׁכָּה נָא כִּלָּה כִּרָּה, i.e. Cum fuerit amicus tuus Mel, nè comedito eum totum. Non possum tamen quin quid de hoc scripto sentiam paucis exponam. Synchronismos Visionum acutissimè inventos miror, eosque sic enucleatos & elucidatos video, ut an quid hæcenus in eo genere luculentius prodierit meritò dubitem. Neque me in Visionibus Apocalypticis usque adèd hæcenus versatum agnosco, ut plerisque doctissimi Viri assertionibus refragari aut velim aut possim; attamen neque assensum facile præbeo, cum non satis plenè omnia perviderim, & in abstrusis istis rebus multa conjecturis potiùs quàm solidâ & perspectâ veritate niti videantur.

Ad sententiam certè Chiliastarum ut accedam induci nondum possum. Judæos ad fidem Christi aliquando convertendos, atque id tempus mundo felicissimum, imò ζῶντες ἐν vexπῶν vitam ex mortuis, futurum, firmâ fide amplector: sed Judæos & Israelitas in terram Canaan esse revocandos, Indè Diem Judicii esse inchoandum, Particularem tum fore quorundam resurrectionem, Illustrem tum fore Domini ἐν πυρὶ φλογὸς ἐμφάνειαν, Ibi novum Christi regnum oriturum & per mille annos duraturum, cujus sedes in Terra Canaan sit futura, ac cum altâ pace & tranquillitate Ecclesiam per totidem annos fruituram, aliâq; ejus sententiæ similia, nondum mihi persuaderi possunt. Nec tamen damno qui ista disputant modestè & disquirunt; quippe qui beatum me censebo, si in felicia ista tempora incidere detur: beatior tamen, si afflictionibus Christi in his terris conformi, gloria quoque ipsius in cælis conformem fieri detur. Multa habeo quæ adversus sententiam istam opponam: sed jamdudum te immanis hæc Epistola prolixitas lassat, & à melioribus negotiis importunè avocat.

Restat, Vir amplissime, ut ad Serenissimum Regem tuum profecturo ducem Deum ac reducem precer, qui te & Regiæ Majestati gratum sistat, & familiae deinde tuæ ac nobis sospitem soſpitem reſtituat. Ego interim cum candidiſſimo atque integerrimo tuo meoque Goſſo me oblectabo, cui novum erga literas Hebræas animum ſumentem meam rursus operam addixi. Dignus eſt piorum doctōrumque omnium, atque adeo tuo præſertim, qui utrâque parte excellis, amore, futurus aliquando veſtra in patria & veritatis columnen & eruditionis exemplar. Plura dicere vetat noſter candor. Ego mihi amicitiam ejus magnopere gratulor vel eo potiſſimum nomine, quod per eum tuæ Amplitudini non innotescere modo, sed & charus reddi potuerim. Nihil unquam magis in votis habui quàm piis ac doctis probari; qui ſi iidem & Magnates ſint, quum tria illa rarò in una morentur ſede, in te autem diſjungi noluerint, ingratus forem niſi id mihi auſpicatum dicerem. Vale, Vir Ampliſſime, Reipublicæ veſtræ & noſtræ, tuis & nobis diu multumque incolumis, meque ſemper amore tuo dignare. Datum Lugduno-Batavorum, 25. Febr. Anno 1634.

L U D O V I C I D e D I E U.

Reverende & Clariſſime Vir;

Uas mecum communicavit Nobiliſſimus & ampliſſimus Eques, mihiq; amiciſſimus, D<sup>s</sup>. G. B. Animadverſiones tuas in Clavem meam Commentationeſque Apocalypticas, adeo mihi gratæ acceptæque fuerunt, ut diutiùs ferendum non putaverim nullum te earum exemplar mancupio poſſidere. Mitto igitur hoc quod vides honoris & amicitiae pignus: quod tamen tardiùſculum ſit, (tantam enim fore apud vos exemplarium penuriam nunquam ſuſpicatus ſum) ſpero tamen te nihilominus pro humanitate tua non de dignaturum.

Ego ſanè ex eruditiſſimis Animadverſionibus tuis profeciſſe me non diſſitebor; imprimis ex eo quod mones de verbis iſtis, cap. 4. [Ὁ μέσος τῷ θρόνῳ, καὶ κύκλῳ τῷ θρόνου] non per ἐν δὲ διὰ δύοιν, ut ego volebam, verum rectiùs κατὰ πόδα intelligendis. Lectis enim quæ ex Ezechiele ibi doctè annotaſti, inopinato lumine mentem meam perfundi ſenſi, ſtatimque in eam ſententiam conceſſiſſe, Sellam cui Deus inſidebat abſque dubio quatuor Animalibus geſtataſſe, quorum ſingula, poſterioribus intro latentibus, in ὁμοειδῆ ſibi in circuitu Throni Animalia ora ſua obverterent; quemadmodum apud Ezechielem, divinum Numen legimus Cherubinis quadruplici eorundem Animalium vultu conſpicuis ſubvectum fuiſſe. Atque hoc illud eſſe quod Joannes de Theatro Apocalyptico refert, non ſolum in Throni circuitu, ſed etiam in medio Throni, quatuor iſta Animalia conſpecta ſibi fuiſſe. Gavifus igitur ſum admodum, à duriori iſta expoſitione mea me tam inſperato liberatum, de quo (ut verum fatear) ſcrupulus aliquis mihi ſemper inhæſerat: Eo enim ingenio ſum, (delicatulo, an moroſo?) ut niſi ubi interpreta- tio commodè & abſq; ſalebris eat, nunquam mihi ſatisfacere ſoleam. Porro quod hîc ad- dis de כרוב Ezech. 10. 14. ſignificante Bovem à Chaldaico Syriacòq; כרוב aravit; de hoc quoq; monito gratias tibi debeo maximas, & magnopere confirmatum vellem.

At verò quod Clav. p. * 6. de Beſtia & Image ejus affirmo; ubicunque eæ jugales [* Hujus eſt, pag. 421. ] eant ſive invicem componantur, ibi Beſtie nomine Pſendopropheta indigitari, Image autem Beſtiam Decemcornupetam; id tibi ex cap. 13. dubium videri ais, & omnino intricatum; explicatius tamen fortaiſſis futurum ſi mentem meam plenius perſpectam haberes. Ego igitur ſic ampliùs declaro mentem meam; Me dictum illud meum non ultra extendi voluiſſe quàm ad loca ubi copulatio iſta occurrat, τῷ Θρόνῳ καὶ εἰκόνι αὐτοῦ. Ibi enim Genitivum αὐτοῦ activè, non paſſivè capiendum; ut ſit ſenſus, Imago quam fieri curavit Beſtia, quæque in dominio ejus ſit, פסל, non autem quæ re- præſentet Beſtiam. Quemadmodum nimirum ſi Michæ Idolum diceretur ἡ εἰκὼν αὐτοῦ, i. γλυπτὴν, ut ſanè dicitur, Judic. 18. 31. aut Nebuchadnezzaris Coloſſus (quod forſan forſan hîc alluſum eſt) εἰκὼν Ναβυχοδονοφόρου ὡςque צלמיו τὰς εἰκόνas ſeu τὸς τύπος ὑμῶν, Spir. Sanctus exponit (Amos. 5. 26. Aḡ. 7. 43.) τὸς τύπος ὅς ἐποίησατε ὑμῖν. Quod niſi admittatur, extra caput 13, ubi primò in ſcenam prodiit, nunquam iterum Pſeudopropheta in tota Apocalypſi Beſtia vocabitur : quod mihi non ſit veriſimile, Sp. Sanctum nomen quo primò eum produceret atque deſcriberet nunquam poſtea adhibiturum.

Attamen alibi, ubi Copulatio iſta, quam dixi, τὸ Θηρίον καὶ εἰκὼν αὐτοῦ minimè reperitur, ut cap. 13, libens agnoſco (neque unquam aliter vel per ſomnium mihi ſentire contigit) eandem Imaginem Beſtiæ quoque primæ ſeu Decemcornupetæ Imaginem dici; atque hîc quidem ſenſu paſſivo, & ſimilitudinis intuitu; id eſt, Imaginem quâ Beſtia repræſentetur, imò quâ ipſa ſeipſam, ſed alio atque alio ſtatu, repræſentet. Quod ut rectè intelligatur, duplex Beſtiæ Decemcornupetæ ſtatus diſcernendus eſt : unus in quo plagam accepit, (hic Imperii Romani Ethnicæ, ſeu à Dracone inſeſſi, ſtatus fuit :) alter poſt plagæ curationem, quo Pſeudoprophetæ imperio, religioſo nomine, ſubdita eſt. Poſterior hic ſtatus eſt qui prioris Imago audit; cujus nempe effigiem adeò ad vivum exprimat, ut in eo prior iſte ſtatus, vel Beſtia priore iſto ſtatu, omnimodo revixiſſe videatur.

Atque hinc ſtatim colligere licet, Imaginem iſtam non Decemcornupetæ reſtituta Imaginem dicendam eſſe, ſed Decemcornupetæ caſe; reſtituta verò formam quatenus reſtituta eſt. Quod verò opponis De Beſtiæ curatione ab initio capitis memorata, antequam ulla Imaginis mentio facta ſit; non video cur me à ſententia mea depellere debeat, cùm illud non in eadem ejusdem Beſtiæ hiſtoria fiat, ſed in diverſis viſionibus Beſtiarum diverſarum: quarum quidem una, ſeptem capitibus & decem cornibus inſignis, plagæ quam acceperat curationem adepta eſt; altera verò emplaſtrum edocuit quo curatio illa facta eſt. Quæ duo, utut ſimul eodémque tempore geſta ſint, ſimul tamen narrari non potuerint, eò quòd diverſarum Beſtiarum eſſent, quarum ſuum cuique ſeoriſim attribui oportebat. Quare & illud hîc notandum venit, Apoſtolum, cùm in ſecundæ Beſtiæ deſcriptione mentionem inferat τὸ Θηρίον τὸ πρῶτον, ἢ ἐτετραπύχην ἢ πλὴν ἢ τετράκωπον αὐτοῦ, non ad tempus rei geſtæ, ſed ad narrationis ordinem reſpexiſſe.

Atque hæc de Beſtiis. Sed de Mari quoque Vitreo (* p. 6. Com. de Sigill) dicendum eſt aliquid, quòd alioſumibi ſententiam meam accipis. Neque enim ego iſthic dico, eo non ad Labrum Solomonis, quod æneum, ſed ad Moſaicum, quod ex ſpeculari quadam materia conflatum fuit, alludi, quaſi Moſaicum non fuerit æneum, cùm id Textus apertè dicat: imò expreſſè ſcripſi, Mare iſtud vitreum Labrum illud immane in Templo Solomonis, Mare nuncupatum, repræſentâſſe, quamvis illud æneum fuit, noſtrum verò ex vitrea pellucidâque materia: unde fortaliſe (nempe ob formam iſtam pellucidam) alludi ſimul ad vetuſtius illud Moſaici Tabernaculi labrum ſuſpicari quis poſſit, quòd illud ſimiliter ex ſpeculari quadam materia conflatum fuiſſe perhibetur.

Ad reliquas Animadverſiones tuas, quæ ſerè ad linguarum Orientalium (quarum tu verè Oraculum es) judicium ſpectent, nimis inſcitiam meam & temeritatem proderem ſiquid tibi reponerem, ſiſque, quod aiunt, cum Minerva in arenam deſcenderem. Ut enim in Hebraicis modicum fortè poſſim, reliquarum peritiam non habeo: præterea iſ ſum qui multò magis aliorum judicia audire malim quàm mea præfractè defendere. Interim facere non poſſum quin unum hoc porrò adjiciam; Me nullam adhuc cauſam videre potuiſſe, cur magis in Veteri Teſtamento * variantem lectionem admittere reformidem quàm in Novo; aut cur ubi Apoſtoli & Evangeliftæ lectionem quam ſecuti ſunt LXX (nam aliter eos alicubi legiſſe quàm nos hodie non eſt dubitandum) calculo ſuo comprobâſſe videantur, illos Duces ſequi perinde tutum non eſſet ac Maſorethas.

Aut enim nimium fallor, aut Evangelista hoc loco apud Prophetam in Hebræo legendum innuit יהוה ירדת pro eo quod in nostris codicibus est יהוה ירדת. Quorsum enim alioquin Textum ita clauderet, καὶ οὐκ ἐστὶν μοι Κύριος, & interim nullam τῷ οἴκῳ τῷ Κυρίου mentionem faceret? Imò verò suspicari quis possit, etiam Spiritum S. tria ista Prophetæ capita, 9, 10, 11. genuino suo Authori vindicare voluisse: Plurcula enim in iis sunt quæ, si quis attentè consideret, nontam Zachariæ ætati convenire videantur quàm Jeremiæ: sed quoniam forsitan à Zacharia post captivitatem reperta, ejusque testimonio & fide primum Ecclesiæ commendata, indè factum ut Prophetiis ejus adjungerentur.

Ego verò is non sum qui harum quidquam temerè & solus affirmare velim: quinimo conjecturas hæc meas virorum doctorum, & tuo imprimis, Vir eximie, judicio subjectas volo.

Plura non addo, nisi hoc solum; Unà cum libello meo ad te venire exemplar Epistolæ ad Amicum, quâ sententiam meam de Millenario paulò plenius aperio: in quam me nullâ animi levitate aut studio præpostero delapsum credas velim; sed postquam alia omnia frustra tentâssem, tandem rei ipsius claritudine perstrictum paradoxo succubuisse. Deuste, Vir clarissime, diu incolumem servet Ecclesiæ & Reipublicæ literariæ bono. Ità vovet, &c.

JOSEPHI MEDI Epistola ad Amicum De Resurrectione Prima & Millenio Apocalypico.

C. Confocie,

Uæso te ut Amico tuo hisce verbis rescribas: Me, quamvis, Epistolâ ejus perlectâ, sententiam meam deponere non possim, multas tamen & graves causas habere cum nolim de ea cum quoquam scripto agere; in privato colloquio non recusaturum, sit modò Vir eruditus & candidi moderatq; ingenii quocum mihi congregiendum sit. In rebus enim dubiæ & ambiguae interpretationis me in universum à collationibus quæ scripto fiant abhorre, propter multa eaque gravia incommoda; quantò magis in re nova & paradoxa, ubi necesse fuerit plurima, ad sententiæ meæ quâ explicationem, quâ defensionem, proferri quæ chartæ committere nollem?

In Commentationibus meis Apocalypicis nihil de statu Regni Millenarii particulatim, vel (ut ita loquar) modatim, sive quod Mundum ipsum, sive Sanctos tum resurrecturos attinet, disseruisse; hæc omnia in medio reliquisse, generali explicatione contentum fuisse, idque consultò & de industria. Prius enim me virorum doctorum judicia auditurum, firmiter demonstratum putent Regnum illud (qualecunque tandem sit) adhuc expectandum esse, & quidem in secundo Christi adventu, & post excidium Antichristi, quàm de modo & qualitate Regni & resurgentium conditione conjecturas meas expromam. Frustrâ enim de modo rei inquirere, aut edoceri eum, cui nondum rem ipsam, cui cuimodo sit, unquam fore persuasum est. Hanc habeat detrectatâ Collationis causam, quippe neque fructuosâ, neque periculo suo cariturâ.

Nè tamen postulatis ejus me difficilem nimis & inexorabilem præbere videar, si eum nullo prorsus responso, pro meliori sententiæ meæ intellectu, impertirem; hæc eum scire velle.

I. Nunquam mihi in mentem venisse, ut sententiam meam de Resurrectione prima, aut loco isti Cap. 11. v. 18. aut Cap. 14. v. 13. superstruerem, aut indè probari posse existimarem. Fundamentum sententiæ meæ de duabus Resurrectionibus in unico & solo solo capite 20. repositum habere : cui duo illa loca cap. 11. & 14. interpretando conformia reddidisse, aut quomodo saltem conformari possint, uno & altero verbo indicasse ; neque quid amplius ibi propositum mihi habuisse.

2. Insuper in eodem illo capite 20. fundamentum opinionis meæ, de Regno apparitionis Christi Milenario, quod quidem Millennii durationem attinet, solo & unico collocare : quod verò rem ipsam attinet, [ Regnum nempe sanctorum in terris post excidium Antichristi & Christi adventum in nubibus futurum ] id ex reliquis Scripturis istis, quas cum Millennii vaticinio comparaverim, satis evidenter & firmiter demonstratum esse existimare : Neque justè eum exigere, ut ex omnibus istis locis ipsius Millennii durationem evincerem : hoc enim perinde esse ac si ab eo qui Hominem peccatū apud Paulum eundem cum Bestia Apocalypica affirmaret, exigeret aliquis ut ex loco Pauli ostenderet eum mensibus 42. dominaturum ; alioquin fidem non facturum.

pag. 519.]

3. Porro aliorum & præter mentem meam acceptum esse, quod p. * 245. de interpretatione verborum Pauli [ Mortui in Christo resurgent primi ] ex Tertulliano notaverim ; quasi illud pro mea ipsius sententia laudasset, quod duntaxat similis similitudinum verborum interpretationis meæ illustrandæ causâ fecerim : interim causas habuisse cur ibi iudicium meum interponere noluerim.

c. 32. l. 5.

4. Quod autem ad rem ipsam attinet, me in eam sententiam maximè propendere ( idque præcipuè Pauli autoritate, 1 Thess. cap. 4. motum ) * omnes justos intra Millennium Regni resurrecturos ; sed ordine quodam, & ut Apostolus loquitur, 1 Cor. 15. 23. ἐκαστον ἐν τῷ ἰδίῳ τάγματι primos quidem, idque in ipso Millennii initio, Martyres, deinde & reliquos justos qui Bestiæ morem non gesserint, alios citius, alios tardius, prout Deo βραβεύτη visum : hancque dici Resurrectionem primam, & Luc. 14. 14. Resurrectionem Justorum. Postea verò, decurso Millennio, etiam impios resurrecturos, unaque extremum & universale Judicium peractum iri ; impiis in lacum ignis & sulphuris unâ cum Diabolo detrudendis, Sanctis verò in cœlestes mansiones subvectis, cum Christo æternum victuris. Utut sit, ex veteribus fuisse qui haud dissimiliter de ordine Resurrectionis sentirent, ex locis aliquot Tertulliani colligo ; ut ex

Lib. 3. adversus Marcionem, cap. 24. Post cuius (scil. Regni) Mille annos, intra quam ætatem concluditur sanctorum Resurrectio, pro meritis maturius vel tardius resurgentium, &c.

Item de Anima, cap. 35. — Et Iudex te tradat Angelo executionis, & ille te in carcerem mandet Infernum, unde non dimittaris, nisi modico quoque delicto morâ Resurrectionis expenso.

* Hæc respicere videtur & illud Cypriani Epist. 52. Aliud est pendere in die Judicii ad sententiam Domini, aliud statim à Domino coronari. Agit verò, nisi admodum fallor, de prærogativa Martyrum, &c. Et illud Irenæi, lib. 1. c. 2. Christum in suo de cælis adventu, τοῖς δικαίοις ἢ τοῖς ἐν τοῖς αἰσὶν τῶν γενεῶν, τοῖς μὲν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, τοῖς δὲ ἐκ μεταβάτης, ζῶντες χαρισάμενον, ἀποδεδόσθαι δὲ φέρειν δαῖτα. Μετάβολα enim his pro panis posita videntur, non virtute : Quam panem in Mora Resurrectionis consumit Tertul.

Et cap. 58. In summa, cum carcerem illum, quem Evangelium demonstrat, Inferos intelligimus, & novissimum quadrantem modicum quodque delictum morâ Resurrectionis illic luendum interpretemur ; nemo dubitabit animam aliquid pensare penes inferos, salvâ Resurrectionis plenitudine per carnem quoque.

Frustrâ igitur sunt Pontificii, qui hic se Purgatorium suum reperisse gloriantur.

5. Nusquam dicere Apostolum, Resurrectionem Mortuorum, ( ut vir doctus objicit ) sed Mutationem Vivorum in ictu oculi, & momento peragendam esse.

Psal. 49. 11.
Esaï. 65. 6, &

6. Ἀντιστοιχίαν illam Mortis secundæ & Resurrectionis primæ ( quam tantopere urget ) fallacem esse, neque ullo firmo fundamento subnixam ; præsertim cum nomenclatura illa Mortis secundæ non à Spiritu S. aut Joanne primùm usurpata, sed ex Magistrorum Judaicorum usu desumpta sit, ( ut in * Targum videre est ; ) sic nimirum ab illis nuncupatæ, quod eâ Impii qui à mortuis resurrexerint, quasi secundò morituri sint. Accedit & illud, quod Mors secundæ corporum non minùs quàm animarum sit : ideoque, etiam hypothesi illâ concessâ, non satis tamen commodè probari indè posse Resurrectionem primam non esse corporalem. Sed quorsum de Ἀντιστοιχίᾳ, eaque dubiâ & incertâ, satagitur, cum Συγστοχία, eaque manifesta, ad manum sit ? Annon enim Resurrectio prima & Resurrectio secundæ σὺνστοχία sunt ? Cur igitur hinc non majori verisimilitudine argumentari mihi liceret, Cùm Resurrectio secundæ corporalis sit, ideo similiter primam quoque corporalem esse ? Adde vim locutionis adversativæ : Anima, inquit, eorum qui securi percussi sunt propter testimonium Jesu & verbum Dei, &c. revixerunt, & regnârunt cum Christo mille istis annis : reliqui VERO mortuorum non revixerunt donec consummarentur mille anni. Quis hinc non statim colligit, revivificationem tionem seu Resurrectionem utramque uniusmodi esse? Annon id postulare videtur locutionis istiusmodi adversative usus.

7. Quod porrò de Animarum vocabulo ingerit, tanquam magis (si litera urgeatur) pro sententia Græcorum, de Animarum Martyrum prærogativa ante diem Iudicii, quàm pro mea opinione faceret; id infirmum mihi videri; cùm notiùs sit quàm ut probatione egeat, Animas in Sacris literis non tantùm Personas denotare, sed & * Cadavera: quod quàm aptè huic Apocalypseos loco conveniat, ipsum latere non

8. Ad hæc sciat, (ut de Justis resurrecturis deinceps securo sit animo) eos qui Millennii dogma ritè & ἀρχαϊκῶς, nec perperam, tuentur, sic statuere; Sanctos, qui primâ Resurrectione resurrexerint, vitam beatam, cœlestem, Angelicam, & omnino qualis filios Resurrectionis deceat, per mille annos in terris acturos; neque ab hostibus illis quos iterum solvendus Diabolus concitabit quicquam detrimenti passuros, quippe qui in ipso conatu θεομαχίας & obsidendi Civitatem dilectam de cœlo statim perdendi sint. Reliquorum verò orbis incolarum, qui in lumine Sanctæ Civitatis ambulant, diversam fore conditionem.

9. Præterea Ἀποκατάσσειν istam πάντων, Act. 3. 21. seu Restitutionem || Mundi à servitute corruptionis in libertatem gloriæ filiorum Dei, Rom. 8. 21. inituram cum Resurrectione prima. Sed quò abeo? Consilii mei memor, Scripturariâ isthac cymbulâ aliùs non penetrabo in hoc mare.

10. Unum tamen & alterum adhuc restat, de quo monendus est vir doctus: Me non duos, (ut putat) sed unicum tantùm Christi adventum exspectandum credere; eum nimirum quo vivos & mortuos iudicaturus sit ἐν τῇ ἐπιφανείᾳ αὐτοῦ sed tum adventum istum, tum Iudicium, in mille annos extractum iri.

11. Porrò, aliud esse Regnum quo Christus in Sanctis suis regnat, aliud quo Sancti regnabunt cum Christo. Verum quidem esse, Christum Dominum nostrum jam indè à primo suo adventu Regnum inchoasse, illudque regnum Ecclesiam esse. * Interim & illud haud minùs certum esse, Regnum aliquod in Scripturis promitti adventûs secundi proprium, quod & Regnum κατ' ἐξοχὴν dicitur, adhucque implendum superest. Ut Dan. 7. 14. Luc. 19. 11, 15. & cap. 21. 31. 2 Thess. 1. 5. 2 Tim. 4. 1. ubi ἡ ἐπιφάνεια αὐτοῦ non est, ut vult vir doctus, ἐπιφάνεια ἡ βασιλεία, sed ἐπιφάνεια τῆς Χρυσῆς neque unquam aliter ea vox in tota Scriptura quàm ad Christi adventum significandum adhibetur. Jam & illud ab Apostolo, 1 Cor. 15. testatum habemus, post Iudicium & Resurrectionem plenè peractam, Christum regnum suum traditurum Patri, ut ipse sit omnia in omnibus. Ex his duobus quid sequatur, viris piis & veritatis divinæ studio seriò flagrantibus perpendendum relinquo.

G O G O & M A G O G O

in Apocalypsi Conjectura.

Apocalypsis Codex est Fatorum Ecclesiae Gentium, non Judeorum: Habent enim Judaei de suo Prophetiarum satis in Veteri Testamento, neque nostrā ullatenus opus habent; suis ad omnem Gentis suae sortem, bonam malāve, depingendam abundē suffecturis.

Rem verò de Apocalypsi ita se habere, testatur

Primò, Theatri Apocalyplici hypotyposis, quæ quatuor Animalibus, versùs totidem cœli plagas, circa thronum Dei dispositis, exhibet Ecclesiam Christi, ambitu suo Gentes in quatuor mundi cardinibus complectentem; tanquam scilicet Visionum omnium ibidem spectandarum subjectum.

Secundò, Eòdem (ni fallor) faciunt Angeli verba ad Joannem, cap. 10. 11: Oportet te iterum prophetare ἐπὶ λαοῖς καὶ ἔθνεσι καὶ γλώσσαις καὶ βασιλεῦσι πολλοῖς.

Tertiò, Sed omnium maximè illud confirmat. Parabolarum Symbolorumque Prophetarum in hoc Libro indoles atque ingenium; in quibus nempe passim observare licet, Judeos sive Synagogam Israeliticam personam veræ Christi Ecclesiae ex Gentibus surrogatæ sustinere, Gentes contrà typum Idololatrarum, ejusdemque Ecclesiae hostium; totā nimirum parabolā ex statu rerum sub Veteri Testamento mutuata, in quo veri Dei cultus apud unum Israelē viguit, Gentes verò reliquæ Idolis & Deastris in universum inservierint. Atqui in ea Prophetia ubi Gens Israelitica alienam personam sustinet, ibi suam ipsius gestare nullo modo verisimile est; quandoquidem illud fieri nequit, quin totius Parabolæ ratio conturbaretur. Hinc adeò fit ut tantillum in hac Prophetia reperire sit quod rem Judaicam privatim spectet; nempe illa solummodo quæ cum satis Ecclesiae Gentium colligata atque implicita eatenus præteriri non potuerint. Id quod tum præcipuè usu venit, cum, Sacri hujus Dramatis Catastrophe appetente, eò rem fatorum series deduxerit, ut uterque populus in unum ovile coalescat. Neque tamen ubi vel sic de Judeis aliquid intervenire contigerit, eos aut habitu aut nomine suo Gentilitio produci cernes, verum aliunde adscito charactere (Regum utpote Orientis, aut Sponsæ Agni) designari; quoniam nempe Gentis Judaicæ persona in alterius (ut dictum est) populi parabolam concesserat.

Verum si populus populi, hostes quoque hostium imaginem portare consentaneum est, ut ita parabola undiquaque sibi constet. Hinc igitur Aegyptus & Babylon Apocalypsicæ non sunt Israelitarum Babylon & Aegyptus, sed hostes Ecclesiae Gentium (quæ figuratur Israele) instar illius Babylonis & Aegypti.

Pari ratione Gog & Magog Apocalypseos non sunt Ezechielis Gog de terra Magog, caput Meshec & Tubal, privatus Israelitarum hostis, (Hic enim ex partibus Septentrionis prodit, noster ex quatuor angulis terræ; Hic sub initium instaurationis Israeliticæ, noster post mille annos Regni Sanctorum instaurationem Hierusalem subsequuturi;) sed Gogus alius, hostis Ecclesiae Gentium in unum jamdiu cum Judeis ovile coactæ, quiq; secundam Resurrectionem proximè antecessurus sit, ut ille Ezechielis Primam: quippe utrāq; Resurrectione (unde typi & antitypi convenientia) Gogum suum & Magogum prodromum habiturā; illā Scythicum illum & Aquilonarem, hanc verò mysticum seu (ut Spiritus Sanctus loquitur, cum similiter Urbi magnæ * Sodome & Aegypti cognomentum detulit) πνευματικῶς καλούμενον. Huic interpretationi firmandæ est quòd τὸν Γῶγ καὶ τὸν Μαγῶγ in verbis Apostoli, non subjecti, sed appositi locum faciunt, per quod Gentes istæ quatuor cardinum per modum ἐξηγήσεως declarentur; tum quòd Μαγῶγ hic terram seu locum denotare, sicuti apud Ezechielem, non sinat articulus; Exibit, inquit, (cum consummati fuerint mille anni) Satanas ut seducat τὰ ἔθνη τὰ ἐν ταῖς τέσσαρσι γωνίαις τῆς γῆς, τὸν Γῶγ καὶ τὸν Μαγῶγ. Hic dem beatè victuri, & ( quod uni illi Orbi datum fortasse rebuntur ) à morte revicturi. Sanè antiquum obtinebit Satanas; simili enim artificio primos humani generis parentes olim in exitium præcipitavit, ab eodem in hoc novissimo solertiæ & nequitiae suæ specimine nequaquam recessurus.

Atque hæc sententiæ meæ summa est; cujus penès viros doctos & hujusmodi mysteriorum callentes judicium esto.

Unum adhuc adjiciam. Si verum sit quod Fullerus noster argumentis nonnullis probare contendit, Nationes Americanas Magogiticæ gentis colonias esse, ob brevem Oceani in Scythicis istis oris trajectum, ( alibi vastum nimis & immensum ) non esse quòd quis de Gogi & Magogi nominibus ampliùs litem moveat, aut hac de causâ cum Ezechielis Gogo Apocalypticum confundat. Vid. eum Miscell. Sacr. lib. 2. cap. 4. in fine.

Soli Deo Gloria.

De Regno Ἐπιφανείας Christi accipiendum illud Apostoli ad Hebræos cap. 2. vers. 5.

Οὐ γὰρ Ἀγγέλοις ὑπέταξε τὴν Οἰκουμένην τὴν μέλλουσαν, περὶ ἧς λαλοῦμεν.

Οἰκουμένη enim Terra est, non Cælum. At ubi (inquires) de hac Οἰκουμένη? in præcedentibus locutus est Apostolus, ut dicat περὶ ἧς λαλοῦμεν? Αἰο ab istis verbis versûs 6. cap. 1. Ὅταν ὁ πάλιν εἰσαγάγῃ τὸν πρωτότοκον εἰς τὴν Οἰκουμένην, λέγει, &c. id est, Cum verò ITERUM introduxerit primogenitum [ suum ] in Orbem terræ, dicit, &c. Quæ enim exinde ex Libro Psalmodum ad finem usque capitis citantur, [ de Adoratione Angelorum, de Sceptro reſtitutionis Dei, de Innovatione mundi, de hostium * sub pedibus conculcatione ] omnia, si Apostolo credimus, ad secundum Christi Adventum referenda sunt. Admonitio autem, quæ quatuor primis versiculis Capitis secundi hæc excipit, per parenthesis est legenda. Versu demum quinto ad propositum redit Apostolus, & prolixius exsequitur quæ de Humanæ Naturæ supra Angelos prærogativa differuerat.

Non Angelis (inquit) subjecit τὴν Οἰκουμένην ἣν μέλλουσαν, de qua loquimur; sed [ ei de quo ] alicubi testatus est Psalmodographus dicens, Domine, quid est homo, quid tu; quæ demum in Secundo adventu adimplenda est. memor es ejus; aut filius hominis, quod viſitas eum? Modico minorem Angelis fecisti eum, gloriâ & honore coronasti eum, &c. Et paulò post, Qui verò modico minor Angelis factus est Jesus, ( id est, factus homo, qui naturâ Angelicâ modico inferior est ) videmus, propter mortis perſeſſionem, gloriâ & honore coronatum. Confer Phil. 2. v. 7, 8, 9. Atque hæc, ni fallor, mens Apostoli.

Mirabiliter autem nostri versum illum sextum capitis primi transferunt, ut Primo Christi adventui accommodent: trajiciendo nimirum particulam πάλιν, ac si scriptum esset, πάλιν ὁ ὅταν εἰσαγάγῃ, cum scriptum sit, Ὅταν ὁ πάλιν εἰσαγάγῃ, &c. Cujusmodi trajectionis exemplum nusquam uspiam ostendi potest: Et præterea verbum εἰσαγάγῃ ( præterquam quod cum πάλιν jungatur ) Futuri significationem habeat, cum sit Aoristus secundus Subjunctivi.

Porrò notandum Psal. 97. ( unde testimonium illud de Angelis Christum in Secundo adventu adoraturis desumptum est ) tam apud LXX quàm Vulgatum Interpretem hujusmodi Epigraphæ prænotatum esse; τῷ Δαβὶδ, ὅτε ἡ γῆ αὐτῷ κατέſτατο, Psalmus David, quando terra ei restituta est. Quid hoc rei esse dicemus? An Psalmus quo David Messiam in Resurrectione celebrabit? An quem cecinit postquam ab Absolomo filio pulsus, Regno restitutus est? In Hebræo hodierno Psalmus ἀνεπιγερῶς est. Sed LXX aut in suis exemplaribus reperisse, aut ex Traditione mutuatos addidisse, vix dubitandum est; ut & alios alicubi Psalmodum titulos, qui nunc in Hebræo non exstant.

In versione igitur Anglica vers. 6. pro [ And AGAIN, when he bringeth in the first-begotten into the world ] corrige [ And when he bringeth AGAIN the first-begotten into the world, or, shall bring, ] &c.

Sic v. 8. pro [ unto the Son ] malim [ of the Son ] ut antè vers. 7. [ of the Angels ] nam * eadem sunt verba.

Pro ὡς εἰς περιβολαὶον ἔλθεις vers. 12, ut & apud LXX, sunt qui legendum existiment ἀλλάξεις, facili mutatione. Et ita habet Textus Hebraicus in Psalmo 102.27. וְיִמְחָדוּ, & Latina Vulgata Versio utrobique mutabis eos. Itaque quoque in Psalmo legit Irenæus lib. 4. cap. 6. Neque ab interprete esse, Latinam Vulgatam imitante, conferenti apparebit. Eandem lectionem sequitur Tertullianus adversus Hermogenem c. 34. sed ex Vulgata.

Justinus Martyr Dialogo cum Tryphone pag. 340. Edit. Paris. οὐτὸ γὰρ ὅτιν ἀφ' ἧς καὶ τὸν ἕβανόν καὶ τὴν γῆν, καὶ δὲ ὅς οὗ πατὴρ μέλλει καὶ ἀναιργεῖν ἑαυτὸς εἶναι.

Hic est qui in Jerusalem, ut lux resplendeat sempiterna, faciet. Respicit Esai. 60. 19. cap. 65. 17. Apoc. 21. v. 1, 23. Ex hoc dicto lucem facias Apostolo capite hoc primo ad Hebræos vers. 2, & 12.

Origines contra Celsum lib. 3. p. 179. Gr. Οὐκ ἀριμέτιστα τὸ κατὰρσιον πῦρ, καὶ τὴν κόσμου φθορὰν, ἐπὶ καθαιρέσει τῆς κακίας καὶ ἀνακαινώσει πάντος. Interpres hic non bonâ fide egit.

R. David Kimchi in 56. cap. Esaiæ, vers. 6. Observatio sabbati יסוד גרור magnum est fundamentum in fide Dei; quoniam sabbatum non observabit, nisi qui confiteatur שהעולם מחדש Mundum renovatum iri, quodque eum renovaturus sit qui creaverit ipsum ex nihilo & non est alius præter eum: Quasi diceret, eum qui sabbatum dierum observârit, eo ipso testari se credere sabbatum Magnum, quo Deus Mundum renovaturus sit.

Locum Esaiæ 66. à versu quinto ad Regnum Christi in Secundo Adventu pertinere, testatur Justinus Martyr Dial. cum Tryph. p. 312. In quibus verbis (dictum Esaiæ locum laudat) est τὸ μυστήριον πάλιν τῆς γενέσεως ἡμῶν, (id est, resurrectionis nostræ) καὶ ἀπλῶς πάντων τῶν τὸν Χριστὸν ἐν ἹΕΡΟΥΣΑΛΗΜ φαρίσσαι περὶ δοκούντων, καὶ δι' ἔργων εὐαρεσθῆν αὐτῷ σπουδαζόντων id est, & omnino omnium qui Christum in Jerusalem apparituum expectent, & operibus bonis ei placere studeant.

Ejusdem Vaticinium cap. 45. à versu 14 & deinceps, in eodem Adventu implendum testatur Apostolus, Ad Romanos cap. 14. v. 11, 12. Omnes enim (inquit) stabimus ante Tribunal Christi. Scriptum est enim (nempe in hoc Esaiæ vaticinio) Vivo ego, dicit Dominus, quoniam mihi flectetur omne genu, & omnis lingua confitebitur Deo. Ità enim unusquisque nostrum pro se rationem reddet Deo. Sic ille. Quod si hæc Prophetiæ pars in Secundo Christi adventu, in die nimirum Judicii, adimplenda restet, etiam reliqua eodém pertinere necesse est. Est autem Prophetiæ initium hujusmodi, sic dicit Dominus, Labor Ægypti, & negotiatio Chus & Sabæorum, VIRORUM MENSURÆ, (i. MERCATORUM, נְכַרִּין רְסֻחֹרָא, sic Targum, quod mensuris utantur; non, MEN OF STATURE) ad Te (O tu Captiva, vel O Civitas mea) transibunt, & Tui erunt, post Te ambulabunt, in compedibus transibunt, ad Te incurvabunt se, Te deprecabuntur dicentes, Tantum in te Deus est, & non est alius præter ipsum Deus.

In Hebræo enim omnia hæc pronomina sunt generis fœminini; quare ad Cyrum referri nequeunt, sed ad Jerusalem Captivam, de qua in versu præcedenti mentionem habuit, quémque ad majorem rei évidentiam sic verterem; Ego suscitavi eum (Cyrum) in justitia, & omnes vias ejus dirigam. Ipse adificabit Civitatem meam, & Captivam meam [גְּלוּתִי] dimittet, idque sine pretio & munere, dicit Dominus exercituum. Tunc sequuntur verba quæ paulò antè recitavi, sic dicit Dominus, Labor Ægypti, &c. quasi diceret, Parùm quòd reedificaberis & remitteris; imò verò Magna te, ô Captiva mea, ô Civitas mea, manet olim felicitas, &c. Observandum est enim Dominum indè à fine versûs undecimi respondere quasi interrogationi de Fatis filiorum suorum; juxta quod præmisit, Ventura interroga me de filiis meis, & de operibus manuum mearum præcipite mihi, nempe ut narrem vobis quæ futura sint.

Vivent mortui tui, cadavera mea [נִכְרֵתִי] resurgent, (distributivè enim sumendum יְקִימוּן arguit adjunctum verbum pluralis numeri) Cadavera autem mea, i. quæ pro nomine meo occubuerunt.

R. Solomon, Vivent illi qui propter te mortui sunt, (vult enim Prophetam hîc alloqui Dominum) יֵצֵא רֶכֶּר מֶלֶךְ וְנִי Exiit decretum Regium à facie tua, dicendo, CADAVERA MEA RESURGENT, cadavera populi mei, quorum ceciderunt ossa pro me, illis erit resurrectio. Hoc per antithesin respondet ei quod supra scriptum est, * REPHAÏM NON RESURGENT, hi verò resurgent. Sic ille. Rephaïm autem de improbis interpretatur, שְׂרִיפֵי יְדִיהֶם מְתוּרָה qui remittunt manus suas de Lege: eos in Seculo futuro resurrecturos negat.

CHAP. I.

General Considerations concerning the Order and Connexion of the Apocalyptical Visions.

In a Letter to Mr. Wood of Lenton in Lincolnshire, by way of Answer to his,

I.

THE Apocalypse considered only according to the naked Letter, as if it were a History and no Prophecy, hath marks and signs sufficient inserted by the Holy Spirit, whereby the Order, Synchronism and Sequele of all the Visions therein contained may be found out and demonstrated, without supposal of any Interpretation whatsoever.

II.

This Order and Synchronism thus found and demonstrated (as it were) by argumenta intrinseca, is the first thing to be done, and forelaid as a Foundation, Ground, and only safe Rule of Interpretation; and not Interpretation to be made the Ground and Rule of it.

III.

If the Order, Method and Connexion of the Visions be framed and grounded upon supposed Interpretation; then must all Proofs out of that Book needs be founded upon begged principles and humane conjectures: But on the contrary, if the Order be first fixed and settled out of the indubitate Characters of the letter of the Text, and afterward the Interpretation guided, framed and directed by that Order; then will the variety of Expositions be drawn into a very narrow compass, and Proofs taken from this Book be evident and infallible, and able to convince the Gain-sayers.

IV.

This is that Method which I endeavoured to represent in my Scheme, and demonstrate in the Tractate annexed. In which therefore you shall find all Interpretation set apart and (as it were) disclaimed, and all the Reasons founded upon the bare letter of the Text, taking no notice at all of any Event or Interpretation whatsoever, but leaving all at full liberty: only reserved, that the Order and Synchronism which I represent out of the Text be no way violated thereby; and so let the Interpretation be what it may be.

V.

I dare not be confident that this Order and Series, which I have deduced and represented, is in no part thereof faulty and swerving: howsoever for the main I am well persuaded, and think that if not this, yet something like it, ought to be thought on. But he that shall espy the errors of mine, I desire him to shew me them by such Arguments only as my self make my grounds, namely, from the Characters which the letter of the Text affordeth, and not from Interpretation; because Interpretation (as I said) is to be fitted unto the Order, and not the Order to follow it.

VI.

But for example sake, yield me a-while that this which I have exhibited is indeed the true Representation of the Order and Connexion of the Apocalyptical Visions: See then how admirable the use thereof will be for Interpretation. For if we can once be be assured of the meaning of some one principal Vision, how evident then and ruled will the way be from it to find and discover the rest? Will it not be like a Mariner's Card to guide our way in this mystical Sea? For example, Are we assured what the Prophecy of the Whore of Babylon means? (For here, here, I say, we must first pitch; and therefore (mark it) the Angel himself of purpose expounds this Vision only of all the Visions this Book or Scheme representeth: ) Do we know then what this meaneth? If we do, then behold the scheme, and see there what will follow; viz.

1. That all the Visions contemporating with Babylon's times must be expounded of such things only as belong to the times of Babylon's whoring.

2. All Visions preceding must be interpreted of things foregoing it.

3. All Visions following, of things to be after it, &c. Verbum intelligenti sat est. What a number of ambiguities, uncertainties, and varieties of interpretation will this cut off and strike dead at a blow? It would be as fetters and cords to hold in, yea, as a ginn to intangle, our desultorious and shifting Interpreters, especially our Adversaries, who do susque deque miscere omnia.

The Consideration of these things will make the Apocalypse to appear for the frame and quality thereof the admirablest Prophecy in Scripture: And as much as the divine Revelation of Spiritual Truths in the New Testament surpasses the Old for evidence and clearness; so the Prophetical part of the New for the fabrick and sureness of the grounds for Interpretation exceeds all the Prophecies of the Old.

CHAP. II.

* See the Scheme at pag.
431.

*Particular Considerations for the understanding of the * Scheme,

I.

OMitting the Vision of The seven Churches, which is not generally granted to be a Prophecy: The whole Prophetical part of the Apocalypse following consists of Two main Prophecies; both of them beginning their race at the same Epocha or Terminus à quo of time, and concluding together likewise at the same Goal or Terminus ad quem; that is, they begin ab iisdem carceribus, (as we speak) and run ad eandem metam. The first of these is Prophetia Sigillorum, The Prophecy of the Seals, reaching from the 4. Chap. until almost the end of the 10. which is represented in the upper-half of the Scheme. The second is Prophetia Libri, The Book-Prophecy, beginning at the 8. verse of the 10. Chap. and reaching to the end of the Book; which is represented in the lower or under-half of the Scheme. So that the Book of The Revelation might fitly have been divided into two Tomes, and the second Tome to have begun at the 8. verse of the 10. Chap. at these words, And the voice which I heard from Heaven (namely chap. 4. 1. ) spake unto me again, (i. e. begun anew) and said, Take the Book — And I took the Book — And he said unto me, Thou must prophesie again (that is, begin a new Prophecy ab ovo.) Consider it.

Certainly such a division would be most easie for interpretation, if also every several Vision in each Tome was cast into a several Chapter or Section. And it cannot be denied but the division of Chapters, especially in the New Testament, being but of humane institution, is sometimes so ill ordered, that it doth much prejudice the Reader in understanding the meaning of the Holy Ghost.

II.

That the Times of the Inner Court begin with the Beginning of the Seals.

Now if this Second or Book-Prophecy do begin ab ovo, from the same Beginning of time whence the Seals began, (and without doubt the Seals begin at the Beginning of the Apocalyphtical time) and runs over anew those times which the Seals before traced, till it concludes with them; will not then this reasoning be very reasonable? viz. If the whole Prophecy of the * Book comprehends the whole time of the Prophecy of the Seals, then the Beginning of the Prophecy of the Book begins at the Beginning of the Times of the Seals. But the Beginning of the Book-Prophecy, in the Text, is The surveying of the

the two Courts of the Temple; the first Court measured, the second uncapable of measure: One of these two then must begin at the Beginning where the Seals began. But the Second Court cannot; for it synchroniseth with the Times of the Beast; Ergo the Former must: that is, The Inward Court, (within which the Temple itself stood) being capable of the Divine measure, must note some condition of things and times which forewent and preceded the Rising of the Beast and the Treading down of the Second and Outward Court by the Gentiles. And is there not as much need and use of a measure to distinguish of the different States of the Visible Church in the diverse Times and Ages thereof, as of the differing Members of one and the same time? Consider it. And this granted will open a door for discovery of far more admirable matter than doth the confounding of both Courts into one Time. I confess I was once wonderfully pleased with that Opinion, and Forbes his pretty exposition thereof gave me much contentment: But now at length the Law of synchronistical necessity hath beat me from it, and shewed me (as I think) a far more evident, unforced and useful Exposition. As for the state of the true Church in the times of Apostasy, we have three Prophecies:

1. The Woman in the wilderness.
2. The two Witnesses in mourning.
3. The Virgin-company of the Sealed ones.

And therefore that of the measured Court may be spared for another use.

Aliter.

If any part of the Book-prophecy begin at the Beginning of Apocalyptical time, where the Seals began: then certainly the First entrance thereinto (viz. the measuring of the Inward or Temple-Court) should have a share in this privilege of Firstship. But that some of the sequent Visions of this Second Prophecy do begin at the Beginning of Apocalyptical Time, it is evident; namely (of the Second Vision hereof, Chap. 12.) The Twelve-starry crowned Woman crying in travail, and but then a bringing forth; and the red seven-headed Dragon watching to devour her Child as soon as it was born. Was not this at the Beginning thereof? Ergo, ut suprad.

III.

The Connexion of the Beginning of the Times of the Beast with the Beginning of the Seventh or Trumpet-Seal, from the then Sealing of the 144000, chap. 7. and the Connexion of the End of the Times of the Beast with the End of the Sixth Trumpet, from the then Finishing of the 1260 days of the Contemporary Prophecy of the Witnesses, chap. 11. These, I say, concern me near, and are the two Hinges whereby the Book-prophecy is hung (as it were a door) upon the Prophecy of the Seals, without which there would be no ground in the Text to connect them. If these therefore be wrung from me, the whole Scheme is dissolved and broken, and (that which is worse) cannot again be restored.

The latter Connexion or Hinge I think you grant me, unless your Tenet of the Vials do any way impeach it. Howsoever you deny not the Finishing of the 42 months potestas agendi at the expiring of the Sixth Trumpet, and by consequent you yield according to express Text that the Beast must be well forward in his Downfall and Ruine by that time. The ground of the difference between us is, That I would have the Vials to comprehend all the degrees of the Beast's Ruine, and therefore inevitably begin them before the Seventh Trumpet; You would have the Vials to be but some of the degrees of the Beast's downfall, and therefore have liberty to begin them after the Seventh Trumpet hath sounded.

But for the First Hinge of Connexion by the Sealing of the 144000, chap. 7. you seem to make most scruple; where nevertheless I observe that you grant the thing I seek for [viz. That the Times of the Beast begin with the Beginning of the Trumpet-Seal.] But you question my Ground and Character. But unless this be the Character and so intended, there will be none found at all: Which I desire you to consider together with my Grounds, as followeth in brief.

The Synchronisme of the Beginning of the Times of the Beast with the Beginning of the Seventh Seal or Seal of Trumpets.

The Sealing of the 144000 follows immediately upon the Sixth Seal, and therefore begins with and is coincident with the Seventh; because the Seals follow one another without without interruption of time. But the 144000 sealed ones are one of the Beast's contemporaries, chap. 14. Therefore the Beast also and all under his times must contemplate with the seventh Seal.

* Chap. 7. 1.

That the Sealing of the 144000 succeeds upon the expiring of the Sixth Seal; 1. The Transition shews, * Μετὰ ταῦτα ἑδόν, After these things I saw: which I never find used but when that which follows in the Narration, follows also in order of time. 2. No other reason can be given why otherwise the Course of the Seals should be so interrupted and disturbed by an interlaced Vision, and in that place rather than any other. For if this Vision concern all the Seven Seals, why was it not deferred till they were finished, as is the usual method elsewhere? If it concerned only six Seals, it were something; but the Turba palmifera (the Palm-bearing multitude, chap. 7. 9.) shews it is extended to the End of the Trumpets, &c. Lastly, What need had there been for this Vision to have been at all mentioned among the Seals, were it not intended for a Character of Connexion of the two Prophecies, not else possible to be connected, but left in a wandering uncertainty?

IV.

Whether the Dragon with Seven heads and the Dragon simply mentioned in Chap. 12. be the same.

The Seven-headed Dragon in the 3. ver. and the Dragon simply mentioned in the 4. v. are both one: for the words run thus, v. 3. And there appeared a great red Dragon having seven heads and ten horns. — v. 4. And his tail drew the third part of the stars — And the Dragon stood before the Woman which was ready to be delivered, &c.

The same event succeeds upon the Battel of Michael with the Dragon simply so called, which follows upon the attempt of the Seven-headed Dragon to devour the Woman's Child; to wit, The flight of the Woman into the Wilderness, v. 6, & 14.

What if the one (the Seven-headed,) be Satan in concreto, as he possessed the Seven-headed Empire, as it were the Soul of that bloody Body; and the other which fights with Michael, the same Satan still, but in abstracto? The first, Satan visible, persecuting the Church; the second, Satan invisible, fighting with the invisible Michael; and yet the time of both the same, and so the same event consequent to both?

Another Probleme concerning Michael.

If this Michael in the Revelation be the same with that in Daniel, who should it then be? If Christ be this Michael, why then saith Christ, Dan. 10. 13. Michael one of the chief Princes came to help me? and v. 21. None holdeth with me in these things but Michael your Prince? For that it is Christ which here speaks, will appear by comparing his description in the 5, and 6. verses of that Chap. with Revel. 1. 13. Compare also Dan. 12. 6, & 7. with Rev. 10. ab initio ad v. 7.

Napier would have Michael to be the Holy Ghost; which if it be admitted, then those chief Princes, whereof Michael is said to be one, will be the Persons of the Trinity. May this stand? or will it help the conceit of the ancient Chiliaists for Regnum spiritus? But Napier thought not of any such matter.

V.

Of the Sealing of the 144000 mentioned in Ch. 7.

In answer to a letter from the same Friend.

The Sealing of 144000, Chap. 7. after the sixth Seal was opened, seems not to be Narratio de praterito, but Cantio de futuro; not a Narration of what had passed under the 6 Seals, but a Caution against a danger to come under the seventh. For the seventh Seal coming then to be opened, and being a Seal of destructions; lest the Servants of God might utterly be extinguished in those calamitous ruines and horrible mutations by the Seven Trumpets, they are in this manner secured by the Seal of providence and protection. 'Tis true, the Servants of God were in being before this Time; but not sealed with this Seal of protection until those calamities fell upon the world from which they were to be protected. So Ezek. 9. The faithful Israelites there and then sealed and marked in their foreheads, were in Jerusalem before that time of their marking; but not sealed and marked, but when destruction and (as it is there called) the slaughter-weapon came upon the Land, from which the sealing was to secure them. Read the Chapter, where in ver. 6. the words are, Slay utterly old and young, — but come not not near any upon whom is the mark. Just so here, Chap. 7. v. 3. Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of God in their foreheads.

The words which begin the 7. Chap. confirm this order, Μετὰ ταῦτα εἶδον, After these things I saw: which manner of Transition I observe never to be used but when that which follows it is in time after that which went before. After the Vision of the present state of the Seven Churches, the Seals are for the future, Chap. 4. v. 1. After the six Seals, the 144000, Chap. 7. v. 1. After the 144000, the Turba Palmifera, v. 9. After Babylon's riding the Beast, Babylon's ruine, Chap. 18. v. 1. After Babylon's ruine, the Lamb's wedding, Chap. 19. v. 1. By this observation may be understood that Μετὰ ταῦτα, Chap. 15. v. 5. For there ends the General description of the Seven Vials: after whose performance the Temple of the Tabernacle of the Testimony was opened. That which follows in the remainder of that Chapter and the next, is not a continuance, but a return to a Particular description of every Angel's performance, which before was named but in general.

V I.

That the pouring out of the Seven Vials begins before the Seventh Trumpet:

The Seven Vials appear by the * Text to be the seven degrees of the ruine of the Beast: therefore they must begin when the Beast begins to fall. Now the Beast is to be very far spent, yea even desperately gone to ruine, before the seventh Angel soundeth: see Chap. 11. 7. usque ad 15. For the Witnesses by that time shall finish their Sack-cloth-Testimony, and consequently the Beast's poteslas agendi expire; because his time and that of the Witnesses is the same. * Chap. 15. & Chap. 16.

More particularly: Before the Seventh Angel soundeth, the slain Witnesses revive and stand upon their feet; the party of the Beast is terrified with it: presently the Witnesses are exalted on high. A great Earthquake shakes the Beast's dominion, so that the Δέκατον of the City (perhaps the Deanrie or Decarchie of Rome) falleth thereby. A slaughter is made, and the whole remnant affrighted. By this time, and not till now, the sixth Trumpet expireth, and the Seventh Angel soundeth, v. 14, and 15. This made me place all the Vials save the last within the time of the sixth Trumpet: But the seventh and last Vial I make coincident with the seventh Trumpet, as you may see in the scheme. For the finishing Vial must needs belong to the finishing Trumpet. As for the rest, five of them at least must be poured out before the Beast can be in that desperate case before described: For his Kingdom was not * full of darkness, until the fifth Vial was poured out. * Chap. 16. 10.

For the placing of the Vials all within the seventh Trumpet, there can be no Argument drawn from the letter of the Text. The only reason which might seem to persuade it is a supposed conveniency of proportion, That as the seventh Seal contains seven Trumpets, so should the seventh Trumpet contain seven Vials. But it should be considered that the Vision of the Vials is a part of the Book-prophecy, and not of the Prophecy of the Seals: Which two Prophecies are always distinctly carried; so that in the Book-prophecy there is no relation expressed to the Seals, save only for connexion-sake in the first Vision, Chap. 11. which the Holy Ghost for that purpose throws like a Weaver's shuttle quite through the warp of the Seals: and therefore in the Scheme I express it throughout in red ink, that it might be distinctly discerned. But after this knitting and joynting them once by the sixth Trumpet's finishing, and the seventh's sounding, there is no relation expressed afterward. So likewise in the Prophecy of the Seals, that of the Book is but once referred to, viz. by the 144000 sealed ones and their consequent in the 7. Chap. and that also of purpose to shew the connexion of that Vision of the Book with the joynt which begins the seven Trumpets.

If the seventh Trumpet must needs contain Sevens, it should be rather the seven Thunders which we read to have roared after the sixth Trumpet was expired, Chap. 10. But these were not to be written, nor like to be known till they be heard.

An observable Agreement between the Vials and Trumpets.

Heaven and Earth and Sea,
&c. see in the Author's Comment upon A-

the Vials, and Chap. 8. where is mention of the Trumpets.
See also Chap.
6. v. 12, 13, &c.

FOR the extending the * Physical Analogie observed in the Vials to a futable exposition in the Trumpets, it follows necessarily. And for mine own part, I had first observed it in the Trumpets; and observing the Event in Story to be answerable there, I transferred the like unto the Vials afterward. For I supposed the Trumpets to import the seven-fold Ruine of the Roman State, as the Vials did the Ruine of the Antichristian Beast which arose out of the Imperial dissolution. That as the Antichristian Beast is an Image of the Cæsarean Empire, in the fashion of its power and Regiment: so should also the Ruine thereof in the Vials carry a semblance of the Ruine of that other in the Trumpets; that it might be a true Image not only of the Empire standing when it stands, but of it falling when it was dissolving. And this I took to be the true cause of such agreement between the Vials and Trumpets.

II.

Of the Inner Court which John was bid to measure, and its Order and Connexion with the other Prophecies: and That the Times of the Inner and Outer Courts are not coincident.

For the fetching of the Prophecy of the Inner Court as high as the Beginning of the Seals, my Argument was not, Some part of the Book-prophecy beginneth there, Ergo, this or that doth. In this largeness I confess it were Sophistical indeed. But I reasoned thus; Some part of the Book-prophecy beginneth there, Ergo, the First doth: yet I grant it follows not by Apodictical necessity, but it may persuade morally as a probability. For why should not the Holy Ghost, beginning a new Prophecy, be deemed to begin first with that Vision thereof which fetcheth his beginning highest? Which will be the more perswasible if you consider, that this is one of the most methodical Books in Scripture. But if the Beginning of the Inner Court be coincident, and no higher than that of the Outward Court, it must then follow even by that little you yield me, That the Vision of the twelfth Chapter fetches his Beginning higher than it. For the Woman's Child-bearing, her Travail, her Delivery, with the Seven-headed Dragon's Attempt and the Battel of Michael, you grant, and the Text evinceth, to be elder and before the Woman's abode in the Wilderneck: But the Woman's abode in the Wilderneck, the XLII months of the Beast, and the XLII months of the Outer Court begin altogether and at the same time: Therefore that which is elder to any one of them, is elder to every one of them. Why therefore should not the Book-prophecy have begun rather with this of the eldest beginning, unless that that wherewith it begun did fetch its Beginning as high as it?

All this notwithstanding I confess ingenuously, that your exceptions do so far weaken my Argument, that it appears not to be of so sufficient strength as may force assent. But that which is enough to stagger a man in his own Tenet, is not alone sufficient to cause him to embrace the contrary; unless the Arguments shewn for that part do appear of more force and probability than himself grounded upon. Otherwise a man may reply as he in Terence did to the Lawyers, Probè fecistis, multò sum incertior quàm dudum. Besides, a Probability stands in place of a Demonstration, till a greater Probability can be brought to shoulder it out. Let me therefore acquaint you a little what scruples arise in me when I consider your Argument for the contrary.

You say, s. John surveyed both the Courts together. For the measuring of the one, and leaving the other unmeasured, were at one time: Ergo, the things signified by them both fall also under one time.

Resp. I. Here I consider first, when a Representation is made not by Motion or Action, but by a standing Type or Picture, (such as is the Fabrick of the Temple) though the parts may be viewed all at one time, yet may the thing signified by them be of differing times: for in this case Order of place useth to signifie succession of time.

For

For example, The scheme I sent you may be comprehended at one view; and yet the parts according to their order of place do represent priority and posteriority of times. The Monarchical Image in Daniel was not by piece-meal, but all at once, presented to Nebuchadnezzar's view; and yet the four metallated parts thereof were Types of four (not coincident, but) successive Kingdoms. So the seven Heads of the Whore-ridden Chap. 17. Beast in this Prophecy, though seen at once, signified nevertheless Things not at once, but some past, some present, some to come; five Kings fallen, the sixth present, and seventh to come. Verse 10.

In the Temple it self, the First Tabernacle, or Holy Place, was a Type of the Oeconomy of Redemption in the Church Militant; and the Second Tabernacle, or the Holy of Holies, of the Church Triumphant in the Heavens. So S. Paul to the Hebrews makes the first Tabernacle the Type of the Body of Christ, wherein being incarnate he suffered here below, and through which as through a First Tabernacle he entered within the Veil, the Holiest Heavens, there to make intercession for us. Was there not here a priority and posteriority of times? Why may not then the two Courts of the Temple be Types also of successive times, though S. John viewed them at one time?

Indeed where the Representation consists in Motion and Action, I grant the case is otherwise: for here things done together in Vision are to be expounded of things to be performed together in signification. But the example we have in hand is not of that sort: For the essence of the Type here consists not in what S. John himself did, but in that which was presented to S. John in Vision; namely, the Frame of the Temple with his two Courts: the First, such as might be measured with divine measure; the Second, such as could not be measured therewith, being possessed and trodden down by the Gentiles. As for S. John's acts hereabouts, they are no other than such as whereby he was to inform himself concerning that which was shewed unto him. Neither is this the only place where S. John is bidden do something for his information and survey of the Vision shewed him: Vide cap. 7. v. 13, 14. cap. 10. v. 4. cap. 14. v. 13. cap. 19. v. 9.

Resp. 2. Secondly, Neither were the Acts whereby the Apostle surveyed the two Courts, either one Act or two Acts at one and the same time, but several Acts at several and successive times. For first, the Text expresseth no more but what the Angel bade S. John do, and not what S. John did. Now it will not follow that that which was comprehended in one bidding was therefore done at one time: For that may be bidden with one Act of bidding which will require a two or three acts in performing, and those too such as cannot be done at one time. But perhaps you suppose there was but one only Act commanded, to wit, to measure the Inner and not the Outer. Indeed if it were so, then it must needs be of one time: For if there be nothing here but the Doing of a thing in one place, and not doing it in another, it cannot possibly be of diverse times, because every positive implies his negative, and goes together with it. But if the words of the Text be considered, there will be found more in them than so; howsoever our Translation obscures it.

For first, I conceive not S. John's survey of the two Courts to be an Act of mere Separation, but rather of Examination, as the nature of measuring importeth. Again, there is more to be done to the second Court than only Not measuring it; that were but doing nothing to it: For the words of the Text are not, Leave out, (if thereby you understand a pretermission only) but Ἐξέλθε ἔξω, i. e. Cast it out: the Vulgar hath Ejice foras; and Beza, though himself translates Exclude, yet confesseth it is ad verbum, Ejice foras. So that here we see a positive act commanded, and not a pretermission only; and our Translators when they turned it [ Leave out, ] expressed rather what themselves conceived, than what the words signified.

This considered, I understand it thus; That in this survey S. John was first to examine the Inner Court, which by its conformity to the Divine measure which he was to apply thereto he should find to be sacred. That done, he was then in the next place to survey the Outer Court; which because he should find possessed by the Gentiles, and therefore not capable of the Divine measure, he was to cast out, that is, excommunicate, and pronounce unsacred and polluted. See Ezek. 44. 6, 7, 8. The summe of all this discourse is in a word, That howsoever I conceive the Object of this Vision to consist indeed in the Representation of the Temple with his Courts, and not in the Acts of S. John informing himself about them; yet will neither of them both infer a Coincidence of time, but rather a Succession of the things signified by them.

III.

The mystery of both Courts explained.

Now what material and profitable consequent for the Interpretation would ensue upon this Order, which you say you see not, if you will promise not to object it to me as a breach of mine own Tenet, (as you threaten at the very mention) I will, if I can, tell you: Not to make it the ground of my Order, for which you see I bring other Arguments, but to counterpoise your affection (if it be any) to that other exposition, which may otherwise, though unperceived, secretly make the balance of assent to propend one way more than another. If therefore the foresaid Order may be granted, the Interpretation will be as followeth.

1. The Inner Court measured by the Divine Reed is the Visible Church in its primitive purity, whenas yet Christian worship was unprophaned and answerable to the Divine rule revealed from above: which state contains the whole time of Persecution under the Ethnick Emperors; the Altar in this Court most fitly insinuating the continual Sacrifice of Martyrdom during the most part thereof.

2. The Second or Outer Court represents the state of Apostasy under the Man of sin, when the Visible Church being possessed by Idolaters, became in the publick worship so inconformable and unapt for Divine measure, that it was to be cast out, and accounted not as Christian and Sacred, but prophane and polluted.

3. By the Time expressed for the prophanation of the Outer Court, we may gather the Time implied for the lasting of the purity of the Inner Court; and that in this manner.

4. It is demonstrated by Villalpandus out of Ezekiel's measures, That the largeness of the Outer Court was such, that it contained the Inner Court three times and a half in quantity: Ergo, the Time of XLII months, which the Holy Ghost allots to the Outer Court, should likewise contain the Times of the Inner Court thrice and a half: But if this be so, then the Time allotted to the Inner Court is XII months, because the XLII months of the Outer contains it thrice and a half. Or thus, The Time allotted to the prophanation of the Outer Court is three years and a half; Ergo, the Time implied for the measured Purity of the Inner or First Court must be One year, if the Times hold the same proportion each to other which the largeness of the Courts did.

* 30 Days to every Month.

5. Now a year or twelve months is 360 days, according to the Chaldean count of months; and if you add the 5 dies Embolismales, which they added always to the end of their year, (though they were reckoned in no month) it will be 365 days: which days Prophetically taken will inform us, That the Visible Church continued in the Primitive Purity of Christian Worship, answerable to the Divine measure, the space of 360 or 365 years. And is it not a matter of consequent to know as well how long the Church continued pure and regular in Christian Worship, as how long it was to be prophaned afterward by Gentilizing Idolatry? Nay shall I tell you a stranger conceit? Was it not this which the Devil harped upon, when (as S. Austin reports) * he made his Oracles to give out, That the Christian Religion should last but 365 years, (for so long, forsooth, Peter had enchanted the world to adore Jesus of Nazareth) but after this time once finished, it should be extirpated by the Gentiles? How think you? doth not some body else study Prophecies as well as we? But I hope we shall understand them better: For the Devil was deceived in expecting a Total ruine of Christian Religion, and his malice made him forget what Christ said to Peter, That the Gates of Hell should not prevail against his Church. And yet S. * Austin tells us that he gained so much by this device, that many of the Gentiles would not be gotten to turn Christians till this time were expired, and that they saw their hopes frustrate.

IV.

From what Epocha are the 360 or 365 years of the Church's Primitive purity to be reckoned?

94.

But from what Epocha of time should this 360 or 365 years be reckoned?

Resp. There can be but four Epochas; viz.

1. Christ's Birth.

2. Christ's Passion, Anno 33.

3. The Destruction of Jerusalem, An. 70.

4. The Time of the Revelation of this Prophecy to S. John, Anno 94.

Let

Let us try from them all, and see how it will succeed. By the First we have the time when the Christian worship began first to swerve from his wonted correspondency to the Divine measure, viz. An. Christi 360 *. All our Divines confess that about this time, and not till this, began the Idolatry of Reliques and Saint-worship first to enter. By the two next Periods, An. 393 * and 430 *, you have the degrees how Apostasie palpably increased. By the last Period (from the time this Prophecy was given) Anno 454 *, you shall see the Time when the measured Church together with the Western Empire quite expired, and from that time forward was to be reckoned as prophane and polluted.

* * * *
If you will count the Embolism of 5 days, then add
5 years more to each of them;
For Genfericus took Rome the year after; nor was there any afterward that may be truly accounted Emperor, though some Tyrants scuffled for that name some few years after.

Observe one thing more. That according to this reckoning the Oecumenical Council of Nice will fall within the compass of the first Period, before the Church yet swerved, the Council of Constantinople within the second, the Council of Ephesus in the end of the third, the Council of Chalcedon in the end of the fourth and last Period. Thus far we profess our subscription to the decisions of Oecumenical Councils; but after this time, Ejice foras, Cast it out; it is no longer measured, therefore take heed of measuring by it. And all this is as evident in Story as any exposition of this Book whatsoever. I do but briefly point out what I have thought much more of, and could perhaps set forth more accurately, but that I account all this and the rest as vain, if the Order I ground upon appear not well founded upon the Text it self.

Thus have I dilated somewhat largely upon this point, because I desired fully at once to represent my conceit unto you, and will not hereafter say any more of it pro or contra, but leave that which hath been communicated by us both to be at leisure considered by both, till God shall to either of us reveal what we may resolve to be his Truth.

[ In the Author's Manuscript here follows the Ichnography of the Temple and its Courts; the same with that in his Comment. Apocal. cap. 11. verse 2, 3. which the Reader may there view. ]

You see the Ichnography and Platform of the Temple's Fabrick. The whole building, Courts and all is called in Scripture Ἱερόν. The Temple it self (which was not open as the Courts, but covered) is called Ναός. Hence you never read that Christ or his Disciples came into or taught in the Ναός, but in the Ἱερόν, namely in the Outer Court where the multitude assembled to pray. This Outer Court was a most stately Building with Columns and Cloisters round about, and also within divided as it were into Partitions with stately Rows of Pillars.

S. John seems by Θυσιαστήριον to mean the whole Sacrificing-place, and not only the Altar (specially so called (viz. whereon the Sacrifice was laid,) as may appear by the words which follow [ And those that worship therein. ] The Outer Court he calls Ἀυλὴ ἡ ἔξωθεν τοῦ Ναοῦ The Court without the Temple; because the Ναός or Temple stood not in this, but in the other Court, which was also the Place or Court of Sacrifice.

CHAP. IV.

Mr. Mede's further clearing and vindication of some passages in the foregoing Paper; with some Observations concerning the 7. Thunders contemporary with the 7. Trumpet, as also concerning that in Dan. 12. 7, 11, 12. ---- and that in Apocal. 11. 19. & chap. 15. 5, 8.

Retegat Deus oculos utrinque nostrum, ut intueamur mirabilia ejus.

Mr. Wood,

I Received your last; doubt not but with like acceptance I did the former, which I not only keep, but use to read over 5 or 6 times at the least: and though I always assent not, yet I am always better'd by them, either to strengthen what I found weaker than I took it to be, or to learn to express my self with more caution and perspicuity than (as I perceived by their Objections) I had done; or oftentimes they minister the occasion of some new Notion which before I thought not on.

But for answer to your last, I know not well how to deal ; for that ( unless I misconceive you ) all is grounded upon a mistake almost total of my meaning. It may be I have committed some fault in my expression, and I must therefore desire you to amend my defect therein with a second reading of that Letter, if it be worthy for you to take so much pains. In the mean time I suppose you mistake me in these particulars following.

1. First, You suppose that I oppose the Temple ( Naos ) to the Courts : whereas I oppose the Courts one to the other, viz. the Inner Court ( wherein the Temple and the Altar stood, and where the Priests and Levites only worshipped ) to the Outer Court, whither every body came.

2. You suppose that in my Interpretation I oppose the Invisible or latent Church to the Visible and apparent : whereas I oppose the Primitive Visible Church, which was pure, to the After-Visible Church, which was corrupt. For both the Courts, both Inner and Outer, were sub dio, open and uncovered, and therefore both signifie a Patent and Open Church, that is a Visible one.

3. You suppose ( if I understand you ) that when I say Measured Church, I mean Actively, as though the Angel continually were measuring the Church during the Six Seals : whereas I mean Passively, that the Church during that time was measured, that is pure, conformable and keeping measure, even in the Outward Visible Form, which afterward it did not.

4. You suppose I make the Temple with its Courts a Type of the whole body of the Church partly Visible, partly Invisible at the same time : whereas I mean of the Visible Church only, and that considered as Successive according to the diverse times thereof.

Concerning the rest of your Letter, I have no time to answer as I would ; only in brief I say thus much.

1. That concerning the Thunders of the seventh Seal, seventh Trumpet and seventh Vial, I cannot yet conceive your meaning. For I acknowledge no other seventh Seal but the seven Trumpets ; and cannot understand how any thing of the seventh Vial should concern the present times, since you make all the Vials yet to come : nor how any thing of the opening of the seventh Seal should concern the times which are now, seeing the greater part of the seventh Seal ( viz. six Trumpets thereof ) is already past. Indeed the seven Thunders after the sixth Trumpet may be, if not present, yet very near, if we could understand them.

2. Concerning the Time, Times and half a Time, and the 1290 and 1335 days, in the twelfth of Daniel, I labour not to reconcile them ; because I suppose they are diverse Times, and of diverse Subjects, and of a diverse beginning and ending. Namely the Time, Times and half a Time are of the Tyranny of the little Horn with eyes and a mouth speaking great things, &c. Dan. 7. 20, 25. at the expiring of whose blasphemous Tyranny, the scattering of the Holy people, and the great Mystery shall be finished ( Dan. 12. 17. ) But the 1290 and 1335 days are the times of sealing and closing up of the knowledge of these Wonders, to be at length disclosed and revealed at the expiration of* these times.

* Of the beginning and ending of these days, see the Author's elaborate Discourse toward the end of this Third Book, De Numeris Danielis, &c.

3. I cannot yet conceive how the Opening of the Temple in the seventh Trumpet ( Apocal. 11. 19. ) makes any thing for proof of the Contemporation of the Two Courts, or for the understanding what is meant by measuring or unmeasuring them. For our Question ( N. B. ) is about Courts, and not the Temple, howsoever the Angel describes the Inner Court by the Temple, Altar and Priests-worshippers therein, which are the Contents thereof. But this Opening of the Temple at the seventh Trumpet, that the Ark of the Testimony might be seen, should I think rather be compared ( as a Synchronistical Character ) with the 5. verse of the 15. Chap. where in the end of the General description of the Vials, as a consequent of their pouring out, it is said that the Temple of the Tabernacle of the Testimony was opened. And verse 8. in the entrance of the Particular description of the Vials ( N. B. ) begun in the former verse, it is answerably said, that the Temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God, and from his power, and no man was able to enter into the Temple till the seven Plagues of the seven Angels were fulfilled : as if then this smoke or cloud should be removed, and the Temple thereby become open to be seen and entred into. Which should come to pass at the blast of the seventh Trumpet.

In all which there seems to be an Allusion to Solomon's feast of seven days dedication of the Temple ( 2 Chron. 7. 8. ) during which the Cloud of the glory of the Lord filled the Temple, Temple, (not the * Courts) so that the Priests could not stand to minister by reason of the Cloud, 2 Chron. 5. 13. nor enter thereinto, chap. 7. 1, 2. So that the pouring out of the seven Vials may seem as it were a Dedication of the Church of Christ, after it had been so long prophaned by Antichrist; till the finishing of which Dedication the Nation of Priests or Priestly nation of Israel cannot enter, nor the Ark of the Testimony be revealed unto them. Consider Exod. 40. vers. 36 & 37. Consider also what happened there at the Dedication of the Tabernacle, vers. 34, 35.

Thus with my prayers, and best remembrance to your self—I rest and am
Your assured friend,

Christ's-Coll. July 12. 1624.

Joseph Mede.

* For Solomon prayed before the Altar at that time, and blessed the Congregation which stood in the outward Court 2 Chron. c. 6. v. 12, & 3. and they sacrificed that day and all the time of the Feast, viz. in the Courts, though the Priests could not enter the Covered Temple for the glory of the Lord which filled it.

CHAP. V.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Mr. Wood's special accommodation of the four first Trumpets, in Chap. 8. of the Apocalypse.

Mr. Wood,

IF I mistake not your meaning, your accommodation of the Trumpets appears to me very much intangled in the point of Time: for it makes the three first Trumpets to begin at the same instant, and all to be concluded within the sixth Seal: nay, if the sixth Seal be the wounding of the Roman Sovereignty by the Barbarians, * they will begin before it. For the Council of Nice wherein Arrius (whom you make the * falling Star) was condemned, and where Contention among Church-men (your first Trumpet) burst forth, and Ambition (your second Trumpet) was broached; this Council was held An. 325. within two years after Constantine was sole Emperor. But the wounding of the Empire by the Barbarous Nations (your sixth Seal) began not till after Julian 365. and you make not the main stroke thereof till the year 410. by which time the Arrian Heresie was well cooled. For it cannot be said that the Barbarous Nations defaced the Roman Majesty in the days of Constantine, who was a glorious and (when he once reigned alone) a most peaceful Emperor. And for Diocletian that bloody Persecutor before him, he was a most powerful and victorious Emperor, in whose time the Roman Empire was more dreadful to the Neighbours than it had been many years, yea almost Ages before.

* Viz. the Trumpets.
* Chap. 8. 10.

I observe also a further confusion of the three Trumpets among themselves: For Arrius, whom you make the falling Star in chief, and so the Head of your third Trumpet, will in time rather challenge to be the first of the three: for the Arrian heresie began before, and occasioned the calling of, the Council of Nice, where you first begin that Contention and Ambition which you make the first and second Trumpet.

I had rather therefore yet continue my opinion, That the great Earth-quake of the Sixth Seal should be that intestine change of the Romane State begun with Constantine, and fully settled with the death of Julian: For an Earthquake implies not a Destruction, but an extraordinary Alteration and change of the face of things; as an Earthquake changeth the posture of the Earth by depressing Hills and exalting Vallies, turning the chanel and the course of Rivers, and such like. And was not here the whole Politick Government as well as the Religion altered, the Imperial Seat removed, the Distribution of Provinces and Offices new moulded? &c. And though Christian Religion be of it self a perfection, yet the introducing thereof turned the former state of the Empire topsy turvy; when the low and trampled Vallies arose into Mountains, and the haughty Mountains were laid as low as the Vallies. How many Hills and Islands were by this means displaced? And if the Roman Gods be any of the Stars or Hills here mentioned, we need not go farther for an Exposition of this Earthquake and the shock it caused in the world.

Now if this be granted to be the right accommodation of the sixth Seal, then will the Trumpets of the seventh follow in their due Order, according to that Exposition of the four first Trumpets which you related even now as your Friend's, who yet is far from deserving and acknowledging that Description you there give him.

M<sup>r</sup>. Mede's Answers to those 3 Arguments of M<sup>r</sup>. Wood endeavouring to prove That the Vials are immediate Consequents of the Seventh Trumpet.

M<sup>r</sup>. Wood.

1. Unto the Seventh Trumpet is attributed the last of the three great Woes Chap. 8. 13. & chap. 11 14. But in the Seventh Trumpet's effect there is no other Woe described but what follows in the pouring out of the Vials. Ergo, the Vials must needs be that Woe, and immediately poured out upon the blast, which the Transition (Ch. 11. 14.) calls for—The third Woe cometh quickly, viz. with the blast in the next words.

Mr. MED E. This Reason methinks were satisfied if only the last Vial fell within the seventh Trumpet: For the third Woe I take to be that Battel of the Great Day of God Almighty under the seventh Vial; which therefore I grant to be concurrent with the Beginning of the blast of the seventh Trumpet not yet blown. But the other Vials I see no reason why they may not be referred to those Beginnings of the Ruin of the Beast and exaltation of the Undeified Church described chap. 11. v. 11, 12, 13. which is before the second Woe or sixth Trumpet be expired.

Mr. WOOD. 2. The Temple is not open in Heaven until the seventh Trumpet blow, Chap. 11. 19. Now the Angels which pour out the Vials, come out of the Temple which was opened in Heaven. Ergo, the pouring out of the Vials must needs follow the blast of the Seventh Trumpet Chap. 15. 5, 6. Which place shews that the 7 Angels come forth of the opened Temple.

Mr. MED E. It is true that the Temple is not opened in heaven till the seventh Trumpet soundeth. But I think also that it shall not be opened till the seven Plagues of the seven Angels be fulfilled: For is it not expressly said so, chap. 15. 8? And the Temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God and from his power, and no man was able to enter into the Temple till the seven Plagues of the seven Angels were fulfilled. So I understand it as having reference by way of Antithesis to that in the 5. verse.—The Temple of the Tabernacle of Testimony in heaven was opened, viz. when the Angels had done their Execution, and the Harpers ended their Song of Deliverance. Wherefore I grant not that the seven Angels came forth of the open Temple; but suppose those five first verses of that Chapter to be a general Description of the Vials, with the state of the Church under them newly washed in the glassy Laver of the Temple, and yet standing upon the brink or brims thereof, chaunting a Song of another Exodus like that of Israel; with the conclusion whereof the Temple of the Tabernacle of the Testimony in heaven is opened, that those might enter which before could not. In the following Verses, beginning, And the seven Angels came out, &c. the Apostle resumes the Vision ab ovo, and makes a more particular Description of the seven Angels Executions which before he but generally touched; but now tells their attire, whence they had their Vials, and what was every ones Plague in particular, to the end of the next Chapter; which is therefore ill severed from the three last Verses of this 15. Chapter. And note that the Complutensis Editio reads not the sixth verse of this Chap. And the seven Angels came out of the Temple; but, ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, out of Heaven.

Mr. WOOD. 3. These seven Angels (chap. 15. 1.) are said to bring the seven last plagues, wherein the whole wrath of God is accomplished; which is nothing but the branching out of the the third Woe, and therefore after, though under, the last Vial.

Mr. MED E. The Vials, as I take it, are called the seven last Plagues in reference only to the * seven Trumpets, which are the seven first Plagues; the first ruining the old Beast, the last destroying the new which is risen out of his Ruines.

C H A P. VII.

The Virgin-Company of the 144 thousand Sealed ones, described in Chap. 14. of the Apocalypse, briefly interpreted.

THis Vision of the Sealed Ones I begin and end with the Times of the Beast, taking them for the same with those whose Sealing began with the beginning of the * Seventh or Trumpet-Seal; with which Seal I also begin the Times of the Beast, supposing that Sealing there was purposely interlaced to be compared with the Vision here, that thereby we might know in what part of the Seals to fix the Beginning of the Beast: to which no Character of the whole Book will direct us, but only the Parallel of the Sealed Number beginning and contemporary with the seventh Seal (chap. 7.) and here again reiterated, as beginning and comporary also with the Beast. * Chap. 7.

For the Accommodation, I understand it to be A Description of the Faithful and Undeiled Company of Christ under the polluted times of the Anti-christian Beast next before mentioned. And they are described, 1. By their Head, the true * Lamb Christ Jesus, and not he that had * Horns like a Lamb, but spake like the Dragon. * Chap. 14. 1. 2. By their Place, which was even Mount Sion, that elevated and conspicuous part of the World, where men visibly professed the Name of Christ, and where his Apostles had once founded him that Temple which now Antichrist usurped. Nor were these Faithful Ones tied to any one part of this Mountain above other, (as the false Prophet's Followers are to their Cathedra Petri) but they * follow the Lamb whither soever he goeth. * Chap. 13. 11. 3. By their Worship in praying and praising God, wherein they were undeiled Virgins, not polluting themselves with the Mother (or Metropolis) of Fornications, though their Religious Song seemed a new one, and was such as none could sing but themselves. * Chap. 14. 4.

This is the General description of their state during the whole time. After which followeth that which passed between them and the Followers of the Beast in their later time; which is twofold: 1. Preaching and Admonition under three Angels; 2. The Acts of Execution, which are two: The one of an * Harvest, wherein Christ their Master and Lord of the Harvest sends forth Labourers into his overgrown Field and reaps it: which I understand of the present Reformation, wherein our Lord hath gathered his Wheat out of that Field of Weeds, and bound it together in new-erected Churches. Next after this Harvest comes the * Vintage, an Execution of Vengeance, as soon as the Grapes are once bloud-ripe. This Execution is yet to come, though it seems not farr off: For the Reapers bring little Wheat home of late; whereby it should seem that Harvest is in a manner done, and the time of Vintage a-coming. This is the sum of what I have as yet conceived of this Vision. * Verf. 15. * Verf. 18.

Moreover, supposing this Vintage to be yet to come, I am much inclined to think that * this 1600 furlongs without the City should be a Designation of Peter's Patrimony or the Demeains of the Church, which in the longest extent thereof from the Walls of Rome to the River Po is exactly 1600 furlongs, or 200 Italian miles: whereby it is probable that the Pope's own Territories, Stato della Chiesa, may prove the Cock-pit of this Execution, whether Christ as into a Wine-press will from all parts gather the bloody Grapes when he means to tread them. * Verf. 20. ]

* Decemb. 27.

Your Letters and Book found me in * suffolk at Sr. Martin Stutwill's. I thank you for communicating your elaborate Meditations, to which and your Letter I would have made a large Reply had I been at home, and not a non-resident from my Study, and hourly molested with such occasions of interturbation as the place and solemnity brings.

Enquiry I.

Concerning the four Wights, Revel. 4. 6, &c.

This attendance upon the Throne of God by the 24 Elders and the 4 Animalia or living creatures is a Representation of his pitching in the Wilderness, in the midst of the Levites, and the 4 standards of the Congregation having for their Ensigns (as the Jews say by ancient Tradition) a Lion, a Bullock, a Man, an Eagle. For the manner of their encamping was this. 1. In the midst was the Tabernacle or Throne of God. 2. Round about the Tabernacle and next unto it pitched the Priests and Levites. Then 3<sup>ly</sup> the Body of the Congregation divided into 4 standards and placed about the Tabernacle, East, West, North and South. Three Tribes went to a Standard, which were called by the name of the chiefest Tribe. The first on the East-side of the Tabernacle was the Standard of Judah, which contained Issachar and Zebulon, and had for the Ensign a Lion. The second on the West was the Standard of Ephraim, containing Manasse and Benjamin, and had for the Ensign an Oxe or Bullock. On the South was the Standard of Reuben, comprehending Gad and Simeon, and had for their Ensign a Man. On the North-side pitched the Standard of Dan, with whom encamped Asher and Naphthali, and had for their Ensign an Eagle. All this you shall find Numb. ch. 1. ch. 2. ch. 3. saving the specification of the Ensigns, which is from the Jews Tradition; the Text only saying they had * Ensigns, but expresses not what they were. And marvel not that S. John should here allude unto a Tradition of the Jews; for elsewhere in this Book he alludes to their Customs and borrows their Phrases; as in that of a walking in white garments, and in the phrase of the Second death, a speech no where else in Scripture, but frequent in the Targum and in the Jewish Doctors.

ch. 6. 11. & ch.
7. 13.
b Ch. 2. 11. &
ch. 20. 6. 14. &
ch. 21. 8.

And that this Tradition hath some warrant, some which I have met withal in my search would prove out of the 68, or, according to the Vulgar, 67 Psalm, vers. 11. Thus the 8. verse begins, O God, when thou wentest forth before thy people, when thou didst march through the wilderness; The earth shook, the heavens also dropped at the presence of God: even Sinai it self was moved at the presence of God, the God of Israel. Thou, O God, didst send a plentiful rain, whereby thou didst confirm thine inheritance when it was weary. Vers. 11. * Animalia tua habitabant in ea, Thy living Creatures dwelt therein, namely in thine inheritance. And this is express according to the Hebrew, בה יתכן ישבו חיה signifies properly, Animal, and sometimes Armentum, whence we borrow that Metaphorical translation, to turn it, Thy Congregation, and by inheritance to understand Canaan; whereas the people of God were usually * so called, and that part of the Psalm seems to speak of what God did in the Wilderness, and not in Canaan: Which being not understood, made the Vulgar to be corrupted by turning the Præter-imperfect-tense into the Future, as vers. 10. Segregabis for Segregabis, and vers. 11. Habitabunt for Habitabant, contrary to the Hebrew, which reads in the Præter-perfect-tense ישבו have dwelt.

* The Lxx. have
Τὰ ζώα σου.

* Israel is often in the Psalm, and elsewhere in Scripture called God's inheritance.

But above all, those four Faces of the four Cherubins which drew the Chariot of God in Ezekiel seem to have reference to some such matter. I say four Faces, not four four Heads, as some take it; for the Cherubins had but one Head each of them, on the four sides of which Head were the likenesses of four Faces, to signify that he that rode in the Chariot was the Lord of the four Standards of the Tribes of Israel. Even as Kings horses carry upon them the Armes of their Master, as ours of England, Scotland, France and Ireland. And if you consider to what part of the Heaven Ezekiel looked when he saw this Vision, you will find these Faces turned to such quarters of the Heaven as were assigned to the Ensigns they resemble, as the Lion's face Eastward, the Bullock's Westward, &c.

If all this be true, you see what reason I have to make S. John's 4 Animalia to be the Body of the Congregation, as answering to the 4 Standards of the Congregation of Israel; and the 24 Elders to be the Pastors, as answering to the Levites and Priests divided into 24 Courses; their * Crowns and * Seats being distinctive, * Ver. 4. to express their preeminence above the Congregation: For though the Body of the People be a Society of Kings and Priests, yet this is no note distinctive nor comparative, but common both to Pastors and People.

Enquiry II.

Concerning the Beginning of the times of Antichrist in the Scheme, and the meaning of the 7 Trumpets.

The beginning of the Apostatical times was knit to the Beginning of the Seventh or Trumpet-Seal by the Characters of the Text. If therefore the interpretation of the fifth Trumpet of the Rise of the Pope cannot stand with this connexion, it must be rejected as untrue, as I verily believe it is. For (as I have heretofore intimated) I could never believe, no not before I thought of any Synchronism, that the Trumpets concerned any rising of the Beast, but that they were Warlike alarms sounding to the Ruin of the Roman state. The first brings forth that terrible bloody and furious storm of the Northern Nations pouring in upon the Empire, and harrying, burning and spoiling it, especially in the West, almost 45 years together without intermission. The second the bloody rending in pieces of the Roman Jurisdiction in the West, and sharing it among the barbarous Nations, who divided the Lion's skin amongst them, erecting that * plurality of Kingdoms fore-prophefied of by Daniel and S. John. The Third Trumpet brings Lapsus Hesperii, the Fall of the Occidental Star, or utter extinction of the Western Caesar. The Fourth the abolishing of the whole Roman Majesty in the West in their Senate, Consuls and Prefidents; the Sun and Moon in those parts having no light remaining. * Ten Kingdoms.

These Four Trumpets (as you well observe) made way for the Rising of Antichrist, but it was by taking that out of the way which hindered (2 Thess. 2.) and by wounding the Beast, that he by the cure thereof might make a new one (Apocal. 13.) But withall he slowed no time: For as soon as the Empire began to crack he began to advance; and for every degree of the Empire's failing mounted a degree of rising. And his age and time is to be reckoned not from his maturity, but from his birth; as we reckon a man's age not from the time he came to man's estate, but from the time he was first editus in lucem.

The first four Trumpets were smaller ones, and more particularly concerned the West: but the Three remaining are more general and terrible, and therefore called WOES. The Fifth is that darkning cloud of the Saracen Locusts, who out of Arabia not only overwhelmed with their innumerable troupes the greatest part of the Empire, even Italy itself, but eclipsed the Light of Christianity with an abominable seduction. The sixth Trumpet is the inundation of the Turks from Euphrates, who were first mercenaries to the Saracen Empire; which when they had ruined, they overwhelmed and destroyed utterly the Greek Empire and part of the Western Kingdoms, for Idolatry. The seventh Trumpet is yet to come at the Battel of Armageddon, which shall give an end to the Antichristian Sovereignty, and finish the Roman times.

These Expositions, you see, are homogeneal and fitting the name of Trumpets: But to make some of them Warlike invasions and others to be Heresies, is to bring things of too-differing a nature under one name.

Enquiry III.

Concerning the Slaughter of the Witnesses.

I willingly grant that the Slaughter of the Witnesses is not yet accomplished for the main, though perhaps there have been some Preludiums of it in particular Churches. So you see I did your Opinion no wrong Concerning the not fulfilling of the Vials, though I began them before the seventh Trumpet soundeth. For if the Witnesses be not yet slain, the sixth Trumpet is not yet past, and the Vials may yet begin under the times thereof, and be in a great part poured out before it end. I am glad to hear you read the words of the Text (Apocal. 11. 7.) When they were about to finish their testimony; for so should ὅταν τελίσωσι be turned, whereas our Translation puts it in the Præter-perfect tense, which cannot stand. Τελίσωσι is the first Aorist Subjunctive, and every Grammarian knows that the Aorists Subjunctive supply the place of the Future which the Subjunctive wanteth; and our Translation turned the same tense futurely and the same word, Apocal. 10, vers. 7.

Enquiry IV.

Of the Demi-Cæsar, and the Seventh and Eighth Head of the Beast.

I never thought the Demi-Cæsar to be an Horn, but an Head: and Mr. Brightman's exposition of the Ten Horns for so many successive Christian Emperors I could never sufficiently wonder at, it being not only in it self harsh, but offering extreme violence both to the Text and Story, and contrary without cause a fundamental Exposition received from utmost Antiquity, viz. That those Ten Horns should be a plurality of Kingdoms whereinto the ruined Empire should be divided, and all of them submit themselves under the Authority of Antichrist. I could shew that in the beginning these Kingdoms were just Ten, neither more nor less, and I could name the Kings which reigned in them when they first filled that number of Ten. According to the inconstancy of humane things they have since changed in their number, sometimes more and sometimes less, by unions and disunions, and yet often jumped in their alterations upon that number.

Vide Comments.
Apocal.
ad cap. 8. vers.

When I speak of the Demi-Cæsar of Rome, you must not understand me of the German Emperor, which I grant to be no other but one of the Ten Horns, which the Pope hath dignified with the Cæsarean name, 350 years after the Western Cæsar was extinguished: and the Kingdom of the Franks had been a Kingdom 380 years before the Pope honoured Charlemain the King thereof with the Imperial title, for his good service against the Lombards in his quarrel. The Demi-Cæsar therefore which we have to deal with is the Latin or Western Emperor which reigned after the Division of the Empire into East and West, under which the old Rome was Lady but of one half of the Provinces which she once had, the rest being taken from her, and given to Byzantium together with the title of Nova Roma. This Half-Cæsar of Rome after the last Division under Honorius and Arcadius continued about 60 years, or not much more; which is the cause why S. John saies, it should continue but a short space, Ch. 17. 10.

Now to understand the Question about the Seventh and Eighth Head of the Beast, &c. these grounds must be lay'd and granted.

1. The Heads of the Beast are to be conceived as climbing one above another, and the Ten Horns to grow upon the last or uppermost Head.
2. The Heads of the Beast are indeed but Seven and no more, as appears in the Visions both of the 13. and 17. Chapters; and though S. John speak of an Eighth King in the interpretation, yet he had but Seven Heads in all in the Vision. And therefore that which he calls an Eighth can be indeed but the Seventh, and termed an Eighth for some accidental respect only.
3. The Whore rides the Beast under his last Head only, which is the Head which wears the Ten Horns: For whilst the other Heads were in their course, she was Ethnica, not yet adultera.

Enquiry V.

How is the Last Head, though indeed but the Seventh, yet in some sort an Eighth?

1. In respect of the Sixth Head, the Cæsars, which though indeed but One, yet for some accidental respect may be accounted Two, Cæsars and Demi-Cæsars; for essence the

the same, but for extent and some manner of government * differing. Now if the Sixth Head be reckoned for Two, the Seventh will be an Eighth, and yet but one of the Seven.

2. The Last Head is for the beginning but a Seventh, because it immediately succeeded the sixth, viz. of the Cæsars: but for its continuance and ending it is an Eighth, because it outlived a Seventh, namely that of the * Demi-Cæsars. For the Papal Sovereignty began with and as soon as the Demi-Cæsars, and so it was a Seventh as well as they: But they continued but a short time, and the Papal outlived and succeeded them, and so was an Eighth à parte post, though but a Seventh à parte ante.

These I take to be the true Reasons why the lastmost Head is counted both a Seventh and an Eighth, though in truth it be but the Seventh according to the Vision, and accidentally termed an Eighth in the interpretation. You know Mr. Brightman makes Two States of the Antichristian Beast, the First wherein he was born and presently wounded to death, the Second wherein he revived: in respect of the First he is the Seventh, in respect of the last the Eighth. But this will not agree with Story, the Popedom receiving no such wound as he speaks of: The wound was the Empire's and not the Popedom's, and made for him, not against him. It would have been better to have made the Two States, the one of his Spiritual Sovereignty, and the other of his Temporal joyned unto it in ordine ad spiritualia.

Forbes makes that Kingdom of the Ostrogoths in Italy to be the Seventh, (but the Demi-Cæsars had been better) and the Popedom in respect of it to be the Eighth in order, but in the nature of the government to be one of the Seven, that is like unto the Cæsarean or sixth. But I see not how the Kings of the Goths can be taken for Roman Cæsars or Kings; and besides by this means the Beast would have Eight Heads really differing, whereas the Vision shews us but Seven.

* The Cæsars were Pontifices maximi as well as Augusti, and received the Pontifical Stole at their inauguration; yea Constantine and his sons received the Stole and bore the Title, though they executed not the Office: Gratian was the first that refused both. * The Demi-Cæsars kept their Court at Ravenna, never at Rome.

Enquiry VI.

Concerning the Numbers of Years, Months and Days in the Apocalypse.

That these Numbers should be taken definitely, there can be no better Arguments brought than those you have in your Tractate. If you desire to hear them in my form, I would order the matter thus.

1. That the Numbers are to be taken definitely.
2. That those of Months and Days are to be expounded not Literally, but Prophetically.

That these Numbers should be certain and definite, is proved,

1. Because all Numbers of Times in Prophecy throughout the rest of the Scripture are such. 120 years warning of the Flood, Gen. 6. 430 years of the Peregrination, Exod. 12. The 40 years travail in the Wilderness according to the 40 days spent in spying the Land, Numb. 14. The 65 years by the end of which Ephraim should cease to be a Kingdom, Isai. 7. 8. Ezekiel's 390 days from the Apostasy of Jeroboam to the Destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, ch. 4. Nebuchadnezzar's 7 times, that is 7 years, bestial melancholy, Dan. 4. The 70 years captivity. Daniel's 70 weeks which the Jewish state should continue after its Restauration, ch. 9. The 2300 evenings and mornings allotted to the Calamity under Antiochus, from the beginning of the Transgression of desolation unto the time the Temple was cleansed, ch. 8. Why should the Prophetical numbers of Times in the Revelation be only indefinite? Should not the Prophecies under the Gospel be as perspicuous and determinate as those under the Law?

2. The Scriptures use no Numbers indefinitely but such as the Use of speech in the language of the people had made such. For the Scripture speaks according to the language of men, and useth such Figures as they used. Now in the Hebrew tongue Seven and Ten were by use of speech made of indefinite signification, as Seven times and Ten times for Oftentimes; as also Thousand thousands and Myriads of myriads when they would express an innumerable company. The Latin and Greek have likewise their peculiar Numbers which Use of speech hath made liable to indefiniteness: as the first, Sexcenti; the latter, Χίλιοι χιλιάδες mille millies, when they express a great number indefinitely. And to use any Number indefinitely but such as the Use of speech had inured to that sense, would seem a great absurdity.

The Numbers of Times in Dan. 12. have also been taken definitely by those who yet differ about their Eposbai.

3. Compound Numbers are never taken indefinitely either in Latin, Greek or Hebrew. Compound Numbers I mean those which are compounded of Units, Tens and Hundreds, &c. Those which are of heterogeneous parts; such as 42, the number of Months in the Apocalypse; 1260, the number of Days; Three times and a half, which is a number of Fraction; Let it be shewn that such Numbers as these were of indefinite use. For as the Scriptures use words in that signification wherein men used them: so spake they in those figures of speech which men used, and that in those words which they had inured thereto.

* This is more fully demonstrated in the next Chapter.

* Roma meretrix rides the Beast under his last Head.

The Second thing is, That these Numbers of Times, half-times, of Months and of Days in the Revelation, are not to be interpreted Literally, but Prophetically; not for single years, single months and single days, but for Anni annorum, Menses & Dies annales; Days for Tears, and Months for Months of Tears. * Which appears 1. Because the things reported to fall out in them require a longer time than 3 single years and an half; viz. Ten Kingdoms to be founded at the same time with the Beast, who should first submit themselves unto him, and after revolt from him; to have power over all Nations, tongues and people; to make war with the Saints and overcome them; and such like. 2. Because the King, Seignior or Sovereignty next before this, under which the * Whore rides the Beast, is said in respect thereof to continue but a short space; which implies that that which follows should continue a long time.

Thus I have confusedly and in haste answered all you propounded in your Letter. If you reply, I will deal but with one point at once in my after-answers. So I shall, by contriving my meditations into a more exact and perspicuous expression, both save a labour which obscurity often occasioneth, and answer with ease, whatsoever business attends me.

CHAP. IX.

Five Reasons clearly demonstrating That the Antichristian or Apostatical times are more than Three single years and an half.

1. BECAUSE impossible so many things, and of such quality as are to be performed in this time, should be done in Three single years and an half. As 1. Ten Kingdoms founded at the same hour with the Beast, (ch. 17.) 2. Peoples and multitudes of Nations and tongues to serve and obey him, (ch. 13.) 3. To make war with the Saints and overcome them, ibid. 4. To cause all that dwell upon the earth to worship him, ibid. 5. Babylon to ride the Beast so long, that all Nations shall drink the wine of her fornication, all Kings of the Earth commit fornication with her, (ch. 17, & 18.) 6. The Merchants, and all those that had ships in the Sea, to grow rich by trading with her, (ch. 18.) These things should ask more than three years work or four either.

2. Because that King, State of Government, Sovereignty, Seignior (or what you will) of the Beast, under which the Whore should ride him, followeth immediately upon a former which in comparison is said to continue but a short space, Rev. 17. 10. But if the Antichristian State shall continue but three years and an half literally taken; how short must the time of that foregoing King or Sovereignty be, which should occasion the Holy Ghost to insert so singular a note of the difference thereof from that which followed, That it should continue but a short space? Doth not this imply that the next State (wherein the Whore should ride the Beast) was to continue a long space?

3. Because if the 1260. daies of the Witnesses (which begin and end with the Time of Antichrist) be literally to be taken, then must their three daies and an half, wherein they lie slain by the Beast (Chap. 11. 9.) be so taken also: But how is it possible the nations and people of the earth should make feasts, send gifts and presents one unto another in three daies and an half? how should the Half day be a competent time to distinguish or limit any of the Actions there mentioned? If the Holy Ghost had meant nothing but daies, would he have been so precise for half a day?

4. Because six of the Trumpets and the things which they bring to pass, by necessity of contemporation are included in the compass of the Antichristian time; Two * Chap. 9. v. 5. whereof by the express times mentioned in them (in the Fifth, of * five months; in the the sixth, of * 13. ) take up a year and a half, that is near half the time : Which * Ver. 15. though far too little ( if literally taken ) for the great things prophesied in them, yet what time will they leave for the Four other Trumpets, and for the Seven Vials, which all are poured out upon the Beast, and afore his times are finished? What time alone will the sixth Vial require for * preparing the way of the Kings of the East, for the * Chap. 16. frogs to go forth unto the Kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battel of that great day of God Almighty, &c? 12, &c.

5. Lastly, from the Event. If Antichrist's times last no longer than is supposed, then either are they past long ago, or that sixth Roman Head, which in S. John's time was, is yet still in being. But that cannot be, when neither Greek nor Latin Caesar are now remaining. If any say, the Latin Caesar yet remains in the Germane Empire, as that which succeeded unto it; I demand, What succession can that be where was near 350 years interruption, a longer time than some famous Monarchies have had for their whole continuance? If the Cesarean State may revive and continue the same after so many years interregnum, how shall we ever know when it is dead for adoe, and the time come that Antichrist should be looked for? Besides, if the Times of Antichrist be so short, and therefore yet to come, ( as they must be, unless they be longer, ) then are we yet under the Times of the Red Dragon, and all the Trumpets yet to come. Let it be shewn how this can be. If it appear we are not under those times of the Dragon, then none of the Revelation is yet fulfilled.

Object. But what example elsewhere in Scripture of Daies signifying Years?

Ans. Daniel's seventy weeks. But you will say, the Etymologie of the Hebrew word שבעות is as applicable to Sevens of Years as Sevens of Daies; and therefore this instance proves not. I answer, The question lies not in the Etymologie, but the use, wherein שבעות always signifies Sevens of Daies, and never Sevens of Years; where-soever it is absolutely put, it means of Daies, is no where used of Years.

Object. But in the tenth of Daniel we find, as it were for distinction sake, Weeks of Daies; which intimates there are Weeks of Years, which the use of the word might indifferently signifie.

Ans. It is ill translated; the Vulgar is better, which hath Daies of Weeks, Lugendam trium hebdomadarum diebus; meaning, that Daniel fasted and did eat no meat in the day-time for three weeks together, or some such like sense. Gen. 29. 27. The Week which Laban would have Jacob fulfil before he gave him Rachel, was not the Seven years service, but the Seven daies of Leah's wedding-feast, as the * Targum translates, and the Vulgar, Imple hebdomadam dierum hujus copule; nor can it be otherwise by the age of Rachel's children.

Dan. 10. 2.

* Targum Hierosolym, & Targum Jonathanis.

Secondly, Let it be shewn in all the Prophecy of Daniel, ( or, for ought I know, in any other of the Prophets ) where times of things prophesied expressed by daies are not to be understood of years: For when the Angel means daies in Daniel, he expresseth it therefore not by daies ( for so it were doubtful ) but by * evenings and mornings, chap. 8. 14. where he speaks of the time of the persecution of Antiochus.

* ערב בקר

A brief Demonstration and ( as * I conceive ) unanswerable of the Contemperation of the four Timed Prophecies in the Apocalypse: viz. Of the Gentiles treading down the Court and Holy City 42 months; Of the Witnesses preaching in Sackcloth 1260 daies; Of the Beast's power of doing 42 months; Of the Apostolical Woman's continuance in the Wilderness a Time, Times and half a Time, expressed also by 1260 daies.

* This is the Author's own Argument to what follows.

1. The Times of the Beast and of the Witnesses come out together, viz. at the end of the sixth Trumpet ( Chap. 11. ) Ergo, being equal times they must needs begin together, and so contemperate throughout.

2. The Times of the Beast and of the Woman's being in the Wilderness have the same Epocha and beginning, namely the dethroning and vanquishing of the Red Dragon ( Ch. 12. ) Ergo, being equal times they must also have the same ending.

3. The Times of the treading down the Court and Holy City by the Gentiles and of the Sackcloth-prophecy of the Witnesses are concurrent by the plain construction of the Text, which gives them to prophesy all that heavy time. Besides, when the Witnesses have finished, we find the Gentiles angry, as being driven from their possession in the Temple, Ch. 11. vers. 18.

C H A P. X.

A Discourse of the Beginning and Ending of the 42 moneths, or 1260 daies, (Rev. 11. 2, 3.) wherein Alstedius his Four Epocha's are examined.

S I R,

I Waved not the Question of the Ending of the XLII months more than that of their Beginning; for as I designed their Beginning in a latitude, so by consequent I do their Ending. If they begin between the years 365 and 455, they must end between the years 1625 and 1715. Only I refused precisely to determine the year of their ending, which for some reasons I supposed should not certainly be known till the Event should make it manifest; according as was not the precise Beginning of the LXX years of the Babylonish captivity, till the Event discovered it by their Ending. For when the articuli are more than one to begin at, who can determine at which God will reckon the beginning, and consequently at what precise year shall be the ending? Yet as God accompted the LXX years of the Babylonish captivity from a remarkable moment of that latitude of time the Jews were entring into: so I believe the same All-wise God will do the period of the XLII months, from some remarkable moment in the latitude of their beginning. Howsoever, because such remarkable moments or terms are more than one, all that we can say is, That it shall be from some one of them, and it may be from some one we observe not, God in his wisdom (till he sees fit) veiling it from our eyes.

For Alstedius, I will ingenuously confess, I had never observed those passages of his Chronology you acquaint me with, as having never been nor yet am owner of that Book, though I think I want few of his other Writings, in which I have met with many passages tending to the same purpose with these of his Chronology, here and there scattered, but no where so fully and ex proposito. I sought up and down for the Book, and some two days since I got a sight of it so long as to read the pages you quote, and no longer: yet because you desire my judgment of the Years he setteth down, I will answer something for your satisfaction; and first lay the ground to examine them by. (viz.)

The Holy Ghost reckoneth the Epocha or Beginning of Antichrist and his Apostatical times from the taking of that which hindred out of the way, that is, the then-reigning Imperial Sovereignty of Rome, 2 Theff. 2. 6, 7, 8. or as S. John expresseth it, from the deadly wounding of the Head or Sovereignty of the Roman Beast, which in his time ruled; or the shivering of the Empire into a plurality of Kingdoms upon that deadly wounding, Apoc. 13. 3. with chap. 17. 12. When that great City should cease to be the lap of that Sovereignty which the Cæsars once held over the Nations, and many new upstart Kings should appear in the place and territory of that once One Empire; then should the Times of Apostasy with that wicked One make their entrance. Therefore as the Epocha or beginning of the Apostatical times in a latitude is to be fetched from that deadly blow or downfall of the Cæsarean head in a latitude: so he that would conjecturally point out any precise year where to begin those times, must do it from some remarkable step or degree of the Cæsarean blow or downfall in the same latitude. Where note further, that the Cæsarean blow or downfall may be accompted double. First, Religious and Sacred, as he was Draconicola, by a dismounting and dethroning of the Dragon which actuated and enlived him: Secondly, Political, by the ruin of his State and Majesty. Some of the places I now quoted may seem more to respect the one, some more the other. Antichrist, we see, hath cured them both; the First by a new Idolatry, the Second by his usurped Tyranny.

Let us examine Alstedius his Four Epocha's according to this ground.

The first is Anno Christi 362. which was ill pitched, it being the very time of the Dragon's recovery of the Imperial Throne under Julian, not any moment or step of his dismounting; and the Empire flourishing under one Monarch, not falling or disshivering. Nor is his Reason good, Because then began the persecution of Julian; for that argues that the Dragon was not yet down: Nor the other, Because of the Schismatical contention of the Roman Popes; for what reason can there be why the Schism of the Popes should be the Epocha of their dominion, and of the times of Apostasy under them?

them? Besides, the Event shews this was no Epocha of the 42 months; for then the expiration of them should have appeared anno 1622. by some mortal blow to the Antichristian state; but it proved contrary. Alstedius addeth the three years and an half of the Slaughter of the Witnesses to the end thereof, hoping they should have revived Anno 1625. but, alas! they did not. He that would chuse an Epocha about Julian's time, might with much more probability have pitched upon 365; because then upon Julian's death the Dragon was dethroned again from the Imperial rule, never to recover it any more: howsoever the Draconical or Ethnick worship, which Julian had restored, was publickly exercised by allowance of the succeeding Emperors, (though Christians,) and not put down for many years after. Wherefore the Event hath made manifest that God would none of this Epocha, else should we have seen some tokens of it ere this time.

The next is Anno 376. from whence the 42 months would expire 1636. This hath more probability than any other he hath named; because the year 376 was the beginning of the Reign of the Emperor Gratian, who first of all the Christian Emperors renounced the great Pontificality long annexed to the Imperial dignity, and refused the Pontifical Stole, when it was tendred him according to the custom by the Collegium Pontificum, saying it was unlawful for a Christian; whereas all the former Christian Emperors (mirabile dictu) had admitted it, being installed and instyled still Pontifices Maximi, and according to that office ordered all business concerning the Ethnick ceremonies by their deputies. So long therefore as the Emperours were still the Dragon's Pontifices, he had yet some title, at least some titular dignity, in the Roman Sovereignty; and the losing thereof may be reckoned a remarkable step of his dismounting and downfall: and so no marvel if he might then be brought to go seek out some other Pontifex to undertake his service. But the doubt will be here, whether it were this year wherein Gratian rejected the Pontificality, or some other; for the year is not yet set down in Story: only it may most probably be thought to be the first year of his Reign à morte Patris, for he was created Augustus in his Father's life-time. Secondly, In the same year 376 the Goths entred the Empire; and so the foundation was laid also of the Political downfall of the same. But what Alstedius his Reasons be to pitch upon that Epocha I know not; he seems for this and the rest of his Chronology to rely upon Astrological grounds from the great Conjunction. But though I believe these rarer Conjunctions may fit and dispose the Bodies of men for some such work as God will do by them; yet I think them not sufficient to determine times; especially seeing they have no influence upon Polities and States directly, and quà talia, but only make some extraordinary impressions upon the Bodies of particular men born under them, which being many, when they come to years, may cause a predominancy of some singular disposition in their lives, fit for such alterations and changes as God shall direct and lead them to.

His third Epocha is 382. which would bring out the 42 months Anno 1642. Of this I see no reason he gives but Astrological, the insufficiency whereof for that purpose I have already shewed. He might with greater probability have pitched upon 394. when was that famous battel and victory of Theodosius against Eugenius and Arbogastes coming with a mighty Army to restore Ethnicisme, which Theodosius had utterly abolished, and after which Ethnicisme never made head any more in the Empire: This therefore might be reckoned for another remarkable moment of the Dragon's downfall. Or he might have pitched upon the year 410. the time when Alaricus took and sacked Rome the Lady of the world; a most remarkable moment of the Political ruin of the Cæsarean Sovereignty. The former of these Epocha's would bring out the 42 months Anno 1654. the latter, 1670. But all these things depend upon the Divine will, In cujus manu sunt tempora & opportunitates.

His last Epocha is 433. from which the 42 months would expire Anno 1693. For this Epocha of his I find no reason but à posteriori, drawn from the expiring of Daniel's numbers, Dan. 12. 11, 12. which he addeth one upon the head of another, and so makes 2625 to the End of the World, which reckoned from the destruction of Jerusalem will come out Anno Christi 2694. from which he takes away for the Regnum Sanctorum 1000 years; so there remain but 1694: at which time the 42 months of Antichrist must be finished, because then the 1000 years of Christ's Reign begin. Now if the 42 months end then, they began about 433.

This is the sum of that Computation.

But for my parr, I think the meaning of those days in Daniel to be to another purpose then to design the End of the World.

F f f 3

Secondly,

See the meaning of those days in the Author's learned Discourse De Numeris Danielis, &c. which is the last Discourse in this Third Book.

Secondly, That they are not to be reckoned one upon the head of another, but both from one and the same beginning.

Thirdly, That their Epocha is not the Destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, but that Prophanation of the Temple by Antiochus Epiphanes, which the Angel but newly mentioned in the same Vision; whereas that of the Destruction of Jerusalem by Titus was in a Vision some years before, and not like to be referred hereunto, and that which was so newly * mentioned, iisdem verbis, in the same Vision overslipped. Yet I am not of Justinus his mind neither, who would have them taken for bare days, and determinated in the persecution of Antiochus: I suppose them Prophetical days, that is, so many years, and their times already expired. But I have no time to enter into this dispute.

* Compare
& Chap. 12. 11.

The 42 months extend to the burning and sacking of Babylon; not to the extinguishing of Antichrist, which shall be some while after, as appears Revel. 19. The reason of the limitation concealed. If I seem to incline to some moments rather than other, yet would I still be construed according to my first protestation against precise determination of Years in this business.

CHAP. XI.

A brief Discourse of the Thousand years mentioned in Revelation 20. With some reflexions upon Eusebius and S. Hierom.

TOUCHING the Question of the Thousand years, you may see I have demonstrated them to follow the Times of the Beast and of the false-Prophet, and consequently the Times of Antichrist. And if the Apocalypse be Canonical Scripture, it must needs be granted there is such a time to come; or we must deny either Rome, which now is, to be Babylon, or the Least to be Antichrist, or Antichristendom: which those who opposed the ancient Chiliasists found so necessary, as forced them (having no other way to avoid their Adversaries) directly to deny the Apocalypse to be Scripture; nor was it re-admitted till they thought they had found some commodious interpretation of the 1000 years. And yet the Apocalypse hath more Humane (not to speak of Divine) authority than any other Book of the New Testament besides, even from the time it was first delivered. But we see what the zeal of opposition can do.

This Dogma of the 1000 years Regnum was the General opinion of all Orthodox Christians in the Age immediately following the Apostles, if * Justin Martyr say true; and none known to deny it then but Hereticks, which denied the Resurrection, and held that the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, was not the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. This was the reason why Irenaeus maintained it in his book Contra omnes Hereses, and Tertullian against the Marcionites.

* See pag. 534.

* See in Book V. the words of Gaius out of Eusebius, with the Author's Animadversions.

Eusebius, who found out one * Gaius to father it upon Cerinthus, deserves no credit; he was a party, and one of those which did his best to undermine the authority of the Apocalypse. Nor did any know of any such Gaius but from his relation: And if there were any such, he should seem to be one of the Hereticks called Alogi, who denied both S. John's Gospel and Apocalypse, as is testified in Epiphanius; and their time jumps with the Age which Eusebius assigns to Gaius. Yet I deny not but some might maintain very carnal and intolerable conceits about this Regnum of a thousand years, as the Mahumetans do about their Paradise: But these are not to be imputed unto those Primitive Fathers and Orthodox Christians.

S. Hierom was a chief Champion to cry down this Opinion, and (according to his wont) a most unequal relator of the Opinion of his Adversaries. What credit he deserves in this may appear by some Fragments of those Authors still remaining, whom he charged with an Opinion directly contrary to that which they expressly affirmed: And yet when he had stated it so as it must needs be Heresie and Blasphemy whosoever should hold it, he is found to say he durst not damn it, because multi virorum Ecclesiasticorum & Martyrum ista dixerunt, (Comment. in Jerem. 19. 10.) many Ecclesiastical persons and Martyrs affirm'd the same,

In

In a word, I cannot chuse but agree so far with them, That these 1000 years are yet to come: This I hold with Alstedius. But what shall be the modus and condition of that Kingdom, that is, what it means, it may be I have some singular conceit differing from them both; I am sure from Alstedius, Piscator, and others of that opinion. But I were better speak nothing thereof than too little; and to speak fully would require in a manner the Interpretation of the whole Apocalypse. In a word, I will reveal thus much, viz. That the seventh Trumpet and the Thousand years contained therein is that Magnus dies Domini, and Magnus dies Judicii, or Dies magni Judicii, The Great Day of the Lord, The Great Day of Judgment, The Day of the Great Judgment, so much celebrated amongst the Jews in all their Writings, and from them taken up by our Saviour and his Apostles. Not a Day of a few hours, as we commonly suppose, but continuum multorum annorum intervallum, a continued space of many Years, wherein Christ shall destroy all his Enemies, and at length Death it self; beginning with Antichrist, by his revelation from heaven in flaming fire, and ending with the Universal Resurrection: during which space of time shall be the Kingdom of the Saints in the New Jerusalem. This I can affirm with the most, That Antichrist shall not be finally destroyed till the Day of Christ's appearing unto Judgment; and yet not fall into that which some charge the Chiliasists with, That this Reign should be after the Day of Judgment. For I give a third time, in or durante magno Die Judicii, in or during the Great Day of Judgment.

C H A P. XII.

A Censure by way of Correction returned to a Friend concerning an Exposition of his, of the 20. Chapter of the Apocalypse, somewhat exorbitant.

1. That the Reign of Christ here described is after the Times of Antichrist (if either the Beast or the False-prophet be he) is apparent without interpretation; both because all those Times the old Dragon Satan was not tied up, but at liberty to seduce the Nations; and because (verse 4.) one sort of those who should reign with Christ a thousand years are said to be such as had not worshipped the Beast, neither his Image, nor had received his mark upon their foreheads or in their hands: which necessarily presupposeth The Beast, His Image and Marking to have already been.

This was wrote before his Comment on the Apocal. and so were the other Tracts in these Remains, except that in Chap. 9. be of a later date.

2. What the Quality of this Reign should be, which is so singularly differenced from the Reign of Christ hitherto, is neither easie nor safe to determine, farther then, That it should be the Reign of our Saviour's Victory over his Enemies, wherein Satan being bound up from deceiving the Nations any more, till the time of his Reign be fulfilled, the Church should consequently enjoy a most blisful peace and happy security from the heretical Apostasies and calamitous sufferings of former times. But here (if any where) the known shipwrecks of those who have been too venturous should make us most wary and careful, that we admit nothing into our imaginations which may cross or impeach any Catholick Tenet of the Christian Faith: as also to beware of gross and carnal conceits of an Epicurean happiness misbecoming the Spiritual purity of Saints. If we conceit any Deliciae, let them be Spirituales, which S. Austine confesseth to be Opinio tolerabilis, & se hoc opinatum fuisse aliquando, (Lib. 20. De Civit. Dei, cap. 7.) a tolerable Opinion, and that he also was sometime of the same judgment.

3. The Presence of Christ in this Kingdom shall no doubt be glorious and evident: yet I dare not so much as imagine (which some Ancients seem to have thought) that it should be a Visible Converse upon earth. For the Kingdom of Christ ever hath been and shall be Regnum Caelorum, A Kingdom whose Throne and Kingly Residence is in Heaven. There he was installed when he sate down on the right hand of the Majesty on high, Heb. 1. and there, as in his proper Temple, is continually to appear in the presence of his Father, to make intercession for us, Rom. 8. 34. with Heb. 9. 24. Yet may we grant he shall appear and be visibly revealed from Heaven, especially for the Calling and gathering of his ancient People, for whom in the days of old he did so many wonders. This S. John in this Book, as our saviour in the Gospel, seems to intimate mate by joyning those two Prophetical passages of Daniel and Zachary in one expression, Behold he cometh in the clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him. The first part (which our Saviour expresses more fully by the Sign of the Son of Man coming in the clouds of Heaven, &c.) is Daniel's in a Vision of this Kingdom we speak of. Behold (saith he) one like the son of Man came with the clouds of Heaven — And there was given him Dominion, and Glory, and a Kingdom, that all People, Nations and Languages should serve him. The other part is out of Zachary prophesying of the Re-calling of the Jews; And I will pour upon the house of David and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and supplication, and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced: Though these words of Zachary are not in our Saviour's expression, but in stead thereof that which immediately follows after them, That all the tribes of the Earth (or Land) should mourn. Now I cannot understand how these two Prophetical passages should not have the same meaning when our Saviour and his Apostle alledge them joyned, which they have in their own Authors expressed apart? or being expressed together as one, should not be fulfilled at once? By such a miraculous apparition of Christ from Heaven was S. Paul converted: And I hope it is no Heresie to think, That the whole Nation of the Jews, those Zelots against Christ, may be converted by as strange a means as was that one Zelot of their Nation.

See in Book V. the Author's short Tract styled The Mystery of S. Paul's Conversion, or, The Type of the Calling of the Jews.

Revel. 20. 4.

4. Those who shall be Partakers of this Kingdom are described to be of two sorts: 1. The deceased Martyrs, who (as far as I can yet understand it) shall resume their Bodies and reign in Heaven; 2. Such of the Living as have not worshipped the Beast, nor his Image, neither have received his mark, &c. these shall reign on Earth. For so I construe the words; I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the Word of God, and (subaudi, I saw) those which had not worshipped the Beast, nor his Image, nor had received his mark upon their foreheads or in their hands; and they lived (that is, the Martyrs,) and reigned (that is, both of them) with Christ a thousand years.

5. Under the Second sort of those Reigners, together with the Virgin-Christians of the Gentiles, (who are the Surrogate Israel) I would in a particular respect understand the Nation of the Jews then converted to the Faith of Christ; who coming in toward the end of the day, may above all others be said to be Those who had not worshipped the Beast, neither his Image, nor had received his mark upon their foreheads or in their hands; which most of the Christian Gentiles had done; and therefore at the time of their cleansing (Chap. 15. ver. 2.) are rather described, Those that had gotten the victory over the Beast, and over his Image, and over his mark, and over the number of his Name.

Chap. 20. 6.

6. The Rising of the Martyrs is that which is called the First Resurrection, being, as it seems, a prerogative to their sufferings above the rest of the Dead; who as they suffered with Christ in the time of his patience, so should they be glorified with him in the Reign of his Victory before the Universal Resurrection of all. Blessed and Holy are they who have part in the First Resurrection, for on them the Second death hath no power; namely, because they are not in Via, but in Patria; being a prerogative, as I understand it, of this First sort of Reigners only, and not of the Second. Thus I yet admit the First Resurrection to be * Corporal as well as the Second, though I confess I have much striven against it; and if the Text would admit another sense less free of Paradox, I had yet rather listen unto it: but I find it not. Howsoever, to grant a Particular Resurrection before the General, is against no Article of Faith: For the Gospel tells us, Matth. 27. v. 52, 53. that at our Saviour's Resurrection, The graves were opened, and many bodies of the Saints which slept arose, and went into the holy City and appeared unto many. Neither was the number of them a small number, if we may credit the Fathers or the most ancient Records of Christian Tradition: For of this was that famous saying, || That Christ descended alone, but ascended with a multitude; which is found in the heads of the Sermon of Thaddæus, as they are reported by Eusebius out of the Syriack Records of the City of Edeffa, (Lib. 1. cap. ult.) in Ignatius's Epistle to the Trallians, and in the Disputation of * Macarius Bishop of Jerusalem, in the first General Council of Nice, also in || Cyrill's Catechism. Nay this Cyrill of Jerusalem, Chrysostome, and others, suppose this Resurrection to have been common to all the Saints that died before our Saviour. (See the Bishop of Meath, De Limbo Patrum.) Howsoever it be, it holds no unfit proportion with this supposed of the Martyrs. And how it doth more impeach any Article of our Faith to think that may be of the Martyrs which we believe of the Patriarchs, I yet see not.

* See in Book IV. the Authors 2d. Letter to D. Middam, where this is largely treated of. See also above in this Book in the Appendix to the Apocal. his Epist. ad Amicum, De Resurrectione Prima, &c. || Κατ' ἐν ὧν ὁ Χρὶς ἐβήκατο ἐκ τῆς γῆς, πολλὰ ὄντα. * Vid. Aët. Concil. Niceni apud Gelas. Cyziceni. l. i. c. 23. al. 24. || In Catech. 14.

7. The Second Resurrection to be after the End of the 1000 years, Justin Martyr, by way of distinction, calleth Τὴν καθολικὴν καὶ αἰωνίαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἀμα πάντων ἀνθρώπων, the the Eternal and Universal Resurrection of all together; namely, in respect of the former which was Particular, and but of some. And that it is common both to the Godly and to the Wicked, and not of the Wicked only, may appear, in that there are two Books opened for the Dead, (ver. 12.) whereof one is the Book of Life; which argues two sorts of Dead to be judged. Nor can I imagine how it can be otherwise, unless all the Just which live during the 1000 years be supposed to be immortal; which is a Paradox I dare not admit, understanding, not that all the Individuals, but that the Body of the Church here on Earth should successively Reign with Christ her Lord 1000 years. Besides, the attempt of the Nations after the Devil's loosing argues a State subject to mutability. As for those words of v. 14. which seem to intimate no other Dead then judged but the Wicked, because it's said, That Death and Hades were cast into the lake of fire, which is the Second Death; I suppose nothing else is meant thereby, but that Death was now quite vanquished, and that there should be no more Death of Body or Separation of Soul, but only the Second Death: As if it had been said, Death and Hades are now confined only to the Lake of Fire, which is the second Death; but the former Death of Bodies in the Grave, and the State of separate Souls in * Hades was no more.

8. For Gog and Magog, who after Satan's loosing and before the last Resurrection shall gather together against the Camp of the Saints and the Beloved City, it cannot be literally understood of the Nations so called in the Old Testament. For there Gog the Prince, with the People of Magog come out of the * North-parts where the posterity of Magog was seated. But Gog and Magog here are said to be Nations which are in the four quarters of the Earth. As therefore the Apocalyptical Babylon is not Babylon in Chaldea, but a Counter-type thereof, most like for Universal Ambition and Metropolitanship of Spiritual Fornication: so this Apocalyptical Gog and Magog is not the Gog and Magog of the North, but a Counter-type of them, which should after the same manner attempt against the Beloved City then, which the Scythian Gog and Magog (I mean the Turk) doth against the Church of the Gentiles now, and should before his last Ruine attempt against Israel at their return. And if there ever be an Antichrist, such as the Fathers describe, now will be the most likely time for him, when the Devil is loose but for a little season.

* Hades is properly the place of Separate Souls, whether good or bad, after death.

 OF THE
 P R O P H E C I E
 of S. P E T E R, CONCERNING
The Day of Christ's Second Coming ;
 DESCRIBED

In the Third CHAPTER of the Second EPISTLE.

Verſes 1, 2.

*S*aint Peter exhorts the believing Jews, unto whom he writes, to be mindfu' of the words of the holy Prophets, (a) Eſay, Daniel and Malachi, concerning the coming of Chriſt to Judgment, and the Reſtauration then promiſed ; it being alſo confirmed by the Apoſtles of our Lord and Saviour.

Note. <sup>a</sup> If that which S. Peter here deſcribeth were foretold by the old Prophets, then muſt S. Peter be ſo expounded, as it may be ſhewn in them and agree with them.

Verſes 3, 4. For howſoever it were then believed both by Jews and Chriſtiansed Gentiles ; yet in (a) the laſt days ſhould come thoſe who, walking after their own deſires, ( or humors ) ſhould deny and deride the expectation of any ſuch (b) promiſe of the Day of Chriſt, ſaying, Where is the (c) promiſe of his coming ? Where is the New heaven and New earth you talk of ?

Notes. <sup>a</sup> This ἐσχάτον τῶν ἡμερῶν, or laſt days, ſhould ſeem to be the time of the Church's Apoſtaſie under Antichriſt, according to that of S. Paul, 1 Tim. 4. 1. In the latter times ſome ſhall depart from the Faith, giving heed to ſpirits of error and doctrines of Demons. For as the times of the fourth and laſt of Daniel's Kingdoms were the laſt times in general, during which Chriſt was to come and found his Church and Kingdom : ſo the latter times of the Fourth Kingdom, being that period of a Time, times and half a time wherein the wicked Horn ſhould domineer, are the laſt times of the laſt times, or laſt times in ſpecial.

<sup>b</sup> <sup>c</sup> I take Promiſe here for Res promiſſa the thing promiſed ; the Antitheſis implying that to be the meaning, viz. The ſcoffers ſay, Where is the Promiſe of his coming ? Nevertheleſs we look for a New heaven and New earth, according to his Promiſe.

But here is ſomewhat (Reader) in the application wherein thou mayeſt erre ; but be not thou uncharitable in thy cenſure, nor think I am. For although the crying down and condemning of the opinion of the Chiliaſts will be found to be near upon the beginning of the times of the Antichriſtian Apoſtaſie, ( which I ſuppoſe to be called the laſt times ; ) and that the utter burying of that Opinion falls within theſe times : yet thou muſt know, 1. That there is not the like reaſon of the firſt Authors of crying down a Truth, and of thoſe who led by their authority take it afterward, without further examination, for an Error. 2. To ſcoff is one thing, and barely not to believe is another. 3. 'Tis one thing to deny a promiſe ſimply, and another to deny or queſtion the manner thereof ; as alſo to rejeſt a Truth ſincerely propounded, and when it is intangled with errors, as that of the later Chiliaſts may ſeem to have been.

Verſe

Verse 4. pars altera. The reason of this their unbelief being, because they imagine there hath never yet since the creation of the World been any example of such a destruction and change ensuing it as this at the coming of Christ should be. For since the Fathers fell asleep, (say they) even since Adam died, all things have continued as they were from the beginning of the creation. Therefore the expectation of any such change of the World and the state of things therein (as is supposed) is vain and frivolous, and never to be fulfilled.

Note. As touching the Jews, and the impeachment of this Opinion amongst them in the latter times, I find amongst the Doctors of the Gemara or Gloss of their Talmud (which was finished about 500 years after Christ) a Tenet of one R. Samuel's often mentioded, אין בין העולם הזה לימות המשיח אלא מעבור מלכות כלומר: "That there was to be no difference between the present state of the world and the days of Messiah, but in respect of the bondage under the Kingdoms of the Gentiles only; thereby opposing the more ancient opinion and tradition of the Renovation of the World. After this time there appears to have been amongst the Jews a Sect of the followers of the opinion of this R. Samuel, which at length was greatly advanced by the authority of that learned Maimonides, who having drunk too deep of the Philosophy of Aristotle, (wherein he was admirably skilful) became a champion against the opinion of the world's renovation to be in the days of Messiah; and that upon this ground, Quid mundus retinet & sequitur consuetudinem suam: which saying he ascribeth to some other Rabbins of the same opinion before him, which for the sense and meaning is the self-same with that here of the scoffers, All things (say they) continue as they were from the beginning of the creation.

Nevertheless Aben Ezra, who lived not long after Maimonides, maintained still (as also others did) the contrary; and there are extant certain Discourses and Tractates amongst them purposely written of this Argument, and confuting the opinion of R. Moses ben Maiemon and his followers; as one called שמים חדשים Celi novi, proving the necessity of the Renovation of the World, and directed against cap. 29. lib. 2. of Maimonides his More Nebachim. Another by R. Isaac Abarbinel, called מפעלות אלהים Opera Dei, (out of Psal. 66. 5.) wherein all the arguments brought against the Renovation are confuted. And no doubt there are more of the like nature, which we know not of.

Verses 5, 6. But those who suppose this, (οἱ τῶτο διλογτες) that there hath never yet any such destruction and change befallen the Creation, and thence conclude there is no such nor shall ever be; they weigh and consider not the universal Deluge in the time of Noah (when the curse laid upon the creature for man's sin first solemnly took place) brought, as a like destruction, so a like change, upon the world for the degeneration of the creature, as this at the second coming of Christ shall be for the restoration and renovation of the same in the day of the glorious liberty of the children of God. For the Heavens were of old, and the globe of the Earth, consisting partly [ἐξ ὕδατος] of water, (viz. that of the Great deep) and partly (a) [ἐν ὕδατι] amongst water, to wit, the clouds and floud-gates of heaven hanging about it; all framed by the word of God: By which waters [ἐν ὧν ὕδατων] the world which then was, being overwhelmed with water, perished; as it is written, Gen. 7. 11, &c. In the 600. year of Noah's life, in the second month, the 17. day of the month, were all the Fountains of the Great deep broken up, and the Floud-gates (or Cataracts) of heaven were opened: and verse 18. And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth — And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattel, and of beast, and of every creeping thing, and every man — verse 21.

Διὰ μαγνήτων πολλῶν, inter
multos testes.
Vide Notas B.

Note. <sup>a</sup> Διὰ sometimes signifies inter, amongst, or in the midst of, as if it were * διὰ μέσων. So Herodotus, διὰ νήσων, inter insulas. Howsoever we render the Preposition, I suppose S. Peter by his διὰ ὕδατος means the superior water, which together with that of the Sea or Great deep concurred to the drowning of the World, as appears by the place of Genesis alledged.

Verse 7. But the Heavens and the Earth (that is, the World) which is now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto (a) fire at the Day of Judgment and perdition of ungodly men; according to the prophecy of Daniel (c. 7. v. 10, 11.) who saw a fiery stream issuing issuing and coming forth before the Judge of the world, and the body of the fourth Beast burned therewith: And of Esay (chap. 66. 15, 16.) who saith of that day, That the Lord shall come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebukes with flames of fire: And that by fire and by his sword, (i. e. by his sword of fire, ἐν δίδουοῖν) the Lord would plead with all flesh, and the slain of the Lord shall be many (b). So also Mal. 4. 1. That the great and terrible day shall burn as an oven, and all the proud and all that do wickedly shall be stubble, which at the coming of that day shall be burnt up.

Notes. <sup>a</sup> From this proportion which the Judgment to come by Fire hath unto that which was by Water in the Deluge, Irenaus calls it Diluvium ignis, Lib. 5. cap. 29. juxta Edit. Fevardentii.

<sup>b</sup> It may be it is of this day the same Prophet Esay also speaks chap. 9. 5. where he saith, The battel of the Messiah should not be as the battel of the warrior, with confused noise, and garments rolled in blood; but with burning and fuel of fire. For the old Prophets (for the most part) speak of the coming of Christ indefinitely and in general, without that distinction of First and Second coming, which the Gospel out of Daniel hath more clearly taught us. And so consequently they spake of the things to be at Christ's coming indefinitely and altogether, which we, who are now more fully informed by the revelation of the Gospel of a two-fold coming, must apply each of them to its proper time: those things which besit the state of his First coming, unto it; and such things as besit the state of his Second coming, unto his Second; and what befits Both alike, may be applied unto Both.

Verse 8. But whereas I mentioned (saith S. Peter) the Day of Judgment, lest ye might mistake it for a short day, or a day of a few hours, I would not, beloved, have you ignorant, that One day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day (a).

Note. <sup>a</sup> Thus I expound these words by way of a preoccupation or premunition; because they are the formal words of the Jewish Doctors when they speak of the Day of Judgment or Day of Christ, as S. Peter here doth, viz. יום אחר ה'קנה, אלף שנים, una dies Dei Sancti Benedicti sunt mille anni. And though they use to quote that of the ninetyeth Psalm, (Mille anni in oculis tuis sicut dies hesternus) for confirmation thereof; yet are not those words formally in the Psalm. So that S. Peter in this passage seems rather to have had respect to that common saying of the Jews in this argument, than to the words of the Psalm; where the words [One day with the Lord is as a thousand years] are not, though the latter part of the sentence [A thousand years as one day] may allude thither; as the * Jews also were wont to bring it for a confirmation of the former.

* Trad. R. Ketine in Gemara Sanhedrin, Midrasch, Tehillim super Ps. 90.

2. These words are commonly taken as an argument why God should not be thought slack in his promise (which follows in the next verse: ) But the first Fathers took it otherwise; and besides, it proves it not: For the question is not, whether the time be long or short in respect of God, but whether it be long or short in respect of us; otherwise not only a thousand, but an 100 thousand years are in the eyes of God no more than one day is to us, and so it would not seem long to God, if the Day of Judgment should be deferred till then.
3. Let the judicious consider it, whether this passage so prone to be taken in the exposition I have given, yea and alledged to that purpose, were not some part of a motive to the zelotical Anti-chiliasis (whereof Eusebius, whom we trust, was none of the least) to be so willing and ready to question the authority of this Epistle, as they did also at the same time of the Apocalypse. The pretence against this Epistle was, because it wanted the testimony of allegation by the first Fathers. But [Dies Domini sicut mille anni] quoted both by Justin Martyr and Irenaus, is not out of the ninetyeth Psalm, as they took for granted, (for there are no such words) but out of this Epistle of Peter, who applies it to the Day of Judgment, which he calleth ἡμέρα Κυρίου, the Day of the Lord. Consider it.

Verse 9. And though this Day be long deferred, yet is not the Lord slack concerning his promise (as some men account slackness, as if he had alter'd his purpose, or meant never to perform it;) but the cause of this delay is his long-suffering towards us (a) of the seed of Israel, not willing that any should perish at that day, but that our whole Nation should come unto repentance, (b) which, if that Day should surprise them in their unbelief, must inevitably perish with the rest of the enemies of Christ.

Notes. <sup>a</sup> S. Peter speaks and writes in this Epistle to his brethren the Jews, as appears by the first verse of this chapter.

<sup>b</sup> Therefore the same S. Peter in his first publick Sermon to his Nation in the Temple, after the sending of the Holy Ghost, (Acts 3. 19, &c.) exhorts them to repent and be converted εις το εξαλειφθαι τας αμαρτίας αυτων, for the washing away of their sins, That so (οπως αν) those times of refreshing and restitution of all things, which God had spoken by the mouth of all his holy Prophets, might come; which till then were to be suspended.

Object. But God could have hastened the Jews conversion, if it had pleased him.

Resp. But it stood not with the œconomy of his Justice, when the Jews had rejected Christ, their expiation, to grant them this grace, until they should have fulfilled a time of penance for all the sins of their Nation, even from the first time they were a people until the last destruction of Jerusalem. For since they would none of their pardon and atonement by Christ, (with respect unto whose coming God had so long spared them; for all their expiation by Sacrifice looked unto him) God would not bate them an ace of the judgment they had merited, but would visit all the former sins of their Nation upon them, from the golden Calf, until their crucifying and final rejecting of their Messiah.

Verse 10. But as for the manner of the coming of this great Day of the Lord, it shall be suddenly and unawares, as a thief in the night, in which the (a) Heavens with a crackling noise of fire shall pass away, and the σιχέα (a) or host of them shall melt with fervent heat; the Earth also and the works therein shall be burned.

Note. <sup>a</sup> What these Heavens are, and why I render σιχέα the host of them, and how this Conflagration is to be understood, I will shew when I have done my Paraphrase.

Verse 11, 12. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness, to make our selves fire-proof, and such as may abide the day of refining? As namely becometh those who by faith look for and hasten the coming of the Day of the Lord, wherein the Heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the host of them melt with fervent heat. For our life and conversation ought to be suitable to our faith, and we are so to walk as if that were always present which by faith we look for.

Verse 13. But this Conflagration ended, (whatsoever those scoffers say who question the promise of Christ's second coming) we look, according to his promise (Isa. 65. 17. & 66. 22,) for a New heaven and a New earth, (that is, a new and refined state of the World) wherein righteousness shall dwell, according as the same Prophet saith, chap. 60. 20, 21. The Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended; Thy people also shall be all righteous, they shall inherit the land (or earth) for ever.

Verse 14, 15, 16. Wherefore, beloved, (seeing that ye look for such things at his coming) be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless; and account the long-suffering of God in the delay thereof to be for salvation. Even as our beloved Paul also, (one of the Apostles of our Lord, who confirmeth these words of the holy Prophets) according to the wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you; enforcing the like exhortation unto holiness of life, from this our faith and expectation of the Lord Jesus his appearing to judgment, which we now make unto you; namely Heb. 12. 14, 28, 29. As also in all his Epistles, speaking in them of these things, viz. Rom. 2. 4, 5, 6, 7. | 1 Cor. 1. 7, 8. & 3. 13. | 2 Cor. 5. 9, 10, 11. initio, & 7. 1. | Phil. 1. 10. & 2. 15, 16. also 3. 20, &c. | Coloss. 3. 4, 5. | 1 Thess. 2. 12. & 3. 13. denique 5. 23. | 2 Thess. 1. 8, &c. 1 Tim. 6. 14, 15. | Tit. 2. 12, 13.

Verse 16. Εν οίς, Amongst which things concerning the second coming of Christ are some things hard to be conceived, which those which are unlearned and not well sealed in the the Faith, like unto these Scoffers, stumble at, as they do at other Scriptures, taking occasion thereby to stagger and doubt of the truth of God; so perverting the Scriptures from their right end, by making them the means of their own destruction, which were given by God as a means whereby they might believe and be saved.

How this Conflagration of the World whereof S. PETER speaks, and especially of the Heavens, is to be understood.

FOR resolution of this Question, I must premise some things, to make the way thereto the more easie.

1. That in the old Hebrew language, wherein the Scripture speaks, there is no one word to express that Compages of the superior and inferior bodies, which we call Mundus, but those two words, Heaven and Earth, שמים וארץ joyned and put together, only: So that when S. Peter saith, The World which then was, perished by water; but the Heavens and the Earth which are now, are reserved to fire, he might as well have said, according to his meaning, The Heavens and the Earth which then were, perished by water; as the World that now is shall by fire. For the words [Heaven and Earth] joyned imply no more in the one (according to the Scripture's notion) than the single word Mundus or World doth in the other, being applied to the history of the great Deluge: As also a New heaven and a New earth is the same notion with that in our expression, when we say, a New World, that is to say, Nova rerum facies, nova rerum conditio; which we otherwise apply to very small and even particular and domestical changes, when we say, Here is a new World; which the Hebrew would or might express, Here is a new Heaven and a new Earth.

2. That it is not like that any other World, or Heaven and Earth, shall perish by Fire, than such a one as heretofore perished by Water: For so the Antithesis imports, viz. The World, or Heaven and Earth, which then was, perished by water; the Heaven and Earth which now is, is reserved for a destruction by fire. Now the World which perished by water was no other than the sublunary World; the Heaven whereof is that which we call Aire, but the Scriptures Heaven: which sublunary Heaven, together with the Earth, was marred by that general Deluge; and the creatures belonging to them both either wholly destroyed, or marvellously corrupted from that they were before. Such a World therefore, and no other Heaven and Earth, shall undergo this second deluge of Fire for restauration, which before suffered the deluge of Water for corruption.

3. Observe also, for the better understanding of S. Peter's meaning, That the word Στοιχῆα, which we in this place are wont to turn Elements, is not like to be understood in the notion of the Greek Philosophy, whose terms and notions the Scripture useth not; but otherwise divideth the World. Nay further, in this place it cannot be so understood; for that the Hebrew division of the World into Heaven and Earth is here expressed, and these Στοιχῆα distinguished from them both. But when the whole World is divided into Heaven and Earth, εἰς τὸ ἄνω καὶ τὸ κάτω, by Earth is meant the Earthen Globe, which S. Peter saith is ἐξ ὕδατος συνεστῶσα, and so the Water and Earth are both included in the sole name of Earth: in Heaven the Air is included. Thus three of the Philosophical Elements are bestowed. The fourth is the Fire: but this is that which is to burn the Στοιχῆα, and so none of the Στοιχῆα to be burnt. And if any of these Elements could be exempted from this division into Heaven and Earth, besides the Fire, as namely the Air; yet could not that, nor any one of them alone, be Στοιχῆα in S. Peter; for Στοιχῆα notes more than one.

It must needs therefore be that Στοιχῆα here meaneth something else. Let us see if we can find out what it is. Mark then S. Peter's order, οἱ ὕενοι καὶ Στοιχῆα, then γὰρ καὶ τὰ ὄντα ἀντὶ τῆς γῆς. By which correspondence it should seem that Στοιχῆα should be some furniture belonging to Celum, as τὰ ἔργα are the buildings and whole furniture of Creatures belonging to Terra; which furniture of both, but especially that of the Heaven, the Scripture calls צבאם the host of them, Gen. 2. 1. The heavens and the earth were finished, וכל צבאם and all the host of them; LXX. ὁ κόσμος. ἀντὶ τῆς γῆς.

Vulg. Ornatus eorum. Nay, seeing the whole World is nothing else but the Heaven and the Earth, and what is contained in them, (i. e.) exercitus eorum; and seeing Heaven and Earth are both here distinctly named, and τα ἔργα put for the host of the Earth; it must needs be that στοιχεῖα, named as a distinct thing from all three, should note the host of heaven: and so the meaning of S. Peter should be, when he saith οἱ ἄγγελοι καὶ στοιχεῖα, as if he had said, οἱ ἄγγελοι καὶ στοιχεῖα τῶν ἄστρον, the Heavens and the host thereof; or, τὰ ἐν αὐτῶν στοιχεῖα, as he says, γῆ καὶ ὅσα ἐν αὐτῇ ἔργα, the Earth and the works therein.

But how, will some man say, should στοιχεῖα come to have this notion? I answer thus, The Hebrew verb צבא signifieth, in ordine militari sto, incedo, and so answers to the Greek verb εἰχω, which is expounded ἐν τάξει παραγίνομαι, i. e. in ordine militari incedo: Vide Scap. ex Etymolog. Accordingly the LXX render the Hebrew צבא παρατάττομαι, i. e. in procinctu sto, instructa acie sto. Now if the verb צבא signifie the same with the Greek εἰχω, why may not the Hebrew Noun צבא (which we turn exercitus) be rendred στοιχεῖον; the Hellenists, or Greekish Jews, as in other words, so here, following the Etymology from εἰχω, and having an eye more to their own native language than to the use of Greece? It would be long to shew in how many words they, and the Greek Scriptures written according to their Dialect, use notions which the Greeks used not; namely, respecting some conformity or other in their own tongue. The works of the learned in sacred Criticism are of late full of such observations, whereby many difficulties and obscurities in Scripture become clear and easie. Nevertheless the Gentile Greeks themselves use Στιχῶν and Στοιχῶν (which come of the same verb εἰχω) in the same sense we plead for, viz. for ordo militaris, Military array: Why may not then the Hellenists (so the * Greek Jews are called) do the same with Στοιχεῖον, being for the Etymology every way as fit? seeing also they are otherwise wont to permute significations from vicinity of sound?

For a further confirmation of this notion of Στοιχεῖον I contend for, I will add what I have met with to that purpose. Schickardus, a learned professor of the Oriental tongues at Tubing, in his Bechinath happieruschim, pag. 44. hath discovered out of Ramban's, or R. Moses ben Nachman's Preface in Pernsche hattorah, two passages taken out of the Chaldee copy of the Wisdom of Solomon, which that Rabbi had seen; whereby the said Schickardus proveth against S. Jerome, that the Greek is not the Original, but was translated out of Chaldee. The passages which this Ramban quoteth thence are chap. 7. v. 5, 6, 7, and part of the 8. and again, v. 17, 18, 19, 20, 21. In the last of which quotations, because there is in the Greek ἐνέργειαν στοιχείων, I greedily looked what word in the Chaldee answered here to στοιχείων, which I found to be מולות, which those who have skill know to signifie the Planets, 12 Signs or Constellations of Heaven, as being the same with the Hebrew * מולות. Στοιχεῖα therefore here are Stars and Planets; which I shall not need prove to be the host of the Ethereal heaven: yea and perhaps too מולות and מולתא are derived of the verb אול ire, as στοιχεῖον is of εἰχω.

Now we know the Scriptures make three heavens: 1. The Air, or Sublunary heaven; 2. The Ethereal, or Starry heaven; 3. The heaven of Glory, or Empyrean heaven. Every of these heavens have their host or army. The host of the heaven of Glory or the third heaven are the Angels and blessed Spirits: The host of the Ethereal heaven are the Stars and Planets: The host of the Aereal or Sublunary heaven are either visible, as the Clouds of Heaven (νεφέλαι τῶν ἄστρον) and other Meteors, as also the rest of the creatures mansioning therein, as the Fowls of heaven (πετεινὰ τῶν ἄστρον) or invisible, viz. the wicked Spirits and Devils, whose Prince, Satan, is called the Prince of the power of the Air, Eph. 2. 2. and his host κοσμοκράτορες, rulers of the world, that is, of the Sublunary world; and τὰ πνευματικά τῆς πονηρίας ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις, wicked spirits in heavenly places, namely in the lowest or sublunary heavens, Eph. 6. 12. And whether S. Paul. Gal. 4. 8, 9. and Col. 2. 8, &c. includes not some of those under his στοιχεῖα τῶν κόσμου, I cannot affirm: let the Learned further consider it, when namely he speaketh to and of Gentiles, and not Jews.

HAVING hitherto prepar'd the way, let us now come closer home to S. Peter, whose words evidently import that some of these Heavens, or all of them, shall suffer a Conflagration at the Day of Christ. Not all of them; for who ever put the Empyrean heaven in that reckoning? And for the Ethereal heaven, he that considereth both the supereminent nature and immensity thereof, and of those innumerable bodies therein, in regard of which the whole Sublunary world is but a point or centre; and that it no way can be proved that ever those bodies received any curse for mans sin, or contagion by the world's deluge, or that any enemies of God dwell in them to pollute

* See the Syriack, Acts 9. 29. where Ἑλληνιστὰς are turned Judei qui loquebantur Græcè.

* I have since looked in the Preface of Ramban, where I found those Chaldee passages mentioned, which the Rabbi translates into Hebrew; and for the Chaldee which answereth to ἐνέργειαν στοιχείων, he renders מעשה מולות

Into them; he that considereth this, will not easily be induced to believe that the Fire of the day of Judgment should burn them. It remaineth therefore that the sublunary heavens only with their φοιχέαι are to be the subject of this Conflagration.

These Heavens, saith S. Peter, λυθήσονται, i.e. solventur, shall be dissolved, and their φοιχέαι shall melt with fervent heat. 'Tis a Metaphor taken from the refining of metalls, quæ igne solvuntur ut purificentur, which are melted in order to their purifying and refining. So that οἱ ἄρα οἱ πνεύμενοι λυθήσονται is as much as Cæli igne addibito conflabuntur. This to be the meaning of λυθήσονται appears, because S. Peter himself interprets solvi to be liqueferi. For having in the tenth verse said, φοιχέαι λυθήσονται, i.e. shall be dissolved, he in the twelfth verse repeating it says, φοιχέαι τηκίσεσθαι, i.e. shall melt: Now melting is for refining and purifying. Nor is the word πυρῶν averſe from this notion, the LXX using πυρῶ for the Hebrew עָרָר, as in the Psalms more than once: The words of the Lord are as refined or tried silver, LXX. ἀργύρεον πεπυρωμένον, Psal. 12. and so elsewhere. But when the sublunary heaven shall be thus refined, even the Ethereal lights of the Stars, of the Sun and Moon, &c. will appear to those on earth much more glorious than now they do, as sending their raies through a purer Medium; so that all the world to us-ward shall be as it were renewed.

As for παρελεύσονται (or passing away) verse 10. it is an Hebraism, signifying any change or going of a thing from the state wherein it was, and answers to the verb הָלַח, which signifieth both transire and mutari, as עָבַר also in Chaldaism doth. And Schindler notes, that Psal. 102. the Arabick for יִחַלְפוּ, mutabuntur, hath יִתְעַכְּרוּ, transibunt. In the twelfth verse it is expounded by λυθήσονται but λυθήσονται, I have already shewed, is commuted with τηκίσεσθαι. They therefore all three of them signify one and the same thing: and I see no reason why we should imagine a greater emphasis in παρελεύσονται for an utter abolition in the destruction by fire, than was before implied in ἀπώλοντο, when he spake of the destruction by water: ὁ τότε κόσμος (saith he) ὕδατι καταλυθεὶς ἀπώλετο, verſ. 6.

But what shall become of the invisible host, which I named as part of the φοιχέαι of this Sublunary heaven, viz. those πνευματικά τῆς πονηρίας, the army of wicked and unclean spirits? shall the Fire of the last Judgment touch these? I answer; Though the operation of the Fire shall not be upon them to burn them, yet shall they also suffer by this fiery judgment, being thereby to be exiled and dejected from those high mansions, and bestowed in some lower place. For so that of Jude seems to imply; The Angels (saith he) which kept not their first estate, but left their own (or proper) habitation, he hath reserved to [be bound with] everlasting chains of darkness, at the Judgment of the great Day. Vide Piscat. in hunc locum.

And this seems to me to be the most literal and unforced exposition of this description of S. Peter, of the Heaven and Earth's conflagration at the Day of Christ, and so to be preferred before any other.

BUT if a Prophetical strain or Scheme may be here admitted, there is another way of explication, which yet in the conclusion will come to the same purpose the former did, although the way thereto be not the same. And certainly our Saviour in the Gospel describing the coming of this Day, useth a Prophetical expression: The sun (saith he) shall be darkned, and the Moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken. For if this be taken literally, whither shall the Stars fall from heaven, which are either as big, or many times bigger than the globe of the earth? where shall there be room for them? If such a Scheme then be supposed in S. Peter's description, the explication may be after this manner.

Mundus or the World (to omit other particular acceptions) is, according to the Scripture's use, either Mundus continens, or Mundus contentus; (give me leave to use these terms for distinction sake.) By Mundus continens I mean the Compager and frame of the Physical heaven and earth, wherein the rest of the creatures are contained: by Mundus contentus, the state or body of the inhabitants and Kingdoms of the earth. Now to whatsoever the notion of Mundus is applicable, there is also supposed to be an Heaven and Earth, as being the names and parts whereby the Scriptures express the World. The Heaven then of this Political world is the Sovereignty or Sovereign part thereof; whose Host and Stars are the powers ruling that world: In the highest place Gods and Idols; next, Kings, Princes, Peers, Counsellours, Magistrates, and other such Lights shining in that Firmament. And at such a meaning and and no other ( it being an Oriental notion ) may aim ( for ought I can see ) that supposed fastuous style of Sapores King of Persia to Constantinus the Emperour, Rex Regum Sapores, frater Solis & Luna, particeps. (i. e. socius) Siderum, Constantio fratri salutem. But to go on : The Earth is the Peasantry or vulgus hominum, together with the terrestrial creatures serving the use of man.

Of such a Heaven and Earth as this is, the Lord speaks in the Prophecie of Haggai, Ch. 2. v. 6, 7. Tet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens and the earth, both the sea and the dry land; And I will shake all Nations, and the desire of all Nations shall come. And again v. 21, 22. I will shake the heavens and the earth; And I will overthrow the Throne of Kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the Kingdoms of the Heathen, &c. Of such a Heaven and Earth speaks Jeremy, Chap. 4. 23. I beheld the earth, and it was without form and void (תהו ובהו) and the heavens, and they had no light: viz. as if the World were turn'd into the old Chaos again, Gen. 1. See the rest which follows. Of such Heavens and an Earth speaks the Lord in Isaiah ch. 51. 15, 16. namely of the Heavens and Earth of the World or State of Israel : I am (saith he) the Lord thy God, who divided the sea, (to wit, the Red sea) when the waters thereof roared; the Lord of Hosts is his name: And put my Words (i. e. my Law) in thy mouth, and covered thee in the shadow of my hand, (i. e. protected thee in thy march to Canaan, &c.) that I might plant the Heavens, and lay the foundations of the Earth, (i. e. make thee a State, and build thee into a Political World) and say unto Sion, Thou art my people. Of such a kind of Heaven speaks the same Prophet, ch. 34. 2, 4, 5. The indignation of the Lord is upon all Nations, and his fury upon all their Armies, &c. And all the host of Heaven shall be dissolved, and the Heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll; and all their host shall fall down, as the leaf falleth off from the Vine, and as a falling fig from the fig-tree. For my sword shall be bathed in Heaven: behold it shall come down upon Babel, &c. See the rest, and know that this destruction of Edom is prophesied of in no less Hyperbolical a strain by Obadiab, and Jeremy c. 49. from v. 7, to 22. Ezek. 35. tot. & 25. 12. which I note, lest any man wondring at the Hyperbole of this of Esay, should think it applicable only to the Day of Judgment. And that such Schemes as these were usual to the Nations of the Orient, may appear not only by the Chymical Philosophy derived thence, ( which makes Heaven and Earth and Stars in every thing ) but from the testimony of Moses Maimonides, who ( More Nebuchim par. 2. c. 29. ) affirms that the Arabians in his time in their vulgar speech, when they would express that a man was fallen into some great calamity or adversity, used to say, Cælum ejus super terram ejus cecidit. No question these Schemes were as familiar to them as our Poets strains and expressions are to us, though of another genius: ours are borrowed from fables, stories, persons, places; theirs were from the frame of the World, the Sun, Moon, Stars and Elements, &c.

Compare
Lam. 2. 1.

If such a notion of Cælum and Terra may have place in this place of Peter, ( and why may he not, uttering a Prophecy, borrow a Prophetical strain ? ) it may easily appear what Heaven and Earth the Fire at Christ's second coming shall burn up and consume, viz. the Heaven and Earth of the contained world, such as those which the former judgment by water overwhelmed and destroyed; the world of wicked States and men, high ones and low ones, Princes and Peasants, man and beast; according to that twice-repeated passage, Isa. 2. 11, 17. ( which the ancient Jews interpreted of the Day of Judgment, ) The loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low, and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day: And the Idols ( these are part of the host of the Heaven we speak of ) he shall utterly abolish. And of such Heavens and κοίτηα as these, it mattereth not though we understand an absolute destruction, ( namely, of so much as shall be burned ) as was in the Deluge of Noah : and so likewise of the Earth and works thereof. But whereas by the universal Deluge, though only the Mundus contentus perished, yet nevertheless the Mundus continens was therewith corrupted and depraved; in the destruction by Fire it shall be otherwise; for the world of wicked ones being destroyed, the Heaven and Earth which contained them shall be purged and refined for the righteous to dwell therein.

This Exposition I put but in the second place, because where the proper sense of the letter may be kept, I prefer it before any other.

To conclude, If any there yet be whom neither of the former Expositions can satisfy, but will needs have the fire and burning here spoken of to be that whereby the World is to be utterly annihilated; I could answer, That the Day of Judgment is a thousand years, and this Fire, though it be to be ἐν ἐκείνῃ ἡμέρᾳ, in that day, yet shall shall it not be in the beginning, but end thereof : The beginning being but a destruction of the enemies of Christ and the Kingdom of Satan, and then a restoration ; the end, a destruction of the whole creature it self by utter annihilation : and then S. Peter's words, ver. 13. to be construed after this manner, That howsoever the Heavens and the Earth shall at length be dissolved by fire ; nevertheless before that shall be, we look for a New heaven and a New earth ( i. e. a new world or restoration ) to precede this abolition ; according to his promise, Isa. 65. 17. & 66. 22.

But such an exposition, methinks, would not suit so well with that which I take to be S. Peter's chiefest scope in this passage, nor with the words of the holy Prophets he pointeth at, which seem to speak only of a Fire which should precede a restoration, and not of that which should cause an utter abolition of the world.

And as concerning such an utter abolition of the whole frame of Heaven and Earth after the Oeconomy of the redemption and victory of Christ shall be finished, it seemeth to me a mystery which hath no bottom. Howsoever I am not perswaded this place of S. Peter should mean any such thing. Those passages, Job 14. 12. and Apoc. 20. 11. may seem to be of more moment. And if any such annihilation shall be, it stands more with reason it should be by the immediate power of God, without the instrument of any creature, than by Fire ; and that he who at first brought it out of nothing without any creature's help, should reduce it again to nothing without the help of any creature.

relating to some Passages in this Treatise upon 2 Pet. 3.

2 The. 1. 8.

— Chris̄t our Lord shall come, when the Beatum Millennium is to begin, ἐν πυρὶ φλογός, in flaming fire; by the Divine and miraculous efficacy whereof the World that now is shall be refined, and delivered from the bondage of corruption which came upon it for the sin of Man.

This Fire of Christ's coming, and no other, was that Ignis Purgatorius which some of those first Fathers harped on: namely, they supposed this Divine Fire should stretch even to the souls of the dead; and that such as had departed out of this life not fully purged of sin by Repentance here, should not be found Fire-proof at that day, but be refined cum mora & dolore before their resurrection. See that of Cyprian Epist. 52. Aliud est ad veniam stare, aliud ad gloriam pervenire; aliud misum in carcerem non exire inde donec solvat novissimum quadrantem, aliud statim fidei & virtutis accipere mercedem; aliud pro peccatis longo dolore cruciatum emundari & purgari diu igne, aliud pendere in Die iudicii ad sententiam Domini, aliud statim à Domino coronari. Compare that of Irenæus lib. 1. c. 2.— *Christum in suo de cælis adventu τοῖς δίκαιοις & τὰς ἐντολὰς αὐτῆ τέλει ποιήσει, τοῖς μὲν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, τοῖς δ' ἐκ *μετανοίας ζῶντων χαρισάμενον δωρήσασθαι*— This conceit sure had its ground from that of Paul, 1 Cor. 3. 13. The day (viz. of Judgment) shall declare, [what is combustible in our works] because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is: and upon that exhortation of Peter, 2 Pet. 3. 14. Yet did they, at least some of them, expect another fire at the end of the thousand years for the destruction of Gog and Magog, &c.—

THE A P O S T A S Y OF THE L A T T E R T I M E S.

A Treatise on 1 Timothy Chap. 4. Verse 1, 2, &c.

Τὸ δὲ Πνεῦμα ῥητῶς λέγει, ὅτι ἐν ὑστερίαις καιροῖς ἀποστήσονται τινες τῆς πίστεως, πρὸς ἔχοντες πνεύμασι πλάνοις, καὶ διδασκαλίαις δαιμονίων,
Ἐν ὑποκρίσει ψευδολόγων, κεκαυτηριασμένων τῷ ἰδίῳ συνέειδῃσιν,

Which I conceive may be thus Translated,
*Howbeit the Spirit speaketh expressly, That in the latter times some shall revolt from the Faith, attending to erroneous spirits and * Doctrines of Demons, Through the hypocrisie of Liars, having seared consciences. Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, &c.*

C H A P. I.

The dependance of the Text upon the last verse in the foregoing Chapter. Why in the Description of the Mystery of Godliness those words [Assumed into Glory] are set last. A view of the several parts of the Text, containing the Method and Order of the ensuing Discourse. The Author's 3 Reasons for his rendring the Text differently from the Common Translation.

THE WORDS I have read are a Prophecie of a Revolt of Christians from the Great Mystery of Christian Worship, described in the last verse of the former Chapter, which according to the division of the Ancients should be the first of this: For that last Verse, together with the first six Verses of this and half the seventh verse, make the seventh Title or main Section of this Epistle, expressed in the Edition of Robert Stephen; and so are supposed, from the grounds of that division, to belong all to one argument. The Words therefore of my Text depend upon the last of the former Chapter, as the second part of a Discrete proposition: That howsoever the Μυστήριον Εὐσεβίας the Mystery of Christian Religion, which is, God manifested in the Flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of Angels, and assumed into Glory; though this Mystery was a great one, and at that time preached and believed in the world: Nevertheless the Spirit [Τὸ δὲ Πνεῦμα.] speaketh expressly, That in the latter times there shall be a revolt or departing from this Faith; though not in all parts of it, yet from a main and fundamental part thereof, namely, The assumption of this God and Man to the Throne of Glory and incommunicable Majesty in Heaven, whereby he hath a Name given him above every Name, and whereof no creature in Heaven or in Earth can be capable. Which connexion is the reason why the Apostle putteth this Assumption into Glory in the last place of his description, which should else in the true order have followed the words [justified in the Spirit,] and been before [preached unto the Gentiles and believed on in the world.] But it is the * method of the Scripture sometimes to translate the proper order, and to mention that in the last place whereunto it is to joyn, and from whence it is to infer the next words that follow after. And unless this reason be allowed here, there will hardly be found any other reason of this misplacing. But more of this shall be both spoken and made better to appear hereafter.

* See this proved in Chap. VII. of this Treatise.

The Apostasie of the latter Times
PART I.

I come now more near to my Text; the words whereof I divide into two parts: First, A Description of this solemn Apostasie, in the first verse; Secondly, The Manner or Means whereby it was to come to pass, in the following verses, viz. Through the hypocrisie of Liars, who had seared consciences, forbade to marry, and (bade) to abstain from meats.

For the Description of the Apostasie it self, we shall find it first Generally and Indefinitely expressed both in the word Ἀποστήσονται they shall Apostatize or revolt, and in the next προσέχοντες πνεύμασι πλάνοις shall attend to erroneous Doctrines, or Doctrines of error. Then Particularly, 1. What these erroneous Doctrines should be for the kind or quality; namely, new Doctrines of Demons, or a new Idolatry. 2. The Persons who should thus apostatize; not all, but TINEΣ, SOME. 3. The Time when it should be; Ἐν ὑστερίαις καιροῖς In the latter times. 4. The Proof or warrant of this Prophecie; it is that which the Spirit hath else-where long ago foretold πρὸ τῶν in the written word, verbatim, totidem verbis, or in express words.

For the second part, viz. The Means; Consider 1. The Manner or Method used, viz. By lying hypocrisie or hypocritical lying. 2. The quality and description of the Authors and furtherers thereof, they should be such as had their consciences seared, who forbade marriage and meats.

Where, before I go any further, I must give an account of thus translating these latter words which I make the second part, because they are commonly translated otherwise, viz. intransitively, as referring the words of the two latter verses to the persons mentioned in the first, viz. those some who should Apostatize and give heed to erroneous spirits and Doctrines of Devils, as they usually translate it: So that the words of the second and third verses should be the expression by particulars of that which was before generally comprized under erroneous spirits and doctrines of Devils, which should consist partly in forbidding lawful marriage, and partly in commanding abstinence from meats.

But this interpretation seems very unlikely. For first, since S. Paul intendeth here to describe that great Apostasie of the visible Christian Church, as is evident by the pointing out of the time, Ἐν ὑστερίαις καιροῖς In the latter times; who can believe that he who aimeth at this, would instance only in the smaller and almost circumstantial Errors, omitting the main and fundamental, which the Scripture elsewhere telleth us should be Idolatry or spiritual fornication? Secondly, As for Errors about Marriage and Meats, they were not proper to the last times, but found more or less in the Apostles own times; as may be gathered by some passages of their Epistles: Why should then our Apostle, here speaking of the Apostasie of the latter times, instance only in those things which the first times in some measure were never free from? Lastly, (which I take alone to be sufficient) The Syntax of the words will not bear it to have them so translated: For the persons in the first verse, τινὲς προσέχοντες, are expressed in casu recto, whereas the persons in the verses following, ψευδολόγων, κεκαυτηριασμένων, κωλυόντων, are in the genitive: now by what Syntax can these be construed intransitively? how will τινὲς, &c. agree with ψευδολόγων, &c. without breach of Grammar unsampled in our Apostle's Epistles? If any say, they may be referred then and agree with Δαιμονίων that indeed would be a strange sense, and nothing to their purpose, to say that Devils lie, have seared consciences, and forbid marriage and meats. But to construe it transitively, and to make all these genitive cases to be governed by Ἐν ὑποκρίσει, and take the preposition Ἐ, to signifie * Causam or Modum actionis, as is most usual in Scripture; this, as it keepeth the Syntax true, so I hope to make it appear hereafter to be the very meaning, and the Event most answerable thereunto, when you shall hear proved out of story, That the Apostasie of the visible Church came in by lying wonders and all deceiveableness of unrighteousness, managed by those who either professed or doted upon Monastical hypocrisie; the affectation and errors whereof at length surprising the body of the Church, is that which S. Paul, 2 Thess. 2. 10. calls not the Apostasie it self, but A not-love of the Truth, for which God gave them over to strong delusions, that they might believe a lie. But this is out of * its place; only I have anticipated thus much, lest you should be too long in suspense of the grounds of this novelty in translating. And yet this difficulty concerning the Syntax hath stumbled many of our latter Interpreters, as amongst others Beza, who solves it only by saying, That the Apostle more regarded the matter than the construction; which for my part I cannot believe.

* Hyperius so expounds it in his Comm. on this Epistle.

* See this further treated of in Part 2. Chap. 1.

CHAP. II.

Ἀποστασία in the Scripture imports Revolt or Rebellion. That Idolatry is such, proved from several passages in Scripture. By Spirits in the Text are meant Doctrines. Διδασκαλίας Δαιμονίων are to be taken Passively, viz. for Doctrines concerning Dæmons. Several instances of the like form of speech in Scripture.

I Return now unto the First part of my Text, The Description of that solemn Apostasie; where I will consider the five parts or points thereof as I have propounded them, though it be not according to the order of the words. And first in the more general expression, as I called it, in the words Ἀποστήσονται ἡ πίστις, & προσέχοντες πνεύμασι πλάνοις.

Ἀποστήσονται is as much as to say, They shall make an Apostasie: Now Ἀποστασία in the Scripture's use, when it looks towards a person, signifies a Revolt, or Rebellion; when towards God, a spiritual Revolt from God or Rebellion against Divine Majesty, whether Total, or by Idolatry and serving other Gods. For the Seventy, whence the New Testament borrows the use of speech, usually translates by this word the verb מרר to rebel, and מרר Rebellion; both which when they have reference to a spiritual Sovereignty, mean nought else but Idolatry and serving of other Gods: as may appear, Joshua 22. 19. where the Israelites supposing their brethren the Reubenites and Gadites, in building another Altar upon the banks of Jordan, had meant to have forsaken the Lord and served other Gods, they said unto them, וַיִּמְרָא you have rebelled against the Lord, and presently, Rebell not against the Lord, nor rebell against us; where the Seventy hath Ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου μὴ ἀποστάται γενήσῃς, & ἀπ' ἡμῶν μὴ ἀποστήτε and in vers. 22. מרר Rebellion is translated Ἀποστασία, in the words, the Lord God of gods he knoweth if it be in rebellion or in transgression against the Lord. Also Numb. 14. vers. 9. when the people would have renounced the Lord upon the report of the Spies, Joshua and Caleb spake unto them, saying, וַיִּמְרָא לֹא, Rebel ye not; where the Seventy hath Ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου μὴ ἀποστάται γίνεσθε, Be not Apostates from the Lord. So Nehem. 9. 26. in that repentant confession which the Levites make of the Idolatry of their Nation, they were disobedient, say they, וַיִּמְרָא and rebelled against thee: where the Seventy hath ἠλλαξαν & ἀπέστησαν ἀπὸ σοῦ. And Daniel in the like confession, Chap. 9. vers. 9. מרר, the Seventy, ἀπέστημεν we have rebelled against him. So the Idolatry of Ahaz, 2 Chron. 28. and Chap. 29. is by the same Interpreters called ἀποστασία αὐτοῦ, and he ἀπέστη ἀποστάσει ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου revolted greatly from the Lord.

I will not trouble you with the places where מרר translated ἀφίστημι is used for Treason and Rebellion against earthly Princes, which are many. It is sufficient to gather from what we have quoted, That Apostasie having reference to a Sovereignty and Lordship, betokens a withdrawing of service and subjection therefrom; which, if the Sovereignty and Majesty be Divine, is done by * Idolatry and service of other Gods, as well as if the Majesty of the true God were renounced altogether. The use of the New Testament is answerable. Hebr. 3. 12. Take heed lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, ἐν τῷ ἀποστῆναι in departing from the living God. And, which is more near to our purpose, S. Paul in his 2 Thess. 2. 3. means no other thing in his Prophecie of the man of sin by Ἀποστασία than Christian Idolatry; Ἐάν μὴ ἔλθῃ ἡ ἀποστασία (Syr. מררות) πρῶτον, Unless that Apostasie come first, that is, Unless there be a breach of Allegiance and Faith given unto Christ, by Idolatry under Antichrist. The like therefore I conclude to be intended in my Text by ἀποστήσονται ἡ πίστις, namely, That in the latter times men should break their Oath of fidelity to Christ that in and through him alone they should approach and worship the Divine Majesty. And so hath the use of the word Ἀποστασία taught us something, or at least it hath wrought an indefinite suspicion of what should befall Christians in the latter times. Howsoever we are yet in suspense whether this departing from Christ and the Mystery of Godliness should be Total, in not acknowledging him at all, or whether Heretical, in serving others besides him. For the Jews we know, when they forsook the Lord most, yet did not forsake him altogether; but their Apostasie was in not serving him only and alone, but others besides him, as Calves, the Host of Heaven, and Baalim.

LET us therefore see if the next general words will afford us yet further information, viz. Περσέχοντες πνεύμασι πλάνοις attending to erroneous spirits, or, as some read, πνεύμασι πλάνης spirits of error. It would be unprofitable and tedious to tell here of the diverse use of this word spirit in Scripture. Some take it in this place for Doctors of spiritual things, and so πνεύματα πλάνα, or, as some read, πλάνης, should be Doctors of Errors.

But I had rather take spirits in this place for Doctrines themselves; For so Divines observe it to be used, 1 John 4. 1. μὴ παντὶ πνεύματι πιστεύετε, Believe not every spirit, i.e. every doctrine, ἀλλὰ δοκιμάζετε τὰ πνεύματα, but try the spirits, εἰ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἔσιν, if they be of God; ὅτι πολλοὶ ψευδοπροφῆται ἐξεληλύθασιν εἰς τὸν κόσμον, because many false Prophets are gone out into the world: and so onward in that Chapter, πνεύμα τοῦ Ἀντιχρίστου the spirit of Antichrist signifies the false doctrine of Antichrist. So if this sense be admitted, we are something less in suspense than we were, and may guess that this Revolt should not be Total, but Heretical: For we shall not easily find the word spirit to be otherwise used but either for the Doctrines or Doctors of Christianity, or for Heresies under the same. It seems therefore to be some revolt from Christ by Idolatry, even in those who would seem to worship him.

But suppose it be so, yet still are we in suspense what these Erroneous and Idolatrous Doctrines might be: For Idolatry, as we may see in the Jewish Apostasies, was of diverse kinds, as worshipping the Host of Heaven, Baalims, and the Gentiles other things besides them. But we shall not be long in doubt, the next words will clear the case, and tell us they shall be Διδασκαλίας ΔΑΙΜΟΝΙΩΝ Doctrines of Demons: not which Demons or Devils are authors of (though that be true) as if the Genitive case were active; but Doctrines concerning Demons, the Genitive case Δαιμονίων being here to be taken passively for the object of these doctrines; as in Hebr. 6. 2. we have διδασκαί βαπτισμῶν doctrines of Baptisms, and doctrines of laying on of hands, of the Resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment, that is, doctrines about and concerning all these. And the same use may elsewhere be found even with the word Doctrine: as Acts 13. 12. διδασχὴ τοῦ Κυρίου the doctrine of the Lord, that is, concerning him. So Titus 2. 10. διδασκαλία τοῦ Σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Θεοῦ, the doctrine of God our Saviour. And Gal. 2. 20. we have πίστις τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ, the faith of the Son of God, that is, concerning him. Semblably in my Text, Διδασκαλίας δαιμονίων are Doctrines of Demons or Doctrine Deastrorum; that is, The Gentiles idolatrous Theology of Demons should be revived among Christians. For I take the word Δαιμόνιον or Δαίμων (for all is one) not in that worst sense (which no Author but the Scripture useth) but in the better or more indifferent sense, as it was supposed and taken among the Theologists and Philosophers of the Gentiles, and as it is also sometimes taken in Scripture, as I shall shew in due time.

CHAP. III.

Demons (according to the Theology of the Gentiles) were 1. for their Nature and Degree a middle sort of Divine Powers between the Sovereign Gods and mortal Men. 2. For their Office they were supposed to be Mediators and Agents between the Celestial Gods and Men. This proved from Plato, Plutarch, Apuleius, Celsus in Origen, and s. Austin. The Doctrine of the Mediation of Demons glanced at and reprov'd by the Apostle, Coloss. 2. 8. The distinction of Sovereign Gods and Demons proved out of the Old Testament, and elegantly alluded to in the New, 1 Cor. 8. 5, 6.

MEAN-while let us first see what the Gentiles and their Theologists understood by Demons: which when you have heard, I doubt not but you will confess the Deifying and worshipping of Saints and Angels, with other parts of their Idolatry which do this, to be as lively an image of the Doctrine of Demons as could possibly be expressed; and such an one as whereby the Apostasie of the latter times is as by a character character distinguished from the Heresies, false doctrines and corruptions of all other times whatsoever.

The Apostolic of the latter Times
PART I.

Dæmons in the Gentiles Theology were Deasiri or an inferior sort of Deified Powers, as a middle between the Sovereign Gods and mortal men. So saies Plato in Symposio, Πάν το Δαιμόνιον μεταξύ ἔστι Θεῶν τε καὶ ἀνθρώπων. So say all the Platonists, and well-nigh all other Sects of Philosophers; I am sure the most do; for it is a very ancient doctrine, insomuch that Plutarch (De defectu Oraculorum) fetcheth this distinction between Θεοί, i. e. Sovereign Gods, and Dæmons, as far as the antiquity of Zoroaster: Ἐμοὶ δὲ δοκεῖσι πλείονας λῦσαι καὶ μείζονας ἀπορίας οἱ τὸ Δαιμόνιον γένεσθαι ἐν μέσῳ Θεῶν καὶ ἀνθρώπων, καὶ τρόπον τινὰ τὴν κοινωνίαν ἡμῶν συνάγειν εἰς ταυτὸ καὶ συνάγειν ἐξευερίαι· εἴτε Μάγων τῶν τε περὶ Ζωροάστρου ὁ λόγος ἔστι, εἴτε Θράκιος ἄνθρωπος Ὀρφέως, εἴτε Αἰγυπτίου, ἢ Φρυγίου, &c. They seem to me (saith he) to have solved great and difficult doubts, who have placed the Dæmons between the Gods and Men, and found out what in some sort uniteth and joyneth us with them: whether this be the doctrine of the Magi and Zoroaster, or the Thracian doctrine derived from Orpheus, or the Egyptian, or Phrygian, &c. The Sovereign or Highest Gods, which amongst them were properly called Θεοί, were those whom they supposed to be in the Heavens, yea in the Sun, Moon and Stars; whence they called them Dii Superi, Dii Cælestes, whom they affirmed to have neither beginning nor ending: as Apuleius speaks de Demonio Socratis, Immortales, sine ullo vel fine vel exordio, sed prorsus à retro æviterni. And because they dwelt in the heavenly Lights, as it were Souls in Bodies, Plato thinks the name Θεοί first came quasi αἰεὶ ὄντα δρόμον καὶ δίοντα, of the everlasting running and uncessant motion of the heavenly bodies: Plat. in Cratylo.

Now these Sovereign and Celestial Gods they supposed so sublime and pure, as might not be prophaned with approach of earthly things, or with the care and managing of mortal mens businesses; and therefore they bring in that Middle sort of Divine Powers which they call Δαίμονες or Δαιμόνια, Dæmons, to be as Mediators and Agents between the Sovereign Gods and mortal men. Thus saith Plato in his Symposium, Θεὸς ἀνθρώπων μίγνυται, ἀλλὰ διὰ Δαιμονίων πᾶσα ἔστι ἡ ὁμιλία καὶ ἡ διαλέξις. Θεὸς πρὸς ἀνθρώπων· God is not approached by men, but all the commerce and intercourse between Gods and men is performed by the Mediations of Dæmons. Will you see the particulars? Τὸ Δαιμόνιον (saith he) ἔστι ἐρμηνεύων καὶ διαπορθεύων Θεοῖς τὰ παρ' ἀνθρώπων, καὶ ἀνθρώποις τὰ παρὰ Θεῶν, ὥς μὲν τὰς δεήσεις καὶ θυσίας, ὥς δὲ τὰς ἐπιτάξεις καὶ ἀμοιβὰς τῶν θυσιῶν. Dæmons are reporters and carriers from men to the Gods, and again from the Gods to men; of the supplications and prayers of the one, and of the injunctions and rewards of devotion from the other. And Apuleius in the place forequoted describes them, Mediæ potestates, per quas & desideria nostra & merita ad Deos commeant; inter terribiles cælicolâsque vectores, hinc precum, inde donorum; qui ultro citroque portant, hinc petitiones, inde suppetias, seu quidem utrinque interpretes & salutigeri; Dæmons are middle Powers, by whom both our desires and merits pass unto the Gods; they are carriers between men on earth and the Gods in heaven, hence of prayers, thence of gifts; they bring to and fro, hence petitions, thence supplies: or they are certain interpreters on both sides and conveyers of recommendations. For, saith he, Neque enim pro majestate Deum Cælestium fuerit hæc curare, It becoms not the majesty of the Sovereign Gods to manage these things of themselves. Whence it is that Celsus in Origen terms his Dæmons σατράπαις τῶν ἐπὶ πᾶσι Θεῶν, καὶ ὑπάρχοις, καὶ στρατηγῶν, καὶ ἐπιτρόποις, &c. l. 8. contra Celsum, pag. 940. The Peers, Presidents, Lieutenants and Officers of the most high God; who being neglected can do as much hurt as the Peers and Officers of the Persian or Roman Kings. Where note by the way, that Celsus, as some others did, acknowledges but one Sovereign God.

By reason of this Office of mediation, Plutarch (in his De defectu Orac.) calls the Order of Dæmons ἡ ἐρμηνευτικὴ καὶ διακοικητικὴ φύσις, also ὑπηρετὰς καὶ γεσσηματεῖς, ἐπισκόπους ἱερῶν καὶ μυστηρίων, &c. agreeable to the doctrine of Plato, the Order of Agents and Ministers, &c. To stay no longer here, take the Sum of all in the words of Apuleius in the Book forenamed: Cuncta Cælestium voluntate, numine & autoritate fiunt, sed Demonum obsequio, operâ & ministerio; All things are done by the will, power and authority of the Celestial Gods; but withal by the service and ministry of the Dæmons. And if I should bring all which I might to this purpose, I should be too tedious. Porphyrius in Eusebius, and Plutarch, skilful men in this kind of Philosophy, will satisfy them fully to whom this is not sufficient.

This was the Oecumenical Philosophy of the Apostles times and of the times long before them. Thales, Pythagoras, all the Academicks and Stoicks, and not many to be excepted, unless the Epicures, taught this Divinity. He that had rather read a Father of the Church, let him but turn over the eighth and ninth Books of S. Austin de Civ. Dei: the eighteenth Chapter of the former Book having this Title, Qualis sit Religio in qua docetur quod homines, ut commendentur Diis, bonis Dæmonibus uti debeant Advocatis; What a Religion is it that teacheth men to use good Dæmons for their Advocates to commend them to the Gods? the one and twentieth Chapter this, An Dæmonibus nuntiis & interpretibus Diis utantur; Whether the Gods do use Dæmons for their messengers and Interpreters. And of the ninth Chapter of the ninth Book the Title is this, An amicitia Cælestium Deorum per intercessionem Dæmonum possit homini provideri; Whether the friendship and favour of the Celestial Gods may be procured men by the intercession of Dæmons: and of the seventeenth Chapter this, Ad consequendam vitam beatam non tali mediatore indigere hominem qualis est Dæmon, sed tali qualis est unus Christus; To the attaining of blessedness, man hath no need of a Dæmon for his mediator, but of Christ alone. The reading of which Titles alone were sufficient to shew what was the supposed Office of the Dæmons among the Gentiles.

Verse 9.

Verse 18.

This Philosophy therefore so general was that, without doubt, whereof S. Paul admonisheth the Colossians to take heed lest they were spoiled with the vain deceit thereof, as being after the traditions of men, and rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. For some Christians even then under a pretence of humility, of not approaching too nearly and too boldly to God, would have brought in the worshipping of Angels in stead of this of Dæmons: but S. Paul tells them, That as in Christ dwelleth the fulness of the Godhead bodily, so that he needed no colleagues of mediation; so also were they compleat in him, and needed therefore no Agents besides him. Let no man therefore (saith he) beguile you of your reward through humility, and worshipping of Angels; intruding into those things which he hath not seen, and not holding the head, &c.

Neither is the Holy Scripture ignorant of this distinction of Sovereign Gods and Dæmons: The first whereof, the Celestial and Sovereign Gods, whether visible or invisible, it calls הַשֵּׁם הַגָּדוֹל the Host of heaven; the other sort it styleth by the name of Baalim, that is, Domini or Lords. And Manasseh that King of Idolaters was compleat for both of them: So we read 2 Chron. 33. 3. that he reared up Altars for Baalim, and made groves, and worshipped all the Host of heaven, and served them. And 2 Kings 23. 5. that good Josiah is said to have put down the Idolatrous Priests which burnt incense to Baal, to the Sun, and to the Moon, and to the Planets, and to all the Host of Heaven. And 2 Kings 17. 16. the Israelites are said to have worshipped all the Host of heaven, and to have served Baal. Now that these Baalims were no other than Dæmon-gods appears by their * cutting and lancing themselves, who worshipped them, 1 Kings 18. 28. For these Tragick ceremonies are counted by those who treat about these mysteries as certain characters of Dæmons. But this you shall have further confirmed in due place, where the arguments may be better understood.

* For cutting and lancing were Funeral rites, as appears Levit. 21. 5. and chap. 19. 28. and Deut. 14. 1. Fer. 48. 37. and chap. 16. 6. and therefore retained in this Funeral-worship (as they call it) of those that were Deified after death. Quæ,

Did not God forbid his people this Rite, because abused to Dæmon-Idolatry? yet did some transgressit, as Fer. 41. 5. Moses body therefore hidden. I may add to this observation, That for this cause the Scripture calls those false Gods עֲצֵבִים, which signifies as it were דְּמוֹת אֲדָמָה, Such as had been sorrowed for, such as were mourned for, as being dead. (The word עֲצֵבִים is used of David's mourning for Abiathar.) Quæ, whether עֲצֵבִים signifies so properly the Images, as the supposed Gods themselves, See Psal. 106. 36. 37. where עֲצֵבִים are explained to be עֲצֵבִים Devils. See Esay 48. 5. where עֲצֵבִים is distinguished from graven and molten Images. Where the word seems otherwise, it may be taken Metonymicé. Hence Hosea 13. 2. may be thus interpreted, They have made molten-images of their silver, which are according to their understanding, עֲצֵבִים, informed, as they supposed, with those mourned-for-ones.

That these Baalim were the Deified souls of the dead, is manifest from divers places of Scripture. Numb. 25. 2. 3. The Midianites called the people to the sacrifices of their Gods, and the people did eat. And Israel joyned himself to Baal Peor. But Psal. 106. 28. it is said, They joyned themselves unto Baal Peor, and ate the sacrifices of the dead. Whence Apollinaris expresseth it by Νεφελαιαν ἑκατέμηνον. In the prophetic Song of Israel's Apostasy, Deut. 32. 15. They sacrificed unto Dæmons, not to God; to Gods whom they knew not, to new ones that came newly up, whom their Fathers feared not. The Seventy Δαίμονιους. Heb. לְשֵׁרִים. Vide Isai. 65. 4. Idololatra in sepulchris. Item cap. 8. verse 19. Pro vivis ad mortuos. Loc. Isa. 8. 19. Targ. vertit, Nonne hac via est populorum colentium Idola? Unusquisque populum ab Idolo suo requirit, vivi à mortuis. LXX. sic; καὶ ἔθνη & θεοὶ διδόναι αὐτοῖς ἐκζητήσουσι; τί ἐκζητήσουσι καὶ ἔθνη ζώντων τὰς νεκρῶν; Loc. Isa. 65. 3. 4. Targ. sic; In hortis sacrificant Idolis, & adolent aromata super lateres. 4. Qui habitant in domibus quæ edificantur de pulvere sepulchrorum, & cum cadaveribus filiorum hominum morantur. LXX. αὐτοὶ θυσίαζον ἐν τοῖς κήποις, καὶ θυμῶσιν ἐπὶ τοῖς πλίνθοις τοῖς Δαίμονιους καὶ ἄλλοις. Ἐν τοῖς μνήμασι καὶ ἐν τοῖς σπυλαίοις κοιμῶνται δὲ ἐν ὑπνῷ. Videatur etiam Isa. 26. 14. Targum in locum. Multa huc adduci possunt de Gigantibus עֲנָנִים, quorum Moses meminit. Quin & Hieronymus in hunc locum Isaia, per *Domino*s alienos in vers. 13. intelligit Idola & falsos Deos; per Gigantes & mortuos in vers. 14. Simulachra istiusque assidentes Dæmones.

This distinction also of Sovereign Gods and Dæmons I suppose our Apostle alludes to 1 Cor. 8. 5, 6. where he saith, Though there be that are called Gods, whether in heaven or in earth; as there be θεοὶ πολλοὶ Gods many, (that is, Dii Cælestes, Sovereign Deities) καὶ κύριοι πολλοὶ and Lords many, (that is, Δαίμονες ἐπιχθόνιοι, Dæmons Presidents of earthly things;) Yet to us Christians there is but ὁ θεός one Sovereign God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we to him, (that is, to whom, as Supream, we are to direct all our services;) and but ὁ κύριος one Lord Jesus Christ, (in stead of their many Mediators Mediators and Dæmons, ) δι' ἃ τὰ πάντα, καὶ ἡμεῖς δι' αὐτῶν, by whom are all things which come from the Father to us, and through whom alone we find access unto him. The allusion, methinks, is passing elegant, and such as I think cannot be well understood without this distinction of superior and inferior Deities in the Theology of the Gentiles; they having a plurality in both sorts, and we Christians but one in each, as our Apostle affirmeth. There wants but only the name of Dæmons, in stead of which the Apostle puts Lords, and that for the honour of Christ, of whom he was to infer ἃς Κύριος, one Lord; the Name of Christ being not to be polluted with the appellation of an Idol: for his Apodosis must have been otherwise ἃς Δαίμων, one Demon. Or it may be he alludes unto the Hebrew name Baalim, which signifies Lords; and those Lords, as I told you, were nothing else but Dæmons: For thus would S. Paul speak in the Hebrew tongue, There are אלהים רבים and בעלים רבים, many Gods and many Lords.

The Apostasy of the latter Times
PART I.

CHAP. IV.

The Gentiles Doctrine concerning the Original of Dæmons, viz. That they were the Souls of men Deified or Canonized after death. This proved out of Hesiod, Plato, Trismegist, Philo Byblius the translator of Sanchuniathon, Plutarch, Tully. Baal or Bel or Belus the first Deified King: Hence Dæmons are called in Scripture Baalim. Dæmons and Heroes how they differ. Dæmons called by the Romans Penates, Lares, as also Dii Animales Soul-Gods. Another and an higher kind of Dæmons, such as never dwelt in Bodies: These answer to Angels, as the other (viz. the Soul-Dæmons) answer to Saints.

AND thus have I shewed you (though but briefly, in regard of the abundance the argument would afford) the Nature and Office of these Dæmons according to the Doctrine of the Gentiles. I come now unto another part of this Doctrine, which concerns the Original of Dæmons, whom you shall find to be the Deified Souls of men after death. For the Canonizing of the Souls of deceased Worthies is not now first devised among Christians, but was an Idolatrous trick even from the days of the elder world; so that the Devil, when he brought in this Apostatical doctrine amongst Christians, swerved but little from his ancient method of seducing mankind.

variety of species. Tercul.
de spectaculis
cap. 12.

Let Hesiod speak in the first place, as being of the most known the most ancient. He tells us that when those happy men of the First and Golden age of the world were departed this life, great Jupiter promoted them to be Dæmons, that is, Keepers and Protectors or Patrons of earthly mortals, and Overseers of their good and evil works, Givers of riches, &c. and this, saith he, is the Kingly Royalty given them. But hear his own words;

Ἀντάρ' ἐπεὶ μὲν τότ' οὖν γένετο κατὰ γαῖαν κάλυψεν, τοῖ μιν ΔΑΪΜΟΝΕΣ εἰσι Διὸς μεγάλης διαβυλάς, ἔσθλοισι, ἔπ' ἡρόδοτοι, φύλακες θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων, οἳ ῥα φυλάσσουσιν δίκας καὶ χεῖρ' ἔργα, ἥερα ἑοσάμηνον, πέντη φοιτῶντες ἐπ' αἶαν, πλῆθος ὅτ' αἶν. καὶ τότ' οὖν γένετο βασιλῆϊον ἔχον.

And hence it is that Oenomaus, quoted by Enschius, calleth these Dæmon-gods Ἡσιόδοι θεοὶ Hesiod's gods.

The next shall be Plato, who in his Cratylus says, That Hesiod and a great number of the rest of the Poets speak excellently, when they affirm that good men when they die attain great honour and dignity, and become Δαίμονες, which is (saith he) as much to say as Δαήμονες καὶ φρόνιμοι, that is, Wise ones; for Wise ones (saith he) are only Good ones, and all Good ones are of Hesiod's Golden generation.

The same Plato Lib. 5. de Repub. would have all those who die valiantly in the field to be accounted of the Golden kind, and Δαίμονας ἐffici, to be made Dæmons, and the Oracle to be consulted how they should be buried and honoured, and accordingly ever afterwards ὡς Δαίμονων ὅτ' αἶν. τε καὶ προσκυνησόμεν, αὐτῶν τὰ δίκας, i. e. their Sepulchres to be served and adored as the Sepulchres of Dæmons. In like manner should be done unto all who in their life-time excelled in virtue, whether they died through age or otherwise.

PART I.

wife. This place Eusebius quotes ( Lib. 13. Prep. Evang. ) to parallel with it the then harmless practice of Christians, in honouring the memory of Martyrs, by holding their assemblies at their Sepulchres ; to the end that he might shew the Gentiles, that Christians also honoured their Worthies in the worthiest fashion. But it had been well if in the next Ages after, this custom of Christians ( then but resembling ) had not proved the very same Doctrine of Dæmons which the Gentiles practised.

But I go on, and my next Author shall be Hermes Trismegistus, whose antiquity is said to be very near the time of Moses. I will translate you his words out of his Asclepius which Apuleius made Latine. There, having named Æsculapius, Osiris, and his Grandfather Hermes, who were ( as he saith ) worshipped for Dæmons in his own time, he adds further, That the Egyptians call them ( namely the Dæmons ) sancta animalia, and that amongst them ( namely the Egyptians ) per singulas Civitates coli eorum animas, quorum sunt consecrata virtutes, Through every city their Souls are worshipped, whose Vertues are deified. And here note by the way, that some are of opinion that the Egyptian Serapis, whose Idol had a bushel upon his head, was Joseph, whose Soul the Egyptians had canonized for a Dæmon after his death.

Prepar. Evang.
lib. 1. cap. 9.

Philo Byblius, the translator of Sanchuniathon that ancient Phœnician Historian, who lived before the times of Troy, and wrote the Acts of Moses and the Jews ( saith Eusebius ) very agreeably to the Scripture, and ( saith he ) learned his Story of Jerom-baal a Priest of the God J E V O ; Philo Byblius ( I say ) in a Preface to his Translation of this Author, setteth down what he had observed and learned out of the same Story, and might serve to help their understanding who should read it : namely, That all the Barbarians, chiefly the Phœnicians and Egyptians, of whom the rest had it, accounted of those for Dii Maximi, who had found out any thing profitable for the life of men, or had deserved well of any Nation ; and that they worshipped these as Gods, erecting Statues, Images and Temples unto them. And more especially they gave the Names of their Kings ( as to the Elements of the world, so also ) to these their reputed Gods : for they esteemed the natural Deities of the Sun, Moon and Planets, and those which are in these, to be only and properly Gods : so that they had two sorts of Gods ; some were Immortals, and others were ( as we may term them ) Mortallists.

cap. 2.

Thus saith Philo Byblius out of the Phœnician History. From which Testimony we may borrow some more light concerning those Baalims in Scripture. * For Baal or Belus, whose worship Jezabel, the daughter of Ithobaal King of Tyre, brought into Israel, was a deified Phœnician King of that name, as Virgil will tell us in that verse concerning the Phœnician Queen Dido,

Nay Baal, or in the Chaldee Dialect Bel, ( for all is one ) was the first King of Babel after Nimrod ; and the first * ( as is written ) that ever was deified and reputed a God after death ; whence afterward they called all other Dæmons Baalim : even as because the first Roman Emperor was called Cæsar, thence were all the Emperors after him styled Cæsares. And it may be this is part of that which Philo Byblius out of Sanchuniathon would tell us ; That the Barbarians, especially the Phœnicians, &c. gave names from their Kings to such as were canonized after death : For so we see here that the Babylonians, and the neighbouring Countries, which spake the Hebrew tongue or some Dialect thereof, called all Dæmons Baalim, of the first Dæmon or deified King in the world, Baal or Belus. For at that time when Belus reigned in Babel, was Phœnicia with the neighbour people under the Kingdom of Babel : Whence may seem also to have come their community of language and ceremonies. And here note a wonderful mystery, That old Babel, the first Pattern in the world of ambitious Dominion, was also the Foundress of Idols *, and the Mother of the fornication and abominations of the earth.

And because we have fallen upon the naming of Dæmons, let us observe another mystery of names, out of Plutarch ( De defect. Orac. ) which may help us out of, or prevent vent some difficulties, namely, That Dæmons are sometimes called by the names of those Celestial Gods whose Ministers and Proctors they are, and from whom they receive their power and Divinity: as Apollo's Dæmon, Apollo; Jupiter's Dæmon, Jupiter; and so the rest: ὃ δῖος & θεῶν συντέτακται, καὶ παρ' ἡμῶν δυνάμεις καὶ τιμὴ ἐλήχεν, ἀπὸ τούτου φιλεῖσθαι. Like as here among us men, one is called Jovius from Jupiter, another Athenæus from Ἀθηνᾶ, i. Minerva, another Dionysius from Διόνυσος, i. Bacchus, &c. Thus Plutarch; which Cleombrotus there saith he learned of a wonderful and profound Ægyptian Eremita, who lived about the red Sea, &c. To which is agreeable what Eusebius, Præpar. Evang. lib. 3. cap. 3. quotes out of Diodorus, viz. That the Ægyptians affirmed such as had been great Benefactors where they lived, to be Deified after their death, and some of them ὁμωνύμως ὑπάρχειν τοῖς θεοῖς, to be called by the very names of the Celestial Gods.

The same Plutarch in the same place doth acquaint us with this pretty conceit, which being to the purpose I will not omit; namely, That the Souls of men took degrees after death: First they commenced Heroes, who were as Probationers to a Demonship; then after a time sufficient, Demons; and after that, if they deserved well, to a more sublime degree. Howsoever it be, Demons and Heroes differed but in more and less antiquity; the more ancient Heroes being called Demons, and the younger Demons Heroes.

But that we may return again more close to the matter in hand, This order of Dæmons, or * Soul-gods, as I may call them, found place in the Religion of the elder Romans, who called them Penates, * Lares, and Manti Dii; and when once they began to Canonize their deceased Emperors, (which was from the time of Augustus) they called them Divi, which word before that time was more general. Tully in his second Book De Legibus shall be my witness, that his country-men acknowledged this distinction of Sovereign Gods and Soul-deified powers; for there you shall find this Law, Divos, & eos qui Cœlestes semper habiti, colunto: & ollos quos in cælum merita vocaverint; Let them worship the Gods; both those who were ever accounted Celestial, and those whom their own merits have advanced to heaven. And again, Deorum Manium jura sancta sunt. Hos letho datos Divos habento; Let the Rights of separate Souls be kept unviolable, and let them account the deceased Worthies as Gods. Would God the present Christian Romans had not renewed this Law.

Yea so strongly was this Doctrine embraced amongst the Gentiles, that some of their latter Theologifts thought, That even the Souls of wicked men and Tyrants had a power after death, and that of these came mali Damones, which hurt men; and yet to these they ordained Temples, and Sacrifices to keep them from hurting them, as well as to the good Demons for helping them. But the Ancients gave this honour to the Souls of vertuous men only.

Thus have you heard the Original of Demons according to the ancient and general opinion of the Gentiles. But besides these Demons, whose Original you have heard, (I mean besides Soul-Demons and Canonized mortals) their Theologists bring in another kind of Demons more high and sublime, * which never had been the Souls of men, nor ever were linkt to a mortal body, but were from the beginning, or without beginning, always the same. So Apuleius tells us in his De Deo Socratis; Est & superius aliud augustiusque Demonum genus, qui semper à corporis compedibus & nexibus liberi, certis potestatibus procurentur. Ex hac sublimiori Demonum copia autumat Plato singulis hominibus in vita agenda testes & custodes singulos additos. This sort of Demons doth fitly answer and parallel that sort of spiritual Powers which we call Angels, as the former of Soul-Demons doth those which with us are called Saints.

parate from Bodies, or such as never dwell in Bodies at all. Though both these sorts have the name of Demons given them in common, yet are those which were the Souls of men otherwhile for distinction sake called Heroes, (Plutarch. de Plac. Philos. Lib. 1. cap. 8.) though some extend this name in general to all, but only to such as are either of an inferior rank, or but Novices, not yet promoted to the Office of Demons; as Punies not yet called to the Bar.

The manner and way of worshipping the Demons and retaining their presence, viz. by consecrated Images and Pillars. That Images were as Bodies for Demons to animate and dwell in. The worshipping of Images and Columns a piece of the Doctrine of Demons. This proved out of Trismegist, Porphyry, Arnobius, Minutius Felix, &c. The worshipping of Demons in their Reliques, Shrines and Sepulchres another piece of Demon-doctrine. That the Gentiles Temples were nothing but the Sepulchres of dead men. The gross Idolatry of the Egyptians.

BUT lest I might seem to have no measure in raking up this Ethnical dunghil, I will now leave the Theology of the Original of Demons, and shew you yet another piece of that Doctrine, namely, Concerning the manner how Demons were to be worshipped, and as it were brought to the lure of men, when they had occasion of devotion with them: And this was done by sacring of Images. This you shall hear from an ancient Author and passing skilful in the mysteries, even Hermes Trismegistus, who in his Asclepius speaketh, in English thus; It is a wonder (saith he) beyond all wonders, (and he saith truly) that man should find out a way to make Gods: Yet because (saith he) our Forefathers erred much through unbelief concerning Deities, and had small regard of Religion and Divine worship; therefore they devised an art to make Gods, (he meaneth Images:) And because they could not make Souls, (he means to these senseless bodies) therefore they called the Souls of Demons and Angels, and put them into their Images and holy Mysteries; by which means alone these Images have power of helping and hurting; which thus incorporated (he saith) are called by the Egyptians Animalia sancta. And in another place, That kind of Gods (saith he) which men make, is composed of two natures, of a Divine, (which is first and more sacred) and of that which is amongst men, namely, the matter whereof they are made. The summe of all this Mystery is, That Images were made as Bodies, to be informed with Demons as with Souls: For an Image was as a Trap to catch Demons, and a device to tie them to a place, and to keep them from flitting.

* De Præpar.
Evangeli. 1. 5.

The like hath Eusebius out of Porphyrie, That the Gods did exceedingly delight in consecrated Images, and were circumscribed and enclosed therein as in a sacred place; ὡς ἀφείσιν, ἀλύται τὸ κεῖσθαι ἐν τῇ γῆν τὸ θεῖον, and the Image being taken away, that is dissolved which detained the Deity upon earth. This is that which Psellus calleth προσεγγισαὶ δαιμονίων, the Approachings or Presencings of Demons. And Iamblichus termeth these consecrated Idols Ἀγάλματα θείας μετεσσίας ἀνάπλεα, Images filled with divine fellowship or with divine society. And our forementioned Hermes calleth them statuas animatas, sensu & spiritu plenas, animated Statues, full of sense and spirit.

Hence came that answer or defence of the Gentiles, as Arnobius (Lib. 6. advers. Gent.) makes them speak, Neque nos ara, neque auri argentique materias, neque alias quibus signa consunt, eas esse per se Deos & religiosa decernimus numina; sed eos in his colimus, eosque veneramur quos dedicatio infert sacra, & fabrilibus efficit habitare simulachris: We do not think brass and gold and silver and other materials of Images to be of themselves Gods and holy Powers; but in these we worship and reverence the Gods brought into these Images by sacred dedication, and keeping their residence there. And in another place he makes this Objection for their behalf; An numquid dicitis fortè presentiam vobis quandam sub his numinum exhiberi simulachris; & quia Deos videri non datum est, eos ita coli, & iis munia officiosa præstari? But you say, perhaps, the Deities present themselves unto you in some sort under these Images; and because the Gods cannot be seen, they are thus worshipped, and have religious service done unto them.

And thus have we seen the ground of the Idolatrous use of Images, and found that the Worship of them also is a Doctrine of Demons: For as at first they were ordained for Demons; so whatsoever Deity is worshipped in this manner, though it were the true and Sovereign God, is thereby made a Demon.

What I say of Images, must be understood also of Pillars or Columns, whereof we read Levit. 26. 1. Ye shall make no Idols, nor graven Images, nor rear you up a Pillar to bow down unto it. For howsoever Pillars and Images, through some confusion at length surprising the Gentiles superstition, may afterwards seem to be ascribed to other Deities besides Demons; yet by original institution they were proper unto Demons, & no other.

other. The Sovereign and Celestial Gods, they were worshipped in the Sun, Moon and Stars, where they were supposed to dwell: But Images and Columns were for Dæmons; and if they seemed to be made for any other, Plutarch's Eremita would resolve us, that they were but Dæmons called by the name of some Sovereign Gods whose Agents they were. The truth of this the History of the beginning of Idolatry by Images makes evident. For that Images and Pillars were at first devised and erected to the Honour and Memory of dead men *, this the fourteenth Chapter of the Book of Wisdom will tell us, and that by the vain-glory of men they first entred into the world: no less will the long-continuing custom of the world, using thus to honour not only their dead, but since also the living, be sufficient to perswade the truth. Minutius Felix in his Octavius will put us forth of doubt. Majores nostri (saith he) dum Reges suos colunt religiosè, dum defunctos eos desiderant in Imaginibus videre, dum gestiunt eorum memorias in statu detinere; sacra facta sunt, quæ fuerant assumpta solatia: Our Ancestors while they religiously honour their Kings, while they desire after their departure to behold them in their Images, and delight to preserve their memory in Statues; what was at first taken up for their own solace, was at length made a matter of Religion. When therefore those whom they thus honoured and remembred were canonized for Dæmons, then were these Memorials also worshipped for some supposed presence or divine respect of such Dæmons in or to them. The worshipping therefore of Images and Columns is by its original and institution a piece of the Doctrine of Dæmons *; so that whatsoever is thus worshipped, yea the glory of the incorruptible God himself, is thereby changed into a Dæmon.

THUS much of Images and Idol-Pillars, of the reason of their supposed Divinity, and of the original and first occasion of worshipping them. But yet we have not done, there is another piece of Dæmon-devotion yet behind, namely, The worshipping of Dæmons in their Reliques, Shrines and Sepulchres *; for this was also a part of the Doctrine and Theology of Dæmons. Plato, whom before we quoted for the Canonizing of Dæmons, of the Ghosts of such as died valiantly in the field, would have their Shrines and Coffins to be worshipped, ὡς Δαιμόνων δίκας, as the coffins of Dæmons. Hear also what Clemens Alexandrinus speaks of this Dæmon-doctrine, Strom. lib. 6. Διαφέρειν δ' ἑδὲν νομίζουσιν, εἴαν γ' ἢν θεὸς, εἴτε καὶ ἀγγέλους τὰς ψυχὰς ταύτας λέγοιμεν, &c. They (that is, the Greeks) are of opinion that it matters not whether we call those Souls (viz. the Dæmons whom they invoke) Gods or Angels. But the more skilful Theologists place the coffins of the deceased in many of their Temples as so many Statues of the Gods, Δαιμόνας μὲν τὰς τέτων ψυχὰς καλεῖντες, θρησκεύεσθαι δὲ πρὸς ἀνθρώπων διδασκαλίας, &c. calling their souls Dæmons, and withall teaching that they ought to be worshipped by men, as being for the holiness of their lives intrusted by Divine Providence to be employ'd about this earth for the service of men: For they well knew that some Souls were naturally tied to the Body. Out of which words observe, That they supposed the like presence and power of Dæmons at their Coffins and Sepulchres which before we observed and heard of in their Images; as though there always remained some natural tie between the Souls deceased and their Reliques; and therefore they there builded Temples unto them where their bodies and ashes were entombed. And hence it is that the Primitive Fathers which write against the Gentiles do so often upbraid them, That their Temples were nothing else but the Sepulchres of dead men; νεῶς μὲν οὐκ ἄλλως ὀνομαζομένης, (saith Clem. in his Protreptic.) ταῦτα δὲ γενομένης, ταῦτα, τὴν νεῶς ὡς ἐπικεκλιμένης. They were indeed called by the specious and plausible name of Temples, but were in truth nothing but Sepulchres; that is, the very Sepulchres of dead men were called Temples. He goeth on speaking to the Gentiles; ὑμεῖς δὲ ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν δαισίδαιμόνας ἐκλάθεσθε, τὴν τὰς τιμῶν αἰχυνόμενοι. Be ye therefore at length perswaded to forget and relinquish your Dæmon-worship, and be ashamed to worship the Sepulchres of dead men. To the like purpose Arnobius l. 6. advers. Gent. Quid quòd multa ex his Tempia quæ tholis sunt aureis & sublimibus elata fastigiis, autorum conscriptionibus comprobatur contegere cineres atque ossa, & functorum esse corporum sepulchras? Nonne patet & promptum est aut pro Diis immortalibus mortuos vos colere, aut inexpiabilem fieri Numinibus contumeliam, quorum Delubra & Tempia mortuorum superlata sunt bustis? Where he tells them, that many of their Temples, famous for their high and golden roofs, were nothing but the Sepulchres of the deceased, covering dead bones and ashes; and that it was very evident that for the immortal Gods they worship'd men that were dead, dead, or that they were guilty of doing an horrible dishonour to the Gods, whose Temples were built over the burying-places of dead men.

I might further add to these Oecumenical doctrines of Dæmons that monstrous one of the Egyptians, for which their fellow-Gentiles derided them, who worshipped living brute Beasts, yea Onions and Garlick, and Water it self, with Divine worship, as supposing some Dæmon or other to dwell in them. Such were their Cow-god Apis, and their Bull-god Mnevis, and their Water-god Nilus, which it shall be enough to have only named, to make the former compleat; and that from it and the rest of that kind of abominations we may gather this Conclusion once for all, That since the Sovereign and Celestial Gods (as you heard before) might not be approached nor polluted by these earthly and material things, but kept always immovably, without change of place or presence, their heavenly stations; therefore the adoring or worshipping of any visible or material thing for any supposed presence or other relation of a divine power therewith, is to be accounted amongst the Doctrines of Dæmons.

CHAP. VI.

A Recapitulation or Summary of the Doctrines of Dæmons. How the Severals thereof are revived and resembled in the Apostate Christian Church. That the word Δαιμόνιον is sometime in Scripture taken according to the Theology of the Gentiles, and not always for an Evil Spirit. That it is so to be taken in the Text was the judgment of Epiphanius: an observable passage quoted out of him to this purpose.

AND thus have you seen the Theology of Dæmons; 1. For their Nature and degree, to have been supposed by the Gentiles an inferiour and middle sort of Divine Powers between the Sovereign and Heavenly Gods and mortal men: 2. Their Office, to be as Mediators and Agents between these Sovereign Gods and men: 3. Their Original, to be the Deified Souls of worthy men after death; and some of an higher degree, which had no beginning, nor ever were imprisoned in mortal bodies: 4. The way to worship them, to find and receive benefits from them, namely, by consecrated Images and Pillars, wherein to have and retain their presence at devotions to be given them: 5. To adore their Reliques, and to Temple them.

Now therefore judge impartially whether S. Paul's Prophecy be not fulfilled already amongst Christians, who foretold that the time should come that they should Apostatize and revive again Διδασκαλίας δαιμονίων, Doctrines of Dæmons; whether the deifying and worshipping of Saints and Angels, whether the bowing down to Images, whether of men or other things visible, broaden Idols, and Crosses like new Dæmon-Pillars, whether the adoring or templing of Reliques, whether these make not as lively an image of the Gentiles Theologie of Dæmons [Διδασκαλίας Δαιμονίων] as possibly could be expressed; and whether these two words comprehend not the whole pith and marrow of Christian Apostasy, which was to consist in Spiritual fornication or Idolatry, as appears by that name and denomination thereof given by S. John in his Revelation, The Whore of Babylon. Is not she rightly termed the Babylonish whore, which hath revived and replanted the Doctrines of Dæmons first founded in the ancient Babel? And is not this now fulfilled which S. John foretells us, Apoc. II. That the second and outmost Court of the Temple (which is the second state of the Christian Church) together with the holy City should be trodden down and overtrampled by the Gentiles (that is, overwhelmed with the Gentiles Idolatry) forty two months?

But perhaps I am yet too forward in my Application; some things in our way must first be cleared: For howsoever the resemblance indeed be evident, yet First the Text seems not to intend or mean it, because the word Δαιμόνιον is in the Scripture never taken in the better or indifferent sense, howsoever prophane Authors do so use it, but always in an evil sense, for the Devil or an Evil Spirit. Now the signification of words in Scripture is to be esteemed and taken only according to the Scripture's use, though other Writers use them otherwise. Secondly, For the charge of Idolatry; though much of that wherein we have instanced may be granted to be justly suspected for such indeed, yet nevertheless that whereupon this Application mainly relieth, namely, The praying to Saints glorified, as Mediators and Agents for us with God, should not seem to deserve so foul a name. For suppose it were a needless, yea and a fruitless Ceremony, mony, yet what reason can be given why this should be more tainted with Idolatry, than is the like honour given to Saints and holy men whilst they live on earth, whom then to desire to mediate and pray to God for us was never accounted so much as an unlawful matter? When these two Scruples are answered, I will return to continue my former Application.

The Apostolic of the latter Times
PART I.

To the First therefore, for the use of the word Δαιμόνιον in Scripture, I say, That because those which the Gentiles took for Demons and for Deified Souls of their Worthies were indeed no other than Evil Spirits, counterfeiting the Souls of men deceased, and masking themselves under the names of such supposed Demons, under that colour to seduce mankind; therefore the Scripture useth the name Demons for that they were indeed, and not for what they seemed to be. For no blessed soul or good Angel would admit any honour which did derogate from the honour of the only true God who made them: neither do the glorified Saints in heaven, or the blessed Angels, though Apostate Christians now invoke and worship them, accept of this honour, hear their prayers, or condescend to their devotions, by any sign or act whatsoever; but whatsoever is made seem to be done by them, is done by the self-same wicked Spirits which heretofore were masked under the names of Demons; and therefore in this regard the one may as well bear the names of Demons as the other, and be as likely to be intended by the use of that word.

Secondly, though the Scripture often useth this word in the worst sense, yet follows it not it always should do so. Because the word Διάβολος it self, which the Scripture hath appropriated to signify Satan the Prince of hell-hounds, following therein the Seventy, (who first gave it this notion nowhere else sampled in any Greek Author) yet is this word Διάβολος in the New Testament it self, three several times used in the common sense for a Slanderer or False accuser, and that in three several Epistles, in both to Timothy, and that to Titus: And why should the like seem improbable for the word Δαίμων or Δαιμόνιον? Nay, most certain it is so, as I now come to make manifest.

1 Tim. 3. 11.
Tit. 2. 3.

And that first, Acts 17. 18. where S. Paul our Apostle, having at Athens preached Jesus risen from the dead, the Philosophers thus encountred him, saying, This fellow Ξένων Δαιμονίων δοκεῖ καταγελεῖν ἡμᾶς, which we translate, He seemeth to be a setter-forth of strange gods, namely, Demon-gods: For hearing of one Jesus after death to become a Lord and Saviour, and to be adored with divine worship, they took him presently (according to their own principles in that kind) to be some new or foreign Demon; for so it follows in the Text, that they said thus, Because he preached unto them Jesus and the Resurrection. Upon the same ground Celsus in Origen lib. 8. cont. Cels. calls the same Christ our Saviour the Christians Demon; for whereas the Christians said, that they without hurt and danger blasphemed and reproached the Gentiles Gods, Celsus replies, * Nonne vides, bone vir, quod etiam tuo Damoni opponens se quispiam non solum convitiatur, sed terrâ marique illum exigit? Do you not see (good Sir) that some opposing your Demon, do not only reproach him, but proclaim him unworthy to be at all in the world? Where Origen answers Celsus, (a) Qui nullos scit malos Demones, nescio quomodo sui oblitus, Jesum vocarit Demonem; He that acknowledges no evil Demons, I know not how he came to forget himself, calling Jesus a Demon. But S. Paul thus charged by the Philosophers, coming to make his Apology in the Areopagus, retorts their accusation; Ye men of Athens (saith he) I see you in all things ὡς Δεισιδαίμονες ἑστέ too full of Demons already. I shall not need bring any more amongst you. (For thus the word Δεισιδαίμων by Etymology signifies a worshipper of Demon-gods, and was anciently used in this sense; and so you shall find it often in Clement Alexandrinus his Protrepticon (b), not to speak of others; though afterwards from signifying ἡ πρὸς τὸ θεῖον ἐνλάλεια, as Budans speaks, it came to be applied to those who were too precise and anxious in their devotions.) But I (saith our Apostle) preach no new Demon unto you, but that Sovereign and Celestial God who made the world and all things therein; who being Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not (as your Demon-gods do) in Temples made with hands, neither is worshipped with mens hands, as though he needed any thing, (as you conceive of your Demons,) seeing he giveth to all life and breath, and all things: This God I preach unto you. And this place I take to be so unanswerable for the indifferent and common acception of the word Δαιμόνιον, that I care not now though the rest should fail me : but let us see what they are.

In Revel. 9. 13, &c. the sixth Trumpet from Euphrates brings an huge army upon the Christian world, which destroyeth a third part of men ; and yet those which remained repented not of those sins ( verse 20. ) for which these plagues came upon the earth, viz. That they should not worship Δαιμόνια and Idols of gold, silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood, which can neither see, nor hear, nor walk. Is not this a Comment upon the Apostle's Prophecy in my Text ? The time which it concerns must needs fall in the last times ; for it is the last Trumpet save one. The place must be the Roman Empire, or Christian world ; for that is the Stage of all the Seals and Trumpets : And how could it be otherwise, seeing S. John at Pathmos saw them coming from the great River Euphrates ? whatsoever comes from thence, must needs fall upon the Territory of the Roman Empire. To hold you no longer, the best Expounders make it the Ottoman or Turkish invasion, which hath swallowed so great a part of Christendom. But what people are they who in the Roman Territory do in these latter times worship Idols of gold, silver, brass, and stone, and wood ? Are they Ethnicks ? there is none such. Are they Jews ? they cannot endure the sight of them. Are they Mahometans ? nay, they abhor it also. Then must they needs be Christians ; and then must Christians too worship Δαιμόνια ; for both are spoken of the same men. But what Christians do, or ever did worship Devils formally ? But Demon-gods ( alas ! ) they do and long have done. Here therefore Δαιμόνιον is again taken in the common and Philosophical sense, or at least, which is all one, for Evil Spirits worshipped under the names of Demons and deceased Souls.

Besides my Text, there is but one place more in all the Epistles of S. Paul where the word Δαιμόνιον is used, namely 1 Cor. 10. 21. where if there be any allusion to the Gentiles conceit of Demons, then all the places of S. Paul's Epistles are bending that way. But some there are, saith Stephen in his Thesaurus, who think the Apostle in his Ποτήριον Δαιμονίων, or Cup of Demons, alludes unto that poculum aγυθὺν Δαιμόνων, used amongst the Gentiles. And further to strengthen this conceit of the Apostle's Allusion to the Heathenish notion of * Demons, the words of the former verse make much ; For the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice ( saith he ) to Demons, and not to God. Now this was the very Tenet of the Gentiles, That the Sovereign and Celestial Gods were to be worshipped only purâ mente, and with hymns and praises, and that sacrifices were only for Demons. Vid. Porphy. in Enseb. Præp. Evang. Herm. Trismeg. in Asclepio, Apuleium de Daemonio Socratis. He therefore who had given his faith to that Εἰς Κύριον. One Lord, to the ὁ μόνος Δυναστής the only Potentate, to the Εἰς Μεσίτην, to the one and only Mediator Jesus Christ, must have no communion, have no part in the service of those many Mediators, Lords or Demon-gods of the Nations ; for Christ's Monarchical Mediation excludes all other Mediators and Demons : not that the wooden Idol was ought of it self, but that the Gentiles supposed there dwelt some Demon therein, who received their sacrifices, and to whom they intended their services. Thus may this place be expounded, and so the use of the word Demon in the worst sense or directly for a Devil, will be almost confined to the Gospel ; where the subject spoken of being men vexed with Evil Spirits, could admit no other sense or use : and yet S. Luke, the best-languaged of the Evangelists, knowing the word to be ambiguous, and therefore as it were to distinguish it once for all, doth the first time he useth it, do it with an explication, Chapter 4. verse 33. There was ( saith he ) a man in the Synagogue ἔχων πνεῦμα Δαιμονίου ἀκαθάρτου, having the spirit of an unclean Demon.

Thus much of the word Demonium Δαιμόνιον in Scripture ; whereby I hope it appears, that this place of my Text is not the only place where the word is used according to the notion of the Gentiles and their Theologists.

But you will say, Did any of the Fathers or Ancients expound it thus in this place ? If they had done so, the Mystery of iniquity could never have taken such footing ; which because it was to come according to divine disposition, what wonder then if this were hidden from their eyes ? Howsoever, it may seem that God left not his spirit without a witness : For, as I take it, Epiphanius, one of the most zealous of the Fathers of his time against saint-worship then peeping, took διδασκαλία Δαιμονίων in my Text for a Doctrine of worshipping dead men. You may read him in the seventy eighth Hereſie towards the conclusion, where, upon occasion of some who made a Goddeſs of the blessed Virgin, and offered a cake unto her as the Queen of Heaven, he quotes this place of my Text concerning them, saying, πληρῶνται ὅτι τὸ Αποστήσειν αὐτὰς ἡ ὕψις διδασκαλίας, προσέχοντες μύθοις καὶ διδασκαλίαις δαιμονίων· ἔσονται ὁ, φησὶ, ΝΕΚΡΟΙ Σ λατρεύοντες, ὡς καὶ ἐν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ ἐσεβάδηνσαν· which in English sounds thus, That also of the Apostle is fulfilled of these; some shall apostatize from the sound Doctrine, giving heed to Fables and Doctrines of Demons; for (saith he) they shall be worshippers of Dead men, as they were worshipped in Israel. Are not these last words for an Exposition of διδασκαλίας δαιμονίων? But what (will you say) doth he mean by the Dead worshipped in Israel? I suppose he means their Baalim, who (as is already shewed) were nothing else but Demons or Deified Ghosts of men deceased: yet he brings in two examples besides; one of the Sichemites in his time, who had a Goddeß or Damoneß under the name of Jephthah's daughter; another of the Egyptians, who worshipped Thermutis, that daughter of Pharaoh which brought up Moses. Some, as Ezeas, would have these words of Epiphanius to be a part of the Text it self in some copy which he used. But how is that likely, when no other Father once mentions any such reading? Nay it appears moreover, that Epiphanius intended to explain the words as he quoteth them, as he doth πίστις the Faith by ὕψις διδασκαλία the sound Doctrine, and πνεύματα πλάνης erroneous spirits by μύθοι Fables, and so προσέχοντες διδασκαλίαις δαιμονίων giving heed to Doctrines of Demons by λατρεύοντες τοῖς νεκροῖς worshipping Dead men. Otherwise we must say he used either a very corrupt copy, or quoted very carelessly. But grant that Epiphanius read so: Either this reading was true, and so I have enough; because then the Apostle with his ἔσονται ὁ, &c. should expound himself by δαιμόνια to mean the Deifying of the dead: Or it was not the original reading, but added by some or other for explication sake; and so it will follow, that those who did it made no question but that the words there contained some such thing as worshipping of the dead. Therefore take it which way you will, it will follow, that some such matter as we speak of was in times past supposed to be in this Text and Prophecy.

C H A P. VII.

Why those words in the description of the Mystery of Godliness [Received into Glory] are set last. That praying to Saints glorified, as Mediators and Agents for us with God, is Idolatry. For the proof of this several Grounds are laid down. To be prayed to in Heaven, and to present our Devotions to God, and to deal as an Agent and Mediator between us and him, is a Prerogative appropriate to Christ, a Flower of his Glory and Exaltation to sit at God's Right hand, a Royalty incommunicable to any other. That none but Christ our High Priest is to be an Agent for us with God in the Heavens, was figured under the Law, in that the High Priest alone had to do in the Most holy place, and there was to be Agent for the people. That though Christ in regard of his Person was capable of this God-like Glory and Royalty, yet it was the Will of God that he should purchase it by suffering an unimitable Death. This proved from several Testimonies of Scripture. Saint-worship is a denial of Christ's Prerogative. Bread-worship in the Eucharist to what kind of Idolatry it may be reduced. How Saint-worship crept into the Church.

NOW I come to the Second point, to maintain and prove That praying to Saints glorified, as Mediators and Agents for us with God, is justly charged with Idolatry. For this is the hinge whereupon not the Application only of my Text, but the Interpretation thereof, chiefly turneth. For this is that which I told you in the beginning, that my Text depended upon the last words of the former chapter and verse, Received into glory; which were therefore, out of their due order, put in the last place, because my Text was immediately to be inferred upon them. The like misplacing, and for the like reason, see * Heb. 12. 23. where, in a catalogue or recension of the parts of the Church, Christ the Head, and the sprinkling of his blood, is mentioned in the last place, and after the spirits of just men, because the next verses are continued upon this sprinkling of Christ's blood: Ye are come to the general assembly, and Church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the Spirits of just men made perfect, And to Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, which speaketh better things than that of Abel: where-as the right order should have been, First, God the Judge of all; secondly, Christ * See also Apo- cal. chap. 1. ver. 5. where Christ is named after the seven Spi- rits for the like reason.

The Apostasie of the latter Times
PART I.

the Mediator of the new Covenant; and thirdly, in the last place, the Spirits of just men made perfect. Agreeably therefore to this dependance of my Text I am to shew, That the Invocation of Saints glorified implies an Apostasie from Christ, and a denial of his Glory and Majesty whereunto he is installed by his Assumption into heaven, to sit at the right hand of God. Which before I do, I must premise some General grounds, which are as followeth.

First, That as God is most One, and without all Multiplicity; so must the Honour and Service which is given unto him have no Communicability. Isa. 42. 8. I am the Lord, that is my name, and my glory will I not give unto another, nor my praise to graven Images: For the One-most God must have an One-most service. Therefore in that Action whereof God is the Object, nothing must be an Object but God. Or, in the Scripture phrase, thus, In those actions which look towards the Face of God, nothing may come between, whose Face such Actions may look upon besides him; whether by way of Subordination to him, or Representation of him: For I am the Lord thy God (* saith he ) Thou shalt have no other Gods יְהוָה לפני before my face.

Secondly, This Face of God is not only the Object of his Person, but also the Place of his presence, where his Glory is revealed in the Heavens, where we shall see him face to face, 1 Cor. 13. 12. Revel. 22. 4. and where the Angels in heaven behold the Face of the Father which is in Heaven, Matth. 18. 10. No Action therefore directed thitherward, that is, to this Face of his revealed presence and glory, may so much as look askint upon any other Object, or behold any other Face but the Face of God alone; For we must have no other Gods before his Face.

I say not, that a man may not turn his Face upon the Face of any other thing when he turns his Face towards the Face of God; for how then should we worship him at all, seeing which way soever we turn us, something will always be before us? But it is not the Face of our Bodies, or their posture, but the Face and posture of the Act we do, which must not have the Face turned upon any thing else, when it is directed at the Face of God: namely, That Action in which God is faced, must face nothing else but God; that is, Where God is the Object; whether in regard of his Person, when we pray unto him; or of his Throne of presence, when we would approach it, or direct our supplications towards it; there nothing is to have any respect of an Object but God alone. So although when we pray unto God, we turn the face of our Bodies towards Heaven, the Sun, the Moon, and Stars; yet do we not therefore worship the host of heaven, because our Action hath no relation to them as to an Object, but to God alone; and howsoever they are between God and us in place, yet as an Object of our devotion neither they, nor any thing in them, come any way between us and him.

Now for the reason ( if you ask it ) of this Incommunicableness of all Action and Service directed to God-ward, you shall have it, Exod. 34. 14. Because the Lord whose name is Jealous, is a Jealous God: Jealous, not only lest he should not be honoured and served as God; but Jealous lest he should not be honoured as One God: For as by honouring him we acknowledge him God, so by the Incommunicableness of honour we acknowledge him One God.

For this cause, God being to give us a Mediator, by whom we should have access unto his presence, and whom, without his Jealousie, we might interpose in our devotions and supplications unto himself, or offered at the Throne of his Majesty and Glory in the heavens, provided that admirable Mystery of communicating to the nature of a man born of a woman, the Hypostatical union of the second Person of the Deity; and him, after he had vanquished death, to exalt to sit at his right hand of Glory and Power in the Heavens, there in his own Presence and Throne to receive our Requests, and to deal as an Agent between us and him.

Thus at length I am arrived at that Port which all this while I made for, viz. to shew, That this Glory of Christ, which is styled His sitting at the Right hand of God, is that Incommunicable Royalty to which of right belongeth in the Presence of God to receive and present our devotions to the Divine Majesty; as in that which now followeth shall appear.

Sessio ad Dextram Dei, To sit at the Right hand of God, isto be installed in God's Throne, or to have a God-like Royalty, which is defined in Scripture; Μεγαλωσύνη Χερσὶ ἐν ὑψηλοῖς, The Majesty of Christ in heaven; whence it is said, Heb. 1. 3. ἐκάθισεν ἐν δεξιᾷ τῆ μεγαλωσύνης ἐν ὑψηλοῖς, He sate down on the Right hand of Majesty on high; and Heb. 8. 1. it is called Δεξιὰ τῆ θρόνου τῆ μεγαλωσύνης ἐν τοῖς ὑερανοῖς, The Right hand of the Throne of the Majesty in the Heavens: It is called also by Christ himself, Mark 14. 62. Δεξιὰ τῆ δυνάμεως, Luke 22. 69. Δεξιὰ τῆ δυνάμεως τῷ Θεῷ, The Right hand of Power, and the Right hand of the Power of God: For as to the Right hand belongs both dignity and strength; strength; so doth this Glory of Christ include both a God-like Sublimity and a God-like Power; the first δεξιά & δόξα, the second δεξιά & δυνάμει. The proper place where the Majestical Glory is revealed, is the Heavens, as may appear almost wheresoever this sitting at the right hand of God is mentioned, Eph. 1. 20. ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις, Coloss. 3. 1. ἐν τοῖς ἄνω, Heb. 1. 3. ἐν ὑψηλοῖς, Heb. 7. 26. ὑψηλοτέρῳ τῷ ἑβραϊσμῷ, 1 Pet. 3. 22. εἰς ἑβραϊσμὸν, &c. Heaven, Heavenly places, High places, and the like, being always thereto annexed: and every where appeareth to be a consequent of his Ascension into Heaven, as we say in our Creed, He ascended into Heaven, and sitteth at the Right hand of God; and therefore in the words whereon my Text depends, is expressed by Assumed or Taken up into Glory, ἀνελήφθη ἐν δόξῃ. For as God himself is styled Pater in Cælis; not because not elsewhere, but because his Glory is there revealed: so Christ sits ad dextram in Cælis, because there the beams of the Majesty given him by his Father are revealed: whence it comes that his Kingdom is called the Kingdom of Heaven, that is, a Kingdom whose King's residence and Kingly Throne are both in Heaven.

This glorious Throne of Majesty, this sitting at the Right hand of the Power of the Almighty, is a Name incommunicable, an Exaltation whereof no creature in heaven or earth is capable: which is that the Apostle means to tell us, when he saith, Eph. 1. 21. Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come; and Phil. 2. 9, 10. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name, (that is, created name) That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, both of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth. Revel. 3. 21. He that overcometh, (saith Christ) I will give him to sit with me in my Throne; even as I have overcome, and sat with my Father in his Throne. Here is mention, we see, of two Thrones, of which, my Throne, that is, Christ's Throne, is the condition of a glorified man; in this Throne his Saints shall sit with him: But my Father's Throne is the Power of Divine Majesty, wherein none may sit but God, and the God-Man Jesus Christ.

These grounds laid, I say, That the Honour of being prayed to in Heaven, and before the Throne of presence, is a Prerogative of Dextra Dei; and to receive our devotions there, a Flower of Christ's sitting at the Right hand of God: as S. Paul, Rom. 8. 34. conjoins them, saying, Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather that is risen again, who is at the Right hand of God, and who makes intercession for us. For by right of this his Exaltation and Majesty he comes to be a Priest after the order of Melchisedech, as appears Psalm 110. 1. The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my Right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool; then follow the effects thereof, ver. 4. The Lord hath sworn, and will not repent, Thou art a Priest for ever, after the order of Melchisedech. And by the same right also he becomes the Only and Eternal Priest which hath to do in the most Holy place, the Heavens: For as the High Priest only entered the most Holy place beyond the veil in the earthly Tabernacle; so Christ Jesus, our only High Priest, through his Body, as the first Tabernacle, by his own blood, entered into the second Tabernacle, or Holy place, not made with hands, as was the figure, but into Heaven it self, ἐμφανισθῆναι τῷ προσώπῳ & Θεοῦ ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, there to appear in the presence of God for us. All this you have in the same words at large, Heb. 9. 7, 11, 12, 24.

Now in the Tabernacle of this world, as was in the first Tabernacle, we may haply find many Priests whom to imploy as Agents for us with God: But in the second Tabernacle, which is Heaven, there is but one Agent to be imployed, but one who hath Royal commission to deal between God and men, that Angel of the presence, as Isaiah calls him, ch. 63. 9. and one only Mediator, Jesus Christ the Lord of glory, who in this prerogative is above Saints and Angels: For to which of the Saints or Angels said God at any time, Sit on my Right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool? Heb. 1. 4, 9, 13.

Neither will this Demonstration admit that vulgar Exception to be of any force, namely, That Expiatory mediation, or Meritorious intercession in heaven, should indeed appertain to Christ alone; but Favourable intercession to pray for us, not so; and therefore for this we may without derogation to Christ sollicite either Saints or Angels. I could say, that this rage is too-too narrow and short to cover their nakedness who lay hold of it; in whose Supplications to Saints, and to God too in their names, nothing is more usual than the express mention of their Merits, Blood and sufferings, as Motives to God to hear them. But we shall not need this Answer:

For

The Apostasy of the latter Times
PART I.

The Apostasie of the latter Times
PART I.
Rev. 5. 8. &
Chap. 8. 3.

For we have demonstrated, that as in the Law none but the High Priest alone was to do office in the Holiest place; so Christ Jesus now is the only Agent for whatsoever is to be done for us in the holiest Tabernacle of Heaven. Besides, we read that none but the High Priest alone was to offer Incense, or to incense the most Holy place when he entred into it: But Incense is the Prayers of the Saints, sent thither from this outward Temple of the militant Church, as in the Law was fetched from without the veil: This therefore none in Heaven but Christ alone must receive from us, to offer for us. And this is that Angel with the golden Censer, (Rev. 8. 3.) who there offers the Incense of the prayers of the Saints, there given him to offer upon the golden Altar before the Throne; alluding exprelly to the golden Altar before the Testimony.

For the fuller understanding and farther confirmation of what hath been spoken, take this also; That notwithstanding the man Christ Jesus in regard of his Person, being God as well as Man. was from his first incarnation capable of this Royalty and Glory; not only for the incomparable sufficiency of his Person, which by reason of his twofold Nature is alwaies and in all places present both with God and men, and so at one instant able and ready at every need to present to the one what he should receive from the other; but chiefly and most of all, for that by being very God himself, his Father's jealousy (which could never have brooked the communication of this Glory to any other which should not have been the self-same with himself) was by this condition of his Person prevented and secured.

Nevertheless and notwithstanding all this capability of his Person, it was the will of his Father, in the dispensation of the Mystery of our redemption, not to confer it upon him, but as purchased and attained by suffering and undergoing of that Death which no creature in heaven or in earth was able to undergo but himself; being a suffering of a Death, whereby Death it self was overcome and vanquished; to the end that none by death save Jesus Christ alone might be ever thought or deemed capable of the like Glory and Sublimity; but that it might appear for ever to be a peculiar right to him.

And this, I think, is not only agreeable to the tenour of Scripture, but expresse Scripture it self. Heb. 2. 9, 10. But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the Angels, by the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour. For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings. Phil. 2. 8. And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross; and v. 9, 10. Wherefore God hath also highly exalted him, and given him a name above every name, That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow. Heb. 10. 12. But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins, for ever sat down on the Right hand of God. Rom. 14. 9. For to this end Christ both died, rose and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living. See besides, Acts 5. 30, 31. Rom. 8. 34. Ephes. 1. 20. 1 Pet. 1. 11.

Lastly, for that particular parcel of this Glory of Christ, viz. To be that only Name in which we are to ask at the hands of God whatsoever we have to ask; is not this also ascribed and annexed to his triumph over death? John 14. 12, 13. I go unto my Father, (viz. through death;) And whatsoever ye ask in my name, that will I do. John 16. 16, and 23. A little while, and ye shall not see me; and again a little while, and ye shall see me; because I go to my Father. And in that day (when I am gone to my Father;) ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you. Verse 24. Hitherto ye have asked nothing in my name; ask, and ye shall receive. Heb. 7. 25, 26. Wherefore he is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him; seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. For such an High Priest became us—who is made higher than the heavens.

How is it then that some extenuate that kind of Saint-worship, wherein Prayers are not made unto them directly, but God is prayed to in their names and for their mediation sake to grant our requests? Is it not a denial of Christ's Prerogative, to ascribe unto any other, for any respect of glory or nearness to God after death or otherwise, that whereof he alone is infeoffed by his unimitable Death, triumphant Resurrection and glorious Ascension? Certainly that which he holds by incommunicable title, is it self also incommunicable.

To conclude therefore with the words of S. Paul, 1 Tim. 2. 5. There is but one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus: As God is one, so is the Mediator one; for it is a God-like Royalty, and therefore can belong but to one.

Now judge whether Διδασκαλία Δαίμονων hath hitherto been fitly applied or not: I will go on.

CHAP. VIII.

That Idolatry is the main Character of the Church's Apostasy, proved by Three Arguments.

HAVING therefore by so many Arguments made apparent (as I hope) what I endeavoured to prove; I desire we may observe, among so many Corruptions both now and heretofore overwhelming the Church of Christ, what that is wherein the Holy Ghost placeth the Essence, and accounteth as the very soul of the Great Apostasy under the Man of sin, and would have us to make the Pole-star of our discovery thereof. Not every Errour, not every Heresie, how foul soever; but Διδασκαλία Δαιμονίων, Idolatry and Spiritual Fornication. As for other Heresies, though accompanying this, yet are they but accidental, and not of the Essence of the Great Apostasy which was to come. Even as Whores are seldom without other foul faults, which yet are no parts of whoredom: so hath the spiritual whore many other Heresies, but her Whoredom is only Idolatry and the Doctrine of Demons.

Neither is Heresie of itself, no, though damnable Heresie, a character whereby the Great Apostasy can be known from other Sects and Blasphemies. Foul Heresies were in the first Ages of the Church, yet Antichrist and his time were neither of them yet come. When his time approached nearer, the Arrians, Macedonians, Nestorians, Eutychians, were abominable Hereticks; and the Arrians possessed for a time the face of the visible Church; yet was not theirs the solemn Apostasy looked for.

But Idolatry or Spiritual Whoredom, which in that storm the Devil was a working, this is the only character and note whereby the Apostasy under the Man of sin is discovered and distinguished from all other Blasphemies, Sects and Heresies of what age or time soever.

Which that I may not seem to ground only upon the exposition of my Text, which whatsoever the probability thereof be, may yet be thought alone too weak to support the weight of so main a Conclusion; I desire you to take these Arguments for a full confirmation thereof: some of them have already been intimated, but now all are mustred up together.

1. That Babylon is intituled in the Revelation of S. John, not the Liar of Babylon, nor the Tyrant of Babylon, nor the Heretick of Babylon, nor the Murderess of Babylon, but the Whore of Babylon, yea that Great Whore, and the Mother of the fornications and abominations of the earth. Doth not God (think we) give the name as he accounts the nature? Or is there any one will deny that this Babylon is that Mystery of iniquity which our Apostle so calleth, as being in opposition to the great Μυστήριον ευσεβείας Mystery of true worship and Religion? If any should, Μυστήριον Βαβυλῶν * Mystery Babylon, in her forehead, would help to reclaim him. And what Whore is that with whom * the Kings and Nations and Kingdoms of the earth commit fornication? can it be any other but a spiritual Whore? Without question therefore S. John means no other thing here than what he foretold in the eleventh chapter, That the second and outmost court of the Temple, (which is the Second state of the Christian Church) together with the holy City should be trodden down and overtrampled by the Gentiles forty two months, that is, overwhelmed with the Idolatry of the Gentiles, which is Διδασκαλία δαιμονίων, as long as power shall be given to the Beast to make war with the Saints, as long as the Witnesses must wear sackcloth, and the Woman which escaped the fury of the Ethnical Dragon be fed in the wilderness.

2. S. Paul tells us, that the Great Apostasy should enter by strong delusions, by signs and lying wonders: Consider then what Corruptions of the Christian Faith were thus ushered in. To begin with the beginning and First Corruption of that kind. Invocation of Saints, with the Adoration of their Shrines and Reliques, how were these advanced in the Church? was it not by miraculous cures of the sick, healing of the lame, restoring of the blind, yea raising of the dead (as seemed) by the only touch and aire sometimes of the Shrines and Reliques of Souls deceased? was it not still confirmed by strange Apparitions and other means wonderful to hear, for discovery of Bones and Reliques unknown and forgotten, yea of men whose names they had never heard of before? and, which I shall shew better hereafter, no such experience for three hundred years together observed in the Church, until the fatal and fixed time began to enter. The worshipping of Images (the Second, for time, of the Church's Fornications) was not this also allured and at length fully ratified by like signs and Miracles shewed upon those who approached them in their devotions? Read the Legend, and see what store there is of strong delusions and lying wonders. That which for time came in last, but deserves a place among the foremost, I mean the Idolatry of Mass and Adoration of the Breaden God, search and see if it also be not thus attended.

If all this be true, then would I know what Doctrine of theirs besides was installed with these solemnities. There is but one only left for exception, and that is Purgatory: But what if all the delusions of Purgatory, with all the Apparitions of Purgatorian Ghosts, were but an indirect device of Satan, aiming partly to advance the Mass into an Idol by the miraculous efficacy (as the Ghosts forsooth report) of the oblation thereof for them; partly to instal the son of perdition (a Dæmon I yet spake not of, and yet a Dæmon) to sit as God in the Temple and Throne of Christ, with the keys of * Hades and death, to deliver them? What stronger presumption can there be of this than the Event, and that the error of Purgatory had so long been working before the Devil seemed to know how to make this use of it, which at length he spied out and plied lustily with signs and Wonders? If all this be true, then it follows still that it is Spiritual Fornication which the Holy Ghost in Scripture intendeth, and the Event hath marked out for the Soul of Antichristian abomination and impiety. But of the matter of Miracles and lying wonders more in the Second part of my Text, which is the proper place thereof.

3. And lastly, The Great Apostasy is a thing proper to ὑστερον καιρον the Latter times; (which I will shew, when I come at it, to be the last times of the Fourth Kingdom of Daniel, Dan. 7. 25. & alibi.) But amongst all other Corruptions, only the Spiritual fornication of the Church and Spouse of Christ will be found proper to these times.

CHAP. IX.

Two Exceptions against the foregoing Assertion. Except. I. That Idolatry should rather be laid upon the Pagans. This answered, and proved That Pagan Idolatry is not here meant, nor can the Saracen or Turk be the Antichrist meant in Scripture. Except. II. That Antichristianism cannot be charged upon those that acknowledge the true God and Christ. The Answer to this, wherein is interwoven the Author's serious and pathetic Exposition with the Church of Rome. That Antichrist is a Counter-Christ, and his Coming a Counter-resemblance of the Coming of Christ; shew'd in several particulars.

BUT you will say, if Idolatry and Spiritual fornication be the matter, why should not this rather be laid upon Paynims and Turks and Saracens, who acknowledge not Christ, rather than upon Christians who do?

I answer, S. Paul and S. John prophesied of a thing to come, not of that which was in being when they prophesied. But Ethnic and Paynim Idolatry at that time overwhelmed the whole earth, yea and persecuted and made war with the Saints, and no time hath yet been when this Idolatry was not to be found. It must needs be then some other Whoredom (for Whoredom it was to be) which was prophesied of to come.

Again, neither Saracen nor Turk (the greatest unchristian States since Christ) neither of these, I say, can be the Antichrist we speak of; nor their Blasphemy that Mystery of iniquity foretold by the Apostles and Prophets.

ἂν δὴ καὶ ΧΑΒΑΡ τῇ αὐτῶν ἐπονομάζουσι γλώτῃ. Ἰησοῦ δὲ ἡ λέξις αὐτῇ τὴν μεγάλην.

For there are two unquestionable Characters of that Mystery, which will neither of them, without doubt not both of them, agree to Turk or Saracen; namely, First, That it should sit in the Great City, which in S. John's time reigned over the nations of the earth: Secondly, That it should be an Apostasy from the Christian faith once embraced. But the Turk, whatsoever he be, is no Apostate, being of a Nation which never was Christian: Nor was the seat of the Saracen Empire, whilst it stood, either in the Old or New Rome, or near unto either: For I would seem to yield for this time, that New Rome or Constantinople would serve the turn; though I am far enough from believing it. Nor will I allege, that Mahomet himself and his Nation were both Paynims when they began their blasphemy; for you would tell me that sergius the Monk taught him to make the Alcoran. Nor will I question now whether the Christian or the Mahumetan be the greater Idolater; though the doubt might soon be resolved, seeing it is well known that the Mahumetans worship no Images. But I have alleged nothing but what is without exception, That both these Characters I speak of cannot be applied either to Turk or Saracen, though I believe that neither can be. When I spake of Paynims and Mahumetans, I would have you remember that there were some blasphemous Sects in the first Ages of the Church, which are no more to be accounted of as Christians than Mahumetans and Paynims are; nay Mahumetanism is nearer Christianity than many of them were: For amongst whom the Christians Deity is not received and worshipped, those, though they spring up in imitation of Christianity, I account but new Paynim-blasphemies, and not Christian Heresies. Such were the * Cerinthians, Marcionites, Saturnians, Valentinians, and Manichees, &c. Which neither professed the same Deity, nor acknowledged that Divine Word which we Christians do: whereas yet the Mahumetans worship the same God with Jews and Christians, God the Creator of Heaven and Earth, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; howsoever they conceive otherwise of his Nature and Properties than Christians do. But this by the way, lest it might put a rub in our discourse of Spiritual fornication.

But you will still allege for her behalf who seems all this while to be charged, That Antichrist and the Man of sin is set forth in Scripture as the most hateful and execrable thing that can be in the eyes of God Almighty: But how can such a thing be said, and comparatively to be, where the true God, with Christ his Son, God and man are in any sort acknowledged and worshipped?

Lord! that the whole strain of Scripture, in the Prophets especially, and the example of the Church of Israel, should not cure this web, and take this filme from the eyes of men! Doth not the Lord say of Israel, that he had chosen them to be a special people to himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth? Deut. 7.6. You only have I known (saith he) of all the families of the earth, Amos 3.2. And is not Christ the Lord of Christians? and is not the Church his spouse? τὸ μυστήριον τούτο μέγα ἐστίν, saith S. Paul, Ephes. 5. 32. This is a great Mystery. No marvel then where this Mystery is not considered, if the Mystery of iniquity be not understood.

Alas poor Church of Israel! thy case it seems should have been a very hard one; For, what Nation in the world ever suffered so much rebuke, so many plagues, so much wrath, as thou hast done? Yet couldst thou say for thy self, thou never forsookest the true God altogether, but wast still called by his Name; only thou wouldst fain worship him in Calves and Images, as other Nations, thy neighbours, did their Gods; thou wouldst needs follow the fashion, and this was thine error. Thou never meantst to cast off thy Jehovah altogether, but still wouldst have him to be thy God, and thy self to be his people; yet thou tookest this liberty, to have other Gods besides the Lord thy God, viz. thy Baalims and Demon-Gods of other Nations about thee; and yet hopedst that Jehovah the God of heaven, thy only Sovereign God, would not be offended thereat, since thou retainedst him still in chief place and honour with thee.

Why was thy God then so unkind and cruel unto thee, to call thee Whore, and Prostitute Whore, so often? all his Prophets continually baiting thee with that so foul and odious a name of abominable Harlot? Why did he scatter thee, and even cart thee naked among the Nations, afore his jealousy would be satisfied? For it seems he is far more indulgent to his second wife, the Church of the Gentiles: For she worships her God in Images and Crucifixes, yea calls a piece of Bread her Lord and her God; and yet saith, he is no whit jealous of her, but well pleased. She, though espoused to Christ Jesus, the Son of the living God, as her sole Mediator and Intercessor in the presence of God his Father, yet thinks she may fall down to Saints and Angels, yea to as many Images of them as ever the Jews had of their Baalims, or the Gentiles of their Demons. And yet, forsooth, because she makes her Lord the chiefest still in the honour of her affection, and uses the rest of her Lovers no farther than she may still yield the first and chief place to him, she verily supposes he is no whit offended with her: whereas Israel should have been called a Whore a thousand times over for as little as this; yea and like enough to have been carted too, and her nose slit (Ezek. 23.25.) long before this time.

Nay, but she wipes her mouth, and asks why her Lord should be angry; for she calls him still her Lord, and acknowledges and professeth him still to be her Husband. If he hath a mind to be angry with any, let him go to the Turks, Tartars and other Mahumetans, or to the Paynims, who will not acknowledge him at all to be their Lord, though he hath offered himself, and perhaps wooed some of them; but they would none of him, but have married themselves to other husbands: here, if he will be jealous, is matter for his jealousy.

But thou Christ-apostatical strumpet, knowest thou not the first Commandment of thy Christian Decalogue to be, Thou shalt have no other Christs but me? What doest thou then with so many Christ-lings? Knowest thou not that an Husband is more grieved and dishonoured by his Wife's adultery, than if any other women whatsoever, yea suppose his kinswomen and daughters, should play the harlots?

What are Turks, Tartars, or any other unbelieving Nation under Heaven, unto thy Lord and Saviour? are they not all as Strangers to him, and he to them? But as for thee, he had chosen thee out of many Nations to espouse thee to himself; so that thou mayest say with Israel, Isa. 63. 19. We are thine; but as for them, thou never barest rule over them, they were not called by thy Name. But to thee (to use the words of Ezechiel, ch. 16. v. 8. &c.) He sware an oath, and entered into a covenant with thee, and thou becamest his, and wert called, and wilt still be called by his name. Thee he washed with water, yea, thoroughly washed thee from the pollution of thy birth, and anointed thee with oyl. Thou wast decked with gold and silver, and thy raiment was of fine linnen, and silk, and brodered work; thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oyl, and wast exceeding beautiful, and didst prosper into a Kingdom. And thy renown went forth among the Heathen for thy beauty; for it was perfect through the comeliness which the Lord thy God had put upon thee. But thou didst trust in thine own beauty, and playedst the Harlot because of thy renown, and pouredst out thy fornications upon every one that passed by. And of thy garments thou didst take, and deckest thy high places with divers colours, and playedst the Harlot thereupon. Thou hast also taken thy fair jewels of thy Lord's gold, and of thy Lord's silver, which he had given thee, and madest to thy self Images of men, and didst commit whoredom with them; And tookest thy brodered garments, and coveredst them: and thou hast set the Lord's oyl and his incense before them, &c.

Judge now between the Lord and his people, ye that have Wives, give sentence ye Husbands, whether of the two in question hath most dishonoured our Lord and Saviour; which of the two is most like to fret him, and kindle the coals of fury and jealousy: Those who never were in covenant with him, nor yet are called by his name; or whether his Spouse, his darling and beloved one, to whom he was betrothed and married. Judge according to the manner of Wedlock, and the notorious precedent of Israel. He that is a Father (we say) is best able to understand the love of a Father, and therefore God's love to his children: For the like reason, he that is an Husband is sensible of the jealousy of an Husband, and so of the case of Christ with his unfaithful and treacherous spouse the Christian Jezabel.

The decision and sum of all is this, That the Whoredom of the Church of God is a Spiritual Adultery; and therefore between the Idolatry of Christians and that of Infidels and Paynims is as much difference, in God's esteem, as is between Adultery and simple Fornication. The one, as equal to Murther, was in the Law punished with death; the other with a much lighter punishment. Whence in Ezechiel (in those words I have been so long) Chapter 16. verse 38. God saith to Jerusalem for their Idolatry, that he would judge her as women that break wedlock and shed blood are judged: he would give her blood in fury and jealousy. And this was the resolution of God himself against Israel, Amos 3. 1, 2. Hear this word that the LORD hath spoken against you, O children of Israel, saying, You only have I known of all the families of the earth; therefore will I punish you for all your iniquities. And the same will be the judgment of the Christian Jezabel (howsoever Paynims and Infidels speed) when Great

Book III. Antichrist's Coming a Counter resemblance of Christ's. 647

This I would have well considered and weighed by those whom the Mahumetan blasphemy hath dazeled, that they can hardly believe that so hated and execrable a name as that of Babylon should belong unto any other, unless there be yet to come some otherlike barbarous Tyrant and seducer after them. The cause of which error is, That men have fancied another manner of Antichrist than the Holy Ghost meant of, and placed their eyes far wide of the ground of God's hatred, and of the nature of that Mystery of Abomination. But Israel's Apostasie, God's jealousy, and their unparalleled Punishment therefore, such as no Nation in the World, how Idolatrous soever, endured besides themselves, are in this case the only Pole-star to direct us.

But even this mistake, which is and hath been of the Mystery of iniquity, is it self a kind of Mystery, or not without one: For Antichrist is a Counter-Christ, and therefore his Coming to be a Counter-resemblance of the Coming of Christ.

Christ was both to come, and accordingly looked for in the Last times, that is, in the time of the Fourth Kingdom of Daniel: So Antichrist and his Mystery of impiety was to be ἐν ὑστέροις καιροῖς, in the latter times of those Last times, that is (as I shall better shew hereafter) in the Last times or Last Scene (as I may so speak) of the Fourth Kingdom of Daniel.

When Christ came, the Sceptre was to depart from Judah, and that Common-wealth to be dissolved: So when Antichrist was to come, the Roman Empire was to fall, and He that hindered was to be taken out of the way, 2 Thess. 2: 7.

The Jews expected Christ to come when he did come, and yet knew him not when he was come; because they had fancied the manner and quality of his coming like some temporal Monarch, with armed power, to subdue the earth before him: So the Christians, God's second Israel, looked the coming of Antichrist should be at that time when he came indeed, and yet they knew him not when he was come; because they had fancied his coming as of some barbarous Tyrant, who should with armed power not only persecute and destroy the Church of Christ, but almost the World; that is, they looked for such an Antichrist as the Jews looked for a Christ.

Wherefore as Christ came unto his own, and his own received him not; so Antichrist came upon those who were not his own, and yet they eschewed him not: But yet as some Jews (though few) knew Christ when he came, and received him; so did some Christians (though but few) keep themselves from the pollution of Antichrist.

Lastly, as the Jews ere long shall acknowledge and run unto him, whom they pierced as not knowing him: So hath the Christian Church, for a great part, discovered that Son of perdition, whom a long time they had ignorantly worshipped, because they knew him not. O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of GOD! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!

But for our part, seeing our case is so like unto that of the Jews, let their lamentable and woful error, in mistaking their Messiah by wrongly fancying him, be a warning and caveat unto us, that we likewise upon like conceits and prejudice mistake and misdeem not the Man of sin.

TINEΣ, S O M E.

CHAP. X.

The Second Particular in the Description of the Great Apostasie, viz. The Persons Apostatizing, exprest by TINEΣ SOME. The Great Apostasie was to be a General one. That the word [TINEΣ SOME] doth not always imply a Few or a Small number, proved by several passages in Scripture. The true Church of Christ was never wholly extinguisht. Wherein we and the Papists differ about the Church's Visibilty. In what respects our Church was Visible, and in what it was Invisible under the Apostasie and Reign of Antichrist. This is further cleared by the parallel state of the Israelitish Church under the Apostasie of Israel.

NOW I come unto the second point expressed in this Description of the Great Apostasie, namely, The Persons Revolters; They should not be all, but TINEΣ S O M E. Τινες ἀποστῆναι, Some shall Apostatize. Some, that is, not (as we in our English do often use it) a Few; but some, that is, not All; yet some, that is, So many, as that the whole visible Church should be said thereof to be Apostatized; So many as should like a Cloud over-spread the face of the Christian Firmament, in such sort as the Stars and Lights therein should not easily be discerned. For the Great Defection so much prophesied of was to be a solemn and General one; such a one as wherein the chiefest of the Churches, honoured as a Mother in Israel, should become a Babylonish Whore, a Mother of Harlots and of the abominations of the Earth, Revel. 17. such a one as whereby the Outmost Court of the Temple of God should not only be prophaned, but trod down by Gentilism, Revel. 11. such a one as the World is said to wonder after the Beast, and to worship him; and such a one as should not only make war with the Saints, but overcome them, Rev. 13. Otherwise, if our Apostle here, and S. John there, should mean no more but the Errours of some particular ones, and their Revolt from the Faith of the Church, they should make either no Prophecy at all, or at the best but a needless one.

For who knows not that in S. Paul's, S. John's, and the Apostles own times, were many Heresies and Hereticks grown up as weeds in the Wheat-field of Christ? but as yet the wheat overtopped them, and the visible body of the Church disclaimed them. If these had been the worst the Church should look for, the Apostles should seem to prophesie of things present, and not as they do of things to come; yea and more than this, they should foretell of a thing as proper and peculiar to the Last-times, which was no Novelty in their own times.

We must take notice therefore that the Apostasie and Corruption of Faith so much prophesied of, was another manner of one than that which was so frequent in those first times; such a kind of one as should not be disclaimed by the Visible body of the Church, but should surprise, eclipse and overcloud the beautiful face thereof: which manner of Defection never had been before, nor should the like be after it.

Now that the word TINEΣ or S O M E useth in Scripture to imply no small number, but only serves to intimate an exception of some particulars, though there were but two or three to be excepted, I will make manifest by a few examples, lest our English use might deceive us.

First, John 6. 60. Many of the Disciples, (saith the Text) when they heard this, said, This is an hard saying; and v. 66. Many of his Disciples from that time went back, and walked no more with him: Nevertheless concerning these many Christ himself saith, v. 64. Ἀλλ' εἰς ἐξ ὑμῶν τινες, But there are Some of you which believe not: Here we see that some is a great many. So Rom. 11. 17. S. Paul there saith of the rejection of the Jews, Some of the branches are broken off: Now what a some this was, appears in the same Chapter, v. 32. when he saith, God hath included them ALL in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon ALL. But to seek no further, the 1 Cor. 10. will store us with examples: as v. 7. Neither be ye Idolaters καὶ τινες αὐτῶν, as Some of them were; this was a great some, for Moses saith of it, Exodus 32. 3. And ALL the people brake off their golden Ear-rings, and brought them to Aaron. In v. 8. Neither let us commit fornication, as Some of

of them; which were so many, Numb. 25. 4. that the Lord said unto Moses, Take ALL the heads of the people, and hang them up before the Lord, that the fierce anger of the Lord may be turned away from Israel; and v. 3. it is said in general, and Israel joyned himself to Baal-Peor. Again in the same Chap. v. 9. it is said, Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of Serpents; and verse 10. Neither murmure, as some of them also murmured: this Some was a great Some indeed, even all the people, save Moses, Joshua and Caleb; whereof is said, Numb. 14. 1. And ALL the Congregation lifted up their voice and wept; and v. 2. And ALL the Children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron; and the WHOLE Congregation said unto them, Would God that we had died, &c. wherefore they were as largely punished, all of them dying in the wilderness, Joshua and Caleb excepted. These places of many will suffice, to shew that the word [SOME] in my Text intends not to extenuate the number of Apostates, as implying they should be but Few; but only shews they should not be ALL: For where the Apostates are but twis, Some, there Some also are not Apostates, but excepted from the common Defection, wherewith the rest were miserably overwhelmed.

The Apostasie of the latter Times
PART I.

The Observation therefore which this [TINE'S SOME] affords us is, That the true Church of Christ was never wholly extinguished, nor the light of his Gospel ever quite put out, no, not in the greatest darkness that ever was to overwhelm it.

By the true Church of Christ I understand That holy Society and Company of Believers, which as they accord and are joyned together in one common Faith of all Divine Truths needful to Salvation, so are they also free from the fellowship of such enormous abominations and mortal errors as destroy and overturn it. This is that Society whereof, by the grace of Almighty God, we glory to be the members; This that Society which in the Primitive times grew and flourished; This that Society which (when the times foretold of the Church's Eclipse came, and the Great Apostasie had overspread the face thereof) was indeed much impaired, indangered and obscured, but never was totally extinguished, but continued even under the Jurisdiction of the Man of sin, yea in Babylon it self where he had this Throne: For doth not Christ at length say, Apoc. 18. 4. Come out of her my people? How could they come out thence, unless they had been there? or how should Antichrist sit in the Temple of God, 2 Thess. 2. 4. unless God's Temple were even there where Antichrist sate? As a few living embers in a heap of dying ashes; As a little Wheat in a field overgrown with weeds; As the Lights of the heaven in a firmament overcast with clouds; As a little pure Gold in a great mass of dross and mixed metal: such was the faithful Company of Christ in the Apostate body of Christendom, the \ Virgin-Church* in the midst of Babylon.

But, will our Adversaries say, This is not sufficient to make you the true Church of Christ, because some of you have always been; but you must prove also that you have alwayes visibly been: For the true Catholick Church must not only never have been interrupted or extinguished, but it must have been a Society visibly known unto the world, and not as Embers in the ashes, but as a burning and shining Flame.

But this Objection deserves no answering; because our Adversaries (howsoever they would dissemble it) do but play upon the present advantage which they think their own Church hath in this point above ours: Otherwise, when they forget the contention they have with us, and are in a calmer mood, they can be pleased to deliver other doctrine; which if they would be so ingenuous as always to remember, we needed not such a stir about the point of the Church's Visibility. For the difference between them and us hereabout is not so great as they would make it seem. They themselves, and the Fathers also, teach, That when Antichrist cometh, the Visibility of the Church shall be eclipsed: nay they affirm more than we usually in that case require; Forthen, they say, the use of the Sacraments shall cease; no Eucharist, no Mass, no publick Assemblies, yea all Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction shall be extinguished. But here lies all the difference; they hold the glorious Visibility of the true Church to have continued from the beginning unto this present, and the overshadowing of the Light and Eclipse of the glory thereof under Antichrist to be yet to come: We on the contrary maintain, the clouding of the Church's Visibility under the Man of sin to have been already, and some part of the Visible splendor thereof to be yet to come: Both agreeing in this, that in the fatal Apostasie the Church's Visibility and Glory should cease: but we say, That time hath been already; they say, It is yet to come: we say, That time of darkness was to continue many ages; they say, When it comes, it shall last but three single years and a half. Seeing therefore the whole Controversie lies in the point of Time, Whether the Church's fatal Apostasie be already past or yet to come; it would be much the shorter and quicker course for both them and us to decide this Controversie, To examine the condition and quality of both Religions by the Holy Scripture, where we have also, as S. * Peter speaks, a most sure word of Prophecie, whereunto we shall do well if we take heed, as to a light shining in a dark place.

PART I.

Now though this Answer be sufficient enough for the Objection of our Adversaries; yet for the better understanding and clearer insight into the matter questioned, we will further consider, Whether and in what manner or measure our Church may be said to have been Visible during the prevailing Apostasie, and in what respect again it was not Visible; and in both agreeable to the State of the true Church under the frequent Apostasies of Israel.

First therefore, we must know that by A Visible Christian Society in this Question is meant A Society or Company of Christian Believers joyned together in one external Fellowship and Communion of the same publick Profession and Rule of Faith, Use of Sacraments, and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction; For these make the outward form and (as it were) shape of the Church, whereby this Society is discernable from other Societies of men: So that a Society by this outside severed and distinguished from other Societies, is a Society visible and conspicuous to other Societies of men.

The question therefore is, Whether that holy Society of Believers before mentioned, who accorded together in one Common Faith with us of all Divine Truths needful to Salvation, and kept themselves free from such enormous abominations and mortal errors, which we now disclaim as utterly annihilating that Common Faith; Whether such a Society as this has been in all Ages, joyned and distinguished by such a common out-side from other Companies, either of men in general, or Christians in special; or in shorter, and perhaps plainer, terms thus, Whether the Society of men of our Christian belief hath in all ages been for the out-side a distinct Ecclesiastical Corporation from other Societies of men.

My Answer is, That for the First Ages it was so; not only thus Visible, but easily discernable from all other Societies of men whatsoever: But afterward, when the Great Apostasie we speak of surprized and deformed the beautiful Spouse of Christ, then was not that Virgin-Company of Saints, our Mother, a distinct external Society from the rest of Christendom; but a Part, yea and the only sound Part, of that External and Visible Body whereof our Adversaries boast their predecessors to have been members. For howsoever this our Virgin-Mother, for the inward and invisible communion of her sincere and unstained Faith, were a distinct and severed Company from the rest with whom she lived; yet, for the Common Principles of the Christian Faith still acknowledged in that corrupt body of Christendom, she retained communion with them, and for the most part of that time of darkness continued an External part of the same Visible Body with the rest in gross call'd Christians; as being begotten by the same Sacrament of Baptism (as the Israelites in the like case of Circumcision), taught in some part by the same Word and Pastours still continued amongst them, and submitting to the same Jurisdiction and Government, so far as these or any of these had yet some soundness remaining in them. But for the rest which was not compatible with her sincere and unstained Faith, and which annihilated, in those it surprized, even those Common Grounds of Christianity otherwise outwardly professed; she with her children either wisely avoided all communion with it; or if they could not, then patiently suffered for their conscience sake under the hands of Tyrants, called Christians; until that Tyranny growing insupportable, and that mortal contagion unavoidable, it pleased God, lest we might have been as Sodom and Gomorrhah, to begin to call us thence at the time appointed unto a greater Liberty, as we see this day.

As therefore when a little Gold is mixed with a great quantity of base and counterfeit metal, so that of both is made but one mass or lump; each metal, we know, still retains its nature diverse from the other, and yet outwardly and visibly is not to be discerned the one from the other; but both are seen together as they are outwardly one, but cannot be distinguished by the eye as they are diverse and several; the Gold is Visible as it is one mass, and under the same outside and figure with the rest, yet it is truly Invisible as it is diverse from the rest: but when the Refiner comes and severs them, then will each metal appear in his own colours, and put on his own outside, and so become Visible apart from the rest: Such is the case here, and such was the State and Condition of the Church in the prevailing and great Apostasie; The purer metal of the Visible Christian Body was not outwardly discernable from the base and counterfeit, while one outside covered them; and so much the rather, because the Apostate part in a great proportion exceeding the sound, made it imperceptible: but when when the time of Refining came, then was our Church not first founded in the true Faith, (God forbid) but a Part of the Christian Body newly refined from such Corruptions as time had gathered; even as Gold refined begins not then first to be Gold, though it begin but then to be refined Gold.

The Apostasy of the latter Times
PART I.

WHATSOEVER we have hitherto spoken of the State of the true Believers under the Apostasy of Antichrist, is the same which befell the true Israelites in the Apostasy of Israel. And doth not S. Peter intimate that the Apostasy which should befall Christians should be like to that which we read to have befallen Israel, 2 Pet. 2. 1? There were (saith he) False Prophets also among the people, (i. e. Israelites) even as there shall be False teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable Heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them. If the Apostasy of Christians were to be of the same stamp with that of Israel, and the Heresies brought into Christendom by the false Doctors of Babylon, like unto those wherewith the false Prophets of Israel infected and poisoned the ancient people of God; surely we cannot find a better Pattern whereby to know what was the state and condition of the unstained Christian Believers under the Apostasy of the Man of sin, than that which was of the true Israelites under the Apostasy of Israel.

For the right understanding whereof, we must always remember that the Israelitish Church did at no time altogether renounce the true and living God, not in their worst times; but in their own conceit and profession they acknowledged him still, and were called his people, and he their God, though they worshipped others beside him: So Christians in their Apostasy neither did nor were to make an absolute Apostasy from God the Father and Christ their Redeemer, but in an outward profession still to acknowledge him, and to be called Christians; though by their Idolatry and spiritual whoredoms they indeed denied the Lord that bought them, (i. e.) whom they profest to be their Redeemer; just as Israel for the like is said to have forsaken the Lord their God that brought them out of the Land of Egypt. Here therefore the case of both is alike; let us also see the rest.

You ask, Where was the true Church we speak of in Antichrist's time? I ask likewise, Where was the Company of true worshippers in Ahab's time? was it not so covered and scattered under the Apostate Israelites, that Elias himself, who was one of it, could scarce find it? I have been very jealous (saith he) for the Lord God of hosts; because the children of Israel have forsaken thy Covenant, thrown down thy Altars, and slain thy Prophets with the sword; and I, even I alone am left, and they seek my life to take it away, 1 Kings 19. 14. Yet the Lord tells him, verse 18. I have yet left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him. Yet I trow these seven thousand were not outwardly severed from the rest of Israel, but remained still external members of the same Visible body with them.

But you will except, that the true and unstained Church in Judah was still visible and apparent. I ask you then, Where was the Company of the true worshippers of Jehovah in Manasses time, the worst time of all other? when the ten Tribes were carried captive, and but Judah and Benjamin only left; and they, as far as the eye of man can see, wholly and generally fallen from the Lord their God to all manner of Idols and Idolatries, like unto the abominations of the heathen, whom the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel: when in the Temple it self, the only place where the true God was legally to be worshipt, were Idolrous Altars erected, even in the House whereof the Lord had said, In this House and in Jerusalem will I put my name for ever; even in this House, this holy House, were Idols and graven Images erected, and in both Courts thereof Altars to Baalim, the Sun, the Moon, and the whole host of heaven; the like whereof never had been until that time. Besides, who is able to name the man for almost fifty years together that remained a Faithful servant and True worshipper of the Living God in the midst of this hideous profanation? Nor is it easie to be conceived, how it was possible all that time to offer any Legal sacrifice without Idolatry, when God's own Temple and House was made a den of Idols; nay his Altar, the only Altar of Israel, destroyed, to make room for Altars erected to Idols; as may be gathered 2 Chron. 33. 15, 16. Where was the true Church of Israel now? or had the Lord no Church at all? Yes certainly, he had a Church, and a Company which defiled not their garments; a Company (I say,) but not visibly distinguished from the rest of their Nation, but hidden as it were in the midst of that Apostate body, and yet known together with the rest to be Israelites and people of Jehovah; but known to God alone and themselves to be true Israelites and faithful servants to Jehovah their God.

God. And that such a Company there was, and a strong party too, though not seen, appeared presently upon the death of Manasses and his wicked son, when Josiah began to reign at eight years of age. For they then prevailed even in the Court it self, and so brought up the King, that even while he was yet young, in the eighth year of his reign, he began to seek after the God of David his father, and in the twelfth year to make a publick and powerful Reformation, such as the like was never done before him. Could all this have been done so soon, and by a King so young in years, and to carry all before it like a torrent, unless there had been a strong party, which now having a King for them, began quickly to shew themselves and to sway the State, though before they were hardly to be seen?

When therefore our Adversaries ask us where our Church was before Luther, we see by this what we have to answer.

CHAP. XI.

The Third Particular, or The Time of the Apostasie. That the Last Times in Scripture signifie either a Continuation of Time, or an End of Time. That the Last Times simply and in general are the Times of Christianity; the Last Times in special and comparatively, or the Latter Times of the Last Times, are the Times of the Apostasie under Antichrist. That the Times are set out to us to be as Marks to inform us when the Things to fall out in them should come to pass; and not the Things intended for signs to know the Times by. This Observation illustrated from Dan. 8.

OF the two first Particulars of the Four, whereby the Great Apostasie of Christian Believers is here decyphered, I have spoken sufficiently; viz. First, for the Quality and kind thereof, it should be a new Doctrine of Demons: Secondly, that for the Persons revolting, they should not be All, but Some. Now I am to speak of the Third, The Time when, Ἐν ὑστερίᾳ καιρῶν, In the Latter Times.

For the easier understanding whereof, we must know that speeches of Last Times in Scripture mean sometimes a Continuation or Length of time; sometimes an End of time.

A Continuation of time I mean, as when we say that Winter is the Last time or season of the year, or old age the Latter time of life; neither of them being the very End, but a space of time next the end; which therefore, in respect of some whole Systeme of time, whereof it is the Last part, is truly termed the Last time thereof. Man's life is a Systeme of divers ages, the Last space whereof is the Last time of life. The Year is a Systeme of four seasons, and therefore the Last season thereof, Winter, may be called the Last time of the year. But by an End of time, I mean the very expiring of time, as the Last day of December is the End or last time of the year; the moment when a man dies is the Last time, that is, the End of his life.

Now in the New Testament, when by mention of Last time is meant an End or Terminus temporis, I observe it to be exprest in the Singular number; as Ἐσχάτη ἡμέρα the Last day, being four times mentioned in the sixth of John, and once in the eleventh, is in every one of them meant of the Day of the Resurrection at the End of the world. I will raise him up, saith our Saviour, ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, in the last day, John 6. 39, 40, 44, 54. And Martha of her brother Lazarus, I know (saith she) he shall rise again in the Resurrection, ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, at the Last day, John 11. 24. So 1 Pet. 1. 5. ἔσχατος καιρὸς, the last time, is used in the self-same sense, being spoken of the incorruptible inheritance reserved in heaven, and to be revealed (saith the Apostle) ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτῳ, in the Last time. In all which is meant the End of the world. But in 1 John 2. 18. we have ἐσχάτη ὥρα, the Last hour, Little children, it is the Last hour; where no doubt he meaneth an End of sometime, but not the End of the world, which was then far off; but an End of their time to whom he then wrote his Epistle, (that is,) an End of the Jewish State and Religion, which was then at the very door: which Exposition I will make more plain hereafter.

But when a Continuation or Longer space of time is signified, then I find the Plural number to be used; as 1 Pet. 1. 20. of the Incarnation of Christ it is said, that he was forefore-ordained before the foundation of the world, but was made manifest ἐν ἔσχατοις τοῖς χρόνοις in the Last times, which times have continued these 1600 years at the least. So Heb. 1. 2. God (saith S. Paul) ἐν ἔσχατοις τοῖς ἡμέραις in these Last days hath spoken unto us by his Son. And 2 Tim. 3. 1. This know also, ὅτι ἐν ἔσχαταις ἡμέραις that in the Last days perillous times shall come. Again, Acts 2. 17. In the Last days I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh. In the 2 Pet. 3. 3. Ἐν ἔσχατοις τοῖς ἡμέραις, In the Last days shall come scoffers. And so in my Text, Ἐν ὑστερίαις καιροῖς, In the Latter times some shall revolt from the Faith, and give heed to Doctrines of Demons.

The Apostasie of the latter Times
PART I.

Whatsoever the validity of this observation be, for the rest I make no question but it will be granted, That ὑστερίαις καιροῖς in my Text means some Continued space of time, and not Terminus temporis or the very End of time: which therefore presupposed, I approach one step nearer, laying this for a second ground of our discovery, That these ὑστερίαις καιροῖς Latter times, whereof S. Paul speaks and means, were Times not then present, but afterward to come: For the words of the Text are not a Narration of things present, but a Prediction (as I have already admonished) of what should betide the Christian Faith in after-times. Yet notwithstanding were the Times wherein S. Paul lived, and all the Times of Christianity, the Last times, and so styled in Scripture even by our Apostle himself, as by some of the forecited examples evidently appeareth. Wherefore it must needs follow, that the Times here meant and mentioned in my Text are not the Last times in general and simply, but the Last times in special and comparatively; that is, the Latter times of the Last times: That as the Last times in general were the times wherein CHRIST the Sun of Righteousness was to be revealed, and his Kingdom founded in the World; so the Latter times of these Last times should be the times wherein the Apostasie of the Christian Faith should prevail, and that Wicked one usurp the Throne of Christ.

Before therefore that we can know what are the Last times comparatively (that is, the Latter times, or the Last of the last) we must first understand what are the Last times simply and in general; why so called, whence reckoned, and how limited: For then will these Latter times in my Text, which are the Last part of them, be easily found, and in a manner demonstrated.

As for the Last times therefore in general, most use to describe them only thus, To be the times of the Kingdom of CHRIST, which began at his Passion, to continue unto the end of the World; which in respect that it succeeds the Legal worship, and no other shall succeed it, is therefore the Last time. In like manner the ὑστερίαις καιροῖς allotted to the Man of sin are (as I take it) usually no otherwise described than to be the Times wherein the Apostasie should appear; which in that it should immediately precede the Second coming of CHRIST, is therefore to be esteemed the Last times of all. But these descriptions are obscurum per magis obscurum, they declare an obscure thing by that which is or was more obscure than it; and therefore come short of making good the intent of the Holy Ghost in his so often mention of the Last times, especially in the New Testament. For the Last times or fulness of time were both a ground of the Jews expectation of CHRIST when he came, and are without doubt so often propounded and alledged by the Apostles for a confirmation of the truth of his coming. But if the Last times could not be known but by his coming, how should his coming be known by them? So also the Holy Ghost in my Text mentions these ὑστερίαις καιροῖς Latter times for an argument or sign of the Apostasie to fall out therein, or for a note and mark of time wherein we should look for, and therefore as fore-warned beware of being carried away in that Defection. But if these Times cannot be known nor described any other way than by the Defection to fall out in them, we should benever a whit the nearer, and this mark of time which the Holy Ghost gives us would stand us in no stead at all.

Let us therefore now take this as a Truth to be supposed, That the Times are set out unto us to be as Marks to inform us when that should come to pass which was to fall out in them, and not the Things which were to befall, intended for Signs to know the Times by. And therefore we are not to doubt but that the Holy Ghost hath somewhere else, by some other mark and ground of Computation, made known unto us when to reckon both the Last times, wherein was foretold that Christ should be anointed; and these Latter times of them, when the Christian Apostasie should be revealed: that so we might have a sure belief in the one, and a certain and sufficient mark when to beware of the other.

The Prophanation of the Legal Sanctuary and trampling down the holy people by Antiochus Epiphanes was marked out in Daniel's prophecy by the like circumstance and determination determination of time, as is this Apostasie here in our Apostle's prediction. Dan. 8. 23. *In the latter time, or * latter end of the Kingdom of Gracia, a King of a fierce countenance shall stand up, viz. He who should magnifie himself against the Prince of the Host of Heaven, and take away the daily sacrifice, &c.* as it is in the Vision which was fore-shewed of him Verse 10, 11. Where it would be preposterous to think, that this Latter time or End of the Greek Kingdom could not be defined otherwise than by the Event to fall out therein; and not rather conceive that this determination of time, being such as might otherwise well enough be known, was therefore intended for a Character to observe the Event by. For when was this Latter end of the Greeks Kingdom to be taken notice of, but then when they should see that Kingdom begin to be given unto another people; when the Fourth Kingdom, the Roman State, should once begin to inroach upon the Third? especially when they should see the Head-Province thereof, Greece it self, to come under their obedience; when they should see this, then were they to prepare themselves; for the abomination of desolation was now at the door. And surely the Event was most punctual: For this Roman inroachment, having been some 28 years together manifestly attempting and advancing, was at length accomplished, when Æmilius the Consul having quite vanquished Perseus the King of Macedon, all Greece came under the Roman obedience, 166 years before the Birth of Christ: which no sooner was come to pass, but the very self-same year, within less than three months after, Antiochus sets up the abomination of desolation in the Temple of Jerusalem. Why should we not then believe that the Holy Ghost intendeth here to give us as sure a Watch-word when to beware of the Man of sin, by this circumstance of Latter times in my Text, as we see he gave the Jews to look for the Persecution and Prophanation by Antiochus?

CHAP. XII.

A more particular account of the Last Times in general, and of the Latter Times of the Last Times. That the Four Kingdoms of Daniel are the Great Kalendar (as the LXX weeks the lesser Kalendar) of Times. That the Times of the Fourth or Last Kingdom (that is, the Roman) are the Last Times meant in Scripture. That the Latter Times of the Last Times are the Latter Times of the Fourth Kingdom, wherein the Great Apostasie should prevail.

THEREFORE without any more preambles, I come now directly to resolve what was before propounded, viz. First, What is meant by LAST TIMES in general, Whence and How we are to reckon them. And then in the Second place, What are these 'Υστερον καιρον' LATTEr TIMES in my Text, which must be, as I said before, a Latter part of that general.

For the true Account therefore of Times in Scripture, we must have recourse to that SACRED KALENDAR and GREAT ALMANACK of PROPHECY, The Four Kingdoms of Daniel, which are A Prophetical Chronology of Times measured by the succession of Four principal Kingdoms, from the beginning of the Captivity of Israel, until the Mystery of God should be finished. A course of Time during which the Church and Nation of the Jews, together with those whom by occasion of their unbelief in Christ God should surrogate in their rooms, was to remain under the bondage of the Gentiles and oppression of Gentilism: But these Times once finished, all the Kingdoms of this World should become the Kingdoms of our Lord and his CHRIST. And to this Great Kalendar of Times, together with that other, but lesser, Kalendar of LXX weeks, all mention of Times in Scripture seems to have reference.

Now these Four Kingdoms (according to the truth infallibly to be demonstrated, if need were, and agreeable both to the ancient opinion of the * Jewish Church whom they most concerned, and to the most ancient and universal opinion of || Christians derived from the times of the Apostles, until now of late time some have questioned it) are, 1. The Babylonian, 2. that of the Medes and Persians, 3. the Greek, 4. the Roman. In which Quaternary of Kingdoms, as the Roman, being the Last of the Four, is the Last Kingdom; so are the Times thereof those Last Times we seek for; during which times (saith Daniel, chap. 2. v. 44.) The God of Heaven shall set up a Kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor left unto another people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all those Kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever : which is figured by a Stone hewn out of the mountain without hands, before the times of the Image were yet spent ; which stone at length smote the Image upon his Feet of Iron and Clay, and so utterly destroyed it ; that done, the Stone that smote the Image upon the feet became a great Mountain, and filled the whole earth. The meaning of all which is, That in the Last times, or under the Times of the Last Kingdom ( the Roman ) should the Kingdom of CHRIST appear in the World, as we see it hath done.

And this is that which the Apostle saith, Hebrews 1. 2. God in these Last days, or Last times, hath spoken to us by his Son: and S. Peter 1 Epist. 1. 20. that he was fore-ordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifested in these Last times. This is that Fulness of time whereof the Apostle speaks, Galat. 4. 4. When the Fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son made of a woman: and Ephes. chap. 1. v. 9, 10. Having made known to us the mystery of his will — That in the dispensation of the Fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ. Agreeable unto all which is that Hebrews 9. 26. Christ hath once appeared, ὅτι συντελέια τῆς αἰώνιος, in the end of times, or ages, to put away sin by the Sacrifice of himself: Where these Last times, Fulness of time, and Conclusion of ages, are nothing else but the Times of the Fourth Kingdom, whose Times are the Last period of Daniel's Four, the Fulness of the Prophetical Chronology, and Conclusion of the sacred Kalendar. During these Times Christ was looked for, and accordingly came, and reigned; whose Kingdom shall at length abolish the brittle remainder of this Romish State, according to the other part of the Prophecy, when the Fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, and our Lord subdue all his enemies under his feet, and at the last even Death it self.

HAVING thus found What Times are termed the Last times in general, let us now see if we can discover which are the Latter Times of these Last times, or the Latter times in special, which are those ὕστερον καιροῖ Latter Times in my Text: which will not be hard to do. For if the Last Times in general are all the Times of the Fourth Kingdom, then must our Latter times, as a part thereof, needs be the Latter times of that Kingdom. Let us therefore again to our Prophetical Kalendar, and survey Daniel's description of the Fourth or Roman Kingdom, as it is Chapter 7. from verse 19. where we shall soon find the Latter times thereof to be that Period of a * Time, Times and half a Time, during which that prodigious Horn with eyes like a man, and a month speaking great things, should make war with the Saints, prevail against them, and wear them out, and think to change times and laws, until the Judgment should sit, and his dominion be taken away; and in him that long-lived Beast finally be destroyed, and his body given to the burning flame, verse 11. For this Hornish Sovereignty is the Last scene of that long Tragedy, and the Conclusion of the Fourth Beast; and therefore the times thereof are those ὕστερον καιροῖ Latter times, whereof the Spirit spake expressly, that in them there should be an Apoſtaſie from the Chriſtian Faith.

CHAP. XIII.

Two Enquiries concerning the Latter Times. I. What durance they are to be of. Answ. That the Times of the Antichristian State are to last 42 months or 1260 days. That hereby cannot be meant three single years and an half, proved by several particulars. Enquiry II. When they begin. Answ. That they take their beginning from the mortal wound of the Imperial Sovereignty of Rome, or the ruine of the Roman Empire. This proved from the Apocalypse, and 2 Thesial. 2. where by the το κατιχον the Fathers generally understand the Roman Empire. The same further proved from Dan. 7. That by the little Horn is meant Antichrist or The man of sin ( and not Antiochus Epiphanes ) was the judgment of the most ancient Fathers.

Concerning these Times thus found, we will now further enquire, First, What duration they may be of; Secondly, When they take beginning, and by what mark their beginning may be known.

For the first, we will make no question but these are the self-same Times whereof S. John speaks, * telling us That the Church should be in the wilderness a Time, Times, * Rev. 12. 14. and half a Time; the same with those XLII moneths * wherein S. John's restored Beast * Chap. 13. 5. should domineer, and play the self-same reeks which Daniel's Hornish Tyrant doth; the

the same time with those XLII moneths * during which the Church is trodden down of the Gentiles; lastly, the same time with || 1260 days, during which the Witnesses of Christ prophesie in sackcloth. For a Time, Times, and half a Time, or a Year, two Years, and a half, are XLII moneths; and XLII moneths make 1260 days. If therefore we can find the continuance and beginning of any of these, we have found the continuance and beginning of them all.

For the Duration and Length of them, they must imply some definite time, because the Scripture follows that use of speech, and useth no number indefinitely, but those which the use of speech had made such, as 7. 10. 1000. But mixt and compound numbers, as these are, viz. 3<sup>1</sup>. 42. 1260. are neither in the Hebrew, nor I think in any other tongue, used indefinitely.

Our Adversaries would have them literally understood for Three single years and a half, as though it were an History, and not a Prophecy: But besides the use of Prophecy to reckon Days for Years, I think it would trouble any man to conceive how so many things as should be performed in this time, should be done in Three single years and a half. * 1. Ten Kingdoms founded at the same time with the Beast. 2. Peoples, and multitudes of Nations and Tongues to serve and obey him. 3. To make war with the Saints and overcome them. 4. To cause all that dwell upon the Earth to worship him. 5. Babylon to ride the Beast so long, that all Nations shall drink of the wine of her fornication, all the Kings of the earth commit fornication with her, yea the Merchants and all those that had ships in the Sea to grow rich by trading with her. Methinks all these things should ask much more than Three years work or Four either. To which I add moreover, that that King, State of Government, Sovereignty, or Seigniory, or what you will, of the Beast, under which the Whore should ride him, followeth immediately upon a Former which in comparison is said to continue but a short space, Rev. 17. 10. But if the Antichristian State shall continue but Three years and a half literally taken, how short must the time of that foregoing King or Sovereignty be, which should occasion the Holy Ghost to insert so singular a note of the difference thereof from that which followed, That it should continue but a short space? Doth not this imply, that the next State (wherein the Whore should ride the Beast) was to continue a long space? Therefore Three years and a half Historically taken cannot be the Time of the Churches Apostasie and the Antichristian Sovereignty of Rome: and if it cannot be taken Historically, it must be taken Prophetically, every Day for a Year; and so 1260 days counted so many years shews the extent of these ἑσπερι κατεσι Latter times to be 1260 years.

NOW for the Second thing proposed, The Beginning of these ἑσπερι κατεσι Latter Times; S. John tells us in the Revelation, That his Blaphemous Beast of 42 moneths continuance should succeed upon the mortal wound of the Cæsarean or Imperial Sovereignty of Rome; and Apocal. 17. 12, 13. the Idolatrous Beast which carries the great Whore upon his back, should have a Plurality of Kings start up at the same time with him, who should agree to submit their power and kingdom unto this Whore-ridden Beast. And would not he also in the same Chapter have ustrike notice, That the Antichristian State of the Beast which was to come should be the next to that of the Cæsars which then reigned? For the Angel theretells him, That that State of the Beast wherein the Whore should ride him, which then was not in being, but should afterward ascend out of the bottomless pit and go into perdition, that this State or Head of the Beast should succeed so immediately upon the Sixth State or Head (viz. the Cæsarean then reigning) that howsoever for some respect it might be called an Eighth, yet should it in very deed be but the seventh. For how could it be otherwise, when the Beast in the Vision hath but Seven heads and no more? Vide ver. 8. 10, 11.

Hence was that custom in the Church, in the most ancient times of it, to pray in their Liturgy for the lasting of the Roman Empire; that so Antichrist might be long a coming. Tertul. Apol. cap. 32, & 39. Ad Scap. cap. 2. Upon this ground S. I. Comment. in Ezech.*

Answerable to that which S. John told us, Daniel's Kalendar also informs us, That the Hornish Tyrant, who was to act the ὑπερκαταραγή, should then begin to appear, when Ten Kings should arise in the Fourth Kingdom. For the Ten Horns which at the last he espied upon the Beast's head, and observed a little Horn with eyes and a mouth to spring up amongst them, and displant Three of them, chap. 7. v. 8. the Angel v. 24. expounds to be Ten Kings which should arise out of that Kingdom, and another (to wit Antichrist) should arise (a) behind them (to it (b) should be translated, as the Septuagint doth οπισθεν αὐτῶν) which should be diverse from the first (that is, a King of another nature) and should bring down or (c) humble three Kings, and play those recks which follow in the Text. Thus the Fathers universally and from the utmost antiquity expound this Scripture. Justin Martyr Dialog. cum Tryphone takes it as granted, that this Horn is ὁ τῆς ἀποστασίας ἀνθρώπος, that man of Apostasy, ὁ ἀνομιὰ τοῦ λαοῦ ἐκείνου ἐκείνης τῆς Χριστιανῆς, that would attempt all the mischief imaginable against us Christians. Irenæus, scholar to Polycarp, l. 5. c. 21. aliis 25. saith, Daniel novissimi Regni finem respiciens, id est, novissimos decem Reges, in quos divideretur regnum illorum super quos Filius perditionis veniet, Cornua dicit decem nasci Bestiæ, &c. The prophet Daniel eying the end of the Fourth or Last Kingdom, that is, those Ten Kings into whom their Kingdom should be divided, and upon whom the Son of Perdition should come, [ viz. the Little Horn that should domineer and overtop them ] saith (chap. 7.) that the Beast had Ten Horns grow out of his Head, and that there came up among them another little Horn, and that before this Horn Three of the first Horns were pluck'd up by the roots. Yea a little after he tells us, that S. John in his Ten Kings which should receive their Kingdoms at one hour with the Beast, expounds this of Daniel; Manifestius adhuc de novissimo tempore, & de his qui sunt in eo decem Regibus, in quos divideretur quod nunc regnat Imperium, significavit Joannes Domini discipulus in Apocalypsi, edisserens quæ fuerint decem cornua quæ à Daniele visa sunt, &c. What was before prophesied concerning the Last Times, and the Ten Kings therein, amongst whom the Empire that now reigns should be divided, John, the disciple of our Lord, hath more clearly exprest in his Apocalypse, where he tells what those Ten Horns were which Daniel saw, viz. Ten Kings, which had received no Kingdom as yet, but were to receive power as Kings one hour with the Beast: Chap. 17. 12. Nay S. Jerome, in his Comment upon this seventh chapter of Daniel, will give us to understand that all the Ecclesiastical Writers delivered this to be the true exposition: For having there confuted Porphyrie, who, to derogate from the divinity of this Prophecy, would have it meant of Antiochus Epiphanes, and therefore written when the Event was past, he concludeth thus; Ergo dicamus, quod omnes Scriptores Ecclesiastici tradiderunt, In consummatione mundi, quando regnum destruendum est Romanorum, decem futuros reges, qui orbem Romanum inter se dividant, & undecimum surrecturum esse Regem parvulum, qui tres reges de decem regibus superaturus sit, in quo totus Satan habaturus sit corporaliter: Let us therefore affirm, agreeably to the concurrent judgment of all Ecclesiastical Writers, That in the consummation of the world, when the Roman Empire is to be destroyed, there shall arise Ten Kings who shall share the Roman world among themselves, and that an Eleventh King (the little Horn in Dan. 7.) shall arise, who shall subdue Three of those Ten Kings; in which little Hornish Tyrant Satan shall dwell entirely and bodily. Who these three Kings were which this Horn displant to make himself elbow-room, you shall hear more anon. But I will not conceal that I have heard of another Exposition, which fits our turn for the Beginning of the Apostasy no less than that of the Fathers; namely, That by Ten Kingdoms may be meant the full Plurality of the Roman Provinces, so much whereof as Three is of Ten should have the Imperial power rooted out of them, and fall under the Dominion of the Antichristian Horn, who should act the Sovereignty of the Latter times or the last Sovereignty of that Kingdom. Now it is most true, that the Pope's Patriachdom in the West holds just that scantling of the ancient Territory of the Roman Empire ; which a man may judge by his eyes or compasses in a Map : and yet I prefer the other Exposition before it.

To come to an issue : It is apparent by all that hath been said, that these ὕστεροι καινοὶ Latter times, with that wicked Sovereignty which should domineer in them, were to take beginning from the wound, the fall, the ruine, the rending in pieces or rooting up of the Imperial Sovereignty of the City of Rome. When that City should cease to be the Lap of that Sovereignty which the Cæsars once held over the Nations, and many new upstart Kings should appear in the place and Territory of that once-one Empire ; then should the Apostasie be seen, and the Latter times with that Wicked one make their entrance. Now in what Age this fell out, I think no man can be ignorant who hath but a little skill in History.

CHAP. XIV.

That we are not to reckon the Latter Times, or the Times of the Empire's ruine and the Apostasie attending, from the full height thereof : This illustrated from other Computations in Scripture. The Three main Degrees of the Roman Empire's Ruine. Who are those 3 Kings whom the Little Horn ( or Antichrist ) is said ( in Dan. 7. ) to have displanted or deprest, to advance himself. About what time Saint-worship began in the Church. That we are not too curiously to enquire from which of the 3 degrees of the Empire's ruine the Apostatical or Latter Times take their beginning.

BUT you will say, The Imperial Sovereignty of Old Rome fell not all at once, but had divers steps and degrees of Ruine ; so that the doubt will be notwithstanding, from which of these steps of the Fall thereof these Latter times must be reckoned.

I answer, From any of them. For as the Imperial Sovereignty fell by degrees, so the Apostasie under the lattermost Sovereignty grew up also by degrees ; and for every degree which the ruinous Empire decayed, was the rising son of perdition a degree advanced. Secondly, All the main and evident degrees of the Empire's ruine fell in the compass of an Age ; and the knowledge and observation of that Age only, within which the Times of this Fall are comprehended, was sufficient both to warn them who then lived that that which should come was then a coming, and to inform us who now live that it is already come.

Now which were these main and evident degrees of the Empire's falling, and at what time, I will tell you as soon as I have removed an usual mistake in this business, which is to reckon the times of the Empire's ruine, and so likewise of the Apostasie attending it, only from the ἀρχή or full height thereof. But this is too much against Reason, and not agreeable to the course we otherwise use in the like. For as when we reckon the Age of a man, we reckon not from the time since he came to mans estate, but from the time of his birth : so should we do here for the Times of the Man of sin. I say not, we should begin to count his Age from his conception, for that we use not in other things ; but from the time he was first editus in lucem, when he first began to appear in the world : and so likewise the Fall of the Empire and the Apostasie, not from the time they were consummate, but from the time they first evidently appeared. As therefore I hold their opinion the best, and most agreeable to truth, who begin the 70 years of the Jewish captivity in Babylon, not from the consummation thereof under Zedekiah, when the City and Temple were utterly rased, for that is impossible, ( there being not * 60 years in all between the nineteenth of Nebuchadnezzar and the last of Cyrus ) but from the beginning thereof under Jehojakim eighteen years before, or at the most but from Jehojachin : So are these ὕστεροι καινοὶ Latter times of the Roman State to begin when the Empire first began to fall, and not when it was utterly rooted up. Take for another example the computation of the Time allotted to the Calamity of the Jews under Antiochus; which I the rather alledge, because he is commonly counted for a Type of Antichrist: The beginning of that 2300 evenings and mornings, or six years and somewhat more than a quarter, which that Calamity was to continue, from the beginning thereof until the Temple should again be cleansed, Dan. 8. 13, 14. was not to be reckoned from the height thereof, when the daily sacrifice should be taken away, (for thence it is but three years, I Mac. 1. 54, &c. with chap. 4. 52.) but from the beginning of the Transgression which occasioned this desolation, and is described I Mac. 1. 11, &c. So likewise the End of the Kingdom of the Greeks, wherein this Calamity was to happen, is not to be counted only then when Æmilius the Consul had quite finished the conquest of Macedon, (for this points out only the height of that calamity) but from the beginning of that last fatal * War which put an end to that Kingdom; which was about some three years and an half before, and jumps with the beginning of the Transgression of desolation, as the finishing of the Conquest doth with the taking away of the daily sacrifice.

But leaving this, let us return again and see which were those main and evident degrees of the Empire's downfall, and when they befell; which I suppose may not unfitly be sampled by those of the Babylonish captivity.

As therefore the Babylonish captivity had Three steps or degrees, the first in the days of Jehojakim, when Daniel went captive; the second under Jehojachin or Jechonias, when Ezekiel went captive; the last under Zedekiah, when the Temple and City were wholly rased and consumed: So (omitting the Political change under Constantine) the chief and principal moments of the Ruine of the Empire by the sword (and by the sword the Beast had his deadly wound, Apocal. 13. 14.) may fitly be reduced unto Three.

1. The First was presently after the death of Julian, the last of Heathen Emperors, about the year 365, ominously marked with that universal, stupendious and never-but-then sampled Earthquake, (a) whereby the waters of the Sea were rolled out of their chanel, and left ships hanging upon the tops of houses. From this time forwards all the Nations on every side seem as it were with one consent to have conspired the Ruine of the Empire. (b) Now that terrible and fatal storm of the Nations of the North, Almanes, Samaritans, Quades, Pills, Scots and Saxons, especially the Goths, began to break in upon it; almost without intermission harrying, burning, wasting, destroying the most part of the provinces thereof almost for (c) 45. years together. And to mend the matter, the Goths soon after their coming were admitted as Inhabitants, and dispersed as free Denizens into the bowels and heart of the Empire, advanced to be Commanders, and bore the greatest sway in their Armies. (d) By which fatal error the Empire received her bane, and the Romans were no longer masters of their own strength; which they quickly and often repented; but even that cost them dear, when they had indeed eyes to see it, but never ability to mend it. This was the First degree of the Empire's ruine.

Quid putas nunc animi habere Corinthios, Athenienses, Lacedaemonios, Arcadas, cunctumque Graciam, quibus imperant Barbari?

(d) Synesius Orat. ad Arcadium August. Quomodo enim ferre possumus partes viriles in nostra Republica alienorum & externorum esse, & fortissimum Imperium concedere aliis? Illic gloria principatum? Primum igitur Magistratu ejiciantur, & procul a Curia honoribus arceantur, quibus per summum dedecus obreperunt quae diu apud Romanos habita sunt, & rursus fuerunt apud eos honestissima. Nam & Deam Themidem, quae Senatus, & Belloniam, quae Exercitus praesidet, obvelare se arbitror, cum certant hominem penulam scortis indutum ducem esse chlamydatorem, & villosam penulam exuvientem togam sumere, & de summa rerum cum Romano Magistratu consulere, prope ipsum Consulem sedentem, longe post eum sedentibus quibus honos ille jure optimo debebatur. Paulo post, Apud nos Exercitus magni sunt, nostrisque servus Scythias sanguine conjuncti, qui nescio quo infelici fato in Romanum Imperium irruerunt; illi suos duces habent magna auctoritatis viros non solum apud eos ipsos, sed etiam apud nos: quod malum nostra dedit secordia nobis. Paulo post de Theodosio, ille supplicantes (scil. Gothos) erexit, & belli socios ascevit, & civitate donavit, & omnium bonorum participes fecit, & partem Romani agri illi attribuit. At illi, quod pater tuus Mitem sevis praeavit, nos in hunc usque diem deident. Sed id primus fecerat * Valens, Anno 374. de quo sic Paulus Diaconus Hist. Miscell. lib. 12. cap. 14. Barbari namque cum Thracias tenuissent, licenter Romanorum vastabant provincias, &c.

2. The Second was about the year 410, when Alaricus the Goth sacked Rome it self, the proud Lady of the world; when, as S. Jerome saith, Capiebatur urbs quae totum ce- pit Orbem, imò fame periit antequam gladio, & vix pauci qui caperentur inventi sunt; The City which had conquered the whole world was it self taken, being undone by famine before it was by the sword, insomuch that there were but few left to be taken prisoners. And from this very year the Plurality of Kings foretold of began to come upon the stage; Five or Six new Kingdoms presently appearing within the Territories of the Empire: Of the Goths, of the Eurgundians, and, though somewhat later, of the Franks in Gal- lia; of the Suevians and Alans and of the Vandals in Spain; and, as Sigonius thinks, of the Hunnes in Pannonia; certainly they could not be much later than this very year. But this number of Kings we will leave till they be better increased, as continually they did. And thus you see the Second degree of the ruine of the Em- pire.

3. The Third was about the year 455, presently upon the death of the third Valen- tinian, the last (as Sleidan well observed) of the Emperors of the West, and conse- quently of the ancient Rome; then when Genfericus the Vandal took the City now the second time, fired it, and spoiled it of all the goodly and glorious ornaments which Alaricus had spared, amongst which were the golden and silver vessels of the Temple of Jernsalem, * brought thither by Titus: All which, with an innumerable multitude of Roman captives, he carried away with him. Now was the Prediction, which Varro reports that Vetius Valens the Augur made of 12 Vulturs to Romulus the Foun- der, That his City should continue 1200 years, fulfilled, and those years newly expi- red: And, which is more to be heeded, now was the Plurality of Kings lately risen in the ancient Territory of the Empire, as Daniel and S. John had prophesied, increa- sed unto the full number of Ten; which, together with the Provinces wherein they were seated, and the Names of the Kings which reigned the next year after the City was taken, are these which follow.

Thus was the Empire divided and shared Anno 456. the year after Rome was sacked by Genfericus, and the off-spring of these Nations, through many alterations, (partly by the inconstancy of humane things, unions and disunions, partly by the further enlargement of the Christian Faith) are the body of most of the Kingdoms and States of Christendom at this day. Three of these Kings, saith * Daniel, should the Antichristian Horn depress and displant, to advance himself; which Three are those whose Dominions extended into Italy, and so stood in his light.

1. That of the Greeks, whose Emperor, Leo Isaurus, for the quarrel of Images, he excommunicated, and revolted his subjects of Italy from their allegiance.

2. That

* Chap. 7.
Verse 8, &c. 24.

PART I.

2. That of the Longobards, (successors of the Ostrogoths) whose Kingdom he caused (by the aid of the Franks) to be wholly ruined, thereby to get the Exarchate of Ravenna (which since their revolt from the Greeks they were seized on) for a Patri-mony to S. Peter.

3. The last was the Kingdom of the Franks it self, continued in the Empire of Germany, whose Emperors from the day of Henry the Fourth he excommunicated, deposed and trampled under his feet, and never suffered them to live in rest, till he made them not only quit their interest in Election of Popes and Investitures of Bishops, but that remainder of Jurisdiction in Italy, wherewith, together with the dignity of the Roman name, he had once infeofed their Predecessors.

These are the Kings, by displanting or (as the Vulgar hath) by humbling of whom the Pope got elbow-room by degrees, and advanced himself to the height of Temporal Majesty and absolute Greatness, which made him so terrible in the world.

This Third blow therefore I suppose is to be counted the Last of the Ruine of the Empire; the Imperial power of the ancient Rome (until the Pope some 345 years after revived the name) henceforth ceasing. For as for those who yet some twenty years after our date cuffed for that Name, one of them deposing another, they were indeed but shadows of Cæsars, and as it were strugglings with the pangs of death, until with Augustulus it gave up the ghost. Yea it is to be observed, that two of them, Avitus (the very next) and Glycerius, being deposed from the Empire, were made Bishops, the one of Placentia or Piacenza, the other of * Portus; as a sign perhaps that the Emperor of Rome henceforth should be a Bishop, and a Bishop the Emperor.

* Salona Formandes, quem vide cum Paulo Diacono.

To conclude therefore with the application of our Apostle's Prediction: Whether the Christian Apostasie in worshipping new Demon-Gods began not with the First of these degrees, notably increased with the Second, and was established by the Last, I leave you to judge, when you shall have surveyed the Monuments and Records of those times.

* Vide Can. 9. Concil. Laodiceen. An. 364. Stegathas εργα.

It is commonly and truly affirmed by our Ecclesiastical * Antiquaries, That before the year 360 there is no word to be found of the Invocation of Saints glorified, or Worshipping their Reliques; to which I add, no not of any Miracles done by them: But presently after that year, when our first date of the Empire's ruine began, search and you shall find. I spare to name the Authors, not willing to discover the nakedness of the Fathers: But who so reads them, will admire to see so truly verified what the Spirit foretold should be ὅτι ὑστερον καίτοις in the latter times. And to make an end; If any shall think this Speculation of Times to be a needless curiosity, I desire him to remember how our Saviour reproved the Jews for neglect hereof, Matth. 16. 3. O ye Hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the skie, but can ye not discern the signs of the times? or as S. Luke 12. 56. How is it that ye do not discern this Time? They through neglecting the Signs of the Times, when Christ came, received him not: How many through ignorance of these ὑστερον καίτοις Latter Times, when the Apostasie hath appeared, eschewed it not?

From which of these Three Beginnings of the Apostatical Times, or whether from some other moment within or between them, the Almighty will reckon that his Computation of these ὑστερον καίτοις, which ended shall finish the days of the Man of sin, I curiously enquire not, but leave unto him who is Lord of times and seasons: Nor do I think that the Jews themselves could certainly tell from which of their Three Captivities to begin that reckoning of LXX years, whose end should bring their return from Babylon, until the Event assured them thereof.

AN APPENDIX.

CHAP. XV.

The Apostasy
of the latter Times
PART I.

That Daniel's 70 Weeks are a lesser Kalendar of Times. That in reference to these Weeks must those Phrases in the Epistles to the converted Jews, [viz. The Last Hour or Time, The End of all things, The Day approaching, &c.] be expounded of the End of the Jewish State and Service at the expiring of the 70 Weeks. That the Apostles were not so mistaken as to believe the End of the World should be in their dayes, proved against Baronius and other Romanists.

I SHOULD now presently come to speak of the Fourth particular which I observed in this Verse: But because in this Discourse of Times, besides the Great Kalendar of Times I so much spake of, there was some mention of a Lesser Kalendar, viz. of Daniel's 70 weeks, give me leave to note some places of Scripture which I suppose to have reference thereto, for the better clearing not only of our former Discourse, but of some scruples that might trouble our minds, when mention is made of an End then supposed near, though the World hath so many hundred years since continued, and no end thereof is yet come.

Know therefore that these 70 weeks of Daniel are a Little Provincial Kalendar, containing the time that the Legal worship and Jewish state was to continue from the re-building of the Sanctuary under Darius Nothus until the final destruction thereof, when the Kalendar should expire: Within the space whereof their Commonwealth and City should be restored, and 62 weeks after that the Messiah be slain for sin, and at the end of the whole 70 their City and Temple again destroyed and their Commonwealth utterly dissolved. To these Weeks therefore, whose computation so especially concerns the Jews, is reference made in those Epistles which are written to the Christian Churches of that Nation, whether living in Jewry, or abroad dispersed. Such is S. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews; both S. Peter's to those of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bythinia; the Epistle of S. James to the twelve Tribes; and likewise the first Epistle of S. John, which though the Salutation expresseth not, as in the former, yet may appear both because Peter, James and John were all three Apostles of the Circumcision, and from that passage Chap. 2. verse 2. CHRIST JESUS is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but for the sins of the whole world: that is, not for the sins of us only who are Jews, but for the sins of the Gentiles also. And doth not the name of General or Catholick Epistle given unto this, as well as to those of S. James and Peter, imply thus much? For it cannot be thus called, because written to all Christians indefinitely and generally, since the contrary expressly appears in the former; but because this as well as the rest was written to those of the Circumcision, who were not a people confined to any one certain City or Region, but dispersed through every Nation; as we read in the Acts Chap. 2. verse 5, &c. that at the Feast of Pentecost, when the Holy Ghost came down upon the Apostles, There were sojourning at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every Nation under Heaven; Parthians, Medes, Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, Judea and Cappadocia, Pontus and Asia, and strangers of Rome, Jews and Proselytes, (that is, Jews by race, and Jews by Religion,) &c. For we must not mistake those here numbred to be Gentiles, but * Israelites, both of the Ten Tribes captivated by Shalmaneser, and the other Two; some of whom never returned from Babylon, but lived still in Mesopotamia: but of those who returned, great multitudes were dispersed afterwards in Egypt, Libya, and many other Provinces, before the time of our Saviour's appearing in the flesh. So that the Apostles of the Circumcision had their Province for largeness not much inferiour to those of the Gentiles.

* See this fully proved in Book I. Discourse XX.

But I come to note the places I spake of. And first out of the forenamed Epistle of S. John; where from that prediction of our Saviour's in the Gospel, that the arising of false Prophets should be one of the near signs of the nigh-approaching End of the Jewish State, the Apostle thus refers unto it, Chap. 2. verse 18. Little children, this is again the Last hour: and as ye have heard that Antichrist shall come, even now there are many Antichrists; whereby we know that it is the Last time. Here by the Last time I suppose no other thing to be meant but the near expiring of Daniel's 70 weeks, and with it the approaching End of the Jewish Commonwealth: and why might not this Epistle be written in the Last week, at the beginning whereof Jesus Anania began that woful cry, Wo unto Jerusalem and the Temple? Joseph. l. 7. Belli Judaici. By πολλοὶ Ἀντιχρίστοι many Antichrists, are meant no other but false Prophets or Counter-prophets to the Great Prophet, pretending an Unction and Commission from Heaven (as he had) to teach the world some new revelation and doctrine. For the name Christ implies the Unction of Prophecy as well as the Unction of a Kingdom, and accordingly the name Antichrist: and therefore the Syriack here turns it משיחא רגלא False Christs, that is, such as should falsely pretend some extraordinary Unction of Prophecy like unto him. And the coming of such as these our Saviour in S. Matthew's Gospel (a Gospel for the Hebrews) makes one of the Last signs ushering the destruction of Jerusalem: And if the harmony of this Prophecy in the three Evangelists be well considered, there was no more to come but the compassing Jerusalem with armies. Well therefore might S. John, when he saw so many Anti-prophets spring up, say, Hereby we know that it is the last time.

Again, because the Desolation of the Jewish State and Temple would be a great confirmation of the Christian Faith; therefore the believing Jews, whom nothing could so much stagger as the standing glory of that Temple and Religion, are encouraged by the nearness of that time of expectation when so great a confirmation of their Faith of the Messias already come should appear. Hebrews 10. 23, 25, Let us hold fast the profession of our Faith without wavering—and so much the more, as ye see the Day approaching; namely, that day when you shall be sufficiently confirmed. So I take the 35 and 37 Verses of the same Chapter, Cast not away your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward: For ye have need of patience—for yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. What [He] is this, but even He whom Daniel says, The people of the Prince that shall come, shall destroy the City and the Sanctuary? Dan. 9. 26. For even as the destruction of Papal Rome would be a great confirmation of the Reformed Christian who hath forsaken the Communion of that Religion, the continuance and supposed stability of the glory thereof being that wherewith their Proctors endeavour most to shake and stagger us: So was the destruction of the Jewish State and Temple to be unto those Jews who had withdrawn themselves from that Body and Religion whereof they once had been, to embrace the new Faith of the Messiah preached by the Apostles. For if at the end of the 70 weeks approaching, the Legal Sanctuary were rased, and the Jewish State dissolved; then would it be apparent indeed, That Messiah was already come and slain for sin; because this was infallibly to come to pass within the compass and before the expiration of those 70 weeks or 490 years allotted for the last continuance of that City and Sanctuary, when it should be restored after the captivity of Babylon. Not without cause therefore doth S. Peter in his second * Epistle say to the Christian Jews, We have a more sure word of Prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light shining in a dark place, until the day dawn and the day-star arise in your hearts. Yea and besides, Because Jesus as well as Daniel had prophesied of the approaching desolation of that City and Temple, mentioning all the Signs that were to usher it; if the Event, when time came, should fall out accordingly, then must Jesus of Nazareth, who foretold the foregoing Signs thereof, be approved as a true Prophet, by whom of a truth the Lord had spoken.

Now for the last place that I mean to alledge; Because the fall and shock of that State might shake the whole Nation wheresoever dispersed, unless God spared the Christians, and made them alone happy in that woful day; or rather because Christ had foretold that one of the next fore-runners thereof should be a general persecution of Christians, as it happened under Nero; therefore the remembrance of the End of these 70 weeks so near the expiring was a good caution to all the Christian Jews to watch and pray. To this sense therefore I take that of Peter, 1 Pet. 4. 7. Πάντων δὲ τὸ τέλος ἤγγικε, The End of all approacheth; be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer: that is, The End of all your Commonwealth, Legal worship, Temple and Service, is now within a few years; Be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer, that ye may be the more happy in that day of vengeance and wrath upon our Nation. Neither need we wonder that this Desolation should be called the End; for our Saviour himself taught them so to speak

Thus must that of S. James in chap. 5. 3. be expounded, and so Origen expounds the words, Weep and howl, ye richmen, for the miseries that shall come upon you:—Ye have heaped up goods for the last days; that is, when the End of your State is a coming, and the Romans shall spoil you of all. This being supposed to be the reason why many of the Christian Jews sold their lands, and laid the money at the Apostles feet.

Speak in his Prophecy concerning it, as may appear if we consider that Antithesis in S. Luke, chap. 21. 9. Ye shall hear of wars and commotions—but the End is not by and by. Ver. 20. But when ye shall see Jerusalem encompassed with armies, then know that the Desolation thereof is nigh.

The Apostasy of the latter Times
PART I.

AND thus much I thought to add to my former discourse of Latter Times, lest through ignorance thereof we might incline to that little better than blasphemous conceit which * Baronius by name and some other of Rome's followers have taken up; viz. That the Apostles in such like passages as we have noted were mistaken, as believing the End of the World should have been in their own time; God of purpose so ordering it, to cause in them a greater measure of zeal and contempt of worldly things. An opinion, I think, not well befitting a Christian.

1. For, first, whatsoever we imagine the Apostles might here conceive in their private opinions as men; yet we must know that the Holy Ghost, by whose instinct they wrote the Scriptures, is the Spirit of truth; and therefore what is there affirmed must be true, yea, though the Pen-man himself understood it not.

2. It was not possible the Apostles should expect the End of the World to be in their own time, when they knew so many things were to come to pass before it as could not be fulfilled in a short time. As 1. The desolation<sup>a</sup> of Jerusalem, and that not till the seventy weeks were expired. 2. The Jews to be<sup>b</sup> carried captives over all Nations, and Jerusalem to be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles should be fulfilled. 3. That in the mean time the Roman Empire must be ruined, and<sup>c</sup> that which hindered taken out of the way. 4. That after that was done, a the Man of sin should be revealed, and domineer his time in the Temple and Church of God. 5. After all this, viz. when the<sup>e</sup> fulness of the Gentiles should come in, that Israel should be received again to mercy. 6. That Christ should<sup>f</sup> reign in his Church on earth so long till he had put down all rule, all authority and power, and subjected all his enemies under his feet, before he should subdue the last enemy, which is death, and surrender his kingdom into the hands of his Father. 7. That the time should be so long, that in the last days should come Scoffers, saying, Where is the promise of his coming? How is it possible they should imagine the Day of Doom to be so near, when all these things must first come to pass, and not one of them was yet fulfilled? And how could the expectation of this Day be made a ground of exhortation, and a motive to watchfulness and prayer, as though it could suddenly and unawares surprize them, which had so many wonderful alterations to forego it; and none of them yet come to pass?

I have spoken hitherto of what was revealed to all the Apostles in general. But if we take S. John apart from the rest, and consider what was afterward revealed to him in Patmos, we shall find in his Apocalypitical Visions, besides other times more obscurely intimated, an express prophecy of no less than a thousand years; which, whatever it mean, cannot be a small time, and must be fulfilled in this world, and not in the world to come. Notwithstanding all this, I make no question but even in the Apostles times many of the believing Gentiles, mistaking the Apostles admonitions to the Jews of the End of their State approaching, thought the End of whole world and the Day of the Lord had been also near; whom therefore S. Paul 2 Thess. 2. beseeches to be better informed, because that Day should not come until the Apostasy came first, and the Man of sin were revealed.

CHAP. XVI.

The Fourth Particular, viz. The Warrant or Proof of this Prophecy. When the Spirit speaks ῥητῶς, and when ἀρρητῶς. That the Spirit foretold the Great Apostasy ῥητῶς expressly in Dan. 11. vers. 36, 37, 38, 39. A View of these Verses in the Hebrew Text, with an exact Translation of them both in Latin and English. The chief Difficulties in these Verses explained, and incidentally other places of Scripture. The different opinions of Junius and Graferus about Vers. 38. The Author's Translation free from the inconveniences of both. A particular Explication of Mahoz and Mahuzim: That hereby are meant Fortresses, Bulwarks, as also Protectors, Guardians, Defenders, &c. How fitly this Title is applicable to Angels and Saints, accounted to be such by those that worshipt them.

NOW I come to the Fourth particular of this Prophecy, The Warrant or Proof thereof. The Spirit hath foretold it ῥητῶς, or in express words, in some place or other of Divine Writ, The Spirit told Peter, Acts 10. 19. Behold three men seek thee. The Spirit said, Separate Barnabas and Saul, Acts 13. 2. The Spirit forbade S. Paul to preach in Asia. The Spirit said that the Jews should bind S. Paul at Jerusalem, Acts 21. 11. But in all these the Spirit spake not ῥητῶς for these things were nowhere written; and therefore what it spake, it spake ἀρρητῶς, only by secret Instinct or Inspiration. But that which the Spirit speaks in the Written Word, that it speaks ῥητῶς, verbatim, expressly. If therefore concerning this Apostasy of Christian believers to be in the Latter times the Spirit speaketh ῥητῶς; then is it to be found somewhere in the Old Testament: for there alone the Spirit could be said to speak ῥητῶς or verbatim, in the Apostles time. Having therefore so good a hint given us, let us see if we can find where the Spirit speaketh of this matter so expressly.

There are three main things in this our Apostle's Prediction whereof I find the Spirit to have spoken ῥητῶς or in express words, and that in the Prophecy of Daniel. 1. Of these Last or Latter times. 2. Of the new worship of Demons in them. 3. Of a Prohibition of marriage to accompany them. As for the first of these, the ὅτε ἐσθὲν καὶ ἐπὶ Latter times, Daniel * (as you have heard before) expressly names them, Καὶ ἐπὶ, καὶ ἐπὶ, καὶ ἡμῶν καὶ ἡμῶν, A time, times, and half a time; being those Last times of the Last Kingdom, wherein the Hornish Tyrant should make war with the Saints, and prevail against them. For the second, A worship of new-Demons or Demi-gods with the profession of the name of Christ; you will perhaps think it strange if I should shew it ῥητῶς. But if I do; it was the Appendix of hindering or debarring marriage, mentioned in the next verses, which as a thread led me the way to the end of the eleventh chapter of Daniel, where I found it; and in a place too very suspicious, being taken, I think, by almost all the Ancients for a Prophecy of Antichrist; yea and so expounded by the greatest part of our own, though with much variety of reading and application.

But hear the words themselves in the 36, 37, 38, 39. verses of that eleventh chapter of Daniel, translated, as I think, ῥητῶς, verbatim, without any wresting or straining the Hebrew text: They are a Description of the Last or Roman Kingdom, and the several states thereof, Conquering Nations, Persecuting Christians, False-worshipping Christ. The words are these.

1. Now for the underſtanding of this Prophecy, we muſt take notice, that the Prophet Daniel at the beginning of theſe verſes leaves off the Greek Kingdom with Antiochus, (of whom he was ſpeaking before,) and falls about the Roman: the reaſon being, becauſe after Antiochus (in whole time Macedonia, whence that Kingdom ſprung, with all the reſt of Greece came under the Roman obedience,) the Third Kingdom comes no more in the holy reckoning; Daniel himſelf calling the time of Antiochus his reign, the latter end of the Greek kingdom, ch. 8. 23. and, as I take it, he intimates the ſame in this chapter in the verſe immediately fore-going theſe we have now to deal withal: From thence forward therefore the Roman ſucceeds in the account of the Great Kalendar of Times.

2. Under the name King we muſt underſtand the whole Roman State, under what kind of Government ſoever. For the Hebrews uſe King for Kingdom, and Kingdom for any Government, State or Polity in the world. For the Devil in the Goſpel is ſaid to have ſhewn Chriſt all the Kingdoms of the world, Monarchies, Ariſtocracies, Democracies, or what other kind ſoever.

3. Where it is ſaid, that this King ſhould exalt himſelf above every God; nothing is thereby meant but the greatneſs and generality of his conqueſts and prevailings. And the reaſon of that phraſe or manner of ſpeech ſhould ſeem to be, Becauſe in the times of Paganism every City and Country was ſuppoſed to have their proper and peculiar Gods, which were deemed as their Guardians and Protectors: Whence in the Scripture, according to the language of that time, we may obſerve a threefold uſe of ſpeech.

First, the Nations themſelves are expreſſed and implied under the names of their Gods. The Iſraelites were called The people of Jehovah. So are the Moabites the people of Chemosh, Numb. 21. 29. The Lord threatned (Dent. 4. 28. & 28. 36, & 64. Jer. 16.

* So Targum Onkelos and Jonathan both render it expressly, סעוניה seruenuhu Idols, Dent. 28. 36, 64. also c. 4. 28. ne non Targum Jonathan, Jer. 16. 13. 1 Sam. 26. 19. that is, in all the places fore-cited.

Jer. 16. 13. ) to scatter Israel among the nations, from one end of the earth even to another, and that there they should serve other Gods day and night; Gods, the work of mens hands, wood and stone, which neither they nor their Fathers had known: that is, they should serve them, not Religiously, but Politically, inasmuch as they were to become Slaves and Vassals to * Idolatrous Nations; even such Idolaters as neither they nor their Fathers had ever heard of. For as for a Religious service of Idols, the Jews were never so free as in their captivity, as we see by experience at this day: but with the service of bondage they may be said Politically to have been the Vassals of Idols, as being in bondage to the servants of other Gods. As a Christian taken by the Turk may in the like sense be said to come in bondage and be a slave to Mahomet: For a Slave to the Servants is in a sense Servant to their Master. Let it also be considered whether that of David, 1 Sam. 26. 19. be not to be expounded according to this notion, They have driven me out this day from abiding in the inheritance of the Lord, saying, Go serve other Gods; that is, banished me into a Nation of another Religion.

Secondly, The exploits of the Nations are said to be done by their Gods, even as we by like privilege of speech ascribe unto our Kings what is done by the People under them. Thus 2 Chron. 28. 23. the Gods of Damascus are said to have smote Abaz: He sacrificed to the Gods of Damascus that smote him: and he said, Because the Gods of Syria help them, therefore will I sacrifice to them, that they may help me. Jer. 51. 44. it is said of the Dominion of Babylon, That the Nations flowed together unto Bel, and that he had swallowed up their wealth, which the Lord threatned there to bring forth again out of his mouth.

Thirdly, and that most frequently of all others, What is attempted against the Nations, is said to be attempted against their Gods: Even as Generals bear the name not only of the exploits, but also of the disadvantages of the Armies led by them; So here the Gods are said to receive the affronts, defeitures and discomfitures given to the People under their patronage. * Rabshakeh vaunts in his Master's name, 2 Kings 18. 33. Hath any of the Gods of the Nations delivered at all his land out of the hand of Assyria? where are the Gods of Hamath, and of Arpad? where are the Gods of Sepharvaim? Isay 46. 1, 2. prophesieth thus of the taking of Babylon by Cyrus; Bel boweth down, Nebo stoopeth—they could not deliver the burthen, but they themselves are gone into captivity. In the like strain prophesieth Jeremy, chap. 50. 2. Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces, her Idols are confounded, &c. And again, Jer. 51. 44. I will punish Bel in Babylon, and I will bring out of his mouth that which he hath swallowed up, and the Nations shall not flow together any more unto him: yea the wall of Babylon shall fall. The same Prophet saith of Moab's captivity, chap. 48. 7. Thou shalt be taken, and Chemosh shall go into captivity with his Priests and his Princes together. Moab likewise in his affronts and derision of Israel is * said to have magnified himself against the Lord. According to which manner of speech the success and prevailing of the Roman in the advancing his Dominion and subduing every Nation under him, is here expressed by his exalting and magnifying himself above every God. This I suppose to be the ground of that manner of speech; though if any had rather, as others do, take Gods here for the Kings and Potentates of the earth, it will I confess come all to one purpose.

4. By the Gods of their Ancestors, whom the Roman State should at length cashier and cast off, are meant all the Pagan Deities and Heathen Gods which were worshipped in that Empire.

5. By the Desire of Women, which the Roman also at that time should not regard as he was wont, is meant Desire of Wiving, or Desire of having Women for the society of life, conjugal affection, which is expressed Gen. 2. 24. to be such a desire for which a man shall leave father and mother, and cleave to his wife, and they shall be both one flesh. And it might have been translated in this place, Desire of Wives, as well as Desire of Women; for there is no other word used in the Original for Wives above once or twice in the whole Scripture, but this אִשָּׁה which is here turned women. With the like use of the word Desire, the Spouse in the Canticles, chap. 7. 10. expresseth her wel-beloved to be her Husband: I am my wel-beloved's (saith she) and his Desire is towards me; that is, He is my Husband: for so twice before she expressed herself, chap. 2. 16. My beloved is mine, and I am his; and chap. 6. 3. I am my beloved's and my beloved is mine. So Ezek. 24. 16. the Lord threatning to take away Ezekiel's wife, saith, Behold I take away from thee the Desire of thine eyes מַחְמַר עֵינֶיךָ, and afterward ver. 18. it followeth, And at even my wife died. Yea, the Roman language it self is not unacquainted with this speech: Cicero ad uxorem, En mea lex, meum desiderium.

* 2 Sam. 7. 23. God is said to have redeemed Israel from Egypt, from the Nations and their Gods See Tremel. who turns it more to our purpose.

* Ver. 26. & 42.

derium. This Desire of women and married life the Roman should discountenance, when he shook off the Gods of his Ancestors.

6. By the Strange and Forein God whom the Roman should at length acknowledge, is meant (a) Christ. For though to the Jew every Strange and Forein God were a False God; yet to the Gentiles, who worshipped none but the Idols, the Forein God was the True: Therefore the Philosophers at Athens, when S. Paul preached Christ unto them, said, He preached (b) ἑνὸν Δαίμονιον a Forein God. The want of which consideration hath much obscured this Prophecy; this Forein God being still supposed to be a False God; when to those who worshipped all kinds of False Gods, as the (c) Roman did, a Forein God, whom their Fathers knew not, must needs be the True.

7. Where it is said, With this Forein God he shall honour Mahuzzims, these Mahuzzims or Maüzzims are these Dæmons we seek for, whom the Roman should worship with Christ whom he should embrace. For Mahuzzim are Proteſſores Dii, (such as Saints and Angels are supposed to be) as I shall shew by and by; where though I may be new for the particular, yet for the general I shall agree well enough with the Fathers, who constantly thought that under these Mahuzzim was some Idol meant which Antichrist should worship, and many of our time have taken it for the Maß.

But I must first say something of the translation of this 38. verse, and then will come to the signification of this word Mahuzzim.

For the first; Whereas the Preposition ל in לאלה is usually neglected, and the words אלה and מַעֲזִים God and Mahuzzim construed together as one thing, viz. God Mahuzzim, or, as some, The God of Forces; I express the Preposition ל. and construe God and Mahuzzim apart as Two; viz. To, or, Together with, God he shall honour Mahuzzims, &c. Ad (vel juxta) Deum Mahuzzimos honorabit, &c. For the Preposition ל is made of אל, and signifies the same with it, namely an Addition or Adjoining of things, Ad, Juxta, Apud, and על super, propter, &c. To, Besides, and Together with*; as * See this use of ל Ezra 1.5. Lev. 16. 21. לך, Vulg. & Angl. with Lev. 16. 21. לך, חַתָּאִים הַמַּשְׁכִּלִים where it is impossible it should distinguish, and so elsewhere.

By this means the controversie betwixt Junius and Graſerus is taken away: For Junius, as should seem, seeing no reason why the Preposition ל should be neglected, and that by so doing the Verb כבד was made irregularly and against use to govern a Dative case, he expresses the Preposition by Quod ad or Quod attinet ad, (that is) As concerning. But the words God and Mahuzzim he sundreth not, but turneth them as in statu constructo, viz. The God of Mights or Forces; understanding thereby the True and Almighty God himself. Against which Graſerus excepts, 1. That to render the Preposition ל Ad [As concerning] favours of a Latinism rather than of an Hebraism. 2. That he doth as good as strike out the distinctive Accent אֶתְנַחֲשׁ [א] which is a Colon; in as much as he makes the sentence being a full member to be imperfect and defective; and yet would seem to stand in awe of that smaller distinction Zakeph-katon [:] over the word מַעֲזִים Mahuzzim, which yet stands there, as elsewhere, but for a Nota bene. 3. That to expound God Mahuzzim to be the True God, against the consent not only of Jews, who ever take it for some Idol or other, but of the ancient Christian writers, who understand by it some Idol of Antichrist, yea some the Devil himself; and of many of our own, who take it for the Idol of the Maß, and some otherwise, yet for an Idol-deity; To expound this of the True and Almighty God without example in Scripture, Graſerus thinks not tolerable. Wherefore himself had rather yield the construction of the verb כבד to be irregular, (Junius himself having admitted it in the next member of the verse) and to suppose it to be a mystical Solecism, the Spirit intending by the Anomaly and incongruity of the Syntax to signify an Anomaly and incongruity of Religion. But these inconveniences on both sides, as far as I can see, are wholly avoided by that Translation we have given: whereof let the Reader judge.

I come now to unfold the signification of the word Mahuzzim; (a word which the most Translations retain, the Septuagint calling it Μαωζειν, S. Jerome or the Vulgar Latin Maozim, the Geneva and others Maüzim.) This מַעֲזִים Mahuzzim, I say, is in the Plural number; the singular is מַעֲזִי Mahoz, which in the abstract signifies sometimes Strength, sometimes a Fortress or Bulmark, of וַיִּבְנוּ Robustus fuit: But the Hebrews use Abstracts for Concretes. Examples are many in the Old Testament, as Justitia pro Justis, Captivity for Captives, &c. In the New Testament, * Principalities, Powers and Dominions, for Princes, Potentates and Dominators. * Coloss. 1. 16.

So Mahoz, Strength or a Fortref, for him that strengthens or fortifies, that is a Protector, Defender, Guardian, Helper. Wherefore the Septuagint five times in the Psalms render the word מָחֹז Mahoz ὑπερασπιστής, and the Vulgar Latine as often Protector: the places are these. Psal. 27. 1. The Lord is מָחֹזִי the Protector of my life, of whom should I be afraid? Psal. 28. 8. The Lord is their strength, and he is מָחֹזֵנוּ Mahoz Jeshuoth, the Mahoz of Salvations * of his anointed: where the Septuagint hath ὑπερασπιστής, the Vulgar, Protector salvationum. Psal. 31. 3. Pull me out of the net that they have laid privily for me, מָחֹזֵנוּ ki atta Mahuzzi, for thou art my Protector; the Septuagint, ὑπερασπιστής μου, the Vulgar, Protector. Psal. 37. 39. The salvation of the righteous is from the Lord, he is מָחֹזֵנוּ Mahuzam, their Mahoz in the time of trouble, and the Lord shall help them and deliver them from the wicked, &c. where the Septuagint and the Vulgar render as before ὑπερασπιστής and Protector. How think you now? Are not Saints and Angels worshipped as Mahuzzims? True Christians have with David, in the Psalms before quoted, one Mahoz, Jehovah Mahoz, that is, Christ; but Apostate Christians have their many Mahuzzims. O would they worshipped only מָחֹזֵנוּ that Mahoz of salvations, as you heard David even now call him, Psal. 28. You may if you please compare with these places of the Psalms that in the first verse of this eleventh of Daniel, where the Angel saith he stood in the first year of Darius the Mede to confirm and be a Mahoz to him, וְיָמְעִי which we translate, to strengthen him: By which we may see how fitly this name may be applied to Angels, and so to Saints supposed in helping, protecting and assisting to be like them.

Thus you see the concrete sense of Mahoz for an Helper, Protector and Defender, is not new. But what if we take the word passively, Force and Strength, for Forts and Strong ones? Will not then the valiant Martyrs and Champions of the Faith well bear the name of Mahuzzims? And these are they whom, at the first, Christians worshipped only in this sort, as an honour peculiarly due unto their sufferings.

Moreover, that you may not think this word and the notion thereof improper to be given unto a Deity, observe that the true God is called צֹר a Rock seven times Dent. 32. which the Vulgar turns as often Demi; yea in the same place False gods are called also צֹר or Rocks: ver. 31. Their Rock (that is, the Gentiles Rock) is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves being Judges; and ver. 37. Where are their Gods, (that is, Baalim) their Rock in whom they trusted, which did eat the fat of their sacrifices? &c. The like you shall find in * Hannah's Song, and other places of Scripture. See now the parity. The True God is called a Rock; Baalim and False Gods are also Rocks: The True God, or Christ himself, is often by David call'd Mahoz; why may not then False Gods, or Plurality of Christs, be called Mahuzzim? Rock and Fortref are not words of so great difference.

Thus having cleared the chiefest difficulties in the Text, and made the way smooth, let us read over the words again, and apply the Interpretation unto them.

CHAP. XVII.

A particular explication (by way of Paraphrase) of the forementioned Prophecy in Dan.

II. This further illustrated by several Observations, wherein the Events are represented as exactly futable and appliable to Daniel's Prophecy. That at the beginning of Saint-worship in the Church, Saints and their Reliques were called Bulwarks, Fortrefles, Walls, Towers, Guardians, Protectors, &c. according to the native signification of the word used by Daniel, Mahuzzim. A brief explication of the following verses in Dan. II. viz. vers. 40, 41, 42, 43.

Dan. II. Then a King shall do according to his will, and shall exalt or magnifie himself above every God;

* See the notice hereof at that time taken by the Jews, 1 Macc. 8. a princip. adv. 13. inclusive.

36. That is, Toward the end of the Reign of Antiochus Epiphanes*, the Roman shall prevail, and set up the Fourth Kingdom, making himself Master of the Kingdom of Macedon, and advancing himself from this time forward by continual conquests, shall Lord it over every King and Nation;

Yea against the God of Gods shall he speak marvellous things; and shall prosper, until the Indignation be accomplished: For the determined time shall be fulfilled.

Yea Christ, the God of Gods and King of the Kings of the earth, ( who in those times should appear in the world ) the Roman shall mock, blaspheme and crucifie, and by most bloody Edicts shall persecute and massacre his servants the Christians; and yet shall prosper in his Empire, until these outrageous times be ended, that is, until the daies of Constantine: For the time God hath appointed must be fulfilled.

The Aposta-sie of the latter Times
PART I.

Verse 37. Then he shall not regard the Gods of his Ancestors, nor shall he regard the Desire of Women, no nor any God: but he shall magnifie himself above all.

37. When that appointed time for the date of his prosperity comes to its period, and the time of the ruin and change of his Dominion draws near; than this Roman State shall cashier and forsake the Idols and False Gods whom their Fathers worshipped, and shall acknowledge Christ, a God whom their Fathers knew not. At that time the Desire of Women and married life shall be discountenanced, and shall not be of that account and regard it had been; but, contrary to the long-continued custome of the Romans, single life shall be honoured and priviledged above it: yea and soon after the Roman shall bear himself so as if he regarded not any God, and with Antichristian pride shall magnifie himself over all.

Verse 38. For to ( or together with ) God in his seat he shall honour Mahuzzims; even together with that God whom his Ancestors knew not, shall he honour [ them ] with gold, and with silver, and with precious stones, and with pleasant things.

38. That is, Together with the Christian God, who is a jealous God and to be worshipped alone, he shall worship Mahuzzims even in his seat and Temple; even with the forein God, whom his Ancestors acknowledged not, shall he honour Mahuzzims with gold and silver, and with precious stones, and with pleasant things.

Verse 39. And he shall make the Holds of the Mahuzzims withal ( or joyntly ) to the Forein God; whom acknowledging, he shall encrease with honour: and he shall cause them to rule over many, and shall distribute the earth for a reward.

39. And though the Christian God, whom he shall profess to acknowledge and worship, can endure no Compeers; yet shall he consecrate his Temples and Monasteries ( Ecclesiastical Holds ) joyntly to the Christian God and to his Mahuzzims, Deo & Sanctis: yea he shall distribute the earth among his Mahuzzims; so that beside several patrimonies which in every Countrey he shall allot them, he shall share whole Kingdoms and Provinces among them: Saint George shall have England, Saint Andrew Scotland, Saint Dennis France, Saint James Spain, Saint Mark Venice, &c. and bear rule as Presidents and Patrons of their several Countries.

Thus we see how πρωτος, how expressly the Spirit foretold that the Roman Empire, having rejected the multitude of Gods and Demons worshipped by their Ancestors, and betaken themselves to that One and Only God which their Fathers knew not, should nevertheless depart from this their Faith, and revive again the old Theology of Demons by a new Superinduction of Mahuzzims.

Now although this Prophecy thus applied be so evident, that the only pointing at the Event were able almost to convince the Reader; yet that we may yet the more admire the Truth of God in the contemplation of an Event so sutable, I will add these following Observations concerning it.

I.

First, That agreeably with the date of the Holy Ghost, the Roman Historians themselves have observed and marked out that time of their prevailing against Macedonia ( which I said was accomplished toward the end of the reign of Antiochus Epiphanes ) for the beginning of their Dominion over the world. Lucius Florus

PART II.

lib. 2. cap. 7. Cedente Hannibale, præmium victoriæ Africa fuit, & secutus Africam terrarum rrbis. Post Carthaginem vinci neminem puduit; secuta sunt statim Africam Gentes, Macedonia, Græcia, Syria, cateraque omnia, quodam quasi æstu & torrente fortune: Sed primi omnium Macedones, affectator quondam imperii populus. Hannibal being worsted, Africa became the reward of the victory, and after Africa the whole world also. None thought it a shame to be overcome, after Carthage was. Macedonia, Greece, Syria and all other Nations, as if carried with a certain current and torrent of Fortune, did soon follow Africa: But the first who followed were the Macedonians, a people that sometime affected the Empire of the World. In Velleius Paterculus lib. 1. c. 6. is an Annotation out of one Æmilius Sura, in these words; Æmilius Sura de annis populi Romani. Assyrii principes omnium Gentium, rerum potiti sunt, deinde Medi, postea Persæ, deinde Macedones; exinde duobus regibus, Philippo & Antiocho, qui à Macedonibus oriundi erant, haud multo post Carthaginem subactam, devictis, summa Imperii ad Populum Romanum pervenit. Inter hoc tempus & initium Nini Regis Assyriorum, qui Princeps rerum potitus, intersunt anni MDCCCXCXV. The Assyrians had the Sovereign dominion the first of all Nations, then the Medes and Persians; after them the Macedonians: afterwards those two Kings, Philip and Antiochus, being overcome, and that a little after that Carthage was subdued, the Imperial Power came to the Romans. Between which time and the beginning of the Reign of Ninus the first Assyrian King there are one thousand nine hundred ninety five years. Here the time of the Romans prevailing against the Macedonian Kings is made the beginning of their Empire; even as Daniel also beginneth the Roman account from thence; but with this difference, that whereas Æmilius Sura seems to reckon from the beginning of those prevailings in the victories against Philip, Daniel counts from the victory against Persæus his son, when that Conquest was now perfected, and Macedonia brought into a Province; which happened (as I have already said) the same year that Antiochus Epiphanes prophaned the Temple of Jerusalem.

2. That no Kingdom in the world, that we know of, could more literally be said in their conquests to exalt and magnifie themselves above every God, than the Roman; in respect of a solemn custome they used in their wars, by a certain charm to call out the gods from any City when they besieged it. The form whereof Macrobius gives us l. 3. Saturn c. 8. as he found it in Sammonicus Serenus his fifth Book of hidden secrets; namely this.— If it be a God, if it be a Goddess that hath the People and City of Carthage in protection; And thou especially, whosoever thou art, the Patron of this City and people, I pray and beseech, and with your leave require you to abandon the People and City of Carthage, to forsake the places, Temples, Ceremonies, and Enclosures of their City, to go away from them, and to strike fear, terrour and astonishment into that People and City: and having left it, to come to Rome to me and mine; and that our Cities, Places, Temples, Ceremonies, be more acceptable and better liked of you; that you would take the charge of me, of the People of Rome and of my souldiers, so as we may know and understand it. If you do so, I vow to build you Temples, and to appoint solemn sports for you.

3. That Constantine, the first Emperour under whom that State forsook the Gods of their Forefathers and became Christian, together with this alteration abrogated those ancient Roman Laws, Julia and Papia, wherein the Desire of women and married life was so much priviledged and encouraged, and single and unmarried life disadvantaged. Hear it in the words of Sozomen, lib. 1. c. 9. Hist. Eccl. There was (saith he) an ancient Law among the Romans, forbidding those who after five and twenty years old were unmarried, to enjoy the like priviledges with married ones; and besides many other things, that they should have no benefit by Testaments and Legacies, unless they were next of kindred: and those who had no children, to have half their goods confiscated. Wherefore the Emperour seeing those who for God's sake were addicted to chastity and virginity, to be for this cause in a worst condition; he accounted it a folly for men to go about to encrease their kind with such carefulness and diligence, whereas Nature, according to Divine moderation, continually receives as well diminution as increase. Therefore he published a Law to the people, That both those who lived a single life, and those who had no children, should enjoy the like priviledges with others: yea he enacted, that those who lived in chastity and virginity should be priviledged above them; enabling both sexes, though under years, to make Testaments, contrary to the accustomed politic of the Romans. This alteration of the Roman Law by Constantine, Eusebius also witnesseth lib. 4. cap. 26. de vita Constantini: and again cap. 28. where he saith, That above all he honoured most those those that had consecrated their lives to divine Philosophy; he means a monastical life; and therefore he almost adored the most holy company of perpetual Virgins. That which the Father had thus enacted, the Sons also seconded, and some of the following Emperors, by new Edicts, till there was no relique left of those ancient privileges where-with married men had been respected; which Procopius saith (how rightly I examine not) was the cause of the ruine of that Empire, which was so much enfeebled and weakened through the new procreation of children, that it was not able to match the numerous armies of the barbarous nations. This was the first step of the disregard of marriage and the Desire of living; which was not an absolute prohibition, but a discouragement. But no sooner had the Roman Bishop and his Clergy got the power into their hands, but it grew to an absolute prohibition, not for Monks only, but for the whole Clergy: which was the highest disrespect that could be to that which God had made honourable among all men.

Lastly, It is a thing not to be passed by without admiration, That the Fathers and others, even at the beginning of Saint-worship, by I know not what fatal instinct, used to call Saints and their Reliques, Towers, Walls, Bulwarks, Fortresses, that is, מִבְּזִימָה Mahuzzim, in the prime and native signification.

Basil in his Oration upon the Fourty Martyrs, whose Reliques were dispersed over all the Countries thereabouts, speaks in this manner; These are those who having taken possession of our Country, as certain conjoynd TOWERS, ΠΥΡΓΟΙ ΤΙΝΕΣ σὺν ἑστέ, secure it from the incursions of Enemies. The same Basil concludes his Oration upon Mamas the Martyr in this manner; That God who hath gathered us together in this place, and disposes of what is to come, keep us safe from hurt, and secure us from the ravenous Wolf, and preserve steadfast this Church of Caesarea, being guarded with the mighty TOWERS of Martyrs, ἑρμηνεύον τοῖς μεγάλοις ΠΥΡΓΟΙΣ τῶν μαρτύρων.

Chrysostome in his 32. Homily upon the Epistle to the Romans, speaking of the Reliques of Peter and Paul, This Corps (saith he, meaning of Paul) fortifies this City of Rome more strongly than any TOWER, or than ten thousand RAMPIRES, as also doth the Corps of Peter, πατρὸς ΠΥΡΓΟΥ τῶν μυρίων ἐν ΠΕΡΙΒΟΛΩΝ ἀσφαλίσαντος, &c. Are not these strong Mahuzzims?

The like whereunto is that of Venantius Fortunatus a Christian Poet not much above an age younger than Chrysostome.

A facie hostili duo PROPUGNACULA præsumt, Quos Fidei TURRES Urbs caput Orbis habet.

The Faith's two TOWRS in Lady Rome do lie,
Two BULWARKS strong against the Enemy.

At the same thing aims Gregory, lib. 7. Ep. 23. ad Rusticianam Patriciam, entreating her to come to Rome: Si gladius Italia & bella formidatis, &c. If you fear the swords. (saith he) and wars of Italy, you ought attentively to consider how great the PROTECTION of Blessed Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, is in this City; wherein without any great number of people, without the aid of souldiers, we have been so many years in the midst of swords by God's providence safely preserved from all hurt.

But to return again to S. Chrysostome, who in his Homily upon the Egyptian Martyrs, Hom. 70. ad populum Antiochenum, speaks after this manner: Those Saints bodies (saith he) ΤΕΙΧΙΖΕΙ FORTIFY our City more strongly than an IMPREGNABLE WALL OF ADAMANT; and, as certain high ROCKS hanging on every side, repel not only the assaults of those Enemies which are sensible and seen with the eye, but also overthrow and defeat the ambuscadoes of Invisible Fiends, and all the Stratagems of the Devil. Here you see are Mahuzzims too.

So long before, in the days of Constantine, James Bishop of Nisibus, renowned for Holiness, was, according to order given by Constantine in his life-time, (saith Gennadius) buried within the walls of that City, being a Frontier of the Empire, ob custodiam viz. Civitatis. Gennad. de Vir. illustr. cap. 6.

Evagrius lib. 1. c. 13. tells us, That the Antiochians offered up a supplication to the Emperour Leo the first, about the year 460, for the keeping of the Corps of holy Simeon, surnamed Stylita or the Pillarist, in this form; Because our City hath now wall, (for it had been demolished in a fury,) therefore we brought hither this most holy Body, that it might be to us ΤΕΙΧΟΣ & ΟΧΥΡΩΜΑ A WALL

and

The Apostasie of the latter Times
PART I.

and A FORTRESSE, which would be in Hebrew לשבור ורמקו Lesbur vlemma-hoz.

S. Hilary also will tell us, That neither the GUARDS of Saints nor [ Angelorum munitiones ] the BULWARKS of Angels are wanting to those who are willing to stand. Here Angels are Mahuzzim, as Saints were in the former.

The Greeks at this day, in their Preces Horariae, thus invoke the Blessed Virgin; O thou Virgin mother of God, thou impregnable WALL, thou FORTRESSE of Salvation [ מחוז מלכות Psal. 28. ] we call upon thee, that thou wouldest frustrate the purposes of our Enemies, and be a FENCE to this City: thus they go on, calling her The Hope, Safe-guard, and Sanctuary of Christians. Here is מחוז מלכות Mahoz Mahuzzim, a strong Mahoz indeed.

To conclude, The Titles of Protectors, Guardians and Defenders, which is the signification of Mahuzzim when a Person is meant, as they are more frequent, so are they no less ancient. Greg. Nyssen in his third Oration upon the forty Martyrs, calls them Δορυφόροι & Προεστωταί, Guarders and Protectors. Eucherius his S. Gervase the perpetual [ Propugnator ] Protector of the faithful. Theodoret. lib. 8. de curandis Græcorum affectionibus, calls the holy Martyrs Guardians of Cities, Lieutenants of places, Captains of men, Princes, Champions and Guardians, by whom disasters are turned from us, and those which come from Devils debarred and driven away.

But Constantinus Monachus the Greek Historian, inveighing against Leo Isaurus for demolishing Images, calls them Turres atque Munitiones religiosi cultus.

I might here add something also concerning Images, whose worship is another part of the Doctrine of Demons, and shew how well the name Mahuzzim would besit them, which the Iconomachical Council of Constantinople calls so unluckily Δαιμονια & ὀχυρώματα the Fortresses or Mahuzzim of the Devil. And perhaps the nine and thirtieth verse in the fore-alleged Prophecy might be yet more literally translated, if the word פָּעַל facere were taken in a religious sense; And he shall [ do unto, or ] offer unto the holds of Mahuzzim, together with the foreign God, &c. that is, he shall do religious service to the Images of Saints together with Christ. I might also put you in mind of the term of Munimentum given to the Cross, and that so usual Latin phrase of Munire signo Crucis, to fortifie (that is, to sign) with the sign of the Cross: But I will not engage my self too far in these Grammatical Speculations.

As for the following verses of this Prophecie, if any desire to know it, they may, as I think, be interpreted and applied thus.

Ver. 40. And at the time of the End [ that is, in the Romans ἑσπερινὰ καὶ ἑσπερινὰ or Latter times ] shall the King of the South ( that is, the Saracen ) push at him, and the King of the North ( the Turk ) shall come against him ( to wit, the Saracen ) like a whirlwind, with chariots and with horsemen, and with many ships, and he shall enter into the Countries, and shall overflow and pass over.

Ver. 41. He shall enter also into the glorious Land ( Palestine, ) and many shall be overthrown; but these shall escape out of his hand, Edom and Moab, and the chief of the children of Ammon; that is, the Inhabitants of Arabia Petraea, which were never yet Provincials of the Turkish Empire; yea with some of them he is fain to be at a Pension for the safer passage of his Caravans.

Ver. 42. He ( the Turk ) shall stretch forth his hand also upon the Countries [ of those parts, ] and the Land of Egypt ( though it should hold out long under the Mamelukes, even till the year 1517 ) shall not escape.

Ver. 43. But he shall have power over the treasures of gold and silver and all the precious things of Egypt; and the Libians and the Cushites ( that is, the neighbouring Nations, whether of Africk or Lybia, as those of Algiers, &c. or of the Arabians in Scripture called Cushim ) shall be at his steps, that is, at his devotion.

That which * remains, as I suppose, is not yet fulfilled, and therefore I leave it: Time will make it manifest.

* See in Book IV. an explication of the remaining Verses, as also a larger explication of the foregoing.

C H A P. I.

The Author's three Reasons for his Translating the Text differently from the Common Versions. That the Preposition [ Ἐν ] in the Text signifies Through or By. Other places of Scripture where it signifies likewise Causam or Modum actionis.

QF the First Part of this Prophecy, being a Description of the Condition of that Solemn Defection which was to come, I have spoken hitherto. I come now to the Second Part of my Division, The quality of the Persons, and the Means whereby it was to enter and be advanced, which is set forth in the Verses now read; which though you may find by others otherwise translated, yet I hope the Translation which I have propounded, if the judicious Reader please to examine it, will approve itself not only to be an enforced one, but such as salves that incongruity of Construction which the other could not avoid. For it is usually translated intransitively, with reference to the Persons expressed in the former verse, viz. That they should speak lies in hypocrisie, having their conscience seared with an hot iron, and forbidding marriage, and commanding to abstain from meats: So as that which in the former verse is named Doctrines of Devils, should only mean that in general terms, which in these Verses is particularly instanced to be Doctrines of prohibiting marriage, and abstaining from meats, as two branches of that Devilish doctrine; for so Calvin, Melancthon and some others seem to expound it.

But why this Interpretation should not be the most likely, my first Reason is,

1. Because it makes S. Paul, who speaks of that Great Apostasie of Christians which was to be in the Latter Times, to instance only in the smaller and (if I may so say) almost circumstantial errors; and to omit the main and principal, which the Scripture elsewhere tells us should be Idolatry or Spiritual fornication. Who can believe that he would so balk the substance, and name only that which in comparison is but an Appendix thereto?

2. He prophesies here in express words of such things as were to come ἐν ὑστερίαις καὶ ἐσχάταις τοῖς χρόνοις in the Latter times: But Errors about Marriage and Meats were no novelty in the Apostles own times, as the diligent Reader may easily collect out of their Epistles; which makes it improbable he would specify the Apostasie of the latter times in these alone.

3. But my last Reason, whereunto I think I may trust, is, That the Syntax of the words in the Greek is incapable of such an intransitive construction, and consequently of the sense depending thereon. For the Persons intimated in the former verse are expressed in casu recto, as τινὲς προσέχοντες: but the Persons intended here we find in the Genitive, ψευδολόγων, κεκαυτηριασμένων, κωλύοντων, which I cannot see how they

PART II.

they can agree with τινὲς and προσέχοντες, after the manner of intransitive construction, without breach of Grammatical congruity not elsewhere sampled in our Apostle's Epistles. Indeed they would agree with Δαιμονίων, but that would be a harsh sense every way: for either we must say (as some do) that by Devils are meant Devilish men or men led by the Devil, which is an hard signification; or else it would be a stranger sense, and I think not over-pliable to the usual exposition, to say That Devils should lie, have seared consciences, and forbid marriage or meats: So that Beza, with others, had rather confess a breach of Syntax, than incur the inconvenience of such a forced sense: Major est habita (saith he) sententie quam constructionis ratio; The Apostle heeded more the matter than he did the Grammar.

* As also Cassellius seems to understand it, translating Per simulationem hominum falsiloquorum.

But what needs this, so long as there is a better way to save it? namely, to construe the words transitively, making all these Genitive cases to be governed of Ἐν ὑποκρίσει, as ἐν ὑποκρίσει ψευδολόγων, by or through the feigning of liars; ἐν ὑποκρίσει καυτηρησάντων, &c. through the feigning of those who had their consciences seared; and so forward. Which construction is observed and followed by Andreas Hyperius, one of our reformed Writers, who translates, Per simulationem falsiloquorum, &c. and expounds it, de modo quofallent Spiritus Impostores; fallunt per simulationem seu hypocrisim falsiloquorum, &c. * and I believe that many others have taken it so; for our late Latine translations are indifferent to be taken either way. Howsoever it be, I see no way but this to keep the Syntax true and even, and wholly to avoid the fore-mentioned inconveniences: which as it is easie and obvious, and not strained, so I hope to let you see the Event to have been most answerable thereunto; That this was the Manner, and this the Means, this the Quality of the Persons whereby the Doctrine of Demons was first brought in, advanced and maintained in the Church, viz. Through the hypocrisie, feigning, craft, or counterfeiting of those who told lies, of those who had their consciences seared, &c.

Vide etiam
Eph. 4. 14.

As for the use of the Preposition [Ἐν] to signify causam, instrumentum, or modum actionis, he that is not a stranger in the Scripture, knows it to be most frequent, the Greek Text borrowing it from the use of the Hebrew Preposition ׀ which the Hebrews call הָעוֹר ׀, as when it signifies In, בְּ (i. e.) subjecti. But two or three examples will not do amiss. Matth. 5. 13. If the salt hath lost its savour, ἐν τίνι ἀδίκησεται; wherewith shall it be salted? Acts 17. 31. Because God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness, ἐν ἀνδρὶ ᾧ ὤρεσε by the man whom he hath ordained. 2 Pet. 3. 1. I stir up your pure minds ἐν ὑπομνήσει by way of remembrance. Tit. 1. 9. That he may be able ἐν δίδασκαλίᾳ ὑγιαίνουσῃ by sound doctrine to exhort and convince the gainsayers. And most naturally to the business we have in hand, 2 Thess. 2. 9, 10. of the Man of sin, Whose coming (saith the Apostle) is after the working of Satan ἐν πάσῃ δυνάμει καὶ σημείοις καὶ τέρασιν ψεύδους, καὶ ἐν πάσῃ ἀπάτῃ καὶ ἀδικίᾳ, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, (or through them) and through all deceivableness of unrighteousness, &c. So in my Text, ἐν ὑποκρίσει ψευδολόγων, &c. through the hypocrisie of Liers, &c.

CHAP. II.

The words of the Text explained. That for the Character or Quality of the Persons that made way for, or brought in the Great Apostasie, some were Liers, some had seared Consciences, some forbade Marriage and Meats; others were guilty of all these imputations. What is meant by The Hypocrisie of Liers: That this appeared in 3 things; 1. Lies of Miracles, 2. Fabulous Legends, 3. Counterfeit Writings under the name of Antiquity. That Lies of Miracles appear'd in 1. Their Forgery, 2. Illusion, 3. Misapplication. What is meant by Having seared Consciences. That the strange and indecent Tales wherewith the Legends and the like Writings are stuff'd, argue those that did either vent or believe them, to be men of seared (that is, hard and unfeeling) consciences. Some Instances of the indecency of those Stories.

NOW for the unfolding of the words, this must first be observed in general, That they are not to be so understood, as if those who are the bringers in and advancers of the Doctrine of Demons should every one of them be guilty of all the several imputations in this Description: but they are to be construed rather as an Affundetor.

deton, by understanding the * Conjunction, as if it had been uttered thus ; Through the hypocrisie of Liers, and, Through the hypocrisie of men of seared consciences, and lastly, By the hypocrisie of those who forbid marriage and meats ; or thus ; Through the hypocrisie, partly of Liers, partly of men of seared consciences, partly of those who forbid marriage and command to abstain from meats : that so though many were guilty of all, yet some may be exempt from some ; as namely some might be guilty of the last note, of forbidding marriage and abstaining from meats, and yet free of the former, of being counterfeit Liers and men of seared Consciencs : which I speak for reverence of some of the Ancients, who though otherwise holy men, yet cannot be acquitted from some of the imputations here mentioned, nor altogether excused from having an hand accidentally through the Fate of the times wherein they lived, in laying the ground-work whereon by others the Great Apostasie was builded.

Linacr. Nonne sic etiam in Græcis?

This therefore being remembred, I come now to the unfolding of them in severall : and first of the first, The hypocrisie of Liers, ὑπόκρισις ψευδολόγων. The word ὑπόκρισις signifies disimulation, a feigning, counterfeiting, a semblance and shew of that which is not so indeed as it seemeth. And this word we must repeat ἀπό κοιῆς, as belonging in common to the rest which follows : For all should be counterfeit ; Lying should carry the counterfeit of Truth, the seared Conscience a semblance of Devotion, the Restraint of Marriage should be but a shew of Chastity, and Abstaining from meats a false appearance of Abstinence. For the Persons of whom they are spoken, should either make a shew of what themselves knew was not ; or that which they thought they had, should be no better than a false shew and counterfeit of that they took it for. The Vulgar Latine in Mark 12. 15. and the Syriack in the same place, turn the word Hypocrisie, versutia, dolus, craft and subtilty ; which sense, if need were, would not be denied admittance here.

But I return to ὑπόκρισις ψευδολόγων, The Hypocrisie of Liers ; which I conceive to be the same and no other than that which our Apostle speaks in the same case, 2 Thess. 2. where he tells us, That the coming of the Man of sin and the Apostasie attending him should be after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness, or unrighteous and ungodly deceiving ; and that God should send them strong delusions, that they might believe a lie, &c. Yea some of this, and of that which follows in that place, may extend also to the rest which follows in my Text ; howsoever the most thereof, as you hear, doth most evidently expound this ὑπόκρισις ψευδολόγων, this Hypocrisie of Liers.

Now according to the Event, this Hypocrisie of Liers doth appear in three things :

1. Lies of Miracles ; 2. Fabulous Legends of the Acts of Saints and Sufferings of Martyrs ; 3. Counterfeit Writings under the name of the best and first Antiquity.

Lies of Miracles will display their Hypocrisie in three particulars : 1. Forgery, 2. Illusion, 3. Misapplication.

1. Forgery of Miracles never done ; as were the reports of wondrous Dreams and Visions, which had no other credit but the Author's honesty : or miraculous Cures, by the power and Reliques of Saints deceased ; as when those who never were blind, made others believe they had newly received sight.

2. Illusion ; when though something were done, yet it was but a seeming and a counterfeit only of a miraculous work ; indeed some jugling trick of the Devil or his instruments.

3. Lastly, Misapplication : either when that was attributed to a Divine power, which was nothing but ἐνέργεια τοῦ Σατανᾶ the work and operation of the Devil ; or when it was interpreted or abused to invite and confirm men in some Idolatrous error, as it happened in the Miracles at the Shrines and Sepulchres of the holy Martyrs, which were interpreted to be for confirmation of the opinion of their Power, Presence, and notice of humane affairs after death, and to warrant and encourage men to have recourse unto them by prayer and invocation, as unto Mediators, and to give that honour unto their Reliques which was due unto God alone. The like is to be said of the Miracles of Images and of the Hof ; which though they smelt strong of Forgery or Illusion, were supposed by a divine disposition to be wrought for the like end and purpose. All which was ἐνέργεια πλάνης, the power of seduction or strong delusion, to make the world believe a Lie, as S. Paul speaks 2 Thess. 2. 11.

Concern

The Apostasie of the latter Times
PART II.

Concerning the Hypocrisie of fabulous Legend-writers of the Acts of Saints and Martyrs, you know what it means; as also the last which was named, Counterfeit Authors under the name of Antiquity, as approving those Errors which Latter times devised: I shall not need here to use any further explication. And thus you see what is comprehended under ὑπόκρισις ψευδολόγων, the hypocrisie, counterfeiting or feigning of Liers.

I should now come to display the truth of this particular of this Prophecy in the Event: But I will first unfold the next imputation, ὑπόκρισις κεκαυτηριασμένων, the hypocrisie of those who have their conscience seared; which though it might be exemplified in other things, yet I mean to instance only in that afore-mentioned, and so must give you the story of both together.

Εν ὑπόκρισι κεκαυτηριασμένων ἢ ἰδίαν συνείδησιν, Through the hypocrisie of those who have seared consciences: For ἐν ὑπόκρισι, as I said before, is to be repeated ἀπό καυτῆ. Καυτήριον signifies both the place seared, and the mark printed by the searing with an hot iron. Καυτηριάζειν is to cauterize, to sear with an hot iron, or cut off with searing, as Chirurgions do rotten members: now that which is seared becomes more hard and brawny, and so more dull, and not so sensible in feeling as otherwise. In this sense κεκαυτηριασμένοι ἢ ἰδίαν συνείδησιν signifies those who have a hard and a brawny Conscience, which hath no feeling in it: In the other sense, as καυτηριάζειν is to cut off by searing, it must signifie those who have no conscience left. There is not much difference; but I follow the first, a hard and unfeeling Conscience. And whether those ψευδολόγοι whereof we spake before (touse no other instances) were not of such metal for their conscience, I think no man can deny.

Who could have coined, or who could have believed such monstrous stuffe as the Legends are stored with, but such as were cauterized? If they had had any feeling or tenderness, not only of Conscience but even of Sense, they could never have believed or vented such stuffe as there is. As that the Virgin Mary should draw out her breasts, and milk in I know not what Clerk's mouth. That she played the Mid-wife to an Abbess got with child by her Cater, and sent the Bastard by two Angels to a certain Eremite to be brought up. Idem ibid. c. 86. That she came and lay the first night in the midst between a certain Bridegroom and his Bride. Idem lib. 7. cap. 87.

Cæsarius in his seventh book, chap. 34. reports, That the Virgin Mary for twelve whole years together did supply the place of a certain Nun called Beatrice, while the Nun lay in the Stews, till at length returning, she freed the Virgin from standing Sentinel any longer. And lib. 7. cap. 33. That she said to a certain Souldier, I will be thy wife, come and kiss me; and made him do so. That she took a Monk about the neck and kissed him.

In an Italian book, called The Miracles of the Blessed Virgin, printed at Milane 1547. A certain Abbess being great with child, the holy Virgin willing to cover her crime, did in her stead present her self before the Bishop in form of an Abbess, and shewed by ocular demonstration that she was not with child.

But that which Joannes de Nicol. in his Reformed Spaniard tells, that he read taken out of Trithemius, is the more worthy to be remembred, as being a principal Motive in his Conversion, who was till then extremely addicted to the Idol-worship of the Blessed Virgin; which was much cooled, when he read That she came into the chamber of Frier Allen, (a Dominican that made her Rosary,) made a ring of her own hair, wherewith she espoused her self unto him, kissed him, let him handle her breasts, and conversed as familiarly with him as a Bride is wont with her Bridegroom. Whether think you not that these fellows were seared in their conscience? what block could have been more senseless? Melchior Canus, speaking of the Golden Legend, as they call it, a Book fraught with such stuffe as you have heard, methinks almost expresses the meaning of a cauterized conscience: Hanc homo scripsit (saith he) ferrei oris & plumbei cordis, a fellow of an iron mouth and leaden heart; as if he had said, κεκαυτηριασμένος ἢ ἰδίαν συνείδησιν of a brawny and unfeeling conscience.

CHAP. III.

The Apoſtaſie of the latter Times
PART II.

That the Worſhip of Saints and their Reliques was brought in and promoted by the Hypocriſie of Liers, or by Lying Miracles. No mention of Miracles done by the Bodies or Reliques of Martyrs in the firſt 300 years after Chriſt: Nor was the Mediation of Martyrs believed in the firſt Ages of the Church. That the Gentiles Idolatry of Dæmons was advanced by Lying Miracles, proved out of Euſebius, Tertullian and Chryſoſtom.

BUT now I come to ſhew how this Prediction of our Apoſtle hath been accompliſhed; How ὁπότερις ψευδολόγων, The conſenage and feigning of Liers was the Means whereby the Doctrine of Dæmons was advanced in the Church; I mean the Deifying and worſhipping of Saints and Angels, the adoring and templing of Reliques, the bowing down to Images, the worſhipping of Croſſes as new Idol-columns, the worſhipping of the breaſten God or any other viſible thing whatſoever upon ſuppoſal of any Divinity therein: all which I have proved to be nothing elſe but the Gentiles Idolatrous Theologie of Dæmons revived among Chriſtians.

The firſt of theſe, The Deifying and invoking of Saints and adoring Reliques, is the moſt ancient for time of all the reſt, and began to appear in the Church preſently after the death of Julian the Apoſtate, who was the laſt Ethnical Emperor. The grounds and occaſions whereof were moſt ſtrange reports of Wonders ſhewed upon thoſe who approached the Shrines of Martyrs, and prayed at their Memories and Sepulchres; Devils charmed, Diſeaſes cured, the Blind ſaw, the Lame walked, yea the Dead revived, and other the like: which the Doctōrs of thoſe times for the moſt part avouched to be done by the power and prayers of the glorified Martyrs, and by the notice they took of mens devotions at their Sepulchres; though at the beginning thoſe devotions were directed to God alone, and ſuch places only choſen for the ſtirring up of zeal and fervor by the memory of thoſe bleſſed and glorious Champions of Chriſt. But whiles the world ſtood in admiration, and the moſt eſteemed of theſe Wonders as of the glorious beams of the triumph of Chriſt; they were ſoon perſwaded to call upon them as Patrons and Mediators, whoſe power with God, and notice of things done upon earth, they thought that theſe Signs and Miracles approved.

Thus the Reliques of Martyrs beginning to be eſteemed above the richeſt Jewels, for the ſuppoſed virtue even of the very aire of them, were wonderfully ſought after as ſome divine Elixir ſovereign both to * Body and Soul. Whereupon another Scene of Wonders entred, namely, of Viſions and Revelations, wonderful and admirable, for the diſcovery of the Sepulchres and aſhes of Martyrs which were quite forgotten, yea of ſome whoſe names and memories till then no man had ever heard of; as S. Ambroſe's Gervafius and Protafius. Thus in every corner of the Chriſtian world were new Martyrs bones ever and anon diſcovered, whoſe verity again miraculous effects and cures ſeemed to approve; and therefore were diverſly diſperſed, and gloriously templ'd and enſhrined.

All theſe things hapned in that one Age, and were come to this height in leſs than a 100 years. But here is the wonder moſt of all to be wondred at, That none of theſe miraculous Signs were ever heard of in the Church for the firſt 300 years after Chriſt, until about the year 360, after that the Empire under Conſtantine and his ſons having publickly embraced the Chriſtian Faith, the Church had peace, and the Bodies of the deſpiſed Martyrs, ſuch as could be found, were now beſtowed in moſt magnificent Temples, and there gloriously enſhrined. * A delicate Suburbs of Antioch.
I Acts 11.26.

* Adde, That no such thing could be, so long as they used to pray for Martyrs as well as others of the dead. See Clem. and others.

bylas the Martyr, buried near the Temple in * Daphne, stopped his wind-pipe. I fear, I fear here was some Hypocrisie in this business, and the Devil had some feat to play: the very name of Babylas is enough to breed jealousy, it is an ominous name, the name Babylas: yea and this happened too at Antioch, where Babylas was Bishop and Martyr in the persecution of Decius. Would it not do the Devil good, there to begin his Mystery, where the || Christian name was first given to the followers of Christ? Howsoever this was then far otherwise construed, and a conceit quickly taken, that other Martyrs bones might upon trial be found as terrible to the Devil as those of Babylas; which was no sooner tried, but experience presently verified it with improvement, as you heard before: So that all the world rung so with Wonders done by Martyrs, that even holy men, who at the first suspected, were at length surprised and carried away with the power of delusion.

Besides the silence of all undoubted * Antiquity of any such Sepulchral wonders to have happened in the former Ages, the very manner of speech which the Fathers living in this miraculous age used when they spake of these things, will argue they were then accounted novelties, and not as continued from the Apostles times. Chrysostome, in his Oration contra Gentiles, of the business of Babylas speaks thus; Εἰ τις ἀπιστᾷ τοῖς ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀποστόλων γεγενημένοις, τὰ παρόντα θεωρῶν πανέδωκε ἀναισχυντίας. If any man believes not those things which are said to be done by the Apostles, let him now beholding the present desist from his impudency. Ambros. Epist. ad sororem Marcellinam, relating of a piece of the Speech he made upon the translation of the Bodies of Gervasius and Probasius, and the miracles then shewed, Reparata (saith he) vetusti temporis miracula cernitis, You see the miracles of ancient times (he means the times of Christ and his Apostles) renewed. S. August. Lib. de civ. Dei 22. cap. 8. in a discourse of the Miracles of that time, saith, We made an order to have Bills given out of such Miracles as were done, when we saw the wonders of ancient times renewed in ours: Id namque fieri volumus, cum videremus antiquis similia divinarum signa virtutum etiam nostris temporibus frequentari, & ea non debere multorum notitia deperire.

But, alas! now began the ὑστερον καιρον or Latter times; this was the fatal time, and thus the Christian Apostasie was to be ushered. If they had known this, it would have turned their joyous shoutings and triumphs at these things into mourning. The End which these Signs and Wonders aimed at, and at length brought to pass, should have made them remember that warning which was given the ancient people of God, Deut. 13. If there arise among you a Prophet, or a Dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder; And the sign or wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other Gods and serve them: Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that Prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: For the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether you love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul.

But why should I go any further before I tell you, that even in this also the Idolatry of Saint-worship was a true counterfeit of the Gentiles Idolatry of Demons? Did not Demon-worship enter after the same manner? was it not first insinuated, and at length established, by signs and wonders of the very self-same kind and fashion? Listen what Eusebius will tell us in his fifth book de Preparat. Evangel. chap. 2. (according to the Greek edition of Rob. Stephen) When (saith he) those wicked spirits (as he proved them to be which were worshipped under the names of Demons) saw mankind brought off to a Deifying of the Dead, (he means by erecting Statues, and ordaining Ceremonies and Sacrifices for their memorials) ἐγύθεν ἑφελθοῖ καὶ συνεργοὶ τῇ πλάνῃ παραστὰς, they insinuated themselves, and helped forward their error — καὶ ἵπνεσι τισι τῶν ἑορῶν ἀδὴ ἐπιτιμῇ τῶν κατοικομένων ἀνδρῶν πρὸς τῶν παλαιῶν ἀγίωνται, by certain motions of the Statues which anciently were consecrated to the honour of the deceased; as also ταῖς διαχρησμένῃ φαντασίαις θεραπείαις τε σωματίων, by ostentation of Oracles and cures of diseases, whereby they drave the superstitious headlong, sometimes to take them to be some heavenly Powers and Gods indeed, and sometimes to be τὰς τῶν τεθεοποιημένων Ἡρώων ψυχὰς the souls of their deified worthies — And so (saith he) the earth-neighbouring Demons, which are those Princes of the Air, those Spiritualities of wickedness, and Ringleaders of all evil, were on all hands accounted for great Gods; ἢ τε τῶν πάλαι νεκρῶν μνημὸν τῇ μείζοντι ἡξιώτο θεραπείας, and the memory of the Ancients deceased was thought worthy to be celebrated with a greater service: the features of whose Bodies the Images dedicated in every City seemed to represent; but the Souls of them and those Divine and Incorporeal powers οἱ φαῦλοι δαίμονες καθυπεκρίνοντο διὰ πολλῆς τῆς τερατοποιίας, the wicked Demons counterfeited by working many Miracles.

In which respect διδασκαλίας δαιμονίων, though the Genitive case were taken actively, would signify the Idolatry of Saint-worship, viz. the worship of the dead, which the Devils are wont thus to counterfeit.

Hear Tertullian also speak in his Apology to the Gentiles, cap. 21. in fine. Quærite ergo, si vera est ista Divinitas Christi: si est ea quâ cognita ad bonum quis reformetur, sequitur ut falsa renuntietur; comperta imprimis illâ omni ratione, quæ delitescens sub nominibus & Imaginibus Mortuorum, quibusdam Signis & Miraculis & Oraculis fidem Divinitatis operatur: search therefore whether this Deity of Christ be true (or not.) If it be that by the knowledge whereof a man shall be reformed to good, it follows then that the false be renounced; especially that whole mystery (he means of the Gentiles Idolatry and Demon-worship) being discovered, which under the names and Images of the Dead, through Signs, Miracles and Oracles, obtaineth an opinion of Divinity.

The Apostasy of the latter Times
PART II.

Chrysostome shall conclude, who in his Oration in Judaizantes saith, That the Demons of the Gentiles wrought Miracles for the confirmation of Paganism, καὶ ὁ ἐκεῖνοι πολλὰ πολλάκις διὰ τὸ αὐτῶν τέχνης νοσήματα ἀπῆλθαν, καὶ πρὸς υἰγιαίν τὸ κάμνοντας ἐπα- νήγαγον. τί ἐν, κοινωῆσαι δὲ τὴν ἀσεβείαν διὰ τοῦτο; μὴ γένοιτο. For (saith he) they oftentimes by their skill cured diseases, and restored to health those that were sick: what, should we therefore partake with them in their impiety because of this? God forbid. Then he adds out of Moses, Dent. 13. that which we even now quoted; which had it been as well applied to the Miracles amongst Christians present as it was to those of the Gentiles past, perhaps he that spoke it would have questioned something which he inclined to believe.

CHAP. IV.

That Saint-worship was advanced by Fabulous Legends. This proved from the acknowledged design of the Latine Legends, as also of that Greek Legender Simeon Metaphrastes; particularly his fabulous Narrations concerning Anastasia, s. Barbara, s. Blasius, s. Catharine, s. Margaret, &c.

THE Second Particular I named of ὑπόκρισις ψευδολόγων the Hypocrisie or Feigning of Liers, was Fabulous Legends of the Acts of Saints and Martyrs. This was also another means to advance the Doctrines of Demons. For the true Acts and Stories of the Martyrs being extinguished for the most part by the bloody Edict of Diocletian, they now began to supply again that loss, by collecting such Tales as were then current of them, and adding thereto such Miracles as were fabled of them after death; fashioned all to the best advantage of what they meant to promote in the Church, and was already on foot in the same. Such was that wherewith the good Father Greg. Nazianzen was abused in his Funeral Oration upon Cyprian, and many others of the Greek Church; That Cyprian, even that great Cyprian, who was both Citizen and Bishop of Carthage in the reign of Decius, (for of him Gregory speaketh expressly) being formerly a Conjuror, and falling in love with a Christian Virgin Justina, some say of Antioch, whenas by wooing and ordinary means he could not win her unto his will, he went about to prevail with Magical spells and Conjurations: which the Damocel perceiving, she having recourse to God, fell to work against him with Prayer and Fasting, and in her devotions also besought the Virgin Mary to succour her a Virgin in that jeopardy: By which means Cyprian's Magical enchantments were frustrated, and he convinced thereby, became a Christian. All which * Baronius himself confesses to be a Fable; as well he might, it being unknown both to Pontius his Deacon, who lived with him and wrote his life, and to the Western and African Churches where he lived and died, who knew (and who could know better?) that he was in his Paganism not a Magician, but a Professor of Oratory at Carthage, (far enough from Antioch) and converted by one Cacilius. Nevertheless we have cause to think that this Tale, together with other the like, served not a little for the advancement of the Mystery of Demons in the Eastern Churches; when we see our Adversaries so willing to have that passage (as seems by their often alledging it) of calling upon the blessed Virgin to be authentical, notwithstanding they know (which the Greeks so well could not, he being a Latine Bishop) that the whole Story must needs be a Fable.

A Fable concerning the means of Cyprian's conversion.

* An. 250. Sect. 5.

Of this stamp are the well-known Legends of our Latine Churches, which almost all of them drive principally at this mark; it being also the ordinary conclusion of their Tales, (sure of our English,) That since God hath done thus and thus by this holy Martyr, or sith God hath by such Miracles honoured this Martyr, let us pray unto him, that by his Merits and Intercession we may obtain salvation. Nor is it a late device:

Greg.

The Apostasie of the latter Times
PART II.

This Gregory of Tours died Anno 596.

But I find now the same in the Anrea Legenda of all the following Martyrs, save the first, which is not there, & S. Barbara is but in the Appendix.

Greg. Turonensis above a thousand years ago, in his two Books De Miraculis Martyrum, as his fabulous Narrations ( which yet many of them he refers to others before him ) are excellently well framed for the promotion of Saint-worship ; so in the conclusions of them he plainly confesses that that was his aim, shutting up his first Book thus ; Unde oportet & nos eorum Patrocinia expetere, ut eorum mereamur Suffragiis, vel quod nostris digni non sumus meritis obtinere, eorum possumus Intercessionibus adipisci, &c. It behoves us therefore to desire the Patronage of the Martyrs, that so we may merit through their Suffrages, and by their Intercessions obtain that which we are not worthy of upon the account of our own Merits. His second thus ; Ergo his miraculis Lector intendens intelligat, non aliter nisi Martyrum reliquorumque amicorum Dei adjutoris se posse salvari, &c. And therefore let the Reader, well considering these Miracles, understand that there is no possibility for him to be saved but by the help of Martyrs and other friends of God.

But among the Greeks Simeon Metaphrastes hath a strain beyond us all, who feigns prayers for many of his Martyrs, wherein they desire of God, that whosoever should pray unto him in their names, or have recourse to their Sepulchres when they were glorified, might obtain whatsoever they asked, yea remission of sins it self. Which because it is so singular a Counterfeit of a lying Greek, I shall not do amiss to insert the particulars, together with something about the occasion and time of this device.

In the Martyrdom of Anastasia, a Roman Virgin, under Diocletian, he tells us, if we be so wise as to believe it,

" That at the time of her suffering, she had, as was fit, given thanks unto God, and prayed for the happy account of her Martyrdom, and afterward made suit for those who being sick, should have recourse unto her, ( to wit after death, ) she heard a voice from heaven certifying, that what she had asked was granted her.

Saint Barbara, a Virgin of Heliopolis, martyred under Maximianus, he makes, under the Executioner's hand, to pray in this manner :

And thou, O King, ( God, ) now hear my prayer, That whosoever shall remember thy name, and ( this ) my conflict, no pestilent disease may enter upon his house, nor any other of those evils which may bring damage or troubles to the bodies of men. — She had no sooner spoken, saith he, but a voice was miraculously heard from heaven, calling her and her fellow-Martyr Julian to the heavenly places, and promising also that those things which she had asked should be accomplished.

In Saint Blasius ( who suffered, saith Earonius, under Licinius ) our Simeon tells us,

That when a woman came unto him to cure her son, who had a fish-bone sticking in his throat, he prayed in this manner : Thou, O Saviour, who hast been ready to help those who called upon thee in truth, hear my prayer, and by thy invisible power take out the bone which sticks in this child, and cure him : And whensoever hereafter the like shall befall men, children, or beasts ; if any one then shall remember my name, saying, O Lord, hasten thy help through the intercession of thy servant Blasius, do thou cure him speedily, to the honour and glory of thy holy Name.

Again he tells us, That while they were carrying him before the President, he restored to a poor widow a Hog, her only Hog, which a Wolf had taken away from her. And whenas afterward, in sign of thankfulness, she brought the Hog's head and feet boiled to the Martyr in prison, he blessing her, spake in this manner ; Woman, in this Habit celebrate my Memorial, and no good thing shall ever be wanting in thine house from my God : yea and if any other, imitating thee, shall in like manner celebrate my Memorial, he shall receive an everlasting gift from my God, and a blessing all the days of his life.

When he comes to suffer, he makes him pray to God thus : Hear me thy servant ; and whosoever shall have recourse to this thine Altar, ( he means himself ) and whosoever shall have swallowed a bone or prickle, or be vexed with any disease, or be in affliction or necessity of persecution, Grant, Lord, to every one his heart's desire, as thou art gracious and merciful ; for thou art to be glorified now and evermore.

When he had thus prayed ( saith he ) Christ descended from heaven as a cloud, and overshadowed him : and our Saviour said unto him, O my beloved Champion, I will not only do this, but that also which thou didst request for the widow ; and I will bless also every house which shall celebrate thy Memory, and I will fill their store-houses with all good things, for this thy glorious Confession and thy faith which thou hast in me.

Saint

Saint Catharine, whom he calls Æcatharina, a Martyr of Alexandria under Maximianus, he makes to pray thus at her Martyrdom :

Grant unto those, O Lord, who through me shall call upon thy holy Name, such their requests as are profitable for them ; that in all things thy wondrous works may be praised now and evermore.

But above all the rest, Marina's prayer, whom we Latines call Saint Margaret, is compleat and for the purpose : she suffered under Diocletian, and thus she prayed, if you dare believe Simeon.

And now, O Lord my God, whosoever for thy sake shall worship this Tabernacle of my Body, which hath fought for thee, and whosoever shall build an Oratory in the name of thy handmaid, and shall therein offer unto thee spiritual sacrifices, oblations and prayers, and all those who shall faithfully * describe this my conflict of Martyrdom, and shall read and remember the name of thy handmaid ; Give unto them, most holy Lord, who art a lover of the good and a friend of Souls, remission of sins ; and grant them propitiation and mercy, according to the measure of their faith ; and let not the revenging hand come near them, nor the evil of Famine, nor the curse of Pestilence, nor any grievous scourge ; nor let any other incurable destruction either of Body or Soul betide them. And to all those who shall in faith and truth adhere to my house ( her Oratory or Chappel ) or unto my name, and shall unto thee, O Lord, offer glory and praise and a sacrifice in remembrance of thine Handmaid, and shall ask salvation and mercy through me ; Grant them, O Lord, abundant store of all good things : for thou alone art good and gracious, and the giver of all good things for ever and ever. Amen.

While she was thus * praying with her self ( faith Simeon ) behold there was a great earthquake, &c. yea and the Lord himself, with an host and multitude of holy Angels standing by her, in such sort as was perceptible to the understanding, said, Be of good cheer, Marina, and fear not, for I have heard thy prayers, and have fulfilled, and will in due time fulfill whatsoever thou hast asked, even as thou hast asked it.

Thus faith Simeon ; who nevertheless in the very entrance to this his tale of Marina or Margaret, complains much, forsooth, that not a few of these Narrations of the Acts of Martyrs were at the beginning forged, yea profaned ( as he faith more truly than he was aware of ) evidentissimis Demoniorum doctrinis. Besides, he calls I know not what Narration of this Virgin's Martyrdom, in that sort corrupted, Dictio Demoniacæ : but for his own part, he would reject all counterfeit fables, and tell us nothing but the very truth. Which how honestly he hath performed, and what touchstone he used, let the Reader judge. * Baronius I am sure is quite ashamed of him, who though he can be sometimes content to trade with not much better ware, yet this of Simeon's he supposes will need very much washing and cleansing before it be merchantable.

CHAP. V.

An useful Digression concerning the time when Simeon Metaphrastes lived, and the occasion of his writing. That his living within the time of the great Opposition against Saint-worship moved him to devise such Stories as made for the credit and advantage of that Cause then in danger. A brief historical account ( even out of the Records left by the Adversaries ) of the great Opposition in the Greek and Eastern Churches against worshipping of Images and of Saints : When it began, how long it lasted, and under what Emperors. Of the Great Council held at Constantinople under Constantinus Copronymus against Idolatry. An attempt to foist in two Canons in favour of Saint-worship frustrated. Several Slanders and Calumnies fastened upon the Council and the Emperor by the idolatrous faction. The Original of these Slanders : That they were notorious Lies, proved from the Decrees of the Council.

BUT for the better understanding of this Mystery of iniquity, and what necessity there was of such desperate shifts when time was ; ye shall know that this superstitious Simeon lived towards the end of that time of great and long Opposition against Idolatry in the Greek and Eastern Churches, by divers Emperors with the greatest part of their Bishops, Peers, and People, lasting from about the year of our Lord 720 till after 840, that is a 120 years: which was not against Images only, though they bare the name; but the Worship of Saints and their Reliques: The state whereof it shall not be amiss to represent out of such Records of Antiquity as our Adversaries themselves have been pleased to leave us; if it be but for their sake who so often ask us whether there were ever any of our Religion before Luther. Let us therefore hear what Writers of their own Sect, such as then lived and were eye-witnesses, will tell us.

Leo Isaurus (saith Theophanes, Miscell. lib. 21. cap. 23.) erred not only about the * respective adoration of venerable Images, but about the Intercession of the most chaste Mother of God, and all the Saints, whose Reliques also the most wicked man abominated, like unto his masters the Mahumetans.

This was the first of those Emperors: the next was Constantinus, whom they sur-named Copronymus, of whom the same Author (ibid. c. ult.) speaks as followeth: This pernicious, (saith he) inhumane and barbarous Emperor, abusing his authority tyrannically, and not using it lawfully, at the very beginning made an Apostasie from God and his undefiled Mother and all his Saints.

Again, lib. 22. cap. 42. upon the twenty sixth year of his reign:

— Heshewed himself wicked, beyond the frenzie of the Mahumetans, to all that were Orthodox (so he calls Idolaters,) under his Empire, Bishops, Monks, Lay-men and other his subjects; everywhere, as well by writing as by speech, banishing, as unprofitable, the Intercessions of the holy Virgin and Mother of God and of all the Saints, (through which all succour is conveyed unto us) and causing their holy Reliques to be rejected and despised: And if the Reliques of any notable Saint, sovereign both to body and soul, were known to lie any where, and were, as the manner is, honoured by those which were religious; presently he threatned such as these with death, as wicked doers, or else with proscriptions, banishment, and torture. As for the Reliques acceptable to God, and esteemed by the possessors as a treasure, they were taken from them, from thence forward to be made hateful things.

Again, cap. 48. of the next year:

— If any one getting a fall, or being in pain, chanced to utter the usual language of Christians, saying, O Mother of God, help me; or were found keeping Vigils, &c. he was adjudged as the Emperor's enemy, and styled Immemorabilis, Unworthy of memory: This was a title of infamy.

Again, cap. 54. Anno regni 31.

— If one were found to have a Relique but to keep, (that is, though he worshipped it not,) yet nevertheless did Lichanodraco (the Emperor's President) burn it, and punish him that had it as a wicked doer. Thus far Theophanes.

Hear now what the Author of the Acts of Monk Stephen, whom the same Emperor made one of their Martyrs for patronizing Idols, can tell us: Hear what he saith of the great Council of Constantinople, held in this Emperor's reign against Images.

O Christ, how should I not admire thy lenity! — To that height did those most impudent tongues yet further break out, that they were not afraid to utter that monstrous and impious speech, viz. That the very Virgin-Mother of God her self was now after her death unavailable, and no use to be made of her, nor could she help or protect any one.

The same Author thus deplores the state of those times, abusing the words of Psalm 79.

O God, the heathen are come into thine Inheritance; thy holy Temple have they defiled, and made Hierusalem an heap of stones: The dead Bodies of thy servants have they given to be meat to the fowls of the aire, and the flesh of thy Saints unto the beasts of the earth; that is, (saith he) the venerable and sacred Reliques of the Martyrs, quas partim igni, partim mari, partim denique (ô facinus orbi universo damnum ferens!) præcipitiis tradiderunt; which they cast partly into the fire, partly into the water, and (O villanous act whereby the whole world is damnified!) partly threw down into precipices.

There is nothing yet in these relations will do any man hurt by ingendring a misconception, especially if he remember the tale is told by malicious Adversaries, that counterfeit Reliques were plentiful in those days as well as now, and that Hezekiah brake in pieces the brazen Serpent made by God's own commandment, a holy monument and a type of Christ, when it was once abused to Idolatry.

or lawfulness in ordinary speech to mention such places as were dedicated to the memory of Saints, without the addition of the name Saint. For I find that Stephen the Monk, (afterward forsooth a Martyr) at what time the Emperor sent some of the Bishops and others unto him, to require his subscription to the Decree of the Council, thus expostulates with them; Did ye not (saith he) discard this adjective Saint from all the Just, from all the Apostles, from the Prophets, Martyrs and other godly men? For it was bravely decreed by you, That when any one were going to any of these, and were asked whither he went, he should answer, To the Apostles, To the forty Martyrs; or being asked whence he came, he should in like manner say, From the Temple of the Martyr Theodore, From the Temple of the Martyr George.

But Theosterictus tells the same thing of the Emperor Constantine himself. sanctos Martyres, (saith he) *quantum in ipso erat, honore privavit, cum præceperit non esse illos Sanctos appellandos, sed simpliciter nominari Apostolos, quadraginta Martyres, Theodorum, Georgium, & alios similiter: He deprived, as much as in him lay, the holy Martyrs of honour, in that he commanded they should not be styled Saints, but simply named The Apostles, The forty Martyrs, Theodore, George, &c. Whereby it appears, that this Law (whatsoever it was which these Authors charge the Emperor with) was something that proceeded from the Council it self, as Monk Stephen even now charged them. Besides, that it was something only about the calling of Places dedicated to Saints, though our Authors (as Calumniators use) tell it of Saints at large. Lastly, that it seems to have grown upon some question, how far and in what kind Saints were to be honoured, which was occasioned by the wiping out of those Canons afore-mentioned.*

Joannes Cuiropalata and Cedrenus relate, That Michael Balbus, the last save one of the Emperors that opposed Idols, ἐθέτισε μὴ τινὶ τῶν γεγραμμένων εἰκόνων, καὶ πῶς γεγράφαι τύχοιεν, ἢ [ΑΓΙΟΣ] φωνὴν ἐν χαράττειν, ordained that the word [Saint] should not be set upon any Images wheresoever they were painted. For this was (and as some say * is yet) the fashion of the Greeks, to add the names of the Saints to the Images which are to represent them. Now if any such thing as this were done or discouraged of in the days of Constantinus, whom they call Copronymus, you may easily guess what fuel it might add to the fire of that slander we speak of.

But why should we trouble our selves any longer to find out the Original of that which we are certain was a notorious lie? For it is apparent in the Definition of the Council it self which is thus calumniously charged, that they both give the Title of Saints often to the Apostles, Fathers and others, and of Deipara to the Blessed Virgin. I shall not need to recount every place where they give the Title of Saint to particulars; hear but what they say in general: sancti qui Deo placuerunt, & ab ipso sunt τῷ ἀξιώματι ἡ ἀγιότητι. dignitate sanctitatis honorati, vivunt semper Deo, licet hinc migraverunt; The Saints which pleased God, and are by him honoured with the dignity of Saintship, though they be departed hence, yet to God they always live. Again, Nefas est Christianis, δαίμονολάτρων ἐθνῶν, Daemonum culticum Gentium moribus uti, & Sanctos qui tali & tantâ gratiâ resplendebunt (sc. conregnare cum Christo, & judicare orbem terrarum, & conformes fieri gloria ipsius) in ingloria & mortua materia καθέλκειν contumeliâ afficere; It is unlawful for Christians to use the fashions of the Gentiles which worshipped Demons or Devils, and in a base and liveless matter (they mean Images) to dishonour the Saints, which shall one day shine in such and so great grace and glory, viz. to reign with Christ, and to judge the world, and to be made like to his glory, as they said a little before. Concil. Nicen. 2. Act. 6. Tom. 4.

As for the other part of the Calumny, about styling the Virgin Mary Deipara, hear not only what they practised, but what they expressly decreed (ibid. Tom. 6.) Εἰ τις ἐχ' ὁμολογεῖ Θεὸν εἶναι κατ' ἀλήθειαν ἢ Ἐμμανὴλ, καὶ διὰ τὸ τοῦ Θεοτόκου εἶναι ἢ ἁγίαν παρθέτον — Ἀνάθεμα. If any shall not confess God to be truly Emmanuel, and therefore the holy Virgin to be Deipara the Mother of God — Let him be Anathema. Here the Blessed Virgin hath both the name of Saint (ἁγία) and Θεοτόκος. Mother of God given her. All this you shall find in the sixth Act of the Idolatrous Council of Nice, where the Enemies, whilst they would confute the Definition of the Synod at Constantinople, have preserved it, which else had utterly perished, as the Acts thereof have done.

Now judge whether Constantine and his Council were guilty or not of what the Idolatrous Faction charged them with. But we may wonder the less at this notorious impudency of lying companions, seeing we have experience of the like calumnies fastned upon our selves this day, though there be so many thousand eyes and ears, and writingstoo, which confute them.

AND

AND thus you have seen what manner of Times they were about the end of which our Simeon Metaphrastes lived. Was it not high time, think you, for him and those hands to which he was beholden, (for I will not charge him with all) to ply the old craft, and re-inforce the Legends with new Lies, when the credit of Saint-worship lay thus a bleeding? It is not credible they would be so much wanting to themselves. And it is as apparent that those Tales of the new strain, which we had out of Simeon, were coined in this age, and not before: For if any such thing had been known or delivered from elder times, how came it to pass no notice thereof was given us by any Writer of Ecclesiastical story, by any Father, by any Compiler or forger of Martyrs Lives and Miracles, till now? Certainly so miraculous and wonderful things as Voices from Heaven, and Christ descending thence in a cloud, and the like, had been worth the telling. But, alas! they could tell us but little of these Martyrs, save only the names and time of their suffering. And thus I end my Digression, which yet I hope hath not been altogether impertinent to the present argument.

CHAP. VI.

That Saint-worship was promoted by Counterfeit Writings under the name of Antiquity. That Image-worship and the Idolatry of the Mafs-God were advanced by the Hypocrisy of Liers: This illustrated from several fabulous Narrations. A foul Story made use of by the second Council of Nice in the behalf of Image-worship.

THE last particular of ὑπόκρισις ψευδολόγων, The Hypocrisie of Liers, I made to be Counterfeit Writings under the names of the first and best Antiquity; S. Peter's Liturgy, the Liturgy of S. James, of Matthew, of Mark, The Apostles Council at Antioch; Foisted works under the names of Justin, Origen, Cyprian, Athanasius and others, Through which we need not doubt but the Doctrine of Demons was promoted, when we see some not ashamed still to maintain it by these counterfeit authorities.

Thus you see how the first-born and the most ancient part of the Doctrine of Demons, the Deifying of Saints and Martyrs, was advanced by the Hypocrisie of Liers. The same you shall find to have been verified also in the advancing of the next-born Demon-changling, Image-worship, and of the third, the Idolatry of the Mafs-God; all brought in and established by the means and wayes aforementioned. I need not spend time in historical allegations, they are well enough known; and Primum in unoquoque genere est mensura consequentium; by that I spake of the first, you may judge of those which follow, yet for Images, I will tell you a Story or two for a tale.

Bale our Countrey-man (Script. Illust. Britan. Cent. I. c. 91, 99.) relates that about the year 712 one Egwin of Worcester published in writing certain Revelations, yea express Visions he had seen, wherein he was enjoined to set up in his Diocese of Worcester the Image of the Blessed Virgin for the people to worship; which Pope Constantine the first having made him confirm by oath, not only ratified by his Bull, but caused Brithwald the Arch-bishop to hold a Council of the whole Clergy at London to commend them to the people.

In that Idolatrous Council of the second of Nice, one of their proofs, among many other the like, for worshipping of Images, is a tale (quoted out of I know not what Sophronius) of a certain Recluse, who using to worship an Image of the Virgin Mary holding Christ in her arms, had been a long time tempted by the Devil to fornication; whereat on a time the old man being much aggrieved, the Devil visibly appearing told him in plain terms (but under an oath of secrecy) that he would never cease to vex him, until he left worshipping the Image of the Blessed Virgin. The Monk, notwithstanding the Devil had made him swear by the most High he should tell no body, yet acquaints one Abbot Theodore with the business; who not only allows of his perjury in revealing it, but gives him this ghostly resolution, Συμφέρι δέ σοι μὴ καταλιπεῖν εἰς τὴν πόλιν ταύτῃ πορνείον εἰς ὃ μὴ εἰσέλθῃς, ἢ ἵνα ἀρτήσῃ τὸ προσκυθεῖν τῷ Κύριον ἢ μηδὲ τῷ Θεῷ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν μετὰ τῇ ἰδίᾳ αὐτῆς μητρὶς ἐν εἰκόνι. It were better he frequented all the Stews in the City, than not to worship Christ and his Mother in an Image. I am afraid some of this Monk's successors still observe this wholesome counsel.

Act. 4.

I must

The Apostasie of the latter Times

I must tell you also some of the Miracles and Lies for laying the foundation of Transubstantiation, and thence advancing the Idol of the Mass. "A certain Monk reports that he saw Jesus Christ in form of a Child sitting upon the Altar. Another faith, yea more than that one, That Witkind King of the Saxons entring disguised into a Church, and diligently observing the Christians fashion of receiving the Communion, saw them put a little pretty smiling boy into their mouths. These wonders and other the like of apparitions of flesh and blond began not till about the end of the eight-hundredth year. But that they might seem ancients, Simeon Metaphrastes hath a forged Legend of Arsenius the Eremitic; and some body counterfeited the life of S. Basil, under the name of Amphilochius his companion, which now they begin to be ashamed of. And for fear the people might suspect that these were Illusions, they keep yet some of the flesh and blond which was thus transubstantiated, for a monument, in many Churches. To these apparitions, to make all compleat, they tell us of "a hive of Bees seen in Saint Gervais his Monastery in Paris, which built a Chappel of Wax in honour of the Host, which some body put into their hive; and a miracle of an Ass that left his provender to worship the Host; and many other the like. But I have stayed too long amongst them, and therefore let here be the conclusion of ὑπέκλεισις ψευδολόγων, the hypocrisie of Liers, that we may pass on to that is yet behind.

Εἰ ὑπεκλείσει κωλύοντων γαμεῖν, * ἀπέχεσθαι βρωμάτων, &c.

CHAP. VII.

• Vide Opus Hierarchicum seu Cosmam Megalianum in Timoth. ubi ex Homero σίτρον καὶ οἶνον ἐδόντες Odyss. ὁ οἶνός τε πινόμενον Καὶ σίτρον— Vid. etiam Oecumen. in Timoth. Concil. Eliberitane. 33. Placuit in totum prohibere Episc. Presb. Diaconibus & Subdiaconibus—abstinere se a conjugibus suis, &c.

That by these two Characters [Forbidding marriage and commanding to abstain from meats] are chiefly decyphered Monks and Friars. That Prohibition of Marriage and Abstaining from meats are inseparable characters of Monastick profession. That the Renouncing of possessions or the having no propriety in any thing (another Principle in Monckery) may be included under the Abstaining from meats. That the word βρώματα (translated Meats) implies all things needful for maintenance of life, proved from several places of Scripture.

I Come now unto the last particular of the Description of the Means whereby the Doctrine of Dæmons was to be advanced, viz. Through the Hypocrisie of such as forbid marriage, and command to abstain from meats. Who are these? The wonderful correspondence of the Event makes me verily believe that the Holy Ghost intended here (at least chiefly) to decypher unto us Monks and Doctors of Monckery, by two such marks as are the chief points and grounds of that Singularity of life. For Prohibition of marriage and Difference of meats are inseparable Characters of Monastick profession, and therefore common to all that crew of Hypocrites, whether Solivagant Eremites, or Anchorites which live alone, or Cenobites which live in Society. And if we take them joyned together, as our Apostle doth, I think they can besit no other kind of men by way of Rule and Precept but these alone. 'Tis true, all Antichrist's Priests are forbidden marriage generally and absolutely; but meats they are not, but only upon certain daies and times: which is not their case alone, but the people also partake with them in the like restraint. But Monks are bound by the vowed Rule of their profession to abstain from both absolutely and perpetually. Concerning the first hear S. Chrysostome speak (Hom. 7. in Matth.) Nobis & Monachis (saith he) omnia mandata Legis sunt communia πλὴν τὸ γάμον All the Commandments of God's Law are common to us with Monks, besides Marriage. Wherefore in the Council of Chalcedon is an expresse Canon, cap. 16. Ut nec Deo dicata Virgo nec Monachus nubant, That no Nun or Monk should marry, (i. e.) they might not forsake their profession.

For the second, the Abstaining from meats, S. Bennet can tell us best, who is the Father and founder of well-nigh all the Monks of the West, His Rule, which they all bind themselves to observe, saith, A carnibus omnes abstineant, Let all abstain from flesh. Again, Carnium etiam quadrupedum omnino ab omnibus abstineatur comestio, Let all abstain altogether from the eating of flesh even of four-footed beasts. Hence is that that Decree of Bishop Fructuosus in Gratian, Dist. 5. Carnem cuiquam Monacho nec gustandi nec sumendi est concessa licentia, No Monk hath leave granted him to take or so much as to taste a piece of flesh. And these were the two principal observations of the first Monks, before they came to be gathered into a Society of a common life, under certain set Rules. Paulus Thebaeus, the first pattern of this kind of life, abstained (as from Marriage, whereof there is no question, so) from all meats save bread and dates. Anthony the next ate nought but bread and salt, and both drank no other drink but water. Epiphanius in his Anchorato tells us of differing observations in this kind: Some ate no flesh, but fish; some neither of both, but only fruits and herbs some ate flying creatures, but abstained from all besides.

The Apostolic of the latter Times
PART II.

But if you will take Meats in this place in a larger sense, you shall have a full Definition of Monks, and take in that other Monastical principle of Renouncing possessions, and having no propriety in any thing, which they account the second fundamental principle, next to the Vow of chastity or single life. Now may not ἑσώματα, Meats, be expounded in this sense? We know the word [Bread] in Scripture signifies all things needful for maintenance of life, omnia vitæ subsidia; and therefore we ask them all in the Lord's prayer under that name, Give us this day our daily bread. Mark the words of David to Ziba, 2 Sam. 9. 10, Thou and thy Sons and thy Servants shall till the land for him, (Mephiboseth,) and thou shalt bring in the fruits, that thy Master's son may have חֶלֶק Food to eat. Here Bread or Food is taken for Mephiboseth's whole maintenance, the whole profit of the Lands which Ziba tills. Matth. 10. 9, 10, Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses, Nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, nor shoes, nor yet staves; for the workman is worthy of his meat. Here gold, silver, brass, clothes and staves and all come under τροφὴν, that is, meat. In stead whereof S. Luke chap. 10. vers. 7. putteth τὸ μισθὸν αὐτοῦ, his hire. Prov. 30. 8. Agur saith, Give me neither poverty nor riches: Feed me with Food convenient for me, יִקַּח חֶלֶק. By all which appears, that Food and Meat in Scripture is often taken for τὰ ἐπιτήδεια τῆς σωματικῆς, as S. James speaks (chap. 2. vers. 16.) for all provision of things for the use of the body and this life; maintenance, revenue, estate, possession. Why may not then Abstaining from meats in this Prophecie mean or include Abstaining from possessions, Votum paupertatis the Vow of Poverty and renouncing of the world, as the Hypocrites call it? to which the following words [eis μεταλήψιν] are every way as pliable as to the stricter sense, and may be read thus, [which God hath created to be enjoyed with thanksgiving of them which, &c.] Let us hear S. Bennet's Rule speak for all. Nemo aliquid proprium habeat, nullam omnino rem, neque codicem, neque tabulas, neque graphiarium, sed nihil omnino: Let no man have any thing proper or as his own, no kind of thing, neither book, nor writing, nor Inkhorn, nor any thing at all. And those who had once imposed upon themselves this law, were prohibited for ever to return to the world again. Monachis non licere ad seculum redire, saith the Canon of a great Council. Hear a Story out of S. Hierom, Epist. ad Eustochium. A certain Monk being dead, was found to have been so good a Husband as to have had lying by him an hundred solidi, which he had gotten by weaving of linen; hereupon great doubt there was what it should be done withal, whether given to the poor, to the Church, or to what use. But Pambo, Isidorus, and the other Fathers (of the Monks) laying their heads together, decreed it should be buried with him, with this blessing, Pecunia tua sit tecum in perditionem, Thy money perish together with thee. The like sentence gave Gregory the Great against Iustus a Monk for the like fault, Dial. l. 4. c. 35.

I conclude therefore, That these words are a Description of Monks by such notes as are fundamental, which way soever we take them; either containing Single life and Discrimen ciborum the Differencing meats; or the two Vows of Chastity and Poverty; or all three of them, Chastity, Poverty, and Abstaining from meats. As for that other Vow of Obedience, it was not from the beginning, nor common to all; not to Eremites and Anchorites, but such as lived in common under an Head. And these are the men through whose Hypocrisie and by whose means the Doctrine of Demons should be brought in and advanced among Christians in the Latter times.

C H A P. VIII.

That Monastick life and Saint-worship began much about the same time. That Monks and Friers ( chiefly intended in the Text by the κωλύοντες γαρμειν, &c. ) were the main authors and advancers of Saint-worship, proved from the Testimonies of Chemnitius, S. Austine, Gregory of Tours, as also Eunapius a Gentile Writer. That Monks and Friers were the Ringleaders and chief advancers of Image-worship, appears in that ( during the Iconomachicall Controversie in the East ) the greatest part of the storm fell upon those of the Monastick profession. That the Idolatry of the Mals-God was promoted by the same persons.

NOW let us see and behold with admiration the truth of this part also of this Prophecie. Where first observe that this singular kind of life began even just at the time when the Doctrine of Demons was to enter. For Paulus Thebeus and Anthony, the first patterns thereof, died, the former in the reign of Constantine, the latter a little before the year 360, whence, or near unto which, we began our reckoning before of the first entrance of Saint-worship into the Church. About that time Monks till then having been confined to Aegypt, Hilarion brought them into Syria, and presently S. Basil gave them a certain rule to live together in form of a Polity, and with the assistance of his brother Gregory Nyssen and Gregory Nazianzen ( who all entred this new kind of life ) dispersed them over all Asia and Greece: whose encrease was so wonderful, that almost in an instant they filled the World; and their esteem was so great, that there was scarce a man of note but took upon him this kind of life.

Though therefore it be most true that our Apostle's prophecie will be verified, which soever of the two, either such as themselves entred the Restraint of a Monastick life, or those who approved, taught and maintained the holiness of that Profession, ( as the rest did ) were the Ringleaders and Foster-fathers of this Defection; ( for both come within the verge of such as forbid marriage and command to abstain from meats ) yet we will not content our selves with so loose an application, but see what an hand Monks and Friers themselves ( chiefly I suppose intended by the Holy Ghost ) had in this business.

And first in the first Doctrine of Demons, Adoring of Reliques and Invocation of Saints: Where that which I first speak of shall be in the words of Chemnitius, lest some more tender of the honour of our Fathers upon earth, than of the glory of our Father in heaven, might take exception. Hear therefore not me, but Chemnitius in his Examen Concilii Tridentini: About the year of our Lord 370, per Basilium, Nyssenum & Nazianzenum, in publicos Ecclesie conventus, occasione orationum Panegyricarum ( Invocatio Sanctorum ) inveni inceptit, eodem tempore cum ab iisdem authoribus Monachatus ex Agypto & Syria in Graciam introduceretur. Et videtur ( saith he ) hac sive portio, sive Appendix Monachatus fuisse. By Basil, Nyssen and Nazianzen, upon occasion of Panegyricall orations, Invocation of Saints began to be brought into the publick Assemblies of the Church, at the same time when by the same Authors the Profession of Monastical life was brought out of Agypt and Syria into Greece: and it seems ( saith he ) that this was either a part, or an appurtenance of Monckery, &c. Again, speaking of S. Ambrose when he had once turned Monk, howsoever he was before, Non tamen nego ( inquit ) Ambrosium tandem cum Monachatum à Basilio nutu sumpsisset, etiam ad Invocationem Sanctorum inclinare cepisse, ut patet ex libro De viduis: I deny not ( saith he ) but Ambrose at length, when he had once borrowed Monckery from Basil, began also to incline to the Invocation of Saints, as appears in his book De viduis. Thus Chemnitius.

And that you may yet further see how operative Monks were in this business, hear S. Augustine De opere Monachorum, cap. 28. Tam multos hypocritas sub habitu Monachorum usquequaque dispersit ( Satan, ) circumvenientes provincias, nusquam missos, nusquam fixos, nusquam stantes, nusquam sedentes. Alii membra Martyrum ( si tamen Martyrum ) venditant— & omnes petunt, omnes exigunt aut sumptus lucrosæ egestatis, aut simulatæ pretium sanctitatis: The Devil ( saith he ) hath dispersed in every corner such a crew of Hypocrites under the habit of Monks, gadding about every Countrey, sent no whither, staying no where, every where restless, whether sitting or standing: Some sell the limbs of Martyrs, (if so be of Martyrs;) and all are asking, all exacting either the expences of a gainful poverty, or the hire of a counterfeit sanctity. These were those surely which occasioned that Rescript of Theodosius the Emperor, Nemo Martyrem distrahat, nemo mercetur, Let no man sell, let no man buy a Martyr: whereby we may gather what honesty was like to be used amongst them. We know,

Merchants use to commend their commodities. Gregory of Tours, who lived and died somewhat before the year 600, tells us this, Monachos quosdam Romam venisse, ac prope Templum Pauli corpora quaedam noctu effodisse; qui comprehensi fassi sunt in Graciam se ea pro sanctorum reliquiis portaturos fuisse: That certain Monks came to Rome, and near unto S. Paul's Church in the night-time digged up certain bodies; who being apprehended, confessed they meant to have carried them into Greece for Reliques of Saints. The same Author, l. 9. c. 6. Hist. Franc. relates a Story of another counterfeit, a Monk, who pretended to come out of Spain with Martyrs Reliques; but being discovered, they were found to be Roots of certain Herbs, Bones of Mice, and such like stuffe: and he tells us there were many such seducers which deluded the people. And he said true, there were many indeed, and many more than Gregory took for such, even those he took for honest men. For though it must not be denied but God had some of this Order which were holy men and unfeignedly mortified, notwithstanding their errour in thinking God was pleased with that singularity of life; yet must it be confessed that the greater part were no better than Hypocrites and Counterfeits, and that the lamentable Defection of the Christian Church chiefly proceeded from and was fostered by men of that profession, as in part we have heard already.

And if you can with patience hear him speak, I will add the testimony of Eusebius Sardinianus, a Pagan Writer, who lived in the dayes of Theodosius the first, about the year 400. In the life of Aedesius, most bitterly inveighing against the Christians for demolishing that renowned Temple of Serapis at Alexandria in Egypt, he speaks in this manner: When they had done, (saith he) they brought into the holy Places τὰς καλεούμενους Μοναχούς those which they call Monks; Men indeed for shape, but living like Swine, and openly committing innumerable villanies not to be named; who yet took it for a piece of Religion thus to despise the Divinity (he means of Serapis:) For then (saith he) whosoever wore a black coat, and would demean himself absurdly in publick, got a tyrannical authority: To such an opinion of vertue had that sort of men attained. These Monks also they placed at Canopus, in stead of the intelligible Gods, to worship Slaves and those of no good conditions; thus bringing a bond of Religion upon men. For having powdered the bones and skulls of such as had been condemned of many crimes, and punished by a legal course of Justice, they made Gods of them, prostrating themselves unto them, and thinking themselves the better for being polluted with Sepulchres: They called them forsooth Martyrs, and some Deacons, yea and Solicitors of their prayers with the Gods; being indeed but perfidious Slaves, who had been well basted with the whip, and carried the scars of their lewdness upon their bodies: and yet such Gods as these the Earth brings forth.

Thus the wretched caitiff and damned dog blasphemes the Saints and Servants of Christ, who loved not their lives unto death, the dust of whose feet he was not worthy to lick up. Yet may we make a shift to gather hence what manner of offices Monks were then busied in. And if Baronius took leave to use his testimony for the antiquity of Saint-worship, why may not I with the like liberty alledge it, to shew that Monks and Friers were Ringleaders therein?

BUT when the Idolatry of Image-worship came to be added to that of Saints, whether Monks and Friers were not the chief sticklers therein, judge, when you shall hear how it fared with them in that great Opposition against Idols in the East.

Of Leo Isaurus, the first of those Emperors that opposed Images, we have this in general out of the Greek Menology; That he raged most cruelly against Bishops and Monks which maintained the worship of Images; and that he burnt a whole Cloister of such kind of people in their Monastery, together with a famous Library, and all their furniture.

But Constantine his son made a worse fray amongst them. For the Author of the Acts of Monk Stephen tells us, That he being reprov'd and convicted for what he had had done (viz. against Images) by the religious and worthy professors of Monastical life, he raised an implacable war against them, calling that noble Habit σκιτία; ἡνδύμα the vesture of darkness, and the Monks themselves ἀμνημονεύτους, that is, unworthy of memory, and besides terming them all Idolaters for the worshipping of venerable Images.

The same is confirmed by Theosterictus, another Author of that time, who saith, That the whole aim and study of this Emperor was to extinguish and root out the Order of Monks.

And for particulars, hear what Theophanes (himself a Monk, and a little singed too in this flame, before it ended) will inform us.

In the one and twentieth year of his reign he caused (saith he) Andreas Calybites, a worthy Monk, who reproved him for his impiety, (in demolishing Images) to be scourged till he died. Lib. 22. cap. 30. Hist. miscell.

In the five and twentieth year of his reign he caused Monk Stephen to be dragged by the heels in the streets, till being rent in pieces, he died; both for the aforesaid offence, and because he drew and persuaded many to a Monastical life. Ibid. cap. 39.

The same year the Emperor (saith he) disgraced and dishonoured the Monastical Habit, publickly commanding every Monk to lead a woman by the hand, and so to march through the Hippodrome, all the people abusing them and spitting upon them. Ibid. cap. 40.

In the seven and twentieth year (saith he) the Monasteries partly he destroyed to the very foundations, partly bestowed them upon his Captains and Souldiers. Ibid. cap. 49.

In the same year; when he could not draw Peter a Metra, a famous Stylite or Pillar-Monk, unto his opinions, he caused him likewise to be dragged by the heels, and his body cast out into the streets. Ibid. cap. 48.

In his thirtieth year, his Prætor or Deputy Lichanodraco gathered all the Monks in his Jurisdiction together, and commanded them to obey the Emperour, to put on a white coat, and to marry wives instantly, or to have their eyes put out, and be sent into exile. Ibid. cap. 52. So the Emperour, when he would have Constantine the Patriarch abjure Monckery, he made him (saith the same Author) eat flesh. Lib. eod. cap. 29.

In the one and thirtieth year the same Lichanodraco sold all the Monasteries both of men and women in his Jurisdiction, and sent the money to the Emperour. If he found any one to have a Relique of any Saint in keeping, he burnt it, and punished him that had it. He slew the Monks, some with stripes, some with the sword; and left not a man, where he had to do, that wore a Monastical Habit: whereupon the Emperour wrote thus unto him, Ὅτι εὗρον σε ἄνδρα κατὰ τὴν καρδίαν μου, ὅς ποιεῖς πάντα τὰ θελήματά μου, I have found thee a man after mine own heart, who fulfillest my whole will. Thus much of Constantine.

The like reports Cedrenus of Michael Balbus, that he abominated Monks and diversly afflicted them, ordaining one punishment after another against them. As also of Theophilus the last Emperor that opposed Images: Theophilus (saith he) ordained ἀβάτους τηρεῖν τὰς πόλεις τοῖς μοναχοῖς, that no Monks should have access unto the Cities, and that they should by all means be banished; μᾶλλον ἢ μηδὲ κατὰ χώραν ὀρεῖσθαι τολμαῖν, and not so much as dare to be seen in the Countrey: and that he caused the Monasteries and places of holy retirement to become common and secular habitations. What the reason was, we may learn by that the same Author tells us: Of those (saith he) which reprehended the Emperor, the Abramite Monks were the chief; who freely adventuring into his presence, did demonstrate That Monastical life was not an invention of yesterday or the other day, but an ancient and primitive institution; and That holy Images were familiar in the Apostles times, and that S. Luke painted an Image of the Blessed Virgin, &c. But it seems the Emperor was not convinced by their demonstrations; for this their boldness cost them full dear, as our Author relates.

By this time I know you understand what the matter was that this Image-storm fell so heavily upon the heads of Monks and Friars; and yet notwithstanding all this, they at length prevailed, and carried the day (so God would have it) for their Idols. For another Theophanes, whom they call the Presbyter, a Writer also of his time, tells, That Theophilus being dead, Theodora the Empress, (whilst she reigned in the minority of Michael her son) when she meant to restore Image-worship which had been banished now the second time, ever since Leo Armenius, Re cum illis communicatâ qui erant in magistratu & dignitate constituti, accersit cum ipsis eos qui

For the Idolatry of the Mass-God, which was not in use, at the soonest, till a thousand years after Christ, (when the opinion of Transubstantiation had gotten sufficient strength,) we shall not need trouble our selves much to shew that Monks and Friars were the Authors and Advancers thereof, since by that time these kind of men were become the only Masters of Divinity; and therefore we need not doubt but what was then broached in the Church came out of their shops. Judge now, by what you have heard, how truly this Prophecie of S. Paul is fulfilled, who told us That the Doctrines of Demons should be brought into the Church Ἐν ὑποκρίσει κωλυόντων γαμεῖν, καὶ ἀπέχεσθαι βρωμάτων, Through the hypocrisie of those who forbid to marry, and command to abstain from meats.

DANIEL'S WEEKS.

DANIEL 9. 24, &c.

THE WEEKS of Daniel are a Divine Chronology of the Time which the Sanctuary, with the Legal Service, should continue, when it should be restored after the Captivity of Babylon. During which time also the City of Jerusalem it self should be reinhabited, and the walls thereof re-built; and some LXII Weeks after that began to be, should Messiah the Redeemer be anointed, yea and cut off and rejected of his own: For which, when the whole Lxx Weeks (the time allotted) should expire, their Sanctuary and City should again be raised, and their Commonwealth utterly dissolved.

VERSE 24.

Seventy Weeks are allotted for thy people, and for thy Holy City, to finish transgression, and make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to fulfil Vision and Prophecy, and to anoint the MOST HOLY.

Seventy Weeks are determined or allotted ] That is, The Holy City shall again be restored, and Lxx weeks of years are allotted and limited for the continuance thereof, and thy people with it: and that for this end, that during the standing thereof, the Messiah, according to Vision and Prophecy, may come to expiate sin, and be anointed in his Kingdom.

The word נִתְּנָה, here translated determined or allotted, signifies properly to be cut or cut out, and so may seem to imply such a sense, as if the Angel had said to Daniel, Howsoever your Bondage and Captivity under the Gentiles shall not altogether cease, until that succession of Kingdoms which I before shewed thee be quite finished; yet shall God, for the accomplishing his Promise concerning the Messiah, as it were cut out of that long Term a certain limited Time, during which the Captivity of Judah and Jerusalem being interrupted, the Holy City and Commonwealth in some measure shall again be restored, and so continue till Lxx Weeks of years be finished.

Here I distinguish the beginning of the Times of the Holy City from the beginning of Jerusalem. For the Holy City is so called of the Temple as the principal part; and therefore the Time of the restitution thereof to be reckoned from the Time the Temple was builded: But by Jerusalem is understood (as appears in the next verse) the external buildings and walls of the City, which were not restored till some time after the Temple and Sanctuary was finished.

As for the impletion, all are now agreed, that the Beginning of these Weeks is to be reckoned from some Restoring either of the Temple, and that in the second, third, or sixth year of the Reign of some Darius; or of the City, in the seventh or twentieth year of some Artaxerxes, Kings of Persia. But it cannot be from Darius the First surnamed Hystaspis; for then they would come out long before the Birth of Christ. Nor from the First Artaxerxes surnamed Longimanus; for he was an hinderer of the work of the Temple, and forbade the building thereof, Ezra c. 4. à vers. 11. ad finem. Nor from the second Artaxerxes surnamed Mnemon; for so they would far over-reach the Destruction of Jerusalem. Therefore it remains that they be counted from Darius the Second surnamed Nothus; in the second year of whose reign the work of the Temple, after a long interruption, began to revive, Ezra 4. v. 24. Hag. c. 1, & 2. Zach. c. 1, &c. and in the sixth year of his reign was finished, Ezra 6. ver. 15.

Secondly, These Lxx Weeks are the Time allotted for the continuance of the Holy City, and therefore must they last as long as it lasted, and end with the end thereof.

O o o 3

But

But this cannot be, unless we fix their Epocha in the beginning of Darius Nothus.
Ergo.

Which in the event is most true. For from the third year of Darius Nothus, when the work of the Temple (by the incitement of Haggai and Zachary renewed the year before) was now confirmed by a new Edict from the King to be finished, unto the Destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, are exactly 490 years, that is, Lxx Weeks of years fully compleat.

In this third year of the King, and at the end of this Olympiadical year, in the beginning of August ( as may be supposed ) came forth the Edict of Darius, some ten months after Zorobabel and Joshua had begun to renew the work the year before, Hag. 1. 14, 15. And so much time ( half thereof being Winter ) may well be allowed for their enemies to hear of the work, to go see and do their best to hinder it; when they could not, to write and send unto the King, the searching of the Rolls, and obtaining a new Edict.

Notwithstanding all this, I had rather begin the Account from the sixth year of Darius, in the Month Adar, when the Temple was quite finished, ( for then it first began )
 The Temple was now finished in 4 years; which argues it was well forwarded before, and much I suppose in the days of liberty under Darius Hyaspis: For I take him to be that Darius mentioned Ezra 4. 5. and never to have hindered the building, but permitted the Jews to go on as their poverty would suffer them, which was but slowly.

began began to continue, and not till then, ) although the Destruction of Jerusalem will then fall out three years and an half sooner, namely, when the last week is but half run out. And what if it do? The Angel as I conceive, tells us so much in the last verse, when he says, That in the midst of a Week the Sacrifice and Oblation should cease, and the City be made desolate. But how will the Prophecy be made good, if the Seventieth Week be not compleat? I answer, it should be observed (though it useth not to be) that the Angel reckons not by single years, but by Weeks. If he had said, there should be 490 years to the Excidium of Jerusalem; then indeed to make good the prediction, the City and Sanctuary must have been destroyed the last year. But when he says, there shall be Lxx Weeks allotted for the continuance of the Holy City, it is enough if it be made desolate in the seventieth week. For if those who reckon by years, when the year designed answers the Event, will not stand upon the compleatness of months and days; nor those who reckon any thing by days, upon the compleatness of hours and minutes: no more in the Angel's reckoning here by weeks, if so the number of the weeks be compleat, are the parts of a week to be exacted.

VERSE 25.

Also know and understand, that from the going forth of the Commandment to cause to Return and to Build Jerusalem, unto MESSIAH the PRINCE, shall be Sevens of Weeks; even threescore and two Weeks the Street shall be built again and the Wall, even in a streight of times.

FROM the going out of the Commandment ] I take not this Epocha to be that of the whole Lxx Weeks, but a second Root of another and lesser period of time comprehended in them; whose beginning was to be after the Lxx were begun. and and the end before they should be ended. The Root of this second Computation is described to be a time when two things should be done : A Commandment should go forth both to cause to Return and also to Build, not the Temple, ( for that should be done before ) nor some few houses only, but the whole Area or Street, and the Walls of Jerusalem, which should then be re-edified, though in a streight of Times ; that is, it should be such a time, when a Commission to cause the people to return and re-inhabite should be seconded with another, to build the Wall of Jerusalem, and the Plot within the Wall. For by חֵירוֹ here I understand properly that Circuit bounding out the limits of the City, whereon the Wall was builded, and anciently used to be marked out with a Plough earing a furrow round about. By רָחוֹב, which implies a broad place, I understand the Area or Plot of ground within, whereon the houses were to be builded. From such an Epocha, and a Commission thus characterized as ye have heard, must this second Computation be reckoned.

Unto MESSIAH the PRINCE ] That is, unto Χριστὸς Βασιλεὺς, Luke 23. 2. Mark 15. 32. or Χριστὸς Κύριος, as the Angel styles him Luke 2. 11. There is no exposition, no interpretation of any passage in this Prophecy could seem so harsh, but I would be content to admit it, rather than yield that by MESSIAH the PRINCE here named should be meant any other than CHRIST our LORD and Redeemer. For I am perswaded that the Church of Israel in the Gospel ( and from them the Apostles took it ) had no other place of Scripture, whence they did or could ascribe the Name of Christ and Messiah unto him they looked for, but only from this of Daniel: For there is no other Prophecy in all the Old Testament besides this where that Name is directly given him, but only by way of Type.

Shall be Sevens of weeks ; even LXII weeks. ] The numeral word שבעה I have here translated distributively, understanding by שבעה שבועות Hebdomada septena, that is, many seven Weeks, or, as our English handsomely expresth, Sevens of Weeks : the sense to be as if the Angel had said, As the whole time limited for the continuance of the Holy City from the first beginning to the last ending consisteth of many Sevens of Weeks, viz. LXX Weeks: so from this after-Epocha here mentioned unto MESSIAH should be likewise Sevens of Weeks, ( plures septenniorum hebdomades ) even Sixty two Weeks of years. For as in LXX are ten Sevens of Weeks, so in LXII are nine times seven wanting one ; and that little want makes no matter, there being eight whole sevens besides in that number, and you shall see in that which follows examples of the like. The Hebrews want those numbers which the Grammarians call Distributive or Divisive, Terni, quaterni, quini, seni, septeni, &c. which they most-what supply by repetition, as שבעה שבעה septem septem, but not always ; as may appear, 2 Sam. 18. 4. And all the people came out למאות ואלפים ad centum & milia, i. centeni & mileni, by hundreds and by thousands. 1 Kings 18. 4. Obadiah bid the Prophets of the LORD איש במערה quingenta viros in spelunca, id est, quingagenos, by fifty in a Cave. Gen. 6. 19. Of all flesh thou shalt bring into the Ark שנים שנים duo, i. e. bina, Twos ; and therefore afterward Chap. 7. verse 9. it is doubled שנים שנים two and two : yet of clean Beasts, whereof he was to take seven, there is an odd one. To these I add Ezra 1. v. 9, &c. This is the number of the vessels, ( to wit, of the House of the LORD which Cyrus by the hand of Mithredath numbred unto Sheshbazzar Prince of Judah ) thirty Chargers of gold, a thousand Chargers of silver, twenty nine knives, thirty Basins of gold, silver Basins of a second sort four hundred and ten, and other vessels ארף ( not mille, a thousand, but millena, Tremell. per millia ) Thousands, to wit, almost three thousand wanting but one hundred. Otherwise if we translate it as a Cardinal number [ a thousand ] the Summe will far exceed the Parts. For it follows in the next words, All the Vessels of gold and silver were 5400. But unless the last number be taken divisive, the particulars * make but 2500 wanting one. Nor do I see

- 30 how this difficulty would otherwise be solved.
 29 Now whether these examples be sufficient to make probable the Translation which 30 I have given, I will not affirm ; let others judge : I propound it to the consideration
 410 of the learned who can do it, without whose approbation I shall not satisfy my self.
 1000 Yet thus much I am sure of ; that if this שבעה שבועות, which we are wont to translate seven weeks, could be well bestowed, the chiefest difficulty were taken from 2499 this Prophecy. For the Threescore and two Weeks alone counted from the Epocha here named, so well befits the distance from thence to CHRIST, that the Event seemeth to argue that they should be there fixed, and not reckoned from any other Beginning.

Moreover that שבעה שבועה should be a general expression of what in the LXII Weeks is after more particularly determined, may seem probable for these reasons.

1. Because the Angel ascribes no proper Event unto them; but having presently named the LXII Weeks, makes no farther reckoning of those other, but follows and dwells upon these only, as though the other were implied and contained in them.

2. Those who count them for XLIX years, and continue the LXII Weeks from the end of them to make up LXIX Weeks in all, can give no sufficient reason why they should be thus separated and divided asunder. For that which the followers of Funccius (who reckon from Artaxerxes Longimanus) assign to be done in seven Weeks of years (to wit, that during all that time Jerusalem with the rest of the Cities of Judah were building and repairing) is grounded neither upon Scripture nor other Story, but pure and mere conjecture. Scaliger finds (Nehem. Chap. 13. ver. 6.) that Nehemiah returned again to Artaxerxes his Court in the 32 year of his reign, and thence supposeth that the Building of the City, about which he was sent, was finished but the year before, and that to be the determination of those seven Weeks; there being then 49 years expired from the time the Lxx began at the Building of the Temple under Darius Nothus. But to make this good, he is fain to raise the Epocha of the Lxx so high in the reign of Darius, that they end before the destruction of Jerusalem. Besides, he seems not to be aware that these seven Weeks are by the Text to be counted from a time when a Commission came out to cause to return and to build Jerusalem, and not from the time of building the Temple. Nor does it follow, Nehemiah staid so long there, therefore the City was till then in building: Nay, what if the Text, rightly construed, imports not that Nehemiah in the 32 year of Artaxerxes returned to the Court, but rather, that obtaining new leave of the King, he came then to Jerusalem the second time, whence he had been long absent? For the particle כִּי (Chap. 13. ver. 6.) seems not to be taken rationally for [Quia,] but discretively for כִּי אֵם, id est, [Sed, Eut] as Ezra 4. 3. 2 Sam. 16. 18. Gen. 45. 8. and so that Text of Nehemiah to be read after this sense, And in all this time (saith he) I was not there; But in the 32 year of Artaxerxes, &c. I came to the King, that is, into his presence, to ask new leave; which after a little waiting he obtained. Nor is it very credible that the time he first set the King, Chap. 2. ver. 6. should be twelve years.

If therefore שבעה שבועים be granted to be a general expression of what the LXII Weeks more particularly determine, the way whereby it may be translated to such a sense is as I have before represented: yet is it not the only one; I can add two ways more. As first this; שבעה seven useth, we know, to be taken indefinitely for plurimi, multoties, &c. Thus שבעה שבועים would without any anomaly or novelty at all signify indefinitely [Many Weeks,] if it might seem probable, that in a passage of reckoning by definite numbers some numeral word may be taken indefinitely. The sense would be all one with that I have followed, viz. As the whole time limited for the continuance of the Holy City consisted of many Weeks, even Lxx Weeks; so also this lesser period contained therein, from the Epocha mentioned unto MESSIAH, shall be a time of many Weeks, even LXII Weeks. Another way, were it not somewhat harsh, might be this; The Hebrew Nouns of Cardinal numbers do sometimes substantivare, signifying their numbers in abstracto, like those Greek Numerals Monas, Dyas, Trias, Tetras, Hebdomas. So Gen. chap. 7. 10. chap. 8. 12. we have שבעת ימים & שבועת הימים, i. Hebdomas dierum: Exod. 34. 28. עשרת הרכבים, Decas verborum, Decalogus: Gen. 17. 12. בן-שמנת ימים, Filius ogdoadis dierum: Iosua 14. 2. השערה המטות, Novenarius or Enneas tribuum. If they be Substantives in statu constructo, were they not or may they not be so in absoluto? In the third Chapter and 19. ver. of Daniel שבעה in absoluto seems to be a Substantive having an Adjective joyned with it, חר שבעה, which we translate [one seven times.] If this therefore may be admitted, שבעה שבועים in our Text of Daniel will sound per Ellipsin conjunctionis, Hebdomades & Hebdomas, Weeks and a Week; the sense being all one with the former, saving that one Week is implied as singular from the rest, which may be that which the Angel afterward mentions ver. 27. If it were pointed שבעה שבועים, as by the consonants it might be, there would be no great question but it might be translated Weeks and a Week.

But if שבעה שבועים must needs import some limited time of 49 years, I would rather chuse to count the LXII Weeks from the same Epocha with them under Artaxerxes Mnemon, than from the end of them, and yet leave as probable a conjecture to be made of what was done in them, as those who follow Funccius from the other Artaxerxes do use to give.

Whereforever besides in Scripture Seven Weeks are mentioned, the words are, שבע שבועות or שבעה שבועות

I have sometimes considered whether, if it be translated seven Weeks, those seven Weeks might not be applied as rotundus numerus to those Fifty and two days, Nehem. 6. 15. where it is said, So the Wall was finished in the 25th day of the Month Elul, in fifty two days; somewhat more indeed than seven Weeks, yet short of seven and an half, and so not regarded in account by Weeks. If this could be, then the reason of the Angel's division of weeks into 7 and 62 would be, because of diverse kinds of Weeks understood; the first of days, wherein the Wall of Jerusalem should be finished, the second of years, from thence unto the Messiah. If it seem impossible or unlikely that the Wall of the City should be repaired in so short a time, and therefore those words (according to Junius) to be meant of setting up the doors and bars only: I could say, first, that the Wall was not new builded from the foundations, but repaired upon the old ruins; Secondly, the speedy dispatch thereof was taken for a wonder, even by the Jews Enemies, whothereupon (saith the Text *) perceived that this work was wrought of our God. So that, were there no worse scruple than this, it were easily answered; nor would examples * be wanting to parallel with it, such as might make it seem at least possible. As that strange and speedy building of the Walls of Athens by Themistocles, after that Xerxes had demolished them, reported by Diodor. Sic. lib. 11. Yea, to come more near to the thing in question, Josephus l. 6. c. 13. De Bell. Jud. tells us, That Titus, dividing the work amongst his Army, begirt Jerusalem in three days space with a Wall of thirty nine Furlongs, and thirteen Bulwarks, to hinder the Jews excursions from within and all relief from without. What the materials were I know not, but he says it was a thing beyond all belief, and might have seemed to be a work of some Months. But leaving this digression, let us see the Computation and Impletion of our LXII Weeks.

* Nehem. 6. 16.

* That renowned Palace and Court of Nebuchadnezzar, within which were those Pensiles Horti, was finished (saith Josephus) in fifteen days. Antiq. Judaic. li. 10. c. 11. in the Latine c. 13.

The Computation and Impletion of the LXII Weeks.

FROM the seventh year of Artaxerxes Mnemon, when Ezra had Commission to cause to Return and carry with him as many of the Jews as would to Jerusalem, Ezra c. 7. ver. 7, & 13: And from the twentieth year of the same Artaxerxes, when Nehemiah obtained leave to build Jerusalem the City of his Fathers Sepulchres, Nehem. 2: From both these Commissions, though thirteen years distant the one from the other, are by divine disposition unto MESSIAH the PRINCE threescore and two Weeks; from the first of solar, from the latter of Lunar years. For LXII weeks, or 434 Lunar years, are less than so many solar, as much as is between the seventh and twentieth of Artaxerxes. Which admirable concordance I cannot impute to chance, but ascribe to Divine providence so ordering it of purpose, that these two Epocha's and Commissions, To cause to Return, and, To build Jerusalem, might be as one and the same. And as the Lunar year is contained within the solar, and by it ordered and directed; so is the Period here from Nehemiah's Commission to Build the City contained and reduced to that from Ezra's Commission to cause the people to return.

In the last of these Weeks according to prediction was Christ our Lord anointed. In the beginning whereof exactly, between the first and second Pasleover after his Baptism, (when his Harbinger John had now finished his Message, and was cast in Prison; a time precisely and purposely noted in the Evangelical Story,) he first began to preach in Galilee the Gospel of the Kingdom, ordained his Apostles, and proclaimed himself to be the MESSIAH. After John was put in Prison, saith *Mark, 1. 14, 15. Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God, And saying, Πεντηκωται ὁ καιρος, The time is fulfilled, (i. the last week of the sixty two weeks is come) and the Kingdom of God is at hand. From that time (saith Matthew c. 4. 17.) Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent, for the Kingdom of heaven is at hand. This was that day whereof Christ himself said at Nazareth, that that Scripture was fulfilled, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the Gospel to the poor, &c. and to preach the acceptable year of the Lord, Luke 4. 18, 19. This the time and place, whence S. Peter reckoned the beginning of Christ's Prophecy in his Sermon to Cornelius; That word (saith he) which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the Baptism which John preached, &c. *Acts 10. 37.

In the third year of this Week (two years and an half after he began his Prophecy, and three years and an half after his Baptism) being made our Priest, he offered himself upon the Cross a Sacrifice for sin, was dead, buried, and rose again; then ascended up into heaven to be installed, and to sit at the right hand of God, from thenceforth to reign until he hath put all his Enemies under his feet. But you will say, This was all performed four years before the 434 years (which is sixty two Weeks of years) were expired. I answer as before; The Angel reckons not by single years, but by Weeks, the last whereof should be Messiah's Week, as we have shewed it to have been. If the Angel had said, There shall be 434 years unto MESSIAH; then, to make good the prediction, MESSIAH must have been anointed the last year. But when he says, There shall be Sixty two Weeks unto MESSIAH; it is sufficient he was anointed the last Week. But how this Week will at length be compleat, we shall see in the next verse. But first let us demonstrate our Computation.

Christ's Prophecy.

Christ our Lord was Baptized Anno Olympiadio 805 inenunte, about the Feast of Expiation, in the seventh Month Tisri, six Months after John began to baptize, and in that year natural and political, which began in the 15 of Tiberius towards ending, but was the 16 when he was baptized. For John, I suppose, began to preach and baptize in the first Month Nisan, (when the Summer was before him, and not when the Winter was to enter) in the 15 year of Tiberius, which ended August following. Now John's imprisonment was a year after the Baptism of Christ, namely, between the first and second Passleover after it, as is clear and evident by the Evangelical Story, John c. 2. 23. c. 3. 22. & Chap. 4. The Beginning therefore of Christ's Prophecy, which began at the imprisonment of John, Mark 1. 14. was Anno Olymp. 806. about the end (I suppose) of the same Month Tisre or September.

From hence Mens. 7. begins the last week: wherefore the Passion of Christ, at the Passleover, Mens. 1. firmly fixed by Chronological Characters in the 19 of Tiberius, Anno Olymp. 808: Æra Christian. 33. (that is, agreeable to the received Tradition, but three year and an half after his Baptism) will fall to be in the third year of the week; which is wholly to be compleat, *Ann. ## VERSE 26.

And after the threescore and two Weeks shall MESSIAH be cut off, and [they] none of his: Wherefore the Prince's people to come shall destroy the City and the Sanctuary, and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of War desolations are determined.

AND after the threescore and two Weeks shall, &c.] That is, When the Threescore and two Weeks aforesaid shall expire and be fully compleat, (for to the word [after] supposes they must be) MESSIAH shall be cut off, not only from the living, by the death he should suffer upon the Cross, (for that was a little before) but from being any longer the King and Priest of that People; they refusing Him to be theirs, and he casting off them from being His, which is the meaning of the words following וְאֵין לוֹ יְהוּיָה, And they none of his: For יְהוּיָה is to be understood, that to the conjunction Vau may couple similia tempora, וְאֵין לוֹ יְהוּיָה עָמוֹ, Et non erit ei populus ejus, or וְאֵין לוֹ יְהוּיָה, And they shall be none of His. And for the Verb כָּרַח, that it signifies not only a cutting off from life, but also from reigning as a King, or from being a Priest; see for the first, 1 Kings c. 2. ver. 4. & chap. 9. ver. 5. 2 Chron. ch. 7. ver. 18. Jer. 33. 17. לֹא יִכָּרֵחַ לְדָוִד, &c. There shall not be cut off to David a man to sit upon the throne of the House of Israel: All which have reference to 2 Sam. c. 7. ver. 16. For the second, cutting off from the Priesthood, 1 Sam. 2. 33. to Eli, And the man of thine whom I shall not cut off from mine Altar. Jer. 33. 18. Neither of the Priests the Levites יִכָּרֵחַ shall a man be cut off before me, to offer burnt-offerings, &c. and to do sacrifice continually.

The Computation and Impletion.

From the seventh year of Artaxerxes Mnemon, at the time of the Commission granted to Ezra, (Anno Olympiad. 379. as is already shewed) unto the fourth year after Christ's Ascension (Anno Olymp. 813. Æræ Christianæ Dionysiacæ 37.) are LXII Weeks of years, or 434 years fully compleat and expired. The next year after was Christ divorced and cut off from the Jews, and they וְאֵין לוֹ cast off from being His people; which may appear thus.

I begin and end these years in Tisri, or September, that so they may agree with that time of the Commission granted to Ezra, which I before supposed to have been about that month.

Anno Æræ Christianæ. 33.

Christ suffered upon the Cross, rose from the dead, and ascended into heaven. The Holy Ghost descended at Pentecost, 3000 converted, more added; the Apostles forbidden, but cease not to preach Jesus Christ. So this year ends about September.

Anno Æræ Christianæ. 34.

The number of Disciples much increased: Deacons chosen, and Steven one of them. Act. 6. 1, 2, 3, &c.

Anno Æræ Christianæ. 35.

Steven doth great wonders and miracles. The Word of God and the number of Disciples increaseth so, that a great company of the Priests were obedient unto the Faith. The Elders and people rage, and about the end of the year was Steven martyred. Act. c. 6. ver. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. chap. 7. ver. 1. ad finem.

Anno Æræ Christianæ. 36.

Great persecution against the Church at Jerusalem. Saul makes havoc, Act. c. 8. whereupon the Disciples were scattered through the Regions of Judæa and Samaria, every where preaching the Gospel, ver. 4, 5. Of whose success the Apostles being informed, send Peter and John to Samaria, to lay hands on the new converts, ver. 14, &c. which done, and by the way preaching the Gospel in the villages of Samaria, they returned again to Jerusalem, v. 25.

Anno Æræ Christianæ. 37.

Those which were scattered upon the persecution of Steven proceed further, and travelled as far as Phenice, Cyprus and Antioch, having by the

the way preached the Gospel to the Jews at Damascus (how came they there else ?) Chap. 11. Which Saul hearing of, gets letters thither, to bring those he should find there of that way unto Jerusalem. But in his journey himself was miraculously converted and baptized, &c. Peter in the mean time was gone again from Jerusalem by Lydda unto Joppa, where he remained all this year at the house of Simon the Tanner.

The next year after ( Anno Æræ Christianæ 38. Anno Olympiadicæ 813. ) ( according as was foretold, That after threescore and two Weeks were ended, MESSIAH should be cut off, and they none of his ) when Christ had now one whole Week of years tendred himself unto his own people, and they not only refused him, but first by crucifying the Lord himself, and after that by persecuting his Messengers sent unto them, had made themselves unworthy of everlasting life ; Peter was taught by vision, that the Gospel of the Kingdom should be preached unto the Gentiles, and accordingly sent to preach it to Cornelius a Centurion of the Italian band, Acts 10. And here begins the Epoch of the Rejection of Israel, and the Calling of the Gentiles, which S. Paul speaks so much of Rom. 11.

True it is, the cutting off of Christ by death was before the last week was compleat ; but the cutting him off from being King and Priest of the Jews was not until after it was ended. Or if this cutting off here mentioned may not be extended to any other cutting off than by Death, yet the other part of the copulative sense, וְיִשְׂרָאֵל [ And they shall be none of His, ] was not fulfilled until the whole Week was ended.

Wherefore the PRINCE'S people to come, &c. ] עַם נְיִיר הַבָּא, Populus MESSIÆ venturus, i. futurus, The people that should be the People of Messiah the Prince, when Israel was rejected : so the Hebrews call Seculum futurum עוֹלָם הַבָּא ; whence Mark 10. ver. 30. Luke 18. 30. Αἰὼν ὁ ἐρχόμενος. Eph. 2. 7. Ἐν τοῖς αἰῶσι ἐπερχομένοις. According to which notion, Apoc. 1. 4. ὁ ὢν, καὶ ὁ ᾄων, καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος. Vid. Psal. 71. 18. Esay 27. 6. Esay 44. 7. וְאַחֲרָיוּת וְאַשֶׁר תִּבְנֶנָּה, Vulgat. ventura & quæ futura sunt. Thus I construe the Text, and understand by Populus Principis futurus, the people of the Roman Empire, where Christ was principally to have his Church and Kingdom whilst Israel should be rejected. Cornelius therefore the first Gentile converted was a Roman Centurion. S. Paul, who is called the Apostle of the Gentiles, went not beyond the bounds of this Empire. This was that Οἰκουμένη whereof Christ said, Matth. 24. 14. That before the Destruction of Jerusalem the Gospel should be preached ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ Οἰκουμένῃ in all the world ; as Augustus is said Luke 2. 1. to have taxed πάντων τῇ Οἰκουμένῃ, according as the Romans themselves used to call it Imperium Orbis Terrarum, &c. Antichrist, who was to * sit in the Temple or Church of Christ, * 2 Thess. 2. sits in the midst of this Empire : whence it appears that the Church which Christ should have * after Israel disclaimed him, should chiefly be in it. This People therefore, which * Whilft. 1. was in Israel's stead to be the People of Messiah the Prince, should destroy the City and Sanctuary with such a Destruction as should like a Flood overwhelm the whole Nation, and as an unresistible torrent break down and wash all away before it. All which we know they did.

And unto the end of War Desolations are determined ] That is, Until the end of the Fourth Kingdom of the Gentiles, whose last period is that Time, Times and half a Time, whereof it is said Dan. 7. ver. 21, 25. that Antichrist the eyed and mouthed Horn should make War with the saints, and prevail against them ; and they shall be given into his hand until a Time and Times and half a Time : Until the end of this War the Jewish Desolations are determined. But of this more in the next.

V E R S E 27.

Nevertheless he shall confirm a covenant with Many one week: and in half a week, being * a Desolator, he shall cause the Sacrifice and oblation to cease, and that being over a wing of Abominations, and until the final time (even that which is determined) it shall continue upon the desolate.

* Or, making desolation, &c. &c.

HERE the Angel tells us what should be done in the last Week, both of the first Computation and of the second, that is, the last of the Lxx, and the last of the LXII. And of this first, as coming first in time.

Nevertheless (saith he) he shall confirm a Covenant with Many one Week ] That is, Though the Body of the Jewish Nation should be cast off, and be ל'י' None of the people of the MESSIAH; yet for one whole week he should offer himself unto them, and gather many of them into the Covenant of the Gospel: And this Week was the last Week of the Threescore and two Weeks, which (as I shewed before) was wholly spent in preaching to those of the Circumcision. This therefore is as it were a Prolepsis, lest Daniel might think that none of his people should enter into the Covenant under Messiah. These Many therefore are that Remnant whereof S. Paul speaks Rom. 11. That, though Israel were cast off, yet was there A Remnant according to the election of grace; and therefore he limits the hardness happened unto Israel, by 'Απο μέγας, as not being universal.

And in half a Week, being a Desolator, he shall cause the Sacrifice and offering to cease ] A Desolator, מַשְׁמַד, a word which otherwise much troubleth the Translator; but being thus made a suppositum or Nominative case to the verb יַשְׁמַד, (which hath no other near it) it both much clears the sense, and retains its propriety of signification. Nor is the postposition of the Nominative case to the Verb against the use of the tongue; nor the trajection here so great, but the Latine will admit the same order of the words, viz. Et abolebit sacrificium & munus, atque erit super alam abominationum Desolator: or, Et abolebit sacrificium & munus, qui erit super alam abominationum, Desolator. Howsoever the Translation be, this Week the Angel now speaks of is the last of the Seventy, which should be but half run out when the Temple and City should be destroyed and the Legal service made to cease. For if we reckon (as I think we should) the Seventy Weeks from the sixth year of Darius Nothus, (when the Temple was finished,) the Destruction thereof by Titus will fall out (as is shewed) in the midst of the last Week; the whole half thereof, from the beginning till then, having been spent in warlike preparations and exploits, which ended with the burning and desolation both of City and Sanctuary.

Of those who end the Seventieth Week compleatly with the Destruction of Jerusalem, some seem so to understand this first part of the verse, as if the one Week here mentioned were the last of the Seventy, and the confirmation of the Covenant to be therein to respect only the first half thereof, wherein Christ made good his Covenant of preservation to the believing Jews, namely, (as I would explain it) by sending Cestius Gallus President of Syria, in the middle or fourth year of the last Week, about seven days to environ Jerusalem with an Army, for to be that sign and watch-word mentioned in the Gospel of the near approaching Desolation thereof, Luke 21. 20. that so those which were in Judea being warned might flee into the Mountains (of Arabia Petraea to Pella,) and deliver themselves from those days of vengeance and wrath upon their people: and in the other half of the Week which remained, he should cause the sacrifice and offering to cease, by sending Vespasian with that second and fatal Army which should bring those wofull and vengefull Desolations upon them.

As for the phrase of Confirming a Covenant, (if the rest suted well) it would be no straining to interpret it to be meant of preservation and exemption from a common calamity: For we have the like speech Gen. 6. 17, 18. where God having said to Noah, that he would destroy by the Flood every thing that breathed upon the earth; addeth,

But

But with thee will I establish my Covenant; and thou shalt come into the Ark, thou, and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons wives with thee, &c. Thus much of the Week and Half-Week: But for the Desolator who should cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease, whether and how it may be applied to Messiah himself, or otherwise construed, we shall better understand when the next is expounded.

And that [being] over a Wing of Abominations וְעַל כַּנְף שְׁקוּצִים, I think literally rendered, as was the former. If any man would also have the order of the words precisely kept, and therefore מְשַׁמֵּה, i. Desolator, to keep his station here, as in the Hebrew, he may render the words thus, He shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease, וְעַל כַּנְף שְׁקוּצִים מְשַׁמֵּה, And [commanding] over a Wing of Abominations [be] a Desolator or make Desolation; The sense is yet the same: Or thus, And over a Wing of Abominations [shall he be] who makes Desolation: All of them requiring nothing else but that so common Ellipsis of the Verb Substantive, which in some expressions of this language is perpetual. Now for the construing and expounding this and the rest which remains of this verse, I have always in mine eye that part of the Prophecy of our Saviour in the Gospel, Matth. 24. 15. Mark 13. 14. where he so expressly refers to this of Daniel, with an unwonted caveat not to pass it over slightly, Let him (saith he) that readeth, understand: which admonition as it implies the special need we have of our Saviour's Key to unlock it; so it may seem to intimate that neither the Septuagint before, nor the ordinary construction of their Rabbies then, had hit the meaning of this Scripture. Wherefore S. Luke relates not here (as Matthew and Mark do) our Saviour's words verbatim, but exegetically, of set purpose (so I am persuaded) expounding this place of Daniel, as will appear by that which follows.

Over a Wing of Abominations * That is, An Army of Idolatrous Gentiles. Even the self-same which S. Luke saith Chap. 21. 24. Jerusalem shall be troden down of the Gentiles; who also expoundeth Wing by Armies; putting in stead of those words of our Saviour, [When ye shall see the Abomination of Desolation spoken of by Daniel the Prophet, stand in the holy place] these, * When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with Armies; and in both it follows, Then let them which be in Judaea flee into the mountains. The word כַּנְף Wing is of the Verb כָּנַף, (but once found in the Hebrew Scripture) which signifies according to the Chaldee and Arabick To gather together; besides, in the Arabick, circundare, to environ or compass about: Both significations sute well to an Army, and the latter, that which beleaguers and begirds a City or Fort besieged. Had S. Luke any reference to this, when he speaks of Jerusalem compassed with an Army? The Metaphor also of a Wing leans most this way, whether we consider their figure and motion being stretched out, or their posture when Birds of rapine sit couring over their prey. I will not say the Roman Eagle was here aimed at, though כַּנְף is used not only for Ala a Wing, but for Alatum & Volatile a Fowl or Winged Creature. It is sufficient that neither the nature nor name of a Wing is strange or unaccustomed to an Army. But how (will you say) will an Army of Abominations be made an Army of Gentiles? I answer, The Scripture in many places calleth Idols by the name of Abominations, that is, שְׁקוּצִים, & תועבות. So the Egyptian Idols (Exod. 8. ver. 26, &c.) are called the Abomination of the Egyptians. Ezek. 7. 20. the Jews are said to have made the Images of their Abominations, תועבות; Jer. 7. 30. to have set up שְׁקוּצִים, that is, their Idols in the House of the Lord. So 2 Kings 23. 13. Ashoreth is called שְׁקָצ the Abomination of the Sidonians; Chemosh שְׁקָצ, the Abomination of the Moabites; but Milchom תועבה the Abomination of the Children of Ammon. Wherefore 1 Kings 11. 5, 7. שְׁקוּצִים is by the Seventy thrice translated Ἰδωλον Idol.

This being a thing manifest, we are to observe further, That the Scripture useth also to express and imply under the names of the Gods the Nations themselves which worshipped them. The Lord threatned to scatter Israel among the Nations, and that there they should serve other Gods day and night, Gods, the works of mens hands, wood and stone, which neither they nor their Fathers had known: that is, they should serve them not religiously, but politically, inasmuch as they were to become slaves and Vassals to Idolatrous Nations, even such Idolaters as neither they nor their Fathers had ever heard of. Let it also be considered whether that of David, 1 Sam. 26. 19. be not to be expounded after the same Trope: They have (saith he) driven me out this day from abiding in the inheritance of the Lord, saying, Go serve other Gods; that is, They have driven me to serve a Nation of another Religion. Yea, Ezra 9. 14. fitly to our purpose, the Strangers with whom the people of Israel had contracted affinity are called expressly עַמֵּי הַתועבות the people of Abominations, which the Seventy render Λαοὶ τῶν γαιῶν, the people of the Lands, that is, Gentiles. And where we read in the first verse, The people of Israel, &c. have not separated themselves from the people of the Lands according to their Abominations, &c. it is the same phrase with that of Moses, Cattel after their kind, creeping things after their kind, that is, the several kinds of cattel and of creeping things; so the people of the Lands according to their Abominations, is the several kinds of Idolaters of the Lands about them. And thus we have shewed that כנף שקוצים the Wing of Abominations is as much as כנף עמי an Army of people of Abominations, that is, of Gentiles and Worshipers of Idols.

But who is this Desolater, or Maker of Desolations, who should command over this Wing of Abominations, and bring these Gentiles against the Holy City? I answer, The words in the Original stand indifferent to be applied either to the Roman General, or Messiah; but I could not render them so indifferently: For if I render them, And in half a Week a Desolater shall cause the sacrifice and offering to cease, and that (being) over a Wing of Abominations, or, Over a Wing of Abominations (shall he be) who makes desolation; this Desolater would then seem to be some other than Messiah, that is the Roman General. But render them as I do, And making desolation (or being a Desolater) he shall cause the sacrifice and offering to cease, and that, &c. or, He shall cause the sacrifice and offering to cease, and [commanding] over a Wing of Abominations, be a Desolater; either way of these they will have reference to MESSIAH the Prince, who is the Person meant in the words immediately before, [He shall confirm a Covenant with many one Week.] And this I most incline to, that so the Person spoken of may be the same throughout: and a reason also appears of that addition, That this Desolater should be over an Army of Abominations: For if a Foreign General were only meant, what needed this Addition? what other Army could such a one lead but Gentiles? But that Messiah himself should command over an Army of Idolaters, this needed a special intimation.

And surely the Roman Army, though an Army of Abominations, was in this service the Army of Messiah. So the Parable aiming at this Prophecy tells us Matth. 22. 7. When the King heard how spitefully they entreated his Messengers who came to tell them the Wedding, whereunto they had been bidden, was ready, He was wroth, (saith the Text) and sent forth HIS Armies, and destroyed those Murtherers, and burnt up their City. Whence it is, that the coming of this desolating Army of the Romans is called the coming of Christ, James 5. Weep and howl ye rich men (he writeth to Jews) for the miseries that shall come upon you — for you have heaped up goods for the Last days; that is, (according to Oecumenius) when the End of your State is a coming, and the Romans spoil you of all: which is expressed in the seventh verse by Christ's coming, *Be ye patient (saith he) until the coming of the Lord, (he speaks to the believing Jews whom the rest persecuted;) and in the next, Stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh: He meaneth (saith Oecumenius) τῇ Ῥωμαϊκῇ ἐφοδῶν, καὶ τῇ ὑπὸ τέττων ἀρχμαλωσίαν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, the expedition of the Romans, and their carrying away the Jews * captives into all Nations.* So he takes that of John chap. 21. 22. If I will that he stay till I come, that is (saith he) ἕως τῆ ἀλώσεως Ἱερουσαλὴμ, till the Destruction of Jerusalem: and proves that this Coming of Christ is ἡ τῆ Ἱερουσαλὴμ πανωλεθρία, the destruction of Jerusalem, by that of Malachi Chap. 3. 1, 2. Behold, the Lord shall come, and who shall abide the day of his coming? And thus would I understand that Heb. 10. 37. For yet a little while, and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Messiah therefore himself seems to be that Desolater here meant, who should command over an Army of Abominations when he came to destroy the City and the Sanctuary.

Thus it appears our Saviour's citation in the Gospel is not of the very words of Daniel in this passage, but of the sense only summarily expressed; and that Βδέλυγμα ἐρημώσεως is to be expounded שְׂמֵחַ אֲשֶׁר מְשַׁח, Bdeulygma ef' w' esetai o poiwn t' erhmwsu, The Abomination, or Abominable Army, over which he should be who should make desolation. As for the Seventy, or whosoever else (for S. Hierome doubts) translated this Book, if their Translation here were originally as we now have it, and not translated thither out of our Saviour's words in the Gospel, they seem to have accommodated the place, though of unlike construction and circumstance of sense, unto two other places, Chap. 11. 31. Chap. 12. 11. where some such kind of Abomination is mentioned, and likewise the participles מְשַׁח & מְשָׁח: But in all three of them, not well understanding what subject these Participles included, they contented themselves only to express by ἐρήμωσις or αφανισμός a general relation of

Verse 1.

Verse 3.

* Luke 21. 24.

desolation in the abstract, which might be diversly interpretable, otherwise it is not possible by any alteration of the points to express their Translation verbatim out of this place, unless ד'ק'י'פ'ש were in statu constructo, as it is not.

And until the final time (even that which is determined) it shall continue upon the desolate ] Here I have chosen to translate the verb ת'ת'ת'ת' continue, as the Targum renders it Jer. c. 7. 20. & c. 42. 18. and the Vulgar here perseverabit, as a Metaphorical signification taken from a continued pouring of water. It is the Feminine Gender, and therefore to be referred to a Feminine suppositum, which I take to be א'ל'א' Ala. This wing of Abominations, that is, metonymicè, the Desolation wrought by it, or foreign possession brought in by it, should continue upon the Desolate until the final time which was determined should be accomplished. Or those Gentile people of the Roman Empire, by whom Jerusalem was destroyed, should continue their dominion and possession, either of the place or desolate inhabitants once thereof, until that final time be accomplished. Whether this or that suits best, the meaning in S. Luke's language is thus expressed; The Jews shall be carried captive over all Nations, and Jerusalem trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled: that is, (as was said before) until the Monarchies of the Gentiles should be finished. For these times of the Gentiles are that last period of the Fourth Kingdom prophesied * of, a Time, Times and half a Time; at the end whereof the Angel swears unto Daniel, chap. 12. 7. That God should accomplish to scatter the power of the Holy people. This is that Fulness of the Gentiles, which being come, S. Paul tells us, The Deliverer shall come out of Sion, and all Israel shall be saved. And the Angel in Apoc. 10. 6. renews the same oath to S. John, which he swore before to Daniel, That when these Times (N. B.) should end and be no longer, the mystery of God should be finished, as he had declared to his servants the Prophets. Amen.

A P P E N D I X.

ALthough I think that preciseness of days is not to be much stood upon, when the Events and their Times do in the whole answer to Prediction: yet have I been so curious as to enquire whether the Desolation of the City and Sanctuary (to be in the middle of the seventieth Week) were fulfilled to a very day or not. And, as I think, I have so found it, very near, if not altogether.

For Anno Judaico 3344. Æræ mundi Scaligerianæ 3533. (the year the Temple was finished) Neomenia Tisri, according to the Jews Calendar, fell upon the 9 of September Calendarii Juliani, Feriâ 1. Cyclo Solis 12. Literâ Dominic. G.

Ergo Neomenia Adar was Feb. 4. Fer. 2. Cyclo Solis 13. Literâ Dominicali F. So the 3 of Adar (the day whereon the Temple was finished, Ezra 6. 15.) will be the 6 of February. From whence to the 8 of August (whereon the Temple was fired, and two days after consumed) are exclusive 182 days, that is, half a year ad unguem.

But this year (according to the Judaical Calendar) was Annus Embolimeus, and so had two Adars; which of them the Scripture meaneth is doubtful. But the Neomenia of the second Adar was March 5. Feriâ 4. So the 3 day of this Adar was the 7. of March: From whence to the 8. of September (the day whereon the City was fired) are exclusive 184 days, which is a day or two too much. But it is more than probable that the Jewish Calendar was not in Darius his time so exact, nor the Moon's motion so well known, but the New Moon might sometimes anticipate the beginning of their Months a day or two.

Howsoever those who begin their reckoning from the 2<sup>d</sup> year of Darius, as Scaliger doth) cannot from the 24th day of the 6th Month (Sept. 16.) (which the Prophet Haggai names, chap. I. v. ult. for the day whereon the work began) shew their compleat Seventy Weeks so exactly terminated upon any Event remarkable during the whole time of the War. For as for the destruction of Jerusalem it self, they come not near it by whole years.

Of the Opinion of Funccius.

FUNCCIUS his computation of the Lxx Weeks from the seventh of Artaxerxes Longimanus ( whence to Christ's Passion he finds just 490 years ) hath three great and unavoidable inconveniences.

1. That it ends the 70 Weeks ( which by the Text were allotted for the Holy City ) long before the times of the Holy City were fulfilled.

2. That this Artaxerxes might not be Artaxerxes the Hinderer of the Building of the Temple, but that second Artaxerxes that gave Commission to Ezra and Nehemiah, they are fain to bestow the names of Ahasuerus and Artaxerxes mentioned Ezra 4. upon Cambyfes and the counterfeit Tanixarces or Smerdis ( whom others call Sphen-dates ) the Magus, without any ground in Scripture or prophane History, nay, against probability. For if Ahasuerus be Cambyfes ( as by order he should be ) and Artaxerxes be Smerdis the Magus, how will that business in the days of Artaxerxes (Ezra 4. 7. ) besit the 7 Months reign of Smerdis ? Or if preposterously ( as some will have it ) Ahasuerus be that Smerdis, what needed the Holy Ghost so precisely to mention the * Beginning of his reign, if he reigned but seven Months in all ? Secondly, Neither Cambyfes nor Smerdis can be Ahasuerus. For Ahasuerus, Esther 3. 7. ( and why should we feign any other Ahasuerus of Persia than the Scripture describeth, and so diligently distinguisheth from Ahasuerus the Mede, as if there had been then no other ? Esther 1. 1. ) reigned at least twelve years, whereas Cambyfes reigned but seven years, and Smerdis but so many months.

3. They cannot shew how 69 Weeks, or 62 Weeks added to 7 Weeks, ( for they have no other way ) are determined upon Messiah the Prince ; since they out-reach his Nativity, and end 7 years before his Passion ( which was in the 19 ) and therefore three years at least before John's Baptism, which was in the 15 of Tiberius. Wherefore neither beginning nor ending, neither part nor whole of the sixty and ninth Week can point us out any time of the manifestation of Messiah.

REGNUM ROMANUM

REGNUM QUARTUM DANIELIS.

Regnum hic intelligo, non pro eorum sensu qui diversas Rerumpublicarum formas diversis vocabulis distinxere; sed notione prisca, cui & Sacri Codicis stylus assuevit, quaque non Unius duntaxat imperium, sed & Optimatum status, & Populi dominatio comprehenditur. Nam apud prisca secula quosvis Rerumpublicarum Summates, quacunque regiminis formâ, Reges nuncupârunt, sive Uni fuerint & Monarchæ, sive Plures ejusdem potestatis consortes summæ rerum præfuisent. De Gentium usu si quis indicium aliquod aut exemplum requisierit, Homerum adeat, cujus ut alia præteream, qui mihi nuperrimè legenti occurrebat locus non gravabor adducere. Is verò est Odyss. 6. ubi de Alcinoo Rege ad Procerum concilium eunte, Egrediebatur, inquit,

— μετὰ κλειτὸς βασιλῆας

Ἐς βυλῶν, ἵνα μιν κάλειον Φαίηκες ἄγχοι,

Ad Inclytos Reges, ad Concilium, quod ipsum vocârunt Phæaces Generosi. Audi hîc Procerum Senatum Regum cognomine insignitum; ut non immeritò Cyneas Pyrrhi Legatus (teste Plutarcho) hero suo retulisse fertur, Senatum Romanum multorum Regum confessum sibi visum esse, βασιλέων πολλῶν συνέδριον.

Sed profanorum Scriptorum testimonia conquirant alii; Nos in argumento sacro Sacræ Scripturæ usum videamus. Et primò quidem animadversione dignus mihi videtur Abimelechi sermo ad sechemitas, Jud. cap. 9. vers. 2. eos quasi ab Optimatum imperio in hunc modum dissuadentis; Utrum, inquit, melius est vobis, An ut Regnum habeant in vos septuaginta viri, omnes filii Jerubbaalis; an verò ut Regnum habeat in vos vir unus? Philisteorum quoque Regimen Aristocraticum fuit, & penes quinque Satrapas, qui à civitatibus suis nominantur, Jos. 13. 3. Azzathæus, Asdodæus, Ascalonæus, Gathæus, & Ekronæus; quorum tamen Gathæus Satrapa, ad quem David confugit, in primo libro Sam. cap. 21. מלך גת Rex Gathi vel Rex Gathæus non semel * dicitur, cùm ad id usque temporis Regni rationem minimè mutatam fuisse tam frequens quinque istarum Satrapiarum mentio indicat. Mitto quòd Urbium singularum Rectores & quasi Consules etiam alibi Reges nominari videntur. Mitto quòd omnes in universum Orbis terrarum Politicæ, ut alibi, ità Matthæi 4. vers. 8. βασιλείαι manifestè nuncupentur, cùm Diabolus Christum Servatorem tentaturus, ei in montem sublimem assumpto ostendisse legitur omnia mundi Regna & gloriam eorum. Magis prope ad rem nostram facit, quòd Joanni in Apocalypsi Septem Bestiæ Romanæ Capita (in quibus Consules, Tribuni, Decemviri, Dictatores, Pontifices) totidem Reges interpretatur Angelus, (hoc est) tot Summates, penes quos vicibus suis Majestas erat Regnantis Populi Romani. Quapropter etiam Daniel Quarto Regno, quod hoc ipsum Romanum esse contendo, plures Reges seu Regias potestates attribuit, quando istius Regni descriptioni subjicit, In diebus (inquit) istorum Regum suscitabit Deus Dan. 2. 44. cæli Regnum quod in secula non destruetur: hoc est, temporibus Reipublicæ istius multi-regiæ suscitabitur Regnum Christi in secula duraturum.

Sciendum igitur est statum Romanum, capitibus utcunque varium admodum, corpore tamen unum fuisse. Atque ut Daniel, propter multifórmem capitum varietatem, Quartam hanc Bestiam nulli in terris Bestiæ assimilare potuit; ità neque unitas Cap. 7. Regni Romani ex capitibus æstimari potest aut debet, sed ex unitate populi regnantis super orbem terrarum. Civitas enim una eadèmq; sub tam multifórmi Majestate regnabat super Reges terræ, ut Joannes * loquitur, unde Caput orbis & Urbs orbis Domina Audiebat. Atque ex istis facile cernere est, quàm malè obtinuit usus, ut quatuor ista Danielis Regna quatuor Monarchiæ nuncuparentur. Ut enim de Romano taceam, de quo nunc lis est; certum est Græcorum Regnum, de quo nemo dubitat * Apoc. 17. quin

Dixi satis quid Regnum mihi sit, & quid Romanum.

Sequitur jam ut Danielis Regna, quid sint, cùrque ità nominentur, breviter ostendam. Danielis igitur Regna dico quatuor ista Regna, seu Regnorum seriem, quam primò ex Nebuchadnezzaris Babylonii somnio de statua quadruplicis materiæ Daniel divinitus edoctus exposuit, Dan. cap. 2. de iisdemque postea Daniel ipse quatuor Bestiarum sibi oblata visione plenius ab Angelo eruditus est, Dan. cap. 7.

Est autem Quaternio iste Regnorum Danielis (quod imprimis observari velim) Chronologia quædam Prophetica, non tam Annorum quàm Regnorum intervallis distincta, ubi Regnorum in præcipua orbis terrarum parte, simul Ecclesiam & populum Dei complexa, sibi invicem succedentium serie, monstratur tempus quo Christi Regnum à tot seculis promissum & primum * inchoandum sit, idemque demum certis temporibus * consummandum.

A.

Et primum quidem Vaticinium, quod Imaginis est five Statuæ, utrumque Regni Christi momentum designat, tam inchoandi, quàm olim consummandi: Alterum verò, quod quatuor Bestiarum viso adumbratur, ad alterum tantum illius momentum intendit, quando, omnibus hostibus devictis, universa mundi Regna Christi imperio & legibus subjicientur; Oportet enim eum Regnare (teste Apostolo) usque quò omnes inimicos supposuerit pedibus suis, 1 Cor. 15. 25.

Hujus autem Prophetiarum harum inmeta intuenda discriminis ea ratio est, quòd utrumque illud Regni Christi momentum non consummandi tantummodo, sed etiam inchoandi, & hujus quidem ad solas Gentes, pertinebat, id quod rejectione & obduratione Judæorum indè ab initio Christianismi huc usque satis ab eventu comprobatum est.

Hinc igitur quæ Nebuchadnezzari, homini scilicet Gentili, visio oblata est, ea utrumque designabat Regni Christi momentum. At verò ad Judæos alterum duntaxat momentum (quo consummandum est Regnum Christianum) pertinebat. Nam Hierosolyma calcabitur à Gentibus donec impleantur tempora Gentium, Luc. 21. vers. 24. & occupavit eos ira eis τέλῃς, 1 Thess. cap. 2. vers. 16. Quando verò Plenitudo Gentium introierit, tunc totus Israel salvabitur, ad Rom. c. 11. v. 25, 26. Idcirco quæ Danieli ipsi homini Judæo visio ostensa, illud tantum Regni Christi momentum, quasi in hujus rei Mysterium, spectare debuit.

Jam ex his quæ dicta sunt ratio quoque elucet, quare ex omnibus mundi Regnis quatuor hæc sola selegit Spiritus Sanctus, quorum fata tam insigni ornaret Prophetiâ; nempe quia ex his solis inter omnia mundi Regna Periodus temporum ejusmodi contexti potuit, quæ rectâ serie & ordinatâ successione perduceret ad tempora & momenta Regni Christi. Non verò quia nulla istis paria Imperia, forsân & aliquibus majora, per omnia secula orbis visurus esset. Nam neque Saracenorum olim, neque hodie Turcarum, neque Tartarorum Regna ditionis amplitudine Persico aut Græco, puto nec Assyrio, quicquam concedunt; imò, ni fallor, excedunt. Fatendum est nihilominus unumquodque ex quatuor istis Regnis, vel quod minimum est, ità esse comparatum, ut meritò summis & præcipuis Orbis terrarum Imperiis annumeranda sint; ut quorum omnium potestas non unius populi ambitu, sed plurimarum Gentium & Nationum Imperio terminaretur; unde Statua Nebuchadnezzari ostensa ampla, excellenti splendore & terribili formâ describitur, & Danieli Bestiæ quatuor magnæ emari ascendentes apparuere.

His ità ad Problematis intellectum expositis, venio ad Argumenta quibus firmissimè me assertum ire confido, Regnum Romanum esse quartum Regnum Danielis. Et primum quidem sic habet.

ARGUMENTUM I.

Quo rerum potiente Christi Regnum jam olim cæptum est, illud est quartum Regnum Danielis: At Regno Romano rerum potiente Christi Regnum cæpit: Ergò.

Major ex Daniele constat, qui quarto Regno in statua Nebuchadnezzaris descripto subdit, In diebus autem Regum istorum suscitabit Deus Cæli Regnum quod in secula non destruetur, neque populo alieno relinquetur. In diebus Regum istorum, vel, ad verbum,

In

In diebus illorum Regum illorum, id est, quarti Regni temporibus, quod, ut dixi, multi-regium erat futurum : vel, si cui hoc minus placuerit, Temporibus Regum istorum, hoc est, constante adhuc, & nondum absolutâ aut peractâ, quatuor istorum Regum seu Regnorum serie. Alterutra interpretatio necessaria est, & utrâvis idem planè obtinebo, Christi Regnum suscitatum iri aliquo ex quatuor istis Regno nondum elapso, sed adhuc rerum potiente : illud verò cum Tertium certum est non fuisse, necessariò Quartum erit. Id quod adhuc evidentius ex Somnio ipso confirmatur. Regnum enim Christi (Daniele interprete) est Lapis iste excisus sine manibus, id est, sine ope humana) qui Imaginem percussurus erat ad pedes ipsius ferreos & luteos, adeoque comminueret illos ut locus is non est inventus amplius, cap. 2. vers. 34, 35. At verò qui potuit Lapis Imaginem percutere ad pedes, nisi saltem pedes isti mansissent adhuc cum Lapis è monte excindebatur?

Minor quoque, Romanis imperantibus (non Græcis aut Persis) cœpisse Regnum Christi, non minus est manifesta. Quid enim? Annon nascente Christo tota Terra censebatur ab Augusto? & non tantum Judæi, sed & Joseph ipse cum Sponsa Maria, Luc. 2? Annon eodem prodente decimo quinto Tiberii Cæsaris, Baptismus & initium prædicationis Jesu Christi? Et quid voluit vox illa Christi, Date Cæsari quæ sunt Cæsaris? Quid illa Judæorum Christum Regem respicientium, Non habemus Regem nisi Cæsarem? nisi ut sciamus Romanos solos, non verò Græcos aut alios, tunc rerum potitos.

T. designant quàm ultimi Regni tempora in hac serie Danielis; tum quòd hujus Regni tempora Quaternionis istius revera sunt ultima tempora; tum quòd Regno hoc ultimo Quaternio Propheticus plenitudinem suam sortitur, seu plenum numerum.

ARGUMENTUM II.

Quo demum absoluto & abolito consummabitur Regnum Christi, illud est quartum Regnum Danielis: At Regno Romano semel exacto & abolito consummabitur Regnum Christi: Ergo.

Majoris veritas evidentissima est ex utraque Danielis Prophetia. De Somnio Nebuchadnezaris: * Vidisti (inquit) usquedum excisus est Lapis sine manibus, & percussit Imaginem super pedes ipsius ferreos & luteos, ut comminueret eos. Ità abstulit ea ventus, & nullus locus inventus est eis. LAPIS autem qui percusserat Imaginem effectus est MONS magnus, adeò ut impleret totam terram. Hoc est, ipso Daniele interprete, In diebus Regni quarti suscitabit Deus cæli REGNUM (hic est Lapis iste è Monte excisus) quod in secula non destruetur, quòdque populo alteri non relinquetur, (ut prioribus scilicet Regnis factum est: ) sed comminuet & consumet omnia ista Regna; ipsum autem stabit in secula: Hoc est, Lapis Regni Christi jam à pluribus seculis ex Monte hujus Mundi excisus, tandem cum tempus à Deo decretum advenerit, exterminatis, & abolitis penitus, quæ huc usque vigent, Imaginis hujus partibus novissimis, seu postremis; Ipse, qui hucusque Lapis duntaxat fuerat, & quidem offensionis, tunc evadet in Montem Ingentem, implebitque totum terrarum orbem.

Alterâ verò Prophetia, quâ Quaternio iste Regnorum quatuor Bestiarum visione adumbratur, hujus rei demonstrationem suppeditat planè invictam. Nam ibi de quartæ Bestiæ seu Regni quarti postrema Dynastia, quæ sub Cornu isto monstroso futura erat, cui & Oculi erant & Os loquens grandia; de hoc, inquam, cornu affirmatur, quòd Bellum cum Sanctis gesturum erat, eisque prævaliturum; usquedum veniret Antiquus dierum, & judicium daretur Sanctis excelsorum, tempusque veniret quo Regnum possiderent Sancti: id est, ut statim subdit, donec Regnum Dominatusque & Amplitudo Regnorum sub toto cælo dabitur populo sanctorum excelsorum; cujus Regnum erit perpetuum, & omnia Dominia ei servient & auscultabunt. Dan. 7. 20, 21, 22, 27. Potuitne quidquam quidquam apertius dici, quo probetur ultimi Regni dynastiam ultimam eousque permanfuram, donec hæc omnia de Regno Sanctorum, quodcunque illud sit, compleantur?

Jam de Minore propositione, quod scilicet Romano Regno semel exacto & abolito consummabitur Regnum Christi, ex N. Test. facilis est probatio. Nam ab abolitione Antichristi consummabitur Regnum Christi: Ità Paulus 2 Thess. 2. 8. Et revelabitur sceleratus ille, quem Dominus absument spiritu oris sui, & abolebit splendore adventus sui; vel, (ut Syrus) interficiet eum Revelatione adventus sui. Ità quoque ex Apocalypsi constat ad septimæ, id est, ultimæ Tubæ clangorem permanfurum Antichristum; quæ semel clangente, sunt voces in celo magnæ, Facta sunt Regna mundi Domini nostri & Christi ejus, qui regnabit in secula seculorum: id quod Angelus his verbis paulò antè prædixerat clangente Tubâ septimâ, consummatum iri Mysterium Dei, sicut annuntiavit servis suis Prophetis, c. 10. v. 7. cum c. 11. v. 15. At verò Antichristus exoriturus erat ex Imperio Romano, ejusque pars futura. Paulus 2 Thess. 2. 7. Jam peragitur Mysterium Iniquitatis, tantum qui nunc detinet, [detinebit] usque dum è medio sublatus fuerit (id est, Romæ Imperator) & tunc revelabitur sceleratus ille. Et Joannes apertissimè Apoc. 17. affirmat futurum Antichristum unum ex septem capitibus septicipitis Bestiæ, cui urbs illa magna infidebat, quæ (Joannis scilicet ævo) Regnum habebat super Reges terræ. Si jam Urbs illa Roma sit, Bestiæque ista Romanum Regnum, (quod apud omnes, (credo) saltem veteres, in consensu est) erit tunc Antichristus, utpote caput istius Bestiæ Postremum, pars Regni Romani; Ergoque Regnum Romanum durabit ad consummationem Regni Christi, quod, præter hoc, nullum quod in Serie Danielis successionem habere potest pertinet unquam. Id quod Sole meridiano clarius est. Imò (ut hoc tanquam superpondium adjiciam) Antichristus iste Novi Testamenti ipsissimum est Cornu monstrosum Danielis, penes quod ut Ille ultimam quartæ suæ Bestiæ Dynastiam prædixit futuram, ità quoque Joannes sub Antichristo suo sive Pseudopropheta ultimam Regni Romani Scenam peragendam esse. Quodque de cornu suo prodigioso Daniel, Gerebat bellum cum sanctis, & prevalebat eis, cap. 7. vers. 21. idem Joannes de suo Monstro, Datum est ei (inquit) bellum gerere cum sanctis, & eos vincere, Apoc. 13. 7. Daniel cornu suo attribuit os loquens GRANDIA, & quod verba adversus Excelsum loqueretur, & sanctos ejus contereret, cap. 7. vers. 8, 11, 20, 25. Idipsum Joannes de suo perduto refert; Datum est ei os loquens magna & blasphemias, & aperuit os suum ad Blasphemandum adversus Deum, ut convitiis afficeret Tabernaculum ejus, & eos qui in celo habitant, cap. 13. vers. 5, 6. Ex ungue Leonem, quod dici solet. Neque mores tantum, sed & tempus Tyrannidis ad amissim convenit. Quod enim Daniel de Cornu portentoso, Tradentur (inquit) sancti in manum ejus usque ad tempus, tempora, & dimidium temporis; idipsum Joannis de sanato isto & redivivo Bestiæ Romanæ Capite; Data est (inquit) illi potestas agendi (seu, ut nonnulla exemplaria habent, bellum gerendi) mensēs quadraginta duos, vers. 5. cap. 13. Annon menses XLII sunt tres anni cum dimidio, id est, Tempus, tempora, & dimidium temporis? Ecce autem capite precedente vers. 14, non rem tantum, sed & ipsa verba Danielis: Mulier, (inquit) id est Ecclesia, regnante Antichristo fugit à conspectu Serpentis in desertum, ubi aleretur per tempus, tempora, & dimidium temporis.

Idem ergò prorsus est Danielicæ Bestiæ cornu prodigiosum cum Antichristo Joannis in Apocalypsi. Et quoniam utrumque duraturum sit ad consummationem Regni Christi, sequitur Regnum Romanum, cujus pars postrema est Antichristus, esse ipsissimum quartum Regnum Danielis, cujus itidem pars extrema est illa prodigiosa Cornu Dynastia. Frustra enim sunt qui Cornu istud aliud à Bestia, è cujus capite enascitur & pars est, Regnum esse volunt. Cornua enim potestates tantum, Bestiæ verò Regna distinguunt.

ARGUMENTUM III.

Quod occupavit Regnum Tertium, eidemque successit, est Quartum Regnum Danielis: At Regnum Romanum occupavit Regnum Tertium, (nempe Græcorum) eidemque successit: Ergo.

De Majore nullus dubitandi locus, quin illud quartum fuerit quod tertium proximè secutum est, eidemque successerit. De Minore itidem patet ex Historia, Quicquid eousque eousque restabat de ditione Regni Græcorum, id omne Romanis armis & Imperio cessisse. Prædixerat autem Daniel Regnum Græcorum à primi Regis Alexandri morte finibus suis diminutum iri, neque eâ ditionis amplitudine Regnatos successores ejus atque ipse iis reliquerat. Verba sunt cap. 8. vers. 22. Effraeto Hirci cornu magno, (qui eodem interprete est primus Rex Græciæ) quatuor Cornua pro illo, hoc est, inquit, quatuor Regna ex [ea] gente assurrectura sunt; sed non cum robore illius. Item cap. 11. v. 4. Frangetur Regnum ejus, (nempe Regis potentis Alexandri) & dividetur in quatuor partes cæli; sed non posteritati ejus, neque secundum Dominatum ejus quo dominatus fuerat. Et hoc innuere volebam eo quod dixi, quicquid eousque restabat de ditione Regni Græcorum: nequis fortè (quod non neminem fecisse scio) requiratur ut ad Indos usque propagetur Imperium Romanum, quartum Regnum alioquin non futurum.

Illa autem Regni Græcorum per Romanos occupatio ineunda est à morte Antiochi Epiphanis, quando, Perseo ultimo Rege Macedonum ab Æmilio Consule devicto, Macedonia primum Regni Græcanici Caput in Provinciam redacta est, atque ita cum reliqua ferè Græcia in Imperii Romani Jura concessit: nec inde quieverunt Romani, donec, continuis quasi victoriis usi, reliqua, sive capita sive cornua, penitus subegerant. Ab hac igitur Græciæ occupatione putandum est initium Regni quarti, non ab ultima, quæ Ægypti fuit, devictâ Cleopatrá. Nam ubi Regnum Græcanicum primum exortum est, ibi fatum quoque suum & excidium accepisse æquum est existimare. Unde videmus Prophetam nusquam Regnum Græcorum, quamvis de Regibus ejus singillatim egerat, ultra Antiochum Epiphanem produxisse: quia nimirum ab eo tempore Romanus ordinem suum capesserebat in Quaternione Prophetico; atq; idcirco qui secuti sunt Asiæ aut Ægypti Reges, eorum rationem in hac Regia Chronologia deinceps non habendam esse. Imò, quod observari volo in ipso Prophetæ textu, Tyrannis Antiochi expressè statuitur in fine Regni Græcorum, c. 8. v. 23. בְּאַחֲרִית מַלְכוּתָם. In fine Regni ipsorum (id est Græcorum) exsurget Rex durus facie, & intelligens anigmata, &c. Is, scilicet, de quo in visione dicit, quod usque ad Principem exercitûs cælestis magnificaret se, & jugem cultum tolleret, & abjiceret habitaculum sanctuarii illius, &c. v. 11.

lib. 7. cap. 15.
Subiata Carthagine, quæ tam diu annula Romani Imperii fuit, manus suas in totum orbem terrarum marique porrexit, &c.

Et hucusque quidem Argumentum hoc mihi optimè processit, nec usquam impingere visum est. Non est tamen dissitendum habuisse olim Porphyrimum, & habere etiam qui nostro primum ævo, contra totius Ecclesiæ inde ab initio per tot secula consensum, opinionem Porphyrianam ab inferis revocarunt, quod disputationi huic opponant: Græcorum nimirum Regnum non unum, sed duo esse Regna; Alterum ipsius Alexandri, quod tertium est in Quaternione prophetico; Alterum successorum ejus, quod quartum est & ultimum Regnum Danielis. Regnum igitur Romanum, tanquam fabulâ jam transactâ superveniens, ab hoc numero penitus excludendum esse.

Contra hanc interpretationem sic insurgo. Quod unicâ Bestiâ adumbratum est, id unicum est Regnum, & non duo Regna; scilicet alioquin unica Bestia esset duæ Bestiæ; quod ab omni ratione alienum est. Jam verò omne Regnum Græcorum, tam Alexandri quàm successorum ejus, unicâ Bestiâ adumbratur. Ergò, &c. Minorem leges apud Daniele cap. 8. vers. 20, 21, 22. Aries (inquit Angelus) bicornis quem vidisti, sunt Reges Mediæ & Persiæ: Hircus autem ille villosus est Rex Græciæ; Cornu autem magnum interjectum oculis ejus est Rex PRIMUS. (Audin' hic Regem primum? at Rex primus & Reges secundi non de diversis dici possunt Regnis, sed uno eodémque.) Pergit; Atque hoc effraeto, quod consurgent quatuor pro illo, quatuor Regna ex gente sunt assurrectura, sed non cum robore illius. Hic clarissimum est Alexandrum cum successoribus suis fuisse unius ejusdémque Hirci cornua; ideoque unius Regni potestates. Ecquis jam dixerit Bestiam & cornua ejus esse duas Bestias? Me judice, ipse merebitur illis annumerari, nè tertia desit Bestia.

At, inquit, potuit Prophetæ aut Spiritus Sanctus, quod hic unum facit Regnum, ideoque unâ figurat Bestiâ, alibi tamen pro arbitrio duo facere, & duabus adumbrare Bestiis.

Sed respondeo, Non arbitrii res est, sed veritatis, ut unum sit duo & duo unum: neque Deus potest efficere ut cornu cornu sit & nihilominus Bestia. Unitas Regni in ipsa rei veritate posita est, à signo non pendet. Si igitur hoc verum est, unicum esse Regnum, & non duo, tum falsum erit duo esse Regna, & non unum; ut qui alterutrum affirmaverit, alterum sine mendacio affirmare nequit. Et quorsum quæso Prophetia, quæ duo in principio Regna representasset, postea in unum confunderet? Nam si omnino id factum fuisset, non sine ratione factum fuisse credendum est. Taceo quod in ipsa

cap. 7.

ipsa quatuor Bestiarum visione, quò adversarii, dum effugium parant, respiciunt, Tertia Bestia Pardo similis, quæ ipsis satentibus ad Regnum Græcorum aliquatenus pertinet, & alas quatuor in dorso habet, itémque capita quatuor; quæ, quid (quæso) aliud sunt, saltem capita, quàm quatuor Regni istius Satrapia, in quas post mortem primi Regis dissipatum erat? Num hîc quoque dicere audent, quatuor Pardi capita esse aliam & diversam à Pardo Bestiam?

His denique omnibus illud tanquam Palmarium adjungam, quod jam in superioribus demonstravi, nimirum quarto Regno adhuc superstite exoriturum esse Regnum Christi, à quo tandem in pedibus suis fictilibus percutiendum sit, & penitus abolendum. At verò quicquid erat Regni Græcorum, diu ante natum, nedum regnantem Christum, penitus est extinctum; ut ibi quoque probatum est.

Quoniam autem sententiæ hujus authores Prodigiosum quartæ Bestiæ cornu exponunt de Antiocho Epiphane, (neque enim de ullo alio exponere potuerint, omnes licet ingenii nervos intenderint) scire pervelim, quomodo sic visioni Propheticae sua constabit Veritas, quæ non tantum ex visione ipsa facile colligitur, sed interpretatione Angeli expressè & disertis verbis affirmatur, Cornu istud bellum gesturum cum Sanctis, iisque prevaliturum, usquedum venerat Antiquus dierum, & judicium daretur Sanctis, & tempus veniret quo Regnum possiderent Sancti. Namque Antiochus iste Epiphanes mortuus est annis quatuor minus ducentis ante passionem Christi, id est, multò pluribus quàm Regnum Græcorum duraverat à morte Alexandri ad eundem Antiochum Epiphanem. Hoccine est bellum cum Sanctis gerere usquedum veniret Antiquus dierum, & regnum Sanctorum constitueret? Sed jam manum de tabula: & quamvis longè plura adferri possunt, hæc tamen sufficient Quæstioni tum explicandæ tum demonstrandæ.

REVELATIO ANTICHRISTI

De Numeris DANIELIS, MCCXC, MCCCXXXV.

Cap. 12. vers. 11, 12.

*Quò spectent; Eousque nempe Mysterium Extremorum Temporum, ejúsque qui tunc rerum potiretur, clausum & obsignatum fore;

T hoc adstruam; primò submovendum est præjudicium sententiæ Brough-toni, Junii & sequacium, qui hosce Numeros calamitatis Antiochianæ an-gustiis includere, ejusdémque terminos & metas, nec aliud quidquam, designare volunt. Quod ut absq; omni contextûs fundamento faciunt, (neq; enim illic scopus iste vel uno verbulo innuitur) ità tam manifestè contra historiæ rei que gestæ fidem, ut mihi non exiguam admirationem habeat, tot illius sententiæ admiratores fautoresque hætenus reperiri potuisse.

Priorem enim Numerum, dierum 1290, à pollutione Templi ad Diploma illud αὐτονομίας Judæis 2. Mac. 11. 27. concessum, supputant. Alterum verò, dierum 1335, ab eodem principio ad ipsius Epiphanis mortem.

Sed rem gestam omnimodo pervertunt, & bis falluntur insigniter. Nam primò, Diploma illud datum est non ab Epiphane, sed ab Eupatore filio post mortem Patris, nedum, ut isti statuunt, ante mortem ejus. Vide locum Maccab. Deinde, à Pollutione Templi, neque ad Antiochi mortem, neque ad Diploma αὐτονομίας intercesserunt plusquam triennium, & quatuor ad summum menses, id est, non ampliùs diebus 1200; quod hæc ratione ostenditur.

Repurgatio Templi facta est tribus a Pollutione annis exquisitè evolutis anno utiq; Regni Græcorum 148, die 25 mensis Casleu, qui, Josepho teste, (nec dubitationi locus est) respondet Appellæo Macedonum. Videtis 1. Macc. 4. 52. Joseph. Antiq.
lib. 12. cap. 11.

Huic Antiochum Epiphanem non quatuor ampliùs mensibus supervixisse constat; cùm nempe eodem anno (putà ab Autumno incipiendo) mense Xanthico fato jam concessisset, rerumque potiretur Eupator filius; utpote à quo, illo mense, die 15, αὐτονομίας diploma (in quo de Patris sui morte testatur) Judæis indultum fuerat.
Vide 2. Macc. 11. v. 23, 33. Atqui in anno Macedonico sive Syro-Græcorum Xan-thicus mensis ab Appellæo sive Casleu consecutione quartus est. Ecce enim mensium

Ut autem fons erroris obstruatur, quo factum est ut Antiocho Epiphani vita adhuc ulteriùs prorogaretur, illud mente probe tenendum est. Annos Græcorum sive Seleucidarum, quibus Author primi Libri Maccabæorum utitur, Judæorum more, inchoari à Verno mense Xanthico sive Nisan; Annos autem Alexandræos, quibus utitur Author secundi Libri Maccabæorum, (Alexandrinus ipse) inire ab Autumno sequenti, id est, ab Hyperberetæo. Hinc factum est, ut cùm anni prioris Libri sex mensium inter-vallo posterioris antevertant initium, necesse fuerit, quoties res gesta in æstivalem anni semestrem inciderit, ut Liber posterior priori annos uno minùs numeret; quod illis qui rem non satis attendissent fraudi fuit. Nam alioquin diligenter conferenti, Quare cùm 2. Maccab. (c. 11. 23, 33.) Antiochus mortuus habeatur Anno Græcorum 148, in primo autem (cap. 6. 16.) anno 149, illud necessariò colligitur, eum mense Xanthico ineunte mortem obiisse. Neque enim citiùs potuit, cùm nondum Annus 149 Græcorum à vere incepisset; neque seriùs, cùm quindecimo Xanthici Filius, eo jam mortuo, Rescriptum Judæis dedisset. Imò & illud quoque sponte sequitur, nondies 45, prout sententiæ Junianæ adstipulatores sibi persuadent, sed 13 tantùm, aut 14 ad summum, inter Antiochi mortem & Rescriptum αὐτονομίας intercedere potuisse; ità ut eò jam * gemini hujus numeri interstitium accommodari non possit.

Ex istis jam satis liquere arbitror geminum hunc numerum (quæcunque tandem ejus mens sit dicenda) cladi Religionis Judaicæ per Antiochum Epiphanem nullò modo adaptari posse. Quid igitur hîc restat quàm ut Diebus istis (prout alibi solet) Annos totidem significari putemus? Neque ad triennalis quadriennalisve paulò minùs intervalli, quinimo ad longinqui temporis eventum aliquem (quicquid tandem id fuerit) exitu suo designandum pertinere.

Illud Judæi animadvertentes, tot annos (de initio tamen numerationis incerti) ad Messia sui adventum (quod unicè in votis habent) fluxuros arbitrati sunt; non hodie solum, sed jam à multis retro seculis: unde factum, ut re temere in calculum datâ, aliquoties vanâ spe delusi sint, imò bis Pseudo-Christorum laqueis irretiti.

Anno enim quinto Imperii Leonis (ait Theophanes Author Lib. 21. Histor. miscel. cap. 16.) id est, Anno Æræ Christianæ 720. apparuit quidam Syrus Pseudo-christus, & seduxit Hebræos, dicens se esse Christum. Credibile est huic imposturæ captatam occasionem ex calculo horumce Danielis Dierum, ab excidio Hierosolymitano sub Rege Zedechia à quo ad Annum Christi 705 fluxerunt Anni 1290. Aberratum est in Computo annis quindecim, quod leviusculum est.

Iterum tempore Maimonidis circa annum Christi 1130. exortus est alius Pseudo-messias seu Messia Prodigus, David, El-David dictus, quem Rex Persiarum decolari fecit. Supputârunt dies Danielis à prophanatione Antiochi; unde ad Christi annum 1123. sunt itidem anni 1290. neque hîc multum in calculo, licet in re ipsâ nihil, aberratum fuit.

Vide Epist.
Maimonidis
apud Buntorf.
in synthesi Thesauri
Gram. &
Helvicum.

Simili fundamento innixus videtur R. Abraham, qui Messia adventum prædixisse fertur In Annum Christi 1466. ducto videlicet posteriori numero Prophetico ab Anno Christi 131, quo Adrianus in loco ubi Templum Domini steterat, βδελυγμα ἐρημώσεως, putâ Delubrum Jovi Capitolino, exstruxit. Indè enim ad annum Christi 1466 numerantur ad amissim anni 1335. Sed nullus tunc, quod sciam, apparuit qui se pro Messia vendicaret.

Ex Christianis autem quotquot de Annis censent, non diebus, iis ferè in eo cum Judæis convenit, quòd ut illi Numeros hosce ad Primum Christi adventum, ita isti saniore fide ad secundum referunt; vel (quod non multum interest) ad Judæorum collectionem, quam ipsi quoque Judæi sperant, sed in Epocha statuenda omnino laborant; imò quædam hîc supponunt neque Textui neque Rationi satis congrua. Sed qui sententias eorum particulariùs scire volet, ex ipsis petat. Mihi eas ultrâ referendi non est animus, ut nec refellendi.

Quin meam quoque symbolam in numerum interpretationum conferre liceat, quam virorum doctorum judiciis lubens submittam.

Sic igitur statuo: Eventum quem geminus iste Numerus exitu suo designat, nec esse Adventum Christi, nec Restaurationem Israelis; quinimo Vaticinii de temporibus quarti Regni novissimis, seu Antichristi, (quo Angelus Dan. 12. 6. קץ הפלאות finem mirabilium retulerat) Resignationem; eousque putâ, quid illis occultaretur, quòve pertinerent, etiam cum impleri cœperint, ignorandis. Hunc esse Numerorum istorum scopum, fidem tibi faciet Angeli & Danielis hoc capite Dialogus; quem sic ex Textu repræsentò, intellectu sanè persacilem, modò illud ex capite septimo memineris, Quartæ Bestiæ, seu Regni, tempora extrema seu novissima esse intervallum illud TEMPORIS, TEMPORUM, ET DIMIDII TEMPORIS Cornu oculato attributum: de quo item Regno Cornuq; Angelus iterum post Epiphanis historiam (quâcum Scriptura Regnum tertium semper terminare * solet) superiore capite finiente disseruerat; ut itâ nimirum temporis rerumq; gestarum seriem à Persica Monarchia, unde inceperat, ad Resurrectionem usque & Secundum Christi adventum perduceret. Sed ausculta Dialogum.

ANG. Tu verò, Daniel, claude verba, & obsigna librum usque ad tempus FINIS; tum autem discurrent multi, & crescet scientia.

De Epocha Numerorum.

Calculi Prophetici scopo sic ostenso & perspecto, Epochæ quoq; illius scènere-mur lucem, vel potius reddamus à Spiritu Sancto accensam; eâ constitutâ & firmatâ, postea complementi Prophetiæ historiam exhibituri.

Epocha igitur Calculi Prophetici, juxta characterem ab Angelo datum, est Templi Hierosolymitani ab Antiocho Epiphane profanatio; & quidem convenientissimè, ut ità Typus Antichristi ad Antichristi manifestationem nos manuducat. De ea enim profanatione Angelus in hoc ipso Vaticinio paulò ante egerat, nec aliam hic Ablationem jugis sacrificii & Abominationem desolationis, sed eamque quam ibi descripserat, intelligi debere, arguunt primò verba utrobique eadem: hîc מִסַּחַת הַזֶּבֶחַ וְהַתִּמְרִי וְהַתְּנִיחַ שֶׁקִּיז שָׁמָּה Dan. 12. 11. illic וְהַתִּמְרִי וְהַתְּנִיחַ וְהַזֶּבֶחַ שֶׁקִּיז שָׁמָּה Dan. 11. 31. Atqui ultima desolatio Hierosolymorum ad finem LXX Hebdomadum, quam nonnulli volunt Angelum sibi Epocham Numerationis hîc statuere, secus aliisque verbis prædicitur. Deinde, quòd à ratione prorsus alienum sit, neque cordato cuiquam, saltem qui rem expenderit, probabile videbitur; Angelum, Ablationis jugis sacrificii, & Abominationis desolationis, tanquam rei Prophetæ, quocum verba faciebat, jam notæ, mentione factâ, non ad eam respicere quam paulò antè (continuatâ adhuc oratione) descripserat; verùm eâ transultâ, ad aliam, de qua ante * triennium scilicet eidem vaticinatus fuerat. Cui, inquam, hoc ut verisimile persuadebitur? Hoc igitur fixum ratumq; esto, Calculi Prophetici Epocham esse Profanationem Epiphanianam. Atque hinc mihi, Lector, Demonstratio consurgit hujuscemodi: Si Profanatio Epiphaniana sit hujus Numerationis Epochâ, ea verò non possit (ut ostensum est) Cladis istius durationi applicari; necessariò sequitur Dies hîc in Annos convertendos, & de longinqui temporis Eventu aliquo capiendos esse: Qui quàm probè & ad amissum Prædictioni respondeat, jam faxo intelligas.

* Tempus anno primo Darii Medici, cum præfens Angeli colloquium (in quo de Abominatione Epiphaniana inter alia agit) habitum sit anno tertio Cyri.

De Eventu.

PRIOR numerus à Profanatione Epiphaniana numeratus exit ad Annum Domini 1123.

POSTERIOR ad Annum Domini 1168.

Sed cum Peccatum illud desolationis (חֲפֵזַת שֶׁמֶשׁ ut appellatur Dan. 8. 13.) ultra sexennium duraverit; haud incommode à singulis ejus Annis duci potest Calculi prophetici initium, atque ad totidem annos in exitu terminari. Anni autem, quos jam posui, à medio Sexennii numerantur, quando Jube sacrificium sublatum est, Anno ante Æram Christianam 167.

Fama πῶδες & Oraculi implendi.

ANNO 1106 (inquit Urspergensis apud Baronium) Paschalis Papa ordinavit processionem in Galliam Cisalpinam, ubi & Consilium celebrandum mense Octobri indixit. Dum in itinere positus Florentiam pervenisset, de ADVENTU ANTI-CHRISTI proximè futuro sparsam famam inveniens, Florentiæ substitit: Cum verò audisset quæ ferrentur, ut nullius fidei & authoritatis assertionem contempsit, & captum iter est profectus.

Addit Baronius, fuisse opinionem non vulgariū virorum, Antichristum isto seculo fore revelandum, & inter alios Norberti, viri temporis istius famā celeberrimi; de quo ità Bernardus Ep. 56. ad Gaufridum Carnotensem Episcopum.

Cum (inquit) ante hos paucos dies ejus faciem videre, & de cælesti fistula, ore videlicet ipsius, plurima haurire meruerim; hoc tamen ab ipso non audiui (scilicet iturum eum eum Hierosolymam: ) verum de Antichristo cum inquirerem quid sentiret; durante adhuc ea qua nunc est generatione revelandum illum esse, certissime se scire protestatus est. At cum eandem certitudinem unde haberet sciscitanti mihi exponere vellet; audito quod respondit, non me illud pro certo credere debere putavi. Ad summam tamen hoc asseruit, non visurum se mortem, nisi prius videat generalem in Ecclesia persecutionem.

Sabellicus Enneadis nonæ lib. 4. Prodigia per id tempus ( id est sub Paschali secundo) aliquot apparuerunt: Mare vicenis passibus, alii centenis scribunt, præter solitum littora inundavit; apparuit & Cometes mira magnitudinis. His fortasse prodigiis motus affirmare non dubitavit Fluentinus Antistes, esse Antichristum natum. Quà prædicatione Paschalis motus, in Hetruriam profectus, conventuque super ea re Florentiæ habito; cum appareret hominem nullà alià ratione subnixum, quam ut alicujus magnæ rei author videretur, ejusmodi prædicatione usum; tantum admonuit ut temerario incepto desisteret. Recognovit inde Paschalis in Cisalpina & Comata Callia Ecclesiarum statum.

Platina rem sic narrat. Postquam de Cometa dixerat qui tunc temporis apparuit, eum Paschalem tanquam rem naturalem neglexisse, subdit, Verum cum intellexisset Florentinum Episcopum affirmare solitum Antichristum natum esse, eò statim proficiscitur; concilioque habito, re ipsà admodum discussà, cum levitate quadam, ut alicujus magnæ rei author videretur, motum Episcopum cerneret, hominem verbis castigatum dimittit; atque inde in Cisalpinam proficiscitur.

Omnino existimo Famam hanc eo præcipuè subnixam fundamento, quod vidissent Calculum Danielis pro annis computatum tum propemodum elapsum fuisse. Cum igitur Episcopus iste Fluentinus seu Florentinus priorem periodum fortè observasset intra vicennium aut circiter evolutum iri, porro putaret Antichristum non nisi ætate jam maturâ revelandum, & adultum ad bellum contra Sanctos proditurum; ideo eum affirmavit jam tum natum esse, minimè verò ( ut perperam Centuriatores acceperunt ) jam tum in Ecclesia dominari. Nondum enim Romanum Pontificem esse magnum illum & κελεύς dictum Antichristum vel Florentinus Antistes, vel alii suspicati sunt; sed alium Triennem & Semestrem expectabant.

Natam verò hanc Famam, ut dixi, ex supputatione Dierum Danielis, quasi ad Antichristi adventum deducendum, ( nempe prioris Calculi, nam secundum fortasse ad extremum Judicium retulerint ) mihi, ut facilius credam, suadet non absimile conamen Gualteri Bruti nostratis, qui diu postea, circa annum viz. 1390, eampse rationem allegaverit revelati suo tempore in Britannia Antichristi, in * Tractatu quem ea de re exhibuit Episcopo Herefordensi. Sed Epocham statuit in Excidio Hierosolymitano, ut ita exitum suo & Wicklessi ævo accommodaret. Quidni credam idem aliis, longè ante Brutum natum, in mentem venire potuisse; præsertim cum Epochæ verisimilioris ab Antiocho periodus ab exitu suo haud multum abesset? Præterea Cometa appareret, & alia prodigia humanis mentibus commovendis nata: Fortè enim natum putaverint Antichristum eo temporis momento quo Cometa apparuisset; sicut Magi Christum apparente Stellâ. Sed paulò diutius Famam nos detinuit, jam Eventum referemus.

* In Opere imperfecto in Mus. Hom. 49. ad vers. 27. cap. 24.

In hoc Libro admonentur Fideles " Antichristum illum magnum jamdudum venisse,

" frustra adhuc expectari, esse jam Dei permissione ætate provecum:

" Præsentem Rei Ecclesiasticæ Statum, Pseudoprophetarum regimine & mendaciorum ministris constantem, unà cum populis ei in errore subditis:

" Qui utrâque potestate armati, aliisque omnibus ad Errorem fundandum latèque provehendum præditiis instructi, sub specioso Sponsæ Christi titulo, cultusque &

" sanctimonie Christianæ larva, viam Salutis per Christum mundo annunciatam fraudulentis erroribus & damnationis doctrinis oppugnent; Christi meritis, gratiæ &

" officio mediatorio derogent; uni Deoque Christoque debita, sibi, creaturis, hominumque operibus adscribant; Sanctos Sanctasque Numinum vice colant, Reliquiis

" Imaginibusque divinam venerationem deferant; Eucharistiam pro Deo, ipsoque Jesu Christo, adorent; verbo, Christianitatis titulo reipsâ Idololatriam exerçant;

" denique, in Dei amantes & vera Christi membra odiis & persecutionibus sæviant.

2 Theff. 2.

“ Hunc hominum Statum ( non singularem hominem ) esse Antichristum, Meretricem Babylonicam, quartam Bestiam Danielis, ( nempe in statu ejus novissimo, ut dictum est ) Hominem illum peccati, & Filium perditionis, qui extollitur super omnem Deum, ita ut in Templo Dei, id est, Ecclesia, sedeat, ostendens se tanquam sit Deus; qui jam venit in omni genere seductionis & mendacii in iis qui pereunt.

“ Quapropter se ab hoc Iniquitatis Mystério, sicut mandavit Deus, secessionem facere tam intrinsecè quàm extrinsecè; hortarique omnes, quibus Deus Opt. Max. eandem veritatem revelaverit, ut idem secum facerent; Civitatique Sanctæ Jerusalem, veritati Christi, & Sponsæ ipsius perpusillæ sese adjungerent.

“ Quem in finem se jam mundo notum facere qualis sit ipsorum Cœtus, & quas habuerint secessionis suæ causas.

* Quam Anglice vertit Samson Lennardus, Anno 1624.

Hæc Scripti illius summa est, quod Dei providentiâ ad nostra usque tempora servarant Reliquiæ Waldensium Alpinorum, à quibus acceptum typis non ita pridem vulgavit ex antiquo Manuscripto Joannes Paulus Perrin in * Hist. Waldens. & Albigenf. Gallica. Videtis eum, Lib. 1. cap. 7. & Parte tertiâ, ( quæ de Doctrina & Disciplina Waldensium agit ) Lib. tertio.

Atque hoc fuit secessionis Piorum à Romana Ecclesia initium; neque ante hoc tempus quicquam ex omni Christianorum memoria auditum fuisse crediderim de Papatu magno illo & κεφαλῆς dicto Antichristo, neque alium expectandum esse.

Quæ tamen sententia ab hoc tempore in plurimorum animis gliscere, atque indies magis magisque invalescere cœpit.

Nam quod unicum hic excipi potest de Hildebrando, in quem aliquot antè annis hujus nominis jaciebantur contumeliæ, id assertionem meam non labefactat: Siquidem in personam illius eæ dirigebantur, & aliam ob causam, idque ab illis qui Romanæ Ecclesiæ cultum & dogmata nondum improbârunt; propterea non alio censu habendæ quàm pro parabolicè & κατ' ἀνέκδοτον dictis, Declamatorum more.

Sed enim fuisse hoc tempore Cœtum aliquem qui à Romana Ecclesia secessionem fecerat, & seorsim conventus ageret, id porrò ex Bernardo colligitur, Serm. 65. & 66. in Cantica Cantic. ubi in vulpeculas quasdam declamitat vineam Ecclesiæ demolientes. Quos tamen ( inquit ) si fidem interroges, nihil Christianius; si conversationem, nihil irreprehensibilis; & quæ loquuntur, factis probant: præterea jactare se esse successores Apostolorum, & Apostolicos nominare. Lege ( Lector ) si lubet; contulisse non poenitebit.

Apoc. 17. 14.

Affingit quidem ille ex auditu vulpeculis istis errores aliquot Manichæorum de prohibitione conjugii & interdictione ciborum; ut facilè hinc agnoscas Waldensium progenitores, quibus & similes Manichæismi afficti sunt; sed falsò, ut luculenter ostendit Reverendissimus & omnis Antiquitatis Ecclesiasticæ peritissimus Archiepiscopus Armachanus. Quin & omnis ævi experientia testatur, etiam nostri, quàm parùm fidei in hujusmodi criminationibus adversario tribuendum sit. Hoc tamen eò à me dictum putari nolim, quasi Segreges istos omni prorsus erroris labe expertes crederem. Nihil opus est. Quippe in eo non vertitur res quam adstructam velim. Ultro igitur dare non verebor, præ* ἀμετρία τῶν ἀποδόχῃ: ( ut est hominum ingenium ) cum istos, tum postea Waldenses & Albigenes ( quidni & nostros ? ) in nonnullis tam quæ ad dogmata, quàm quæ ad mores spectent, ( quæ tamen essentiam Fidei Christianæ non lædant ) ab errore excusari non posse nec debere. Hoc tamen non prohibere assero quò minùs fuerint Cœtus ille Jesu Christi electus, vocatus, & fidelis. In hoc enim Religionis examine illud nos ( ut opinor ) sentire decet, Veros & legitimos Dei cultores non ex omnimoda erroris, etiam non-fundamentalis, immunitate censendos esse, quinimo ex puritate cultûs & immunitate ab Idololatria. Qui sic comparati, Deo Patri, per Jesum Christum Filium Mediatorem, sincerè placere studeant, ei gratos esse & acceptos. Quis enim mihi præstabit, septem illa millia qui tempore Eliæ Baaligenua non flexerant, quòsque Deus sibi superfuisse testatur, ab omni errore graviore fuisse immunes? aut Ecclesiam Judaicam aliquot ante Christum seculis, quâ parte sincerissima fuit, pluribus de Religione erroribus non laborasse?

Inter Annum Christi 1160 & 1170, ( nam quo præcisè anno inter Scriptores non convenit ) quodam quasi Antichristi jam patefacti classico excitati, magnus hominum numerus, alii Waldenses ab Authore Waldo, alii Albigenes, alii aliis dicti nominibus, ab Ecclesia Romana secessionem fecerunt; Eam esse Babylonem illam Apocalypticam,

EPISTLE I.

The Fellows of Trinity Colledge near Dublin, their Letter to Mr. Mede, desiring him to accept of the Provostship of their Colledge.

Worthy Sir,

TH E vacancy of the place of Provost of this Colledge, happening by the death of our late Governour Sir William Temple, hath drawn us the Fellows of the same to seek abroad for a Successor, on whom that place might be conferred: among many whom we have had recommended unto us, especially by the Lord Primate of Ireland, your worthy self is one. Upon which consideration, being of all other the weightiest, we have fixed our resolutions upon your person, and have accordingly settled the Election. And howsoever we are as yet ignorant of your intentions, as unacquainted with your person; yet the hope of your acceptance is so much advanced by the Lord Primate his confidence of the same, as we conceive you will not expect we should use many words to that purpose. A long-continued uncertainty in your determinations will (as matters now stand) be a means to lay us open to many disadvantages, which we hope you will stop by your freely accepting of what we so freely tender unto you. What the Affairs are that require your speedy settlement in the Government, we refer to the Relation of Mr. Temple and Mr. Lloyd, two of the senior Fellows, to whom you may give credit as our Agents, whose Commission is from us, and Employments in the behalf of our Colledge have our approbation. And thus ceasing to be further troublesome unto you, we commit you to the protection of the Almighty, ever resting

EPISTLE II.

Mr. Mede's Answer to the foregoing Letter.Worthy Gentlemen,

YOur love and good opinion of me, a person so unknown unto you, hath so far obliged me to your Society, that I confess an Answer by Letter is no way sufficient to acknowledge it: Yet both the great difference accompanying your Election, with such inconveniences as I saw must needs have followed thereupon, besides the consciousness of mine own disabilities and infirmities, which gave me just cause to suspect I should not satisfy that expectation which would be of a Stranger in such a place, hath deterred me from accepting that honour which was by you so lovingly conferred upon me: which therefore I must, and do fully and freely resign into your hands, hoping that God will direct you in the choice of some other, both more able and worthy to take that charge upon him. Howbeit, as I shall never forget this so undeserved a favour, so will I ever account my self to have that relation to your Society, which shall bind me as affectionately to love and pray for the prosperity thereof, as if I were a Member; and, if God should ever give me opportunity, no less to endeavour the same. In the mean time I heartily desire Almighty God to bless you, and will ever remain

EPISTLE IV.

Mr. Mede's Second Letter to Archbishop Usher touching the Millennium, and the Chronology of the Samaritan Pentateuch, &c.

My Reverend Lord,

HAVING understood by Mr. Lowe's Letter to Mr. Chappel, that my * Books were lost between Dublin and Drogheda, as they were coming to your Lordship; I presumed a second time to obtrude upon your Grace three or four more of them: howsoever the worth were not such that the first loss was much material. I of he sent into Ireland. I beseech your Lordship pardon me, if I have offended (as I am afraid I have) either against discretion or good manners: For I confess I have been since somewhat jealous, that the Books I first sent were not so lost, but that they were found again: which if they were, how can I but blush to think, that I have with such either shew of self-love or unmannerly importunity again troubled your Lordship with them, who should not have presumed at the first to have offered any more than one? But my confidence is in your Grace's experienced humanity to accept any thing in good part from a Scholar's hand, though perhaps accompanied with some melancholick vanity.

My Lord, I sent in the Letter I mention the last Paragraph or piece of some Specimina Interpretationum Apocalypticarum, namely, that which concerned the Millennium. Whereto I added, for further probability of my Conceit, somewhat more out of my Adversaria, and in special that one of Carpentarius's Com. in Alcinoum Platonis p. 322. * Septimum Millenarium ab universa Cabbalistarum Schola vocari MAGNUM DIEM JUDICII. Wherein I had no intent or thought, nor yet have, to avow that old conceit of the Chiliasm, That the World should as it were labour 6000 years, and in the Seventh thousand should be that glorious sabbath of the Reign of Christ, (I inclined to think it much nearer:) But only to shew how fitly in the Hebrew notion, not only a long time of some Years and Ages, but even this very time of a Thousand years, might be styled a Day. Howbeit I desire your Lordship to give me leave (if but for your recreation) to relate the event of a piece of my Curiosity since that time; the rather, because the means thereof is beholding to your Grace.

I chanced to light upon Mr. Selden's Marmora Arundelliana, and found therein, together with an honorable and deserved mention of your Grace's name, the Chronology of your Samaritan Pentateuch, published to the view of the whole world. I had thereby opportunity to take more curious notice thereof than I had done when your Lordship was in England; and observed, that it much more exceeded the Jewish in * Hemeans his Clavis Apocalypticæ, &c. in Copies where- of he sent into Ireland. Viz. Dissert. de Numeris Dan. cap. 12. v. 11, 12. & Specimen interpret. Millen. Apocalypt.

* That the Seventh Millennium is by the whole School of the Cabbalists call'd The Great Day of Judgment.

the Genealogy of the Patriarchs after the flood, then it came short in those before it. It came therefore into my mind to try how near the 6000 years of the world would be by that computation: I found it would be Anno Æræ Christianæ 1736, which is just the very year when the 1260 years of the Beast's reign will expire, if it be reckoned from the Deposition of Augustulus the last Roman Emperor.

Depositio Augustuli Anno Æræ Christ.	476
Anni Regni Bestiæ	1260
	Sum. 1736

Adde annos Æræ Christ. quando exhibunt Tempora Bestiæ seu 'Απο- στασίας, si ducantur à depositione Augustuli	1736
	Sum. 6000

I began here to consider, whether this difference of the Account of the years of the world were not ordered by a special disposition of Providence, to frustrate our Curiosity in searching the time of the Day of Judgment.

My Lord, I would trouble your Lordship with a Conceit or two more, if I had time. As that I conceive Nebuchadnezzar's dream, Dan. 2. to have been some years before he sought for the interpretation, which was the reason he had forgotten it: the words in ver. 29. רֵעִיוֹנָהּ מֵרִיקִי may be taken for the dream, and may be well so construed; viz. That his dream came upon him, or came into his mind. Also that the 40 years, Ezek. 4. 6. should be the time of Manasses Idolatry, for which God threatens so often that he would destroy that Kingdom. But Mr. Provost will not stay for me. I beseech the Almighty long to bless your Grace, and grant you life: and thus I end with my humble Service, and am

EPISTLE V.

Mr. Hayn his First Letter to Mr. Mede, about several passages in Daniel and the Revelation.

SALUTEM in CHRISTO.

Worthy and Learned Sir,

SOME kind friend have lately imparted to me your Synchronisms of the Apocalyps printed, and some other written passages on Daniel's times and other parts of Scripture. The world must needs give good entertainment to your painful and learned labours, who have have undertaken paths troden by few, with much care of sure footing, especially in your Synchronisms: Yet see how it falls out (as in this kind it cannot be avoided) in all things you shall not find assent. For my part I know well quàm sit mihi curta supellex; yet partly that I may be better instructed my self, partly to give you occasion of further clearing the Truth, I have sent here included some Positions, with Arguments confirming them, contrary to some of your Tenets; desiring your favourable interpretation of my meaning, and your Answer at your best leisure: and assuring you that I do this not contradicendi studio, sed amore veritatis indagandæ, and minding (if you encourage me thereto) to shew hereafter my Reasons of some dissent in other matters, I commend you and your studies to God's blessing, and rest

in London, June 5.
1629.

Your very loving Friend,

Tho. Hayn.

I. POSIT. Daniel shews not the Roman Monarchie's persecution of the Church, and the Fall of the same Monarchy.

Argum. 1. If the Romans persecution of the Saints and the Fall of the Romans were not revealed till Christ revealed them to John in the Apocalyps, then Daniel revealed them not. But the Romans persecution of the Saints and their Fall were not revealed till Christ revealed them to John in the Apocalyps. Ergò Daniel revealed them not.

The Major Proposition is evident. The Minor is thus proved.

The Romans persecution of the Saints and their Fall are revealed in the little Book, Apoc. 5. &c. by opening seven Seals and blowing seven Trumpets, all concerning seven-headed Rome: and none was able to open the Seals of this Book till Christ opened them to John. Ergò the Romans persecution and Fall were revealed to none till Christ revealed them to John.

The former part of the Antecedent is granted by the general consent of Interpreters on the Apocalyps. The latter part is clear in the Text, Apocal. 5. None was able to open the Book, none in heaven, or earth, or under the earth. Now if Daniel had shewed these persecutions, Paul, who delivered to his hearers all the counsel of God, could have opened these also: But Apocal. 5. denies that he could, or that any man else could.

Argum. 2. The persecutions of Christ's eternal Kingdom mentioned in Dan. 2. 44. & chap. 7. 26, 27. and frequently in the New Testament, are not prophesied in Daniel. But the persecutions brought by the Romans on the Church are against Christ's eternal Kingdom, to be preached over the world after Christ. Ergò the persecutions brought by the Romans on the Church or eternal Kingdom of Christ are not spoken of in Daniel.

The Minor Proposition is clear. The Major is confirmed by all speeches of that eternal Kingdom in Daniel. The Stone which became a Mountain is not battered, nor the Mountain any way assailed, Chap. 2. The eternal Kingdom breaks the former Kingdoms; but it self is not broken, Chap. 2. 44. When the four Beasts Chap. 7. are destroyed, then comes the Son of man in the clouds, and receives the eternal Kingdom, which John Baptist, Christ himself, and the Apostles preached. There also is no persecution of this Kingdom mentioned, Chap. 7. 13, 14. nor Verse 27, &c. The Battel against the Saints, Verse 21. and the consuming of them, Verse 25. concerns the Saints before the setting up of Christ's Kingdom over all the world; as the endeavour to alter * Times and || Laws plainly shews. Antiochus Epiphanes was the man that attempted this.

* namely such as Moses Law had prescribed for their Feasts and Solemnities.

|| namely them of old about Sacrificing and Circumcision, &c.

II. POSIT. The fourth Beast, Dan. 7. is not able sufficiently to express the Roman Empire; and therefore it expresseth it not.

Argum. That which is but sufficiently expressed by all the four Beasts, or the chief parts of all four, cannot be sufficiently expressed by one of the four alone, namely the fourth.

But the Roman Empire is but sufficiently expressed by all the four Beasts, Dan. 7. or the chief parts of them. Ergò the Roman Empire cannot be sufficiently expressed by the fourth Beast alone.

The Major is evident. The Minor is thus confirmed.

If the Roman Empire, Apoc. 13. be resembled by a Beast which is composed of all Daniel's four Beasts, Dan. 7. or the chief parts of the four Beasts, then it is but sufficiently expressed by them all. But the Roman Empire, Apoc. 13. is resembled by a Beast which is composed of all Daniel's four Beasts, or their chief parts. Ergò the Roman Empire, &c.

The Major is proved thus.

Either the Major is true, or else the Composition taken from the three former Beasts and their chief parts is needleß. But it is not needleß, for God hath nothing needleß in his Word. Ergo the Major is true.

The Minor is proved thus.

That the Roman Empire is expressed by a Beast composed of all Daniel's four Beasts, Dan. 7. or the chief parts of them all, is plain thus.

3. It is like a Leopard. —	It hath 7 heads. so had the four Beasts in Dan.	3. Beast. The Leopard —	1.
1. It hath a Lion's mouth. —		1. The Lion —	1.
2. A Bear's paws. —		2. The Bear —	1.
4. The 10 horns of the 4. Beast.		4. The Last Beast —	4.

In all 7 heads.

It blasphemeth, hath large authority, wars against the Saints, overcomes and prospers. Therefore it is composed and is extracted out of the 4 Beasts, Dan. 7.

EPISTLE VI.

Mr. Med's Answer to Mr. Hayn's First Letter about several passages in Daniel and the Revelation.

SIR,

THE last week I could not get any time to answer your Letter, and therefore I thought good to make use of your indulgence, that I should answer at my best leisure. And though I have not now that leisure I expected, yet I will not frustrate you any longer. What passages of mine you should have seen upon Daniel's times, I cannot imagine; for I remember not to have done any thing directly upon that Prophecy, but only occasionally in some Discourses upon other places of Scripture: whether any body hath extracted those parcels from their body, I cannot tell, but wish they had not, lest I may have wrong by being mistaken.

For your Two Positions about the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel, your Grounds do as much mistake as contradict my Tenets. And therefore I shall either answer or decline your Arguments by setting down my own opinion in these following Theses.

1. The Roman Empire to be the Fourth Kingdom of Daniel, was believed by the Church of Israel both before and in our Saviour's time; received by the Disciples of the Apostles, and the whole Christian Church for the first 400 years, without any known contradiction. And I confess, having so good ground in Scripture, it is with me tantum non Articulus fidei, little less than an Article of faith.

2. I acknowledge also the subject of the Apocalyptical Visions to be Fata Imperii Romani post primum Christi adventum usque ad secundum supersuturi, The Fates of the Roman Empire, which after the first coming of Christ was still to continue in being even till the second. And this I affirm, the Roman Kingdom was revealed unto Daniel, but not according to that distinct succession of things and specification of the Fates thereof (which was first made known unto S. John,) but only in general and in imagine confusa, not to be explicated but by Christ himself. I say, the Roman Kingdom was revealed to Daniel in general, but the order of the times thereof, and the series rerum gerendarum or course of things to be acted therein, not until the Revelation unto S. John.

3. Nor is it strange or unwonted, that a thing may be revealed in general, and yet most of the particulars concerning the same to be unknown and sealed. The calling of the Gentiles, or the Kingdom of Christ among the Gentiles, by way of surrogation to the Jews, was revealed unto S. Peter and the rest of the Apostles; but the particular Fates and States of that Kingdom were never known till Christ revealed them to S. John in the Apocalyptical Visions. The like I say of the Fourth or Roman Kingdom; the general revelation whereof could not but be before the opening of the sealed Book in the Apocalyps, since it had then been so long a time in the world, as it was grown past the expon, and had fulfilled what it was to fulfil upon Daniel's people.

4. As

4. As for the Persecutions of the Church, I deny the argument either of the Seals or Trumpets to be the Roman persecutions of Christ's Kingdom, or that any of them have reference to persecutions save the Fifth Seal only; or that any thing contained in them was made known to Daniel, save the Catastrophe only represented in the last Trumpet, which the Angelus tonitruum proclaims there to be Consummatio Mysteriorum Dei, prout annuntiavit servis suis Prophetis, The finishing of the Mystery of God, as he hath declared to his servants the Prophets; and therefore cannot be denied to have been both foretold and expected for the general, although not for the Manner, Time, and Order in serie rerum gerundarum, till now. Rev. 10. 7.

5. Howsoever my Tenet here be, yet your Assertion, That the Romans persecution was revealed to none till Christ revealed it to John, cannot stand, unless you deny the coming of the man of sin (who is a limb of that Kingdom) to be any part of the Church's afflictions: For this was revealed unto S. Paul, both for the quality and the fall thereof, viz. That Christ should destroy it ἐπιφανεία ἡ παρουσία αὐτοῦ which I make no doubt but S. Paul learned out of the seventh of Daniel, where that ruffling Horn also is not destroyed until the Son of man comes in the clouds of heaven, to receive that Universal Kingdom which shall never suffer persecution. 2 The II. 2. 8.

6. But whereas you say, that the ruffling Horn of the Fourth Beast is Antiochus Epiphanes; I demonstrate the contrary by this one Argument.

The ruffling Horn reigns until the Ancient of days comes in fiery flames to destroy him, and to give judgment unto the Saints of the most High; and until the time comes that the Saints possessed the Kingdom, viz. until the Son of man comes in the clouds of heaven, to receive a Kingdom wherein all Nations, People and Languages should serve and obey him, Daniel 7. verses 9, 10, 11, 13, expounded, ver. 22, 26, &c. But Antiochus Epiphanes reigned not until this time, (for he died 160 years and more before the Birth of Christ, and almost 200 years before his Ascension; the least of which numbers is a longer space of time than was from the death of Alexander unto Antiochus.) Ergo Antiochus Epiphanes is not that ruffling Horn.

The changing of Times and Laws (whereby the power of this Horn is described) is an Oriental phrase to express potestatem auctoritatis. Nor are Times here to be taken in so abstract a notion, but concretely for status rerum tempora variantium, or Res quibus variatur status temporum, as are mutationes Rerum pub. & regiminis rerum; Times, for things done in time, whereby the Times are altered: such as are the alterations of States and Governments: According to which notion, Dan. 2. 21. it is said of God, that he changeth times and seasons, he removeth Kings and setteth up Kings; and 1 Chron. 29. 30. that the Acts of David were written in the Books of Samuel, Nathan, and Gad, the Seers, with all his reign, and his might, and the times that went over him, and over Israel, and over all the Kingdoms of the Countries. And whether the Pope (if I say, he is that Horn) took not upon him a power of changing such Times as these, I shall not need to tell you. And yet take Times in your own Notion, and it would make a shift to fit him as well as Antiochus.

To your Second Position.

The proof of your Second Position, That the Fourth Beast, Dan. 7. is not able sufficiently to express the Roman Empire, is in the mainest part Petitio principii, wherein that is taken for granted which is in question: For you take for granted, that the Type of the Roman Empire in the Apocalypsis borrows his Ten horns from Daniel's fourth Beast, as a distinct Beast from it: But I say he borrows them not, they are his own proper and native horns; Daniel's Beast and he being one and the same Beast. I grant that the Apocalyptical Beast for the shape of his body is beholding to Daniel's three first Beasts, but that he borroweth any from the fourth, I deny. Nor do Horns, more or fewer, distinguish the species of a Beast: For in the Apocalypsis there is a Lamb with seven horns, and a Lamb with two horns, and yet for kind a Lamb still: So Daniel's He-goat had first one horn, and afterward four horns, and yet the same Goat still, &c.

The correspondence in number of the several Heads of Daniel's four Beasts put together, with the seven heads of the Apocalyptical Beast, is but casual: Neither can it be proved that the Fourth of Daniel's Beasts had but one head, as is here to be supposed: (for the third Beast hath the four heads, and the other three but one a piece.) For the mentioning of the Head which bore the ten horns in the singular number, Verse 20. proves no more it had but one head, than the mentioning of mouth likewise in the singular number, Apoc. 13. ver. 2, 5, 6. proves the Apocalyptical Beast had but one mouth. For indeed the Ten horns were all upon one head, as well in the Apocalyptical Beast (viz. upon the seventh or uppermost head) as in Daniel's Beast; and the mouth of the Apocalyptical Beast was the mouth also of the seventh head, to act the state of which head S. John saw him * rise out of the sea, &c.

And whereas you speak of an insufficient expression of the Roman Empire by Daniel's Fourth Beast; you may perceive by that I have said before, that it would well enough agree with my Principles to grant it; my Tenet being, That the Fourth Beast should not be so distinctly with all accoutrements revealed unto Daniel as it was unto S. John, because the specification of the several States and Fates thereof was yet sealed and unrevealed. And the third Kingdom was not so distinctly revealed to Daniel in the Leopard, Chap. 7. as it was two years after to the same Daniel in the great He-goat, Chap. 8. &c. The dispensation of God in these Revelations is to be measured according to his pleasure and the use of the Church, &c.

But it is now three a clock, and I have no more time. I had much rather confer of these things by word of mouth, wherein perhaps I could give better satisfaction. Conference by writing is wont to multiply it self into so much paper, as takes away a great deal of my time, and gives me no leisure to perfect that whereby I might perhaps prevent a great part of the Objections which now are made. Thus hoping you will accept this tumultuary Answer, I rest, commending your Studies and endeavours to the Divine Blessing.

Your loving Friend,

Joseph Mede.

EPISTLE VII.

Mr. Hayn's Second Letter to Mr. Mede, about several Prophetical passages in Daniel and the Revelation.

To the First THESIS.

BEfore Christ's time all the East (as Tacitus saith,) expected a King to rule over all the world: whence could this be, but from the expectation of the Jews of the Kingdom which was to spread over all the world after the ruine of the fourth Beast in Daniel; and that they now saw the divided Kingdom of the Greeks after Antiochus Epiphanes his time decaying, and likely to be extinguished?

And in Christ's time the faithful, (the rest were blind guides not to be followed) believing Christ and the Apostles preaching the coming of the Kingdom of God, against which Hell gates should not prevail, must necessarily conceive that the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel was at the last cast, and therefore understand the Fourth Kingdom to be the parted Greeks lately expiring in Cleopatra, her Brother Ptolemy, or others, and not the Roman still flourishing, and not likely yet to fall: For the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel was to fall before the setting up of the everlasting Kingdom of Christ. And if in Christ's time the faithful did conceive thus of the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel; then succeeding Ages to those Primitive times, so long as they retained a right judgment, were of the same mind.

The Jews in after-times went about to perswade that the Romans (calling them Edom also) were the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel, because they might be thought to hold a right that Messias was not yet come, who should be the Stone falling on the toes of the Fourth Kingdom. Eusebius and some others have fallen into this trap set by Jews. Seeing it is a course to harden Jews against the true Messias already come, we shall do well to avoid it.

Object.

If you demand, Why then did not Christ and the Apostles use this Argument to prove him the true Messias?

Answer.

In effect they did. They preached that the Kingdom of God was at hand: the coming whereof implies the Fall of the Fourth Kingdom; and that was then ocular, and to be understood of the Successors of Antiochus falling, not of the Romans flourishing. And seeing that in the preaching of Christ's Kingdom it was to be taught, that his Kingdom was not of this world, (at which point the Jews stumbled) Christ's main Argument was, The works which I do, they testify of me.

To

To the Second THESIS.

You affirm that the Roman Kingdom was revealed to Daniel in imagine confusa, but explicated to John by specification of the Fates and the order rerum gerundarum.

This cannot stand good.

For the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel is more particularly and distinctly set down than any of the other Three. And of the other Three be not revealed in imagine confusa, but fully enough for the specification of their Fates and the order of their acts; then much more the Fourth Kingdom, which is far more amply in types and explication set out in Daniel.

Then secondly, It cannot be said to be set down in imagine confusa; for it is orderly and in special manner handled: First, for the Original; It rises out of the Sea. Then for the power; It is strong as iron, able to break in pieces and subdue all, Dan. 2. 40. It is fearful, very strong, and hath ten horns. It hath iron teeth, and nails of brass. In conclusion, It hath one little horn, that pulls away three of the former ten; It hath ten Kings, and one unlike the rest; It in the end shall be partly strong as Iron, partly weak as Clay. For the stir it should make, and the persecution brought on the Church thereby; It subdued and did break in pieces all things, as Iron bruisseth and breaketh all, Dan. 2. 40. It devours and breaks in pieces, and stamps the residue under feet, Dan. 7. 7. As the ten horns do mischief, so especially the little horn which made war with the saints, and prevailed against them, and consumed them: It waxed great even to the host of heaven, and cast some of the host and the stars to the ground, and stamped on them, Chap. 8. 10. It thought to alter times and laws, Chap. 7. 25. Then also (as you hold in your Explication of Dan. 11. ver. 36. and after) the Roman Kingdom is there prophesied of, that he should conquer Macedon, and every King and Nation should persecute, mock, and crucify Christ, and persecute Christians till Constantine's times. Then the Pope should arise worshipping Dæmonia, and countenancing single life, shall not regard any God, but magnify himself above all; In the Seat and Temple of God, should worship Mahuzzims with gold and with silver and precious stones, and distribute the earth among his Mahuzzims; deal with Saracens and Turks, enter into Palæstine, &c. Chap. 11. Then for the blasphemy of this Kingdom, mention is made of the mouth speaking presumptuous things, Chap. 7. 8. speaking against the most High, Verse 25. and speaking marvellous things against the God of Gods, Chap. 11. 36. ----- The Fall also of this Kingdom is plainly expressed, Chap. 2. 34, & 45. & Chap. 7. 11, & 26. by being broken in pieces, and blown as chaffe, by being destroyed and given to the fire, by perishing unto the end. Lastly, the time of this Fourth Kingdom's domineering, or at least of the chief violence of it, is expressed, A times, time, and half a time, answerable to the time of the woman's keeping from the Serpent, Apoc. 12. 14. Then the time of taking away the daily sacrifice continues 2300. days.

Thus it is evident how particularly Daniel hath laid open the Original, the Acts, the sufferings, and Fall of the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel. And yet I have not brought all particulars. Hence it is manifest that this cannot be a general decyphering of the Roman Kingdom, but a particular description of some other Kingdom which fell before Christ's time.

Here now if you shall object that the Beast, Dan. 7. doth shew the very same kingdom that is set out Apoc. 13. because in Original, and Power, and Persecution, and Fall, and Time, it so much agrees with the same. Object.

I answer, That God is unchangeable, and inflicts punishments alike on sinners alike, Answ. and expresses after-matters by words used in narrations of former matters of like nature; which much helps our weakness for understanding of these depths. And therefore the Apocalyp is as it were made up with the Allusions, Metaphors, and Formulæ loquendi of the Books of the Old Testament: yet do not almost all the Visions of the Apocalyp (as one unjustly judges) handle imprimis Res Judæorum, but Res Christianorum in the words of former Prophets: So we may express a matter that Tully never dreamed of in Tullie's Phrases and Metaphors.

Then these Beasts as they agree in many things, so they differ in many; in Heads, Mouths, Paws, in one little Horn, &c. but especially that the Beast, Dan. 7. is destroyed before the setting up of Christ's Kingdom over all the earth.

To the Third THESIS.

I deny not but that a matter may be revealed in general, and yet the particulars sealed: So all the Persecutions of the Church are told in this, I will put enmity between thy seed and her seed: the particulars then sealed are opened in the whole Bible. But you see above, that the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel is particularly described, and therefore that description cannot be a general revealing of the Roman Empire: Especially seeing we are are told that the Lamb slain was the revealer of them, and none before. We have also general Prophecies of the Romans persecuting Christ and his Church: as that Psal. 2. Why do the heathen rage? and that Dan. 9. Messiah shall be slain, and Jerusalem ruined: But the Roman Kingdom is there in no shape or form pictured. Some other Prophecies in general Terms there may be of the Roman Empire, the particulars whereof (as you well say) are shewed to John; so that Daniel's Fourth Kingdom particularly described cannot belong to them. Daniel's Book begins with Babel's wasting the City Jerusalem, and ends with the utter overthrow of the City and Temple by the Romans. After Jerusalem's overthrow in Domitian's time, Christ reveals to John what should befall to the Church to the end of the world: and here the Romans are fully and plainly painted out to us.-----Here you object,

Object.

But the Roman power had been long in the world, and was now past the zenith, and had fulfilled what it was to fulfil on Daniel's people.

Answer.

I answer, God in his Book deigns not to meddle with the actions of Kingdoms, otherwise than as they persecute his people or favour them, or are instruments to punish them, or are punished for persecuting them. The Babylonians and Nebuchadnezzar did worthy deeds before the first Captivity of Judah, which God passes over, and begins the count of Nebuchadnezzar's reign from the first Captivity. Cyrus and Darius were of good years when they overthrew Babel, and had not spent their former years idly: their reign also is counted by God but from the overthrow of Babel and rule over the Jews. So what the Romans first did in Italy, afterward against Neighbour-nations, and then in divers parts more remote, God passes over, and only foretells what they were to do against the Jews falling from God, and how to kill the Messiah, Dan. 9. And then in Apocal. what they were to do against his Church, or suffer for afflicting his Church.

Nor had the Romans fulfilled what they were to fulfil on the Jews, Daniel's people, before the revelation to John: For ever since the overthrow of Jerusalem, the Jews have been scattered and oppressed by the power and laws of Rome in divers parts of Europe and elsewhere.

To the Fourth THESIS.

I wrote (or else it was lapsus pennæ) that the opening of seven Seals, and blowing seven Trumpets, were concerning seven-headed Rome; that is, as either it persecuted the Saints, or was plagued for persecuting them: which I know you will grant. The persecution of the Saints of God is plain in other parts of the Revelation. Now seeing Daniel in all speeches of the everlasting Kingdom never mentions any persecutors of it, and their carriages and falls, but the persecutions of Daniel's people the Jews, and not the Christian Church; it seems evident to me, that he meddles not with the Roman Empire's doings after the destruction of Jerusalem, or the Pope's doings long after.

The consummatio Mysterii Dei, prout annuntiavit servis suis Prophetis, The finishing of the Mystery of God, as he hath shewn to his servants the Prophets, proves not that the Roman matters were foretold to the ancient Prophets. The words Apocal. 10. 7. are, ὁ ὀνυχίσας τοὺς δόλους αὐτοῦ τοῖς προφήταις which construction intimates the glad tidings of the Gospel since Christ, brought to the present Prophets or Preachers of the times from Christ: so the speech of God's Servants the Prophets is understood Rev. 22. 9.

To the Fifth THESIS.

The Romans persecuting the Christian Church was revealed to none till Christ revealed them to John, namely, so as that the Romans were plainly decyphered, and by evident marks distinguished to be the Nation spoken of. The coming of false Prophets was foretold Matt. 24. the Man of Sin and his consuming, 2 Thess. 2. but there was nothing to shew of what People and Nation and City he should be. What knowledge soever Paul had of these things concerning Rome's persecution of the Church, he may well be said to have it by Revelation from Christ (Gal. 1. 12.) the opener of this little Book. There is no circumstance of the ruffling Horn Dan. 7. which could teach Paul that the Romans were the Fourth Beast, Daniel 7. for anything that I know.

Coming in the Clouds, Dan. 7. is not to the last Judgement at Doomsday but Christ's coming to take the Kingdom which he preached to be at hand, of all power being given to him. The phrase of coming in the Clouds is borrowed from the Cloud in the Wilderness, and God's presence in the Cloud on the Tabernacle often; intimating God's defence and direction of his Church. See Isa. 4. 5. most pertinent to this sense. The heathen have the like phrase. Iliad. ε'. God is present to Diomedes.

-----εφελη ειλυμένος ωμυς. and Virg. 7. Æn.
Pater omnipotens-----radiis ardentem lucis & auro
Ipse manu quatens ostendit ab æthere nubem :

When Jupiter came to assist Æneas now to settle in Italy.

It is not said of the Universal Kingdom in Daniel, that it should never suffer persecution; but that it never should be destroyed: because 'tis built on the Rock Christ, no power shall prevail against it. That it should never be destroyed, implies that it should be impugned: But how in these later Times, John in the Apocalyps shews from Christ.

To the Sixth THESIS.

I answer to the Assumption, That Antiochus Epiphanes, whom God suffered much to prevail against the Jews, reigned till God came to destroy him by his own hand, as irresistible as fire: For destruction by fire in Scripture is an high Metaphor, and expresseth often irresistible destruction. After Epiphanes's death, (who was the last hot persecutor) God gave often victory to the Jews against the Greeks; which verifies that in the Greeks which was typed in the Feet, part of Iron to break the Jews, part of Clay, not able to harm others or defend themselves. And so much the weaker were those Feet, because the Iron and Clay could not be mixt together to strengthen each other. God now shewed himself favourable to the Jews, and gave judgment or defence to them, partly by their own valour, partly by the Romans interposing themselves as friends. Now the Throne of the Ancient of days was set, and the Jews had defence (till Christ's time) from the weak Greeks.

And now the Romans having an inch given them, take an ell, and usurp authority over the Jews; and with them kill Christ the Messiah. But Christ overcame death, and had all power in heaven and in earth given him, Matth. 28. This his Kingdom we acknowledge in our prayers, and the Church celebrates, Apocal. 5. by the voice of all such as were made Priests and Kings to reign on the earth, even such as were gathered out of all nations, tongues and kindreds.

That which you add about Times put for Things done in time, is very true for the signification of the Phrase when it comes alone in divers places: But here changing of Times and Laws go together. Antiochus Epiphanes his dealings wonderfully agree to this. 1 Mac. 1. 42. He would make every one leave his Laws. He forbids burnt-offering and sacrifice, Vers. 45. He commands the Books of the Law to be burnt, Vers. 56, 57. He slew the Jews for circumcising their children, Vers. 60. He puts down their Laws, 2 Macc. 4. 10. & 6. 1, 2. He uses threats and cruelty, then flattery, to make them forsake the Law, 2 Macc. 7. All these stirrs grew from the Greeks attempting to make them leave their Laws, 1 Macc. 6. 59. Then Epiphanes his attempt to alter Times is clear in his command to put down the Sabbaths and Feasts, and his making them to keep Bacchus Feasts, 2 Macc. 6. 7.

To the Seventh THESIS.

The Fourth Beast, Dan. 7. and the First Beast, Revel. 13. are not one and the same: They differ much in shape of body, and in their acts, and in their falls and plagues. Besides, that in the Apocal. is made as it were of all the four in Daniel, and is so described as if it came in stead, and was comparable to them all; as indeed it was.

Horns, more or less distinguish not a Beast. That infirms not what I said. By the way only I here observe, That the Beast with seven horns was a Lamb indeed, that is Christ. The Beast Apocal. 13. with two horns, had these two horns like a Lamb's, but in truth he might be a Wolf.

Seeing it is not said that Daniel's Fourth Beast had four heads, (therein I mistook in my former writing) it is to be presumed he had but one, as Beasts usually have no more; except in Vision, for expression of some special matter, more heads be attributed to them. The Third Beast, Dan. 7. had four heads. The number of which four heads, with the three heads of the other three Beasts, fits so well with John's Beast, besides the resemblance to the Lion, Bear, Leopard, that I believe it cannot be casual, especially seeing it is in God's Book.

Concerning that you say of Mouth put singularly, I answer, that the Beast Apocal. 13. had seven heads with names of blasphemy: This will imply that each had a mouth, and that a blasphemous mouth, which is more. Besides, the very nomination of head implies a mouth, and seven heads, seven mouths. And whereas there is mention of a mouth given the Beast Vers. 5. methinks that should intimate the extremity of blasphemy proceeding from the seventh head beyond all the rest.

Whereas

Whereas you say the third Kingdom in Daniel was not so distinctly revealed Chap. 7. as afterwards Chap. 8. That is true. And further I add, That in Visions and Prophecies God hath spoken πολυμερῶς, and revealed things to come by parts; so that several Visions or Prophecies laid together make up the whole. In each of Daniel's Visions something is passed over to be supplied by the rest. In the second Chapter there is nothing to type Alexander's four chief Chaptains, nor is it told what people should be trode on by the Iron legs. In Chap. 7. the Exposition of the three former kingdoms is very brief, the Exposition of the fourth very large. The weakness of Antiochus his Successors is unexpressed. In Chap. 8. nine of the horns coming out of Alexander's Captains are passed over, and the little Horn fully set out. The Kingdom of Christ over all Nations is not spoken of at all. These things thus passed over, are supplied by the rest. So is it in the Revelation: The afflicting of God's Church is diversly expressed, and the afflictors thereof, and the afflicted by them. So that no one Vision, but the several Visions laid together, do give us a perfect and whole delineation of what was to come from that time to the end of the World.

EPISTLE VIII.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Mr. Hayn's Second Letter, about several passages in Daniel and the Revelation.

SIR,

I Received yours at the Commencement: wherein I found, if I should answer to every part, I should have as many Questions to dispute as I sent you Theses: The experience of which multiplications in that kind makes me so backward in Collations by writing. So that I can with much more patience endure to be contradicted, than be drawn to make Reply. But all this time, the truth is, I had no leisure, nor yet have, and am presently also to go into the Countrey, where I shall stay some weeks, and have no opportunity to write. That I might not therefore in the mean time seem too much to neglect you, I have caused a Scholar of yours to write out something I had by me in a Paper long ago written, wherein you may further see my Opinion, and some part of the grounds thereof.

When I return, and have more leisure, I shall answer to what I find Principal in your Replies; but not to what is Circumstantial: for so the business would grow too tedious for my pen. In the mean time I would desire you to believe that I have read the most that hath or can be said for that Opinion, either by the chief Patrons thereof, Broughton and Junius, or their followers, Polanus, Piscator, D. Willet; and that whilst I was yet free, and first began with these kind of studies; and yet found nothing that could in the least measure perswade me to be of their mind: And I see now that the modern Writers, and even some of their Scholars, return to the ancient opinion, and forsake their Masters in this point. This I speak, not to boast of my reading in this controversie, but to shorten your Discourses which you may send hereafter; you shall need but touch, and spare the labour of so much enlargement. But a word or two to your Reply.

Whereas you say, The ground of the expectation of the coming of Christ when he came, was the Fall or expiration of the Fourth Kingdom; I utterly deny it. The ground was the near expiration of Daniel's 70 weeks, concurring with the ἀρχή of the Fourth Kingdom, the Roman; during which his Kingdom was to be first revealed, and at the end of which consummated. Besides, I acknowledge no place, in this account of Kingdoms, for the Greeks after Antiochus Epiphanes, where the Holy Ghost * expressly placeth the end of that Kingdom; much less will admit Cleopatra to prolong it, and that too after the Romans had subdued Judaea.

You mistake my Answer, That the Roman or Fourth Kingdom was revealed to Daniel in imagine confusa. For I meant it neither absolutely, as if it had no distinction in its description, nor in comparison with the former Three, than which in that place it is more particular and distinct. But I meant it was in imagine confusa, in respect of those distinct States and times thereof which were revealed unto S. John, and not unto Daniel: that it was confused in comparison of that which was more particular of the same subject: As is Daniel's description of the second and third Beast in the * Dan. 8. 23.

Discourse but the seventh Chapter, compared with that more particular description of the same in the eighth and eleventh Chapters.

Whereas you say, The Jews since Christ brought in this opinion of the Roman to be the Fourth Kingdom, that so they might the better maintain their expectation of Messiah yet to come, because that Kingdom was yet in being; I say, it was affirmed by whosoever first affirmed it without all ground, authority, or probability; the contrary also being easie to be proved, viz. That the Jews were of this opinion before our Saviour came; as appears in Jonathan Ben Uzziel, the Chaldee Paraphrast, and by the fourth Book of *Esdra*s, which, whatsoever the authority thereof be, is sufficient to prove this, being written by a Jew, (for it is, saith Picus, the first of their seventy Books of Cabbala) and before our Saviour's coming, as appears by many passages of Messiah expected, and yet to appear within four hundred years after that supposed time of *Esdra*s. Certainly he that wrote it meant no hurt to Christians; as will easily appear to him that that reads it, and finds the Name Jesus, and so often mention of the Son of God. Which I note, in case you should rather think it written after Christ. If it were, it was certainly by a Christian. The ancient mention thereof is by Clement Alexandrinus Anno 200. though I know some body affirms the first mention thereof is by S. Ambrose, two hundred years after; sed fallitur. Yet I take not the Book to be Canonical Scripture.

As for the Christian Doctors, it is well known that both Justin Martyr (within 30 years of S. John's death) and Irenaeus were of this opinion, and knew no other amongst Christians; and yet they both lived and conversed with the Apostles immediate Disciples, and the latter of them brought up at Polycarpus's feet, who was S. John's Disciple, and could relate to Irenaeus (as himself saith) what S. John was wont to do and speak. Therefore Eusebius was not worth the naming, as caught with this trap; seeing it cannot be proved that ever any Christian before him or after him, till after S. Hierome's time, held the contrary; and then too was soon checked and not heard of again till the last seculum.

But as for the opinion you would perswade to, it was first broached by Porphyrie, an enemy of Christ, to the end he might prove the Prophecy of Daniel counterfeit, and written about the time of the Maccabees, soon after the death of Antiochus Epiphanes, and so prophesied nothing but ab eventu, as meaning by the Fourth Kingdom the Seleucidae, &c. not the Roman. See S. Hierome upon those Chapters of Daniel 7. & 11. and you will admire the Expositions and Evasions of Porphyrie should be the same almost, yea in circumstances, with those of Junius, &c. But S. Hierome in his time knew no Christian that had been of that opinion. Let any man shew as much for what you affirm of the Jews, as insinuations of this opinion in præjudicium fidei Christianæ.

The Purport of the Four Kingdoms in DANIEL:

or

The A. B. C. of Prophecie.

THE FOUR KINGDOMS in Daniel are twice revealed: First, to Nebuchadnezzar, in a glorious Image of Four sundry Metals; secondly, to Daniel himself, in a Vision of Four diverse Beasts arising out of the Sea. The intent of both is by that succession of Kingdoms to point out the time of the Kingdom of Christ, which no other Kingdom should succeed or destroy.

Nebuchadnezzar's Image points out Two States of the Kingdom of Christ. The First to be while those times of the Kingdoms of the Gentiles yet lasted, typified by a Stone hewn out of a Mountain without hands, the Monarchical Statue yet standing upon his feet. The Second not to be until the utter destruction and dissipation of the Image, when the Stone having smote it upon the feet, should grow into a great Mountain, which should fill the whole earth. The First may be called, for distinction sake, Regnum Lapidis, the Kingdom of the Stone; which is the State of Christ's Kingdom which hitherto hath been: The other, Regnum Montis, the Kingdom of the Mountain, (that is, of the Stone grown into a Mountain, &c.) which is the State of his Kingdom which hereafter shall be. The Intervallum between these two, from the time the Stone was first hewn out (that is, the Kingdom of Christ was first advanced) until the time it becomes a Mountain

* Rev. 10. 7.

Mountain (that is, when the * Mystery of God shall be finished) is the Subject of the Apocalyptical Visions.

Note here, first, That the Stone is expounded by Daniel to be that lasting Kingdom which the God of Heaven should set up. Secondly, That the Stone was hewn out of the Mountain before it smote the Image upon the feet, and consequently before the Image was dissipated; and therefore that the Kingdom typified by the Stone, while it remained a Stone, must needs be within the times of those Monarchies, that is, before the last of them (viz. the Roman) should expire: Wherefore Daniel interprets, Ver. 44. That in the dayes of these Kingdoms (not after them, but while some of them were yet in being) the God of heaven should set up a Kingdom which should never be destroyed, nor left (as they were) to another people; but should break in pieces and consume all those Kingdoms, and it self should stand for ever. And all this he speaks as the Interpretation of the Stone; Forasmuch (saith he) as thou sawest that a Stone was cut out of a Mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold. Here make the full point; For these words belong not to that which follows (as our Bibles by mis-distinguishing seem to refer them,) but to that which went before of their Interpretation. But the Stone's becoming a Mountain he expounds not, but leaves to be gathered by what he had already expounded.

Daniel's Vision of Four Beasts, Dan. 7.

The same Kingdoms of the Gentiles are typified here which were in the former of Nebuchadnezzar's Image; namely, the Babylonian, Persian, Greek, and Roman. Only Nebuchadnezzar's Image pointed out both States of Christ's Kingdom, first Lapis, then Montis: But Daniel's Vision of Four Beasts omits the first, (which was to be while the Fourth Beast yet lived) and designs the last only, when that ruffling Horn's time being finished, and the Beast destroyed, The Ancient of daies gives the Son of man a Kingdom, wherein all nations, tongues and people should serve and obey him. Dan. 7. 13.

The Reason: Nebuchadnezzar, a Gentile, was a Type of the Gentiles, who were to have their part in both estates of Christ's Kingdom; wherefore both are shewn him. Daniel, a Jew, was a Type of the Jews, whose nation should have no share in the first, but only in the last, and therefore the last is only shewn him.

Rev. 11. 15.

This Universal Kingdom of the Son of man revealed in the clouds of heaven, which Daniel here saw, and which the Angel expounds to be the Kingdom of the Saints of the most High, is the same with that voiced in the Apocalyps, upon the sound of the seventh Trumpet, All the Kingdoms of the World are become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ. Compare them.

Whence it will follow, That those finishing times of the Fourth Beast, called A Time, Times, and half a Time, during which that wicked Horn should domineer and ruffle it among his ten Kings, are the self-same Time which the Angel in S. John forewarn th should be no longer, as soon as the seventh Angel began to sound, Chap. 10. 6.

The self-same Times, whose finishing the same Angel swears unto Daniel (in the same form and gesture he doth to S. John) should be the period of those wondrous afflictions of the Church, and of the scattering of the power of the holy people, Dan. 12. 7.

* See this Prophecie of Tobit explained in pag. 579.

And consequently, those very Times of the Gentiles whereof our Saviour speaks, Luke 21. 24. that the treading down of Jerusalem and dispersion of the Jews should last until the Times of the Gentiles were finished: even the same Times whereof * Tobit harped, Chap. ult. That notwithstanding Judah should again after a while return and build a second Temple, yet should not the Universal restitution be, nor Israel return from all places of their Captivity, εως πληρωθῶσι καιροι τοῦ αἰῶνος.

Lastly, the same Times with S. John's Apocalyptical Times of the renewed Beast's blasphemous reign, and profanation of the Temple and City of God forty two months, or 1260 days: Forasmuch as the same Kingdom of our Lord Christ is the immediate and common consequent to them all.

Compare them.

* For 2½ years, v. 25. 15. Then shall be Signs: So the Hebrews use that copulative, and the Greek Testament with them.

When Daniel's times are done, the Son of man comes in the clouds of heaven, to receive the Empire of all the Kingdoms of the world, Dan. 7. 14.

When S. Lukes times of the Gentiles are finished, * then shall be Signs in the Sun and Moon; the Son of man comes also in the clouds of heaven, ver. 27. the redemption of Israel, ver. 28. and the Kingdom of God is at hand, ver. 31.

When S. John's Apocalyptical Beasts forty two months reign with the Witnesses

1260 days mourning, determine; the Ark of the Covenant is seen in heaven, and all the Kingdoms of the world become the Kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ, Apocal. 11. 15. ad finem.

AN APPENDIX.

The First coming of Christ was to be while the Fourth Kingdom was yet in being; his Second, when it should end. The hewing of the Stone out of the mountain, (which is the rearing of the Kingdom of Christ) was before it smote the Image upon the feet, and upon the destruction thereof became so great a Mountain as filled the whole earth. Therefore the hewing out of this Stone was while this Image was yet in being.

Daniel himself interprets the Stone to be the Kingdom of Christ, (not Christ himself) and saies that the God of heaven should set it up in the days of those Kings, or Kingdoms, that is, adhuc currente horum Regum periodo, vel diebus Tetrarchiæ hujus nondum expletis, whilst the daies of those Kingdoms of the Gentiles yet lasted, or before they expired; namely, whilst the last of those Kingdoms was still current and in being. He that shall here expound [in the daies] to mean [after the days] shall give me leave not to believe him, unless also he can perswade me, that the Stone which smote the Image was hewed out of the mountain after the Image was dashed in pieces and vanished.

The Jews in our Saviour's time expected the Messiah's coming before the times of the Fourth Kingdom expired. For they looked it should be destroyed by him after he was come, and then the Kingdom restored to Israel. According to that of Dan. 7. when the Beast should be slain and his body destroyed, the Kingdom should be given to the people of the Saints of the most High. Only they thought not the distance between the first coming of Christ and his destruction of the Fourth Beast to be so long. Whence was that question of the Apostles to our Saviour at his Ascension, Wilt thou now restore the Kingdom to Israel.

EPISTLE IX.

Mr. Hayn's Third Letter to Mr. Mede, about several passages in Daniel and the Revelation.

SIR,

I Confess that conference by writing multiplies words, by giving more scope to deliberation; and may justly make you backward to Collations in this kind: But the disquisition and finding of truth countervails all; than which I seek nothing more by this my pains. To that part of your answer received July 22. I have inclosed a Reply; and expect the rest of your Answer formerly intended, when you should return to Cambridge: And now to this present Reply as your occasions will permit. Such Writings as I have seen of yours testify to me both your plentiful reading, and diligent observation of matters most remarkable therein; as also (I am perswaded) in this Argument: Yet cannot all that yet you have said drive me from my hold. I reverence the Learned on both sides, and will ever give them all due respect; and will not be found to stand single in any opinion. But the persons of men shall not sway me against the native light of the Sacred Text, which I know makes for me. If Alsted and some others have left their Masters in some of these points; I think we shall find others, (as Glassius) of equal judgment to Alsted, to run this way. But 'tis to be considered herein, not so much Qui dicunt pro aut contra, as Quid dicunt. And therefore I will not put into the scales mens Authority, but their Reasons: And hope that after your perusal of this present Reply, you will be more inclinable to a different judgment from some of your former Tenets. And thus leaving you to the protection and direction of the God of Truth, I rest,

THE ground of the expectation of the coming of Christ and his Kingdom, was (say you) the near expiration of Daniel's Seventy weeks.

Repl.

The expectation of Simeon, Anna, and others, of the Magi, and them of the East, was seventy years before the end of Daniel's Seventy weeks, according to your opinion. For you hold that the Seventy weeks end at Jerusalem's overthrow, which was after Christ's Birth seventy years. Therefore it could not be any mark for the looking for of Christ.

Bill. Jud. 7. 12.

2. At the end of the Seventy weeks, according to your judgment, the City and Sanctuary was to be destroyed, sacrifice ended, and desolation brought on the Jews: Therefore the Seventy weeks (according to your Tenet) is a mark of other matters; not of Christ's or the Saints Kingdom, but rather of Vespasian's, as Josephus saith, which ensued just upon the end of the Seventy weeks.

But in truth Daniel's Seventy weeks end at Christ's death: and seeing Christ was expected to be King of the Jews, all that truly kept account of the Seventy weeks, might rightly conceive that Christ about thirty years before the expiration of the Seventy weeks should be born; and so about thirty years old (which are years fit for publick charge) should enter upon that Kingdom. Of this reason I forbore to write formerly, because I saw that we should differ about the beginning and end of Daniel's Seventy weeks, which would bring on a new controversy between us.

That Christ's Kingdom was (as you affirm) to be revealed in the ἀρχή of the Fourth Kingdom, I see no Text that proves it; nor that Christ's Kingdom should be consummated at the end of the Roman Kingdom. At the end of the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel it was to begin, Chap. 7. And that it was perfected in Christ Jesus is evident; for he overcame the Devil, Death, Hell, and all; and teaches that all power is given him in heaven and earth, that all things bow to him, and that he led captivity captive. Further, I have good ground for to say, that the extirpation of the Fourth Kingdom was one sure mark of Christ's coming, and his Kingdom: for that only is the mark of the same, Chap. 2. and 7. where that Kingdom is mentioned.

You will not admit the Greeks any Rule after Antiochus Epiph. death, because the Holy Ghost ends their Kingdom in him.

Joseph. 15. 5.
Xiphil.

Joseph. Bill. 1.
13.

I say the Holy Ghost ends the domineering violence and persecution of the Saints in him; but there were to be clayie feet after him. Stories shew that many Kings of the Greeks ruled after him; and in the end Cleopatra, a woman (as Josephus saith) of chief Nobility in those times: even Caesar at first umpired between her and her brother, in matters of difference between them. She had the revenue of Jericho and Arabia, and other parts; she killed all her kindred that might stand in her way, and desired Antonie to do the like by them of chief blood in Syria, that she in right of the Greeks might have all. She, with the rest after Epiphanes, were sufficient to express the clayie legs. And that Rule is sufficient, and all that I stand for.

Besides, the Stone as cut out (not as growing to a Mountain) is to fall on the toes: so that if by the legs the Romans be understood, Christ was not to come in their ἀρχή, but at their fall. Evident it is that Christ's Kingdom took place (as frequent mention of it in the New Testament shews) at his first coming, and so began at the beginning of the Roman persecutions, not at the ἀρχή of them; they were abundant and manifold afterward. The ἀρχή of their Empire hath nothing to do here.

You hold still that the Roman Kingdom was revealed to Daniel, but not according to the distinct Fates and Times, as to John. I shewed that the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel was revealed to him most distinctly, for the original, proceeding, strength, acts, persecution, sufferings, fall: All the same are revealed to John about the Roman Kingdom. Now if they should both speak of the Roman Kingdom but in these points; how could it be true in John, that this Book was opened by none (as you limit it, according to the distinct Fates) before by Christ? Therefore the limitation propounded by you cannot hold.

I say not that the Jews after the Apostles times brought in or invented the opinion, That the Romans were Daniel's Fourth Kingdom, but that they endeavoured to perswade it; whoever were the brokers of it, Jonathan Ben Uziel, or any other, surely some of their stamp. And the rather they then did and now do perswade to it, because some Christians by assenting to them give them advantage therein.

If

If Porphyrie, an enemy to Christians, overcome by the evidence of truth, confessed it; that is a greater confirmation of the truth. The Devil confessed Christ to be the Son of the living God; though the Devil be a liar commonly, yet now he spake that which was most true. Besides, in S. Jerome it appears; that Porphyrie was not alone in that opinion: but that divers others held the same. And in the eleventh chapter S. Jerome goes along with Porphyrie in most things; but addeth this, That Antichrist and his doings were there typed. And in points in which S. Jerome crosseth Porphyrie, his arguments are sometimes but his own bare assertion, sometimes weak. If you please to set the best edge on them that may be, we will try them. And Porphyrie had Suctorius his Author. S. Jer. in Dan. c. 11.

To the writing in a different hand.

You hold Christ's Kingdom to be double; First, Regnum Lapidis, while the times of the Four Kingdoms lasted.

I say, it cannot be in the time of the three former Kingdoms; for it was preached by Christ and the Apostles to be at hand in the time of the Romans: Antiochus Epiphanes his time, whom you make the last of the Greeks, being past well-near, or full hundreds of years before. Besides, I object, That if Christ's Kingdom be set up in the Fourth Kingdom's time, it must be set up in the three former's time also. For it confounded the gold, silver, brass, iron, as well as fell on the clayie legs. Again, if you make the Stone to continue a Stone from Christ's time till ours, and some years after (God knows how long) to smite the feet of the Image; you will make the legs and feet of the Image above 1600 years long, three times and more as long as all the body.

The Second Kingdom of Christ you hold to be Regnum montis, that shall fill the whole earth, to arise when the Image shall be utterly destroyed. 1. I say, This division of Christ's Kingdom is no where in Scripture plainly expressed, though this Kingdom be most frequently handled. If such a thing had been, it would in one place or other, in the various handling of it, have been plainly taught. 2. The Stone spreads it self over the whole earth presently; Their sound is gone into all lands: There were at Pentecost devout men of all nations under heaven, who (the Spirit enabling them extraordinarily) might carry the Gospel into all parts.

The Myserie you speak of, I conceive not: I am sure of this, That the Stone, Ch. 2. which became a Mountain, is the same with Christ and his Kingdom, Ch. 7. Nor do I conceive how Nebuchadnezzar is a Type of the Gentiles, or Daniel of the Jews: But I am sure that the Jews in good measure had part in Regno Lapidis, as you call it: For the Apostles and many other Christians were Jews, and Paul is told that (not many Thousands only, as some Translations have it, but) many myriads of Jews believed, Act. 21. 20. Therefore you hold amiss, that the Jews had not part in Regno Lapidis.

The Universal Kingdom of Christ (say you) is the same in Daniel and the Apocalyp. This is most true. Further, I say this was begun by Christ, when he saith, All power is given to me, &c. go teach and baptize all nations: and so Christ wills that out of all nations subjects should be gathered to him. Καὶ τὸ εὐαγγέλιον πανταχὺ κηρύσσεται, ἀλλὰ τὸ γε βέλημα ἡ πολέμια ἐστὶν. And if in nations where the Gospel was preached Isocrat. many assented not, Christ told us that also, Many be called, few chosen.

So then that which you hold will follow, doth not follow, seeing that the ground-work of it is not sound; especially seeing the Universal Kingdom of a Thousand years (by Justin Martyr held, but then contradicted, as he saith; and had he seen what the length of time since hath given us to see, he would, I am persuaded, have been of another mind) and the Arguments for it, though brought in scores, will prove but light, if they come to strict examination.

To the Appendix.

The First coming of Christ (say you) was while the Fourth Kingdom in Daniel was yet in being; because the Stone was hewn out of the mountain before it smote the Image on the feet.

But I say, the whole Image was standing in the Vision while the Stone was cut out. So by the same reason, the first coming of Christ, and the raising of his Kingdom, should be during the times of the Kingdoms of the whole Image; for the Stone, as it fell on the feet, so it brake all to pieces, the iron, brass, clay, silver, gold. The truth is, that Christ's coming and Kingdom was at the end of the Image, and ruin of the four Beasts; yet did the Stone, that is Christ (so Just. Mart. and others take it) as he was God, destroy them all by his Instruments; that is, Babel by the Medes and Persians, and those by the Greeks; the Greeks by their own discords, and by judgment given to the Saints in the Maccabees times, and the Romans interposing as friends and associates, not as chief parties.

appears in so differing opinions held amongst Christians, with so much and so endless pertinacity on both sides. It is sufficient therefore for a man to propound his Opinion with the strongest evidence and arguments he can, and so leave it. Truth will be justified of her children. But of these reciprocations of discourse in writing, wherein you place so much benefit for discovery of Truth, I have often heard and seen Truth lost thereby, but seldom or never found.

I find by your last Reply, that you and I differ so far, and in so many Principles needful for the discovery of the truth of this Question, that all the time I have for my private studies would be wholly taken up in attending this dispute, if I should go on still therewith. I have had some experience once before, that it is a tenacious piece where it hath taken hold. I would not be entangled again; and therefore desire, with your good leave, to give it over, till opportunity of meeting together, where I should be able to talk with far more ease than I can write. I profess unto you, I condemn not your discourses, but do diligently and apud conscientiam meam weigh your arguments, howsoever it comes to pass I am not persuaded by them. But I cannot find time for such a Collation; and besides, am unwilling to put all in writing which I would utter in a private and a personal discourse. I will say a word or two to your last, but without expectation you should reply again.

1. The opinion of the 70 weeks expiration is not mine, but Scaliger's and divers other learned mens, and amongst the rest Junius's, who otherwise for the Monarchies is yours. For my self, howsoever in the 70 weeks I have yet followed Scaliger, yet I had a private way to make the 62 weeks to point out our Saviour's Baptism. Howsoever, for the Jews expectation of Messiah, it was enough to know in what age he was to come, though not precisely the year.

2. I shall never believe but all those places of the Son of man's coming and appearing in the clouds of heaven, mentioned in the Gospels and in the Apocalypse, ch. 1. 7. are the same with that coming of the Son of man in the clouds prophesied by Daniel at the extinction of the Fourth Beast, Ch. 7. and that the Holy Ghost in the New Testament hath reference thither, both for words and meaning. If this be so, you know what follows.

3. I say not, the Greeks ruled not after Antiochus Epiphanes, but that the Holy Ghost accounts that Kingdom no longer in the Monarchichal reckoning, and so follows the story of their Kings no further than Epiphanes; from thenceforth the Roman, having now conquered Greece, was to take place,

4. I deny not, but firmly believe, that Christ's Kingdom took place at his First coming. But I utterly deny that to be the Kingdom our Saviour prophesies of Luk. 21. 31. and answerably in the other Gospels; or that whereof S. Paul speaks 2 Tim. 4. 1. I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ who shall judge the quick and dead, at his appearing and his kingdom; or that foretold in the Apocalypse * to be when the seventh Trumpet shall sound, and the like places.

* Ch. 11. 15.

5. Unless it can be shewn me, That the six Seals, seven Trumpets, seven Vials, the treading down of the Temple, two Witnesses, their slaughter and Resurrection, the red Dragon's persecution, &c. were in specie revealed to Daniel; I will still hold those Fates of the Roman Kingdom were sealed, and not revealed to Daniel, though the Roman Monarchy were revealed to him.

6. The ancient Jews did, but the latter Jews hold not the Roman to be the Fourth Kingdom, but the Mahumetan and the Roman to be a continuation of the third.

7. What I alleged of Porphyrie for yours, was to shew the injustice of your disparaging mine, as being held by Jews, who yet when they first held it, were the only people of God, and Custodes oraculorum Dei: If Porphyrie might see a Truth, why not much more they?

8. I never meant to say, That the Kingdom of Christ should appear whilst all the Monarchies were yet standing, but before the times of that succession of Monarchies should expire: Which is true, if it appeared only in the last Monarchy. The confounding of the Gold, silver, Brass and Iron, in the destruction of the Image, is either the τὸ πρέπον τυπὶ (for the parts of the Image could not succeed in time, as the Kingdoms signified by them could, and so all must be broken together:) or because the second kingdom possessed the first, the third the second, the fourth the third; the last is represented as containing all the rest, &c.

9. The Duration of the Four Kingdoms holds no proportion with the parts of the Image typifying them, and therefore the continuance of the Fourth Kingdom makes the legs of the Image neither longer nor shorter.

10. I wonder you should say, there is no Second Kingdom of Christ (which I had rather call the Second State of his Kingdom) mentioned in Scripture. Consider the places I point to in the fourth Paragraph, and add to them Luke 17. 20, &c. where our Saviour being asked of the Pharisees concerning the Kingdom of God, tells them, that he must first be rejected of that Nation, and that the coming thereof should be as in the days of Noah, &c.

11. The Mystery you say you conceive not (in the piece written with another hand) is that Mystery which the Apostle saies was not known till the preaching of the Gospel; namely, That the Jews should be rejected, and the Gentiles surrogated in their stead. Nor did I say (as you mistake) that the Jews had no part in the First state of Christ's kingdom, but that their Nation had not; by which I meant nothing else, but that their Nation was rejected. Doth not our Saviour expressly say, that he should be rejected of that Nation, Luk. 17. 25? It mattereth not though many of their Nation received him, seeing the Body of their Nation acknowledged him not. This is plain enough: I shall not need put you in mind of S. Paul's discourse of the casting off of the Jews, though then there were so many particular Jews believing in him, as I believe never were since.

12. I believe not that ever the Gospel of Christ was preached all over the world; no more than I believe that Augustus Caesar taxed the whole world, because it is said he taxed πᾶσαν τὴν οἰκουμένην. For in the style of those times the Roman Empire was called οἰκουμένη, as appears in the Greek Historians; and the Latin call it Imperium orbis terrarum.

13. Daniel himself interpreteth the Stone to be a Kingdom which the God of heaven should set up in the days of those Kingdoms: and therefore it cannot be the Kingdom of Christ as God coeternal with his Father; but the Kingdom of Christ as θεοῦ ἔργον, which began not before he was incarnate. In the days of these Kingdoms (saith he) (that is, whilst some of them were yet in being) the God of heaven shall set up a Kingdom which should never be destroyed, nor left (as the former should) to another people; but should break in pieces, and consume all those Kingdoms, and it self should stand for ever: Forasmuch (saith he) as thou sawest a Stone was cut out of a mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold. Here make the full point; for these words belong not to that which follows, (as our mis-distinction in the verses seems to refer them) but to that which went before of their interpretation. See the same reference of [Forasmuch] in the 40 and 41 verses.

14. I will not now dispute of the Preposition ἕως, though I had enough to say against you; but I say, that the words [In the daies of those Kings] are much more likely to be construed by Ellipsis particulae partitivae, usual in the Hebrew and Chaldee, quasi, In the daies of some one of those Kings, viz. the last of them. So Jephtah is said to have been buried * in the cities of Gilead; that is, in some one of them, &c.

There be some other passages not so principal, though I dissent from you in them, which I omit, as I desire to do this whole Disputation. That I had reserved to have answered in your former Reply, was to that of the Ruffling Horn, which by the express * words of the Angel was to last until the time came the Saints should possess the Kingdom, that is, until the Son of man came in the clouds of heaven to take a Kingdom; (for this is the Angel's exposition of that part of the Vision) and therefore it could not be Antiochus Epiphanes. Your Answer to this seemed very insufficient; I desire you to weigh it better: and I make an end.

Yours,

J. M.

Mr. Hayn's Fourth Letter to Mr. Mede, about several passages in Daniel and the Revelation.

1. *S*Caliger's or Junius his Opinion prevail not so much as should their Reasons. God had told the Jews plainly the year, and by types the time of the year, when Messias should work their redemption: so that it was not enough to know in what age it should be.

2. The Weeks, Dan.

* Jud. 12. 7.

* Dan. 7. 22.

2. The coming of the Son of man is to his Kingdom on earth, on which the Scripture runs abundantly, Dan. 2. & 7. Apoc. 1. 7. Luke 17. 20. and was to be before that generation passed, Matth. 24. 34. And within that space of time he came on Jerusalem, as the Flood on the old world. There shall be a Second coming of Christ, namely, to Judgment: And then he shall give up his Kingdom here to the Father. Yet shall this Kingdom here and that in Heaven be one and the same, consist of the same men or subjects, and have the same bent to the honour of God.
3. The Greek Rule after Antiochus Epiphanes was sufficient to express the clayie legs; that is enough for me; and the clayie legs are part of the Fourth Monarchy. The Romans were the Jews friends full many scores of years after Epiphanes his time: Their war against God's people is that for which God paints them out as Beasts. And though the Romans conquered Macedon long before Christ's coming, yet both Julius Cæsar and Antonie let Cleopatra hold her due of what Rule she had, and were but sticklers, not opposites, at first.
4. If Christ's Kingdom took place at his first coming; the same is one, and but one, and that everlasting.
5. The seven Trumpets, seven Vials, two Witnesses, &c. shew a new matter, not particulars of the Fourth Kingdom particularized before in Daniel.
6. The late Jews (God enlighten them) shift abundantly; and the ancient both before and after their desertion did but grope in darkness.
7. Yet both the late and old Jews, and Porphyrie too, saw some truth; who can deny it?
8. The Text saith, In the days of those Kingdoms, say you; as if it were in all of them; and the Stone confounds all. Why should we allow το γενησιν τυπι?
9. You deny the duration of the Fourth Kingdom to hold proportion with the parts of the Image: I affirm it; my reason is, If the Three former do, then the Fourth also.
10. I know there is a Second coming of Christ, that at the day of Judgment: But the Kingdom once begun is one, for it is everlasting. If there were two Kingdoms, the one must end, the other begin.
- Though there be degrees in the progress of Christ's Kingdom, in regard of the world's indisposition to submit to it; yet de jure all is Christ's at his Ascension.
11. The Mystery which now you speak of I acknowledge, and bless God for it; namely, of the calling of the Gentiles. The Jews Rejection also is plain in the time of the Gospel, yet was a remnant of their Nation saved. And what more were the elect out of other Nations & few to the many.
12. Though de facto the Gospel was not preached to all the world then, yet see mentem Legislatoris, the mind of the Law-giver, Go preach to all Nations.
13. Christ is the Stone: what is said of him in many things, is and may be said of them of his Kingdom; He bruises with a rod of iron, Ps. 2. so do his servants, Rev. 2. 27. He the Stone, and his kingdom and people here, do the same thing.
14. For the Proposition, the authority I brought was sound and good. That about Jephthah is (though I use not to be sudden in this kind) ill translated. I wish time would have given me leave to have conferred with Books and men about it. I pray you think of it. Were it not better, Gideon was buried by the cities of Gilead; namely, the men of them all much honouring him, joyed in solemnizing his burial?
15. Not the rattling Horn (as you call it) but the body of the Beast, Dan. 7. 11. continued till the Son of man came. Now the Body of the Beast hornless may express the same, or be correspondent to the clayie legs; and thus the answer is home in this particular also. Much more I could have said, but must here make an end, and leave you to God, whom I pray to keep us in his truth.

EPISTLE XII.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Mr. Hayn's Fourth Letter, about several passages in Daniel and the Revelation.

NOW I have obtained a Release, that you might not think I shoo off this Collation out of Pride or Contempt, but to avoid too great a diversion from other Meditations, I will add this more than I meant to have done; the rather because I discovered by your last somewhat more of your Opinion in one principal particular than I knew before; and also because I find you presume of another piece as solid and well-grounded, because in my last I made no Answer to it, though I intimated I had sufficient, if need were, to say against it. My end is, that you might see I maintain not an Opinion out of mere pertinacy, but that I have Reasons sufficient to perswade my self, though you never met with a man (whatsoever you supposed of me) of less confidence to perswade others than when you met with me. I have a conceit that some opinions be in a sort Fatal to some men, and therefore I can with much patience endure a man to be contrary-minded, and have little or no edge to contend with one
I think perswaded, unless it were in something that merely concerned him in state of salvation. But I come to the matter.

1. You seem to grant me, That the coming of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven,
&c. mentioned in Daniel, and that coming of his in the Clouds of heaven in the Gospel,
Matth. 24. 30. & ch. 26. 64. Mark 13. 26. & ch. 14. 62. Luke 21. 27. and in the Apo- calyph chap. 1. 7. are one and the same. But you apply them all to Christ's coming to the destruction of Jerusalem, because our Saviour saith in that Prophecy of his, That that generation should not pass till all things, then prophesied, should be fulfilled. I answer, first, While you endeavour in this manner to establish a ground for the First coming of Christ, you bereave the Church of those principal passages of Scripture whereon she hath always grounded her faith of the second coming. Secondly, You ground all this upon the ambiguity of the word Generation, whereas γενεά signifies not only atlas, but gens, natio, progenies, and so ought to be here taken; viz. Gens Juda- eorum non interibit, usque dum omnia hæc implentur, The nation of the Jews should not pe- rish, till all these things were fulfilled. For so signifies παρέλθῃ in the Hebrew notion, as you may see even in the verse following, οὐ βραχὺς ἔστιν ἡ γῆ παρελεύσονται. By virtue of which Amen, verse 34. Ἀμὴν, Verily I say unto you, the Jewish Nation, even to the wonder and astonishment of all who consider it, remains a distinct people in so long and tedious a Captivity, and after so many wonderful changes as have befallen the Nations where they live. According to that of Jeremy, Chap. 31. 35, 36. (whither this passage seems to have reference) Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the Sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the Moon and of the Stars for a light by night, which di- videth the Sea when the waves thereof roar: If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever.
S. Chrysostome among the ancients, and Flacius Illyricus (a man well skill'd in the style of Scripture) among the moderns, and those who follow them, might have admonished others to take the word γενεά in this acception, rather than by turning it atlas or seculum, to put this Prophecy in little ease, and the whole harmony of Scripture out of frame, by I know not what confused interpretation. S. Chrysostome applies it to Gens Christiana or fideliū, which he calls ἡ γενεά ζητούντων τὸ Κύριον, Generatio que- rentium Dominum. Others have other accommodations, but still under this notion I speak of. I prefer, as I said, Gens Judæorum; for what Reasons, nihil nunc attinet dicere. No man can deny but this is one of the native notions of γενεά, yea and so taken in the Gospels: as in the foregoing Chapter, Matth. 23. 36. Verily I say unto you, all these things shall come ἐπὶ τὴν γενεάν ταύτην, upon this nation. So Beza renders it twice in the parallel place, Luke 11. 50, 51. and seven times in this Gospel. Again, Luke 17. 25. The Son of man must be first rejected ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης. Beza, à gente iſta. The LXX. renders by this word ὁ πῦρ populus, מִשְׁפָּחָה familia, מוֹלָדָה progeni- es, patria. See Gen. 25. 13. & ch. 43. 7. Num. 10. 30, &c. I suppose here is enough for the signification of a word. So then your Argument thence is nothing.

3. Besides, to interpret this coming of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven, and his kingdom then, of his coming to the destruction of Jerusalem, is contrary to the context of our Saviour's Prophecy : For the coming of Christ to destroy Jerusalem was the beginning and cause of that great and long Tribulation of that people : but the coming and appearing of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven, is expressly said should be after it, Immediately after the days of that Tribulation, &c. Matth. 24. 29. Mark 13. 24. For this great Tribulation, such as never Nation suffered, is not to be confined to their calamity at the destruction of Jerusalem, but extends to the whole time of their captivity and dispersion from that time unto this present not yet ended : wherefore S. Luke, who is wont to be an Expositor of our Saviour's words, puts in stead of those words of great tribulation, these of parallel sense to them, There shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people, Luke 21. 23. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations, and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled, v. 24. And as the other Evangelists say, After that tribulation ended ; so he, After, or when these times of the Gentiles are fulfilled, then shall be signs in the Sun and Moon, and then they shall see the Son of man coming in a cloud, &c. For the Copulative Kai verse 25. [Kai ἔτι σημεῖα, &c.] is to be taken after the Hebrew manner ordinativè, for tum, deinde, which you know is frequent in Scripture, Then shall be signs.

And I make no question but these Times of the Gentiles, with which the Jews Tribulation shall end, are either the Times of the Four Monarchies in general, ( that is, the Times of that prophesied Dominion of the Gentiles ) or, which is all one in event, those last Times of the Fourth Kingdom of A Time, Times, and half a Time, at the fulfilling whereof Daniel prophesies of the same appearing and coming of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven, which S. Luke doth here. For if the immediate consequent be the same, how can the Times which immediately precede but be the same Times also ? This is my opinion, which I intimated once before ; but you rejected it as groundless then, and I know your Tenet cannot admit it now : Quisque abundet suo sensu : therefore I'll contend no more about it.

2. But let the Kingdom of the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, whereof Daniel speaks, be as you would have it ; That Kingdom of his first coming, whether beginning at his Ascension, or manifesting it self at the Destruction of Jerusalem. ( for one of them it must be, but ) let it be which it will ; I say, for all this, there is yet sufficient left to overthrow your Tenet of the Fourth Kingdom. For that Kingdom at the Son of mans coming in the clouds of heaven shewn to Daniel, is expounded by Daniel in his repetition to be the Kingdom of the Saints of the most High. If this be not evident by the context, I utterly despair ever to understand prophecy by any light of the letter : I must take it therefore for granted, whether you grant it me or not, That that Kingdom at the Son of mans coming in the clouds of heaven, in the Vision, is that which Daniel in his repetition, and the Angel calls the Kingdom of the Saints of the most High, in his interpretation ; and therefore being the same, must begin at the same time, which you say was at our Saviour's first coming, namely from the time of his Ascension. This therefore forelaid, I argue thus.

The ruffling Horn persecutes the Saints until the time came that the Saints possessed the Kingdom, Chap. 7. v. 22.

But Antiochus Epiphanes persecuted not until the Saints possessed the Kingdom, which was at the Son of mans coming in the clouds of heaven. Ergo.

For if he persecuted till then, he with his Time, Times, and half a Time, must continue till Christ's Ascension at the nearest ; but he was dead two hundred years before. It will not serve your turn here, to fly to the Kingdom of Christ as he is God ; for the Kingdom here spoken of is the Kingdom of the Son of man, and a Kingdom which begins in time. Nor mattereth it how the Greek Kingdom after Antiochus may seem to besit the Clayie legs, unless you make the little Horn to be those Clayie legs. But you must shew how the little Horn, if it be Epiphanes, lived and persecuted until the time came that the Saints possessed the kingdom. Will you expound [ until the time came ] until some two hundred years before the time came ? I know not how you can evade here, unless, as Porphyrie did, you will make the Kingdom of the Saints here mentioned to be the Kingdom of the Maccabees, and so the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, ( whereof it is an exposition ) to be Judas Maccabeus, or Joannes Hircanus, or some other of those Hasmoneans. If you answer thus, you must not think it strange if I am loth to be perswaded to your opinion, who reading that Prophecy, cannot be perswaded but the little Horn is the last limme of the Fourth Beast, whose part once acted, the Beast's glass is run, and his time of destruction come. Or who can believe but he is to be destroyed at that time of Judgment, when the Son of man shall appear in in the clouds of heaven? Though you say you see no evidence for it, yet I cannot be persuaded but this Scripture was it out of which S. Paul learned to confute the Thessalonians causeless fear of the day of Christ's coming to Judgment to be near at hand: when he tells them, that that day should not come, until the man of sin were first revealed, and had acted his part; forasmuch as Christ was to abolish him by the ἐμφάνειν of his coming: For so Daniel had taught him, that the wicked Horn's reign should conclude the Fourth Kingdom, and the Son of man should abolish him at his coming in the clouds of heaven; and therefore could not that coming of his be until the wicked Horn should be revealed, and reign the time appointed him. This I am sure, that this Prophecy of Daniel was the Womb whence the Jewish Doctors derived that Term of יום דין Dies judicii & יום רבנא magnus dies judicii, because that coming of Messiah is thrice so described in this place of Daniel; verse 10, 22, 26. whence even at this day they look not for Messiah until Magnus dies judicii, the great day of Judgment. Our Saviour and his Apostles received this term of Dies judicii from them, and approve it by using it. But it is far more frequent in the Chaldee Paraphrase and other writings of theirs, than in the New Testament. Nor can I believe but our Saviour and his Apostles, using this phrase, meant to approve the ground of Scripture whence they deduced it: Especially our Saviour so often expressing his Second coming by these words of Daniel, coming in the clouds of heaven: which the Elders and Priests hearing our Saviour apply to himself when they arraigned him, they rent their cloaths as at Blasphemy: whence it appears they took it for no small and ordinary Character of power, not applicable to Judas Maccabeus or his successors.

I know the same Phrases may be used to express like matters of diverse and sundry times; but here is not only Identity of phrases, but, together with the same phrases, the same frame of things with their circumstances, and those such as are not applicable to many times. And though I am not of the same mind with Theocritus Justus, (his name is * Daniel Lawennus) to draw all the Apocalyps to the Jews, upon no other ground but communion of phrases; yet I know nevertheless, that to compare Scripture with Scripture is none of the least helps to understand Scripture.

* I have had good occasion to know his name, and some of his notions too.

3. I have dwelt all this while upon the Second Vision of Kingdoms, I come now πρωτὸν εἰπὼν, to say somewhat of the First, Dan. 2. v. 44.

וּבְיוֹמֵיהֶן דִּי מְלָכִין And in the days of these Kings or Kingdoms; that is, say I, during the days of those Kingdoms, while the days of this Dominion of the Gentiles yet lasted, before these days of their dominion ended. I lay the Emphasis upon days. But here you stumble, and make inference as if I had said, or the Prophet either, In or during all the days of those Kingdoms, or during the days of all those Kingdoms, Babylonian, Persian, and Greek, as well as Roman. I cannot but marvel to see you make so strange of an expression not only frequent in Scripture, but common and usual in every language. If I should say, such or such a thing was done in the days of the Saxon, or in the days of the British Kings; would you infer or understand me, as if I meant in all the days of those Kings, or in the days of all those Kings, or some of them only? If I should say such a thing was done in the days of Popery, must I needs mean all the days of Popery, or some part of them only, and so no more but while those days were yet in being? It is said, Ruth 1. 1. It came to pass in THE DAYS when the Judges ruled, that there was a famine in the land. I hope this famine was but in some part of those days, or in the days of some of those Judges, not all of them. It is an expression Elliptical, if you will, but yet most ordinary. Judg. 15. 20. Samson judged Israel in the days of the Philistines twenty years: but the Philistines days were forty years: so he judged but in the latter part of them. 2 Sam. 21. 1. There was a famine in the days of David 3 years. Vide Ezra 4. 7. Esay 7. 1. Jer. 23. 6. So Matth. 2. 1. In the days of Herod the King, Jesus was born in Bethlehem; that is, in the latter end, or about the last two years of his reign. So [In the days of those Kingdoms of the Gentiles] is, during them and in the latter part of them, as the nature of the thing spoken of sufficiently argues, which was to destroy the last Kingdom, which had destroyed and swallowed the former three: I mean the second swallowed or possessed the first, the third the second, the fourth the third; and so in a sense, by the destruction of the fourth, the Stone destroyeth all the rest as contained therein: For the Stone smites neither the Golden part, nor the Silver, nor the Brass immediately, but only the feet of Iron and Clay; and yet by that blow was the Brass, the Silver and the Gold destroyed also, inasmuch as they all came by succession to the Iron. I added besides in my last, that the dissipation of the Gold, Silver and Brass, together with the Iron, might be τὸ ὑπίπτον τυπὶ (not περιτίον, as you change it,) because the parts of the Image in the Type could not succeed one another in time as the Kingdoms signified by them did; and so the Image appeared to be dissipated all at once in Vision, though the Kingdoms were not so, save only in the sense before named.

Image

I added one thing more, which came then to mind when I saw you urge so hard upon all the four Kings; That Kings might be taken Elliptically also, as well as days, (though that of days be indefinite rather) viz. In the days of those Kingdoms, that is, some one of them. I gave for an example of such an Ellipsis that of Jephtah, Judg. 12. 7. And Jephtah was buried in the Cities of Gilead, that is, one of them. Here you solicit the interpretation as not right, you would have בְּעָרֵי גִלְעָד in the Cities of Gilead to be, By the inhabitants of the Cities of Gilead: But besides that you cannot shew any where in Scripture בְּעָרֵי so used, the verses following would check such an interpretation, where three more Judges are named, with the time of their rule and places of their burial, as Jephtah was; which is sufficient, I think, to persuade that Jephtah's place of burial was named likewise, and not meant the persons who buried him. But why should you labour to win this one place from me, who quoted it not as if there were no more, but as that which was most present to my memory? For the thing it self, it is a ruled case amongst the Grammarians, that you may not think I devised it for an Evasion. I have observed many Examples thereof, which I know not now where to find; only there comes one to mind like that of Jephtah, 2 Chron. 35. 24. where it is said, that Josiah was buried בְּקִבְרוֹת אֲבוֹתָיו in the Sepulchres of his fathers, which we translate [one of the Sepulchres]. But in the mean time, till your own observation shall furnish you with more Examples, I will exscribe such as my Grammarians affords me. * Psal. 1. 3. Erit sicut arbor plantata עַל פְּלִי מַיִם ad rivum aquarum, h. e. juxta Aben Ezram, עַל אֶחָד מֵאֲחֵרֵי מַיִם ad aliquem rivorum aquae. Jon. 1. 5. Et Jonas descendit ad latera Navis, h. e. ad unum è lateribus. Zach. 9. 9. Et super pullum natum asinarum, h. e. אֶחָד מֵאֲחֵרֵי בָנֵי אֲשִׁנָּה pullo ex una asinarum. Yea and with a numeral word, 1 Sam. 18. 21. בְּשֵׁתִים הִתְחַתְּן בִּי הָיוֹם per duas affinitate conjunges to mecum hodie, h. e. בְּאַחַת מִשְׁתֵּי בָּאֵחָת per alteram è duabus. Et sic Targum, בְּהָרָא מִתְּרִין. Hujus generis sunt, Latrones exprobraverunt ei, Matth. 27. 44. i. alteruter è latronibus, ut exponitur, Luc. 23. 39. Item scriptum est in Prophetis, Joan. 6. 45. h. e. in aliquo Prophetarum. I suppose these will be sufficient to induce you to let Jephtah's bones rest in one of the Cities of Gilead.

* Psal. 1. 3. By the rivers of waters, that is, by some one of the rivers. Jon. 1. 5. the side of the ship, that is, to one of the sides. Zach. 9. 9. upon the foal of an ass, that is, of one of the asses. 1 Sam. 18. 21. by two, that is, by one of the two. Matth. 27. 44. the thieves, that is, one of the thieves, as 'tis expounded Luke 23. 39. John 6. 45. It is written in the prophets, that is, in one of the Prophets.

Thus much of my Interpretation, now of yours. You would have, In the days of those Kingdoms, to be expounded, After the days of them; and because I answered it not, but only rejected it in my last, you suppose the authority you brought therefore was sound and good. I now answer therefore, and say first, That besides that it is contrary to the native property of the preposition בְּ so to be interpreted, (it being de-currate of בֵּין inter) so the Examples you bring are far enough from proving it. Let us examine them. The first is, Exod. 2. 11. And it came to pass בְּיָמֵי הָהֵם in those days when Moses was grown, &c. I say, יָמִים [Days] here are the days of the Egyptian bondage and servitude. What shall we do with [After] here? The next is in the same Chap. verse 23. בְּיָמֵי הָרָבִים הָהֵם, that is, when those days of Egyptian servitude had now continued long, and were not yet ended, &c. You see here is no need of any After, and you cannot deny but it may be thus expounded. If it may, I will never make an Anomaly of signification, where the natural and usual will serve turn. Secondly, Could it be shewed that בְּ sometimes signified [After], yet in this place the nature of the thing spoken of will not admit that signification. The Stoxe hewn out of the mountain is interpreted by Daniel to be a Kingdom which should begin in time, that is, the Kingdom of Christ ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ. not that he hath a coeternal with his Father, which hath no beginning. This Kingdom of Christ should smite the Fourth Kingdom, and at length destroy it; therefore this Kingdom must needs be whilst the Fourth Monarchy was yet in being, and not begin after it: For how can that which comes after smite that which before had ceased to be? or how can that which was not till after, destroy that which was destroyed before it self was? Therefore the nature of the Subject will not admit בְּ to be here taken for [After], but requires it should be maintained in its proper and natural signification.

4. That I may therefore gather all this Controversie into a short summe, I find your Tenet to stand charged with three not tolerable Inconveniences of interpretation. The one in the first Vision, where you interpret, In the days of those Kingdoms, to be After the days of them: where the matter spoken of will no ways bear it, though the Preposition would. The second in the second Vision, where you will be forced to interpret, until the time came the Saints possessed the Kingdom, until some 200 years before

• Witnesses and Keepers of the Primitive

fore that time. A third is, That you are forced, for making good your Exposition of the Kingdoms, to deprive the Church of those principal passages of Scripture whereon she hath always grounded her faith of the Second coming of Christ. If I found mine charged with any one such, I should begin to misdoubt the truth thereof. I might add a fourth, That besides all these, you forsake that Exposition and Application of these Kingdoms which the Church hath universally followed from her infancy. And who can easily be perswaded that the Doctors of the Church immediately following the Apostles, and while some of the Apostles disciples were yet living, should be ignorant of the meaning of so main a Prophecy, whereupon depended the demonstration of the verity of Christ's coming; and that too whilst those disputes were still hot between the Jews and Christians? The Fathers are to be considered here not in respect of greater learning or infallibility of Spirit than ours, but as \ Testes & Custodes doctrinae primitus acceptæ*; because it cannot be presumed they could be ignorant of it, being so near, or would change it, being so pious and good.

Now the inducements which should perswade an Opinion burthened with such inconveniences had need be very powerful. But when I examine every thing, I find the main and only pillar which you suppose will bear up your building against all assaults whatsoever, to be but a weak one, namely, That nothing was revealed to Daniel which was contained in S. John's sealed Book; because none could open that Book but Christ, and he opened it not till his Revelation shewed to John. That there is a flaw in this illation is apparent, because there are two main and principal matters of the argument of that Book which cannot be denied to have been revealed before, namely of Antichrist's persecution, and of the Second coming of Christ to judgment: the first whereof was revealed to S. Paul (though out of another Book;) the other is plentifully revealed throughout the New Testament, before S. John saw his Visions. I answered therefore before, and answer still, That the Subject matter of the Apocalypitical Book is not that which was never in no sort revealed before, but never in that order, form and particularity of Fates, Acts and Circumstances, wherein it was revealed then. The subject of that Prophetical history is the Roman Empire, together with the Church or Kingdom of Christ contained therein: the one is equally the subject thereof as well as the other. Now it is not denied but the Church or Kingdom of Christ was revealed before, both for the Being, Quality, Fate, and Prevailing, not to the Apostles only, but to Daniel also: why not then the Roman Empire? In the same sense wherein that which concerned the one was revealed before, or remained sealed till now, in that sense was that revealed or sealed till now which concerned the other. Here you brought a Catalogue of divers particulars concerning the Fourth Monarchy revealed to Daniel; but to what purpose I cannot devise, unless you could prove there were no other particulars of Succession, Fates and Acts, which were still to remain sealed until the Lamb should reveal them to S. John. For I affirmed not, that no particulars of the Roman Kingdom were revealed to Daniel; but that not those which were now first revealed to S. John: As, namely, none of the Acts and Fates of this Fourth Kingdom were particularized to Daniel; but those of the latter end of it only, when the Horn was to rule the rest, which concerned the former part of his time, were represented to him only in general & in imagine confusa; the more ample and large decyphering thereof being deferred till Christ himself should come and unfold all unto S. John, when also Daniel's most particular part was yet to be revealed much more particularly in the Metropolis, quality of Blasphemy, degrees and manner of destruction. That which I have said of the Roman Empire, partly revealed and partly sealed, must be accommodated also to the history of the Church or Kingdom of Christ, the other part of the subject of this Apocalypitical Book; which though it were in some degree revealed before, yet never in such order and specification of Fates and Circumstances as now. The consideration of the one will easily clear the scruple you make concerning the other. And for conclusion, you must remember that I yield you all this time your sense of the sealing and unsealing the Apocalypitical Book, which you know some interpret to a far other purpose.

I have a little time, and paper enough left: I will look over your Papers, and answer such particulars more as I think need answering.

1. I know not what it is you contend for about the Two States of Christ's Kingdom. If you grant the Kingdom of Christ at his second coming shall be of a different state from that of his First, you grant as much as serves my turn; and the Kingdom is neither more nor less eternal, because some State thereof is not eternal. An infant when it comes to be adultus is the same numero still; but the stature is not the same, but diverse.

2. You

2. You affirm the duration of the Fourth Kingdom holds proportion with the legs, because the three former do with their parts. If they do, tell me how your Third Kingdom of Alexander and his progeny, which lasted but 18 years, holds proportion with the belly of the Image: I think it will be but a girt belly. The Persian Monarchy, represented by breast and arms, lasted about 200 years, that is, ten or eleven times as long as your Third Kingdom did. If this proportion holds in this Image, the breast and arms must be ten or eleven times as long as the belly. And if you read belly and thighs, the proportion will be a great deal worse: For I suppose you make your Fourth Kingdom 280 years long: the same proportion therefore which 280 hath to 18, your legs must have to the belly and thighs, that is, quindecupla.

3. Whatsoever time of Messiah's appearing Almighty God pointed out by Daniel's 70 weeks, yet I believe not that any Jew before the Event could infallibly design the time without some latitude; because they could not know infallibly where to pitch the head of their account, until the Event discovered it: yet in some latitude they might. I think we have as good skill in that computation as the Jews could have, and yet you see we yet vary about it after so many hundred years. And if your self in this difference follow Mr. Broughton's way, you may as soon persuade me there is no Sun in heaven, as make me believe it. And though it mattereth not much what I think or think not, yet in this I dare say that all the Learned men of note in Christendom are of my mind. And for my part, I cannot but think it a prodigium that any man should think otherwise, and I suppose your self are so far of my judgment.

4. If you make the Fourth Beast hornless before his destruction, you will make Daniel both at odds with himself and the Angel his interpreter. If the Horn continue until the Ancient of days comes to give Judgment to the Saints of the most High, and until the time came that the Saints possessed the Kingdom, verse 22. or if he continue until the Judgment sit, and they take away his dominion, and the Kingdom be given to the people of the Saints of the most High, verse 26, 27. how was he Hornless when the Ancient of days sat in Judgment to destroy him, and give his body to the burning flame? This I should have taken notice of in another place, but I then forgot it; yet I said there that which was sufficient to overthrow it. I would not have such an Evasion in my Opinion.

5. Though all the Four Kingdoms have respect to the Jews, as those who were all that time to be in bondage under them: yet it doth not follow that the beginning of each Kingdom should be counted from the time they were first possessed of Palastine, but from the time the Caput regni should be given unto the people which were next to succeed. Nor is that Observation solid, That those Kingdoms were called Beasts, for the beastly usage of God's people: the word חַיָּה, Heb. חַיָּה, signifies naturally Animal. And you will not, I know, say so of the quatuor Animalia in the * Apocalyps, * Chap. 4. though we translate them also four Beasts. The congregation of Israel, as we translate it, Ps. 68. 10. is called חַיָּה. And if חַיָּה signifies Cetus & Caterva, that notion may be applied to Kingdoms and States also: So the type is so much the more concise, by reason of the ambiguity of the word in those languages. But whether it be this or that, I affirm nothing, nor is it much to the purpose either way.

And thus I think I have not left any thing of moment unanswered. I had no other end in all this, but to let you see I have sufficient grounds to be persuaded of my Tenet, and to be averse from yours. Whether others can be persuaded by them, or not, that I know not; nor do I arrogate so much ability to my self, as to persuade others what I am persuaded of my self. There is more goes to persuasion than Reasons or Demonstrations, and that is not in my power. I desire not you should make any Reply, but the contrary; for I am now resolved to answer no more; whatsoever you should send. You know as much of my Opinion, and my grounds for the same, as I would desire of any mans; and I think I perfectly understand yours, and where your chief strength lies. Why should then either of us both spend our time any further to no purpose? Thus desiring the Father of lights to guide us in the way of Truth, and to open our eyes to see where we see not, I rest and remain still

Your very loving Friend,

Dr. Twisse's First Letter to Mr. Mede.

Good Mr. Mede,

*A*mongst many fruits of my acquaintance with Dr. Meddus, this hath been one of the chiefest, that he hath brought me acquainted with your self, though not de facie, yet de meditationibus, and that in the opening of Mysteries. I was so happy as to light upon two Copies of your Clavis Apocalyptica, thereby to gratifie both my self and my friend: I was beholden to Dr. Meddus for the one, and to Mr. Briggs for the other. Since that I have seen divers Manuscript pieces of yours, whereof I make precious account. Your distinction of Fata Imperii, & Fata Ecclesiæ, the one contained in the Seals, the other in * Βιβλαελιδις, doth exceedingly affect me, as a Key of great use for the opening of these Mysteries. Your interpretation of the Seals proceeds, in my judgment, with great evidence of illustration. And in the last place, your Exposition of the Trumpets hath taken me quite off from the Vulgar opinion that formerly hath been so common. For all which I most heartily thank you. And did it become me to profess so much, who am nothing worth, I should be apt to say, you are as dear in my affection as to any friend you have. I beseech you go on to perfect the good work you have begun in the Revelation, and in other mysterious passages; for the clearing whereof I well perceive, by the blessing of God, you have attained to a very singular faculty. I seem to discern a providence of God in causing the opinion of a Thousand years Regnum Sanctorum to be blasted as an Error by the censure passed upon the Chiliaists, to take men off from fixing their thoughts too much on that in those days, when the accomplishment was so far removed; but with purpose to revive it in a more seasonable time, when Antichrist's kingdom should draw near to an end.

* the little

Concerning which I have something to propose, in searching after more particular satisfaction. But I know not whether yet I may be so bold with you; and besides, I fear to divert you from your so weighty and so profitable studies: yet they are such, as withall I have thought with my self of accommodating an Answer. But though my heart serve me not to communicate them to you at this time; yet surely I shall make them known to Doctor Meddus. A friend of mine also hath this day given into my hands certain Disputations upon divers mysterious points in Daniel and the Revelation. In one of them he disputes of this Thousand years Regnum Sanctorum with variety of Reasons pro & con; but inclining rather to the contrary. A very ingenuous man he is, and a great student in Mr. Brightman. If I may have liberty to communicate these things unto you, and that it might be without offence to your more weighty studies, I would so use this liberty, as not to nourish my self in idleness, but withal to employ my self in answering whatsoever I find therein to the contrary.

At this time give me leave to propose to your consideration, Whether that fear of a παυλὲς-ᾠρα almost of our Protestant profession may not be avoided; and the three days and an half, Rev. 11. not signify a space of time succeeding the continuance of those Witnesses, but intermixed with it. My Reason is this; The two Witnesses signify all the Witnesses giving testimony to God's truth, not contemporating, but succeeding one another for many generations; against all which the Beast warred, and prevailed against some in one age, some in another. Every ones Testimony seems to be finished in his death. And as long as Antichrist reigneth, God hath his Witnesses in some place or other prophesying in sackcloth. But this I submit to your better judgment. I shall heartily desire God to bless your labours; and at this time, desiring to be commended unto your love, I rest,

I would intreat you to take into your consideration one thing more. S. Paul writes, Rom. 11. that the conversion of the Jews shall be by way of provocation from the Gentiles; Whether this provocation doth not imply some great Prosperity wherewith God shall bless his Christian Church; and what in this kind comparable to the ruine of Antichrist, and the consequents thereof?

EPISTLE XIV.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Dr. Twisse's First Letter, concerning the 1000. years Regnum Christi, as also of the Clades Testamentum, and of the Jews Conversion.

Worthy Sir,

THAT any man so learned and judicious as I have heard your self to be should conceive any Meditations of mine worthy not only of approbation, but of so much affection, I must ascribe it (if they be but in any degree such as you make them) to God's goodness towards me, who hath in any sort enabled me to endeavour ought whereby I might not live in the world altogether unprofitably. I know and am conscious of mine own weakness and insufficiency in many points of knowledge which others have: yet if this one thing be my Talent, though but a single one, I have sufficient wherefore continually to thank the Almighty, and to beseech him that my husbanding thereof may be, by his gracious instinct, such as may be some occasion of further light to others, in some manner of recompence of what I have and still daily do receive from others.

But whatsoever my Speculations be, this I am sure of, that I am not a little obliged to your self, for your so kind and affectionate entertainment of them, as rests not in them only, but extends even to the person of the Author, otherwise utterly unknown unto you. Wherefore, for my part, if I should not reciprocally answer you, I should shew my self of too unworthy a disposition.

As for my Interpretation of the Seals and Trumpets, where I leave others and take a way of mine own, I do it to maintain an Uniformity of notion in the Prophetical Schemes and Allegories throughout the Scripture; which I am perswaded were once no less familiar and usual to the Nations of the Orient, than our poetical Schemes and Pictures are to us.

And the only way for us to learn the meaning of them is, by finding out that Uniformity I speak of, by comparing the several applications of them together, and such other helps as remain unto us. But whether some of the Interpretations usually given of the Seals and Trumpets will abide this Touch-stone, your self, I know, can judge. Such voluntary Interpretations may delight the Fancy, and commend the Wit of their Author; but they will not satisfy him that cannot think any mans Wit a footing firm enough to rest his Faith upon.

FOR the Thousand years Regnum Christi, it was time for it to be silent under Regnum Antichristi; and the Reign of the Martyrs in the first Resurrection to be cried down, when Antichrist was blasphemously to advance them before-hand to a Reign derogatory to the glory of Christ their Lord, to be as compeers with him in the office of his Mediation, and partakers of the honour and worship which was due to him alone.

I speak not here altogether at random: For after the opinion of the Chiliasists was cried down, (when the sentence of Damasus had once given it the deadly blow) they fell to expound this Reign of the Martyrs, in the twentieth of the *Apocalyp*s, of the Idolatrous reign of them, which themselves had then devised, by occasion of those signs and wonders said then to be wrought by the power of the Martyrs upon such as touched their Reliques and approached their Sepulchres.

Two of the ancientest Commentators extant after the Chiliasists opinion became silent, are Andreas Casariensis and Aretas, in whom you shall find what I say, even totidem verbis. The words of Andreas are these; Καὶ εἶδον τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν πεπελεκισμένων, Vixit Andreas
 &c. Quin reliquis quoque sanctis Martyribus, qui pro Christo mortem perpeffi sunt, ne-

Arctas almost in the same words: Ex quo igitur (inquit) neque capti sunt hi (scil. de-collati isti) neque per impudentiam, neque per opera mala insigniti, merito cum Christo & vixerunt & regnarunt, idque usque ad consummationem. Quemadmodum videmus etiam sub fidelibus Regibus atque Principibus, dum adorantur, contra omnem etiam corporis infirmitatem ac Damonum energiam ostendunt datam sibi à Deo gratiam. Nam quia (inquit) non adorârunt Bessiam, neque imaginem ejus; idcirco etiam vixerunt, id est, vivorum opera præstiterunt, miraculorum videlicet patratiorem.

Yet even S. Augustine and Primasius applied this Prophecy of the Martyrs, (though not to the adoration of them, yet) to that preeminence of honour then given them in the Assemblies of Christians, and their power of working miracles after death. Vid. de Civit. Dei lib. 20. cap. 9. cum cap. 9. lib. 22.

And if with Mr. Brightman and others we begin the Thousand years from Constantine, there is no place of Scripture for a Papist to urge for Saint-worship like unto this, because the time will fit so just; For it began much about that time, though the Papist had rather have it thought to be ab initio, which Andreas notwithstanding expressly denies: Etenim (saith he) quæ nunc per experientiam rerumque eventum videntur Sanctorum miracula, meritorumque præmia, quando Evangelistæ Joanni hæc patefiebant adhuc futura erant.

I shall be glad to see your Quæres and Answers to them: But before I received yours, I had written to Doctor Meddus, that my thoughts would be diverted, and my time taken up about some other business between this and Christmas: whereupon he transcribed them not. My brains are so narrow, that I can tend and minde but one thing at once, whatsoever it be; and therefore I must desire my friends to bear with that imperfection, as also with my slowness, even when I go about any thing, especially to write and digest.

CONCERNING your Quære of the Clades Testium, I cannot see how it can be referred to any other time than to about the end of their 1260 days mourning-prophecy; because that which immediately follows their reviving, after 3 days and a half lying dead, is not applicable to any other time save that only: as namely, so great an Exaltation as is implied by * ascending up to heaven in a cloud; such a great || Earthquake or commotion as should be at the same hour, whereby the Throne of the Beast should be so much shaken; and lastly, the expiring at the same time of the * second Woe, or sixth Trumpet. These are not applicable to any time save the times of the Beast's declining and period, and consequently to the end of the 1260 days of the Witnesses wearing sackcloth; and should fall out when they were now putting off their sackcloth, and when some of them had done it already: For so the word is to be turned, * When they were now about to finish their prophecy or days of sackcloth, &c. Besides, it suits with the method of Divine Providence; God Almighty having ever used to usher in any great Exaltation of his Saints with some desperate Extremity and Calamity immediately foregoing it: Whence is that Theological proverb, Cum duplicantur lateres, tunc venit Moses. When was David in a more desperate distress, than when he was instantly to be exalted to the Throne of Judah, namely, at the burning of Ziklag? what a streight were Moses and the children of Israel brought into a little before Pharaoh and his host were to be drowned in the Red sea? The most grievous, extreme and dangerous persecution that ever the Church felt, was then when Christianity was ready to be exalted unto the Throne of the Empire; I mean that of Diocletian.

Moreover, there is a Sin whereof the whole body of the Reformation is notoriously guilty; which nevertheless is accounted no Sin, and yet such an one, as I know not whether God ever passed by without some visible and remarkable judgment. This seems to call for a scourge before Antichrist shall go down: And that may be, as far as I know, this feared Clades Testium. I will not name it, because it is invidious, and I am not willing to be drawn to say so much for the probability thereof in this case as perhaps I could.

But to speak somewhat more particularly of this Clades; I know not whether it should immediately precede the pouring out of the fifth Vial, or the fourth. If we were secure of the present dangers and fears, I should incline most to think it should precede the fifth Vial, in respect of that fall of * δέκατον ἡ πόλεως, which instantly ensues the Witnesses reviving. Secondly, The time of three days and a half is the time during which the Witnesses should lie for dead, without appearance of life or motion; not the time wherein they should be dying or killing; for that may be much longer, and grow also by degrees, (as also the natural Body of man sometimes dies so, the feet first,

* Revel. 11.
verse 12.
|| Verse 13.
* Verse 14.

* Verse 7.
ὁ δὲ ἑσθλὸς

first, and so upward. ) The three days and a half are not to be reckoned therefore ( as seems to me ) until all should be dead, and no motion of life any more appear. Thirdly, I conceive not this Clades to be such as should extinguish the persons or whole materials ( as I may so speak ) of the Reformed Churches, but the publick Fabrick of the Reformation, for joy whereof the Witnesses were about to finish their time of mourning. For that the party of men remaining of that dissolved building of Reformation should be great, ( though they lay as dead ) may be gathered by the strength they should in so short a time, as after three years and a half, recover, to the no small terror of the Beast which slew them, &c. It would make somewhat perhaps for understanding the degree of this Clades, if we could certainly tell what were that * πλατεία ἡ πόλεως, wherein the Witnesses should lie for dead; and whether those of the * nations, tongues and people, which should hinder the putting of them into graves, were friends or foes. They may seem to be friends: for if they had been once buried, there would have been but small hope of so soon a reviving again and standing upon their feet. You know what the Pharisees said, when they would have our Saviour made sure for rising again the third day.

* Verse 8.

* Verse 9.

By the way, because you use in your Letter the word πρωληθρία, I suppose your copy of my specimina is misdistinguished: For I referred not that word to the Calamity of the Witnesses, but to * Gentium, idest, Idololatrarum in Ecclesie atrio stabulantium: So there should be a comma at πρωληθριαν.

* Verse 2.

FOR your second Quære, of the Provocation of the Jews by the Gentiles: Methinks that which was to be unto the Jew as a Provocation to Jealousie, is expressed by S. Paul to be that * salvation which was then come unto the Gentiles, and not any other thing yet to come; as also the same Apostle saith, he used to magnifie and inculcate so much his Title of Apostle of the Gentiles to the same end. And if the Prosperity of the Christian Religion would have done it, by comparing it with their misery; there hath been already sufficient in that respect to have moved them to jealousie ere this.

* Rom. 11. 11.

For my part, I incline to think that no such thing will provoke them; but that they shall be called by * Vision and Voice from Heaven, as S. Paul was; and that that place of Zach. chap. 12. verse 10. They shall see him whom they have pierced, and that of Matth. 23. verse 39. Ye shall not see me henceforth, till you say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, seems to imply some such matter. They will never believe that Christ reigns at the right hand of God, until they see him. It must be an invincible evidence which must convert them after so many hundred years settled obstinacy. But this I speak of the body of the Nation; there may be some Preludis of some particulars converted upon other motives, as a forerunner of the great and main Conversion.

* See this more fully treated of in Ep. XVII. See also in Book V. a Tract styled The Mystery of S. Paul's Conversion.

I pray consider seriously that pattern of S. Paul's Conversion, so differing from all other mens that ever were, and how fitly his condition before it resembles that of the Jews in their bitter obstinacy against Christ and Christians. Why did Christ vouchsafe so strange a call to that man above other men? was it not a pledge or pattern of something that should be vouchsafed his Nation? I know not whether S. Paul's meaning, but I am sure his words, 1 Tim. 1. verse 16. may be applied to what I mean. But all this I write tumultuously and in some other distractions, and therefore I would not have you heed it further than to consider of it at your more quiet meditations. Nihil affirmo, sed propono.

I had thought, when I began, to propound something to your further meditations out of the seventh of Daniel: But you see I am grown past a Letter, and can scarce any longer make my Characters legible; and therefore here, with my best respect to your self, I end, desiring God to enlighten us daily more and more in the knowledge of his Truth: and so I remain

Christ's Colledge,
Nov. 11. 1629.

Hence the same Apostle learned to confute the false fear of the Thessalonians, that the day of Christ's second coming was then at hand; Because that day could not be till the Man of Sin were first come, and should have reigned his time appointed: Forasmuch as Daniel had foretold it should be so, and that his destruction should be at the Son of man appearing in the clouds; whose appearing therefore was not to be till then. This is ὁ ἄνθρωπος τῆς παρωσίας αὐτοῦ in S. Paul; whom the Lord (saith he) shall destroy at the παρωσία of his coming. Daniel's wicked Horn, or Beast acting in the wicked Horn, is S. Paul's Man of Sin, as the Church from her Infancie interpreted it.

But to go on: While this Judgment sits, and when it had destroyed the Fourth Beast, the Son of man which comes in the clouds receives dominion, and glory, and a Kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve and obey him, verie 14. which Kingdom is thrice explained afterwards to be the Kingdom of the Saints of the most High, verie 18. These four Beasts (saith the Angel) are four Kingdoms which shall arise. But (viz. when they have finished their course) the Saints of the most High shall take the Kingdom, &c. Again, verie 22. The wicked Horn prevailed, until the time came that the Saints possessed the Kingdom. Again, verie 27. When the fourth Beast, reigning in the wicked Horn, was destroyed, the Kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the Kingdom under the whole heaven, is given to the people of the Saints of the most High, &c.

These Grounds being laid, I argue as followeth:

The Kingdom of the Son of man and of the Saints of the most High in Daniel begins when the Great Judgment sits.

The Kingdom in the Apocalyps, wherein the Saints reign with Christ a thousand years, is the same with the Kingdom of the Son of man and Saints of the most High in Daniel.

Ergo, It also begins at the Great Judgment.

That the Kingdom in Daniel and that of a 1000 years in the Apocalyps are one and the same Kingdom, appears thus:

First, Because they begin ab eodem termino, namely, at the destruction of the Fourth Beast: That in Daniel, when the Beast (then ruling in the wicked Horn) was slain, and his body destroyed and given to the burning flame, Dan. 7. vers. 11, 22, 27. That in the Apocalyps, when the Beast and the false Prophet (the wicked Horn in Daniel) were taken, and both cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone, Apoc. 19. vers. 20, 21, &c.

Secondly, Because S. John begins the Regnum of a thousand years from the same Session of Judgement described in Daniel; as appears by his parallel expression borrowed from thence.

Daniel sayes, Chap. 7.

V. 9. I beheld till the Thrones were pitched down-----and the Judgment (i. Judges) sat.

22. And Judgment was given to the Saints of the most High.

And the Saints possessed the Kingdom; viz, with the Son of Man who came in the clouds.

S. John sayes, Chap. 20.

V. 4. I saw Thrones, and they sat upon them.

And Judgment was given unto them.

And the Saints lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

Now if this be sufficiently proved, That the thousand years begin with the Day of Judgment; it will appear further out of the Apocalyps, that the Judgment is not consummate till they be ended: For Gog and Magog's destruction and the universal Resurrection is not till then: Therefore the whole thousand years is included in the Day of Judgment.

Conseclarium de Interpretatione aliorum Scripturae locorum huc pertinentium.

Hence it will follow, That whatsoever Scripture speaks of a Kingdom of Christ to be at his second appearing or at the destruction of Antichrist, it must needs be the same which Daniel saw should be at that time, and so consequently be the Kingdom of a thousand years which the Apocalyps includes between the beginning and consummation of the Great Judgment.

Ergo, That in Luke 17. from verse 20. to the end.

And

And that in Luke 19. from the 11. verse to the 15. inclusively.

And that in Luke 21. verse 31. When ye see these things come to pass, know that the Kingdom of God is at hand. See what went before, viz. The Son of man's coming in a cloud with power and great glory; borrowed from Daniel.

And that in 2 Tim. 4. 1. I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom.

By these we may understand the rest; taking this for a sure ground, That this expression of [The Son of man's coming in the clouds of heaven] so often inculcated in the New Testament, is taken from and hath reference to the Prophecies of Daniel, being no where else found in the Old Testament. As our Saviour also calls himself so frequently [The Son of man], because Daniel so called him in that Vision of the Great Judgment, and that we might look for the accomplishment of what is there prophesied of in him. It was not in vain, that when our Saviour quoted the Prophecy of Daniel, he added, He that readeth him, let him understand. Certainly the great mystery of Christ is chiefly and most distinctly revealed in that Book; which God the Father of lights so enable us with his Spirit, that we may understand to his glory and our own comfort. Amen.

I pray compare this with the Paper I sent you of the Four Monarchies, which I called * The A. B. C. of Prophecies; and with the latter end of my specimina de mille annis; and with my Interpretation of Præconium Tuba VII. You shall find the grounds of all this in them.

I have no copy of this I now send: I would desire you when you are weary with reading it, to send me it again, that I may get it transcribed, to save me a labour another time, when some other friend shall make a Quære to like purpose. I find ever and anon inconvenience for want of such a provision. I will send you it again presently. Before Christmas will be time enough. I desire to be remembered to Master Doctor Twisse; to whose Letter I shall make some Answer when I get some leisure; now I have none.

Dr. Twisse his Second Letter to Mr. Mede.

Worthy Sir,

I Pray forgive me this once in interrupting your more momentous meditations, Thankfulness urgeth me to express that your Letter is a Jewel unto me; making me partaker of such fruits, and giving me interest in such affections. I profess you have strange conceits, I mean for the worthiness of them; they possess me with admiration: especially that touching the manner of the Jews Conversion. Those passages of Scripture, and the reference of them which you make, I do consider with Reverence; and the particular relations. S. Paul makes of himself, as first tasting of that Grace, in reference to the like which were to succeed: had he made mention of the miraculous operation in his Conversion, as he doth of God's Long-suffering and Patience, the Congruity had been absolute. Yet I seem to discern something whereby that may be argued also to be implied, for otherwise in likelihood he was not the first.

Yet to object, (for your Ingenuity I perceive gives me leave,) S. Paul was a particular person, and then travelling on the way: The Conversion we speak of is of a Nation, and that wonderfully dispersed in the world; the like manner of Christ's appearing unto whom for their Conversion is hard to conceive. And besides, I seem to conceive evidence from 2 Cor. 3. 15, 16. that their Conversion shall be wrought from amongst themselves by reading Moses and the Prophets: for it is the veil laid before their Hearts which hinders them from discerning the end of the Law, which is Christ; which veil shall be taken away, and being taken away they shall be turned unto Christ. Yet I confess the Text saith not, when the veil is taken away, they shall be turned to the Lord; but rather, when they shall be turned to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away. Yet again so it is said, Luk. 7. 47. that many sins were forgiven her, for she loved much; yet by the scope of the Parable there proposed, the formal truth appears to be this, She loved much, for many sins sins were forgiven her. So here it may be argued, that the taking away of their veil is the cause of their turning to the Lord: for the position of the veil is that which hinders them from discerning him; therefore the removing of the veil is the making way for the discerning of him by that in Moses. Yet I seem to see how this may be answered; The veil hinders from discerning him in the Law of Moses: but if God be pleased to manifest his son by sight, the veil can no way hinder that. And why may not the like miraculous favour be shewed to them as well as to S. Paul; their obstinacy being greater, and sealed with greater blasphemies than his was? May it not be said that therefore this Apparition was made to S. Paul, that he might have Apostolical authority independent on men, as well as the rest of the Apostles? And cannot the spirit of illumination clear all, and that from Moses, as well as it did in the heart of the Gentiles, who had not so much as Moses to direct them?

As for Provocation; how can Salvation on the Gentiles part be it unto the Jews, seeing the Jews (such is their blindness) cannot acknowledge any such condition of the Gentiles? Yet I confess the judgment of flesh and blood may teach them, that the Gentiles becoming Christians are turned to the worship of the God of Abraham, as appears by their embracing of the Old Testament as the Word of God: yet this hitherto hath nothing moved them; yet a time may come it may, and the Prosperity of our Church also. And it is said, that they shall obtain mercy by the mercy shewed unto us, Rom. 11. 31.

As for the black time to be expected; if so, it seems to be wondrous great, if not greater than all that went before. For the time hath been, the strong man hath so far possessed the House of God in peace, that scarce here and there a Witness hath been found openly to contest against him in this or that particular: And the days of the persecution of the Waldenses were wonderfull heavy times: And we have seen many black days for many years. And if it be so, as I doubt it is too probable, and most congruous to God's course indeed in the exaltation of his Church, I doubt it will concern our England most: yet God grant we may be of the number of those that suffer, that within three days and a half we may be raised and reign with Christ at his coming.

But will you not make us acquainted with that Sin you intimate that cries for vengeance? we are loth to adventure our conjectures, but we dare promise to joyn in mourning for it. But I heartily thank you for all, and particularly for that Speculation of the untimely advancing of the Martyrs to a Reign derogatory to the Mediation of our Lord; a bitter fruit of too irregular animosity against the Chiliasts, and of very ponderous consideration in this case. I have done, with some sorrow for putting out of your mind better thoughts: I assure you the place you are pleased to afford me in your good affections I esteem as a part of the best happiness I enjoy in friends, and heartily wish I may not be unworthy of it. I heartily commend your self and your precious studies to the Blessing of God, and rest,

EPISTLE XVII.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Doctor Twisse his Second Letter, concerning the two Wars of the Beast against the Witnesses, as also of the manner of the Jews Conversion.

SIR,

I Owe an answer to your Letter, though I can scarce find time to attend it. Some I have now gotten, and therefore desire you to vouchsafe to read and accept these few lines.

The Apocalyps mentions two Wars of the Beast: one to be in medio Testium luctu, during the time of the Witnesses mourning-prophecy; another when the Witnesses began to make an end of mourning. The first, while the Court of the Temple was wholly troden down and prophaned by the Gentiles: the latter, when it began to be purged, and so the cause of the Witnesses mourning to be removed. In these two Wars we may observe in the description these differences. First, The intermedium dium bellum is said to be against the whole Body of the Saints, Chap. 13. ver. 7. And it was given unto him to make war with the Saints, and overcome them: But the Bellum novissimum or last War is against the Prophets or Witnesses only: The Beast which ascends out of the bottomless pit shall make war with the Witnesses, and overcome and kill them, Chap. 11. v. 7. This difference is remarkable and to be considered for the better understanding of this last War, and how it differs from that formerly against the Waldenses, &c. Secondly, In the former his prevailing and success is absolute, so that all kindreds, tongues and nations submit unto him, and worship him, Ch. 13. v. 7, 8. But in the latter some of the people * [ἐκ τῶν λαῶν, &c.] and of the kindreds and tongues and nations shall be an obstacle to the perfecting and securing his victory, as not suffering him when he shall have slain the Witnesses to bury them and make them sure, in hope to recover them. Thirdly, The first prevailed many ages; this latter but three days and an half. Adde, if you will, (though it be included in the former) the first advanced his Dominion to that height it came to; this latter shall occasion his utter ruine and downfall.

* Chap. 11. 9.

These differences I thought good to propound to your consideration, to intimate that the scantling of this last War cannot be well taken from that against the Waldenses and Albigenses, &c. as being to be of another kind; namely, an extermination of the Reformed Pastors out of their places and Churches, and not a general extermination of the Body of the Reformed people, which are too many to be dealt with according to former violence, and shall remain to terrify the Beast, and revenge the clades of their Prophets before almost they shall have done rejoicing over them.

F O R my conceit of the manner of the Jews Conversion; though it often solicits me to give credence to it, as best becoming the greatest work that ever God yet did for that people, for whom in former times he shewed so many wonders: yet I will ingeniously confess, the grounds I have hitherto found seem not to my self sufficient to build a firm assent upon; but only by a kind of concinnity induce to a pleasing, but a wavering, conjecture. And therefore it were to little purpose to contend much for that wherein my self have no sufficient confidence. I use to object to my self, That the appearing of Christ in heaven belongs to the time of his Second coming: But the Jews must be converted before then, lest they all should perish amongst the enemies of his Kingdom, whereof they would be the principal. I save it with a supposition of some latitude in that appearance, as being first to be ushered with some preparation or prælude towards the Jewish Nation, before his great and universal Appearing to the whole world to judgement. So Cestius Gallus, the President of Syria, compassed Jerusalem with an Army, by way of anticipation, three years before the final and fatal siege by Vespasian, to be for a warning to the believing Jews, to flee into the mountains of Arabia, according to our Saviour's sign given them, Luk. 21. ver. 20.

For strengthening of such a supposition, methinks I discern in S. Matthew, (the Hebrew Evangelist) Chap. 24. v. 30. two such Appearances intimated: The one in the words, Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven, and all the Tribes of the earth shall mourn, (out of Zach. 12. v. 10, 11, 12.) The other in the words following, And they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, (out of Dan. 7.) But here I find a rub, which I cannot yet get over: For this appearing of the sign of the Son of man in heaven, as well as his coming in the clouds with great glory, is said to be * immediately after the tribulation of those days; that is, (as I am wont to expound it) soon after the long tribulation of the Jewish Nation shall be ended: But their tribulation shall not end till they be converted: Ergo their Conversion must needs precede the sign of the Son of man in heaven there mentioned. Here I stick.

* Matt. 24. 29.

But your Objections I think I could answer thus. As first, to that of the Jews Conversion to be wrought by the taking away the veil from their hearts, 2 Cor. 3. I could answer, That that is the Internal cause of their Conversion, or, if you will, the act of the Spirit of God illuminating and converting them; as he that takes away the film from the eyes of him that sees not, or the hood from him that is hood-winkt, does by that act make him see: But I speak of the External cause or means of the Jews Conversion, such as in the ordinary administration of God is the preaching of the Word; but extraordinarily may be by Miracle, as was in the Conversion of Paul, who nevertheless had the Mosaical veil taken from his heart, as well as the rest of his Nation when they are converted shall have.

* Because

But by the way, because you mention that place Luk. 7. 47. give me leave to add, That οτι signifies in Scripture not only * Quia or quoniam, but also the redditive thereto, thereto, which is * Ideo, propterea; because namely the Hebrew particle כי, to which כי answers, signifies both: as appears Psal. 116. v. 10. compared with 2 Cor. 4. 13. ubi כי in Hebræo à Paulo exponitur Ido. And Gen. 22. 17. item Eccles. 8. 6. See our English. In both which places כי is both the causal Quoniam, and the redditive thereto Ideo. Now the Scripture is wont to extend the Greek words it useth unto the full notion of the Hebrew or Chaldee to which they answer, (as may be proved by many Examples) though in the Greeks use they signified not so. This Dialect is called Lingua Hellenistica, (spoken by the Hellenists or Greekish Jews which lived dispersed under the Greek Empire) whose property is to accommodate verba Græca notioni Orientis: But no such ground can be shewn (I think) for ὅταν quando, to signify the redditive tunc.

* Therefore.

To your other Objection, How such a Vision could be manifested to the Jews dispersed in several parts of the world; I could answer, That a Vision or Apparition in Heaven may be seen to the greatest part of the world at the same time (as Stars and Comets are:) how else shall the Appearing of our Saviour in the clouds of Heaven, at his coming to Judgment, be seen at once to so many Nations of the world?

Or I could say, This apparition might be vouchsafed to some chief ones of them, whom God should chuse; and they, as witnesses, make it known to the rest.

But here is one thing more considerable from the miraculous Conversion of S. Paul, upon supposal that that of the Jews may be like it; viz. That though many were present with S. Paul at that time, yet none saw the apparition of Christ, nor heard him speak, but Paul alone, for whose sake he appeared. The rest saw indeed a strange light, and heard the voice of Paul replying and answering, but they heard not the voice, nor saw any that spake unto him; which therefore made them astonished. Compare Acts 9. 7. (where it is said, They heard Paul's voice) with Acts 22. 9. (where it is said, They heard not the voice of him that spake unto him.) And take heed here of some of our English Bibles, which have put in a [not] where it should not be, as they have done the like in other places. Fie upon such careless Printers. But to the matter; What if the like be at the Jews Conversion, to wit, that they alone shall see and hear the voice of Christ, but none of the Gentiles amongst whom they dwell, though perhaps some strange light for a testimony may at that instant surprize the whole world, to the astonishment of the Nations therein? Consider that of Matt. 24. 27. and the places of the other Evangelists answering thereto.

And what if the Jews upon such an apparition may have, as S. Paul had, an Ananias too, or (as they expect) an Elias, to instruct them? So you know the ancient Christian Church believed, from Mal. 4. 5. Mat. 17. 11. Eccles. 48. 10. For though the Fathers as well as the Jews might erre concerning the person and circumstances of this Elias, yet it follows not presently but the substance of the opinion might be true. But I will not discover all my roving Speculations, unless I had better ground for them; lest perhaps I should make you more than wonder at me. Howsoever it be, I suppose it is no sin to conceive magnificè and μεγαλύντως of so great a work of God towards a people for whom he hath formerly shewed so many wonders; especially this being to be the greatest work of mercy and wonder that ever he did for them; far beyond the bringing them forth of Egypt and leading them in the wilderness, &c. Consider it.

Besides, it may be there is a precedent already extant: Sure I am, when I had entertained this conceit into my meditation, I was led by I know not what providence (as I was searching some other matter) to find an History of the greatest multitude of Jews that ever, I think, were converted since the Apostles times, to have been convinced by such a miraculous apparition in every respect as I had apprehended.

The Story (if it be true) happened about some 570 years after Christ, in the daies of Justinus the Greek Emperor, (though Bignens puts it a hundred years before) in the kingdom of the Omerites (some write Homerites) in Arabia Felix: where the Jews in those parts (being a strong party) had challenged to a publick Disputation a Christian City and Kingdom in that Tract, upon condition that if they could not convince the Christians by strength of Reason and Scripture, they would become Christians; if they could, they required the Christians should turn Jews.

A remarkable story of a great conversion of Jews wrought by Christ's apparition and voice from heaven.

The Disputation was performed for three days together sub dio, in a full assembly of the King, his Peers and people, between Gregentius Bishop of Tephra, and Herbanus champion for the Jews who were there assembled with him. The third day Herbanus required to end the controversie, that if Jesus of Nazareth were indeed living and reigning in Heaven, and if those who worshipped him had any power with him, that he would upon their prayers manifest himself from Heaven, and they would then then believe in him. Thereupon all the multitude of Jews cried out in derision, Ostende nobis Christum tuum. Vae ! quia scimus Christiani, &c.

The conclusion was, that Christ Jesus, after a dreadful Thunder and Lightning, appeared from Heaven with beams of glory, walking upon a purple cloud, with a Sword in his hand, and a Diadem of inestimable beauty upon his head, and over the Assembly uttered a voice, Appareo vobis in oculis vestris ego crucifixus à Patribus vestris. Which having spoken, the cloud took him presently out of their sight. The Christians shouted, Domine, miserere; the Jews were all stricken blind, and received not their sight till they were all baptized.

This Story (whereof I tell you but the brief) hath been long unknown to these Western parts, and was brought in our time from the Eastern among divers other Greek Manuscripts, and published in Greek and Latin by Nicolaus Gulonius in oſtavo, under the name of Gregentii Archiepiscopi Tephrensis Disputatio cum Herbano Judæo. The beginning is imperfect: In the end is the Story I have related. I have seen and used that Book, but could not be owner of it. But the Latin translation is inserted into the Bibliotheca Patrum of the edition of Colen, in the fifth Tome, pag. 919. which if you read, I could wish you would joyn with it the Story of the Martyrium Omeritarum published by Baronius out of a Vatican Manuscript, in his sixth seculum about the middle. It is worthy your reading, and supposed to have happened a little before this Conversion of the Jews I speak of: which Baronius nevertheless then knew not of, as being published after he had written that Tome. The Persecution was raised by Dunaan a Jew, who had gotten the Kingdom of the Omerites, and meant to extinguish the Christian City and Dition of Nargan, which was subject, as many other small Reguli were, to that Kingdom, &c.

If this Story be true, it makes much for a probability of such a conjecture for the future. If it be counterfeit, at least it argues that some, many ages ago, thought such a mean not unlikely: For Poets themselves are wont to feign Verisimilia. So howsoever, I am not the first that thought of such a matter.

That which you say of S. Paul's miraculous Conversion, that by it he had Apostolical authority immediate and independent, as having his Mission from Heaven, and not from Men; I acknowledge it. But that this should be the only end of his so being converted, I suppose it is not necessary. For it might have pleased God to have converted him by an ordinary mean, and yet have given him a Mission for his Apostleship by an immediate and extraordinary way. The immediateness of Apostolical Mission depended not upon such a miraculous Conversion, though it pleased God at one and the same time, by one and the same miraculous manifestation, both to convert him to the Faith of Christ, and send him to be an Apostle to the Gentiles.

But it is now time to give over. I have been tedious and troublesome, I know, and perhaps not well busied in spending so many words and paper about a wavering and uncertain Speculation. But because in my first Letter I had unawares discovered my fancy, I was somewhat solicitous till I had more fully explained my self, lest I might seem to believe much upon very little reason, or be supposed to be more confident in this conceit than I am. But he that seeks for that which is yet to find, must be poring as well where it is not as where it is. God Almighty, the Father of Lights, direct us in the search of his Truth, and give us grace, when we find it, to use it to his Glory and our own Salvation. To whose protection I commend your self, not forgetting my best respect, who am

I shall bid you farewell for this year, and write shorter Letters the next, that so I may hold out. I have made a salus in my Meditations by these Discourses of the Great Day. I am not come to it yet: I have much to think of, and bring to more perfection, which is preceding to it; The Witnesses, Dragon, Beast, &c.

Mr. Mason's Letter to Mr. Mede, touching the Millenaries.

Good Mr. Mede,

I Think my self much indebted unto you, that you do so freely communicate unto me your learned Writings. I wish I had been more conversant in studies of this nature, that I might in some sort be able to talk with you in your own language. But you have had the happiness to follow these studies with good leisure and much opportunity; and I (to say nothing of other wants) have been hindered both with businesses of my place and weakness of my body, that I have scarce had time to think on any thing but what hath been necessary for my present employment; and so it happeneth to me in my studies as to poor men in getting of their living, we have nothing but from hand to mouth. The consciousness of these wants maketh me to write so seldom and so slightly: Else, if I had any thing in my thoughts that might be fit for your reading, I would be as free in communicating my studies with you as you are in imparting yours unto me; especially in this business, wherein you have travelled with such success. I only now can say, that I wish I may see the full finishing of your intended Work, and so do others abroad also: but yet I had rather stay your leisure, till you have concocted all according to your mind, than to hasten you forward before the time. Dr. Potter hath read your former Papers which you committed to Mr. D. and by occasion thereof hath proceeded to read others of the same Argument; which when I understood, I desired him to peruse two Writings of Dr. Gerhard of the same Argument, both purposely intended against the Millenaries: the one is in the second part of his Disputationes Theologicæ, Disp. 3. de novis Fanaticis; the other in the ninth Tome of his Common Places, Loc. de Consummatione seculi, cap. 7. p. 442, &c. Upon the reading of those Treatises he sent a Letter expressing his mind and judgment concerning them, which I received this evening: And because I know you desire to hear the opinion of Learned men, I have sent down inclosed herein so much of his Letter as concerneth that business. Which I did the rather also, because I suppose this may give you occasion to answer such grounds as Gerhard hath laid to the contrary. Perhaps, if you consider him well, you may find a tacit Answer to that which you object against S. Hierome, for laying an imputation on the Millenaries, as if they dreamed of Earthly Pleasures in this Kingdom of our Lord; for he saith that (as Dr. Gerhard thinks) of the Cerinthians and Jews, not of the ancient Fathers; how truly, I leave it to your consideration and judgment. In the Margin of your Notes on Justin Martyr I noted a place to the same purpose in Lactantius: It is in black lead, and may easily be wiped out, if it be nothing to your purpose. Dr. Potter signified in a former Letter, that he had a purpose to write to you; perhaps he is not yet ready for that which he meaneth to say: but if he send his Letter this way, I will take care to send it down by your Carrier. In the mean while, and ever, I commend you and your studies to the Blessing of the Almighty; and so for this time I leave you.

Your ever assured Friend,

Good Mr. Mason.

I Have read those two large and learned Discourses of Gerhard against the Millenaries, and find him (as his wont is) to be very diligent both in recounting the Opinions of other men and in the establishing of his own. By him I see, the conceit is ancient among our later Writers, and favoured by many ignorant and fanatical spirits; which I confess casts casts much envy upon the Conjecture. But yet methinks, First, the consent of so many great and worthy Lights of the ancient Primitive Church doth more honour and countenance the opinion, than it can be disgraced or obscured by these late blind abettors. Secondly, The Anabaptists and their fellows are confident, where Mr. Mede doth but modestly conjecture; and that, Thirdly, upon other and better grounds than their dreaming dotting heads ever thought of. Lastly, The Devil himself may sometime speak truth, and so may his disciples, with an ill intention, or at hazard;

Πολλάκι τοι καὶ μὲρ ὁ ἀνὴρ μάλα καίριον εἶπε.

I suppose no Learned man or Christian can deny that the Nation of the Jews shall be once hereafter called by God's mercy to the Faith, and that their general Conversion will bring with it a great and glorious alteration in the Church; and therefore that Kingdom of our Lord upon earth, howsoever in some circumstances it may not answer our hopes, (which may be ungrounded and deceived) yet for substance it seems an indisputable Truth. But Prophecies are Mysteries till their accomplishment; let us therefore leave them to God and to Posterity: — Θεὸς ἐν γνῶσι καίται. I have received Philostrates and Origen, &c.

EPISTLE XX.

Mr. Mede's Second Letter to Dr. Meddus, containing four grounds why the First Resurrection, Rev. 20. is to be taken literally; with some other Observations concerning the difference between the State of the New Jerusalem and the State of the Nations walking in the light thereof: as also concerning the time of the Regnum Christi.

Worthy Sir,

I Sent the fourth sheet I promised to the Bury-Carrier yesterday, with a note therein, promising to make some Answer to your Quære to day, to be delivered to the Carrier as he passed through Newmarket, but some 4 or 5 miles from the place where I am. When I had thus done, some hour or two after I received a transcript of another of yours dated August 14, of the conformation of the taking of Wesel-----But to the Quære, which I must answer but briefly, till I have a better and more free occasion to enlarge upon particulars. The full resolving thereof depends upon so large an explication of the Oeconomy of God in the restitution of Mankind as cannot be comprised in a Letter. And I am somewhat unwilling to discover what I think, unless I could do it fully; which made me abstain in my Specimina from any explication of that First Resurrection, save to name it only.

But howsoever when at first I perceived that Millennium to be a State of the Church consequent to the times of the Beast, I was averse from the proper acception of that Resurrection, taking it for a rising of the Church from a dead estate; as being loth to admit too many Paradoxes at once: yet afterward more seriously considering and weighing all things, I found no ground or footing for any sense but the Literal.

For first, I cannot be perswaded to forsake the proper and usual importment of Scripture-language, where neither the insinuation of the Text it self, nor manifest tokens of Allegory, nor the necessity and nature of the things spoken of (which will bear no other sense) do warrant it. For to do so, were to lose all footing of Divine testimony, and in stead of Scripture to believe mine own imaginations. Now the 20th of the Apocalyps, of all the Narrations of that Book, seems to be the most plain and simple, most free of Allegory and of the involution of Prophetical figures; only here and there sprinkled with such Metaphors as the use of speech makes equipollent to vulgar expressions, or the former Narrations in that Book had made to be as words personal or proper names are in the plainest histories; as Old Serpent, Beast, &c. How can a man then in so plain and simple a narration take a passage of so plain and ordinarily-expressed words (as those about the First Resurrection are) in any other sense than the usual and Literal?

Secondly,

Secondly, Howsoever the word Resurrection by it self might seem ambiguous, yet in a sentence composed in this manner [ viz. Of the dead, those which were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, &c. lived again when the thousand years began; but the rest of the dead lived not again till the thousand years were ended ] it would be a most harsh and violent interpretation to say that [ Dead, ] and consequently [ Living again from the dead ] should not utrobique be taken in the same meaning: For such a speech in ordinary construction implies, That some of the dead lived again in the beginning of the thousand years, in that sense the rest should live again at the end of the thousand years; and à contrà, In what manner the rest of the dead should live again at the end of the thousand years, in that manner those who were beheaded for Jesus lived again in the beginning of the thousand years; which living again of those some is called the First Resurrection.

Thirdly, Though the ancient Jews (whilest they were yet the Church of God) had no distinct knowledge of such an order in the Resurrection as First and Second, but only of the Resurrection in gross and general, to be in die Judicii magni; yet they looked for such a Resurrection, wherein those that rose again should reign some time * upon earth, as appeareth, Wisd. 3. from the first to the eighth verse inclusive; where it is expressly said, That the souls of the Righteous which were departed should in the time of their visitation shine, and that they should judge the nations, and have dominion over the people, and their Lord should reign for ever. See the place and consider it. This opinion is here and there also dispersed in the Chaldee Paraphrase and in the Talmud, as of ancient Tradition; and is the opinion of the Jews at this day, who as they look not for the Kingdom of their Messiah until Dies Judicii magni, so they expect that their forefathers (at least such as were just and holy) should rise at the beginning of the same, and reign in the land of Israel with their off-spring under Messiah. I can hardly believe that all this smoke of Tradition could arise but from some fire of Truth anciently made known unto them. Besides, why should the holy Ghost in this point speak so like them, unless he would induce us mutatis mutandis to mean with them? In fine, the Second and Universal Resurrection with the State of the Saints after it, now so clearly revealed in Christianity, seems to have been less known to the ancient Church of the Jews than the First and the State to accompany it.

* according to that, Apocal. 5. 10. We shall reign on the earth.

N. B.

Lastly, This was the Opinion of the whole Orthodox Christian Church in the Age immediately following the death of S. John, (when yet Polycarp. and many of the Apostles Disciples were living) as * Justin Martyr expressly affirmeth; whose passage to that purpose, when I return again to Cambridge, I will send you, illustrated with some * Notes, and the reading in one place restored from a corruption crept thereinto by fraud or otherwise. A testimony absolute, without all comparison, to persuade such as rely upon Authority and Antiquity. It is to be admired, that an Opinion once so generally received in the Church should ever have been cried down and buried. But those Times which extinguished this brought other Alterations into the Church besides this; Et quidem sic fieri oportuit.

* See Book III. pag. 664.

I will say something more, observed perhaps by few of those which have knowledge enough of the rest; namely, That this Opinion of the First Resurrection was the true ground and mother of prayers for the dead, so anciently received in the Church, which were then conceived after this manner. Ut partem haberent in Resurrectione prima. See Tertullian, who first mentions them. The reason was, because this having part in Resurrectione prima was not to be common to all, but to be a privilege of some, namely, of Martyrs, and Confessors equipollent to them, if God so would accept them. Moreover, the belief of this Prerogative of Martyrs in Resurrectione prima was that which made the Christians of those times so joyously desirous of Martyrdom. These things will perhaps seem strange, but they will be found true, if duly examined.

See in Book III. pag. 710. Epist. ad Amicum de Resurrectione prima.

Thus I have discovered my opinion of the thing which I suppose the Scripture hath revealed shall be: But de modo how it shall be I would willingly abstain from determining. We must be content to be ignorant of the manner of things, which for the matter we are bound to believe. Too much adventuring here, without a sure guide, may be dangerous, and breed intolerable fancies, as it did among some in those ancient times; which occasioned, as may seem, the death and burial of the main Opinion it self so generally at first believed.

Yet thus much I conceive the Text seems to imply, That these Saints of the First Resurrection should reign here on earth in the New Jerusalem in a state of beatitude and glory,

glory, partaking of Divine presence and Vision of Christ their King; as it were in an Heaven upon earth, or new Paradise immutable, unchangeable, &c.

Secondly, That, for the better understanding of this Myserie, we must distinguish between the State of the New Jerusalem and State of the Nations which shall walk in the light thereof; they shall not be both one, but much differing. Therefore what is spoken particularly of the New Jerusalem, must not be applied to the whole Church which then shall be: New Jerusalem is not the whole Church, but the Metropolis thereof and of the New world. The State of the Nations which shall walk in her light, though happy and glorious, yet shall be changeable, as appears by the commotion of the Nations seduced at the end of the Thousand years. But the State of those who dwell in the New Jerusalem shall be extra omnem mutationis aleam; Blessed are those who have part in the First Resurrection, for on them the Second Death hath no power.

I differ therefore from Piscator, and agree with Alstedius, That the Saints of the First Resurrection should reign on Earth during the Millennium, and not in Heaven.

I differ from both, in that I make this State of the Church to belong to Secundus Adventus Christi or Dies Judicii Magni, when Christ shall appear in the clouds of Heaven to destroy all the professed enemies of his Church and Kingdom, and deliver the creature from that bondage of corruption brought upon it for the sin of man: Whereas they make it to precede the Day of Judgment and Second coming. Though this Notion may seem to make but little alteration of the thing believed; yet it is of no small moment to facilitate the understanding of Scripture, and puts upon the thing it self another nature than is conceived by those who apprehend it otherwise. In a word, Ours conceive this State to be ante Diem Judicii: Others (though wrongfully) suppose the ancient Chiliasists to have held it to be post Diem Judicii. But the truth is, it is neither before nor after, but ipsa Dies Judicii, ipsum tempus Secundæ apparitionis Christi. And it is to be remembered here, that the Jews, who gave this time the name of יום דין The Day of Judgment, and from whom our Saviour and his Apostles took it, never understood thereby but a Time of many years continuance, yea some (mirabile dictu) of a thousand years: and the name of יום דין The Day of Judgment is more frequent in their Writings than in the New Testament it self. It is mentioned I know not how many times in the Chaldee Paraphrase of that little Book of Ecclesiastes. The word [Day] is in the Hebrew notion used ordinarily for tempus, yea longissimum: as in the Prophets, for the seventy years Captivity; for the time of their great and long Captivity; for the time of their pilgrimage in the wilderness, Psal. 95. according to the LXX. and S. Paul's translation Hebr. 3. The day of temptation in the wilderness, when your Fathers tempted me, and proved me, and saw my works forty years. See the thirteenth verse of that chapter, where a Day includes every Day. So should Day be taken in the Lord's Prayer, for the time of this our life. Compare it with S. Luke, whose words are, Give us every day our daily bread. See the longest day of all days, in the last words of S. Peter's last Epistle, in the Greek and Latin; (for our English obscures it with a general expression) It is ἡμέρα αἰώνου, dies eternitatis.

There came forth that year I conceived my Specimina of that Millennium, a Discourse by a Lutheran with this Title, Verosimilia historico-Prophetica de Rebus in novissimo die eventuris, pio studio cujusdam ἀγαπῶντος ἑωφάκειαν τῷ Κυρίῳ. He conceals his name; it is a little, but elaborate, Discourse. He hath the same notion of Dies novissimus which I had of Dies Judicii. I found with no little admiration a great part of my private Speculations of this matter in that Tractate. Spying it in the Catalogue, and guessing what it meant by the Title. I laid for it at London: There came but two. I got them both, one for a friend, another for my self. I have used means for more Copies, but they cannot, say the Merchants, be heard of. Mine is now lent away; when I can recover it, I will send it you. Thus I take my leave, lest I seal too late. God keep us.

Dalham-Hall,
Aug. 18.

Yours,

Joseph Mede.

Post-script.

Now I have done, I repent me of so tumultuary and confused a Discourse of so great a Myserie, wherein so much is wanting to give it light and evidence. I must desire you therefore to keep it to your self, and to pardon the fault you have been an occasion of in putting me upon it.

Dr. Meddus his Letter to Mr. Mede, touching Dr. Twisse's Answers to nine Quære's about Regnum Sanctorum.Worthy Sir, and my dear Friend,

THis hath been unto me no pleasant time, being much weakened by this months bleeding and a pain in my right arm. I have done with the Lutheran; though doing all with my own hand, I have been longer about it than Dr. Twisse was, having the help of divers hands. I now send it back with many thanks. You may remember in the beginning of November I sent you a Letter from Dr. Twisse, when I wrote he had besides some * Quære's to have proposed unto you concerning the thousand years Regnum Sanctorum; but he durst not be so bold, yet left it free unto me to do as I thought good: But then propounding other things, and being loth especially to hinder you in the going forward as with another part of the Revelation, so with the clearing of 2 Pet. c. 3. And besides, your inhibition was then a command unto me, to make no more demands till after these late Holy-days. But now, in hope of your favourable bearing with me, I shall adventure to make his Quære's and Answers known unto you: yet with this caution, that neither they, nor your judgment or censure of the Lutheran Book, (which I once desired) may retard your other meditations; nor to give answer thereunto but at your best leisure and convenience. Now to the Quære's and Answers.

* See Dr.
Twisse his First Letter to Mr.
Mede.

Quære 1. As concerning the persons to be raised, which are expressed Rev. 20. 4. to be only Martyrs, and Piscator will have it proceed only of such: Now this is very strange, considering that undoubtedly some never suffering Martyrdom have been as great in the favour of God as any Martyrs; as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the Virgin Mary.

Ans. This may be helped two waies. First, by such an interpretation of Martyrdom as may be extended much further then to the suffering of death for the testimony of Christ. Secondly, by comparing this of Rev. 20. 4. with other places, as namely with Rev. 5. 10. & 11. 18. where the same grace is extended to them that fear God's Name, to small and great.

Object. But then here followeth a contrary inconvenience, that so it shall be extended unto all.

Ans. Yet is it not said, To all that fear God's Name.

Quære 2. Concerning the Communion between the Saints raised from their graves, and the people then living and remaining on the earth, called the nations that are saved, that is, from the fire, whereby the earth and the works thereof shall be burned, 2 Pet. 3. 10. Alstedius will have the Saints raised to be Doctors of the Church, taking no notice of any distinction of male and female; though of both sexes there have been both Saints and Martyrs. Rev. 21. 24. it is said, that the nations shall walk in the light of New Jerusalem; and if the Saints shall reign over the Nations, there must be a Communion, such as is between Governors and persons governed. And this Government shall be undoubtedly in reference to the Worship of God. Now consider,

1. What Communion can such Bodies as ours have with glorified bodies, considering that when Moses came down from the Mount, his countenance did so shine that the Israelites could not endure to look him in the face?

Ans. First, this glorious lustre may be qualified so far as to be without offence.

Secondly, The world being restored, why may not the mortal Bodies of men be something altered also? Surely God can proportion it.

2. Whether shall the Bodies of the Saints raised be covered or naked? It seems very incongruous they should be naked; neither can we devise in any congruity a glorified Body should be covered: What raiment were any fit covering for such? Neither is it congruous their glory should be covered, as Moses's face was with a Veil.

Ans. As Angels appeared, their faces shining like lightning, and their raiment white as snow, (which aspect, terrible at the first, by familiar conversation might prove not terrible;) so Light may be as a garment to the Saints raised.

3. Whether Christ and the Saints raised shall eat and drink. One Mr. — a Minister in Lincolnshire, maintains they shall, (as I have heard from a noble person) and for his opinion alledgeth that of our Saviour, I will not from henceforth drink of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God, Mar. 14. 25. Add to this Luk. 14. 15. One sitting at table with Christ said, Blessed is he that eateth bread in the Kingdom of God. This he meant (as did all the Jews) of the Kingdom of the Messias on earth; which opinion our Saviour doth no where correct. Otherwise what use will they have of the Restauration of the world? Yet this is very hard to concoct, 1. That Christ and his Saints all glorified should come from Heaven, to eat and drink on earth; which comes near to the vile opinion of Cærinthus, that for a 1000 years God's Saints should live on earth in carnal pleasures. 2. In this case it seems their Bodies should be exposed to excrements, which is not to be endured in Bodies glorified.

Ans. 1. No more than our Saviour's was after his Resurrection; or Angels, who sometimes did eat with the Patriarchs.

Ans. 2. If so, yet not for necessity, much less for satisfaction to the flesh; but for other reasons, as Christ did eat with his Apostles after his Resurrection.

Quære 3. Then there will be no place for such desires, as to be dissolved and to be with Christ, Philip. 1. 23. and to be removed out of the body, and to dwell with the Lord, 2 Cor. 5. 8. For then to be dissolved will be to be absent from the Lord, and to dwell in the body will be to be present with the Lord.

Ans. 1. Though death will not then be comfortable in this respect, yet it may in other respects, as it brings freedom from seducing, which afterwards shall be incident to Gog and Magog.

*Ans. 2. As Methuselah lived above 900 years a little before the Flood; so in the Restauration of the world why may not men live a 1000 years? I speak not of the Saints raised, but of those that shall walk in the light of new Jerusalem.**

Quære 4. Christ's Kingdom shall have no end, Luk. 1. 33. Dan. 7. 14. But this Kingdom of Christ shall last but a 1000 years, and then Gog and Magog shall prevail so far, as not only to invade all the Nations that walk in the light of new Jerusalem, but even to besiege the beloved City, that is, new Jerusalem it self, Rev. 20.

Ans. 1. But not prevail over new Jerusalem, but be forthwith consumed with fire: and then Christ's Kingdom continuing still shall be translated from earth to Heaven.

Ans. 2. Christ's Kingdom shall succeed other kingdoms, but no kingdom shall succeed this; and in that respect it is said to be everlasting: But Christ must resign his Kingdom to his Father, that God may be all in all. 1 Cor. 15.

Quære 5. Christ's coming is not till the restoring of all things, Acts 3. 21. But the restoring of all things followeth after the consumption of Gog and Magog, Rev. 20. 11. and Rev. 21. 1. Ergo Christ's coming shall not be till after Gog and Magog's ruine; Ergo not a 1000 years before.

Ans. It is said, that before his face that sat upon the throne, heaven and earth fled away, &c. But it is not said, that then it began to fly away, to wit, after the destruction of Gog and Magog.

Quære 6. 'Tis very strange that Gog and Magog should adventure to besiege new Jerusalem; the Devil and his Angels might as well adventure to besiege Heaven.

Ans. True, if Gog and Magog knew the condition of new Jerusalem so well as the Devil and his Angels know the condition of Heaven.

Quære 7. Shall all that oppose Christ's truth be consumed with fire at that day? Consider, Paul opposed the Gospel for a while, yet was a chosen vessel of God; and many that do not oppose, may yet be reprobates.

Ans. 1. Yet at that day all such to whom the Lord coming in a flaming fire shall render vengeance for not obeying the Gospel of Christ Jesus, 2 Thess. 1. 8. shall be none of God's Elect.

Ans. 2. But some of God's Elect perhaps may be converted that very day.

Quære 8. What shall become of Infants found alive at that day, not only of God's children, but of others also?

Ans. 1. If consumed in the same fire with their ungodly parents, this will be no more strange than that which fell out in the conflagration of Sodom and Gomorrah.

Ans. 2. Yet they may be of the number of those that escape, if so it please God; and hereunto, to wit, that it should so please God, I should rather incline.

Quære 9. From heaven we look for a Saviour that shall transform our vile bodies, and make them like unto his glorious body, Phil. 3. ult. Ergo at Christ's coming all the Saints that remain alive shall be so transformed.

Ans. So they shall before that Day of Judgment ends; for it continueth a 1000 years.

Quære

* [In a MS. of Dr. Twisse there is a third Answer added in the Margin; but whether it was added in the Paper of his Answers sent by Dr. Meddus to Mr. Mede appears not. Ans. 3. It appears by Esa. 65 20. that they who are found alive at Christ's coming shall be obnoxious unto death; but after death they shall rise ere the 1000 years be expired, and reign with Christ.]

Quære 10. They that then are found alive shall be caught up in the air, and ever be with the Lord; I mean the godly: But if there shall be a 1000 years reign on earth, what need they be caught up in the air? and how ever be with the Lord from thenceforth, if they and their posterity after them continue for the space of a 1000 years subject to mortality?

These were his Ten Quæres, and Answers unto Nine of them; with which Contemplations (he wrote) his heart serv'd him not to acquaint you, or to intreat your judgment in the way of correction or confirmation and addition, but lest it unto me. The Father of lights illuminate our hearts with all saving light to his Glory, the good of his people, and our own comforts in Christ Jesus. So I rest,

Mr. Mede's Answer to the Tenth Quære, about the 1000 years Regnum Sanctorum.

SIR,

BY reason of this late indisposition I was not fit for any matter of study till yesterday: howsoever, I considered then Dr. T. his Answers to the Objections, and applaud them, finding through them all a right and dexterous apprehension of the thing questioned, which many are very incapable to conceive. But because he leaves the last unanswered, I suppose it was tacitely reserved to me for Tithe, himself having answered Nine. I will therefore, as well as I can, propound what I had before conceived might be answered to such an Objection; wherein you shall also perceive in part wherein I differ from the Lutheran.

1. Therefore, It is not needful that the Resurrection of those which slept in Christ, and the Rapture of those which shall be left alive together with them into the Aire, should be at one and the same time: For the words **πρῶτον* and **ἐπειτα*, first and then or afterwards, may admit a great distance of time, as 1 Cor. 15. 23. Every one (or, all mankind) shall rise in their order, Christ the first-fruits (that is, first,) ἐπειτα afterwards they that are Christ's, at his coming. Here ἐπειτα, afterwards, notes a distance of time of above a thousand and a half of years, as we find by experience. Suppose therefore this Rapture of the Saints into the Aire be to translate them to Heaven; yet it might be construed thus, The dead in Christ (that is, for Christ, namely, the Martyrs) shall rise first; afterwards, ἐπειτα, (viz. a thousand years after) we which are alive and remain shall together with them be caught up in the clouds, and meet the Lord in the Aire, and so (from thenceforth) we shall ever be with the Lord. Thus Tertullian seems to understand it, who interprets νεκροὶ ἐν Χριστῷ, or as it is in ver. 14. κοιμηθέντες διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, of Martyrs; namely, such as die propter Christum, for Christ, by means of Christ, through Christ, for Christ's sake; taking ἐν as noting the cause or means of their death. So Piscator expounds the like speech, Apoc. 14. 13. Blessed are the dead which die ἐν Κυρίῳ, id est, propter Dominum, for the Lord; Beza, qui Domini causâ moriuntur, which die for the Lord's sake.

2. If thus to restrain νεκροὶ ἐν Χριστῷ, or κοιμηθέντες διὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, seem not so fully to answer the Apostle's scope and intention, which seems to be a general consolation to all that die in the faith, a fruition of Christ: then may we give it the largest sense, and yet say, That it is not needful that the Resurrection of those which died in Christ should be all at once or altogether; but the Martyrs first, in the First resurrection; then (after an appointed time) the rest of the dead in the Last resurrection; afterward, when the Resurrection shall be thus compleat, those which remain alive at Christ's coming shall together with those which are risen be caught up into the clouds, to meet the Lord in the Aire, and from thenceforth be eternally with him. And so the reason why those which Christ found alive at his coming were not instantly translated should be in part, that they might not prevent the dead, but be consummate with them.

3. Both

3. Both these Interpretations suppose the Rapture of the Saints into the Clouds to be for their present translation into Heaven. But suppose that be not the meaning of it; for the words, if we weigh them well, seem to imply it to be for another end, namely, To do honour unto their Lord and King at his return, and to attend upon him when he comes to judge the World: Those (saith the Text) which sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him; he saith not, carry away with him. Again, They and those which are alive shall be caught up together in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the Aire; to meet the Lord's coming hither to Judgment; not to follow him returning hence, the Judgment being finished. Besides, it is to be noted, that although in the Hebrew notion the Aire be comprehended under the name of Heaven, yet would not the Apostle here use the word Heaven, but the word [Aire,] as it were to avoid the ambiguity, lest we might interpret it of our translation into Heaven.

If this be the meaning, then are those words [We shall ever be with the Lord] thus to be interpreted; After this our gathering together unto Christ at his coming, (so the Apostle calls this Rapture, 2 Thess. 2. 1.) we shall from henceforth never lose his presence, but always enjoy it, partly on earth, during his reign of a 1000 years, and partly in Heaven, when we shall be translated thither. For it cannot be concluded, because the Text saith, the Saints after their rapture on high should thenceforth be ever with the Lord; Ergo, they shall from thenceforth be in Heaven; for no Heaven is here mentioned. If they must needs be with Christ there where they are to meet him, it would rather follow, they should be ever with him in the Aire, than in Heaven; which I suppose none will admit. And otherwise the Text will afford no more for Heaven than it will for Earth; nay, the words [he shall bring them with him] make most for the latter.

4. I will add this more, namely, what may be conceived to be the cause of this Rapture of the Saints on high to meet the Lord in the Clouds, rather than to wait his coming to the Earth. What if it be, that they may be preserved during the Conflagration of the earth and the works thereof, 2 Pet. 3. 10. that as Noah and his family were preserved from the Deluge by being lift up above the waters in the Ark; so should the Saints at the Conflagration be lift up in the Clouds unto their Ark, Christ, to be preserved there from the deluge of fire, wherein the wicked shall be consumed? There is a Tradition of the Jews founding this way, which they ascribe unto one Elias a Jewish Doctor, whose is that * Tradition of the duration of the World, and well known among Divines, Duo millia Inane, duo millia Lex, duo millia dies Messie; viz. sex mille annos duraturus est Mundus. He lived under the second Temple about the first times of the Greek Monarchy; so that it is no device of any latter Rabbies, but a Tradition anciently received amongst them whilst they were yet the Church of God. I will transcribe it, because it hath something remarkable concerning the 1000 years: It sounds thus.

Traditio domus Eliæ. Iusti quos resuscitabit Deus non redigentur iterum in pulverem. (He means of the First and Particular Resurrection before the General, which the Jews acknowledge and talk much of. See Wisdom, chap. 3. ab initio ad finem v. 8.) Si quæras autem, Mille annis istis quibus Deus sanctus Benedictus renovaturus est mundum suum (de quibus dicitur, Et exaltabitur Dominus solus in die illo, Es. 2. 11.) quid iustis futurum sit; sciendum, quod Deus sanctus Benedictus dabit illis alas quasi aquilarum, ut volent super facie aquarum: unde dicitur (Ps. 46. 3.) Propterea non timebimus cum * mutabitur terra. At forte (inquires) erit ipsis dolori seu afflictioni. Sed occurrit illud (Esa. 40. 31.) Expectantibus Dominum innovabuntur vires, efferentur alæ instar aquilarum. The Hebrew words are in Gemara Sanhedrin, תני רבית אליהו צריקים שעתיד הקרוש ברוך הוא לחיותן אין חורון לעפרם ואם תאמר אותן אלף שנים שעתיד הקרוש ברוך הוא לחדש בהן את עלמו שנאמר ונשגב ה' לברו ביום ההוא צריקים The Tradition of the house of Elias. The just whom God shall raise up (viz. in the First Resurrection) shall not be turned again to dust. Now if you ask, How it shall be with the just in those Thousand years wherein the Holy Blessed God shall renew his world, whereof it is said (Esa. 2. 11.) And the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day; you must know, that the Holy Blessed God will give them the wings as it were of Eagles, to fly upon the face of the waters: whence it is said (Ps. 46. 3.) Therefore shall we not fear, when the Earth shall be changed. But perhaps you will say, it shall be a pain and affliction to them. Not at all, for it is said (Esa. 40. 31.) They that wait upon the Lord, shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as Eagles.

EPISTLE XXIII.

Dr. Twisse his Third Letter to Mr. Mede, touching some obscure passages in Daniel.

Worthy Sir,

I Am sorry you are offended to have those your learned Discussions of that difficult place in Daniel, touching the LXX weeks, communicated. I confess I travell'd not a little for the gaining of them; first at Oxford, where I first discovered some track of them; then at London, by my good friend Dr. Meddus his means, first with Mr. Malon my good friend and ancient acquaintance, than with Mr. D. What account soever you make of them, I assure you I shall make never a whit the less reckoning of your learned pains. Good reason your account should proceed according to the exactness of your own judgment in these Studies; but to me truly they are rare notions: The rather, because I perceive your care is equal in maintaining congruity both with the Hebrew Text, and with the computation of years upon such grounds as the world affords. Yet as in the course of your contemplations you should light upon any further or fuller satisfaction, I should think my self very happy to have my desire satisfied in being made partaker of them; and of the opinion of that most reverend Prelate Dr. Usher, the Lord Primate of Armagh, concerning the same, which you gain'd of him by conference. Otherwise I shall bethink my self of a course to obtain it from himself, which I conceive to be very possible more ways than one.

I desired by Dr. Meddus to obtain your interpretation of three particulars in Daniel. Dan. 7. 12. As concerning the rest of the Beasts, they had their dominion taken away; yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time. Conradus Graferus, in his Historia Antichristi, seems to interpret it of the lasting of each of the three first national Monarchies, after the death of each first Monarch; which in my judgment is as applicable to the fourth Beast as to the three first. The other is, Dan. 7. 8. touching the little Horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up: which Graferus applies to Mahomet, and his rending of three Provinces from the Roman Monarchy, namely, Syria, Egypt, and Africa. I had rather understand it of Antichrist, as Moulin doth. But whether it be of Provinces rent from the Empire by Antichrist, or by others about his rising and what they are, I am to seek. And of the reconciling of this with that Rev. 17. 12. where it is said, that the ten horns are ten kings, which receive power as kings one hour with the Beast. Good Sir, pardon my over-great boldness.

I have sent my Copy of your Paraphrase of the last of Peter, and your Discourse of that Fiery judgment, to be considered of as you think good, and according to your motion. When Peter saith, His beloved brother Paul in all his Epistles speaks ἐν αὐταῖς πρὸς τὸν, he addeth, * ἐν οἷς are some things δυσκόνητα • not ἐν αἷς, though some few Copies read ἐν αἷς, as Beza observeth; yet little reason that should carry it. Hemingius reads ἐν οἷς, and for the perverting of those things, gives instance in the Millenaries. But if the embracing of that opinion from a Text of Scripture were the corrupting of it, were not Peter himself far more liable thereunto in this Epistle than Paul? I know some to the contrary have observed something in Paul against the opinion of the Thousand years Regnum Sanctorum, as namely Piscator: I have heard of no writer that from Paul's Text hath pleaded for it. I looked you would have noted something concerning ἡμεῖς αἰῶν, which to my judgment seems a singular phrase.

I will observe carefully to retain your LXX Weeks by me without communicating them to any. As for Doctor Potter, he hath seen, upon my knowledge, your Specimina upon the Seals and Trumpets, as also your Generals, and, if I be not deceived, that of Regnum

Lapidis and Regnum Montis in Daniel. The rest I will communicate unto him very shortly; as Placita Judæorum, and your Notes upon Justine, or what else soever you shall desire, either to him or any other; and that in your own Name, that he may know your good affection towards him, by your desire to gratifie him in such special pieces of no vulgar contemplation. I desire to commend your self and worthy studies to the blessing of God, and rest,

EPISTLE XXIV.

Mr. Mede's Third Letter to Dr. Meddus, touching the explanation of some obscure passages in Daniel, mentioned in the foregoing Letter of Dr. Twisse.

SIR,

* See Epist.
VIII.
† See Epist.
XV.

I Have nothing upon the seventh of Daniel but what you have seen in those two Discourses, viz. * The purport of the four Kingdoms in Daniel; and secondly, || The Description of the Great Day of Judgment, Dan. 7. Both which I sent you written with my own hand, to be communicated to Dr. Twisse; and the latter being sent me back to take a Copy for my self, I returned it again unto you.

As for those three Chapters of the Apocalyps, I have not yet done a word; and see so much business now coming upon me, that I know not when I shall begin. For I can do nothing in those things but in silence, and security of not being distracted. In the mean time I must desire my friends to content themselves with those short Specimina concerning those Chapters which they had at the beginning of my communication of my Meditations on these things. And it may be, if I had not communicated them to so many till they had been more full and perfect, I had been ere this time more forward than I am.

Concerning your three Questions, I have chosen to make answer to them this Festival-week; not knowing after it be past when I shall have so much leisure again. And first I will begin with the two last.

* Revel. 17.

* Dan. 7. 24.

Quæst. 1. If the Horn with eyes and mouth, speaking words against the most High, &c. in Daniel, or the fourth Beast ruling in that Horn, be the same with S. John's Bestia novissimi capitis; and consequently the ten Horns, amongst which that Horn ruled, the same Kingdoms which S. John saw typed by the like number of Horns; as the Church from her infancy believed: how can S. John, who saith, * that his ten Kings receive their kingdoms at the same time or hour with his Beast, be reconciled with Daniel, who * saith, the wicked Horn rose up after them?

Exod. 14. 19.
Josh. 8. 2.
2 Kings 9. 18.
2 Chro. 13. 13.
Ezek. 3. 12. &
alibi.

Resp. I translate not אַחֲרֵיהֶם in Dan. 7. 24. After them, but, Behind them, as the Greek doth, ὀπίσσω αὐτῶν. and take the meaning implied to be, that the ten Kings were not aware of the growing up of the little Horn, till it overtopped them. The learned in the Tongues know that אַחֲרֵי & אַחֲרָי signify as well * Behind in place, as After in time; and the first as often and frequently every whit as the latter: So also Post in Latine is indifferently either Loci or Temporis. The translation cannot be excepted against, as either new or strained: The sense is obvious and most agreeable to the event; and so we shall not need seek any other way to avoid the appearance of contradiction. Otherwise it were not impossible to expound [After them] to be in order of number, and not in order of time, which we in English would express, And another shall rise up besides them, that is, besides the ten, and so make the eleventh. But we shall not need so harsh and unusual a way. Besides, it might be granted, that the little Horn, in respect of his ἀρχὴ and height of dominion, was after the ten Kings, though his beginning were at the same time when they began.

Quæst. 2. What were those three Kings which the little Horn is said to have dislodged, (Dan. 7. 8.) or, as the Angel interprets, (v. 24.) brought down or humbled, bled, יהשפיל א שפיל, which the Vulgar turns humiliabit; the Greek ταπεινώσει. Irenæus, deminorabit, vel ( ut in alio exemplari ) dehonorabit; Vatablus, opprimet; Junius, deprimet?

Resp. In my larger interpretations of the Trumpets ( in Rev. 8 ) you have at the end of the second Trumpet a * Table of Ten Kings or Kingdoms whereinto the Roman Empire was divided about Anno 456 and forward: The off-spring of which Nations, through many alterations, ( partly by the inconstancy of humane things, partly occasioned by the further enlargement of the Christian Faith ) are the body of most of the Kingdoms and States of Christendom at this day. Look upon the Table, and then I answer you thus.

* See Book III. pag 463. & pag 661.

The three Kings which Daniel saith the Antichristian Horn * should depress and displant, to advance himself, were those whose Dominions extended into Italy, and so stood in his light.

* In another Letter of Mr. Mede's, written to Mr. Tho. Johnson, of Rochdale in Lancashire, Novemb. 9. 1636. ( where much of this Letter is transcribed, in answer to the like Doubt ) is this added [ The Antichristian Horn with eyes and mouth, that is, qui cum reuera Communitatem sit, pro Capite tamen sese gerit, cujus est proprium os & oculus habet. ]

First, That of the Greeks *, whose Emperor Leo Isaurus, for the quarrel of Image-worship, || he excommunicated, and made his subjects of Italy revolt from their allegiance.

* In the Letter to Mr. T. J. this is add'd, [ now after the division and dilaceration of the Empire, but one of the Kingdoms. ] [ The Horn. ]

Secondly, That of the Longobards, ( successors to the Ostrogoths ) whose Kingdom he caused by the aid of the Franks to be wholly ruined and extirpated, thereby to get the Exarchate of Ravenna ( which since the revolt from the Greeks the Longobards were seized on ) for a Patrimony to S. Peter.

Thirdly, The last was the Kingdom of the Franks it self, continued in the Empire of Germany; whose Emperors from the days of Henry the fourth * he excommunicated, deposed and trampled under his feet, and never suffered to live in rest, till he made them not only to quit their interest in the Election of Popes and Investitures of Bishops, but that remainder also of Jurisdiction in Italy, wherewith together with the Roman name he had once infeoffed * their Predecessors.

* [ this proud domineering Horn. ]

These were the Kings by displanting or ( as the Vulgar hath ) humbling of whom the Pope got elbow-room by degrees, and advanced himself to that height of Temporal Majesty and absolute greatness, which made him so terrible in the world. See in the Table 3, 9, 10.

* [ and invest-ed ]

In the forementioned Letter to Mr. T. J. upon the same argument, there is this additional Observation.

" [ And here note, it is one thing for the Ten Kings to give their power and authority unto the Beast capitis novissimi, ( as S. John speaks Rev. 17. ) that is, voluntarily to subject themselves and yield homage to him as their Head and Principal, and another thing for the same Beast or Antichristian Horn to displant, depress or humble them. The first should be common to all the Ten, ( as was revealed to S. John : ) the latter proper to Three of them, ( as was shewed to Daniel. ) For observe, that as in the History of our Saviour's Acts penned by the four Evangelists one relates that which another omits, and è contra; so is it in these Prophetical descriptions of the Fourth Beast by Daniel and John. ]

Quest. 3. How those words in Dan. 7. ver. 12. are to be interpreted and applied, viz. As concerning the rest of the Beasts, they had their dominion taken away; yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time.

Resp. Before I answer, it must be known and remembred, that for that [ As concerning ] there is nothing in the Original but the Copulative Vau, which, as the sense requires, is to be translated not only copulatively, but disjunctivè, adversativè, causaliter, ordinativè, and sometimes as a particle of similitude, and the like; it being of it self as a Materia prima. In the latter part of this sentence it is translated adversativè, viz. Tet, [ Tet their lives, &c. ] for which in the Original is nothing but the same Conjunction Vau.

This premised, I answer,

First, If Beasts here be meant of the * three first Beasts, it is to be taken by way of a Parenthesis, implying a tacite answer to a question: For Daniel having spoken so largely of the destruction of the Fourth Beast, and nothing of the other, it might be asked, Yea, but what became of the former three? He answers, As concerning them also, also, they had their dominion taken away; but their lives were prolonged for a time and a season; that is, they reigned their time, and then had their dominion taken away. And thus our Translators seem to have understood it, and accordingly to have fitted their translation, by turning Van [ As concerning, ] This is an easie and smooth interpretation, nor do I see any sufficient reason why it should not satisfy.

Secondly, But some of the Hebrew Commenters understand not Beasts here of the three Beasts forementioned, but of other Beasts, that is, other States and Kingdoms then reigning in the world, at what time the fourth Beast should be destroyed; That these also, as well as the Fourth Beast and his limmes, should have their Kingdoms taken away, though not at the same instant, yet some time after. And so Van shall not need be translated [ As concerning, ] but [ Also; ] Also the rest of the Beasts, &c. As for the word Beasts to be taken here for other Kingdoms as well as the Four great ones, it needs make no scruple. For we shall find it so in the next Chapter, where it is said of the Medo-Persian Ram (verse 4.) that no Beasts might stand before him, that is, no State or Kingdom was able to resist his power: So here may The rest of the Beasts be the States and Kingdoms contemporary with the fourth Beast. And this interpretation would sound well with the words of S. John in the end of the 19. Chapter, where it being said that the Beast and false Prophet were cast into the fire (as Daniel saith of his fourth Beast, chap. 7. v. 11.) it followeth, And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, &c. as if he had meant to express this of Daniel, And the rest of the Beasts had their dominion taken away, &c. But the difficulty then will be, how the latter part of the words should be taken, viz. Yet (or And, or But) their lives were prolonged for a season and time. The Rabbins take it for some season and time after the fourth Beast was destroyed; and R. Solomon, at the time of the war of Gog and Magog, which they look for soon after their restitution, upon the destruction of the fourth Beast. But whether can this stand with S. Paul's assertion, that the fourth Beast terminating in the Man of sin shall be destroyed at the ἐπιφάνεια or appearing of Christ's coming? How should any Beasts lives be prolonged for a season and time after that coming? Or should we expound this season and time of a thousand year after, when the last and final execution of Christ upon his enemy is to be? But Daniel seems to joyn the appearance of Christ in the clouds to receive a Kingdom, with this destruction of the rest of the Beasts together with the fourth Beast, and so not to admit of such a distance. Let others judge.

Thirdly, But I will not conceal that I have suspected there might possibly be a third Interpretation far differing from them both, and which would make the Vision fully to agree with the Angel's interpretation: But the words then must be construed much otherwise than they use to be: viz. Daniel in the former verse mentioning precisely the Body of the Beast to be given to the flames, it should follow thus; And as the Body was burned and destroyed, so the rest of the Beast (viz. the ten Horns and ruffling Horn) had their dominion (at the same time the Body was burned) taken away; and prolongation of life was given them for a season and time, viz. until I saw one like to the Son of man coming in the clouds, &c. that is, they reigned till the Son of man came in the clouds, &c. The reason why I thought of this Interpretation is, because the word which we translate here plurally, is, as it is pointed in the Original, of the singular number, namely חַיָּה; whereas if it were the plural, it should be חַיִּים; for that, say the Chaldee Grammarians, is the difference between the singular and the plural Emphatick, that the one hath Scheva [ · ] in the penultima, the other hath Camets [ · ] And so we render חַיָּה with Scheva in this Chapter singularly [ Beast, ] twice in the following verses of this Chapter; viz. verse 19, & 23. The reason which moved the Interpreters to translate it here plurally was, because the Affixes following are all plural, [ their dominion, their lives. ] But this may be because that remainder of the Beast under the Horns consisted of many Kingdoms, and in that respect the dominion and duration thereof is expressed with plural Affixes, as of many.

March 31.

Yours,

Joseph Mede.

Post-script.

My paper streightens me and my time; and I have been a 3. or 4. times troubled while I was writing this last way of Interpretation; which made me so blurr and blot, and scarce know what I did. I should else have expressed my self more plainly and fully.

EPISTLE

EPISTLE XXV.

A more distinct and perspicuous expression of the last of those three ways to interpret that twelfth verse of Dan. 7.

I Confess my skill in the Chaldee is no more but Grammatical, yet thus much a little smattering in Grammar could teach me; and so made me seek in what sense it might be translated singularly, notwithstanding the plural Affixes following it, and what this rest or remainder of the Beast (if it be so turned) might be.

First, I observed that in the destruction of the Fourth Beast immediately before mentioned, the Body of the Beast was precisely and particularly named; whereby I began to conceive the Remainder here spoken of might be the Beast's Horns, that is, the eyed and mouthed Horn with that Decarchy of Horns subject to him, which the Holy Ghost would tell us was destroyed at the same time, and together with the Body of the Beast: And so the Text to be construed thus, The Body of the Beast was destroyed, and given to the burning flame; And the rest of the Beast also (viz. the Horns) had their dominion taken away, after that a continuance of life had been given them for a season and a time. Thus interpreted, it would answer to that part of the Angels' interpretation, verse 25. which saith, that the State of the Beast under the wicked Horn's dominion should last a time, and times, and half a time; whereunto otherwise there will be nothing answering in the Vision.

Secondly, The Kingdom of the Son of man immediately following the expiration of this season and time in the Vision, would answer to that in the Interpretation, verse 22. The Horn prevailed against the Saints, until the Ancient of days came and the Saints possessed the Kingdom.

Thirdly, It is certain that the session of Judgment described in the Vision late to destroy the wicked Horn; for so saith the Angel, verse 26. But the Judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion: And Daniel himself in the Vision expected to see that in special; for as soon as the Bench was set, and the Books were opened, verse 10. I beheld then, (saith he, verse 11.) because of the voice of the great words which the Horn spake, viz. he looked what would become of the Horn. Something then should seem to follow in special concerning it, else Daniel was frustrate of his looking: But what follows? I beheld until the Beast was slain; This is something, but general only: And his Body destroyed; This indeed is special, but not that which Daniel looked after: For how would these hang together, [I looked to see what would become of the Beast's horn, and, I saw his Body destroyed?] should it not seem rather to follow, to answer Daniel's looking, And the rest of the Beast also, that is, not the Body only or people of the Beast's dominion were destroyed, but the Horns also, with their Captain-horn who spake the big words, (that is, the State then domineering) had their dominion taken away after they had enjoyed it a season and a time?

Lastly, Those words of the Angel's interpretation, verse 26. The Judgment shall sit, and take away his dominion, (that is, the Horn's dominion) seem to have reference to that passage in the Vision which saith in the same words, that the rest of the Beast had their dominion taken away. The reason of the plural Affixe's answering to a singular Antecedent being, because this rest of the Beast had in it a plurality of Kingdoms, according to the rule of the Grammarians, That a singular Antecedent to be taken collectively or distributively, may have a plural number answer to it. This was my adventure.

EPISTLE XXVI.

Mr. Burnet's Letter to Mr. Mede, touching the Provostship of Trinity Colledge near Dublin.

SIR,

I Am bold to write unto you, though a stranger, to certifie you that I hear Dr. Bedle, Provost of Trinity Colledge in Ireland, is chosen Bishop of Kilmore in Ireland, which is valued worth 600 l. per annum, appointed thereto by the King; howbeit some time will be ere he leave the Colledge: in the mean space I am bold to intreat your Answer, to know if you will accept the place of Provost if you be chosen thereto, as you were wrote to by my Lord Primate formerly before Mr. Bedle went. I am now writing to my Lord Primate an Answer of Letters this day I received from him, and do certifie him of this accident; for it was but this week that the King granted it, and no Letter is yet gone over. I sent the Book you sent me long since to my Lord Primate. I dwell at the sign of the Golden fleece in Lombard-street, and shall expect your Answer next return; and so I commend you to God Almighty, resting

Good Mr. Mede.

I shewed your Clavis to one much given unto those Studies, and desired his censure; which having at length received, I send herewith unto you, desiring from you to receive what you think fit to be opposed: You shall perceive his full meaning out of the printed Treatise adjoyned. He seemeth to me to carry all to the Jews, upon no other grounds than communion of Phrases. Thus with hearty salutations to you and Mr. Chappel, I rest

EPISTLE XXVIII.

A Second Letter from Dr. Ames, touching Mr. Mede's Defence.

SIR,

Y our Answer to Lawenus I have received, ( that you be no longer in suspense ) and like so well, that I shall long to see more of your Notions in that kind: yet methinks that Millenary State spoken of may well be understood of the Church raised from a dead dead condition, and so continued for that space. We have here no News but of Silva-Ducis streighly and hopefully besieged by our Army; the Enemy (as it seemeth) not being in case to bring an Army into the field. Thus with salutations to your self, Mr. Chappel, &c. I rest Franecker, May 27.

Your loving Friend,

W. Ames.

EPISTLE XXIX.

Mr. Mede his Third Letter to Archbishop Usher, excusing his unwillingness to accept the Provostship of Trinity Colledge in Ireland: containing also an account of Lawenus his Animadversions upon his Clavis, and his Answer; together with his Explication of Ezek. 4. 6, &c.

Right Reverend and my most Honoured Lord,

I Make no question but your Colledge is far better provided of a Provost than it would have been of me, who never could perswade my self I was fit to be the Head and Governour of the only Seminary of a Kingdom. And therefore though my name were the Second time brought upon the Stage, yet was it without content or privity of mine. Indeed a Proposition was made unto me upon Mr. Bedle's preferment (and before the news thereof was sent to him) whether I would accept the place, in case I were again chosen thereto. Unto which because I answered not by a direct and categorical denial, but only alledged divers reasons, both from mine own unfitness in divers respects, and other circumstances which might and did deter me therefrom, leaving them who made the motion to infer the conclusion; it pleased some (to whom I am yet beholden for their affection) so to interpret it, as if in modesty only I had by such a kind of answer concealed my willingness: which as soon as I understood, and that some (Sir Nathaniel Rich by name) endeavoured upon the motion of some others to procure me to be named by his Majesty, I presently took him off, and that so effectually as he stirred no more; though perhaps I was not a little blamed by some of my friends for so doing. But enough of this.

For my Clavis, I am afraid that Reverend Archbishop your Lordship nameth values it far more than it deserveth; though it may be something I have by God's goodness discovered toward the better understanding of that Book; which if I have, the praise be to God alone, to whom it is only due.

But I cannot imagine what those Additions thereto should be, which your Lordship saith you received out of the North of Ireland. I sent a Copy or two to Franecker to Doctor Ames; he sends one of them to Daniel Lawenus, an ancient Student in those parts in that Prophecy, (whose Apparatus to a bigger volume of many years study was printed the same year,) desiring his censure of it. He finding it not to sute with his Notions, wrote presently Stricturae in Clavem Apocalypticam, not knowing my name, but calling me Synchronista; and sometimes seemed to be very angry in his confutation of me, though he agreed with me in the mainest Paradox of all. He sends it to Doctor Ames, as I suppose not intending me. But the Doctor dispatcheth it to me, together with his printed Book, for my better understanding his meaning; desires to receive again from me what I thought fit to oppose by way of defence. Thus unwittingly I made my self work, yet such as in the doing I at length found some benefit by, having my torpid thoughts revived and quickned, and the second time more able to wield any notions than they were at the beginning. But I should admire if your Lordship had seen a Copy of this. For besides that I sent into Friseland, I conceive not how any other should get abroad, having, as I thought, kept mine own Copy private in my study.

* Annal. Eccles. Tom. 4.

That touching the years of Israel and Judah, I know not what it should be, unless that the 40. years of Judah's sin, for which the * Prophet lay so many days upon his right side, were the years of Manasses Idolatry, to which the Scripture particularly ascribes their captivity, 2 Kings 24. 3. & ch. 23. 26. Jer. 15. 4. Which I thought had been a novelty, and cried εὐρηκα * but since I find it to be the opinion of R. Kimchi, whom I suppose also the first author thereof. * Salianus adds Hieronymus (not Josephus) de Prado, & Funccius; but I never looked them. It was but a conjecture, which, had it been new, I conceived would not have been altogether unacceptable to your Lordship, whom yet far be it from me to teach or inform, but only to be better instructed or confirmed by your Lordship's profounder judgment.

Presently after my Clavis was printed, I drew, at the intreaty of some friends, Specimina Interpretationum Apocalypticarum ad amussim Clavis Apocalypticæ; which finding beyond my expectation or merit to be accepted, I have since gone more largely through some part thereof, as The Description of the Theatrum Apocalypticum, chap. 4. The 6 Seals and 7 Trumpets unto the 11. Chapter: The rest is yet but Specimina, as it was in the beginning; the last Chapter whereof I once sent your Lordship, namely de Millennio. But could I have gotten an orthographical Scribe, I would have sent your Lordship all ere this, both Specimina and the larger Expositions upon the first half. But I had no such of mine own, and those who have are not so kind as to lend them for any hire. And for my self, I should never get through that which is mine own, without everlasting mending, blurring, and pausing at every sentence to alter it. I am exceedingly sorry for the death of Buxtorf and Amama, especially the latter, as being but now in flore, and one that had a natural genius to inlighten the Text of Scripture, and to find the notion of the Sacred language.

If Ireland will not spend the remainder of my Pamphlets, if your Lordship have opportunity to send them, I shall willingly entertain them again, their fellows being all gone.

Thus with my most humble Service remembred to your gracious Lordship, desiring the God of Heaven to bless and preserve your Grace, I rest, and am

Christ's Colledge,
May 4. 1630.

Your Lordship's, most ready to be commanded,

Joseph Mede.

EPISTLE XXX.

My Lord of Armagh his Letter to Mr. Mede, commending his Comment on the Apocalyps and his learned Conjectures upon the Succession of the Babylonian Kings in Berosus, &c.

Worthy Sir,

I Received long since your most accurate Explication of the principal Chapters of the Revelation, together with your learned Conjectures upon the succession of the Babylonian Kings recorded in the fragments of Berosus and Megasthenes. I cannot sufficiently commend either the one or the other; but acknowledge my self to have learned from you in both what otherwise would never have come into my mind. I am now in hand with a Treatise De Britannicarum Ecclesiarum Primordiis, setting down as much as may be found in the Manuscripts that remain of our Nation touching that Argument. I have entred also upon the Determination of the Controversies which concern the Chronologie of the Sacred Scripture: wherein I shall in many places need your help. I desire to hear from you of the state of things there: and so recommending all your godly studies and endeavours unto the blessing of our good God, evermore rest

EPISTLE XXXI.

Mr. Mede's Answer to a Doubt touching some Variations between the Hebrew Text and the Hellenists, and some smaller corruption crept into the Hebrew copies.

I Have heard alledged; If any corruption had crept into the Hebrew Text at or before our Saviour's time, the holy Apostles and Penmen of the New Testament would have restored it, or somewhere intimated it. But what if they did so, and yet we had rather follow the Masorites than them?

Matt. 15. 9. out of Esay 29. 13.

Μάτην ὃ σέβονται με, διδάσκοντες ἐντάλματα ἀνθρώπων.

The Hebrew Text reads now

ותהי יראתם אתי מצות אנשים מלמדה

Where ἡ μάτην an emphatical word appears not.

But the Lxx. and S. Matthew with them,

ותהו יראתם אתי מצות אנשים מלמדה or מלמרים docentium or edolli hominum mandata mei reverentia sed frustra eorum

i. Sed fuit cultus eorum erga me mandatum hominum edolium or edolus.

i. Frustrā vero reverentur me mandata hominum docentis: viz. referring Docentium to יראתם frustra reverentia eorum mei qui docent mandata hominum.

See תהו in the same Prophet for frustrā, cap. 45. 9. ibid. versibus 18, 19. item cap. 49. 4.

The Masorites might have pointed it ותהי, as they do often elsewhere, Jod for Van; yea in the Chaldee תהי is the same with תהו.

Also מלמרה may be pointed מלמרה. Then it would be, Frustrā cultus eorum mei mandata hominum docens, and never a letter altered but Jod into Van.

It is to be noted that the Prophet calls Idols and Idol-worship often in this book תהו, i. Vanity.

Acts 15. 17. out of Amos 9. 12.

Ὅπως ἂν ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατὰλοιποὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὸ Κύριον, &c.

The Hebrew now reads marvellous differinglly,

למען ירשו את שארית ארם

But the Lxx. read, and the Apostles ratifie it,

למען ירשו אל שארית ארם

Ὅπως ἂν ἐκτελεσθῇ τὸ κατὰλοιπὴν τῆς Ἰδαμίας, ὅς ποσίδεσσι τὸ ὑπόλοιπον Ἰδομίας.

Ut requirant Deum (vel Dominum) reliqui hominum.

For the Lxx. often translate אל by Κύριος, more than 40. times, אלהים above an 100.

Heb. 8. 9. out of Jerem. 31. 32.

ὅτι αὐτοὶ ἐκ ἐμέσμεν ἐν τῇ διαθήκῃ μου, καὶ γὰρ ἠμέλυσα αὐτοὺς, λέγει Κύριος.

The Hebrew hath now in place of ἠμέλυσα αὐτοὺς, בָּרַחְתִּי בָם, which is κατεχεύεσσα αὐτῶν, a clean contrary sense, and inconsequent to what goes before. I know how it is wont to be salved.

But did not the Lxx. and the Apostle with them, read בָּרַחְתִּי בָם, which without any more ado is ἠμέλυσα or ἀφέστηκα αὐτῶν, or ἐβόλευσα αὐτούς, and makes the sense coherent with what went before? ב and ר differ not very much. See the same construction of בָּרַחְתִּי in the same Prophet, chap. 14. 15.

But in these and other such, it may be said, the Apostles accommodated to the capacity of the times, and so followed the LXX as a known and received Translation, but not either to correct the then Hebrew reading by it, or prefer that of the Hellenists before it.

But what will they say, if sometimes the Apostles follow a reading differing both from the Septuagint and Hebrew, even where the LXX and Hebrew exactly agree together?

Matth. 27. 9, 10. out of Zach. 11. 13.

Τότε ἐπληρώθη τὸ ρῆθὲν διὰ Ἱερεμίου τοῦ Προφήτου, λέγοντος, Καὶ ἔλαβον τὰ τεράκοντα ἀργύρια (τὴν τιμὴν τῶν τετιμημένων, ὃν ἐτιμήσαντο ἀπὸ υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ) καὶ ἔδωκαν αὐτὰ εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ κεραμέως, καθὼς συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος.

The words included in the parenthesis are a brief comprehension of what went before, and interlaced only for explication sake. So that the words quoted out of the Prophet directly are only these :

Καὶ ἔλαβον τὰ τεράκοντα ἀργύρια, καὶ ἔδωκαν αὐτὰ εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ κεραμέως, καθὼς συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος.

But first, there are no such words in Jeremy; that which sounds like them is in Zachary.

Secondly, the Hebrew in Zachary, and the LXX agreeing with it, have something which S. Matthew hath not, and S. Matthew again something which neither of them have.

Hebr.

ואקחה שרשים הכסף ואשליך אהו
בית יהוה אל-היזר

LXX.

Καὶ ἔλαβον τὰς τεράκοντα ἀργύρας, καὶ ὀνείλαρον αὐτὰς εἰς τὸ οἶκον Κυρίου εἰς τὸ χωνευτήριον.

Matth.

Καὶ ἔλαβον τὰ τεράκοντα ἀργύρια, καὶ ἔδωκαν αὐτὰ εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ κεραμέως, καθὼς συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος.

Here the Hebrew hath בית יהוה, the LXX, οἶκον Κυρίου, which S. Matthew hath not.

On the other side, S. Matthew hath καθὼς συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος, which neither Hebrew nor LXX have : Besides, the Seventie's Greek here differs almost every word from S. Matthew's.

This difficult piece may, I think, be made easie after the manner following.

See also chap.
5. 11.

First, it may seem the Evangelist would inform us, that those latter chapters ascribed to Zachary, (viz. the 9, 10, 11, &c.) are indeed the Prophecies of Jeremy, and that the Jews had not rightly attributed them. Certainly, if a man weighs the Contents of some of them, they should in likelihood be of an elder date than the time of Zachary; namely, before the captivity : For the subjects of some of them were scarce in being after that time. And the Chapter out of which S. Matthew quotes, may seem to have somewhat much unfutable with Zacharie's time; as, a Prophecy of the destruction of the Temple, then when he was to encourage them to build it : and how doth the sixth verse of that Chapter suit with his time ? There is no Scripture faith they are Zacharie's, but there is Scripture faith they are Jeremie's, as this of the Evangelist. As for there being joyned to the Prophecies of Zachary, that proves no more they are his, than the like adjoining of Agur's Proverbs to Solomon's proves they are therefore Solomon's; or that all the Psalms are David's, because joyned in one Volume with David's Psalms. Hoc primum.

Secondly, ἔλαβον here in S. Matthew is the first person singular, not the third plural, as we are wont to translate it : For it answers to ואקחה in the Hebrew. The same person and number must also ἔδωκαν be, whether the ν be paragogical, or an ancient slip of the Scribe. For the Syriack translates it dedi, and in the Hebrew it answer to אשליך. All this to be so the words following evince, viz. καθὼς συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος. How will it cohere else ? They gave, &c. as the Lord commanded me. Must it not needs be, I gave, &c.

Thirdly, the Evangelist for בית יהוה would, as should seem, have us read בית יהוה, which is, ad verbum, κατὰ πρῶτον, or κατὰ σύνταγμα Κυρίου, or, as S. Matthew more freely translates, καθὼς συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος. See בית יהוה Esther, chap. 1. v. 8, 15, &c. בית יהוה often in that Book. If it be considered how awkwardly those words בית יהוה stand in that sentence, and how disturb'd they make the Syntax, it will breed suspicio mendi. And if one of the Apostles of our Lord play here the Critick, it is no sin to follow him, say the Majorites what they will.

2 Reg. 20. 12, &c. Esay, chap. 39. tot. are but two Copies of the same history; yet are there two or three differences, questionless from the hand of the Scribe; as

	2 Reg. 20.	Esay 39.
Ver. 12.	כְּרָאֲרֵךְ בְּלֶאֱדָן	כְּרָאֲרֵךְ בְּלֶאֱדָן	Ver. 1.
13.	וַיִּשְׁמַע	וַיִּשְׁמַח	2.
12.	חֻקֵּיהֶוּ	וַיִּחַק	1.

In the rest is no little difference throughout.

If it be apparent one letter is changed for another here, why may it not be in other places?

I durst shew no such conceits as these, but to so great an Antiquary as your Lordship, to whom the possibility of corruption by writing is so well known, or rather the impossibility of the contrary. Who knows what time will discover, cum Elias venerit?

EPISTLE XXXII.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Mr. Osbourn's Quære's, touching some passages in Daniel and the Revelation.

Qu. I. WHether Daniel and the Revelation are Prophecies transfused into one another, or that Daniel reaches no farther than the destruction of Jerusalem.

Ans. I conceive Daniel to be Apocalypsis contracta, and the Apocalypsis Daniel explicate, in that where both treat about the same subject; namely, what was revealed to Daniel concerning the Fourth Kingdom but summatim and in gross was shewed to S. John particulatim, with the distinction and order of the several Fates and Circumstances which were to betide and accompany the same. And that therefore Daniel's Prophecie is not terminated with the First, but reacheth to the Second coming of Christ; as appears by the description of that glorious coming, and the great Judgment, Dan. 7. and his prophecie of the Resurrection, Chap. 12. This hath been the constant Tradition of the Church from the Apostles days to this last seculum, and was of the Church of the Jews before and at our Saviour's time. And if the Apostles had ever taught the Church otherwise, it could never so timely, so wholly, so generally have been forgotten.

Quest. 2. How was the Book of Apocalyptical predictions sealed until the Lamb opened it, Apoc. 5. if Daniel and the other Prophets wrote any thing of them?

Ans. Whatsoever the meaning be of that sealing and unsealing the Apocalyptical Book, it cannot be so far urged, as to infer the Contents thereof were in no wise revealed until that unsealing; that is, until S. John saw his Revelation. For the contrary is apparent; First, of the Day of Judgment, and Resurrection at Christ's glorious coming in the clouds; which is the main But and scope of the Apocalypsis, and yet was foretold by Daniel or some other of the Prophets: or else upon what Scripture did the Church of the Jews found their faith concerning both? Secondly, The Reign of Antichrist, which should precede that glorious coming, is no small part of the argument of the Apocalypsis; yet was that revealed before S. John saw his Visions; if you will not grant to and by Daniel, yet you must by S. Paul, 2 Thess. 2. which was at least 40 years before the Apocalypsis was given. But he that considers S. Paul well will find, that he borrowed that piece and the ground of his Demonstration from Daniel; of which more by and by.

In a word, The Fourth Kingdom and that tyrannical Dominion which should foregoe the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, was revealed summatim & in genere before S. John's Visions; but the series rerum gerendarum therein from the First to that Second and glorious appearing of Christ, particulatim & in specie, was never revealed or unsealed till then.

Quest. 3. All things go round: That which is, is that which was, and that which shall be: What therefore though the expressions in S. John be the same with those in Daniel? yet may the times and things prophesied of not be the same.

Ans.

* For no where else is Messiah
so termed, but there.

Ans. 'Tis true, all things go round, and the course of Divine government runs in a circle or repetition of the same things: So that the Fates and Sequels of things foretold in the Prophets may be again and again repeated, and the Prophecies of them as it were often fulfilled; namely, by way of Analogy, but not of Propriety. But whither tends this? I suppose to make the ruffling Horn in Daniel and S. John's blaspheming Beast to be diverse, though the expression and description be the same. If this be it, I meet with it thus: The Vision of the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, Dan. 7. is in propriety the second and Glorious coming of Christ; as appears by that coming so often described from thence in the New Testament, and our Saviour's using of the title of the son of man with reference * thereto, as who, though now he appeared in humility, yet was the same which one day (as Daniel prophesied) should appear so gloriously. [Vid. Matth. 26. 64. Mark 14. 62, &c. Adhibe John 12. 34, &c.]

But if this be so, then that Dominion which Daniel saw immediately to precede this coming, must be in propriety that Tyranny of the wicked one, which should precede that Second and Glorious coming of Christ. Ergo, not the Tyranny of Antiochus Epiphanes, but of Antichrist. And upon this ground did S. Paul build that Demonstration of his, 2 Thess. 2. That the Day of the Lord could not be at hand; to wit, because the Kingdom of that wicked one (which Daniel had foretold he should abolish at the appearance of his coming) was not yet in the world.

Quest. 4. Whether Nebuchadnezzar's Image contained more Kingdoms than were then in the world, or whereof himself was Master.

Ans. More Kingdoms than were then in the world, I see no reason why it might not; nay why it should not: For it was a Vision of Kingdoms that were to be אחרי רנה afterward (verse. 29, & 45.) and the Kingdom of Christ one amongst them: Yet was Rome a Kingdom then as well as Macedon or Persia.

Contain more Kingdoms than were comprehended in the Provinces he was Master of, I am sure it did; namely, that of Macedon, no part of which, neither of the rest of Greece, was ever subject to the Babylonian Monarchy; nor any more, but some of their Colonies on the Asian shore to the Persian. Nor is this so strange, since the form and shape of the Image consists not in the identity of place and bounds of Dominion, (though for a great and the principallest part it were the same) but in the order of succession which each Kingdom was to have to that which went before it; namely one of them should subdue and inherit another, till a fifth Kingdom came, which should never be subdued or destroyed, nor left (as the rest were) to another people.

Quest. 5. Whether Daniel's Visions (there where the Angel expoundeth them) be so mystical, as not in propriety expounded by the Angel.

Ans. I understand the Interpretation of every Vision according to the propriety of the Letter, and not to be a new Allegory needing another mystical interpretation: yet for all this I see no more necessity why the Roman Kingdom should be described (if Daniel any where describes it) from its situation to the West, (as those of the Seleucide and Lagide are by North and South;) than the Persian is by the East. For the Holy Ghost chuseth such Characters for distinction as he listeth, nor is tied to one way of characterizing, but doth it variously. Besides that Character of West-situation being common to the third kingdom, and anticipated in the vision thereof, chap. 8. 5. could not distinguish the fourth from it.

Quest. 6. Whether Daniel understood not his own Visions; especially when the Angel told him the אמת as in that from the tenth Chapter to the end.

Ans. 'Tis one thing to understand the Interpretation of a Vision, another to understand the Application of the Interpretation; namely, to what times and places it belongeth. Where the Angel gave Daniel the Interpretation or meaning of the similitude of any Vision, I doubt not but he understood what such similitude meant, as that by Beasts were meant Kingdoms, by Horns Kings, and the like. But the Application of the Interpretation (unless where the Angel sometimes applied it) I believe he understood not, especially in the last Vision, where himself says so: I heard, saith he, but I understood not. And no marvel, for the Angel tells him, Those words were closed up and sealed, till the time of the end. And it is to be observed, that in that last Prophecy the Vision is not described, but the אמת or Interpretation only reported. The Vision out of the last verse of the tenth Chapter may seem to have been some Book or Writing, which either conveniently could not, or the Holy Ghost thought not fit to describe.

EPISTLE XXXIII.

Sir William Boswell's Letter to Mr. Mede, touching some of his Books lent him.

Good Mr. Mede,

I Know the Judgment and current of the world is for present thanks upon kindness; Non me qui cetera vincit Impetus. Above four months since (with Letters from Mr. P. full of your and his Affection) I received four Copies of your Comment upon the Apocalyps: a large time to make accompts and acknowledgments; true, but both are so much the riper and better seasoned. My thanks I shall ever be renewing. Your Books I sent, one to Domenico Molins, a most learned, noble Gentleman of Venice: Another, by my Lord Ambassador Anstruther, and his Chaplain (one Mr. Johnson) an honest learned friend of mine, into Germany. The third I bestowed upon Dr. Rivet (long and lately Professor of Divinity in Leyden, now Tutor to the Prince of Aurange his son,) whose name and extraordinary worth you know by his works. The fourth I send to Scholars and acquaintance here. Some Animadversions I am promised, which I forbear to touch at present. In general, it is commended for a modest, discreet, learned, regular, and of all in that list most verifiable, discovery; if you forbear your Millenarian Fancy. Copies are very much sought; and certainly these parts would have taken off above two hundred, if sent at first. It is an error and fault in our Printers, Visum non fieri extramittendo. In a word, you have set their teeth on edge: and I am pressed by many to procure them sight of all other things you have written; by name, your large notes upon διδαγμαδια: διανομιαν, ad Tim. 4. 1. they will come very seasonably; because there is in hand (since, and by order of the Synod of Dort) a new Translation of the Bible into Dutch, with marginal Annotations at large, to be printed in a folio Copy, wherein the Translators (understanding English perfectly) acknowledge the use and excellency of our last and authentick English Translation. Dan. Heinsius likewise tells me by Letter, that he is upon the New Testament; in what manner I shall know at meeting. I find the Zone here for Ecclesiastick Affairs temperate at present and quiet, though now and then producing Capreas saltantes, and such trifling Meteors which busse natures will be raising; as if to keep within the lists of obedience, and to do their work plainly and quietly, were but a Dulman's part. — Sic volvere Parcas! The Treaty between these United and the other Catholick Provinces is slow-footed, & inter futura contingentissima. — Si quid in hac scena scire aves, aut aliud quicquam à vetere veròque amico velis, fac sciam. For I shall ever love Joseph Mede as an honest old friend, and think upon him tanquam Academiam in Academia, being his most affectionate to serve him,

An Advertisement.

THat the Reader may the better understand the occasion and purport of the following Epistle, he is to know that after Mr. Mede had published his Clavis and Commentary upon the Apocalyps, M<sup>r</sup>. Haydock of Salisbury, an aged Gentleman, acquainted him with some Objections he had against the form of the Seven-sealed Book expressed in his * Apocalyptick Scheme, viz. 1. That the ancient form of Books was in several sheets of Parchment, fastened at one end only, and so rolled up together. (Hence those expressions in Psal. 40. 7. Hebr. 10. 7. & Luke 4. 17.) 2. That the form of the Seven-sealed Book (Apocal. 5.) ought to be such as might satisfy the Lamb's intention, which had an eye unto Prius and Posterius in regard of the sequel of the ensuing History: For that part which belongs to the First Seal ought to be viewed before the Second or the rest were opened; whereas in the form of the modern Books (according to which form Mr. Mede had described the Seven-sealed Book in his Scheme) no use can be made of any part or leaf in the Book, until all the Seven Seals be opened.

* See the Scheme in pag. 430. of this Editio.

opened. But in the form of the Roll, when every part or leaf hath its several Label inserted in the proper distance, with a Seal and several impressions of Emblematical Signature, each several leaf being taken and unsealed in order, the several matter therein contained will appear, and no more of any of the rest till they be opened in order.

Thus far Mr. Haydock. The Transcript of his Letter (for the Original could not be met with) being imperfect, was not fit to be printed. He also acquainted Mr. Mede in his Letter with a purpose he had to represent in lively Pictures the Apocalyptick Visions, and sent him the Pictures of the Cherubins done by himself, for a Specimen of his skill in that Art, wherein he had exercised himself for many years, having in his younger days translated out of Italian and published the works of Jo. Paolo Lomazzo concerning The Art of Painting.

The form of the Book sealed with seven Seals, and of the Book unsealed, according to Mr. Haydock's opinion, is represented in the following page.

EPISTLE XXIV.

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Haydock, wishing him to perfect his design of representing the Apocalyptick Visions in lively Pictures, and applauding his ingenious observation upon the form of the Seven-sealed Book.

Humanissime & Cultissime Vir,

Accepi literas tuas benevolentia & humanitate plenas, in quibus & favorem meum ambis, hominis scilicet nihili, nedum (ut tu * putas) papali nescio quo fastidio digni. Sed ut cetera quam nihil sum sciam probè; non sum tamen tam ab humanitate procul, ut animo tam in me propenso par pari reddere nesciam. Et verò tu abunde meritus es ut tibi faveam, qui sic ultro compellas & amicitiam defers. De libello meo quod attinet, si quid exinde fructus vel ad te vel ad alios redierit, Deo Opt. Max. in solidum sit gloria: Ejus enim solius est quicquid est boni; meum nihil nihil præter imbecillitatem & ignorantiam. Illud autem vehementer doleo, quòd te prius non novissem quàm Opusculum illud meum in lucem ediderim; sanè multò ornatus operâ tuâ prodisset-----Cherubinarum quadriformium Iconas, quas misisti longè elegantissimas & novo artificio visendas, summa cum animi voluptate contempler; neque satis pro merito suo laudare aut (quod potiùs nullâ in talibus facultate prædium fari decet) admirari possum. Utinam totius Confessus Apocalyptici typum eadem manu delineatum aliquando videre liceat. Sane nusquam domum tibi à Deo collatum sanctiùs collocaveris, quàm in divinissimâ istius Prophetiæ typis ad vivum delineandis.

Cylindri tui sigilliferi ingeniosa observatio est, & quæ prius mihi (licet sæpiuscule ea de re cogitanti) in mentem non venerat; imò, an omnino talis Voluminis forma, in qua uniuscujusque Sigilli referatio novam ordine scripturam legentium oculis subiceret, dari possit, addubitaverim. De re verò ipsa adhuc incertus sum quid statuerem. Aliquando in ea sententia fui, Visiones istas Sigillares, non literarum notis in volumine scriptas, sed Iconibus quibusdam depictas sub sigillorum tegellis latuisse; iisque referatis, visui (non ad legendum, sed contemplandum) ordine quamque suo patuisse; atque ad hanc mentem verba ista ad Joannem, Ἐρχε & βλέπε, haud ineptè accommodari posse. Postea animadverti hanc opinionem meam Narrationi Apocalypticæ universæ non convenire; utpote cum in Sigillo quinto & sexto oratio rei visæ tribuatur: præterea in Sigillo septimo Tubarum visæ non simul & eodem tempore exhiberi, sed ordine & successivè in aspectum produci, observaverim. Ad hæc apparatus clangori prævium ità describi, ut non nudis rerum visarum * Iconibus in Volumine quocunque tandem id fiat modo, depictis, nec nudâ earundem scripturâ, sed omnino repræsentatione extrinsecâ rem gestam fuisse fateri oporteat.

* Iconibus

Tandem igitur, quoniam inconcinnum nimis videbatur solâ repræsentatione extrinsecâ rem peractam affirmare, nihil prorsus conferente Libro, in eam sententiam prolapsus sum, Utrumque conjungendum esse, dicendumque, Singula quidem Vaticinia in Volumine, sive Signis & Iconismis, sive literis, descripta & exarata fuisse; ea verò Joanni, cæterisque cœlestis Dramatis spectatoribus, non aliter quàm repræsentatione forinsecâ recitationis viam explente propalam fuisse facta: Scilicet eodem ferè modo ac in Dramatis nostris Academicis fieri amat, ubi actoribus cum libris adstant monitores. Cùm enim neque Agnus ipse è libro recitaret quidquam, neque Apostolus tam propinquus ei adesset (stabat enim Agnus juxta sessorem Throni) ut è resignantis manu legere potuerit; necesse est eum hæc (quam dixi) ratione singula percipisse.

Hæc meditationes meas ut apud me expromerem effecit humanitas tua: jam desino plura. Deum verò Opt. Max. veneror, ut felicem tibi senectutem, vitam longiorem & beatæ illius prodromam largiatur.

EPISTLE XXXV.

Sir William Boswell's Second Letter to Mr. Mede, touching his Book sent to Ludovicus de Dieu.

Good Mr. Mede,

I Am sure long ere this by my Brother T. B. you have understood (which you shall by this present) that your Letters of 15 March, 13 May, 9, 11, 16, June, with Letters and a Book inclosed to Ludovicus de Dieu, came safely to my hands in London; as his unto him from you since my return hither. For this last week he was President of a Provincial Synod held de decennio in decennium by the Ministers of Holland, in this Town; so as I delivered the token of your love with my own hand into his, but in so busie a time I could not expect an Answer, or other than thanks, which he prayed me to render in abundance, for the special honour you had done him thereby. Divers other Letters Responfory to Beverovicus have been long expected; but Salmasius delay in his (wherein

(wherein he would omit nothing set or fallen from the Ancients, especially Philosophers, to that purpose) hath cast all other mens arrier, whom I should be as glad to see, because together with their learning I should, how well they had learned tenerè modum; for ought I know a most necessary part of Scholarship and Philosophy. It grieved me not a little that I could not see you in England, but in recompence I hope now and then to see your countenance and affection in black and white: for which you shall have returns from this place of all sorts it yields, and you affect, when I know what will be most wellcome, being evermore

Your most assured and ancient friend,

EPISTLE XXXVI.

A Third Letter from Sir William Boswell to Mr. Mede, touching his Book sent to Ludovicus de Dieu.

Good Mr. Mede:

What entertainment your Letters and Book found with Ludovicus de Dieu you will see ere long by his own in answer, his time hitherto having been taken up by being President in a Provincial Synod of Holland, and publishing his Annotations upon the Acts of the Apostles. It was sufficient for me to receive many thanks for the convenience, and that which was better, (better than Musick) to hear innumerable commendations of so near a Friend, though I knew them due; for 'tis no small pleasure to see debts paid, where we think our selves to have Interest. At my coming last into England I lay above three weeks wind-bound in the Briel, where I enjoyed the company of the Minister, Author of the inclosed, which I have gained by my acquaintance; and send it, for your affection to the Argument, by this bearer, son of Desiderius Heraldus, (whose works and worth you know of old) that you may for the Father's and my sake give him now and then conference and advice about such studies as he pursues, wherein himself will open his own mind. It will be a great kindness if Doctor Ward, whom I pray salute from me, will give him countenance and access at his times of leisure; which you may procure, and thereby oblige both him and me, and his Father my old and singular friend. You may see by this, and that title, how glad I should be to meet opportunities of doing any thing for your self, that might assure you with what truth and readiness of serving you I shall ever be

Your most affectionate Friend as of old,
William Boswel.

EPISTLE XXXVII.

Monfieur Testard his Letter to Mr. Brooks, about his translating Mr. Mede's Clavis Apocal. into French: as also concerning the Number of the Beast's Name.

SIR,

I Have translated into French, that I might communicate it to divers friends, the Book you sent upon the Revelation, which seems to me worthy admiration, and full of comfort to those that expect the consolation of Israel. I desire earnestly (if it may be obtained) the opinion of the Author touching a conceit came into my mind whilst I was reading the Book; particularly that which he remarks upon the number of 144000, and upon 666, the name of the Pseudoprophetical Beast, with the Reason he gives of the composition of the name, all of 6: which is, That the number of 666 ariseth from the multiplication of 3 Unites joyned together, making up the number of III. That these these three Unites set forth the three Offices of Christ, which pertain to him incommunicably, and distributively, and conjoynly considered. All which the Pseudoprophetical Beast usurps conjoynly: in which consists particularly his Antichristianism. And this multiplication produceth the number of 666; as also the multiplication of 12 by 12, which is the Apostolical number, produceth the 144000. That for this reason the number of 666 is called the number of a man, in the singular number, because it is in one only man; whereas the number of 144000 is a number of men, in the plural number, and drawn from the number of men. If the Author hath set forth any other Treatises, I desire earnestly you would send them to me.

EPISTLE XXXVIII.

Mr. Brook's Letter to a Friend.

DOE me the favour as to request Mr. Mede to give some satisfaction to the request of this Gentleman, my especial friend, and to suffer some Manuscripts which he hath not yet published to be copied out to be sent him, either in Latin or English. I will satisfy his pains that shall undertake it; with promise that nothing shall be communicated but to private friends.

EPISTLE XXXIX.

Reverendo & Doctissimo Viro, D. D. Mede,
Paulus Testardus S. P. D.

Quantâ me latitiâ totum perfuderint, Vir Reverende & Doctissime, quas ab amplissimo Viro D. Joh. Brooks accepi literas, quæ singularem tuam erga me non modo immeritum, sed & ignotum, humanitatem testantur, desunt mihi verba & voces quibus significem; vix profecto eam capit animus. Etenim non modo eæ mihi exhibuerunt quæ in mei gratiam dignatus es de mysterio Numeri Nominis Bestiæ scripto explicare, sed etiam de optatissimi ad tuam Dignitatem accessus facultate mihi per eum facta certum fecerunt. Isto, V. R. & D. tanquam salvo conductu securus, non diutius hæsi quin ad te istas transmitterem, quibus & gratias quantas possum maximas R. tue pro eximio isto beneficio referrem primum, ut ex animo refero; tum & Quæstionis quæ ad te perlata fuit occasione descriptâ, rem ipsam & genuinam meam mentem amplius aperirem, quod sic cum bona D. T. venia facio. Præterit jam ferè triennium ex quo D. Brooks cum quibusdam Anglicè scriptis libris Clavim tuam Apocalypticam cum Commentariis pro liberali suo erga me affectu misit. Opus sine nomine, sed invitante materiâ & mittentis commendatione, statim perlegi; deinde sæpius, suaviter trabente Rationum tuarum pondere, atque industriæ expositionis elegantia & concinnitate, relegi, non tantum Dei donum in te sæpius miratus, sed & aliquid tibi assidenti (ut loqueris alicubi) revelatum, addam & extra ordinem, facile persuasus. Dicam verbo; Nihil unquam mihi visum in Apocalypsin, non dicam quod cum Clavi tua & Expositione æquandam veniat, sed quod ad eas propè accedat. Atque (ut ita sumus naturâ comparati, ut ejus boni cujus nos maxime oblectat fruitio cognitionem cum aliis facile communicemus, nec verò duntaxat cognitionem Bonorum spiritualium & salutarium, sed ipsam etiam (tanta est eorum præstantia) fruitionem) horas aliquot, quando sivit perpetuus muneris mihi à Deo misericorditer demandati labor, versioni scripti tui in linguam Gallicam impendi, ut pretiosissimi istius ac divini thesauri fruendi copiam amicis meis facerem, & si sine eorum quibus sine summa necessitate displicere est nefas offensa licuisset, Publico etiam Versionem typis vulgandam curando, suavissimam utpote proculdubio futuram

consolationem iis omnibus qui Israelis Dei, ut scitè vocas, subrogati consolationem expectant, Regnumque illud Christi Septimæ Tubæ deinceps aequè βιασαί ἀπαύσσει. Possūmque procul adulationis arte D. T. sincere profiteri, animum meum singulis tuis Expositionibus tam plenum præbuisse assensum, quàm præberi potest ab eo qui non cæco impetu, sed ratione, ducitur, atque in re, ut agnoscis ipse, non parum difficili: Ipsamque adeo rationem quam reddis Numeri nominis Bestiæ Bicornis visam mihi convenientissimam. Nec enim quicquam in literis meis ad D. Brooks, tanquam illud Expositioni tuæ adversum putarem, proponere unquam mihi fuit animus; sed quod maxime ei congruum meditanti mihi, meo quidem iudicio, occurrerat. Nempe sic animum subierat ejusmodi conjectura: Quandoquidem 144000 signatorum Agni numerus numeri cujusdam, nempe 12, multiplicati per seipsum factus est; Numerum etiam nominis Bestiæ adversæ, 666, numeri alienjus multiplicati factum pariter esse. Ideoque cum Bestiæ istius forma, quatenus est Antichristus, & cornua habet similia Agni, (sc. professione & usurpatione tenus) mihi videatur esse in Christi numerum, quæ tria sunt, Sacerdotale, Propheticum, Regium, distincta, sed conjuncta subjecto, & Potestatis singula indivisibilis, atque (detur venia verbo) immultiplicabilis, sacrilegâ assumptione; Arte Arithmetica quæsi an fortè ex tribus Unitatibus collateraliter dispositis, per Senarium multiplicatâ Triade, mihi prodiret numerus 666. statimque prodeuntem inveni. Hoc verò inventum quia mihi videbatur & à re ipsa & à ratione tua non absolum, D. Brooks per literas anno præterito indicavi, simul eum obnixè rogans, quando jam nomen tuum ex cujusdam, ni fallor, Jonstoni, libello, ut Clavis Apocalyptica istius Authoris, innotuerat, ut, si fieri posset, & tuum de eo iudicium, & Scripta alia tua siquæ exstarent de quacunque materia possem per eum habere. Verum longè aliam (quod aut expressionis meæ, aut fortè tantum Scriptionis vitio libenter tribuo) ad te pervenisse meam Quæstionem jam intelligo, Vir R. & D. ex titulo quem Scripto tuo doctissimo præfixisti; in quo non vulgarem certè humanitatem prodis, qui me indoctum sanè Doctissimi titulo, ut alibi etiam, dignaris ornare; cujus à me tantum abesse meritum lubens agnosco, quantum adest mihi feruens tui cum summa eximie tuæ Doctrinæ admiratione studium, & humillimi atque devotissimi Discipuli ac Servi tui placet, si mihi concedas, elogium. Facit hoc, R. & D. Vir, ut, impellente D. Brooks, cujus ut Mediatoris ope apud te utor, de Clementia tua non parùm sperans ipse tibi de novo mentem meam Thesibus aliquot aperiā, idq; non simpliciter, ut primum D. Brooks indicāram, sed habitâ Scripti tui, ut videbit R. T. ratione; eo fine, ut solidissimi & acerrimi tui iudicii de invento meo genuino censuram, si R. T. placet, per eundem Mediatorem accipiam. Quam si dederis, & libertatem meam æqui bonique pro humanitate tua consulueris, me magis ac magis devinctum ac devotum habebis. Vale, Vir Reverende & Doctissime. Deus te Reipublicæ, Ecclesiæ, Scholæ diu servet incolumem. Dat. Blasii pridie Cal. Jul. 1635.

De Numero Nominis Bestiæ.

Numerus Nominis Bestiæ commodissimè quidem è radicè Senario eruendus videtur propter Imaginem Bestiæ in 6. Capite.

Verum & simul ex unitatum Triade, utpote per Senarium multiplicata, ad hunc modum III. videtur eruendus.

Nam Numerus Nominis Bestiæ cum sit αἰτίαι & numero 144000 signatorum Agni, que ex certi numeri, nempe 12, per certum numerum, nempe 12, multiplicatione oritur; videtur ideo & ex certi numeri per certum numerum multiplicatione deducendus. Fit autem tantum ex multiplicatione Triadis Unitatum, multiplicante Senario, numerus iste nominis Bestiæ 666.

Res verò ipsa favet. Nam Bestia cornua etiam habet Agni similia, hoc est, sibi tribuit potestatem Agni, quæ triplex est, Sacerdotalis, Prophetica, Regia, unitatūque Triadem facit, siquidem & distinctæ sunt, & conjunctæ subjecto, & unaquæque immultiplicabilis. Nam quod duo cornua representantur, id fit propter convenientiam Typi. Et certè non tantum in eo forma Bestiæ ponitur, quod loquitur ut Draco, Idololatrias nempe & lanienas Sanctorum; sed etiam in eo quod habet cornua Agni similia.

Unde non obstat huic conjecturæ quod nomen Antichristi sit Ecclesiastica institutionis, quatenus Bestiam significat; nam non nititur ea hoc nomine, sed dicto Apocalypico, Cornua habebat Agni similia.

Nec

Nec item obstat quod numeri signatorum Agni ab eo tantum petatur ratio quod eis revera competit, nam carent hi fraude & dolo; at Bestia à fraude & dolo etiam describitur, nempe quod cum loquatur ut Draco, Cornua tamen habet Agni similia: Potestatem scilicet similem jactat, imò ipsam Potestatem, quantum in ea est, usurpat.

Denique cum Draconismum misceat Christianismo Bestia quatenus est ista Bestia, utrumque numero nominis ejus significare par esse videtur.

EPISTLE XL.

Reverende & clarissime Vir,

ACcepi literas tuas benevolentia & humanitate plenas, à Domino Brokeo mihi transmissas: in quibus non ingratum fuit intellexisse, tenuem meam opellam viris, qualis tu es, doctis ulla ex parte adhibuisse. Domi certè minùs propitiam quàm apud exteros fortunam est experta. Id quod ego quidem facillè animo præfagiebam; sed amicis quibuscum eam communicaveram, editionem, ut solet, importunè flagitantibus, fidem facere non potui: donec eventus tandem docuit, me, hæc saltem parte, vatem non omnino vanum fuisse. Hoc ideote celatum nolui, ut indè pro prudentia tua judicium faceres, quantopere meâ intersit, nè ipse in novam libelli mei apud exteros editionem, sive suâ sive alienâ linguâ, consentirem; cui domi nedum ulteriori editione, sed & hujus distractione publicâ, à superioribus interdictum sit, solâ communicatione privatâ mihi permittâ.

This Letter contains Mr. Mede's thanks returned to M. Testard for his great respects, withal his reasons why he cannot concur with him in his notions about the Number of the Beast's name.

Interim majorem in modum me tibi obstrictum fateor, cui tantopere placuerim, ut illum non solum iteratò legere, sed in eo transferendo tantum laboris & tædii devorare non dedignareris. Nesciebam antea quicquam meum tanti pretii fuisse; certè mihi ipsi non est visum. Sin quid ex eo fructus vel ad te vel ad alios redierit, Deo Opt. Max. in solidum sit gloria. Ejus enim solius est quicquid est boni; meum nihil præter imbecillitatem & ignorantiam.

Ad quæsitum tuum quod attinet; equidem agnosco me mentem tuam antea, sive meâ sive aliorum culpâ, minimè affecutum esse. Jam verò eâ perceptâ, utut primo aspectu nonnihil concinnitate suâ adblandiebatur; tamen penitiùs introspectienti quò minùs adhuc tibi plènè accederem illud obstaculo fuit: Quòd tametsi verissimum sit, Radium senarium, nisi cum alio numero multiplicatum, Bestiæ numerum non redditurum; tamen animadverto, si tres istæ Unitates, quas huic rei adhibes, valore simplo, & non, juxta locorum seriem, multiplo accipiantur, factum ex datis non fore, ut tu supponis, Sexcenta sexaginta sex, sed tantum Octodecim. Quippe quia, si data Unitatum Trias cum Senario composita Sexcenta sexaginta sex conficere debeat, Unitates istas omnino pro CXI. numero, non verò pro simplis unitatibus, reputandas esse: Alioquin enim tres istos Senarios ex iis factos non nisi pro simplis quoque Senariis habendos.

Hic scrupulus si eximi potuisset, reliqua quæ adduxerim tanti fortè futura non essent quò minùs εὐρημα tuum calculo meo comprobarem: præsertim si usquam in S. Scriptura (quod tamen non memini) officia illa Christi Triade signarentur. Alioquin enim ad S. S. Trinitatem potiùs retulerim; cujus nempe cum cultu Bestiæ sexti capitis demonolatriam Pseudopropheta nefario temperamento commiscuit. Neque enim prorsus absque suspitione sum, posse in numero isto Trium Unitatum aliquid mysterii latere quod mihi nondum eruere datum est.

Hæc habui, Vir Doctissime, quæ ad Quæsitum tuum responderem. Fecit autem tua erga Scriptum meum benignitas & affectus, ut alias quasdam chartulas meas, Domini Brokei rogatu, tecum communicare non dubitârim. Harum unâ mysterium calculi istius Angelici apud Danielem, cap. 12. com. 11, 12. jam ante septennium vestigare sum conatus; quousque verò affecutus sum, necdum scio. Alteris duabus (* Epistolâ ad Amicum, & * Conjecturâ de Gogo & Magogo Apocalypico) sententiam meam de beato Millennio paulò pleniùs aperio. Plura non addo, nisi ut sanctissimis tuis studiis faveat benignissimus Deus, &c.

EPISTLE XLI.

Mr. Mede's Answer to some Enquiries of Dr. Twisse, touching the meaning of Ezekiel 38. 17. and Daniel 11. 35, 36.

Worthy Sir,

When I received your last, I was full of business, and therefore deferred my answer thereto till some time of better leisure and freedom; which now I have attained. But for that of yours which in particular concerns my self, I will say only this, that my friends conceive me to be a man of far greater abilities than I am. Believe me, I am far unfit for such undertaking as they think me. Ingenium habeo tardum & cunctabundum: and though perhaps my Fancy be a little pregnant for notions, yet for expression I am very unready, and write nothing either in Latin or English without much pains and difficulty. Such a disposition is not fit for the wars, but for peaceable and retired meditations. Besides, for the introducing and perswading a new and unfrequented Truth, the choice of a seasonable time is half the work: without which a man shall sooner damnify than promote it. We see it by experience, what a wound sometimes a Truth gets by an error in this kind. If the time therefore be not seasonable and likely, private communication and insinuation is most safe; publick avouching is dangerous, even to the cause it self, lest it be condemned before it be understood, and so never fecible again till that generation be gathered to their fathers, if then. A Truth therefore not yet admitted must be urged very warily and tenderly, for fear of incurring such a dangerous prejudice by an overpotent opposition. For the sons of men are untoward creatures, that talk much of Reason, but commonly steer by another Compass, as of Passion, Faction, or Affection, &c.

I thank God for that portion of knowledge hath been pleased hitherto to give me in these Mysteries, and the opportunity he hath vouchsafed me to make it known to others so far as I have done. I deserved neither of them: and for the latter, never intended it; but was caught as it were at a running pull. If it be his pleasure I shall proceed further, he will afford me those opportunities and inducements which yet I find not. And thus much for that matter.

Now for the rest, I perceive what it is that most pincheth you in the Millenarian Prophecy; to wit, that of Gog and Magog. Wherefore I send you enclosed herewith my * Conjecture thereof. How you will approve it, I know not. Howsoever you may gather thereby, and by what I formerly sent you, my whole conceit of that Mystery, and that my thoughts are still, now and then, reflecting upon their accustomed subject.

* Which I desire, when you have used it, to send me back again.

Ezek. 38. 17. explained.

AS for your Quære about the meaning of that Ezek. 38. 17. Thus saith the Lord: Art not thou he of whom I have spoken in old time by my servants the Prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years, that I would bring thee against them? I suppose you would know by what Prophets, and where any such Enemy as that Gog, was prophesied of before Ezekiel.

I answer, by Esay, chap. 27. 1. with the two last verses of the foregoing Chapter: by Jeremy, chap. 30. 23, 24. by Joel, chap. 3. 1, &c. by Micah, chap. 5. vers. 5, 6, 9, 15. In all which places is mention of some terrible Enemy which should come against Israel at the time of their Return, whom the Lord should destroy with a hideous and dreadful slaughter.

This Enemy is that Army of * Gog of the land of Magog, chief Prince of Meshech and Tubal, of which Ezekiel prophesieth; formerly mentioned by the Prophets which were before him; but never so punctually and particularly described by the place of his habitation, nation and name, as by him. The nearest unto him comes Micah, who prophesies of him under the name of the Assyrian, a Nation to the Northward; And He (that is, the Ruler to come forth of Bethlehem) shall be the peace, when the Assyrian shall come into our land, &c. Not as though this should be his Original Nation, but as the Province from whence he should fall into the land of Israel. For the Prince of Magog and Tubal cannot come into the Land of Israel, till he be first master of the Land of Assur, which lies between them. And the Prophet describes him by this Name, rather than by that of his own Nation, because the Name of Assur was at that time so terrible to the Jews, and the Invasion of Salmanasser and Sennacherib * Ezek. 38. 2.

Micah 5.

Sennacherib still fresh in their minds: and perhaps those Nations were then at the devotion of the Assyrian, and no small part of his Army; as they used to be of the Saracens, when they ruled in those parts. Howsoever by this name he pointed to a Northern Enemy, whatsoever the Nation should be that should then Empire it in those parts, as the Assyrian did when he prophesied. For Assyria is described by that situation, Esay 14. 31. Jer. 1. 13. and ch. 4. 6. Zachary 2. 6. and I believe our Geographical Tables are not so true and exact herein as they should be, in that they place Sarob (as they say Assyria is now called) too much to the Eastward.

I see I have some room left for another Observation concerning Daniel XI. in which one of your Letters intimated some difficulty of Exposition. It may be I shall speak that which may ease you. Howsoever, it is this. Dan. 11. 35, 36 explained.

All the Ancients refer that from vers. 36. and forward to the Fourth Monarchy, especially to Antichrist, in whose reign that Monarchy should conclude. And good reason; for the Resurrection of the dead and Judgment comes in at the end thereof, Dan. 12. 2, 3. but thither no Kingdom reaches but the Fourth. 'Tis a dangerous evasion to turn this Prophecy of the Resurrection of the dead (which is the most evident and express in all the Old Testament, and that whereon the Jewish Church built her faith and hope of the Life of the world to come) into an Allegory, as some of those are forced to do who interpret all of Antiochus Epiphanes.

The stumbling-block which hath diverted so many of ours in this last Seculum to depart from the ancient and Catholick Exposition, seems to me to be chiefly, because there appears no apparent Transition in the Text from the Prophecy of Antiochus to this we speak of, but it coheres as a continued Narration to the end.

Now the cause of this obscurity I take to be a misdistinguishing of the Text, which refers some words to the former verse which should be the beginning of this 36. these namely, כִּי עוֹר לְמוֹעֵד. For if these words be referred to that which follows, the Transition will be evident enough, in this manner.

35. *And some of them of understanding shall fall, to try them, and to purge, and to make them white, even to the time of the * end.*

36. FOR YET at the time appointed, a King shall do according to his will, and shall exalt and magnifie himself above every God; yea he shall speak marvellous things against the God of Gods, and shall prosper until the Indignation be accomplished, &c.

* Namely, of the end of the Greek Monarchy, which in the holy account is not extended beyond Antiochus Epiphanes.

For understanding of this we must know, that after the death of Antiochus Epiphanes the Third Kingdom comes no more in the holy reckoning, none of the Greek Kings after him being at all prophesied of; yea Daniel himself calling the time of Antiochus his reign The Latter end of the Greek Kingdom, chap. 8. 23. The reason of this is, because during the reign of Antiochus, Macedonia (whence that Kingdom sprung) with all the rest of Greece, came under the Roman obedience. From thence therefore the Holy Ghost begins the Rise of the Fourth Kingdom; yea the Roman Historians themselves mark out that time for the Rise of their Empire. Lucius Florus, lib. 2. cap. 7. Cedente Annibale, premium victoria Africa fuit, & secutus Africam terrarum orbis. Post Carthaginem vinci neminem puduit: secuta sunt Africam Gentes, Macedonia, Græcia, Syria, ceteraque omnia, quodam quasi aestu & torrente fortune: Sed primi omnium Macedones, affectator quondam Imperii populus. Item Velleius Paterculus, lib. 1. cap. 6. *ex quodam Emilio Surade annis populi Romani hæc habet: Assyrii * principes omnium Gentium rerum potiti sunt; deinde Medi, postea Persæ, deinde Macedones: Exinde duobus Regibus, Philippo & Antiocho, (qui à Macedonibus oriundi erant) haud multo post Carthaginem subactam, devictis, summa Imperii ad populum Romanum pervenit.* Compare 1 Maccab. c. 8.

* i. primi.

The meaning then of those words of Daniel-----[even to the time of the end] is, That the persecution he describeth should be terminated with the end of the Third Kingdom. For from thenceforth another King [the Roman] should prevail, and advance himself over all.

Under the name of King we must understand the whole Roman State under what kind of Government soever. For the Hebrews use King for Kingdom, and Kingdom for any Government, State or Politie in the world. See but Matth. 4. 8.

By exalting and magnifying himself above every God, nothing else is meant but the greatness and generality of his conquests and prevailings: the reason of that expression being, Because in the times of Paganism every City and Country had their proper and peculiar Gods which were deemed as their Guardians and Protectors. Hence sometimes the Nations themselves are expressed by the Name of their Gods: The People of Jehovah, that is, Israel; The people of Chemosh, Numb. 21. 29: that that is, Moab. Ità accipe Deut. 4. 28. and chap. 28. 64. Jer. 16. 13. 1 Sam. 26. 19. Sometimes the Exploits of the Nations are said to be done by their Gods; as we, by like privilege of speech, ascribe unto our Kings what is done by the People under them. See 2 Chron. 28. 23. Jerem. 51. 44. Thirdly, and most frequently; What is attempted against the Nations, is said to be done against their Gods; as we are wont in like manner to say, when an Army is overthrown or overmastered, that such a General is beaten or vanquished: See this, 2 Kings 18. 33. Isay 46. 1, 2. Jerem. 50. 2. and ch. 51. 44. and ch. 48. 7. Compare 2 Sam. 7. 23. So here the success and prevailing of the Roman, in the advancing his dominion and subduing every Nation under him, is expressed by exalting and magnifying himself above every God *. But if any had rather here take Gods for Kings and Potentates, let them.

EPISTLE XLII.

Dr. Twisse his Fourth Letter to Mr. Mede, approving his conjectures touching Gog and Magog, and desiring his opinion of the English Plantations in America.

Good Mr. Mede.

I must begin with apologizing for my self: I had purposed to return your Discourse the next week after I received it, that being of so precious a nature you might have it with the soonest. But I had so much to write upon that occasion, and withal many other Letters to dispatch the same week, that I deferred it to the next. Then I was put off by an unhappy accident: For a Scholar living with me got it over night to peruse, and the next morning, upon a sudden motion, observing the fair weather, took the opportunity to ride to London, without thinking of your Paper, neither was it in my memory to call for it. So that till the week following I could not recover it. — Now I have returned it, and I trust it shall come safe unto your hands. Now touching your Letters, I profess a truth, I was so far from taking any the least offence that I heard not from you so soon, that (believe it, Sir) I blam'd my self for making so bold with you, still putting you upon new matters; though when a vein is once found of gold or silver, it makes a man hungry and greedy to pursue it; and the Kingdom of the Saints goes beyond all Mines and Treasures. O how have you blessed me, and still continue to bless me with your Papers! I protest unto you, your Letters, your Conjectures, your Meditations, are the greatest Jewels my Studie contains. I approve your Reasons for not proceeding to publish any more at this present; but as Mariners provide against a storm, so may we for a calm. I have heretofore observed how, after Civil Wars in Christendom, many excellent things came forth which were studied in the time of Trouble. Did not Cicero the like in times of like condition? I am glad your thoughts reflect (and I hope ever and anon) on the same subject, that your friends in private may enjoy the benefit of your labours and talents.

See Mr. Mede's
Conjecture of Gog and Ma-gog, in Book
III. pag. 713.

In the matter of Gog and Magog you have acquainted me with new Mysteries that I never thought of. Yet to one who first embraceth your way (so I call it, because God hath made you his Minister to bring it to light; but I account it the way of Truth, and so carried by you, that in no particular I find just cause of exception) concerning Regnum Sanctorum, such light you bring to justify your Conjecture, that he will be driven to confess that you deliver nothing without fair ground, fair probability, and that in such a degree, that any other way seems to me, for the present, nothing capable of the like. Your grounds are very fair and clear to every one, but never (I think) taken into consideration by any before your self, to that end and purpose whereunto you direct them. You cannot easily conceive what content you give me herein, and what refreshing it is to my spirit. First, I perceive that Expedition of Gog against the Land of Israel is reckoned by you after their calling unto Christ, and thereupon possessing themselves of the Holy Holy Land, the Prophecies of the Old Testament leading thereunto; though Jews in former ages have joyned themselves with the Christian Churches of the same Countrey amongst whom they conversed. Secondly, Also that now you are resolved concerning the place of New Jerusalem, namely, the land of Jury. Thirdly, I guess also, you conceive the destruction of Gog and of Antichrist shall be at once by the coming of Christ. Fourthly, And that the restoring of the Temple in the latter end of Ezechiel, following upon the destruction of Gog, is a Type of New Jerusalem. Fifthly, And that Gog is the Turk. For which light that you have given me in all these particulars, I most heartily thank you.

NOW, I beseech you, let me know what your opinion is of our English Plantations in the New world. Heretofore I have wondered in my thoughts at the Providence of God concerning that world, not discovered till this old world of ours is almost at an end; and then no footsteps found of the knowledge of the true God, much less of Christ. And then considering our English Plantations of late, and the opinion of many grave Divines concerning the Gospel's fleeing Westward; sometimes I have had such thoughts, Why may not that be the place of New Jerusalem? But you have handsomely and fully clear'd me from such odd conceits. But what? I pray, shall our English there degenerate and joyn themselves with Gog and Magog? We have heard lately divers ways, that our people there have no hope of the Conversion of the Natives. And the very week after I received your last Letter, I saw a Letter written from New England, discoursing of an impossibility of subsisting there; and seems to prefer the confession of God's Truth in any condition here in Old England, rather than run over to enjoy their liberty there; yea, and that the Gospel is like to be more dear in New England than in Old: and lastly, unless they be exceeding careful, and God wonderfully merciful, they are like to lose that life and zeal for God and his Truth in New England which they enjoyed in Old; as whereof they have already woful experience, and many there feel it to their smart.

I am ashamed to urge you unto that which I do extremely desire, that you would afford me your interpretation of the last verses of Dan. II. concerning the Fourth Kingdom: For I am confident by that you make of the first of them, you have in like manner considered it throughout; and your fetching the matter off from Epiphanes and the Greeks to the Fourth Kingdom, gives great light to the whole. Thus overshoes, over boots; I am run so far in your debt, and withall I am so much in love with it, that I care not how deep I plunge myself thereinto. I commend me heartily unto your love, which I prize more than I can express. I shall rest

Newbury, March 2.

Yours, ever to love and honour you,

W. Twisse.

Post-script.

I had almost forgotten a special Argument against Regnum Sanctorum, whereof I should crave the solution; which is this. All the Saints departed this life are with the Lord Christ, 2 Cor. 5. 8. If all at his coming be not brought with him, they shall be divided from Christ, and consequently in worse condition than they were before. Though he bring all with him, yet in that Kingdom there may be place for different degrees of glory; and that 1 Cor. 15. Every one in his own order, is applied there only to Christ and them that are Christ's.

EPISTLE XLIII.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Dr. Twisse his Fourth Letter, touching the first Gentile Inhabitants, and the late Christian Plantations, in America: as also touching our Saviour's proof of the Resurrection from Exod. 3. 6. with an Answer to the Objection in the Post-script of the foregoing Letter.

SIR,

Concerning our Plantation in the American world, I wish them as well as any body; though I differ from them far, both in other things, and in the grounds they go upon.

And

And though there be but little hope of the general Conversion of those Natives in any considerable part of that Continent; yet I suppose it may be a work pleasing to Almighty God and our Blessed Saviour, to affront the Devil with the sound of the Gospel and Cross of Christ in those places where he had thought to have reigned securely and out of the dinne thereof; and though we make no Christians there, yet to bring some thither to disturb and vex him, where he reigned without check.

For that I may reveal my conceit further, though perhaps I cannot prove it, yet I think thus;

That those Countries were first inhabited since our Saviour and his Apostles times, and not before; yea, perhaps, some ages after: there being no signs or footsteps found amongst them, or any Monuments of older habitation, as there is with us.

That the Devil, being impatient of the sound of the Gospel and Cross of Christ in every part of this old world, so that he could in no place be quiet for it, and foreseeing that he was like at length to lose all here, bethought himself to provide him of a seed over which he might reign securely; and in a place, ubi nec Pelopidarum factaneque nomen audiret.

That accordingly he drew a Colony out of some of those barbarous Nations dwelling upon the Northern Ocean, (whither the sound of Christ had not yet come) and promising them by some Oracle to shew them a Country far better than their own, (which he might soon do) pleasant, large, where never man yet inhabited, he conducted them over those * desert Lands and Islands (which are many in that Sea) by the way of the North into America; which none would ever have gone, had they not first been assured there was a passage that way into a more desirable Countrey. Namely, as when the world apostatized from the Worship of the true God, God called Abram out of Chaldee into the Land of Canaan, of him to raise him a Seed to preserve a light unto his Name: So the Devil, when he saw the world apostatizing from him, laid the foundations of a new Kingdom, by deducting this Colony from the North into America, where since they have increased into an innumerable multitude. And where did the Devil ever reign more absolutely and without controll, since mankind fell first under his clutches? And here it is to be noted, that the story of the Mexican Kingdom (which was not founded above 400 years before ours came thither) relates out of their own memorials and traditions, that they came to that place from the North; whence their God Vitzliliputzli led them, going in an Ark before them: and after divers years travel and many stations (like enough after some generations) they came to the place which the Sign he had given them at their first setting forth pointed out, where they were to finish their travels, build themselves a City, and their God a Temple; which is the place where Mexico was built. Now if the Devil were God's ape in this; why might he not be so likewise in bringing the first Colony of men into that world out of ours? namely, by Oracle, as God did Abraham out of Chaldee, whereto I before resembled it.

But see the hand of Divine Providence. When the off-spring of these Runnagates from the sound of Christ's Gospel had now replenisht that other world, and began to flourish in those two Kingdoms of Peru and Mexico, Christ our Lord sends his Maltives the Spaniards to hunt them out and worry them: Which they did in so hideous a manner, as the like thereunto scarce ever was done since the Sons of Noah came out of the Ark. What an affront to the Devil was this, where he had thought to have reigned securely, and been for ever concealed from the knowledge of the followers of Christ?

Yet the Devil perhaps is less grieved for the loss of his servants by the destroying of them, than he would be to lose them by the saving of them; by which latter way I doubt the Spaniards have despoiled him but of a few. What then if Christ our Lord will give him his second affront with better Christians, which may be more grievous to him than the former? And if Christ shall set him up a light in this manner, to dazle and torment the Devil at his own home, I will hope they shall not so far degenerate (not all of them) as to come in that Army of Gog and Magog against the Kingdom of Christ; but be translated thither before the Devil be loosed, if not presently after his tying up. And whence should those Nations get notice of the glorious happiness of our world, if not by some Christians that had lived among them?

Thus have I told you out my fancy of the Inhabitants of that world: which though it be built upon mere conjectures, and not upon firm grounds; yet may have so much use as to shew a possibility of answering such scruples as are wont to run in mens heads concerning them: which consideration is not always to be despised.

BUT

* The Terra Australis yet incognita might in part be peopled through that fry of Islands lying between it and Camboia in the Oriental Sea. But of that Continent we know nothing, whether it be fully inhabited or not.

BUT because I see you entertain to favourably my Notions concerning the Kingdom of Christ at his appearing; I will make bold to acquaint you with another Notion which draws deeper (I think) than those you have yet heard.

Our Saviour's proof of the Resurrection from Exod. 3. 6. I am the God of Abraham, &c. explained.

I doubt not but you have felt some scruple (as well as others) at our Saviour's demonstration of the Resurrection in the Gospel, Matth. 22. Mark 12. God said to Moses in the bush, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob: God is not the God of the dead, but of the living. Ergo Abraham, Isaac and Jacob must one day rise againe from the dead. How doth this Conclusion follow? Do not the Spirits of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob yet live? God should then be the God of the living, though their bodies should never rise again. Therefore some Socinians argue from this place, that the Spirits of the Just lie in the sleep of death until the Resurrection. Or might not the Sadducees have replied, the meaning to be of what God had been, not of what he should be? viz. That he was that God who had once chosen their Fathers, and made a Covenant with them; I am the God that brought Abraham out of Chaldee, who appeared to Isaac and Jacob whilest they lived, &c. But how would this then make for the Resurrection? Surely it doth. He that could not erre said it. Let us therefore see how it may.

I say therefore the words must be understood with supply of that they have reference unto; which is the Covenant that the Lord made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; in respect whereof he calls himself their God. This Covenant was to give unto them and to their seed the land wherein they were strangers. [Mark it.] Not to their seed or off-springs only, but to themselves. Vide loca. To Abraham, Gen. 13. 15. & ch. 15. 7. & ch. 17. 8. To Isaac, Gen. 26. 3. To Jacob, Gen. 35. 12. To all three, Exod. 6. 4, 8. Dent. 1. 8. & ch. 11. 21. & ch. 30. 20. If God then make good to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob this his Covenant, whereby he undertook to be their God, then must they needs one day live again to inherit the promised Land, which hitherto they have not done. For the God that thus covenanted with them, covenanted not to make his promise good to them dead, but living. This is the strength of the Divine argument, and irrefragable; which otherwise would not infer any such Conclusion.

And this to be our Saviour's meaning may appear, in that the Jews at that time used from these very places thus understood to infer the Resurrection against the Sadducees out of the Law. As it is to be seen expressely of two of them (Exod. 6. 4. Dent. 11. 21.) in the Talmud פירקין פירקין, ubi in Gemara sic habetur, Traditio Rab. Simai; Quo loco asseruit Lex Resurrectionem mortuorum? Nempenbi dicitur, Atque etiam constabili vi foedus meum cum ipsis, ut de ipsis terram Canaan. Non enim dicitur vobis, sed ipsis.

Exod. 6. 4.

Iterum rogârunt Sadducei Rabbi Gamalielem, (Præceptor fuit Pauli Apostoli) Undenam probaret Deum mortuos resuscitaturum. Non quieverunt usque dum produceret ipsis istum versum, Quam terram juravit Dominus patribus vestris se daturum illis. Hinc constat Legem testificari Resurrectionem mortuorum.

Dent. 11. 21.

Note therefore, that when in a two or three of these places it is added, and to thy seed, or their seed after them, the word after is not to be referred to give (as if it were, I will give it to thy seed after I have given it to thee;) but to seed; as, Thy seed after thee, that is, to thy posterity, their seed after them, that is, to their posterity which should come out of their loyns: For that the off-spring is in beginning after to the beginning of the Parent.

To perswade this conceit by stronger testimonies than of Rabbins, I pray compare with that which hath been said, the 8, 9, and 10 verses of Hebrews 11. adding to them the 13, 14, 15 and 16 verses of the same Chapter: In the last of which you need not stumble at the Epithet, ἐπουρανίου heavenly; because it notes not only that which is in heaven, but that which is from heaven, de Cælo; as it is said verse 10. They looked for a City whose builder and maker is God. And consider well the latter part of this 16. verse with our Saviour's Argument.

Compare besides and consider that of Zachary's Benedictus, Luc. 1. 72. Ποιῆσαι ἔλεος μετὰ τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν, καὶ μνησθῆναι διαθήκης ἁγίας αὐτῶ· which we, for fear of Limbus patrum, translate, To perform the mercy promised to our Fathers, &c. But there is no such word as [promised] in the original. Ποιῆσαι ἔλεος μετὰ τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν, is directly, To shew mercy, or kindness, to our Fathers: For that is the Scripture phrase, ποιῆσαι ἔλεος μετὰ τινος, To shew benignity unto, or deal kindly with, one. The Fathers then themselves are the Object of this benignity and favour which is to be by Christ; it is to be shewn to them. But what is this favour and mercy? the words following following will tell us — and to remember his holy Covenant. What was that? To give unto them, even to them in their own persons, the Land wherein they were strangers, and that by and with that seed of theirs wherein all the Nations of the earth were to be blessed.

Add lastly and consider what may be the meaning of that, Matth. 8. 11. Many shall come from the East and the West, and shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the Kingdom of heaven; when the children of the Kingdom (that is, the Jews, many of them) shall be cast out into outer darkness, &c.

Now I have done, I am afraid I have not expressed my mind so clearly and evidently as I would. But the Summe of what I would say is this.

God covenanted to give to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in their own persons, (as well as to their seed) the Land wherein they were strangers (that is, the Land of Canaan) for an inheritance. But this was not performed to them while they lived; therefore must they one day live again, that they may be partakers of this Promise; and consequently the Saints shall live on earth after their Resurrection.

To your Postscript-Objection, That if the Saints come not all together with Christ, those which are left behind shall be in worse case than they were before: The assailing thereof depends upon the exact knowledge of the State of the Saints in bliss, and the degrees they are in; which we know not. Who can affirm whether all the Saints now in bliss have the Vision of Christ in his Humanity, or some of them only? And as for the presence of his Godhead, they may enjoy it in an illustrious manner, though his Humanity be on earth. We must be content in so great a Mystery to be ignorant of something. Deus providebit. For the words * ἐν ἰδίῳ τάγματι, I will not contend for the sense I used them in. They may be understood the other way, so may they be in mine. Quisque fruatur suo judicio. But what say you to that in the end of Daniel, Go thy way, Daniel, till the end be; for thou shalt rest and stand up in thy Lot at the end of days? What is this [in thy Lot?] Is it not, In thy course, or In thy turn? See the Courses or Turns of the Priests and Levites so called, 1 Chron. 24.

For my full interpretation of that part of the 11. of Daniel, I have it in a Treatise upon 1 Tim. 4. which I preached in certain Sermons at S. Marie's before I was so well versed in the *Apocalyp*s or understood the Mystery of the Millennium; and therefore it hath some things in it not so consentaneous to my present opinion either in that or some other things there discoursed. I could * mend the foundation thereof. Notwithstanding these defects I could be willing to let you have a sight of it, if I could send it by a certain hand; but the hand of a Carrier is too contingent to adventure it in: And this to save the labour of writing out that which concerns that Prophecy of Daniel, which would be a little tedious to me.

Mr. B. at his sending me your last, desired to know my opinion of Gog and Magog in the *Apocalyp*s, whether they were not Hypocrites on the one side within the Church, and open Enemies without on the other. Whereby I gather he is not acquainted with my conceit of the Millennium, and wants the Præcognita. Wherefore it would be a tedious business to go about to inform him by writing. I answered him, My Opinion required many Præcognita, and what it was you could inform him: but I thought it concerned not these times.

Thus with my best respect, and commending your self and all yours to the Blessing of the Almighty, I rest

Your assured Friend,

Mr. Mede's modest Answer, excusing himself and his Book.

Worthy Mr. Hartlib,

THanks for your good affection, in rejoycing for that you conceive to tend to my honour. Yet I see not why I should think much better of my self for it. It is the hap of many a Book that hath no worth in it (as I see daily) to find applause and entertainment, when a good Book is often scarce taken notice of. Why may not mine then, notwithstanding all this, be of that sort? I confess it is far better accepted than ever I looked for. This is enough. Yet might it be any furtherance but in the smallest degree to draw a Prince to our Religion, I should think then I might have cause of glory. But, alas! I dare not so much as give such a conceit entertainment.

Howsoever, because you send me abroad, and the Book contains a Paradox which is but generally and tenderly touched, and not fully explicated; lest I might be reputed, in this generality, to be of the same Opinion that Piscator and some others are, who avouch a Millennium Regni, as I do, but not ἀρχαίων, and so their conceit far differing from mine; I thought not amiss to send you these inclosed Papers, wherein those that shall study that point shall find my opinion competently explicated; at least so far as may secure them that I cherish no gross and groundless error. When you have made that use of them you think fit, I would desire you to send me them again, for I have no other Copies, and they are sometimes useful to me in giving satisfaction.

If Mr. Dury hath read my Book, you may communicate them with him; else it will not be to purpose. I would I knew whether he had a Book or not. The Book he sent me down from De Dieu, I have now at length, and but newly, received. I read De Dieu's Letter but this morning, and would have written to Mr. Dury in answer to his kind Letter, but that I am all overwhelmed at present with business and distractions, and am of a disposition that can tend but one thing at once. I pray howsoever remember my service to him: the next week I shall be at leisure I hope to write to him.

For

For your excusing your seldom saluting me with your Letters, it needs not; I am sensible of the trouble my self, and therefore most ready to hold others excused. Thus my time is spent, and I must to other writing work. So with my best affection I rest

EPISTLE XLVII.

Jos. Medi Epistola ad Joh. Duræum.

This Letter signifies Mr. Mede's hearty well-wishing to Mr. Dury's Pacifick design, but withal intimates his reasons why he judgeth himself not so fit and able to serve him herein. Thus out of his great modesty he wrote at first to Mr. Dury, but was afterward prevailed with to communicate what he thought most adviseable in this affair; as appears by several Letters of his in Answer to Mr. Dury and Mr. Hartlib, which the Reader will find toward the end of this Fourth Book.

Doctissime & Ornatissime Vir,

Dutius factum est cum tuas Literas accepi, nec respondi: In causa fuit, quòd Librum ad me à Clarissimo viro Domino Lud. De Dieu missum Vehicularii incuriâ ante superiorem septimanam non acceperim: tunc autem cum scribendum esset, aliis occupationibus & scriptiunculis adeò distinebar, ut vel tantillum otii & temporis huic officio non suppeterit.

Duplici verò beneficio me affect Vir clarissimus doctissimûsque & omni laude superior Dominus Ludovicus De Dieu; tum quòd eruditissimi Libri sui munere me honorare voluerit; tum quòd unâ eadêmque operâ, quasi tesserâ quadam in manus traditâ, mihi ad amicitiam tuam viam patefecerit; Viri, quem verè heroicum illud Religiosæ Pacis procurandæ studium mihi jamdudum & omnibus bonis amabilem reddiderat, Deo quinetiam quinetiam charum & acceptum. Maſte, vir beatiffime, (talem enim te * Chriſtus ipſe pronunciat) hoc animo, hâc virtute. Utinam autem irâ ferret conditio mea, eſſemque porro ab ingenio & prudentia ſatis inſtructus, ut tibi in tam ſancto munere inſervirem. Nunc verò illud, ultrâ quàm voto & commendatione, non licet. Nos enim hîc (ut ſcias) qui inferioris ſubſellii ſumus, ab aliorum pendemus arbitrio, neque ſine illorum nutu aut ductu in talibus quicquam audemus; alioquin factioſi & inordinati ingenii notam incurſuri, nullo, mihi crede, ſiquis eo maculetur, oceano eluendam.

Eſt & aliud offendiſſimum quod te non celabo, quo Noſtratium quorundam animos, alioquin rectos, deterreri & retardari ſuſpico, quò minùs voluntatem ſuam tam liberè & apertè in hac cauſa profiteantur: nempe quòd aliorum temeritate, aliorum malitiâ factum animadvertunt, ut quòd quis in exterâ Eccleſiâ proniorem ſe oſtendat, eò ſtatim à noſtra habeatur alienior. Audîſti Satanæ Stratagema, quo tam pulchro & pio incepto remoram objicere conatur. Hinc conjice, in ſuffragiis ad rem iſtam colligendis quantâ cautelâ & judicio opus ſit.

Meiſum quod attinet, ſcias velim, me ſummis animi votis Eccleſiarum pacem & concordiam exoptare, tibiſque eo nomine & ſanctiſſimis tuis conatibus impenſè ſavere, &, quâ licet, promovere velle. Dextram verò amicitia (quam tam benignè obtuliſti & viciffim poſtulas) en tibi eam jam nunc porrigo, inque affectûs mei teſtimonium Scriptum hoc qualecunque meum in Apocalypſin dono mitto; minimè illud ei par quod mihi à doctiſſimo & (quod ex Literis ejus cognovi) amiciſſimo tibi viro ferendum accepiſti: Rogo tamen ut æqui bonique conſuleres, quod ab homine cui anguſta eſt eruditionis ſupellex proficiſci potuit.

Nolim enim te ex Domini Hartlibii & aliorum amicorum de me judiciis, qui ex hoc Scripto (quod immane quanto labore mihi conſtitit) vires meas æſtimant, in errorem abducî. Non ſum profectò quem illi me exiſtimant, ſed in quo omnia mediocria ſunt, nè dicam tenuia; multis eruditionis præſidiis deſtitutum eſſe, præſertim (quod maxime angit) cogitata mentis ſive ſermone, ſive ſcripto apud alios facilè & expedirè proferendi facultatem à natura denegatam habere, ut nullo modo ſim amicorum de me judiciis & exſpectationi reſponſurus, mihi de meiſo crede, nè de novo amico nimiùm fortè ſis tibi gratulaturus.

Plura non addo, niſi ut faveat ſanctiſſimis tuis inceptis benignus Deus, tèque diu incolumem ſervet, Eccleſiæ & Reipublicæ Chriſtianæ bono. Ità vovet

EPISTLE XLVIII.

Lud. de Dieu Epiftola ad Jof. Medum.

Clariffime, Doctiſſime atque Ornatiffime Vir,

Litteras tuas 4. Junii præcedentis anni datas, per Nobiliſſimum atque Ampliſſimum Equitem D. Guilielmum Boſwellum jamdudum accepi; ex quibus leviniſculas meas in doctiſſimam tuam Clavem Apocalypſicam Animadverſiones communicatas tibi à literatiſſimo viro fuiſſe intelligo. Quod eſſi præter mentem meam acciderit, magno tamen meo bono factum, quòd iſthoc pacto aditus mihi ad eruditionem tuam datus ſit. Alluſiſſe tibi mearum Obſervationum aliquid, eſt quod mihi gratuler: quòd alia non ſatis à me intelleda, aut ſeciùs accepta, illuſtrare ac plana facere dignatus fueris, gratias ago maximas, & acquieſco. Quòd autem nullam adhuc cauſam te videre potuiſſe ais, cur magis in Veteri Teſtamento variantem lectionem admittere pertimeſcas quàm in Novo, examinandum penitiùs videtur. In Vet. Teſtamento unicus fuit populus Judaicus, intra anguſtos terræ Canaan limites conſuſus, qui à ſummo Pontifice paucisque Sacerdotibus pendens, Scripturæ Sacra & Lectiones & interpretationes accipere ab iſs debebat: ibi Scripturam in puritate ſua conſervare & variationem arcere facile fuit; unde & ſummo conſenſu, paucis exceptis apicibus & literis, codices Hebræi conſpirant; adverſus quorum conſenſum variantem lectionem comminiſci, audendum non arbitror. In Novo Teſtamento, ubi, diſperſa protinus per omnes populos ſalutis doctrinâ, res ſeciùs ſe habuit, variari aliquid facile fuit, ut & variantes codices variantes lectiones admittere cogunt.

Tria

This Letter contains Lud. de Dieu his Reply to that one part of Mr. Mede's Letter which treated of ſome various Readings in the Hebrew Text. See that Letter of Mr. Mede's in Book III pag. 559.

Tria autem adfers consideratione digna. Primum est, Ipsi Hebraei Textus lectionem variare: ubi conferri vis hymnum Davidis novissimum 2 Sam. 22. cum eodem Psal. 18. Historiam excidii Hierosolymitani 2 Reg. 24. à vers. 18. ad finem cap. 25. cum eadem historia Jerem. 52. Legationem Merodach Baladan 2 Reg. 20. vers. 12, 13, &c. cum eadem Esa. 39. Item 2 Sam. 21. 19. cum 1 Paral. 20. 5.

Respondeo, Plurima in illis locis esse quæ invicem collata aliter quidem hîc leguntur quàm illic, ita tamen ut & hîc eodem modo omnes codices legant & illic; & nè Mazorethæ quidem variantes lectiones annotare fuerint ausi. Varietas illa crebrò contingit, ubi de eadem re diversi authores scribunt. Quoties apud Evangelistas id videre est? ubi eandem historiam diversi tractantes addunt, demunt, commutant verba & sententias, immutant personas, transponunt ordinem, & alia aliter scribunt. Matth. 3. est portare calceamenta; Marc. 1. solvere corrigiam calceamentorum: illic, baptizabit Spiritu Sancto & igne; hîc, omittitur igne. Quæ Matth. 5. in Beatitudinibus narrantur tertiâ personâ à Christo dicta, recenset Lucas secundâ personâ. Quodque Matth. 13. 17. est, Multi Prophetæ & iusti; Luc. 10. 24. est, Multi Prophetæ & reges. In quibus neque variare lectionem, neque corruptam esse hanc aut illam dicet quisquam; quia diversitas ista iustas causas habet causas & usus insignes. Talia quoque sunt, quod 2 Reg. 25. 4. omittantur מהטיר ויצא מהטיר quæ Jer. 52. 7. leguntur: Quod illic scribatur נכנרנר, apud Jerem. נכנרנר; ut & Esa. 39. 1. מרארך, quod 2 Reg. 20. 12. est ברארך; & 1 Reg. 15. אכיה, quod 2 Chron. 13. est אכיה & אכיה: facile enim tempora in nominum propriorum pronuntiatione & scriptione literam aliquam variant, unde & in Evangelis est, בערזעס, quod in Hebr. est בערובוב. Et ut quod primo loco ponis potissimum conferam, nempe Psal. 18. cum 2 Sam. 22. Illic vers. 1. legitur ומיר שאור, hîc ומכר. Versus qui ibi secundus est, hîc omittitur. Ibi vers. 3. est ומפלטי ארץ צורי, hîc ומפלטי ארץ צורי. Ibi desunt quæ hîc eodem versu adduntur, ומנוסי משטי מהמס השטני. Ibi vers. 5. est כי אפפני משברי מות, hîc אפפני חבלי מות. Cesso, quia plurimæ ejusmodi sequuntur mutationes; quæ satis evincunt aut Psalmo Davidis contigisse à novo scriptore qui libros Regum contexuit quod passim orationibus Christi in Evangelis, ubi ab alio Evangelista aliis verbis recensentur; aut ipsummet Davidem, diversis temporibus egregium hunc hymnum proferentem, consulto quadam mutasse, ut uberius ejus esset sensus; unde sanè diversa codicum lectio, nec ulla aut hîc aut illic depravatio, argui potest.

At respicis forsitan ea loca ubi aliter se habere דו קרי quàm דו כתיב annotarunt Mazorethæ. Respondeo, Ipsorum annotationes non indicare quomodo alii codices legerint, sed quomodo legendum sit: ideo nunquam duplex, multo minùs triplex, קרי annotatur; & vocales semper דו קרי, nunquam דו כתיב accommodantur; ut unicam tantum lectionem rectam esse indicarent, quæ scilicet דו קרי est adaptata. In quo cum sensum suum & judicium sint secuti, rejicio passim ipsorum lectionem, tanquam aut non necessariam, aut inutilem, aut supersticiosam, aut etiam depravatam. & דו כתיב sequi amo. Ut in hymno Davidis 2 Sam. 22. 8. דו Ketif postulat legi ויתנעש, sicut Psal. 18. quod rectius est quàm דו Keri ויתנעש, quod mascul. gen. non bene construitur cum seq. ותרעש הארץ. Vers. 15. דו Ketif vult legi ויהם, ut est Psal. 18. & rectius est quàm דו Keri ויהם. Vers. 33. דו Ketif vult legi ויהם תמים ררכו, דו Keri est ררכו, quia nempe sic legitur Psal. 18. at cur non eodem jure annotarunt pro ויהם legendum ut in Psalmo ויהם? Jam antè diximus studio mutasse nonnulla Prophetam, ut & alia in eodem hoc versu, & suprâ vers. 11. est וירא & conspectus est, quum illic sit וירא & volavit: hîc vers. 11. השרת מים colligationes aquarum, cum illic sit השבת מים tenebras aquarum. Optimum habet sensum ררכו. Et exsilire facit integrum via ejus, vel & exsilire facit integrum in via sua, pro ררכו. Indè pendet & alterum vers. seq. משוה רגליו כאילות, sic habet דו Ketif, pro quo דו Keri רגליו; at rectius est prius, si in precedenti legas ררכו, disponit pedes ejus (nempe integri viri, quem exsilire facit aut expeditum reddit via ejus) ut cervarum. Versu ult. דו Ketif vult legi מגריל, sicut Psal. 18. at Keri est מנרול, omnino pravè. Sic in historia Merodachi 2 Reg. 20. 13. דו Ketif est כתיב כתיב, Keri vult inter ואת בית legi כתיב, quia nempe id apud Esaiam legitur; quid necesse? Sic vers. 18. Ketif est יקח accipiet, nempe Rex Babel, optimo sensu; at Keri est יקח accipient, quia sic legitur apud Esaiam, sine ulla necessitate. 2 Sam. 21. 19. דו Ketif vult legi מרן אש vir mensurarum aut extensionum (est enim מרן Arabicè extendere) sicut in sing. est 1 Par. 20. 6. אש מרן; at דו Keri est מרון, quod sanè multò minùs quadrat. Ibid. vers. 19. שמעי, volunt legi שמעא, quia sic est in Chronicis; quasi non ubique nomina propria mutationes tales subeant.

Alterum quod statuis est, Ubi Apostoli & Evangelistæ lectionem quam secuti sunt LXX calculo suo comprobasse videntur, illos duces sequi perinde tutum esse ac Mazorethas, neque sacrilegum in Scripturam esse qui sic ex ipsa Scriptura & meliore ejus lectione pronuntiaverit.

Repeto,

Repeto, Vir Clarissime, quod dixi, me duces Mazorethas non sequi, nisi ubi res ipsa cogit, & meliorem lectionem postulat. Atenda quædam literaria irrepsisse in Sacros Codices, ut in alios quosvis, non nego: Sed quæ ex re ipsa & genio linguæ, etiam sine Mazorethis, à peritis facile deprehendi, & dum leguntur emendari possint. Ex LXX interpretibus, etiam cum Apostoli & Evangelistæ eos sequuntur, lectionem in qua omnes Hebræi codices consentiunt suspectam habere & meliorare non ausim. Psal. 40.7. legitur אָנִים קִרִּית לִי LXX σωµα & κατορθώσω µοι. sequitur id Apostolus Hebr. 10. an inde colligere licebit verior lectionem esse לִי נִוִּיה הַכִּינֹה? Psal. 19. pro קִרִּים LXX habent קִרִּים. אֲנִי. אֲנִי. sequitur Apostolus Rom. 10. an propterea verior lectio est כָּוֶלֶם? Esa. 1. 9. pro שָׁרִיר LXX habent σπέρµα, quod sequitur Apostolus Rom. 9. an ideo verior lectio est וְיָרַע? Multa sic erunt immutanda, alibi addenda; ut Esa. 65. 2. legitur סוֹרֵר אֶל־עַם, LXX αἰεὶ λαὸν ἀπειθῶντα & ἀντιλέγοντα, sic & Apostolus Rom. 10.21. addendumne ergo erit יוֹמְרִים? Est & ubi omittunt aliquid LXX, ut Esa. 10. 22, 23. quod sequitur Apostolus Rom. 9. 27, 28. Malim cum doctissimis multis viris sentire, Non accuratè admodum & sollicitè spectasse sanctos viros quousque cum Hebraica lectione LXX Interpretes convenirent; sed vulgata & inter Hellenistas recepta Versioni libenter inhaeruisse, modò salvam inde integramque haberent Spiritus Sancti mentem.

Tertium quod statuis est, Alicubi observare esse, Spiritum Sanctum crisin manifestiùs exercere, aliàmque à recepta lectionem præferre, etiam ubi LXX versioni cum hodiernis exemplaribus Hebraicis ad amussim convenit. Locum citas ex Matth. 27. 10. ubi ex κατὰ συνήτην µοι Κόου & conjecit innuisse Spiritum Sanctum pro בֵּית יְהוָה legendum apud * Prophetam כִּרְתַּת יְהוָה; quod quidem ego minimè sentio: Sed cum apud Prophetam initio versùs 13. præcedat narratio mandati divini quo jussit Deus projici argenteos illos ad figulum, omisrà narratione mandati veluisse Evangelistam subjicere in fine, factum esse sicut mandaverat Dominus. Quòd autem τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κόου nullam faciat mentionem, causa est, quia & apud LXX ea omittitur, qui tamen loco ejus illud κατὰ συνήτην µοι Κόου non habent. Retinendum est omnino illud בֵּית יְהוָה, quia circumstantiam loci continet in quem conjici debebant argentei, in quem & conjectos à Juda esse Matthæus docet vers. 5. Et si Thesin illam tuam sequi liceat, quidni Rom. 10.9. crisin exercuisse dicatur Apostolus in illum locum Moïsis, Deuter. 32. 21. Ego ad zelum provocabo eos, ut & LXX habent, sed Paulus citat vos? Alià viâ existimo, Vir Clar. ejusmodi loca esse expedienda quàm tantæ libertatis concessione. Nolim tamen cuiquam sententiâ meâ præjudicatum.

Reliquum est, Vir amicissime, ut ob præclarum tuum munus, quo affectum tuum erga me ingentem maximopere es testatus, quàm possum maximas agam gratias. Usus eo est per aliquot menses, & adhuc utitur, Cl. Vir ac Theologiæ hîc Professor D. Antonius Walæus, qui ex Ill. Ord. mandato novæ in linguam vernaculum Novi Testamenti translationi cum aliis incumbens, & præ ceteris Apocalypsin notis marginalibus illustrandam nactus, operam tuam vehementer laudat, sibi que ejus usum gratulatur; quo nomine majores etiam tibi gratias debemus. Accipe jam ἀντίδωρον levidense mearum in Acta Apostolorum Animadversionum, tuo δῶρον nequaquam par, sed quale ab homine cui angusta est eruditionis suppellex proficisci potuit, cui animus melior quàm facultas. Accipit hæc ad te deferendas D. Duræus, Vir omni doctrinæ & virtutum genere ornatissimus, nobisque amicissimus, nec cuiquam nisi pessimo invisus. Hunc si amas, meque cum ipso in ejusdem amicitie societatem intromittere dignaris, erit utrique cur nobis gratulemur. Faveat sanctissimis tuis laboribus benignus Deus, teque Ecclesiis & Reipub. literariæ diu incolumem conservet.

EPISTLE XLIX.

Jof. Medi Epistola ad Lud. de Dieu.

This Letter returns Mr. Mede's thanks to Lud. de Dieu for the Book he sent him, viz. his Notes upon the Acts of the Apostles; with some Observations upon the foregoing Reply.

Reverende &amp; Clarissime Vir,

Duplici me beneficio affecisti; tum quòd Libri tui eruditissimi munere me ornare volueris; tum quòd unâ eâdemque operâ, quasi tessera quadam in manus traditâ, mihi ad Domini Joannis Duræi amicitiam viam patefeceris, Viri, quem verè heroicum illud Religiosæ pacis procurandæ studium mihi dudum & omnibus bonis amabilem reddiderat; hæc verò occasio primùm de facie notum, & in interiorem familiaritatem acceptum. Utroque hoc nomine, Vir Clarissime, gratias tibi ago meritissimas; inprimis ob ἀντιδωρον tuum tam præclarum & omnimodâ eruditione refertum, cuique meum δῶρον (quicquid tu dixeris) nullatenus conferri potest: imò videor liberalitate isthâc meâ omnino fœnus exercuisse, & quæstum fecisse, si fas dicere, improbissimum.

De mendis autem & corruptione Textûs Hebraici, non est mihi tecum in ea causa reciprocandi animus: Fateor enim ultro hîc, si usquam alibi, cautè & religiosè agendum, imò & sentiendum. Interim tamen mallem mendum alicubi agnoscere, quàm in inexplicabilem difficultatum Labyrinthum compelli, unde me haud expedirem, nisi absurdiuscula quæque & multò minùs verisimilia (prout nonnunquam ab aliis factum video) comminisci vellem. Unum tantùm aut alterum in Responsione tua notabo. Primum, quòd in collatione historiarum 2 Reg. 25. cum eadem Jerem. 52. non videris id animadvertisse in quod ego animum præcipuè intenderam: nempe capite illo Regum, v. 3. verba nonnulla omiſsa esse, sine quibus historia veritas salva esse non potest; eadem verò ex Jeremia faciliè & tutò restitui posse. Conferamus invicem.

2 Reg. 25. 3. sic legitur, בַּחֲשֵׁכָה לַחֹדֶשׁ וַיְחֹק הָרָעֶב בְּעִיר. — Jer. 52. 6. sic, בַּחֲשֵׁכָה לַחֹדֶשׁ וַיְחֹק הָרָעֶב בְּעִיר. Quis hîc non videt verba illa [בַּחֲשֵׁכָה לַחֹדֶשׁ] sine quibus narrationis veritas non constat, è contextu Regum excidisse? Simile mihi observâsse videor, 1 Paral. 6. 28. in illo, וּבְנֵי שְׁמוּאֵל הַכֹּהֵן וְשֵׁנִי וְאַבְיָה. Atqui primogenito Samuelis nomen fuit Joel, non Vashti; imò eo nomine memoratur in hoc ipso capite, non nisi quinque abhinc versibus. Censeo igitur excidisse nomen Joel, & olim sic scriptum fuisse, וּבְנֵי שְׁמוּאֵל הַכֹּהֵן יוֹאֵל וְשֵׁנִי וְאַבְיָה. Et filii Samuelis, primogenitus Joel, & secundus Abijah. Lxx certè sic legerunt, & confirmatur ex 1 Sam. 8. 2. ubi legitur, וַיְהִי שֵׁם-בְנֵי הַכֹּהֵן יוֹאֵל וְשֵׁם מִשְׁנֵהוּ אֲבִיָּה. Nè dicam planè absurdum esse, nomen cuique esse inditum ex voce cum Vau copulativa præfixa; nam quid quæso significabit וְשֵׁנִי, quocunque modo tractes, quàm & secundus?

Alterum quod notabo est, te Textum Lxx. Zach. 11. 13. leviter tantùm inspexisse, ex eo quòd affirmes τὸν οἶκον Κυρίου apud illos non haberi; hancque causam esse cur neque apud Evangelistam compareat. At, nisi me quoque fefellerunt oculi, Lxx hîc cum Hebræo habent εἰς τὸν οἶκον τοῦ Κυρίου. Præterea Evangelistam hîc Lxx non esse secutum, argumento est, quòd totam pericopen aliis ferè verbis enuntiet.

Hæc sunt, Vir clarissime, quæ eruditissimis tuis (quas tanquam κειμήλιον aliquod apud me servare decrevi) reponenda duxi, nec plura. Deus Opt. Max. eruditissimos tuos conatus ad Reipublicæ literariæ emolumentum & nominis sui gloriam indies magis magisque provehat, téque quàm diutissimè incolumem servet. Ità vovet

Claritatis &amp; Virtutis tuæ studiosissimus,

Jof. Medus.

EPISTLE L.

Dr. Twisse's Fifth Letter to Mr. Mede, applauding his Conjecture concerning Gog and Magog, and the first peopling of America; as also his proof of the Resurrection from Exod. 3.6. with a Post-script relating partly to a report of Mr. Selden's Censure of his Book upon the Apocalyps.

HOW exceedingly am I beholden unto you; first, for your pains in affording me so liberal Letters, especially considering with what recreation and delight I read them; but above all for your love in communicating your thoughts? And I dare profess, though I have not seen your face, (which I heartily desire at mine house; but I will think of preventing that suit, and first take a time to visit your self at Cambridge) yet you cannot communicate them to one that holds them more dear. Alas! had it not been for your help, I had been to this day a stranger in the mystery of God; while all my thoughts are employed in making up the breach which these degenerate Times have caused in the mystery of God's grace. But I have a desire to receive information; and God hath made me capable in some measure to discern the strength of rational discourse, and the congruity of Conclusions with their Premises in any argument. And to profess a truth, I did not think the mysteries of God's Providence, set down as they are in obscure Prophecies, had been capable of such evidence of illustration as God hath enabled you to bring thereunto, before the Event doth manifest them.

I went a little too far in my last; only that I might not be too immodest to create new troubles unto you, by comparing your Book on the Revelation, I guess the destruction of Gog is before the ruine of Antichrist, though perhaps not long; and thereupon will follow that great commotion, Revel. 19. 19. And as for the destruction of the Temple after Gog in Ezekiel, whether you think it to have any reference to new Jerusalem, I know not.

As for your former mystery concerning Gog; I find it evident, that if Lactantius were now alive, in all likelihood he would go hand and foot into your opinion. He is clear for the reservation of some Gentes untouched of the fire at Christ's coming. This lately I met withal, not in Lactantius himself, but in Sixtus Senensis.

As for the peopling of the new world, I find more in this Letter of yours than formerly I have been acquainted with. Your conceit thereabouts, if I have any judgment, is grave and ponderous; and the particular you touch upon, of Satan's wisdom imitating the wisdom of God, doth affect me with admiration. And for matter of fact, the grounds you go upon, for ought I see, are as good as the world can afford. I think it a far safer course to entertain your apprehensions of God's Providence concerning our better Plantations in those parts, than the vain prognostications of those who think that likeliest which pleaseth them best. Were it not for Christians that live amongst them, they could neither have notice of the glory of new Jerusalem, nor ever in all likelihood attain either to the Art of Ship-building and Navigation, or Art military, to fit them for such an Expedition as you speak of. And it may serve as a chamber to hide many of God's children, till the indignation pass over, which hastens upon us more and more. Call that which you write Fancies, as your modesty suggests; I cannot but entertain them as sage conceits.

As for the place alledged by our Saviour to prove the Resurrection, [God is not the God of the dead, but of the living] long ago my brains were exercised to make it good, which I did in a Philosophical way; from the Immortality of Souls concluding the Resurrection of their Bodies, from that Philosophical Maxim, Nihil violentum perpetuum; and consequently the dividing of the Soul from the Body not to continue for ever. I then thought not of the mystery of God concerning the First Resurrection, and that of the Just only. And albeit some thoughts do arise against your way therein, upon consideration that glorified Bodies stand in no need of inheritance temporal; and undoubtedly the eating and drinking of Saints in their Resurrection shall be rather to maintain a familiar communion with the * Nations that escape, who are to walk in their light, than to supply any domestical necessity of their natures; yet howsoever, the land of Canaan being the place where they shall reign as Kings, and the promise of God so express to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, not to their seed only; and albeit the state of Grace was a better inheritance than the land of Canaan, yet the state of Glory, reigning with Christ, better than that: this makes me highly to respect your interpretation. And you back your interpretation with learned Observations out of the Rab- bins: and the good use you make of them makes me the more in love with them; and I am sorry I have not spent more time in them; and it stirs me up sometimes to recreate my self in the Venice Bibles set forth by Buxtorfius, wherein I have been not a little re- freshed with what they write of Balaam's prophecy, and upon Gog in Ezechiel, and how they strain their wits upon that, [Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time?] R. Solomofetching it from Eldad and Medad, which made me smile; and Kimchi referring it to Ezechiel only and Zachary: and upon that, Matth. 8. 11. and the like. One Mr. — in Lincolnshire doth vehemently insist for your way, as I have heard from my Lord S. to whom I have lately written pleasantly, touching upon his counsels for advancing the Plantations of the West, and telling him, that his Lordship little thinks that they tend to the promoting of the kingdom of Gog and Magog. For that noble Lord gives me leave to be merry with him; nothing pleaseth him more than when he finds me free from a dejected Spirit. In his next he gave a touch only thereupon, which was this, that surely the Ame- ricans were not Gog and Magog. In my text I shewed him they could not be the same with Gog of the land of Magog in Ezechiel (which was his opinion;) that Gog coming from the North, but these from the East, West, North and South, the four corners of the world. But withal I told his Lordship, he was not as yet idoneus Auditor of this mystery; he must first be a good Proficient in an inferior Form, where is read and studied the mystery of Regnum Christi & Sanctorum and the First Resurrection. Upon this he wrote a larger Letter opposing the conceit (I touched upon) of Gog and Magog, though the Millennium of Christ's Kingdom were granted; yet not a little against that also. I answered his Letter punctually; but when I had done, I kept that by me, and wrote at large to him concern- ing Regnum Christi, professing my desire he might not be unacquainted with the Mystery of God, Revel. 10. 7. according to the true contents thereof, Revel. 11. 15. and so pro- ceeded to shew unto him what a Mystery it seemed to me at the first, and how incredible; though that Revel. 20. 4. was plain enough; but we were willing to project some recondite meaning, because the plain sense of the words seemed incredible. When I came to under- stand your way, what course I took to crave leave to propose my Reasons, in number * ten, to send unto you, these I sent to him without any answer; which yet he shall have, if he re- quire it; not otherwise, for I do not affect to cramme any man against his appetite. I know he is much taken with Mr. Brightman.

in the writing.

As touching my Objection; I know that 1 Cor. 15. Every man in his own order, is more fair for your way than that I proposed; and to contract it to that which immediately followeth, seems to me to insatuate it; especially you having so fairly confirmed it out of Daniel, and the Ancients stand with you herein. Undoubtedly the enjoying of Christ's God- head is more happiness than the enjoying of his Manhood; and the same joy in enjoying Christ the Lord* can maintain in the spirits perfected: And why should it be any discom- fort to me, that Christ in his Manhood is gone to ruine Antichrist, and to reign with his Saints, and that I must stay till my turn comes to reign with him?

I have written to Mr. B. in answer to his Letter, wherein he made relation of where- abouts he had written to you, and what you answered him; whereupon I took occasion to write unto him, and to acquaint him with the Præcognita you speak of.

In one of your former Letters, you told me of a Chappel-exercise you had to communi- cate unto me, when I returned that of Gog and Magog; which truly I had forgotten in my last to entreat: but since perusing your Letters, and lighting upon it, I resolved the next time I wrote to put you in mind of your promise: which whether it be the same you have wrote of concerning Dan. 11. I know not. — I could not neglect to write unto you with the first, to acquaint you with my receipt of yours, which came to my hands Apr. 4. and to give you many thanks for your love and pains, which I shall never requite save with love; if that may be a requital, as your acceptance may make it. I commend you from my heart to the Grace of God, and your studies as mine own to the Divine benediction, and rest extreamly obliged,

Post-script.

A strange Book came lately to my hands of the variation of the longitude of places on earth by the variation of the Compass, which was formerly supposed to be invariable. That which 54 years since was found to be deg. 11, 22 years agoe was found to be but deg. 7, and the last year but deg. 4. Dr. L. my neighbour desires to be remembred unto you: He told me a story of Mr. Selden, what he delivered to my Lord Herbert concerning you, as namely that you took it unkindly that he would not believe that a Trumpet signified a thousand years. I made answer on your behalf as I thought good.

EPISTLE LI.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Dr. Twisse's Fifth Letter, expressing the great Candour and Freedom of his spirit as to differences in Opinions, and how little affected he was with the report of Mr. Selden's Censure of his Book. An Answer to an Exception concerning the State of the Millennial felicity in Seculo futuro. A Vindication of Lactantius and others from the calumnies of some Antichiliassts. The reason why Hierom was afraid to mention Justin Martyr where he speaks of the ancient Chiliassts.

SIR,

SOME business that calls upon me will make me be short at this time. That which I called a Chappel-exercise, was a diverse thing from this I last offered to send you; namely a little thing for understanding S. Paul's allegation out of Psal. 8. Hebr. 2. concerning the exaltation of the nature of Man, to which God hath subjected τὴν οἰκουμένην τὴν μέλλουσαν. This last is a large Discourse upon 1 Tim. 4. delivered first at several times by way of Common-places (as we call them) in the Colledge and in certain Sermons at S. Mary's; but at what time my Notions in the *Apocalyp*s were yet but raw, and the Mystery of the Millenary Kingdom not understood. So you will find in it many things not consentaneous to my present notions, and some other things that my maturer thoughts could now correct or wipe out. Well, whatsoever they be, I send you them both. The little one hath another conceit annexed to it, which I was not so well aware of, viz. of Zipporah's circumcising. I would fain, but could not tell how to separate it from the other, unless I should write it out anew, which I had rather than undergo, hazard (as you see) the imputation of Vanity.

For Mr. Selden; he is a Gentleman by whose Writings I have learned much, and make no slight esteem of; but otherwise utterly unknown unto me. I never saw him in my life, nor heme; nor was there ever any intercourse between us, by letter, word, message, or otherwise. Nor did I ever hear any Censure of his concerning my Book, or any particular therein, till now; much less replied to any such thing reported to me, or took it unkindly, as you say he told my Lord Herbert. Surely it was but some scheme of discourse that passed from some body gratis, when my Book was discoursed of: But the author of that scheme was more deceived in me than he could have been in any man else. There are, I think, few men living who are less troubled to see others differ in opinion from them than I am (whether it be a Vice or Vertue, I know not:) So far is it from me to take it unkindly that I should not be believed in a Paradox. If any man can patiently suffer me to differ from him, it nothing affects me how much or how little they differ from me: Which disposition so much the more encreaseth in me, as I take dayly liberty to examine either mine own former persuasions or other mens opinions. But if I should go on, I should perhaps discover too much my indifferency this way. Let it pass.

I am no niggard according to my ability to impart what I know; but it is where I find some appetite (as you say;) otherwise my familiarist friends, some of them, are as ignorant of my Notions as any stranger: For if they discover no stomach, I use not to examine them, no not to offer them: and it would be in vain, Pauci enim invitati discunt.

'Tis

'Tis true that Glorified bodies have no need of inheritance temporal for their maintenance and nourishment; but for their mansion and habitation they have need of a place of abode. The Creatures upon earth were not all made, no not the most of them, for mans eating and drinking; but for his glorifying the Wisdom, Goodness and Power of his Creator in the contemplation of them. Such a use is not unbefitting the Sons of the Resurrection. And what use should many of them have had but this, if Man had continued in the Integrity of his first Creation? Like scruples will arise in a mans mind concerning the State of Beatitude in the heavenly mansions; as, What should a glorified Soul do there with a Body and bodily Senses? What Objects are there to entertain them? Some body, and, if I am not much deceived, our Mr. Perkins, somewhere in his Works (I had thought in his Aurea Armilla, but now cannot find it in the English, nor have I the Latin Copy) moving a question, To what use the Renovated Earth after the Last Judgment should serve; answers, For the solace of the glorified Saints, who should sometimes live in Heaven and sometimes on Earth; alledging for this conceit that in Apocal. 5. 10. Thou hast made us unto our God Kings and Priests, and we shall reign on earth. Were it not more agreeable to Reason to affirm, That, seeing Man consists of two parts, a Body and a Soul, each shall have his preeminence in order, in respect of the Place of Beatitude; first the Body on Earth, then the Soul in Heaven; Earth seeming more suitable for the entertainment of the one, and Heaven for the other, yet so as both of them shall be for ever undivided, as in being, so in bliss and fruition of God? The creature hath been ever since the Fall of Man subject to Vanity and the bondage of corruption; that which was made at first to glorify its Creator under the dominion of Man, being abused to sin, and made the instrument to dishonour him that made it. Under which bondage (to which it is unwillingly subject) it even groaneth and travelleth in pain, expecting one day to be delivered therefrom into the glorious liberty of the children of God. Shall there never then be a Time in which the Creature shall serve and be used to the end for which it was first made, namely, to serve to set forth the Wisdom, Power and Goodness of its Maker, and that too under the dominion of Man, in such a degree and manner as hath never yet been, nor is easy by us yet to be conceived? I say again, The Creature may serve Man for a more noble and divine use than for eating and drinking, though I am not able to comprehend and decipher it. Think what the use of so many Creatures should have been to Man in Paradise, when as yet there was no Commission given to eat flesh, nor had Man need of clothing. Should not Man then first have enjoy'd his happiness in Paradise and on Earth, and after a time have been translated into Heaven? Shall not the Soul come down to receive its Body on Earth? If so, what absurdity is it, that it may stay a while with it * here, and entertain it self together with it in that beginning of Felicity which the Instauration of the Creature may afford them?

Rom. 8.

* For how should a man interpret that Parable, Luke 19. 11. and so forward, with satisfaction, and other like passages? as Matth. 19. 28. Heb. 11. 8. &c. and that a little before quoted Apocal. 5. 10. And how little footing will be found in the Old Test. of the Life to come, unless we go this way to work?

* Apocal. 10. 2 Thess. 1. 10.

There are many Tenets among the Fathers and Schoolmen, Concerning the Day of Judgment and State of the Resurrection, which most men receive without question. Bring them together with that I represent unto the Lydius lapis of the Scripture, and try which of the two hath most easy footing therein.

S. Peter tells us, Acts 3. 21. of an Ἀποκατάστασις πάντων at the Second coming of Christ, foretold by the mouth of all the holy Prophets since the world began. Try whether you can shew any such thing in the Prophets, according to your manner of exposition.

S. John tells us of a * Mystery of God to be yet finished which he had declared to his servants the Prophets. Try how well this will be found, according as some interpret them.

But I never meant to have gone thus deep, when I put pen to paper. Now therefore I end with my best respect, and prayers to Almighty God to make us capable of that Felicity he hath prepared for such as look for the Coming of the Lord Jesus, when he shall come to be glorified in his Saints, and to be admired in all them that believe. So I rest Christ's Coll. April 18. 1635.

Yours to command,
J. Mede.

In that passage of Lactantius you mention, you may please to observe how wrongfully the ancient Chiliasists, and Lactantius by name, are charged to hold. That the Saints which rise from the dead shall marry and get children; whereas he expressly affirms it of those only qui erunt in corporibus vivi when Christ cometh. Nor did any of of the rest, I mean of the Fathers, Justin, Irenæus, Melito, &c. think otherwise. You may observe also that Hierom in so many passages (wherein he names the Fathers that were Chiliasists) doth never mention Justin Martyr, being afraid, it seems, of the Antiquity and Authority of the man.

N. B.

I conceive the measuring of the Temple in Ezekiel to have reference to the time of the New Jerusalem; but how to expound it I know not: And no marvel; for I have read some-body of our Writers affirming it was never yet understood by any man what it meant, nor could easily be divined.

EPISTLE LII.

This that follows is under the Author's own hand, and was enclosed (its likely) in some short Letter to Dr. Twisse. What the Letter contain'd appears not, it being not to be found among the MSS. But the Discourse contains some Testimonies concerning the Kingdom of Christ: The first taken out of the Form of Ecclesiastical Doctrine set forth by the First Council of Nice; The other taken out of a Catechism set forth in K. Edward the Sixth his Reign.

I.

THAT great Council of Nice called by Constantine, besides their Definition of Faith and Canons Ecclesiastical, set forth certain Διατυπώσεις Εκκλησιαστικάς, that is, Forms of Ecclesiastical Doctrine, according to which all Teachers in the Church were to frame their Discourse and direct their opinions. Some of these Διατυπώσεις or Formula doctrine Ecclesiasticæ are recorded by Gelasius Cyzicenus in his Historia Actorum Concilii Niceni. Amongst these there is this Formula for the Doctrine of the State of the Resurrection.

Μικρότερον δὲ κόσμον ἐγένετο διὰ τὴν πρὸ γένωσιν· πρὸ γένω γὰρ ὁ Θεὸς ὅτι ἀμαρτήσῃ ὁ ἄνθρωπος· διὰ τὸ καὶ νέος ἕρως καὶ καὶ νὴν γῆν προσδοκῶμεν, κατὰ τὰ ἱερὰ γεγραμματα, φαινομένης ἡμῖν τῆς ἐμφανείας καὶ βασιλείας τοῦ μεγάλου Θεοῦ καὶ Σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ καὶ παραλήφοιτα τότε, κατὰ φησι Δανιὴλ, τὴν βασιλείαν, &c. i. e. Minutior (i. vilior seu imperfectior) factus est Mundus propter præcognitionem: præviderat enim Deus peccaturum esse hominem. Idcirco novos cælos & novam terram expectamus, juxta Sacras literas, quando illuxerit Apparitio & Regnum magni Dei & Salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi: Et tunc (ut ait <sup>a</sup> Daniel) accipient Regnum Sancti Altissimi. Et erit terra pura, sancta, terra viventium & non mortuorum, (quam oculis fidei prævidens David, clamat, <sup>b</sup> Credo videre bona Domini in terra viventium) & terra mansuetorum & humilium. Beati enim (c inquit) mites, quoniam ipsi possidebunt terram: Et <sup>d</sup> Propheta, & calcabunt ipsam (ait pedes mansuetorum & humilium.

1. Judge by this (notwithstanding 50 years opposition) how powerful the Chiliastical party yet was at the time of that Council. By some of whom if this Formula were not framed and composed, yet was it thus moderated as you see, that both parties might accept it, salvâ cuique interpretatione suâ, as being delivered in the Terms and Language of Scripture.

2. Judge secondly, whether in my Explication of the Millennium I have not kept within the compass of this Διατύπωσις, and not swerved one jot therefrom.

II.

What do you think the Author of the Catechism set forth in K. Edward's time (and by him authorized 20. May in the last year of his reign) meant, when he explicates the two first Petitions of the Lord's Prayer in this manner? The Dialogue is between Magister and Auditor.

Sanctificetur Nomen tuum.

Adhuc non est occisus Antichristus: quò fit ut nos desideremus & precemur, ut id tandem aliquando contingat & impleatur; utque solus Christus regnet cum suis Sanctis, secundum divinas promissiones; * utque vivat & dominetur in mundo, juxta Sancti Evangelii decreta, non autem juxta traditiones & leges hominum & voluntatem Tyrannorum mundi.*

M. Faxit Deus, ut Regnum ejus adveniat quàm citissimè.

I have the Book by me, and have had long. But I suppose it is known but to a few. In Foxe's Martyrologie you shall find in the examination of Master Philpot, that the Bishops, when they came, brought the Catechism with them; but what special relation it had to him, I know not, nor is ought there mentioned about it.

The Kings Letters before it begin thus.

EPISTLE LIII.

Dr. Twisse's Sixth Letter to Mr. Mede, desiring him to perfect his Comment upon the Apocalyps, and to communicate what Notions he had concerning the Temple in Ezekiel, as also upon some obscure passages in Dan. 11.

S I R,

The Sixth (as also the seventh) Letter of Dr. Twisse's are not entirely to be found among the Mss. but only some pieces of them: there was in the first Edition some confusion in the printing of them.

* Dan. 11. 45.

* Verf. 44.

— Your love and your worth makes me zealous of your name, and so shall I ever be. And I willingly profess I never expected so rational Discourses in the explanation of passages so mysterious. We are commonly taken with pretty fictions and imaginations, the ground whereof when we come to examine, we find no solidity to fasten on. O that my desires were worthy to be considered by you, that you would be pleased in your private studies to go on to perfect that you have begun upon the Revelation! To my thinking, by considering your Specimina thereon, the three next Chapters, viz. 15, 16, 17. would be soon perfected. The touch you give me about repairing of the Temple in Ezekiel doth exceedingly content me, though I am perswaded you have some Notions, general at least, concerning many passages therein-----In the eleventh of Daniel, that which you apply unto the Turk, I had thought belonged to Antichrist: and the * last verse, of planting his Tabernacles between the seas, seems to me fairly to set forth Rome and the Throne of the Beast therein. And as touching the * tidings from the East and North, that troublesome body, if it be the Turk that is troubled, have you not some propension to apply it to the Jews, after their conversion to Christ? Thus I make that saying good, Garrat amor & benevolentia, and one thing more, a desire to sound you-----

EPISTLE LIV.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Dr. Twisse's Sixth Letter, containing some Testimonies touching Regnum Christi and the New Jerusalem, out of Tertullian and K. Edward's Catechism; with some general hints concerning Ezekiel's Vision of the measuring of the Temple, and an Explication of Dan. 11. 44, 45.

SIR,

I Am not unwilling to communicate unto you the most of my tiew, because, I perceive, you make some account of them. For in the Un. where I live, I know not a second man that understands any thing concerning such Mysteries, nor desires to be made acquainted with them. I speak not of the Mystery of the Millennium only, but of the Mystery of Iniquity. Concerning which I cannot but exceedingly admire how uncapable men (otherwise extraordinarily qualified with gifts, and well-affected too) are found to be-----Condemn me not therefore too much, if my edge be not so sharp in this way as you desire it should be. But let this pass. You shall receive herewith the * Prophecie of Tobie in a paper by it self. And I will add in this two other. The one, the authority of Tertullian for the applying of Ezekiel's Temple to the New Jerusalem; the other, another passage yet out of K. Edward's Catechism, which I had not time to transcribe in my last.

* which I desire you to send back, when you return my other papers.

Tertullian. lib. 3. adversus Marcionem c. 24.

*Nam & confitemur in Terra nobis Regnum repromissum, sed ante Cælum, sed alio statu; utpote post resurrectionem in Mille annos, in Civitate divini operis Hierusalem cælo delata? quam & Apostolus Matrem nostram sursum designat, & πολιτεία nostrum, id est, municipatum, in cælis esse pronuntians, alicui utique cælesti Civitati eam deputat. Hanc & Ezekiel novit, & Apostolus Joannes vidit-----Hanc dicimus excipiendis resurrectione Sanctis, & resovendis omnium bonorum, utique spiritualium, copiâ, in compensationem eorum quæ in seculo vel despeximus vel amisimus, à Deo prospectam. Siquidem & justum & Deo dignum, illic quoque exultare famulos ejus, ubi sunt afflicti in nomine ipsius. Hæc ratio Regni * cælestis. Post cujus Mille annos, intra quam ætatem concluditur Sanctorum resurrectio, pro meritis maturius vel tardius resurgentium, tunc & mundi destructione & Judicii conflagratione commissâ, demutati in atomo in Angelicam substantiam (scilicet per illud incorruptelæ superindumentum) transferemur in cæleste Regnum-----*

N. B.

* Sic vocat quod in terris futurum esset, utpote de cælo sive cælestis, vel in quo cælesti & Angeli à vivetur vitâ.

In this latter, for the time of the World's Conflagration and its destruction, Tertullian differs from the rest, I am sure from Irenæus; unless by Judicii conflagratio he means that of Gog and Magog, Apoc. 20. 9. But I think he doth * not.

M. Finem mundi Scriptura sacra consummationem & perfectionem Regni ac Mysteriorum Christi, & Renovationem rerum omnium appellat. Sic loquitur Apostolus Petrus 2 Ep. cap. 3. Nos cælos novos & terram novam expectamus, juxta promissionem Dei, in quibus justitia inhabitat. Videtur autem rationi consentaneum, ut corruptio, mutabilitas & peccatum (quibus subicitur totus mundus) aliquando cessarent. Quâ verò tandem viâ aut quibus circumstantiarum rationibus ista fient, cupio abs te audire.

Aud. Dicam, ut possum, eodem apostolo teste: Cæli procellæ in morem transibunt, elementa æstuantia solventur, terræque & quæ in ea sunt opera exurentur. Quasi diceret, Mundus (uti in auro fieri videmus) totus igne repurgabitur, atque ad ultimam suam perfectionem reducetur, quem minor ille mundus, nimirum homo, imitatus, à corruptione itidem & mutatione liberabitur. Itaque hominis causâ (in cujus gratiam major hic mundus creabatur primum) renovatus tandem, faciem induet multò eum jucundior, tum pulchriorem.

M. Deinde autem quid superest?

Aud. Ultimum & generale Judicium. Veniet namque Christus, ad cujus vocem mortui omnes resurgent, & animâ & corpore integri, atque in throno Majestatis suæ resistentem dentem videbit totus mundus : post excussione[m] autem conscientie cujusque, extrema sententia pronuntiabitur. Tunc temporis filii Dei perfecte possidebunt Regnum illud immortalitatis & eterne vite, quod illis preparatum fuit ante facta fundamenta mundi, & regnabunt cum Christo in aeternum. Impii vero qui non crediderunt abjicientur in ignem aeternum, destinatum diabolo & angelis ejus.

I send you this passage, as I did the former, that you might admire with me what this Author meant; whether such expressions could fall from him by mere chance, or whether they argue not some further notion in this Mystery than was common and ordinary, though those to whom the review and approbation of the Book was committed were not capable to observe it.

CONCERNING Ezekiel's Vision of the measuring of the Temple I have no no Notions, either general or special, worth relation. Only I suspect some Mystery to be in the Numbers, as in the New Jerusalem in the Apocalyps I observe all the Numbers to be 12, or multiplied thereof, with reference, I suppose, to the 12 Apostles. But whether the Number of Ezekiel's measures should have reference, I cannot yet so well comprehend. I have been sometimes tampering that way, and methought they seemed to suit very well with the Name of God יהוה and אלה, the letters whereof are 3 in each, and the Numbers they signifie 1. 5. 6. 10. 30. For these are the Numbers or the Radices of the Numbers of nigh all Ezekiel's measures. Notwithstanding I give my self but little satisfaction in so Cabbalistical a conceit. Yet seeing the measures of the City in Ezekiel (cap. ult. in fine) are diverse from those of S. John in the Apocalyps; if the Cities be the same, the Numbers also must have some identity in a Mystery which they have not in the Letter; one fitted to the time of the Law, the other to the time of the Gospel. But he that can tell me how to unfold this Mystery, shall be my Master.

CONCERNING my application of the * King of the South and the King of the North to the Saracen and Turk, who should plunder the Roman Empire in his latter end; 'tis not my conceit alone, but Mr. Brightman's upon that part of Daniel. And 'tis true, which you guess, that I incline to apply the King of the North's going forth (upon the tidings from the East and the North) in a fury to destroy, and to that purpose to plant the Tabernacles of his palace in the glorious mountain of Holiness, to the Jews return, and the expedition of Gog and Magog into the Holy land. For צבא and צבא, and therefore צבא קדש in this place, is constantly in this Book a description of the Holy land. See chap. 8. 9. and this chap. vers. 16, and 41. The tidings from the East and North may be that of the return of Judah and Israel from those quarters. For Judah was carried captive at the first into the East, and Israel by the Assyrian into the North, (namely in respect of the Holy land) and in those parts the greatest number of each are dispersed at this day. Of the reduction of Israel from the North, see the Prophecies Jer. 16. 14, 15. and chap. 23. 8. also chap. 31. 8.

Or if this tidings from the North may be some other thing, yet that from the East I may have some warrant to apply to the Jews return, from that of the Sixth Vial in the * Apocalyps, where the waters of the great River Euphrates are dried up, to prepare the way of the Kings of the East.

If you can digest this application of the Kings of the South and North to the Saracen and Turk; I will then desire you to consider the notation of the Time when, which (saith the Holy Ghost, v. 40.) should come to pass בעת קץ at the time of the End, that is, of the וְעַתָּה אֵלֶיךָ of the Roman Kingdom; which what they are you will find in my Discourse upon 1 Tim. 4. And to this you may refer that Question of Daniel in the next chap. vers. 6. עַד מָתַי קֵץ הַפְּרָאוֹת How long shall this latter end of wonderful things be? which the Angel answers, For a time, times and a half; referring to his former Vision thereof chap. 7. 25. Of the same Latter times he asketh yet again, vers. 8. incertus & mirabundus, מַה אַחֲרֵית אֵלֶּה Lord! what are these וְעַתָּה אֵלֶיךָ; which our Translation turns but untowardly. And further than this I cannot go in Daniel. The next is all dark. But it may seem the Angel tells the Prophet in those last * Numbers when and how long it should be before this Mystery of the וְעַתָּה אֵלֶיךָ should be understood. For so he intimates both vers. 4. Shut up the words, and seal the Book until the time of the End; and again vers. 9. The words are closed up and sealed till the time of the End-----and then, None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand, vers. 10. Now you know the Mystery of Antichrist, whereon the knowledge of these וְעַתָּה אֵלֶיךָ wholly depends, was not discovered till a good part of them were run out. What if those Numbers (vers. 11, 12.) point out that time, counting from the Prophanation of Epiphanes? But I confess I know not here which way to take. This I intimate was an old Notion, which I can neither satisfy me in, nor yet meet with another better grounded.

Jo. Mede.

[At what time the Author wrote these lines, it seems he had not perfected his thoughts concerning the meaning of these Numbers and the Epocha thereof: but afterwards he wrote an elaborate Discourse expressing his last and more concocted thoughts concerning this Argument: which the Reader may find in Book III. page 717.

EPISTLE LV.

Dr. Twisse's Seventh Letter to Mr. Mede, desiring to know his thoughts touching Genuflexio versus Altare.

Worthy Sir, and my dear Friend,

These are only to give you to understand that your Packet is arrived safely in my hands; your Letters, your Manuscripts, two larger upon 1 Tim. 4. and the other of ὁμοῦ καὶ ἑνός, and a third less. Time will not serve me to express the content I take in them; the satisfaction you give me in your Letters. I am taken with the meditation of the slavery of the Creature, ever since the Fall of Adam in bondage to them that are slaves to sin; and what that bespeaks of better times both for the Creature and for us: the passages of the Form of Doctrine prescribed by the Council of Nice; the Catechism in K. Edward's days; and the rest. And like enough the land of Canaan shall have preeminence above all the rest, when it comes to be the Throne of Christ's Kingdome, like as it was the glory of all Lands when the children of Israel were brought to inherit it.

Your Doctrine of Demons (whereof I have tasted, even to the Answer of the second Objection, Why invocation of Saints should be made choice of to set out Antichrist thereby, as a principal Character of him,) doth so affect me, that withal considering these degenerate times, I could heartily wish you would give way to the printing of it. You know what Spalatensis mentioneth of one of his Prebends, that should profess, if he were sure Angels heard him, he would use that Collect, Angele Dei, qui custos es mei, &c. And who it is that taketh it upon him to have been the man meant, and justifies it. When I read your Discourse of that, Thou shalt have no other Gods before my face, it makes me willing to know what you think of Genuflexio versus Altare, which now grows ripe, and begins to challenge subscription thereto as licita; like as genuflexio at the name of Jesus, as pia ceremonia; and where we shall end I know not. I cannot but take notice, as you wish me, of the vile depravation of the opinion of the Ancients concerning Millennium. For all these I cannot sufficiently give you thanks, and must study how to express my thankfulness. Mr. S. is a man of very good parts, but withal I doubt he hath his vanities as well as other men; for I cannot believe but that Dr. L. related unto me the truth of what he heard-----

The beginning of the week hath been a very busie time with me, and I must make haste, desiring you may understand with the first the safe landing of your precious commodities----- I nothing doubt but the Lord will perfect the good work he hath begun in you and by you; to whose gracious direction I commend all your ways, and shall ever rest

EPISTLE LVI.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Dr. Twisse's Question about Genuflexio versus Altare. His freedom from self-ends in this and all other his opinions.

SIR,

* Upon that Text, Sanctuarium meum reueremini, Levit. 19.30. See Book II. p. 358.

FOR your question about Genuflexio or Adoratio versus Altare, I was in some pause whether to answer to it, or to pass it by in silence. I confess I have not been unacquainted with speculations in things of this nature: they were my eldest thoughts and studies, full twenty years ago, and the argument of my * Concio ad Clerum when I commenced Batchelor of Divinity, and before I was any proficient in the Apocalyps. And it may be I have had so many Notions that way as would have made another man a Dean or a Prebend or something else ere this. But the point of the Pope's being Antichrist, as a dead fly, marred the savour of that ointment. And besides I am no Practitioner nor active, but a Speculator only: But I am afraid there are others as much in fault, which practise before they know. I suppose you have heard something this way, and thence took occasion to move this Question to me; which is the reason I have told you this long tale by way of Preface, lest you might think I had (as some men use to do) made the bent of the Times the rule of my opinions. But if I did so, I should quickly renounce my Tenet of the Apocalyptical Beast, which I know few men here so hardy with us as to profess they believe, yea or would fain do. But alas that I am so ill advised I cannot do with all! And I thank God I never made any thing hitherto the caster of my resolutions but Reason and Evidence, on what side soever the advantage or disadvantage fell. Besides it fell out happily that the Times, when my thoughts were exercised in those Speculations I spake of, were times of better awe than now they are; which preserved me from that immoderation which I see divers now run into, whether out of ignorance or some other distemper I cannot tell. Hæc omnia dixi in antecessum: now I will answer your Question briefly.

1. We must distinguish between Imago, and Locus or signum presentie. To pray or worship toward the First, with respect thereto, is Idolatry; but not toward the Second.

2. The Israelites in the Wilderness bowed and worshipped the Lord toward the Cloud wherein he manifested his presence; in the Temple toward the Ark and the most Holy place as Solium Dei. When they were absent from it (though in a strange Country) yet they turned themselves and spread out their hands toward it when they prayed, as Daniel in Babel. Ergo, to worship toward Locum presentie is no Idolatry: or, if it were, we should commit it as often as we lift up our hands and eyes to Heaven in our prayers, as to the place of God's special Presence: Yet our Saviour taught us to say, Pater noster, qui es in cælis, and to look that way when we prayed.

3. The reason of this difference between Imago, and signum or Locus presentie, in the point of Divine worship is this; 'Tis one thing adhibere creaturam in cultu Dei per modum Objecti, another per modum circumstantie Loci aut Sitûs, or as Instrumentum. The First is Idolatry, for God is a jealous God, and cannot endure that the worship we give to him should look towards any thing as an Object but Himself. But unless the Second be lawful, we must not look toward any created thing when we pray, not to Heaven, nor turn our selves towards the Table where God's blessings are when we say Grace, or the like; not lawful to invoke God in his Temple, not lawful to pray unto him with a Book, not use the Communion-Table as a place to give praise and thanks unto his Name. In all which Res creata adhibetur tantum either as Circumstantia cultûs, ubi & quo-versus, or as Instrumentum quo utimur ad invocandum, (as a Prayer-Book) but not as Objectum cultûs. But an Image, in the nature of the thing, if it be used in Divine worship as an Image, cannot but be used as an Object, that is as a Representation of the thing worshipped. For to look to a thing as it is the Representation of the Object whereto we address our Prayers and Services, what is it else but to make it Objectum mediatum & relativum? I must desire you to supply my meaning where my expression is defective. I should do better coram; by pen 'tis tedious to me.

4. Now

4. Now the ἱερὰ Τεῖπεζα or Altar (for they are but Synonyma's, as I take it) was ever in our Christian Oratories accounted as solium Christi, as being the place where the Mysteries of his Body and Bloud (the Rites of the New Covenant) are exhibited unto us.

5. All the Prayers and Devotions of the Church were there offered unto God, and no where else, for many hundred years, and still are in all the Churches of the Orient, and in the Latin Church their Mattins and Even-song, if of later ages not at it, yet always near and toward it. Desks for reading Prayers is a new device since the Reformation, never in the Church before. Whatsoever was spoken to God, was spoken at the Altar or towards it; whatsoever to the people, out of the Amboor Pulpit and towards them, as Readings, Sermons. Tertul. Exhort. Castit. c. 10. Si spiritus apud se reus sit & conscientia erubescit, quomodo audebit orationem dicere ad Altare? An Altar is nothing else but a Table to call upon God at; whence the Scripture relates so often of Abram and Isaac, that they built Altars where they came, and there called upon the name of the Lord.

So yet among the Lutherans.

6. If it be lawful to invoke and call upon God at and toward the Altar as solium presentie; 'tis as lawful to worship him toward it. The specification of Christian worship is to adore and invoke the Father through Jesus Christ crucified: why should it not then be comely, when we address our selves unto him, to look toward the place where his Passion is commemorated and the Rites thereof exhibited? 'Tis but to represent that by our posture which otherwise we express by our tongue, when we say, Through Jesus Christ our Lord.

7. 'Tis the fashion of all Nations and Religions (and ever was) to use some Reverential gesture when they enter into God's House. Our Saviour, when he sends forth his disciples to preach the Gospel, *Matt. 10. faith, εἰσερχόμενοι εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν ἀσπάζεσθε αὐτήν, when ye enter into an House salute the same, i. e. (as S. Luke relates it, and the Vulgar and some other Copies have in this of Matth.) say, εἰρήνη τῷ οἴκῳ τούτῳ. Agreeable whereto is that Custome now almost only retained amongst a few of the Vulgar to say, when they come into an House, God be here. Why should not some such Rite be comely, when we come into the House of God?*

I am sorry now that I entered at all into this discourse, for I see so many things requisite yet for the understanding thereof, (as of the Nature of Temples and their Holiness, of the Christian Sacrifice so much decantated in the ancient Church, of the Lawfulness of Rites ordained by men, and the like) that it would require a Volume to give satisfaction herein. But you desired but to know what I thought of Genusflexio versùs Altare, and I think I have told you; and you see hereby what a mungrel I am. I know not how you will like it, I know how full of prejudice in these Things most of our Divines are. But I am verily perswaded that the Notions of Antiquity hereabout are so far from being followed, that they are quite forgotten and unknown.

I will neither trouble you nor my self any longer, but commend you to the Divine protection, and so I rest

Your loving Friend,

Joseph Mede.

EPISTLE LVII.

Dr. Twisse's Eighth Letter to Mr. Mede, containing his thankful acknowledgments of Mr. Mede's singular goodness in communicating his Papers, and his high esteem of them, particularly of his Notions upon διδασκαλίας δαιμονίων, &c. as also his Observations upon Mr. Mede's foregoing Letter, what he approved therein, and what he excepted against.

Good Mr. Mede, and my thrice worthy and dear Friend, * See this in page 579.

I Have at length return'd your Manuscripts; both the first and latter concerning διδασκαλίας δαιμονίων, and the smaller one containing two Discourses and the * Prophetia Tobiae expounded in the belly thereof. I am heartily sorry to hear your Labours upon the Revelation, published for the common good, and opening such Mysteries unto the world: have put your self to so much expence, and found so little reward in the world: I protest I cannot think of it without disdain-----I have not spared to profess my indignation thereupon before some good friends of quality, and shall be ready to do as much upon every occasion. But your Reward shall be the greater in Heaven.

My motion was not to put you to any expence or care about the business I wrote of: I nothing doubt but order shall be taken to have it done otherwise, if you would but give way. But I would not in the least respect abuse your kindness, which I account precious as a jewel by doing ought that might occasion any distaste in your self upon any proceedings of mine, or others whereunto I should give any occasion.

Sir, I cannot sufficiently express my obligation unto your self for your singleness in communicating such precious commodities. For διδασκαλίας δαιμονίων, and the construction of it which you make, I am clearly of your mind; and that Genitivus materiae is nothing strange, were there no other incongruity of construction in the Text thereby avoided, which yet there is, and that a foul one. The truth is, the phrase is unquestionably usual, expressed of Things; but being expressed of Persons, we being apt to understand it of Genitivus Efficientis, that use makes the other way seem strange, as I found in Dr. S. Ent so much the more it became the Holy Ghost to express the Mystery of Iniquity in a covert manner; not easily and at first sight to be discovered but in good time, by serious intention and consideration of all circumstances, when the Lord thought it most seasonable to bring it to light. And blessed be God that he hath brought it to light, and that my self have lived to see such Mysteries of iniquity brought to light, and made good by evidence of Scripture, and that πρῶτος testifying so much; and that with such evidence, that I know not where to parallel it with the like, all things considered.

Herein you have satisfied me already, as anon I observe.

Long agoe I have entertained an opinion that you are as exact in the right understanding of Daniel Mysteries as of those in the Revelation. I saw a touch you gave, in a Letter to Dr. Meddus, of the years mentioned in Daniel 12. by way of passing your judgment on some parts of Alstedius his Chronologie: I would you would be pleased to impart unto me what you think of the beginning of those times mentioned in Daniel 12. 11, 12. and what remarkable things fell out at the end of each; the rather because I am promised some notions of Mr. G. your friend thereabouts. I doubt not but you conceive two seasons of the Abomination of desolation, one before our Saviour's coming in the flesh, by Antiochus Epiphanes; another which our Saviour himself points unto, as to be made by the Romans, which yet Baronius saith cannot be meant of that by Titus when he took Jerusalem, because at that time it was too late to be warned of flying thereupon and shifting for themselves.

* See Book I. Discourse 9.
* See Book I. Discourse 14.

Your Chappel-Exercises, 1. that of Psal. 8. * of quelling the enemy and the avenger, 2. the other of * Zipporah's speech, (which I would not for any good you had divided, and kept from me) not only my self but divers others, as Mr. W. of Dorchester and Mr. T. of Salisbury, and others, all of us have been exceedingly taken with them. And it raiseth in me suspicions that you have many conceptions of the like nature, for the clearing of divers divers passages of Holy Scripture, and vindicating them from vulgar and erroneous interpretations; and inflames me with a desire to be partaker of them. I read to them somewhat also of your Mahuzzims, which not only ravished them, but wrung from them a protestation that none but your self could have found that out. But modestie pacifies my importunity, and forbids me to urge you too far, having so extraordinary experience of your freeness this way. All which I have returned with my best care; so I trust they shall arrive safely in your hands.

And now taking your last Letter into my hands, I find how by occasion of tidings from the East and from the North you fall upon this very place of Dan. 12. 11, 12. which you acknowledge to be obscure and dark; yet such light as you meet with you are pleased to communicate, wherein I rest satisfied for the present, and would not have you trouble your self any more for me thereabouts. I have found some working upon Julian's days, when all hope of re-edifying the Temple was taken away; but I find no colour of any Abomination of Desolation committed there, but rather Abomination of Restoration: yet from thence they think may be reckoned a determining of the daily sacrifice. But all along you carry me with you, and where you make a stand, there I make a stand. I pitie (I profess) your neighbours in Cambridge, that make so little use of your labours in searching those precious Mysteries, especially when our selves are fallen upon the latter end of the accomplishment of them.

In answer to my Question, I am glad your resolution was not to pass it over in silence, and that you open your self in such manner. Whereas you conceive I may perhaps have heard something that way you touch upon; truly I never did, but somewhat I have heard another way, which hath made me recount my own fortunes in resemblance unto yours: For sometimes I have been censured for a Puritan, sometimes for a good fellow: My preaching as in opposition to Popery was opportune to undergo the one censure before persons Popishly affected; and my free conversation in the enjoying of my friends (yet I thank God without all scandal) hath exposed me to the other, and that from the same mouths, not judging indifferently, but upon particular, and those unjust, distasts practising to disgrace me. I see your fortunes have not been much unlike; I trust we shall love mutually so much the more.

1. I willingly subscribe to the difference you put between Imago, and Locus or Signum praesentiae.

2. Both your Rule and Instances of worshipping towards Locum praesentiae I approve.

3. The reason of the difference mentioned between the use of a Creature per modum Objecti in Divine worship, and the use of a Creature per modum Circumstantiae, of Place, Posture or Instrument, I find likewise no cause to dislike; the Lord having prescribed the one, not the other, but expressly forbidden it.

4. That ἱεὺς Τεραπεζα or Altar was ever in Christian Oratories accounted as Solium Christi, I profess ingeniously it is a new thing unto me, and most willingly do I communicate unto you my thoughts that have had their course hereupon. That the Sanctuary at first, and Temple afterwards, might well be accounted Solium Dei, I see this ground; because the Sanctuary at first was made by God's appointment, that he might dwell among them; and so the Temple afterwards, and chiefly the Ark there, the Lord being said to dwell between the Cherubins. Now I find not the like ground for the Table of the Lord to be so called. 2. If so, then the Table, where and when these Rites of the New Covenant were first instituted, was to be so accounted as much as any; and that as well in reference to the participation of the Paschal Lamb that went before, as of the Bread and Wine which followed after. 3. And so it seems the Table whereon the Jews did eat the Paschal Lamb was to be so accounted. 4. And why not the Altar for the Burnt-offering also? 5. And are not the Mysteries of Christ's Death, yea and Resurrection too, represented in Baptism, as Prudentius calls it Fontis ara, as Mr. S. observes?

Yet I doubt not of Christ's presence there to the faithful receiver; so he is to every faithful hearer of the Word, and faithful petitioner; God being a Sanctuary unto us in all places wheresoever we come, and accordingly Solium praesentiae ejus & Christi in every place to be found. But as Sacraments are not Sacraments any longer than in the use of them; of the same condition to my thinking for the present should the Lord's Table be conceived. Like as we heard not long since D. B. should preach that Temples were holy only in respect of the holy use of them; and it was thought he should be called in question for it, but he was not. I confess I am no more versed in things of this nature than as some occasional opportunity doth set my thoughts on work. But fearing degenerate times coming on upon us and Superstition to encrease, we may well be the more wary. And we find by experience that albeit when any is urged thereunto, sometimes it is carried only in the style of Genuflexio versus altare; yet in common speech most call it Bowing to the Altar. And a Jesuite sometimes meeting with a Friend of mine (an intelligent Gentleman) at Antwerp, and offering him the kindness of having him to the great Church. after he had shewed him other things, bringing him up to the high Altar, he pulled out the Pyx from behind the Arras, and shewed it him, saying, This is the reason why we bow to the Altar, otherwise (saith he) it were Idolatry.

Artic. 3. Sect.
26. Hosin. de
rium.

5. As for the Prayers and Devotions of the Church there offered unto God, I find nothing amiss therein, if the place be so ordered that it be convenient for the Congregation assembled to hear, as it is fit they should. And I find it alledged out of Jewel against Harding, Altaria apud veteres non semper & ubique in extrema Templorum parte, quam vulgò Chorum vocamus, sed in medio posita fuisse, and divers Testimonies of Antiquity alledged for proof thereof. And therefore that all things may be done to edification, I find it nothing strange that in the Reformation our Fathers in the Church of England, as well as in other Churches, have altered that course, when they found how miserably the Service of God was deformed, Superstition from ancient times first creeping in, and afterwards increasing more and more; and no great matter where Latin Service was performed, when the people understood it not.

6. I make no question but it is lawful to invoke and call upon God at or towards the Altar. But why the Lord's Table, where the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is administred, should be called Solium præsentia more than the Font where Baptism is administred, or the Pulpit where God speaks unto us, I do not yet find sufficient reason to satisfy me. Yet I have heard that one who much furthereth these courses should give us a reason thereof, that Hoc est Corpus meum is more with him than Hoc est Verbum meum. And to my thinking the Table of the Paschal Lamb might as well be called Solium præsentia as the Lord's Table with us.

7. As for the fashion of all Nations and Religions to use some Reverential gestures when they enter into God's House; this openeth a way to a new consideration and inquisition, as Whether Bodily Gesture alone be fit to be urged or practised in entring into God's House; the outward adoration without the inward; the one without the other, being no better than Hypocrisy. Yet these days are full of Formality.

Lastly, Things lawful in themselves become unlawful by accident; as when they are superstitiously practised, though not by our selves, yet by concurring in the same act, we may scandalize by countenancing the Superstition of others.

Thus have I taken liberty to communicate my thoughts unto you, to be censured by you as you think good; my self but upon the present observation of times taking into consideration. And I willingly profess I fear Superstition hereby will creep on in a conceit as if God were better served by worshipping him towards the Altar than otherwise: the contrary whereunto were it publicly professed, I should be the less solicited with such fears. Yet am I nothing sorry, but very glad, that you have entered thus far into this discourse, and for the Notions here mentioned, whereupon I shall willingly confer with other Divines.

For your judgment concerning Ezekiel's Vision so freely communicated, I heartily thank you: That I have your acknowledgment of the obscurity thereof, gives me much content; yet withal your adventures thereupon, which you are pleased to impart, they are as sparks of light unto me shining in a dark place. Your candour throughout works me to think the better of any opinion which you embrace. I profess unto you, you make me more and more happy in all your Speculations. I shall heartily beg at the Throne of grace for God's blessing upon your studies, and that he will be pleased to enlighten you more and more for the opening of these heavenly Mysteries, to the comfort of God's Church in these uncomfortable days. Hereupon comes to my remembrance what I had almost forgotten, though I purposed to mention it with the first. I was not long since resolved to write unto you, to inquire whether the K. of S. proceedings in Germany might not be the accomplishment of the Fourth Vial, and that in these times we are in a preparation to the Fifth, by the slaughtering of the Witnesses, according to that Exposition which you give thereof — sr. N. R. told me moreover that your opinion was, that it should be very Universal — The Lord keep you and bless you. I shall ever remain

Your faithful and respectful true friend much obliged,

Will. Twisse.

EPISTLE LVIII.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Dr. Twisse's Eighth Letter, further explaining himself concerning Holiness of Churches, Altars or Sacred Tables, God's Throne or Place of presence therein, &c. With a Caveat to the Reformed Churches.

SIR,

Concerning the accomplishment of the Fourth Vial, I shall be then better able to judge, when I see what will be the conclusion of these great Commotions now on foot. If they settle so, as thereby some prop shall be taken away which now upholdeth the Beast, or any further way opened to his downfall than yet hath been, then I shall think it is accomplished; otherwise not. For every Vial must be a degree of the Beast's ruine. Ergo id quo non labefactatur status Bestiæ, Phialæ complementum non erit. Let us expect what this new shock to be given to the H. of A. will come to. If they be once heaved out of the Imperial Throne, or their succession interrupted, I shall believe it is done. Their fall, whensoever it happens, will in all likelihood so shake the Beast, as will drive him into a * Καύμα or burning-Fever; the raging Symptomes whereof such as stand in his way are like to feel.

* So Hippocrates sometimes calls a burning-Fever, as also πυρ, otherwise called Καίσιον. Vid. Apoca. 16. 8. 9.

For the other points, of the Holiness of Churches, of Altars or Sacred Tables, of the reverent accommodation in the one at or toward the other; the paths unto them by reason of infrequency and unaccustomedness are so full of checks and impediments, as makes all collation by pen over-tedious and troublesome. For nothing almost can be presupposed by way of Postulatum, but will be questioned. In a discourse ore tenuis I could rid my way a great deal better, with much more speed and ease. But in so much Pen-work as this Argument would require, I am not willing to engage my self; and perhaps 'twould not be opera-pretium. Nevertheless that you might know there is something to be said by way of Answer to your Exceptions, and to give you occasion of further meditation in these things, I thought not good to wave it altogether, till I had let you see a little further into my thoughts and speculations this way before I shut the window. Thus therefore I express them, not following the order of your Letter, but as my mind prompts me.

1. Concerning Holiness of Churches.

THERE is a Threefold Holiness to be found in Scripture, or, if you will, the word Holiness is there used in a Threefold Notion, which I would distinguish thus.

1. Essential Holiness; 2. Holiness of Integrity; and 3. Relative Holiness.

1. Essential Holiness is that whereof God is called Holy; as Sanctus Israelis, i. e. Israelis Deus, juxta illud 1 Sam. 2. 2. Non est sanctus sicut Dominus, neque enim est alius præter te, & non est Deus [צור] sicut Deus noster: For this Holiness is God himself, his Essence, his Divine Majesty, whence all other Holiness is derived, not any inherent Attribute differing from him, as in created subjects.

This was printed at the end of the Remains upon the Apocalypsis, but wanted both the beginning and the latter part of this Letter.

2. Holiness of Integrity is that which the Greeks call ὁσιότης, the Latines sanctimonia, and may be described, A State of Righteousness or of pureness and cleanness from sin. This is that Holiness whereof the Apostle speaks Heb. 12. Without Holiness no man shall see God; and whereof we call such as fear God and eschew evil, Holy men. Of this kind of Holiness nothing is capable but reasonable Creatures, Angels and Men.

3. But there is a third kind of Holiness, Relative Holiness, being nothing but a state of Relation of peculiarity to God-ward, either in respect of Presence, or Propriety and Dominion. 1. Of Presence, when God is peculiarly and in a special manner present; as when he appeared to Moses in the flaming bush, Exod. 3. 5. Exue calceamenta tua de pedibus tuis; locus enim in quo stas terra sancta est. 2. Of Propriety, when a thing being dedicated or consecrated to the Divine Majesty, the propriety thereof becomes so his, as it is no longer ours: For thus to be God's, is to be his in a peculiar manner, and not as other things are: For otherwise it is true, The whole Earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, the world and those that dwell therein. Of this Holiness any thing is capable that is capable of peculiar Relation unto God; Persons, Places, Times and Whence Luke 2. 23. for that in the Law, Whatsoever openeth the Womb is mint, is quoted, Every Male that openeth the Womb shall be called Holy unto the Lord.

Things;

Things; and is that which the Greek properly calls ἱερόν, the Latine Sacrum: whence we say, Loca sacra, Tempora sacra, Persona sacra, Res sacra. Loca sacra, as the place above-said, where God communicated himself to Moses, as Temples and Churches; in which (N. B.) both these relations concur, both of Divine Presence and Divine Propriety: (for it is both God's House, as being dedicated to his Name; and the place also where God is wont to be present with the Sons of men in his Word and Sacraments.) Tempora sacra, as the Lord's Day and other holy and Festival times. Persona sacra, as our Priests and Clergy. Res sacra, any thing besides these which we offer and dedicate unto God. If any shall except that in the Old Testament indeed this Holiness had place, but in the New there is no such thing; I would encounter him thus: If any place under the Gospel may be more peculiarly the place of Divine Presence than every place; if any thing under the Gospel may be more peculiarly God's than every thing; Then hath this kind of Holiness place in the New Testament as well as in the Old: sed verum prius, Ergo.

By this you may judge what I think of D. B. his assertion, That Temples were holy only in the holy use of them. If his meaning be, they are holy no longer than during such use; would he say that Ministers are sacred Persons only whilst they are officiating in preaching, praying and celebrating the Sacraments, and at other times nothing differing from Lay-men? would he say that the Lord's Day is Holy only for the time that Divine Service continues, and no longer? Par enim est ratio. I confess I heard one not long since preach so in our S. Mary's Pulpit, you may guess to what end. But he was not aware that by this assertion he blew up the foundation of his own Tenet, concerning the reverence due to Churches and Altars. Eadem enim est ratio Loci & Temporis sacri; quia utrumque sanctum est, neutrum prophanandum, sed omnino sanctè habendum est, i. e. prout convenit sanctitati. But it is ordinary with men who make passion and studium partium the rule of their Judgments, thus to cut the throats of their own principles.

Here therefore I would desire you to consider and weigh this Proposition, That a Place may be said to be Holy in respect of relation to Divine Presence, not only where God is in such peculiar manner actually present, but where he is wont to be, yea or had wont to be, (therefore Daniel prayed toward Jerusalem, etiam cum jam dirutum & concrematum jaceret Templum, neque Arca fœderis amplius ibi exstaret) yea even there where he hath once been in some illustrious and extraordinary manner. Witness Mount Tabor, which only for the glorious Transfiguration of Christ thereon (having never had any other Divine relation) is by S. Peter, 2 Epist. 1. 18. termed the Holy Mount: This voice (saith he) which came from Heaven, we heard when we were with him ἐν τῷ ὄρει τῷ ἁγίῳ. Be it so, that Sacraments are no longer Sacraments than in the use of them; yet are they Holy as long as they are for that use.

2. Whether ἡ ἁγία τραπέζα may be rightly called Solium Christi.

I expected no scruple at that speech: For if the Holy Table be sedes corporis & sanguinis Christi, why not solium Christi? what is solium but Sedes, nempe Regia? And is not the Body of Christ βασιλικὸν σῶμα; Hence Antiquity called the Holy Table Ἅγιον ἁγίων, and the place where it stood Ἀνάκτορον. The first, in that place you mention for Altars standing in the middle of the Quire. It is in a Panegyrick Oration made at the dedication of a sumptuous and magnificent Church built at Tyre in the days of Constantine, (recorded by Euseb. Hist. Eccl. lib. 10. cap. 4. Editione Græco-lat. p. 282, 283.) the structure and garnishing whereof the Panegyrist there at large describing, and amongst the rest the Seats erected in the Quire for the honour of the Clergy, he adds, καὶ τὸ ἅγιον ἁγίων θυσιαστήριον ἐν μέσῳ θεῖς, [and having placed the most Holy Altar in the midst] ὥς ἂν εἴη τοῖς πολλοῖς ἀβάτα, [that it might not be accessible to the multitude] τοῖς ἀπὸ ξύλου περιέφερατ' ἐ δὲ δίκλῳ, εἰς ἅκρον ἐν τέχνῃ λεπτοργίας ἐξ οὐκνημῶν, ὥς θαυμάσιον τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς παρέχειν ἢ θεῶν, [he compassed it about reticulati operis cancellis ex ligno fabricatis, aded ad summum solertis artificii elaboratis, ut mirabile intuentibus præbeat spectaculum.] That of Ἀνάκτορον, for the place where the Holy Table stood, is to be found in Theod. Histor. Eccles. lib. 5. cap. 17. in that famous story of Theodosius and S. Ambrose, where Theodosius after his absolution coming up into the Ἀνάκτορον, and there staying (after he had offered) to receive the holy Eucharist, (as he used to do at Constantinople, for this was at Milane) S. Ambrose admonisheth him to go out, ὅτι τὰ ἐνδον, ὡ βασιλεῦ, μόνον ἐστὶν ἱερεῦσι βατὰ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀπασιν ἀδυνάτε ἔσται· ἰ. Quoniam interiora ista, ὁ Imperator, solis sunt sacerdotibus pervia; reliquis quis verò omnibus inaccessa, neque tangenda.. These two places I thought not unfit to cite, that it might appear how far the conceit of the Ancients and ours differ in this point.

3. How in the New Testament God or Christ our Lord can be said to have his Throne or place of Presence in our Churches and Oratories, when they are not by Divine (as were the Tabernacle and the Temple in the Old Testament) but Humane appointment, and without any such Symbolum as the Ark there was.

I answer : To erect or set apart a Place for Divine Worship and the exercise of the Rites of Religion is juris nature, and approved by God from the beginning. It began not with that Tabernacle or Temple made by God's special appointment to Moses. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob erected places of Divine Worship (wheresoever they came and pitched their Tents) without any special appointment from God, tantum nimirum ex recepta consuetudine generis humani. Noah built an Altar so soon as he came out of the Ark. Jacob vowed a Place for Divine Worship, by the name of God's House, where he would pay the Tithes of all that God should give him. Moses, Exod. 33. 7. (before the Ark and that glorious Tabernacle were yet made) pitched a Tabernacle for the same purpose without the Camp, whither every one that sought the Lord was to go, and called it אהל מועד the Tabernacle of meeting, viz. of meeting with God, not of Mens meeting together, as we mean when we turn it, Tabernacle of the Congregation : Of which perhaps more * hereafter.

* I must pass it by; but see Exod. 29. 42. & ch. 30. 36. Num. 17. 4. in which God himself gives ratio nominis, The Tabernacle of meeting where I will meet with thee. ¶ Vers. 23. * Vers. 24.

Now for the nature of these Places, we can no where learn it better than from that of the Lord to Moses, Exod. 20. immediately after he had pronounced the Decalogue from Mount Sinai, where premising that || they should not make with him (whom they had seen talking with them from Heaven) Gods of silver and Gods of gold, and that * they should make his Altar (namely, whilst they were there in the Wilderness) of earth, and sacrifice their sacrifices thereon; he adds, In all places where I record my Name, I will come unto thee, and will bless thee. Here is contained the definition of the Place set apart for Divine Worship. 'Tis the Place where God records his Name, and communicates himself to men, to bless them, Exod. 20. 24. בכל המקום אשר אוכיר את-שמי, בכל המקום אשר אכתוב את-שמי, יבא אלך וישבתי, וברכתי. In every place where the Memorial I appoint of my Name shall be; or, In every place set apart for the Memorial of my name. The Memorial of * Note that the LXX perpetually render אהל מועד (the Tabernacle of meeting) ἡ ἀσπίς, the Tabernacle of the Testimony, as it is called in the N.T. and sometimes in the Old, viz. אהל העדות, as the Ark ארון העדות, wherein were the Tables which contained the Articles of the Covenant, and Manna which was the Bread of the Covenant.

God's Name is any token or symbol whereby he * testifies his Covenant, and, as it were, commerceth with Men. And though the Ark were afterward made for this purpose, as the standing Memorial of his Name, (and therefore called The Testimony and the Ark of the Covenant) yet could not that here be specially pointed at, as which yet was not in being, nor any commandment concerning the making thereof yet heard of. And so the words to be taken generally for any; such as were the Sacrifices immediately before mentioned, and the Seat of them the Altar, and therefore may seem to be more particularly referred unto: for that these were Federal Rites whereby the Name of God was remembred and his Covenant testified, may be easily proved; whence that which was burned upon the Altar is so often called The Memorial: See Levit. chap. 24. 7. & c. 2. c. 5. c. 6. And the Son of Sirach tells us, Ecclus. 45. 16. that Aaron was chosen out of all men living to offer sacrifices to the Lord, incense and a sweet savour for a Memorial, to make reconciliation for his People. Add, Ezay 66. 3. Qui recordatur thure, quasi qui benedicat idolo. But I must not stay too long in this. Now I ask, Did not Christ ordain the Holy Eucharist to be the Memorial of his Name in the New Testament? Hoc (saith he) est corpus meum, καὶ τὸ ποιεῖτε εἰς ἡμῶν ἁνάμνησιν. (And there be those that will not stick to say, That Christ is as much present here as the Lord was upon the Mercy-seat between the Cherubims.) Why should not then the Places appointed for the Station of this Memorial under the Gospel have some semblable Sanctity to that where the Name of God was recorded in the Law? And though we be not now tied to one only Place as under the Law, and that God * hears the faithful prayers of his Servants wheresoever they are made unto him (as also he did then;) yet should not the Place of his Memorial be promiscuous and common, but set apart to that sacred purpose.

* So he hears them whensoever they are made; yet is there one day in the week set apart for his solemn worship. Eadem est ratio Temporis & Locis.

You will say, This Christian Memorial is not always there present, as at least some one or other of those in the Law were. I answer: It is enough it is wont to be; as the Chair of Estate loseth not its relation and due respect though the King be not always there.

The Jews report the Ark was set upon a stone placed at the West-end of the most Holy place. See Maimon. apud Ainsworth, in v. 10. chap. 17. Num.

S. Hierome implies as much in that speech of his, Usque ad Apostolicas sumptus ex Veteri Testamento; quod Aaron & filij eius & Leuitæ in Templo fuerant, hoc sibi Episcopi, Presbyteri & Diaconi vendicant in Ecclesia.

there. And remember that the Ark of the Covenant or Testimony was not in Jerusalem when Daniel opened his windows and prayed thitherward; and that it was wanting in the Holy place all the time of the Second Temple, the Seat thereof being only there. You will say, In the Old Testament these things were appointed by Divine law and commanded; but in the New we find no such thing. I answer: In things for which we find no new Rule given in the New Testament, there we are referred to the analogy of the Old: witness the Apostles proofs taken thence for the maintenance of the Ministry, 1 Cor. 9. and the like; and the practice of the Church ab initio in Baptizing Infants, from the analogy of Circumcision; in hallowing every First day of the Week as one in Seven, from the analogy of the Jewish Sabbath. For it is to be seriously considered, That the end of Christ's coming into the world was not to give new Laws, but to fulfil the Law already given, and to preach the Gospel of reconciliation through his Name to those who had transgressed it: Whence we see the Style of the New Testament not any where to carry the form of enacting Laws; but such as are there mentioned, to be mentioned only occasionally by way of allegation, of interpretation, of proof, of exhortation, and not by way of re-enacting.

There comes now very fitly into my mind a passage of Clemens (a Man of the Apostolical Age, whose name (S. Paul says) was written in the Book of Life) in his genuine Epistle ad Corinthios, lately set forth, page 52. Πάντα τάξει ποιῶν ὁφείλομεν ὅσα ὁ θεὸς ἐπιτελεῖν ἐκέλευσεν, Omnia ritè & ordine facere debemus, quæcunque Dominus peragere nos iussit. What doth he command? κατὰ καιρὸν τεταγμένους τὰς τε περισφορὰς καὶ λειτουργίας ἐπιτελεῖν, καὶ ἐκ εἰκῆ ἢ ἀτάκτως ἐκέλευσε γίνεσθαι, ἀλλ' ὡς ἰσχυροῖς καὶ ἐν ὧραις: πῶ τε καὶ διατίκων ἐπιτελεῖν δεῖται, αὐτὸς ὥρῃσε τῇ ὑπερτάτῃ αὐτῷ βουλῇ, i. e. præstitutis temporibus oblationes & liturgias obire; neque enim temere vel inordinate voluit ista fieri, sed statutis temporibus & horis: UBI etiam & A QUIBUS peragi velit, ipse excellissimè suà voluntate definiuit. But where hath the Lord defined these things, unless he hath left us to the analogy of the Old Testament?

4. Concerning the Objection of our Saviour's eating the Passover, and first Institution of the Holy Supper in a Common place, in an Inne.

Against the supposed Sanctity or Dignity to be ascribed to the Holy Table or Altar, as the place where the Memorial of the Body and Blood of Christ is represented, you object the Table and place of the first Institution, which was an ordinary Table and a common Inne; whereby it should seem that the Table whereon it was afterwards to be celebrated should no otherwise be accounted of. First, I answer, It follows not, and that from the parallel of the Institution of the Passover; which though at first it were killed in a private house, and the blood stricken upon the door-posts, yet afterwards it might not be so, but was to be offered in the place which the Lord should chuse (Deut. 16. 5, 6.) to place his Name there; according to the Law given for all Offerings and Sacrifices in general, Deut. 12. à versu 4. ad 14. inclusivè, with a triple inculcation in one continued Series of speech.

This Answer seems to me sufficient for the Objection of the first Institution. But there is one thing more yet to be considered; That there is not the same reason of the Place where the Sacrifice is sanctified or offered and the Place where it is eaten. Every Sacrifice was to be offered and sanctified at the Altar, where the Blood was sprinkled and the Memorial burned; but that done, it was eaten in another place: those which were eaten only by the Priests, in the Chambers of the Temple; those which the people were partakers of, (as the Peace-Offerings,) out of the Temple. Of this nature was the Passover, the Lamb being first to be offered and slain in the Temple, and the Blood sprinkled on the Altar (according unto the Law, Deut. 16. and the practice, 2 Chron. 35. 1, 2, 6, 10, 11.) that done, to be eaten where they would; provided it were in loco mundo, in a clean place.

And thus was the Paschal Lamb, whereof our Saviour ate, prepared and sanctified; yea, by proportion of all other Sacrifices, the Bread and the Wine, whereof the Holy Supper was instituted; for they were the * Minchah or Meat and Drink-offering of the Passover, such as all other Sacrifices had annexed unto them. And to what end else was the Law so strict that they should bring all their Sacrifices and Offerings unto the Place which the Lord should chuse to put his Name there, but that they might be sanctified and hallowed at the Lord's Altar, before they feasted with them? whence perhaps that custom of the ancient Church was derived, to offer the Bread and Wine unto God upon the Holy Table before it was consecrated to be the Body and Blood of Christ,

* That which we usually in our Translation call Meat-offering, might more fully be termed Bread-offering, for such it was; and consider that the Sacrifices being flesh were not eaten without bread and drink, which therefore were concomitants of them.

Christ, because they supposed that at the first institution they had been so offered at the Altar in the Temple. But as the Jews used not to eat their Sacrifices where they offered them; no more did the ancient Christians think themselves bound to eat the Eucharist where it was consecrated; insomuch that they carried it sometimes to their houses, and ordinarily * sent it to those which were absent. And if it be well observed, in the practice of our own Church there is a difference commonly between the place of consecration and the place of eating, though both be in the Church.

Apolog. 2.

True it is, that at the first Institution, though perhaps not the first hallowing of the Bread and Wine for the Passover, yet the consecration thereof to be the Symbols of the Body and Blood of Christ was in a common room, and that out of the necessity of the connexion which the materials thereof had with the viands of the Passover. Yet I suppose not the House to have been of the condition of our Inns, but only for such Sacred entertainments as this was; of which sort Jerusalem must needs have had very many, for the accommodation of such as came to feast before the Lord, as the whole Nation was to do three times in a year.

If all that hath been yet said will not satisfy this Objection, yet I hope what I shall now say will do it fully : What needed there any Altar or Place of relative preference, where the Son of God, the Heavenly Altar and Holy of Holies, was himself present in person ? Is not the Temple of God there where he is ? and what Altar was so holy as his Sacred hands ?

5. Why in the posture of our adoration of the Divine Majesty more respect should be had to the Altar or Holy Table, than either to the Font or Pulpit, seeing they are also Places of God's presence as well as the other.

Suppose they be so; yet when there are many, why should not that which hath the principality draw this respect unto it? A man is present where any part of him is: yet when we salute him, or speak unto him, we are wont to direct our selves unto his Face, as that wherein his presence is most principal and erected; not to his Backer parts, or to his Shoulders, though the organ of hearing be that way. Perhaps it was this principality which that Doctor (or whatsoever he be whom you mention) intended, when he said that Hoc est Corpus meum was more with him than Hoc est Verbum meum.

But I think for my part, first, that the comparison of the Pulpit with the Sacraments and their places is heterogeneal. Secondly, that neither the Pulpit nor the Place of the Sacrament of Baptism are in this point, or for this purpose ( we speak of, ) of the same nature with the Altar.

For it ought to be considered ( though it be a thing now-a-days in a manner quite forgotten ) that the Eucharist ( according to the meaning of the Institution ) is the Rite of our address unto God the Father in the New Testament, wherewith we come before him, to offer unto his Divine Majesty our thanksgivings, supplications and praises in the Name of his Son Jesus Christ crucified for us : that is, It is not only a Sacrament, but, as the ancient Church used to speak, a Sacrifice also. For that sacrifices were Rites whereby they invoked and called upon God, is a Truth, though perhaps not so vulgarly taken notice of, yet undeniable: as on the Gentiles behalf may be seen in Homer in divers places where he describes the manner of offering Sacrifices ; on the Jews behalf by that speech of saul, 1 Sam. 13. 12. when Samuel expostulating with him for having offered a Burnt-offering, I said, saith he, the Philistins will come down upon me to Gilgal, and I have not made supplication to the Lord. I forced my self therefore and offered a Burnt-offering. See also 1 Sam. 7. 8, 9. Ezra 6. 10. Baruch 1. 10, 11. 1 Mac. 12. 11. 2 Chron. 7. 12, & sequentia. Hence of Abraham and Isaac it is said when they built Altars, that there they called upon the name of the Lord ; but Altars were the place for Sacrifice.

In stead therefore of the slaughtering of Beasts, and the Sacrifices offered by fire and incense, whereby they called upon the name of God in the Old Testament, the Fathers and primitive Christians believed that our Saviour ordained this Sacrament of Bread and Wine, as a Rite whereby to give thanks and make supplication to his Father, in his Name, in the New. The mystery of which Rite they took to be this ; That as Christ by presenting his Death and Satisfaction to his Father continually intercedes for us in Heaven ; so the Church on earth semblably approaches the Throne of Grace by representing his Death and Passion to his Father in these holy Mysteries of his Body and Bloud.

Veteres enim (saith Cassander) in hoc mystico Sacrificio non tam peracta semel in Cruce oblationis, (cujus hinc memoria celebratur) quam perpetui Sacerdotii & jugis Sacrificii quod in cælis sempiternus Sacerdos offert, rationem habuerunt; cujus hinc Imago per solennes Ministrorum preces exprimitur.

This that reverend and learned Divine Mr. Perkins (once Fellow of our Society) saw more clearly, or expressed more plainly, than any other Reformed Writer that I have yet seen, in his Demonstrat. Problem. titulo de Sacrificio Missæ. Veteres (inquit) Cenam Domini, seu totam cenam actionem & formulam, vocarunt Sacrificium, tum aliis de causis, tum quia est commemoratio, adeoque representatio Deo Patri, Sacrificii Christi in Cruce immolati. He goes on, Hoc modo (saith he) fideles etiam inter orandum Christum offerunt Deo Patri victimam, dum scilicet mente affectuque ad Sacrificium ejus unicum feruntur, ut Deum sibi habeant faciuntque propitium: that is, What every Christian doth mentally and vocally when he commends his prayer to God the Father, through Jesus Christ, making mention of his Death and Satisfaction, that in the publick and solemn service of the Church was done by that Rite which our Saviour ordained to be used in commemoration of him; in whose death and Passion is founded the New Covenant of God with Men.

For here take notice that all those bloody Sacrifices of the Law were Federal Rites, or Epula federales, as the Eucharist also is; namely, that they were Oblations wherein the Offerer (either by himself or his proxy the Priest) banquetted, or ate and drank, with his God, in token of covenant and reconciliation with him. So that to approach God with this Rite, was to do it by way of commemoration or renewing of a Covenant with him, and as much as to say, Remember thy Covenant; which is the foundation of all Invocation: For what hath Man to do with God, to beg any favour at his hands, unless he be in Covenant with him? Whereby appears the reason why Mankind from the beginning of the world used to make their address unto their God by this Rite of Sacrificing, viz. Ritu federali. And this is that which the Ancient Church did, and supposed our Lord intended they should do, in the holy Eucharist of his Death and Passion; which therefore they called the New or Christian Sacrifice. A definition whereof (as it consists of the Rite and Action both together) may be framed out of those words of Mr. Perkins, An Oblation of Thanksgiving and Prayer to God the Father, through Jesus Christ and his Sacrifice upon the Cross, commemorated and represented in Bread and Wine.

This is a point of great moment and consequent, worthy to be looked farther into by all the Learned of the Reformed Religion; lest whilst we have deservedly abolished that prodigious and blasphemous Sacrifice of the Papists, wherein Christ is again hypostatically offered to his Father, we have not (or but very implicitly and obscurely) reduced that ancient Commemorative Sacrifice of Christians, wherein that one Sacrifice of Christ upon the Cross was continually by that sacred Rite represented and inculcated to his Father, his Father put in mind thereof by those monuments set before him, wherein we also testified our own mindfulness thereof unto his sacred Majesty, that so he would for his sake, according to the tenour of the New Covenant in his Blood, be favourable and propitious unto us miserable Sinners. But to clear this point, and to remove all scruples, objections and prejudices against it, is not for a Letter, but a Volume. This is enough for the end I intended, which was, to shew how the Eucharist is the Sacrament of our address unto God, and therein of a different nature from Baptism, which is not so, but the Rite only of our New Birth, whereby we become the Sons of God, and are admitted to be members of his Church; not the Sacrament whereby we exercise the functions of this new life, in worshipping, invoking and glorifying God our Father through Jesus Christ. These premises considered, the Answer to your demand, Why in the posture of our adoration of the Divine Majesty more respect should be had to the Altar or Holy Table, than either to the Font or Pulpit, is plain and easie; namely, because Adoration is an act of address and of tender of honour unto God, and therefore most fitly to be performed at or toward the place of our address, which is the Altar, whereat anciently as the Sacrament of the Eucharist, so the whole Devotions of the Church were performed and presented to the Divine Majesty. The Pulpit is the place where God speaks to us, not we to him. The Font the place where he reaches his favour unto us, in accepting us to be his Servants; not where, being initiated, we offer our spiritual sacrifice and service to him. You must understand me here to speak according to the ancient manner of the Church.

Whereas you seem to question, Whether the Jews had any such respect unto the Altar of Burnt-offering: I answer, they had; for it was so placed, that when they turned and and worshipped toward the Mercy-seat, they worshipped toward it also; but the denomination of their posture is from the Ark, as the principal memorial of the Divine presence; yet sometimes from the Altar also, as 1 Kings 8. 22, 31. 2 Chron. 6. 12. Vide & 2 Kings 18. 22. cum locis parallelis, 2 Chron. 32. 12. Isai. 36. 7. Also Ecclus. 47. 9. we have Δαβὶδ ἔστησεν ψαλμωδῶς κατάναντι τῇ θυσιάζουσῃ, instead of that which is 1 Chron. 16. 4. ἔταξε κατὰ πρῶτον ἡ κιθάρῃ διαβήκῃ: Κυρίῳ. But the Altar of Incense better befits our Holy Table than the Altar of Burnt-offering, though it may not untruly be affirmed, if rightly taken, that the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ is to us Christians both Arca fœderis, Incensum & Holocaustum, being the commemoration of him who is all these unto us.

AND thus far I have adventured to discover my thoughts in this nice and doubtful argument, presuming upon the experience I have formerly had of your judgment, freedom and ability of discerning, especially of your affection and good opinion of my self. You may guess my thoughts have not been a stranger to things of this nature. You will admire perhaps they were no hinderance to my Apocalyptical Speculations, and how I could so easily, being possessed with such Tenets, believe the Popedom to be the Beast, and Rome the Whore of Babylon; seeing in the apprehension of the most these things accord not well together.

But this seeming incompetibility will soon vanish, if you consider that in all my meditations I make the Apostasy of the Visible Church to consist, not in Judaism, but in Gentilism; the constant character of the Apocalyptical Allegories warranting and first suggesting this conceit, where namely I observed Judaism to bear the Type of the true Church, and Gentilism of the false.

Secondly, Altius hoc animo meo insedit, That the Reformed Churches, out of extreme abomination of Idolatry, have, according to the nature of men, incurred some guilt before God ἀμετρία ἡ ἀβολκῆ, by taking away the distinction almost generally between things Sacred and Profane, and that they shall one day smart for it. But the prejudices hereabout are so great, that I have little hope to persuade others to my opinion: Yet I could say much for it, and if it be well observed, the present Judgments of God upon the Reformation do insinuate some such thing. Let the godly wise consider it. Divine Judgments have usually some brand or stamp upon them, which points at the Sin for which they are inflicted: you may call it a Sin-mark. If the passages and ground of the continuance of this German War be well considered, would not a man think they spake that of the Apostle, Thou that hatest Idols, dost thou commit Sacrilege? But I dare go no further; it may be I have said too much already: For I well know, the way that I go pleaseth neither party; the one loves not the Pope should be Antichrist, nor the other to hear that these things should not be Popery.

Thus you see I have at length brought both ends together, and end where I began. Pardon me this one Letter, and I will trouble you no more with this Theme; your Reply to my short Answer to your Quere occasioned it —

I forget not my best respect unto your self, nor my prayers to the Almighty for blessing to you and yours. Thus I rest

Your assured Friend,

Joseph Mede.

I sent by Mr. B. 4. or 5. Exercises upon passages of Scripture; such as I had in separate papers and fit to be communicated. For those that were in Books joyned with other things, I could not; and some that were apart, for some Reasons, I would not expose to danger of censure. I hope those which I sent are safely arrived with you.

EPISTLE LIX.

Dr. Twisse's Ninth Letter to Mr. Mede, thanking him for his pains in the foregoing Letter, and desiring his resolution of a Doubt concerning the 7 Lamps signifying the 7 Angels in Zach. 4.

* Viz. his Letter of July 21. at what time he was very sick. The Letter contains his thanks for the foregoing large Letter, and also for some other Papers Mr. Mede sent, particularly that about the Sabbath and the Lord's Day, (printed now in Book I. pag. 55.) on which argument he expatiates in that Letter, which need not be printed, there appearing no Answer to it among Mr. Mede's MSS.

* He means Mr. Mede's Discourse on Zach. 4. 10. (printed now in Book I. pag. 40.) and his Objection was this, Do not the Olive trees by the oil which they drop maintain the Lamps? Is surely they maintain not those Seven Angels, they rather maintain us.

I AM somewhat of a more chearful spirit than when I wrote my * last — I have gotten more liberty of spirit to consider your large Discourse, savouring of great Learning, no less Judgment, and a distinctive Apprehension of things of good importance; and that not in my judgment only, but in the judgment of others; though all require serious and further consideration. And for mine own particular, I cannot but reflect upon my self how deeply I am beholden unto you for intrusting me in so liberal a manner with these your Speculations. We can never offend in putting difference between the Holy and Prophane; neither can we offend in presenting our selves too reverently at the Lord's Table. Never was the Mercy-seat so well known in the days of the Old Testament as in these days of the New: We now behold the glory of the Lord with open face; and accordingly our Saviour tells us, the Lord requires the true worshippers should worship him in spirit and in truth, in distinction from worshipping him either at Jerusalem or in the Mount the woman spake of: And in this kind of worship we cannot exceed. But as for outward Gestures, I doubt I shall prove but a Novice as long as I breath; and we affect not to make ostentation of our Devotion in the face of the world, the rather because thereby we draw upon our selves the censure of Hypocrisie; and sometimes if a man lifts up his Eyes, he is censured for a P. and I confess there is no outward Gesture of Devotion which may not be as handsomely performed by as carnal an heart as breaths. I am confident you are far from studia partium; so should we be all, and be ambitious of nothing but of the love and favour of God, and of our conformity unto him in truth and holiness. I heartily thank you for all, and particularly for these Pieces which now I return. I hope they will arrive safely in your hands.

What I wrote the last time I have almost utterly forgotten, saving the clearing of one Objection concerning * the Seven Angels standing before the Throne, represented by the Seven Lamps, which I much desired; it arising from the Text it self, the Lamps being maintained by the Oile which drops from the Two Olive-trees, which are interpreted to be Zorobabel and Jeshua. But I have troubled you so much, that I fear the aspersions of immodesty in troubling you any further: I cannot sufficiently express my thankfulness for that I have already received. I desire ever to be found

EPISTLE LX.

Dr. Twisse's Tenth Letter to Mr. Mede, desiring him to reveal unto him those Pluscula in Zach. chapters 9, 10, 11. which fit not so well Zachary's time as Jeremy's; as also to resolve a Doubt about the 7. Lamps in Zach. 4. with some reflexions upon Mr. Mede's large Letter about Temples and Altars and the Christian Sacrifice.

Worthy Sir,

DO you not miss your * Letter ad Ludovicum de Dieu? And do you not find it strange it is not returned with the rest? I assure you, I took no notice of it till Wednesday last, two days after the last week's Letter I wrote unto you. In every particular it was welcome unto me, as all yours always are. But your || Variae lectiones concerning the Old Testament, and the pregnant evidences thereof which you alledge, do astonish me; and above all, || your adventure to vindicate unto Jeremy his own Prophecy, which so long hath gone under the name of Zachary. I never was acquainted with any better way of reconciliation than that which Beza mentions, of the likeness of abbreviations of each name, which might cause a mistake by the Transcribers. O that you would reveal unto me those Pluscula, which in those three Chapters of Zachary 9, 10, 11. do more agree (as you observe) to the time of Jeremy than to the time of Zachary! Why may you not have a peculiar way also to reconcile the Genealogie in the LXX with that in the Hebrew, where Kainan is found in the one, which is not in the other? Thus I make bold to put you to new trouble; but I presume it is no more trouble to you than the writing; like as that other whereabout I moved you, How the Seven Lamps are maintained by the oil derived from the two Olive-Trees, if by the Seven Lamps are meant the Seven Angels that stand before the Throne of God.

* See this printed in Book III. pag. 569.

|| See Book III. pag. 571. and Book IV. pag. 786.

Yet have I not done with your large Letter concerning Temples and Altars. Since the writing of my last, while I was reading that large Letter of yours to some Divines, who were much taken with admiration at the Learning contained therein in an Argument wherein we had been so little versed, I say in the reading of it, I observed one thing which in all my former readings I took no notice of, and that is in these words; This is a point of great moment and consequent, worthy to be looked into by all the Learned of the Reformed Religion, lest while we have deservedly abolished the prodigious and blasphemous Sacrifice of the Papists, wherein Christ is again hypostatically offered to his Father, we have not (but very implicately and obscurely) reduced that ancient Commemorative Sacrifice of Christians, wherein that one Sacrifice of Christ upon the Cross was continually by that sacred Rite represented and inculcated to his Father; his Father put in mind thereof by those monuments set before him, wherein we testified our own mindfulness thereof to his sacred Majesty, that so he would for his sake, according to the Tenour of the New Covenant in his Blood, be favourable and propitious to us miserable sinners. In which words, upon better and more serious consideration, I observe you acknowledge, 1. A Commemorative Sacrifice of Christians continually performed in ancient times. 2. This hath been miserably corrupted by the Papists, and transformed by the Papists into that Service which is called their Mass in distinction from their Mattins. 3. That Protestants have justly abolished this prodigious and blasphemous Sacrifice of theirs. 4. But they have not done well, in that they have not reduced that ancient Commemorative Sacrifice of Christians, save implicitly and obscurely.

Now in two things I am to seek for the understanding of your meaning. 1. How we have reduced it in that implicate and obscure manner you speak of. 2. How you would have it reduced in conformity to the Ancients; and wherein this Conformity doth consist. I remember what you alledged out of Clemens, of προσφορὰ καὶ λειτουργία, which were to be performed in times prescribed by Analogie to the courses of Devotion commanded in the Old Testament. Now this I guess you deliver not so much in respect unto the Sabbath-Service, as unto the daily Sacrifice of a Lamb every morning. I imagine you would have the celebration of that Service which we call the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper to be daily; but I presume not in a private manner, but in the way of a Communion: but unless it be twice a-day, it is not congruous to the daily Sacrifice which was of a Lamb every evening, as of a Lamb every morning.

morning. And then again I find amongst the Ancients no small difference: For a time it was celebrated in the evening only, at least in some places, and that with some difference: for some celebrated it after they had eaten; some fasted all the day before, that they might come jejuni thereunto. Now I would hear your judgement both of the practice of the Ancients in this particular, wherewith I am not so well acquainted. Our Saviour saith, Do this in remembrance of me: this prescribes nothing concerning the frequency of it. s. Paul adds, This do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me: Where also we find no certain time prescribed. Act. 2. 42. We read that they continued in the Apostles doctrine and fellowship, and breaking of bread, and prayers: here likewise is no signification that this breaking of bread (which I understand of the celebration of that Sacrament) was performed daily. And whereas vers. 46. it is said, that they continued daily with one accord in the Temple, and breaking bread at home did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart; I have conceived it to be spoken of refreshing natural, not sacramental and spiritual. And Act. 20. 7. their meetings for breaking of bread seem to have been restrained to the First day of the week, that being the day of their assembling themselves, as it seems by 1 Cor. 16. 2. And Justin Martyr makes relation of their Christian meetings when the Sunday comes. 2. I would gladly know how far you think fit that custom of the Ancients you speak of (whatsoever it be) should be reduced, and that clearly, not implicitly and obscurely. For I assure you, I am much to seek in the meaning of this; yet I have read in some sort Mornay upon the Mals, and Bishop Morton too, and somewhat in Baronius concerning this. And I am in doubt whether the Papists themselves, were it not for their Doctrine of Transubstantiation, would not be as much to seek herein as we are.

That which you touch concerning the German War, and the Causes of it, and the Signmark, I willingly profess doth make me melancholick; for I cannot but sympathize with them — Yet although, as I understood when I was in the Palatinate, none was more free from such Sacrilegious courses than the Palatine, not only Bishopricks but even Monasteries continuing there of his Ancestors foundation; yet have they suffered as much as any, both first and last, if not much more.

In the close of that large Letter of yours you signifie that you reserve one thing, lest it might undergoe censure; which otherwise you would communicate. Good Sir, you have no cause to distrust my censure. I hear by Mr. B. it is concerning Cornelius, whom you take to have been no Profelyte in any degree; the contrary whereunto supposed in our Divinity-Schools was one of the first things I was acquainted with upon my coming to Oxford; and since I find confessed by Schindler on the root נר in the interpretation of נר. Yet I pray let me see your Discourse thereon, and let me know how you salve it; for I am confident you are no Arminian. The Text acknowledgeth him to be not only ἀγαπῶμεν, but ἐκείνους and one of good report amongst all the Jews; and Act. 11. they that opposed Peter's going to him and his are said to be ἐκ τῶν ἑσπερίων. I heartily desire to know the most and worst that can be said against any Tenet of mine. I shall be no loser by Truth; & Veritas magna est, & prævalebit against all opposition: For that is from God; Error and Falshood is from the Creature. You may see by this I make you a great, if not the greatest, part of my study; especially considering my infirmity at this time, which requires I should rather be lying upon my Bed than either going or sitting up. Your Answer to these particulars, Zachary in two places, the Prophecy of the * fourth Chapter, and that other of the 9, 10, 11. The sight of Cornelius, and your explicating the Practice of the ancient Churches in their continual celebrating of that Commemorative Sacrifice, in distinction from that which we do implicitly and obscurely, will be a great refreshing to my spirit, and consequently may prove some ease to my bodily infirmity also. And I hope I shall trouble you no more, unless it be to excite you to go on upon the Revelation. The Lord give a blessing to all your studies, and in good time perfect them to the consolation of his Church in these sorrowful days of Christendom.

Mr. Mede's Answer about the seven Lamps in the Temple, signifying the seven Archangels; as also about the Plufcula in Zach. 9. 10, 11. with an intimation of his purpose to perfect his Discourse on Dan. 12. 11, 12.

THE seven-lamped Candlestick in the Temple before the Veil signified the * seven Archangels which stand before the presence of God. * See the Discourse about the seven Archangels in Book I. pag. 41.

That in Zachary was but a Vision of that, and chosen there to represent (synecdochicè) the Throne of God's Majesty, the Temple and his Service therein. The two Olive-branches on each side ministring after an unseen and unusual manner Oyl unto those Lamps, figured Zorobabel and Jeshua, the Prince and High Priest, by whom this Throne of presence had and should be first and last re-erected, and together with the service thereat continued and fully established: But this not by armed might and power, but by the secret way of God's Spirit and Providence working with them, and giving success more than credible to their endeavours; even as these Lamps in the Vision were supplied with Oyl from the two Olive-branches, not according to the wonted, but an extraordinary and imperceptible way.

The supplying therefore of Oyl to the Lamps from the two Olive-branches hath no respect or reference to the seven Angels which the Lamps signified, but to the Place pitched for God's presence and service, which the Candlestick in this Vision stood to represent, and so was accordingly accommodated, as the scope of the Vision required; or more briefly thus, The Olive-branches had reference to what the Candlestick stood for in this Vision, not to what it immediately signified in the Temple.

'Tis one thing to set up, maintain, and continue the Type and Symbol which represents; another, the thing thereby represented. Zerubbabel and Jeshua did the one, but not the other; namely, no more than the Priests in their courses in the Temple were wont to do, who were to renew the Lamps every day morning and evening.

Besides, in Types and Parables non oportet quilibet in significationem trahi, because some circumstances may be of decorum, and some of necessity. But

Lastly, If none of these ways be sufficient to discharge this rub by declining it; then say that Zerubbabel and Jeshua in this Vision, in that work of building the Temple of the Lord and of bringing the people out of captivity, were intended for Types of Christ, according to his twofold Office of Kingdom and Priesthood; from whom, when he should be exalted to the Throne of Divine Majesty and sit at the right hand of God, the seven Archangels were to receive their instructions and commissions (i. e. the Oyl wherewith they burn) as from the Head of the Church; and therefore in the Apocalyps are made to be the Eyes and Horns of the * Lamb, that is, Ministers and Instruments of his jurisdiction, both to see and execute; and that this was mystically implied in this Vision of Zachary. For that these two were Types of Christ, it appears; of Jeshua in chap. 3. of this Prophecy, ver. 8, 9. and chap. 6. ver. 11, 12, &c. Of Zerubbabel, (if not by this Vision, yet) by the last of Haggai in the very end; besides that our Saviour descended from his loyns.

* And what if he be the same with the seven eyes in Zach. 3. 9. Dedi coram Jofua lapidem, i. e. dedi ei in successorem Pontificatus, Rogem Pontificem? For מלך signifies in Scripture a King, Samuelis filius tuus, as appears by Gen. 49. 24. (where Ephraim is firstly meant, and Ephraim challenged much from the Prophecy, as appears by their ambition) and by Esa. 28. 16. where the Chaldees for מלך hath מלך, but in Genesis they translate to another sense, out of envy to Ephraim.

Concerning the ninth, tenth and eleventh Chapters of Zachary, and what therein befits not so well his time as Jeremie's.

You press me here to discover my fancy. For the allegations will not be convictive, though of force to incline him who out of that citation in the * Gospel can be pliable to think those Prophecies Jeremie's. For Zachary's no Scripture saith they are, though they are inserted into his volumes. But this proves them no more to be his, than

* Mat. 27. 9. 10

than the like doth Agur's Proverbs to be Solomon's, or all the Psalms in the Psalms-Book to be David's. For as for the Titles in the tops of every page, it matters not: it is a later device. The Jews wrote in Rolls or Volumes, and the Title was but once. If ought were added to the Roll, ob similitudinem argumenti or for some other reason, it had a new Title, as that of Agur; or perhaps sometimes none, but was ἀνωρυμον.

Well then, that which I fanſie or conceive is.

1. That thoſe Prophecies againſt Damaſcus and the Philiftins, chap. 9. would better beſit Jeremie's time, of their deſtruction by Nebuchadnezzar, than (if of Zachary's time) by Alexander. See the Prophecy againſt Damaſcus, Jer. 49. 23. againſt the Philiftins, chap. 47. 2. and Ezek. 25. 15. For where do we find Damaſcus deſtroyed from Zacharie's to our Saviour's time? For to come under the hands of new Maſters, or ſuffer ſome direption or pillaging, doth not ſeem to ſatiſfie the intent of the Prophecy. And for the Philiftins, though it be true that Alexander deſtroyed Gaza, (becauſe it held out long againſt him, and he was wounded there) yet it appears not that any ſuch deſolation befell Aſkelon whereby it ſhould not be inhabited, or Aſhdod; nor ſhould they ſeem in Zacharie's time to have ſo well recovered that Clades by Nebuchadnezzar, as to be a ſubject ripe for a new Prophecy to that purpoſe.

2. That of Tyre in the third verſe of that chapter, That ſhe had built her ſelf a ſtrong hold, and heaped up ſilver as the duſt, and fine gold as the mire of the ſtreets, I doubt whether it ſo well beſits her that had ſo lately been deſtroyed by Nebuchadnezzar. Sure not ſo well as it would the time of Jeremy. See Ezekiel's Prophecies thereabout, chap. 26, 27, 28. Sed tranſeat.

3. That which moves me more than the reſt is in chap. 11. (whence that in the Goſpel is quoted) which contains a Prophecy of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and a deſcription of the wickedneſs of the Inhabitants, for which God would give them to the ſword, and have no more pity upon them. It is expounded of the deſtruction by Titus; but methinks ſuch a Prophecy was nothing ſeaſonable for Zacharie's time, (when the City yet, for a great part, lay in her ruines, and the Temple had not yet recovered hers) nor agreeable to the ſcope of Zacharie's Commiſſion, who together with his colleague Haggai was ſent to encourage the people lately returned from Captivity, to build their Temple and inſtaurate their Commonwealth. Was this a fit time to foretel the deſtruction of both, while they were but yet a building? and by Zachary too, who waſt to encourage them? would not this better beſit the deſolation by Nebuchadnezzar?

I confeſs I am not ſo well ſkilled as to interpret the particulars thereof, ſuppoſing they be of that time. But you ſee now what thoſe Pluſcula are I fanſie not ſo well to fit Zacharie's time as Jeremy's. Valeant quantum valere poſſint.

'Tis certain that Jeremie's Prophecies are digeſted in no order, but only as it ſeems they came to light in the ſcribe's hands. Hence ſometimes all is ended with Zedekiah; then we are brought back to Jehojakim, then to Zedekiah again, &c. Whereby it ſeems they came not to light to be enrolled ſecundum ordinem temporis, nor all together, but as it happened in ſo diſtracted a time. And why might not ſome not be found till the return from Captivity, and be approved by Zachary, and ſo put to his Volume according to the time of their finding and approbation by him, and after that ſome other Prophecies yet added of his?

IF you had not put me out by your laſt Letter, (which I received on Friday Aug. 7.) I was looking into an old Notion concerning our old buſineſs of Antichriſt; a Notion which I had long laid aſide, but upon a late occaſion began to take ſome new liking thereunto, ſeeing ſome good uſe thereof: namely, That the Prophecy of Antichriſt, and the ὡς ἐγγίξει wherein he was to reign, ſhould not be underſtood till many hundreds of years after Chriſt, but remain ſealed till the time appointed, viz. ad ſeculum uſque duodecimum. All this by expreſs prophecy; and that therefore the Authority of the Fathers and their opinion concerning this point is of no validity, howſoever it be now come of late among our ſelves to be a main Objection, That the Pope is not He.

But now I muſt defer it to more leiſure, ſome other buſineſs coming upon me, and I being unfit for above one thing at once.

There was ſomething I wrote to you once about the * proof of the Reſurreſtion out of Mosés, and that Demonſtration of our Saviour in the Goſpel; which I never perceived you found leiſure hitherto ſeriouſly to examine and conſider of: yet may it have ſomething conſiderable.

Thus

The Diſcourſe upon this Notion was ſoon after finiſht by him, as appears by the following Epistle. See the Diſcourſe it ſelf in Book III. pag. 717.

My Sizer being not yet come with a candle, I will transcribe a passage of Eusebius, concerning the Christian Sacrifice, in his De laudibus Constantini. He is magnifying the unparallel'd power of our Saviour testified by the wonderful change he had then wrought in the world; to which purpose with other passages he hath this:

*Quis alius, solo nostro servatore excepto, * coepulonibus suis incruenta & rationalia * sacrificia, precibus & arcanâ theologia peragenda, tradidit? quorum causâ tum * Altaria in toto terrarum orbe constituta, tum Ecclesiarum * dedicationes factæ. * Summaque solique omnium moderatori Deo divina sacrificiorum solâ mente & ratione obsequantur. eundorum ministeria ab omnibus gentibus exhibita: sacrificia verò sanguine, cruore & fumo peragi solita, vi quadam occultâ & invisibili deleta & extincta sunt.*

Dr. Twisse's Eleventh Letter to Mr. Mede, signifying his high esteem of Mr. Mede's Discourse De Numeris Danielis, Chap. 12. 11, 12.

Right dear and my right worthy Friend,

THis day a little before dinner came your * Letter unto me. I have been of late extremely melancholick; your Letters inspire chearfulness into me-----How am I beholden unto you for communicating unto me your Treasures, which I esteem beyond the Treasures of the Queen of Sheba! You have heretofore blessed me with the Mysteries of Dan. 11. now with the Mysteries of Dan. 12. vers. 11, 12. The bare discovery of others Errors I should esteem a Jewel, and a preservative from engaging our selves in erroneous ways, which is worst of all. Better a great deal to content a man's self with Ignorance, so to keep himself entire for the embracing of Truth, when the time of its nativity is come. But you go farther, and from the Text it self discover whereto those <sup>b</sup> Numbers tend, namely, for the discovery of Antichrist; which gives me wondrous content: and all this you crown with admirable accommodation to the Event-----What a gracious God do we serve, that hath so well provided for us in these times and for our consolation so many hundred years ago; and as he hath reserved us for these times of light, so raiseth up some to open these Oracles unto us? What should man be the better for that sweet Dew, Honey I mean, if the Lord had not provided such a Creature as the Bee by natural instinct to seek after it, and gather it for the use of others as well as for themselves? ----- I protest unto you, if I should lie in prison all days of my life, next unto the consolations of God's spirit your Writings would most refresh me: They do always dispel melancholy. I desire no better Preferment than you can perform, and that is to be preferred to acquaintance with your Rarities. I make bold to keep your Discourse till the next week, for I cannot let it pass from me without copying it out. I commend me to your Love, as one of them I hold most dear, and shall ever from my heart desire that God will prosper your courses and studies, and recompense you with himself, to be your Buckler and exceeding great Reward-----I rest

Mr. Estwick's Letter to Mr. Mede, touching the Millennium.

S I R,
 Touching the Opinion of the Millenaries, it was not yet my hap to light of a Book to inform me: You shall find me to be a teachable Scholar: only this Mora Resurrectionis seems to be confuted in divers places of the Scripture, where it is said, The dead shall be raised at the sound of the last Trump; All they that are Christ's, at his coming, (1 Cor. 15. 23.) in a moment, vers. 52. and the coming of the Son of man. See Matt. 24. 39. and, excepting one place, I think the Resurrection is said to be of good and bad together. How these and the like Scriptures are to be expounded agreeably to the doctrine of the Millenaries I would willingly know.

EPISTLE LXIV.

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Estwick, vindicating Lactantius about the Millennium, and proving Cyprian to be for the same Opinion; with some reflections upon Jerom's want of Candour and Faithfulness in relating the opinion of his adversaries.

This Letter of Mr. Mede's is in answer to some other Letter of Mr. E. not to the foregoing Letter, the Answer to which is not yet come to our hands. It is to the like Doubts propounded by others, what Mr. Mede answered may be seen in his Epistola ad Amicum, Book III. page 571. and in Book IV. Epistle 22. and Epistle 66. Sect. 6.

Mr. Estwick,

YOU would bring me to express my self de modo, before you were persuaded de re. But soft you there, I like not that Method.

S. Jerom is a man of no faith with me, when he describes the opinion of his Adversary: which whatsoever it were, he would set it forth as odiously as possible could be. He was a man that cared not what he said, so it might disparage his Adversary: This appears sufficiently in the cases of Vigilantius and Jovinian. Yea but he lived at the same time. Ans. So do we with those we differ from, and yet we see the experience daily, that scarce any one will relate the opinion of his Adversary candidly.

Yea but I cannot deny that Lactantius was for ciborum abundantia, gulaque ac ventris ingluviis, & ea qua sub ventre sunt. But what if I can? The words of Lactantius are only these, Lib. 7. cap. 24. Tunc, inquit, qui crunt in corporibus vivi (he speaks of those who shall be living at Christ's Second coming) non morientur, sed per eosdem mille annos infinitam multitudinem generabunt, & erit soboles eorum sancta & Deo chara. Qui autem ad inferis suscitabuntur, (that is, those who shall rise from the dead Resurrectione prima) ii præerunt viventibus tanquam Judices. You see he puts a difference between those who shall be then living and those who shall rise from the dead. The last shall live vitam cælestem & Angelicam, even on earth, without marrying or giving in marriage; but not the first. He saies indeed the one shall generate; but of the other only, that præerunt viventibus tanquam Judices; and presently in the words following describes that Regnum to be the Mille anni cælestis Imperii in quo Justitia in orbe regnabit. But of gormundizing, ingluviis & gula, I find no word, unless you think it must needs follow upon the taking away the curse of the creature, and the restitution thereof to the perfection it lost through mans sin. For Lactantius means no more, but that such as then lived should live the life that Adam should have done in Paradise, had he not sinned: but those that should then rise from the dead should live in a far more Heavenly and Angelical condition, even the life of the Blessed Spirits in Heaven. But S. Jerom is wont to relate the opinion, as if those who rose again should generate, and give themselves to feasting and gormundizing.

Besides,

Besides, you say S. Austin intimates that some held some such carnal Beatitude. I answer; So he intimates that some did not, and that himself was once of that opinion, and that to hold so was tolerable; Quæ opinio esset utcumque tolerabilis, si aliquæ deliciae spirituales in illo sabbato affutura sanctis per Domini (i. Christi) præsentiam crederentur. Nam nos etiam hoc opinati fuimus aliquando. De Civit. Dei, Lib. 20. c. 7.

But where can I shew Cyprian to be a Chiliaist? You see it is tedious to answer a Question in writing, which may be asked in a few words. Yet I will say something: I say therefore, he shews himself plainly a Chiliaist (to such as know the mystery of that Opinion) Lib. de Exhortatione Martyrii. In the Preface whereof he speaks thus; Desiderasti, Fortunate charissime, ut quoniam persecutionum & pressurarum pondus incumbit, & in fine atque consummatione mundi Antichristi tempus infestum appropinquare nunc cæpit, ad præparandas & corroborandas Fratrum mentes de divinis Scripturis hortamenta componerem, quibus milites Christi ad cæleste & spiritale certamen animarem — paulò post — Sex millia annorum jam penè complentur — Si imperatum invenerit Diabolus militem Christi, &c.

But he that, as you see, expected the coming of Antichrist should be at the end of the sixth thousand year, which he supposed then near at hand, yet thought the world should last 7000. viz. a thousand years after the destruction of Antichrist, ut patet ex iis quæ differit cap. 11. in these words, Quid verò in Maccabæis septem fratres & natalium pariter & virtutum sorte consimiles, septenarium numerum perfectæ consummationis implentes? Sic Septem fratres in Martyrio coherentes, ut primi in dispositione divina Septem dies, annorum Septem millia continentes — ut consummatio legitima compleatur, &c. This to him that knows Chiliaism is plain Chiliaism. Look and compare your Austin, cap. 7. lib. 20. de Civit. Dei, from those words, Qui propter hæc hujus Libri verba primam Resurrectionem, &c. Compare also what Cyprian hath in the end of that Book out of the Gospel, Mark 10. 29, 30. and Apocalyps 20. and you will acknowledge him to be (as he was wont to profess himself) Tertulliani Discipulum.

But I must not follow you too far in this kind of answering: 'tis tedious. I send you some more Papers, and so with my love, I rest

Yours,

EPISTLE LXV.

Dr. Twisse's Twelfth Letter to Mr. Mede, containing Seven Quære's, relating partly to Jewish and Christian Antiquities, and partly to some difficult places of Scripture.

Worthy Sir,

I Have been a stranger from you too long; I come now to renew my acquaintance. I presume you are acquainted with Dr. Heylin's Book of the History of the Sabbath. Do you know the Author whom he opposeth about the Precepts of Noah, for making the Commandment of the Sabbath one of them, though he name him not? Yet the question is not whether it be one of them, but whether not comprehended under one of them. But he allegeth Rambam to the contrary out of Ainsworth. I have read enough in Cocceius to discredit Rambam, and I pray let me know whether Aben Ezra upon Exod. 20. on those words [the stranger within thy gates] doth not maintain that it was one of them, coupling it with that of * Nakedness and Shedding of Blood. And though you doubted whether Solomon Jarchi on Gen. 26. 5. did deliver that which he doth of שניית two of them as out of his own opinion: yet Dr. Heylin confesseth that Abulenſis and Mercerus testifie that the Rabbins upon that place are of opinion that Abram kept the sabbath.

* 2 of the 7
Precepts of Noah. See Book
I. page 19.

I pray, what think you both of his and Dr. White's opinion concerning Synagogues, that the Jews had none before the Captivity, and their Inference thereupon, That the Sabbath was nowhere observed (save in the Temple) by any publick congregation but only in private? Dr. Andrews was of another opinion, as hath been shewed me in some Notes of his; and his ground in my judgment is fair, Levit. 23. 3. The Seventh day is a Sabbath of rest, an holy Convocation—it is the Sabbath of the Lord in all your dwellings. The holy Convocation here mentioned seems to be in reference to all their dwellings: whereas the other Feasts and holy Convocations belonging thereto were to be celebrated at Jerusalem. But I have not yet consulted any Rabbines about this.
the

Then, I pray, What think you of Dr. Heylin saying, That Evening-prayer on the Lord's-day is but a late invention? Yet I find it in the Jewish Synagogue and Nocturnæ after Vespertinæ; like as I find the like in one of Austin's Epistles de Tempore: and in Cassian it appears that the Sabbath-Solemnity was not ended until the time of their Evening-repast corporal-----

Doth your plough stand still in the Revelation and such like passages of a mysterious nature? I hope it doth not.

Is not that Matth. 25. spoken of the last period of the Day of Judgment? It seems it is; for the Resurrection is general both of Sheep and Goats; yet to the Sheep it is said, Receive the Kingdom, Shall they receive a Kingdom when Christ resigns his unto his Father? and in Heaven it seems there are none for them to reign over. Or is it a Figure of speech, representing the glory of that State when God becomes all in all, by the greatest glory that we are acquainted with, which is the glory of a Kingdom?

I pray, what think you of that in Esa. 66. 23. From Sabbath to Sabbath shall all flesh come to worship before me? Shall not the Observation of our Christian Sabbath continue, after Christ's coming with his Saints, amongst the Nations that are saved from that Deluge of fire (though it be Irenæus his phrase, yet I learnt it from you) wherewith the Earth and all the works thereof shall be burnt up? And if it be urged that by the same reason the Festivities of the New-moons shall have their place in Christ's Kingdom as well as Sabbaths, and by consequence the Ceremonies of the Jews be restored: I answer, it followeth not; the words may be rendred, From month to month, as the Geneva doth. If we read it, From New-moon, &c. with our last English, yet it is not necessary to understand it of any peculiar Festivity denoted thereby, least of all Jewish. And we Christians in Cathedrals, Colleges and great Towns have our Monthly Communions all the year over.

And seeing I am upon it, what think you of Matth. 24. 20. Pray that your flight be not in the Winter nor on the Sabbath-day? We know Dr. Andrews B. of Winchester as well as Mr. Dod apply it to our Christian Sabbath: And to my judgment it is a strange fiction to apply it to unconverted Jews, that our Saviour should stir them up to pray, who scorned the Gospel whereby alone we come acquainted with such an Admonition, and certainly scorned Christ's Instructions: and how can we think that God would hear the prayers of such? and was it fit that our Saviour should lay such a ground for the countenancing of their prayers, yea and their Jewish Sabbath too?

And now truly, Sir, there is no Book that I desire to study more than your self. I have found great freeness and acceptance with you hitherto, I hope I shall do so still. I heartily desire God's blessing upon your person and studies, as upon my self and mine. I shall ever rest

EPISTLE LXVI.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Dr. Twisse's 7 Quære's, viz. about the antiquity of Synagogues among Jews the and of Even-song in the Christian Church, as also about the meaning of some difficult places of Scripture, viz. Matth. 24. 20. Matth. 25. 31, &c. Isa. 66. 23, &c.

SIR,

I Turned over the leaves both of the Bishop's and D. Heylin's Book, when they came newly out, that I might see their Principles and the way they went: further I am not acquainted with them; because I took no pleasure neither in their Conclusions nor their Grounds, which, if they be urged, would overthrow a great deal more than they are aware of.

1. If there be any such Author the Dr. opposeth for affirming the Sabbath to have been comprehended under one of the 7 Commandments of the Sons of Noah, I suppose it is Godwyn in his Moses and Aaron, Lib. 1. cap. 3.

2. That of Aben Ezra upon Exod. 20. 10. seems to me to be very evident for that Opinion. For though it be as much as I can do to understand a piece of Rabbinism, yet methinks this passage, if it be translated, will sound thus; Ecce non dubium est quin dictio [אָהָה Tu] comprehendit unumquemque qui est filius precepti. Idcirco בְּנֵי יִצְחָק Filius tuus & Filia tua sunt parvuli quorum requies est super te, tibi que incumbit officium custodiendi eos, ne quicquam faciant quod tibi vetitum sit. Similiter de עֲבָדֶיךָ וַאֲמָתֶיךָ Servo tuo & Ancillâ tuâ: quoniam in potestate tua est, tui est officii custodire eum, neque sinere eum ut serviat alteri. Sin minus, tu transgredieris preceptum לֹא תַעֲשֶׂה Non facies; quod eo spectat ut quiescat Servus tuus & Ancilla tua perinde ut tu ipse; sicut exposuit Moyses Dominus noster viâ quam commemoravi. Et secundum hunc Doctorem וּבְשַׁעֲרֶיךָ נִרְאֶה Peregrinus qui est intra portas tuas, quod non facturum sit opus in Die Sabbati neque in Die Expiationum. Propterea scriptum est secundo Peregrinus. Similiter atque de precepto Nuditatis, cum secundum hunc Doctorem vovebit quod custoditurum sit preceptum Nuditatis; eodemque modo de Comestione sanguinis. This Dominus Moses he here cites, I take to be Rabbi Moses Haddarschan, who lived an hundred years before him, and was Master to R. Solomon Jarchi. Maimonides, whom Ainsworth cites for the contrary opinion, and Aben Ezra, were both of an age and contemporaries.

It may be confirmed out of the Acts, where the Sadducees, who were of the order of those Proselytes of the Gate, are found to frequent the Synagogues diligently every Sabbath day, as the Jews did Acts 13. vers. 14, 42, 43. & ch. 17. vers. 1, 4, 17. & ch. 16. 13, 14. & ch. 18. 4.

3. For Synagogues, I am inclined to believe they were before the Captivity, and not first taken up there, as the more common opinion is. But how to evict it against him that shall obstinately maintain the contrary, I confess I know not. That in Act. 15. 21. [Moses ἐν γερουσιᾷ ἀρχαίων hath in every City them that preach him, being read in the Synagogues every Sabbath-day] will not reach so far; yet γερεῖων ἀρχαίων is more than ἡγεμῶν ἀρχαίων. If I should allege that of Psal. 74. 8. They have burnt up all the Synagogues of God in the land; they would say as Junius doth, that this Psalm was composed under the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes: and indeed that which follows [We see not our signs, there is no more any Prophet, neither any among us that knoweth how long] may seem to argue it cannot be meant of that vastation by Nebuchadnezzar; for then there were both Prophets, and those that knew how long. But if this be granted, there will arise another difficulty, viz. That either this Psalm is no Canonical Scripture, or That some part of the Canonical Scripture was written long after Malachy, when there was no Prophet and the רוח הקודש had ceased. And if this, why not the first Book of Maccabees? There remains but yours Lev. 23. 3. which to me hath appearance of probability; but he that were refractory would pick some hole or other, either in the word translated [Convocation] or in [dwellings], especially in the first. See Vulgat. and LXX.

But did not the Levites (shall we think) teach the people out of Jerusalem in the places abroad where they dwelt? And did not the people use to resort to such as could teach them, on Sabbath-days and New-moons? What doth that of the Shunamite argue else, 2 Kings 4. 23? where her husband saith unto her, Wherefore wilt wilt thou go to him (the man of God) to day? It is neither New-moon, nor Sabbath. If this; had they not some place where to resort and assemble?

* 2 Kings, c.4.

In this Rhapsody, Lib. 8. cap. 35. is not only mention, but the Form of Evening Prayer, with the solemn dismissing (at the beginning thereof) of the Catechumeni, &c. as at the Eucharist, ascribed to James the Brother of our Lord in particular. Whence it may seem, according to my former supposition, not to have been common at first to all Churches, but peculiar to that * of Jerusalem, whereof this James was the first Bishop; whence also the Liturgy of that Church (though the greatest part thereof (as now it is) were afterward at several times added) bears the name of S. James his Liturgy.

καὶ τῶν χρημάτων, δ

* Out of conformation to the times of Worship and Prayer in the Jewish Church, whose custome and practice herein gave opportunity and freedom at the beginning to exercise the like in the Christian there residing; yea even sometimes in the chambers of the Temple it self, which were wont to be taken up by Fraternities and Companies coming thither to worship. But this could not be so regularly observed among the Gentiles without much difficulty and danger. Consider Acts 2. 46. with Acts 3. 1. & Ch. 4. 3. For the ninth hour answers our Evening-prayer, and then began the εσπερα with the Jews.

The next Testimony for antiquity is that of the Council of Laodicea, (which, if Baronius his arguments be good, was before the first Council of Nice,) the 17. and 18. Canons whereof are, Quod non oportet in ταῖς συναξέσι Psalmos contexere, sed interjecto inter unumquemque Psalmum spatium Lectionem fieri: The next, Idem ministerium Precum semper & in nonis & vespers fieri debere; Gr. τὴν αὐτὴν λειτουργίαν τῆς οὐρανῶν πάντοτε καὶ ἐν ταῖς ἑορταῖς καὶ ἐν ταῖς ἐσπέραις ὀφείλειν γίνεσθαι. Though I cite both Canons, yet I suppose not the latter to have reference to the former, (for what had the Evening to do with the Synaxis?) but the meaning to be, that one and the same Form of Prayer should be used both at the ninth hour and at the Vespers.

5. Concerning that in Matth. 24. Pray that your flight be not in the Winter, nor on the Sabbath-day, I conceive thus; That the believing and Christian Jews, even the Apostles themselves, were to observe the Rites and Ordinances of Moses (and consequently that of the Sabbath together with the Lord's-day) until their Temple and Politie founded and constituted by God himself should be actually and fully dissolved. And do we not find they did so? yea even S. Paul himself, who was so great a Vindex of the liberty of the believing Gentiles, that they should be tied no farther than the Σεβόμενοι or Proselytes of the Gate were. Therefore Acts 21. it is accounted a slander or calumnie which was reported of S. Paul, that he should teach the Jews which were among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, and that they ought not to circumcise their children nor walk after the customs. For neither he nor any other of the Apostles taught that the Jews should do so, either abroad among the Gentiles, or at home in Judaea. For the Gentiles indeed they did, and S. Paul (whose charge they were) more zealously than the rest, that they should have no such imposed upon them, according to the decree of the Synod, Acts 15. Consider it with that Story Acts 21. à vers. 20. & deinceps. This therefore being to be the condition of the believing Jews when their City should be compassed with an Army by Cestius Gallus, (at which time they were admonished to flee (to save themselves) with all speed into the mountains of Petræa, as soon as Cestius by withdrawing a little his Army should give them that liberty) our Saviour saith here, Pray that your flight be not on the Sabbath-day. For he speaks not of any flight to be when the City should be taken, or when it should be once besieged by Titus; for both would be too late; but of a warning be-leaguering to precede it.

6. Concerning that in Matth. 25. when our Blessed Saviour shall sit upon his Throne of Royalty to judge the world; I conceive a Figure to be in that expression of placing the sheep on his right hand and the Goats on the left, borrowed from the custome of the Jews in their Tribunals, to place such as were to be absolved on the right hand, where stood the Scribe who took the Votes for Absolution; and those who were to receive the Sentence of Condemnation, on the left hand, where stood the Scribe which took the Votes for Condemnation. Such a custom of theirs Drusus in his Notes upon that place observes out of Moses de Kotzi. That therefore nothing else is meant thereby, but that our Saviour should distinguish the world of men into two Orders; one of such as should receive the Sentence of bliss and Absolution, the other of such as should receive the Sentence of Condemnation. That he should first pronounce the Sentence of Absolution upon such as are to be absolved; and that once finished, then to pronounce the Sentence of Condemnation upon such as are to be condemned.

This Sixth Section, containing the description of the great Judgement accorded with Apocal. 20. was in the former edition of Mr. Mede's Epistles printed at the end of his First Letter to Dr. Medley.

Now I suppose the Sentence of Absolution shall continue all the time of the First Resurrection, that is, all the Thousand years long; that, that once ended and finished, (and not before) he shall then proceed to pronounce the Sentence of Condemnation upon such as are to be condemned. For so the Text saith, that he shall in the first place pronounce the Sentence of bliss and Absolution upon those who are to be absolved; and that done, then come to the Sentence of Condemnation upon those who shall be in statu & ordine damnandorum: that is, successively and not at one and the same time; * though the Scripture here mentions not the Intervallum which shall be between the beginning of the one and the other. Thus you see, although my plough stand still, unless sometimes it jogs me, yet then I am not unwilling to listen unto it.

7. To that in the end of Esay 66. of Festivities in the Kingdom of Christ, I answer, I see no reason why the Lord's-day should not be a celebrated Day when the Lord reigneth. Yet I think the expression there is accommodated to the condition and Diurnial of the Church under the Old Testament ad captum Auditorum; and no more thereby to be understood, but that in that New world not the Jews alone, as then did, but all the Nations should come before the Lord to worship him in the frequent Festivities then to be, whatsoever they should be.

Thus I have, as well as I could, answered your Sabbatical number of Quæres; if not so largely and fully as you desired, it is because there were too many of them for the narrowness of my mind to intend at one time — Thus therefore with my Prayers to the Almighty for the continuance of his blessing and favour to you and yours, I rest

EPISTLE LXVII.

Mr. Mede's Second Letter to Mr. Estwick, touching the Gothick Liturgy, and the time when the Goths became Christians.

SIR,

The former part of this, (as also of the following Letter) contains matter either of News or of private concern.

— THE Gothick Missal is that which the Goths in Spain used till they received the Roman; which though, as all other Liturgies, it be to be supposed to have received many alterations and additions in time, yet no doubt may retain some ancient passages, whereof these Prayers pro defunctis may be some, either received from the Spanish or African Christians, or from the beginning of their Christianity, which was before Chiliasm was condemned by Damasus, or they plundered the Roman Empire. For Theophilus Gothorum Episcopus was at the Council of Nice. Anno 360. Ulphilus their Bishop at a Council at Constantinople assented to the Formula Ariminensis, from whence the Goths became first infected with Arrianism. S. Augustine de Civitate Dei useth this argument of the Goths Christianity, against the Gentiles calumny. That the Ruine of the Empire was for their rejecting their ancient Gods and receiving the Christian Religion. For they were Christians that took and sacked Rome, saith he, and not Gentiles. Vide—

Thus with my wonted affection and prayers I rest

Your assured Friend,

EPISTLE LXVIII.

Mr. Mede's Third Letter to Mr. Estwick, more fully treating of the Gothick Liturgy and a Clause therein of Praying for the Dead to have part in the First Resurrection; with a Passage in Methodius touching the Millennium.

Mr. Estwick,

— THE body of the Gothish Nation, or of one part thereof, had received the Christian Faith before they plundered the Roman Empire; as appeared by Alaricus himself, who with his Army solemnly observed the Christian Rites. Yet seems this to have been between the days of Constantine and Julian, and not elder. Howsoever, there is no question but there were many Churches among them before, as was in other Nations long before the Faith was publicly received by them. If so, then without doubt when the Nation publicly received the Faith, they received likewise that Form of Liturgy which had formerly been used in their Countrey by those of the Christian Rite amongst them. And thence might remain those passages of Praying for the Dead to have part in Resurrectione Prima. Irenaeus Lib. 1. cap. 3. edit. Fevardent. Καὶ ἡ αἰ κατὰ τὸν κόσμον διὰ λεκτοὶ ἀνόμοιοι, ἀλλ' ἡ δύναμις τῆς παραδόσεως μία καὶ ἡ αὐτὴ καὶ ἔτε αἱ ἐν Γερμανίαις ἰδρυμέναι ἐκκλησίαι ἄλλως πεπιτεύκασιν ἢ ἄλλως παραδεδόσιν, &c. Tertullian Lib. adv. Judaeos, where he tells us that Britannorum inaccessa Romanis loca were Christo subdita, says moreover, that In Sarmatarum & Dacorum & Germanorum & Scytharum & abditarum multarum Gentium & Insularum nobis ignotarum locis, Christi Nomen, qui jam venit, regnat, &c. Why may not the Goths be comprehended under some of these? As for the Vandals and the rest of those Northern Nations, I find not that they brought any Signs of Christianity with them when they first invaded and seated in the Empire, but were altogether Pagans.

As for that Form of Prayer for the Dead, Ut partem haberent in Resurrectione Prima, I believe it was usual in those Formulae for the Dead till Chiliasm was cried cried down, and then expunged: namely, that it followed those words (which appear yet in most of those Forms) Ut collocet eorum animas Deus in sinu abrahe, unde abest dolor & suspirium, as it does in this Gothic Missal. Whence it is that now in those Forms there appears no Prayer at all for their Resurrection or Consummation then; notwithstanding that in the Protasis they compellate God with Qui hominem mundi civem mortalem in constitutione sua fecisti, & promisti ei Resurrectionem. Who can believe that in such Prayers they should not at all pray for the Resurrection? But that passage being it seems anciently specificated to Resurrectio Prima, they thought it sufficient in after-times to omit it, without substitution of any other for it: And hence comes that silence of the Resurrection.

But that you may yet see my thoughts still now and then reflect upon that Speculation, (which you thought I had forgotten) I will give you a passage of Methodius Olympi Lyciæ, deinde Tyri Episcopus, and a Martyr sub Decio, (alii sub Valeriano); which passage, with a good part of his Dialogue de Resurrectione contra Originem, is preserved by Epiphanius Hæres. 74. There Proclus (cui tribuit longuendi partes) speaks in this manner.

*Et verò * conturbatam iri Creaturam, velut in conflagratione ista morituram, ut restitueretur; non tamen extinctum iri expectandum: Ut in instaurato Mundo ipsimet instaurati ac doloris expertes habitemus; juxta illud Psal. 103. Emitte spiritum tuum & creabuntur, & renovabis faciem terræ. Quod nimirum ambientem Aerem temperatissimum deinceps facturum sit Deus. Cum enim μετὰ τῶν τὸν αἰῶνα Terra adhuc perseveratura sit; habitatores in ea futuros omnino necesse est, qui nec morituri sunt amplius, neq; copulandi nuptiis, aut procreandæ soboli operam daturi; sed Angelorum more ἀμετασβεστος in immortalitatis statu * optima facturi. Proindeque stultum est, Quanam vitæ ratione usura sunt corpora (in Resurrectione) querere, si nec Aer, neque Terra, neque quicquam ceterorum sit amplius futurum.* * τὰ ἐκ τῆς
κτιστῶν.

Whether do you not think this man to have been a *Chilias*t? But no man desires to be acquainted with Notions that way; wherefore then should I go about to cram them? I think scarce any of you of my acquaintance knows the tenth part of my adventures that way. I can be content to satisfy my self without troubling others, unless I see them seriously desirous to be informed. But no man I find loves any Speculations but such as he thinks will advance his profitable ends, or advantage his Side or Faction. Mundus amat decipi. But there will be a time one day, when God thinks fit.

EPISTLE LXIX.

Mr. Mede's Fourth Letter to Mr. Estwick, (with part of another Letter, the beginning whereof is wanting) in answer to several Enquiries.

1. FOR my Paradox of the American World, I could say that to make it probable, and so much, as would be too tedious to write. For the present I will add this more concerning it, That I believe it was not inhabited in Christ's and his Apostles times, nor some Ages after it; nor are there any vestigia found therein of any elder habitation thereof. I believe it to have been first inhabited since the days of Constantine, when the Devil saw he could no longer reign here without control and the continual affront of the Gospel and Cross of Christ. Then he sought out another World to plant him a Kingdom in, ubi nec Pelopidarum facta neque nomen audiret. Upon this ground may be answered many scruples concerning that World: as, of Noah's Deluge; of the Creatures there, not found here, where Noah's Ark rested; of the Apostles preaching the Gospel, why it was contained within our World, and yet said, * The sound thereof went into the ends of the Earth, &c.

* Rom. 10.

Some of them, you say, are converted. But the New-Englanders have not yet converted one; the Spaniards have, but unto Antichrist, not to Christ; and the Story of their Conversion is such, as may make a man justly suspect there hath scarce yet been ever a true Christian of that race. Yet I speak, in my * Conjectura de Gogo & Magogo, of a General Conversion only, not of a Conversion of some few or of some small and scarce considerable part in regard of the Vastness of the whole.

2. To your Case of Conscience I answer thus. Though the teaching of a School be in some sort reducible to a Sacred Function, as it may be managed and intended; yet for Titius to leave a Pastoral charge for it, when he hath been once dedicated to that Sacred Office, I hold an inexcusable Sacrilege, unless perhaps in a case of Necessity. I would rather therefore advise the continuance of both, than to forsake the one for the other.

2 Chron. 34.

3. For that of the Ark of the Covenant, what do you mean? There is nothing more indubitate in Scripture, than that the Ark was under the wings of the Cherubins in the sanctum sanctorum or most Holy place; as Exod. 26. 33, 34, 1 Kings 8. 6, &c. and Heb. 9. Or do you mean (for I have not the Bishop's Book) that it was not there when Hilkiah found the Book of the Law? That place of the Chronicles indeed (if it be rightly translated) should argue it had been taken thence during Manasseh's prophanation of the Temple, and that, it may be, by the true worshippers, (for what fellowship had the Ark of God with Idols?) and so not restored again to his place till Josiah purged the Temple. Or what if Manasseh himself had caused it to be taken thence when he dedicated the Temple to his Idols, lest it might serve them as it once did Dagon? But Tremellius or Junius turns the place otherwise; and yet methinks somewhat forcedly. Videsis.

See it printed

4. How often is the Resurrection of the Unjust mentioned in the Epistles, either together with that of the Just, or by it self? And where both are mentioned elsewhere, it is not said, they should be together, though they be mentioned together; for there is difference between mentioning and being. As for the * Last Trump, it proves nothing until you define what is the First Trump, yea what Trump is. It is no where said, The Resurrection of the dead shall be in a moment; but that * those who are alive shall be changed in a moment. And what though the Resurrection in respect of each Individuum be in a moment? Yet would it not follow that all that rise shall rise in one and the same moment. To that of the * 25 of Matthew you shall have a sufficient answer when you have made progress enough to understand it. (For out of chap. 24. (which you cite) I see not any thing toward your purpose. For those in ver. 39. are not the dead, but the living; nor is the Resurrection at all mentioned in that Chap. but at the most implied only.) In the mean time I send you the Copie of an * Epistle written once to Mr. Chappel, to satisfy a friend of his who had desired him to know my Answer to certain Quæres and Objections somewhat like those of yours: His Letter being directed to Mr. Chappel, and not to me, I made my Answer accordingly as you see. Keep it clean, and send me it again when you have done with it; and as I see occasion, I may perhaps send you some more of the like Argument.

5. For reading the Service at the Altar, &c. was it not enough to give you the Premises, but I must put the Conclusion into your mouth? I add now, That the Priest or Deacon came down from the Altar to read the Gospel, unto the Ambo or other eminent place where he might be seen and heard of the people. And in such place were all Lessons of Scripture read whosoever read them and not at the Altar. The Altar was the place to speak to God at; the Ambo or Pulpit (or such like place) to speak to the People. Besides those Prayers at the Altar, whereto the People were to say Amen, were read in a high distinct and singing tone, which might be heard and understood at great distance of all the people. That submiss reading in Churches sine cantu, which we use now, was not then in use. If it had, it could never have been heard of half the Congregation in so large Churches, and where some stood so far off, as the Catechumeni, Auditores, Penitentes, who were to be partakers of the Readings and Sermons, and nothing else, and yet stood at the remotest distance from the place both of it and Prayer. I love not to answer to things in Hypothesis, but in Thesi. The world is right on no side. Let them look to the hypothesis whom it concerns. Quo jure ego qui Thesin tantum defendo, ad hypothesin præstandam adigerer?

* viz. The Holy
and Thing.

6. Concerning the * Book written mediately or immediately by the B. of Lincoln; It is written very ably and with much variety of Learning; and where that Coal lay open to the lash, (as it did in some things very foully) he pays him soundly and very magisterially. Yet I may tell you that in the Discourse concerning the Antiquity of the Name Altar, there is parum aut nihil sinceri aut sani: And though his Adversary quoted quoted what he never seems to have read and examined, and is accordingly (and deservedly) met withal; yet are there such strange mistakes, confusions, concealments and wrested interpretations of the Answerer, that he lies open to the lash for that part extremely; insomuch that I believe that part to have been elaborated by another hand, and one that gave more trust to the opinions of some of our Writers than to his own search and judgement—

But whereas the Coal maintained that Altars had generally and anciently stood up against the East-wall, and not in medio tē ayiu βήματι, (which was a monstrous and foul error, as I had often told some of ours here) you shall find him most fully and largely confuted; but the place of Socrates as strangely expounded, as the Coal's illation therefrom was most illogically and weakly deduced.—

Thus with my wonted affection and prayers I rest

Yours,

Christ's College,
March 22. 1637.

EPISTLE LXX.

Dr. Twisse's Thirteenth Letter to Mr. Mede, wherein (after his desire to know his judgment of Mr. Potter's Book touching the Number of the Beast 666) he expostulates with him about certain Ceremonies, &c.

Reverend Sir and my worthy Friend,

HAD I stay'd longer in Cambridge, you had enjoy'd my company longer, or (to speak more properly) I should have desired to enjoy your company longer; and it would be very long ere I should be weary of your discourse. I long to hear your judgment of Mr. Potter's Discourse touching the Number of the Beast 666. I presume also you know Bishop Usher's opinion of Christ's Kingdom here on earth; I would gladly know it, and whether he doth retract his former opinion touching the Binding of Satan, which in his Book De successione Ecclesiæ he conceives to have been in the days of Constantine.

I have returned your Paper, and sent you a Copie of your own concerning * The Four Monarchies, which you call The A B C of Prophecies. I have sent you also Tilenus his Synod of Dort and Arles reduced to practice, with an answer therunto. In Oxford it's counted unanswerable, translated out of French by D. or A. from whom it was spread (as I hear) in O. and at first fathered upon one of them. But it appears by the Dutch copy and Voetius his answer in Dutch, that Tilenus was the Author. At my coming from Cambridge I found 8 Copies of them sent unto me, and 6 of them I have sent amongst you; for truly I never found better content in any friends than there with you, and with your self amongst the rest. O Mr. Mede! I could willingly spend my days in hanging upon your ears, while you discourse of Antichrist and the accommodation of his Legend to the Pope of Rome, and the Whore of Babylon to Rome it self; though my studies have lain far more in their Writings than in our own Divines, and I was never found to dislike any Opinion of a Papist for the Papist's sake who maintains it, as having profited in Divinity more by their Writings than by our own, always excepting Interpretation of Scripture: How much more to hear you discourse of the glorious Kingdom of Christ here on Earth to begin with the ruin of Antichrist? It may be you do not find many Disciples more docile this way than my self.

But I would intreat you to spare me in the point of Ceremonies; in some particulars whereof you told me once in a * Letter you were no Practitioner; but now I fear by that which I find you are a Promoter of them. In Easter-term last I heard-----your good Friend, while he lived, complain not a little of a Sermon of yours which you had then lately preached, and he delivered it with much grief. After Mr. B. wrote unto you of the battel of Armageddon, inquiring whether the time thereof were not already extant, the next Letter I received from him had this passage; "I am verily of Mr. M's Opinion in this, that the times wherein we live are the times for the slaughtering of the Witnesses. Whereupon I compared your Letters, and I found that well it might be by your opinion.

And

* See Epistle

* See Epist.
LVI.

And if it be so, how sorry should I be to observe that you should have an hand in the slaughtering of them? as namely by promoting of such courses and countenancing them, for not conforming whereunto many are like to be slaughtered, that is, according to your interpretation, turned out of their Places — And as for outward complements, nothing more pleaseth a natural man in Religious worship, and he finds himself apt enough for it, yea far more apt than he who, knowing and considering that God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in Spirit, are most careful for the performance thereof; whereupon while their minds are intent, they find themselves not so free for outward complements, the care whereof is apt to cause avocation and disturbance in that Unum necessarium.

You bade me stand up at Gloria Patri, and it was in such a note too, that you had the mastery of me I know not how. I profess I little look'd for such Entertainment at your hands. My Wife's father, Dr. M. was Bishop Billson's Chaplain, and most respected by him of any Chaplain that ever he had, and he a Cathedral-man too; but they could never get him to stand up at Gloria Patri. I living in a Countrey-Auditory am a mere stranger to such Ceremonies; neither do I know any order of our Church urging thereunto; neither do I know when it began and upon what grounds: it may be it was upon their prevailing against the Arrians; and as the Creed is pronounced standing, so and in the same respect this also; all which is duly to be considered before we come to the practice of it. It is true, we were private, and I was loth to offend you. — In like sort, concerning Bowing towards the Altar, for which it was (as I heard) that you preached, I profess unto you I have hitherto received no satisfaction, and I long to hear of my Lord of Armagh's judgment of the passages between us. And therein I perceive the main thing you reached after was a certain Mystery concerning a Sacrifice, which the Papists have miserably transformed, but in your sense is now-a-days become a Mystery to all the Christian world. And hereupon you touched upon the Judgments of God at this time in Christendom, as if it were for the neglect of that Sacrifice; which while I attended, in the issue came only to the Sacrilege of these Times. But whether your meaning were not, That for God to be robbed of such a Sacrifice was a great Sacrilege, I know not. And by Mr. B. I heard, as from your self, the practice of Bishop Andrew's Chappel was that which first cast you upon such a way, so as from thence to observe the course and practice of Antiquity. But in my poor judgment it is very strange that a matter of such importance as you seem to make it should have so little evidence in God's Word and Antiquity, and depend merely upon certain Conjectures. That which you style your Conjectura de Gogo & Magogo, in my poor judgment, is more rational by far; and yet the matter thereof you know to be very strange, but it prevails very much with me — That Declaration of the Palsgrave's Churches, since I came home, I have seen: I remembered your Censure of it as a laxer thing: Others passe other judgments upon it on my knowledge, and those Divines were accounted in those days as grave and learned Divines as most in Christendom. Indeed the matter of Bowing at hearing the name of Jesus is nothing pleasing to some in these times: But how doth B. A. reading in Antiquity serve his turn for that? Cornelius à Lapide is a Papist and a Jesuit: he saith ad nomen Jesu in S. Paul is no more than ad Jesum. I know it is the Father's pleasure, that as we honour the Father, so we should honour the Son, and all the world shall never bring me to shew more reverence at the hearing of the name of Jesus then at the hearing of the name Jehovah; and when we are, as we should be, intent upon our religious comportment before God according to the inward adoration in spirit, that we should watch when a word comes, to perform outward obaisance, in my judgment is very strange. And I remember how faintly Mr. H. carries himself in this; and others, in pleading for it, most of all urge this, that no body is troubled about it: but now more than enough must yield or suffer — I never had experience of the practice till now, and that makes me the bolder to write as I do: Yet what soever we shall be put unto, I am glad that I have such liberty to confer with you thereabouts. I am lately grown acquainted with my Lord of Armagh, being encouraged to write unto his Grace about the matter of the Sabbath; which I willingly apprehended, and acquainted him with all my Grounds whereupon I proceeded: and he justifies them all. I intreated also help in Antiquity about the Notion of a Sabbath given to the Lord's-Day; and he profess unto me, that he never inclined his mind to observe that in all his reading, and added this reason, For he never thought to see such times as these to call into question Whether the Moral Law contains Ten or but Nine Commandments. And Dr. Reynolds being ask'd what he thought of Beza's judgment concerning the Sabbath, made no other answer but this, You know the Commandment. Thus have I made bold to write freely as to my dear friend. I doubt not but whensoever I am put unto it, I shall find you the readier to afford me your best satisfaction; for certainly

I will

EPISTLE LXXI.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Dr. Twisse's several Expostulations; together with his judgment of Mr. Potter's Discourse touching the Number of the Beast, 666.

Worthy Sir,

I Have received yours, and heartily thank you for the Book you sent me, which I find to be no laxe, but a nervous, close and well-composed Discourse, as written by an abler hand than Voetius or any Dutch-man of them all; yea I believe the ablest in that argument now living.

Concerning Mr. Potter's Discourse, before I tell you my opinion, I find I have some things else to answer, and such as press me so hard as I cannot deny them the first place; especially one of them, which complains much of being mistaken: As that I bad you (hearing Prayers in our Master's Closet) to stand up at Gloria Patri. I'll assure you, you were mistaken. My words were, We stand up, or They stand up, (I know not certainly which,) intending only to have you take notice of our manners and fashions; as I did also the night before, when they bowed at the name Jesus in the Creed. I confess indeed when I saw you so suddenly to alter your posture, I had some suspicion lest you misunderstood me, and repented me I had spoken, and thought of it sometimes afterward. Yet mine was but doubting: I would yours had been so too. For why would you suppose me to be so uncivil as to speak unto a stranger and my better in degree in such a rude manner, or note as you call it? Surely in this you were to blame. Nay I do not remember that ever I bad any one, little or great, either to stand up at Gloria Patri, or bow at the name Jesus, or to conform to other the like posture, all days of my life; however my opinion hath been concerning them. The plain truth is, I had a desire to have talked with you about these things, and to have acquainted you with something I had that way; which, now I find your mind so averse, I shall never do. For this end it was that I ever anone put you in mind to observe our postures, and now and then at other times in our discourse touch'd upon something of that kind, to have given occasion of conference about those matters. And the rather I desired it, because I had declared my self so far in my Letters unto you formerly, as I thought might require more to be added to prevent such scruples as might arise from thence. You may remember what hint I gave you in our Gate-house the first night, concerning that place in * Daniel, And he shall think to change * Dan. 7. 25. Times and Laws, and they shall be given into his hand for a time, times and half a time. I would fain have entred with you upon that Scripture, and told you I had some Notion thereabout which some friends of mine had termed Dog and Cummin-seed, &c.

As for my Sermon at S. Marie's, if I could have enjoyed you privately & sine arbitrio, (which I much, but in vain, desired) in all probability you had been (together with some other things) better acquainted with some of the Contents thereof. And as for preaching for Bowing to Altars; if my memory fail me not, the word Altar (unless in citing a place of Scripture) was never mentioned in my whole Discourse. Sure I am, there was no Bowing spoken of, either with respect to it or to the Communion-Table; but only of Bowing in general without any determination. Besides, that which was spoken was done as it were obiter and in few words, without insisting thereupon, and that too with premised caution; and nothing so much by a great deal, nor so punctual, as I had discoursed in the same place * Sixteen years ago in a Concio ad Clerum for my Degree upon another Text.

* See this printed in Book II. pag. 328.

* See this printed in Book
II. pag. 340.

The Text now was that of Solomon, Eccles. 5. * Look to thy feet when thou comest to the House of God; and be more ready to obey (for so I rendred לִשְׁמָע) than to offer the Sacrifice of Fools, &c. The Parts, 1. A Precept of reverent and awful demeanour and accommodation when we come to God's House, in the first words. 2. A Caution, not to prefer the secondary Service of God before the first and principal, in the latter words, Be more ready to obey, &c.

* Exod. 3. 5.
1 Jos. 5. 15.

I discoursed of the Condition of Places dedicated to Divine worship or God's House. 2. What the Ratio was, or wherein consisted the specification of the Divine Presence, when he is said to be in one place more than another. The Precept [Look to thy feet] I understood and interpreted as an Allusion to that Rite of Discalceation used by the Jews and other Nations of the Orient when they came into Sacred Places, and still to this day continued amongst them. Concerning which I produced divers Testimonies; the ancientest that of God to * Moses in the bush, and to || Joshua, together with that Symbole of Pythagoras, Ἀντιόδοτος. δὲ καὶ προσκύνει, Discalceato pede sacrificato, adoratoque, &c. Hence I made the sense of these words of Solomon to be as if we inflecting them to our manners should say, Look unto or Be observant of thy Head when thou comest into the House of God; meaning that he should put off his Hat, and use any other Reverence wont to accompany it as a leading Gesture. For so was this Rite of Discalceation among the Jews, a leading Ceremony to other Reverential guises then used; as the putting off of the Hat (in civil use) is wont to be with us.

Hence I inferred, It was not only lawful, but fit and a Duty commended to us in Scripture, to use some kind of Reverence, yea some Reverential guise and gesture, when we come into God's House. Where after a very few words of the thing in general, in the close I had these words.

[ For, should we come into God's House as we do into a Barn or Stable? It was not good manners once so to come into a man's house. Therefore our Blessed Saviour, when he sent forth his Disciples to preach the Gospel, Matth. 10. would not have them to enter into a man's house without salutation; Εἰσερχόμενοι εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, (saith he) ἀσπάζεσθε αὐτοὺς. When ye enter into a house, salute it. Why should we not think it to be a part of Religious manners to do as much when we come into the house of God? But if any shall ask me here, what other Gesture besides the Uncovering of the Head I would require in this case, because I intimated that (even now) to be a leading Gesture; I answer, This belongs to the discretion of our Superiors and the authority of the Church to appoint, not to me to determine. For here, as in all other Ceremonies, the Church is not tied, but hath liberty to ordain that which she shall think most suitable and agreeable to the time, place and manners of the people where she lives. Yet if I may without offence or presumption utter what I think, then I say, That Adoration or the Bowing of the Body, together with some short Ejaculation, (which the Church of Israel used in her Temple together with Discalceation, and which the Christians of the Orient at this day use in their Churches, and time out of mind have done so) is of all others the most seemly, ready and fitting to our manners; were it once by uniform order and practice established: namely, according to that of Psal. 132. 7. Introibimus in Tabernacula ejus, incurvabimus nos Scabello pedum ejus; or to that of Psal. 5. 7. I will enter into thine House in the multitude of thy mercies; in thy fear will I worship toward thy holy Temple: Which is the Form the Jews use at this day at their ingress into their Synagogues, and so for ought I know might we too. ]

This was the whole passage verbatim as I spake it. Whence I passed immediately to the Second part of my Text, Be more ready to obey, &c. where my chief Observation, wherewith I concluded, was, The Condition of all External Service of God in general, in the eyes of God; which was such as he accepted no otherwise than secundario, namely as issuing from a Heart respectively affected with that Devotion it importeth. That as the Body without the Soul is but a Carcass; so is all Bodily worship wherein the pulse of the Heart's devotion beats not.

Now, Mr. Doctor, what was there in all this that an honest, discreet and moderate man, being so perswaded as I am, might not speak? But you will say, What need had I to say any thing at all? I'll tell you. My opinion in these things was well known to many in the University. Our Pulpit had a long time been inflamed with such Discourses. My obstinate silence, having had more than once opportunity to declare my self, and being studied in these matters, was imputed to me by some to proceed either ex malitioso affectu toward such as furthered these things, or out of too much addition and tenderness to the Puritan faction; which is a crime here, if it be once fastened upon a man, nullo Oceano eluendum. I thought good therefore to declare my self; which yet I did with that caution and tenderness, which might not give any just cause cause of offence to those who were contrary-minded; who yet now I perceive deserved it not, by their over-lavish report of what was spoken.

Besides I observed, both out of Books daily printed and out of such Discourses as I had heard, upon what dangerous Grounds some defended these things; namely such as would in time infer the lawfulness of Image-worship: I thought good therefore in more private Discourses to set them upon safer Principles, and such as might, if it were possible, prevent such an Evil. And in all this why may I not say, What have I done? was there not a cause?

Yeabnt I am a great Practiser and Prosecuter of such ways. Yet for all this I bowed not to the Altar when I came out of S. Marie's Pulpit, as others commonly use to do. I have urged no man at any time to use any of these Ceremonies, nor conformed myself to any of them, till I saw them prevail so generally as I should have been accounted singular. Our own Chappel is very regular, yet was not any thing introduced by me, but others. I confess I had no scruple to follow them; besides I took occasion by my Chappel-exercises to inform them of the nature and grounds of what they practised, lest for want thereof they might cherish some unsafe conceit. And notwithstanding I preached for Bowing (as you say) to Altars, yet I have not hitherto used it myself in our own Chappel, though I see some others do it. If I come into other Chappels where it is generally practised, I love not to be singular where I have no scruple.

But you would not have me have any hand in killing the Witnesses. God forbid I should; I rather endeavour they might not be guilty of their own deaths. And I verily believe the way that many of them go is much more unlikely to save their lives, than mine. I could tell you a great deal here, if I had you privately in my chamber, which I mean not for any mans sake to commit to paper. Siracuse vestra capientur, & in pulvere pingitis?

As for Bowing at the name Jesus, 'tis commanded by our Church. And for my self, I hold it not unlawful to adore my Saviour upon any Cue or hint given. Yet could I never believe it to be the meaning of that place of the * Philippians; nor that it can be inferred thence, otherwise than by way of a general and indefinite consequence. I derive it rather from the Custom of the World in several Religions thus to express some kind of Reverence, when that which they acknowledge for their God is named; as we find the Turks do at this day. Besides I conceive, to do this reverence at the name Jesus only, is proper to the Latine Church, and it may be of later standing. For, if some Greeks have not deceived me, the custom of the Orient is to bow the head not only at the name Jesus, but at the name Christ, and sometimes (though not so frequently) at the name God. And if that were the fashion of the elder Christianity, that out of S. Hierom would sound more to the purpose, Moris est Ecclesiastici Christo genu-flectere. This is all I can say to this point, having had fewer Notions thereabout than about any of the rest.

That the worship of the Inward man is that which God principally requires and looks at, I think no Christian man denies. But what then? Doth not our Saviour's rule hold notwithstanding in such a comparison, * Ταῦτα ἔδει ποιῆσαι, καὶ κεῖνα μὴ ποιῆσαι; And consider that the Question is not here (as most men seem to make it) between Inward worship and Outward worship seorsim, (for in such case it is plain the Outward is nothing worth) but whether the Inward worship together with the Outward may not be more acceptable to God than the Inward alone. As for that so commonly objected Scripture in this question, Of worshipping the Father in spirit and truth, John 4. as the Characteristical difference of the Evangelical worship from the Legal; I believe it hath a far different sense from that it is commonly taken to have, and that the Jews in our Saviour's sense worshipped the Father in spirit and truth. But my work grows so fast, that I must let it pass, and be content with that vulgar answer, viz. That under the Old Testament God was worshipped in types and figures of things to come: but in the New, men should worship the Father in spirit and truth, that is, according to the verity of the things presignified, not that they should worship him without all gestures or postures of Body, to which purpose it is wont to be alledged.

But all this while my mind is upon another matter, which at length I am gotten unto, viz. your strange construction and censure of the pains I took in opening my thoughts so freely unto you concerning these matters of reverential posture and gesture, in respect of that interlaced piece wherein I intimated the Eucharist to have in it ratio sacrificii. For

* I meant, Between Sacred Things, Persons, Times and Places, and Profane. The neglect or violation of the respect due to all which may in a large sense be termed Sacrilege. And then consider whether that of S. Paul [Thou that hast Idols, dost thou commit Sacrilege?] God may not in time upbraid the Reformation with. This was that I reached at.

1. Because in the close of my Letter I expressed my fear of some Judgment to befall the Reformed Churches, because out of the immoderation of their zeal they had in a manner taken away all Difference between * Sacred and Profane; you will needs suspect I aimed to make the present Judgments of God upon Christendom to be for neglect of that Sacrifice which I had spoken of: a thing I never thought of, nor thought so plain an expression of my meaning could ever have been so mistaken. I pray let me intreat you to read over those papers once again, and then tell me with whom the fault is. For why? Is not to esteem the Eucharist a Sacrament, to account it a Sacred thing, unless it be accounted a Sacrifice?

2. It seems strange to you that a matter of so great importance, as I seem to make this Sacrifice to be, should have so little evidence in God's Word and Antiquity, and depend merely upon certain conjectures. As for Scripture, if you mean the name of Sacrifice, neither is the name Sacrament nor Eucharist (according to our Expositions) there to be found; no more than Ομολογιον. Yet may not the thing be? But when you speak of so little Evidence to be found in Antiquity, I cannot but think such an Affirmation far more strange than you can possibly my Opinion. For what is there in Christianity for which more Antiquity may be brought than for this? I speak not now of the Fathers meaning, (whether I guessed rightly at it or not) but in general of their Notion of a Sacrifice in the Eucharist. If there be little Antiquity for this, there is no Antiquity for any thing. Eusebius Alerkircherus, a Calvinist, printed Neustadii Palatinorum 1584. & 1591. De mystico & incruento Ecclesie Sacrificio, pag. 6. Fuit hæc perpetua semper omnium Ecclesiasticorum Patrum concursus & unanimis sententia, Quod instituta per Christum passionis & mortis suæ in Sacra Cæna memoria etiam Sacrificii in se contineret commendationem. Bishop Morton in Epist. Dedicat. prefixed to his Book of the Eucharist, Apud veteres Patres (ut quod res est liberè fateamur) de sacrificio Corporis Christi in Eucharistia incruento frequens est mentio, quæ dici vix potest quantopere quorundam alioqui doctorem hominum ingenia exercuerit, torserit, vexaverit; aut è contrâ quàm jactanter Pontificii de ea re se ostendent. And that in the Age immediately following the Apostles the Eucharist was generally conceived of under the name and notion of a Sacrifice, (to omit the Testimonies of Ignatius and Justin Martyr) take only this of Irenæus Lib. 4. cap. 32. Dominus discipulis suis dans consilium primitias Deo offerre ex suis creaturis — cum qui ex creatura Panis est accepit, & gratias egit dicens, Hoc est Corpus meum; & Calicem similiter, qui est ex ea creatura quæ est secundum nos, suum Sanguinem confessus est: & Novi Testamenti novam docuit Oblationem, quam Ecclesia ab Apostolis accipiens in universo mundo offert Deo, &c. And chap. 34. Igitur Ecclesie Oblatio, quam Dominus docuit offerri in universo mundo, purum Sacrificium reputatum est apud Deum & acceptum est ei, &c. The evidence of this was such as forced Hospinian (Hist. Sacrament. lib. 1. c. 6.) to say, Jam tum primo illo seculo, viventibus adhuc Apostolis, magis huic Sacramento quàm Baptismo insidiari ausus sit (Demon,) & homines à prima illa forma sensim adduxit: and Sebastianus Francus, Statim post Apostolos omnia inversa sunt — Cæna Domini in Sacrificium transformata est.

Now, Sir, if I was loth to pass so harsh a censure (as some do) upon the First Fathers and Church Christian, and could not be perswaded but that which the Catholick Church from her infancy conceived of the Eucharist should have some truth in it, and accordingly endeavoured to find out that ratio Sacrificii therein, such as might be consonant both to the Principles of the Reformed Religion and unto the Scripture of the New Testament, yea perhaps found therein not quoad rem only, but quoad nomen also; did I merit to be irrided for having found out I know not what Mystery of a Sacrifice, now-a-days a Mystery in my sense to all the Christian world? When all men are at a seek, and one cries I think I have found it, shall he be chidden therefore? Sir, I can remember when you understood me more rightly, and interpreted my freedom with much more candour. To tell you true therefore, I am somewhat suspicious lest the air of Cambridge did you some hurt. But let that pass —

That which I wrote to you concerning this Mystery, especially in my Second Reply, was for the most part little other than Testimony of matter of Fact. If it were false, testare de mendacio; if true, cur cedor? Yet one thing more; It is no time now to slight the Catholick consent of the Church in her First ages, when Socinianism grows so fast upon the rejection thereof; nor to abhor so much the notion of a Commemorative Sacrifice in the Eucharist, when we shall meet with those who will deny the Death of Christ upon the Cross to have been a Sacrifice for sin. Verbum intelligenti. There may be here some matter of importance.

Lastly,

Lastly, You may remember how much I desired to be spared from any farther writing or answering upon this argument, because I knew it was a nice and displeasing theme, and such as I should have no thanks for. Now I see I am become a Prophet, and that when I looked not for it. And thus I have done with this business, which hath made me so much work.

The Censure I gave of the Declaration of the Palsgrave's Churches was not in respect of the matter, but the manner of handling, as the term of laxe shewed. And before I had seen it, I heard that Censure given of it by one that wishes the Palsgrave's Churches and their Doctrine as well as I know any. If I erred in my judgment, there is an end. I use not to be often faulty in rashness that way: And this shall teach me to be more wary hereafter. If I had had any suspicion of misconstruction, I could in this kind have held my tongue with as much ease as any man.

What my Lord of Armagh's opinion is of the Millennium, I know not, save only that I have not observed him, neither when I gave him my Synchronisms, nor in discourse thereabout after he had considered them, to discover any opposition or aver-sation to the Notion I represented thereabout. The like Mr. Wood told me of him, after he had read his papers; nay that he used this complement to him at their parting, I hope we shall meet together in Resurrectione prima. But my Lord is a great man, and thinks it not fit (whatsoever his opinion be) to declare himself for a Paradox; yet the speeches I observed to fall from him were no wise discouraging. He told me once he had a Brother (si bene memini) who would say, He could never believe but the 1000 years were still to come.

Now for Mr. Potter's Discourse, I confess I came to the reading thereof with as much prejudice as might be, having been cloyed with so many vain and fanciful Speculations about that mystical Number, that I had no stomach to any more of them. Which was the reason (to tell you true) that I shewed no more desire or eagerness to have a sight of your Excerpt, notwithstanding your commendations and offer of the same. For I was loth to be put to give my Censure, which I doubted, according to former experience, must be in sequiorem partem. But when I was a little entered thereinto, and began to perceive the Grounds whereon he meant to build, I found my self presently to altar, and to anticipate in my mind with much content what he aimed at, before I could come to read it; and longed not a little to find it well proved and to fall out accordingly. That which wone me was the way to reduce Ezekiel's and S. John's so differing measures of the New Jerusalem unto the same, and so as both should allude to the Measures of the Jerusalem that was in being. As soon as I found this, I was not a little glad to see that made secible which I before took for desperate; and as it is ill halting with Criples, I began presently to wish, O that the Number of the Beast might have the like success for the designing of his See of Rome! Concerning which and the compleat ἀντιστοιχία of both Numbers when I found such Testimonies produced, you may guess how I was affected; namely, That if it be not a Truth, (which I was very willing to believe) it is the most considerable Probability that ever I read in that kind.

And thus with many thanks for your kind communication thereof unto me, even when you had found me not to long for a sight of it, I commend you and your learned meditations to the Divine blessing, and so I rest

EPISTLE LXXII.

Dr. Twisse's Fourteenth Letter to Mr. Mede, touching Mr. Potter's Discourse of the Number of the Beast, viz. 666.

Worthy Sir, and my dear Friend,

YOU have communicated unto me many precious things, which makes me to acknowledge my self more indebted to you than to all the men in the world. And the more glad I am when I light upon any thing that is worth your knowledge. This last week I received a Letter from Mr. Potter, enclosing two other Letters, one of his own to Dr. Turner in answer to another of his ; both which I have sent you. Therein you shall see how Mr. Potter's discovery works already like wax before it sees the light of the Press. I had formerly wrote unto him what your judgment was upon the Abstract I sent you, as your self wrote unto me, and as I heard also from Mr. Hall. But lately Mr. Hartlib sent me a Copy of your judgment morefull since you received the compleat Copy, wishing me to send it over unto Mr. Potter ; which I did, and he is glad, as he professeth to me, to hear that you esteem so well of his Interpretation : and over and above adds, that if any man think so well of it as to translate it into Latine, he will not be sorry for it. Nay, he is willing to add something to it concerning the First Beast and the Second Beast and the Image of it. He is exceedingly desirous to know---his judgment of it, in such sort that he hath a minde either to write or to go over unto him. I pray let him have a sight of it, and entreat him to set down his judgment concerning it — Now, Sir, concerning the occasion of these Letters, I will shew you what he writes to me.

Mr. Potter had understood from Oxford that Dr. T. ( who is one of the Mathematick Professors there ) had alledged against his Book, That the Root of 666 was not 25. but this was by those who told him of it accounted so slight and untrue an Objection, that Mr. Potter did not regard it. But after this being with — he told him that Dr. T. told the Vice-chancellor that Mr. Potter was out in the Mathematical part of it. Hereupon Mr. Potter wrote unto Dr. T. and receiving no Answer wrote a second time ; thereupon Dr. T. answered : which Answer of his I here send you with Mr. Potter's large Answer unto him ; wherein you shall find not only the vanity of Dr. T's Exception, but a strange Mystery discovered even to admiration. I have sent you Mr. Potter's own Letter, for fear lest in transcribing I should miss in the calculation of the Numbers. He desires to have the Letters again when we have perused them and transcribed them. I pray return them by Mr. Hartlib — I commend me heartily to the continuance of your love, and rest

EPISTLE LXXIII.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Dr. Twisse's Fourteenth Letter, touching Mr. Potter's Notions of the Number of the Beast, with some Observations of his own concerning his Book.

Worthy Sir,

I Thank you heartily for Mr. Potter's Letter. I confess I have an especial esteem of his Discourse; but little looked that what I wrote carelessly to Mr. Hartlib demanding my opinion thereof should have come to his hands.

Concerning this Letter; I am perswaded the Doctor's Exception is fully and sufficiently answered, namely, That the Root of a Number ought to consist of Unities of the same denomination with the Unities of the principal whole Root it is; and that if the Unities be of another denomination, it is not the Root of that Number, but of another.

I see also a fair possibility of a discovery of new Mysteries even in the Fractions: but perhaps it will not be so safe to discover them (until they be well armed) unto those who are not well affected to the main. For it is sufficient with a great many to discredit a Tenet, if they can but find any thing not defensible brought toward the maintenance thereof. Verbum sapienti.

I care not if I acquaint you with what came into mind upon my first cursory reading of the Letter; the one an Observation, the other (as I found afterward) a mistake of Mr. Potter's meaning.

1. First, when I read him applying the Fractions  $\frac{41}{51}$  to the Latitude of Rome, I called to mind that the old Astronomers and most of our Maps make the \* Latitude of Rome to be 41 degrees and about 50 (or 51) minutes. The later Mathematicians promote it some minutes farther Northward: but Rome was big enough, whentime was, to bear the difference of a few minutes. And if that which Mr. Gellibrand observed be true, it is possible that the Latitudes of some places may be a little changed since Ptolemy's time, by some motion of the Earth, whatsoever it be. The Mistake was this:

* This he corrects in Epist. LXXV.

2. As I ruminated upon his application of the Denominator of the Fractions  $\frac{51}{51}$  to so many Italian miles, (which I well understood not at my first cursory reading) I fell into this conceit, that his meaning had been, that a Degree in a great Circle had contained but 51 Italian miles, (whereas we suppose 60) and that therefore  $\frac{41}{51}$  was as much as 41 fifty one Italian miles, that is, 41 Degrees, a Degree being 51 Italian miles. That which led me into this conceit was his mention of Snellius, who in his Eratosthenes Batavus, (which I had sometime look'd upon, but it is many years since) as I remembred, made a Degree to contain some miles less than 60. Whether my memory fails me, I know not; for the Book I never saw but once in the Stationer's shop. But when I read the Letter the second time with more deliberation, I found his meaning to be, That Rome lay under such a Parallel as whereof every Degree contained 51 Italian miles: but this supposes, I think, that a Degree of a great Circle should be above 60 Italian miles; which how near or far off it be from Snellius his experimental definition, I know not. My skill in Mathematicks is but little, only so much as makes me able to understand a Discourse in that kind. In my younger time I studied the Grounds of those Sciences, but ever since neglected them; and therefore if I commit any Solæcisms in talking of such matters, I must be excused.

I will add also some of my thoughts concerning his Book.

1. That there is no such Argument to prove the Divinity of the Apocalyps, and consequently to convince an Atheist of the Divinity of the whole Scripture, (whereto this Book gives testimony) as the strange agreement between Ezekiel's Lineal and S. John's Cubical measures of the city Jerusalem for the compass and Area thereof; both the numbers and denomination of Measures being so differing as they are, and those of S. John besides to be derived from 12. How could this be but from Divine inspiration, when S. John, as the rest of the Apostles, was ἀνεγάρματος καὶ ἰδιώτης, and far enough from skill in Algebraical subtilties?

2. That

2. That the Virgin-Company which follow and carry the mark of the Lamb, and the Synagogue of the Beast which follow him and receive his mark, are evidently ἀντιχριστοί even secundum literam; besides, their meaning not obscure, namely, That the one represents the true Church, the other the Anti-church or Church of Antichrist. If therefore Mr. Potter had fetched the Number of the true Church from this Virgin-Company, perhaps his discovery of the Mystery of the Anti-numerus of the Beast would have appeared more evident and convincing. For though the Number of the Wall of the New Jerusalem import as much as the Number of Christ's Church, yet it doth it but remotely, (many things being first requisite to be granted by way of Postulata) and therefore obscurely in comparison of the Number of the Virgin-Company. I wonder therefore what the reason is he never mentions or alludes to this Number throughout the whole Treatise: nay he affirms twice that the Number 144 is only to be found in the 21. chap. of the Apocalyps: Which is true indeed in Unities, but in Thousands not. Was it the Thousands that would have troubled him in his way? That Solertia which with so much happiness broke through greater difficulties would soon have mastered this. Or is it some interpretation he hath of that Vision which was not compatible therewith? Thus I mused and reasoned with my self.

3. In his answering of what might be objected concerning the Root of 666, and in particular when he gives reasons why the Holy Ghost intending the Root 25, amongst all the Numbers which might have been taken to that purpose between 625 and 676, should pitch upon 666 rather than any of the rest; I saw a door open to save the life of mine own conceit of that Number; That the Holy Ghost would intimate thereby, that the Antichristian State should be an imitation of the Sixth head of the Roman Seven-headed Beast, rather than the off-spring of the Apostles, and therefore made his Number all of Sixes. But the matter is not great whether it be saved or not, if a better come in the room of it.

You would have mesend Mr. Potter's Treatise to — 'Tis true, he is skilled in Mathematicks, (in which respect it may be the — named him) but so vehemently prejudiced and professed against that Tenet of the Pope being Antichrist, that it would be to small purpose, if he could be gotten to read it; which I believe he would hardly be. I have no confidence in the strongest demonstration against a man that is prejudiced and engaged in the contrary. Nay 'tis strange how unwilling all men are to read any Discourse this way. I carried Mr. Potter's Book to some — opposite otherwise to — and no enemies to that Tenet; I commended it, desired them to peruse it, told them it was that would please them, they delighting in Mathematical Speculations, related to them the summe of the Contents and Grounds thereof, and whatsoever might allure them; I left it with them a competent time: yet when I went to fetch it and know their opinion, they had not read one leaf thereof, nay gave me less hope than that they would then at the first; and instead thereof made Exceptions against something I had told them out of it. What should I hope then of men professedly opposite and passionate or, if you will, impatient besides, and so less tractable? If any man would tell — of it, and that in such a manner as might work in him a desire to see it, I would be most willing to communicate my Copy with him; which I took some care to be so transcribed as might allure a reader, dividing it into certain Sections, and prefixing the Contents of them in the beginning of the Book, with other distinctions; but altered nothing in the context of the Author. I caused the Figures to be drawn according to art; the hand reasonable neat, and promising no trouble to the Reader, well pointed throughout, &c. By this you may see I was willing to have it read.

Thus I have scribbled somewhat with an ill pen and an ill hand: If it be such as you can read, and will excuse, it is enough. I send back your Letters with thanks. And so with my best respect and prayers, I rest

EPISTLE LXXIV.

Dr. Twisse's Fifteenth Letter to Mr. Mede, about Mr. Potter's Book, and the Holiness of Times and Places; with some reflexions upon a Passage in the Inscription of his Discourse upon 1 Cor. 11. 22. as also an Extract of Mr. Potter's Letter relating to some passages in Mr. Mede's Letter touching the Number 666.

Dear Sir,

I Think my self happy that I am the medius Terminus to convey Passages between you and Mr. Potter. I received this Letter from him but on Friday last, which here I send you enclosed; wherein you will find him to rest satisfied with that you write concerning — as also how well he is satisfied with that of yours, having nothing to except against ought; but rather you extended that which he delivered somewhat farther than he intended it. You see he is desirous to see the division of his Book into sections made by your hands, and marginal Annotations; and what else you can hear objected by any against it. I pray satisfy him as far as it lieth in your power. He is a very meek and ingenuous man; and now you see what way lie his studies, I would you would employ him in ought that you shall find needful; for I find him very desirous to gratify any friend: As I wrote to him about some things, which what they were I know not; but he hath promised to answer unto all. He is exceeding studious in his way. But is it not possible to get his Book turned into Latine in your University, especially this Vacation-time, and things standing as they do with you?

I have lately received a * Book from you by the hands of Mr. Hartlib, for which I heartily thank you. The Title you give in your Dedication, Sublati discriminis inter sacrum & profanum Assertori eximio, I doubt will do you wrong with many, and make them to conceive that the sacrum & profanum you speak of is in your account only in respect of Place, and not at all in respect of Time. But I know the contrary, which makes me wonder at it the more. I had recourse unto you about the Holiness of Places long ago, merely for information; and I was then as ab rasa tabula, apt to receive ought that I saw reason for. But to this hour I am not satisfied, whether the fault be in my Understanding, or in my Affections, God knows, or in the insufficiency of Evidence convincing. And that my Affection should sway me, I have this reason against it; I find my self naturally pliable that way which you take, even to superstition, as now I find, calling my self to examination. And to your interpretation of that in Paul, 1 Cor. 11. 22. I have been very prone; insomuch that the way others take to the contrary seemed to me at first sight wondrous strange, that I understood not so much as their meaning at the first, nor did I come to understand what they would, without some plodding: and when I did understand it, it seemed harsh unto me; untill I came to examine what it is to despise or dishonour a Place, and compared it with Dishonouring of Days. And surely neither Days nor Places are to be honoured by us, but God in them: Yet I find a vast difference between Time and Place, though you sometimes said there was the same reason of both. But I find not the same reason in the more general notions of them, much less in the special. It is true, natural actions require Time and Place for the performance of them, the unity whereof together with the unity of the Subject necessarily concur to the individuation of them, if I remember aright my old Philosophy. And the meeting of many about the same action requires set Times and Places: But by Places you mean Churches, which are not Places natural; the like cannot be said of Times. Then as for the special consideration of them; It is apparent that proportion of Time is very momentous for the advancing of Morality and Piety; as by setting apart one day in a week for God's publick and solemn service, a greater advancing of Piety is made by far than by the sequestering of one day only in a month or in a year for this: and we find nothing answerable hereunto in Place at all, least of all as commanded either by God or man.

* viz. his Discourse about Churches, &c. 1 Cor. 11. 22.

Lastly, as touching the particularity of Time and Place compared together; will you say there is as little evidence for the particular Day to be kept holy to the Lord, as for the particular Place? Sure I am S. Gregorie's is going down, if not altogether down, to be built elsewhere as they think good; we never yet heard the like of the Lord's-Day. Yet I would you could prevail but so far with your great Lord, to draw him to be Affertor eximius sublati discriminis inter sacrum & profanum as well in Time as in Place: though I despair of ever being brought to acknowledge there is no difference between these; least of all to believe that Holiness of Place is more religiously to be observed than Holiness of Time.

But notwithstanding the difference between us herein, you shall always be as dear to me as you have been; and that not as a civil Friend only, but as my Christian Brother too; were our differences in opinion greater than these: For I manifestly perceive how easie a thing it is for good men to take your way about the Holiness of Place; and hereunto myself have been exceeding prone. But do you think indeed that Nads was the word of Ignatius? or can you give any instance of the like, either in his time, or in an 100 years after him? I wish you all happiness as to my self, and rest

An Extract of the above-mentioned Letter of Mr. Potter to Dr. Twisse, necessary for the fuller understanding of some passages in Mr. Mede's Letters, &c.

SIR,

I should be very glad to hear that my Treatise were translated into Latine either by your self or by any other, (if there be any such that would do it so perspicuously as I believe you would) and I should be glad if your self or Mr. Mede would add his opinion which he mentions in his Letter, why the Number 666 was taken rather than another whose Root might also have been said to be 25.

That the Number 25 is so conspicuous and remarkable in the Roman Calendar is also a thing remarkable and apposite, and a thing which I did observe in a great Roman Calendar in the Library at Oxford, but did not then understand the reason of it, nor had time, at that instant, to search the reason why that Number was written in great red Capital figures. I know there are many other things which it hath not been my chance to light upon, which wise and learned men, and such as are acquainted with Antiquities, may and will observe to the same purpose.

I kindly thank you for the sight of Mr. Mede's Letter. How he came to know that I had his judgment of my Book sent unto me, I know not; but I hope it shall be no hurt either to him or me, but an help and furtherance of the Truth.

My Letter to Dr. T. was written to a professed Mathematician, and multitude of matter forced me to write briefly, and therefore obscurely; and therefore it is no marvel if my unskilful and confused expressions have caused some things to be mistaken at the first reading. If the Fractions of the Root of 666, being  $\frac{41}{51}$ , be applicable not only to the number of Degrees, but also to the number of Minutes of the Latitude of Rome, 'tis more than I observed, and more than I intended. I thought it a sufficient exactness that 41 is the greatest number of Degrees of Latitude of that place, being there is no City near it that can stand in competition with Rome to be the Seat of Antichrist. And if that Parallel which is 41 Degrees of Latitude, and that Meridian which is 41 Degrees of Longitude, do cross and cut each other in any part of S. Peter's Patrimony, or of those Dominions of Italy which are immediately subjected to the Pope and City of Rome, this seemeth to me to be in this respect a sufficient manifestation of that individual Kingdom and City in which Antichrist was chiefly to reign and reside. And those places and Provinces which were not immediately but mediately ruled by him, were at the time of the Council of Trent chiefly confined within that Parallel which is 51 Degrees of Latitude and that Meridian which is 51 Degrees of Longitude. For these two Numbers 41 and 51, or rather  $\frac{41}{51}$ , being considered the one as

Numerator,

Numerator, the other as Denominator of the same Fraction, must not be understood the one of Degrees and the other of Minutes, but both must be applied to divisions of the same denomination, and one be considered as part of the other, and the Numerator as the most principal part which is chiefly intended.

In the second place, Because this Fraction  $\frac{41}{51}$  supposeth one Integrum to be divided into 51 parts or thereabouts, I therefore observed that one Degree of Longitude in that Circle or Parallel under which Rome lieth did contain in Longitude about 51 Italian or Roman miles, and this supposes one Degree in maximo circulo to be about 68 Italian miles and somewhat more; which agrees very well and strangely with that experimental definition of Snellius, lib. 2. Eratosthen. Bat. cap. 12. where he hath with great evidence of truth and probability defined ambitum terræ in maximo circulo to be 123120000 Roman feet, that is 342000 feet to one Degree, which makes 68 Italian miles and somewhat more.

As concerning that which Mr. Mede adds in his Letter about my Book; I do believe that as Daniel understood not many Visions which were shewed unto him; so neither did S. John understand the meaning of the Number of the Beast, nor the Measures of the New Jerusalem, when he wrote the Revelation. And the strange and wonderful Wisdom of God, in discovering so many, so different things concerning Antichrist by one Number only, and in laying a foundation for this discovery by making the Number 12 remarkable in the Old Testament, in respect of the City Jerusalem and the Patriarchs and Tribes, long before our Saviour came in the flesh, hath been to me a great, if not the greatest of all external Testimonies for the Divinity of the Scriptures; and I doubt not but that it will be so to others that do believe it and understand it.

I should be glad to hear what those Exceptions were which Mr. Mede writeth that some made against some things which he related out of my Book. I am confident that all material Objections may be fully answered. Perhaps that which he mentioneth of the Virgin Company was one thing which was objected against it. To which I answer, That it is most true, that the Beast having two horns like the Lamb is opposed to the Lamb, and that the Followers of the Beast which receive his Mark are ἀντίτοιχα to the Followers of the Lamb: But it is also to be observed That the Number 666 is not said to be the Number of the Followers of the Beast, but of the Beast; and it is also to be observed That the Number 144000 is not said to be the Number of the Lamb, or of that Hierarchy which is most appositely opposed to the Beast, but to be the Number of the Followers of the Lamb. Now although the Lamb be properly opposed to the Beast, and the Followers of the Lamb to the Followers of the Beast; yet the Beast is not so properly opposed to the Followers of the Lamb, nor the Lamb to the Followers of the Beast; and therefore the Number of the Beast is not so directly opposed to the Number of the Followers of the Lamb, as it is to that Number which typeth out chiefly that Hierarchy of the Lamb which is most directly and most eminently opposed to the Beast. Now the Ecclesiastical Hierarchy of the Church of Christ is chiefly typed out by the Wall of the New Jerusalem and by the Number 144, and therefore I have said in my Book, That the Number 144 is an Idea (not of the Church in general, although that be also true and affirmed in a general sense, but) of the Hierarchy of the Church. Forasmuch therefore as the Number 144 is a type of that which is more properly and directly opposed to the Beast than the Followers of the Lamb are opposed to the Beast; I therefore conceive this Number 144 to be more directly and immediately opposed to the Number of the Beast than the Number 144000, which is a type of the Followers of the Lamb, and therefore must be opposed, not to the Number of the Beast, but rather to the Number of the Followers of the Beast. And although there be no such Number expressed in the Scriptures, yet if there had been occasion to express the Anti-numerus to 144000, I believe it would have been said to be 666000: For as the Number of the Lamb's Followers is derived from 144, so is 666000 from 666. I have more to say of this, but 'tis now time to hasten my Letter.

As for that Copy of my Book which you sent to my L. S. if you have received it, I desire you to keep it still in your hands, that it may be a witness from whence those divers Copies have proceeded which are now abroad in the world. If any Copy of my Book (having come into some malevolent hands) should be corrupted, and have any thing inserted into it which might be offensive to the State; then that Copy which you have would acquit me from it — If you had any Copy which you can spare to return unto me, I had rather it were another than the same I sent you: And of all other I should desire to see one that hath Mr. Mede's Notes upon it: it should be safely returned again unto you, and I should be thankfull to Mr. Mede for any thing which he hath added or illustrated or corrected —

I kindly thank you for the sight of such Papers as I have here returned, and shall still rest

EPISTLE LXXV.

*Mr. Mede's Answer to Dr. Twisse's and Mr. Potter's Letters. His Vindication of that Elogium in the Inscription of his Discourse upon 1 Cor. 11. 22. [viz. Sublati inter sacrum & profanum discriminis Assertori.] His Vindication of that Maxime [Eadem est ratio Loci & Temporis] from the Exceptions of Dr. Twisse. The word Ναὸς used in the first 200 years, the name Τεμπλεζα not found in any Ecclesiast. Writing for 200 years. An Objection from the taking down S. Gregorie's Church answered.*

In the first Edition page (660) was only printed a piece of this Letter, (which was all that could then be found) or the rude draught of an Answer written in haste upon the back-side of Dr. Twisse's Letter. But in this is presented the whole Letter, as it was perfected by the Author, and copied out of the Original MSS.

Worthy Sir,

I Thank you heartily for communicating Mr. Potter's Letter with me. I understand now his reason why he took not in the Number of the Virgin-Company to ground his discovery of the Mystery of the Beast's Number upon, as by an Anti-numerus of an Anti-company; and I am in some degree satisfied therewith, yet so as I could still wish he had made some more use of it in his Argument, and not wholly passed by it with silence. I confess the observation of this supposed defect was mine own, and no bodies else: For those I related the Contents of his Book unto, had never (I believe) looked so much into the Apocalyps as to be able to make such an Exception, so far as I could discover by their Discourse. Yet how this Number might be taken in, though not as a principal, yet at least to bear a part, I am yet to seek; which before I read his Letter I thought I had not been: now methinks I see some possibility only afar off, and am as one loth to lose it.

The Exceptions I made mention of were not worth specifying, being of the same nature with Dr. T's, viz. want of exactness both in the Root and in the Application. Whereupon I desired them to instance in any one Prophecy in the whole Scripture, which they would affirm and could shew to be more exactly fulfilled than Mr. Potter (if his Authorities were true) had shewn this to be; yea I urged them as far as the Prophecies concerning Christ himself, the time, the place and manner of his Coming; offering to parallel one Evidence and exactness with another. To which I received no other answer, but that they doubted much I would fall short, and that howsoever it was not good to make such Comparisons: wherein, it may be, they said not amiss.

That observation of mine, of Rome's Latitude to be 41 degrees and 51 minutes, was upon the suddain. For looking into Stadius his Catalogus Locorum & Urbium in his Ephemerides, I found the Latitude of Rome to be there 41 degrees and 50 minutes, but in Origanus his Catalogus 42 degrees and 4 minutes, (which is 14 minutes more) in Maginus, as I remember, 42 degrees and 2 minutes; for I have him not in my Study, as I have the other two. I supposed that Stadius had followed Ptolemy; but when I looked some days after, I found in him but 41 degr. 40. min. 'Tis somewhat strange there should be no better agreement, if not of Ptolemy with the Neotericks, yet of the Neotericks with themselves, about so famous a City. But that of Stadius is nearest nearest the middle between the extremes. Whatsoever it be, I make no account of it : yet I do not very well understand what Mr. P. means in his Letter, when he saith, That both the Numerator 41 and the Denominator 51 must be applied to divisions of the same Denomination, and yet the one to be part of the other, &c. But I have no time to consider it.

I doubt that the Meridian of 41 degr. of Longitude and the Parallel of 41 degr. Latitude will not cross each other in any part of S. Peter's Patrimony, nor scarce any where upon Land ; whether we count the first Meridian with Ptolemy in the Canaries, or with the later Cosmographers in the Azores ; the later accounting 10 degrees more or less than the other : which uncertainty also will make that other Application of the Parallel and Meridian 51 to be the Boundaries of the Papal dominion Eastward and Northward at the time of the Council of Trent, to be obnoxious and unuseful.

Concerning the translating of M. Potter's Book into Latin, I could wish it ; but I believe you mistake the possibility of getting it done in Cambridge. He that should do it must have a threefold qualification. 1. He must be ready and master of his Style. 2. He must be one that can understand it. 3. He must be well-affected to the Argument. How hard will it be, think you, to find all these concurrent in the same man here ? For my self, I express my self with my pen with as much difficulty, if not more, than I do with my tongue ; and so I want the first qualification, though, it may be, not the other two. And for others, I know not any that are able so well affected to the Argument, that they would be willing to undertake it : you may imagine divers impediments that way, which I will not name. But were it not fit rather that Oxford, that bred it, should do this office for it ? I think Mr. P. in his Letter gueſſeth aright.

I forgot to answer to one thing in Mr. Potter's, namely concerning my Copy of his Book. Mr. Hartlib was earnest sometime since to borrow it of me, to transcribe another conformable to it. I stipulated with him not to let it go out of his house. It is a mistake that I had written any marginal Annotations upon it. I affirmed only that I had written all his Margins with mine own hand, lest the alteration of the pages should confound them ; only perhaps I added here and there some numeral references in the Margin, where the Text refers to somewhat spoken of before or to be spoken of afterward. That which I did to it was the distinguishing thereof into 8 Sections, and prefixing in the beginning of the Book the Contents of each of them, ad leniendum tadium Lectoris, and to represent unto him the sum of the Discourse in a short view. Also by breaking of lines I distinguished each Section as it were into Paragraphs, &c.

NOW, Sir, for my Book, I sent it not to you as an Auctoramentum or Pressemony to bind you to be of my opinion ; but only as a testimony of that honour I thought I owed you ; and yet so much the more willingly, because the Argument confirmed some grounds of Mr. Potter's, if I am not deceived. It was my New-years-gift to my Lord's Grace after he had taken me under his name ; which some Friends informed me was a Ceremony of decorum, that I could not now at the first omit, and would serve in stead of a journey to London to thank his Grace, &c. I had this ready, and sent it in that name, with the Inscription you see, save only that the words In novi anni auspiciis gratique, &c. now appear not, being thought by some fit to be omitted when it was to go to the press : To which honour the Author ( if I know his mind ) had no ambition it should have been preferred.

Well, but howsoever it came about, you say that part of the Elogium in the Inscription you doubt will do me wrong, [ viz. Sublati inter sacrum & profanum discriminis Affectori ] although you know the contrary to what they will be ready to conceive thereupon. 'Tis true ; there be some men that will never find the true sense or reason of any thing quod dictum aut factum nollent. I have heard of the constructions of my new relation, but God forgive them ; I have witnesses enough, which they are not aware of, of their Unadvisedness, that I may give it no worse term. I am beholden, yea exceedingly beholden to my Lord's Grace for his good opinion of me, ( notwithstanding he well knows that in some things I differ from him ) and I am bound to acknowledge it ; howbeit he yet knows not his Chaplain de facie, nor his Chaplain him. But because there are some that forget there is a Ninth Commandment as well as a Second, and have given me cause to speak, I would have them know what I now say, That I defy them, whosoever they or he be, that says, He is less ambitious or less discontented with his present condition than I am, or were when this happened unto me. And this by the way.

I come

I come again to the Elogium; where I am not so narrowly pent, that I should be confined to the discrimen between sacrum & profanum in Places only, to make it true. You may remember that once upon occasion with you I made 4 sorts of things Sacred; to wit, 1. Persona sacra, 2. Res sacra, 3. Loca sacra, 4. Tempora sacra, Persona sacra, as the Clergy, Res sacra, (specially so called) as Bona Ecclesiastica, &c. Now I think the world takes notice that my Lord is Affertor eximius of the Discrimination of the first Three from common; and I hope an Instance of One particular amongst Four against the other Three doth not make an Indefinite affirmation not true. Besides, I add the word [ sublati; ] but the Discrimination of sacred Time with us was none of the Sublata, though somewhere it be as well as the rest. And the field of my defence is so much the larger, if it be considered that one of the three, Res sacra, is capable of Subdivision. But enough of this, it being no well-becoming Theme to dispute upon.

I said, there was eadem ratio Loci & temporis not ἀπλῶς, but eadem ratio Loci & Temporis sacri; to wit, for the Sanctification (i. e. holy and discriminative use) due unto them both, and the formal reason in respect whereof it is due. For the reason why a thing is to be sanctified or sanctè habendum is, because it is sanctum or sacrum: Now whatsoever is appropriate unto God and his Service, is such, whether the determination thereof be by God's own immediate Ordination, or mans Devotion, it is all one in this respect, so the Appropriation or Dedication thereof be supposed lawful and agreeable to the Divine will. For this sanctification we speak of depends not either upon the difference of the cause or manner whereby the thing is consecrated, nor upon the diversity of Natural and Artificial being, but upon the Formalis ratio of the Object, because it is Holy or Sacred, therefore to be sanctified with holy use. For to sanctifie in Scripture is not only to make holy שׁוֹמֵר, but to do unto a thing as becometh its holiness שׁוֹמֵר. Moreover I believe the Sanctification of Place to be intended in the Fourth Commandment as well as that of Time; and that not only from the Rule observed in the interpretation of the rest of the Commandments, (by one of the kind named to understand all the rest eiusdem generis.) but especially the Lord himself hath conjoyned them as pairs, Levit. 19. 30. Keep my Sabbaths, and reverence my Sanctuary. And why not, when they are so near a-kin, being both Circumstances of Action, why may I not then say, Qua Deus conjunxit, nemo separet? And it may be (if it be well looked into) the Sanctification of the Lord's-day might be urged with far more advantage upon the ground I intimate, than upon that other which is so much controverted. But it is partialitie that undoes all.

It seems by this Objection I have now answered, you supposed the Argument of my Book to be The Reverence of holy Places, which is only The Antiquity of them.

You ask me if I believe indeed that Ναός was Ignatius his word. I say, I do, till I hear some sufficient reason why I should not. For that of my not being able to give an instance of the like either in his time or within 100 years after, seems to me to have no force of concluding at all. When I affirmed in my Altare, That the name of Table could not be shewed given to that whereon the Eucharist was celebrated, in any Ecclesiastical Writer confessed to be genuine, before 200 years after Christ; I inferred not therefrom, that therefore the name Table was never used all that time; nor, if I had, would you have believed me. And yet to tell you the truth, when I wrote that, I had some persuasion or suspicion that that Name could not be shewed in any Writer for 3 hundred years after Christ, but durst not affirm so much as I thought, because I was not sure of Origen. But when a Friend of mine soon after wondred how I durst avouch in publick a thing so incredible, as this to him seemed to be; I discovered that I had affirmed somewhat less than I believed, and desired him to make trial whether he could find it in 300 years or not: wherein when he had spent some time, he could not. He alledged indeed Cyprian de Cena Domini but I told him that was confessed of all sides to be none of his, &c. And now see the luck of it; The week before I received yours, a Friend shewed me the New Articles of the New Bishop of Normich (his Diocesan,) wherein (besides some other unwonted things which some body will startle at) the Bishop avouches upon the credit of his reading, That the name Table in that sense is never to be found in any Ecclesiastical Writer of the first 300 years, save only once in an occasional passage of * Dionysius Areopagita. Now, Sir, what think you of this? Yet you see I can shew the name Ναός * Ecclesiast. Hierarchy. cap. 2. De Mysterio Baptismi δ' ἱεροῦ τῆς ἐκείνου ἀπασιμένῃ τῇ τῷ ΠΑΡΕΚΛΗΤΩ.

He adds to this the two places in the New T. and so affirms it is found but thrice in all. But for my part I doubt whether Τετραζα in those places of the New T. at least both of them, can be evinced to be used in that sense, if a man should deny it.

oftner than once in thole first 300 years. Yea if you would grant me that the Author of that Hierarchical Treatise ( whosoever he were ) lived but within the compass of 200 years after Christ, I could give you an instance both of the name  $\text{Naos}$  and  $\tau\epsilon\acute{\alpha}\rho\epsilon\zeta\alpha$  within the time by you limited. For this Dionysius in his Mysterium Synaxeos describes the Deacons standing  $\pi\alpha\rho\alpha\ \tau\tilde{\omega}\ \text{I E P O Y}^{\omega}\ \pi\upsilon\lambda\alpha\varsigma$  and in his Theory of the same mentions the sending of the Energumeni ( at the time of the Eucharist )  $\tau\tilde{\omega}\ \text{D}\epsilon\iota\varsigma\ \tilde{\epsilon}\tilde{\omega}\ \text{N A O Y}^{\omega}$ . However it be, it follows not, that because I can shew it but once within that 200 years, therefore I should believe it was used never. Besides, methinks I observe some unreasonableness used in this kind, viz. Notwithstanding such paucitie of Monuments remaining unto us of those first Ages, upon every unconcluding suspicion to discredit those we have, and then when we have done, to require proof that such things were in those times, ( which we without proof deny ) when those who alone could give testimony are disenabled, and sometimes for no other reason but because they give such testimony. Is this dealing reasonable ?

As for the taking down of S. Gregorie's Church ; I answer, In the Law some things Sacred were unalienable even quoad Individuum, ( as for example such as were consecrated by way of  $\text{חֲרָם}$ . See Levit. 27. 28, 29. ) Others were unalienable as touching the kind only, and therefore, if need were, the Individuum might be changed, so it were for the better and with the Lord's advantage, which the Law provides should be by adding a fifth part thereunto. See the rest of the Chapter quoted. But what is this to the deciding of the lawfulness or truth of what is in question, to alledge that which men do ? Is not all the world full of Contradictions ? I verily believe that even those who are zealous for the Sanctification of the Lord's-day, do in their practice, if not in their Theory too, overthrow the Principles whereupon it stands.

I think I have no more to make answer to, and I confess I have done this not without some tediousness. For you must pardon me, if, judging as a Stander-by, I am not persuaded you are by nature so prone and pliable, as you think, to the way which you say I take.

Yes, I now find one thing more. S. Gregorie's Church, you say, is going down, at least is to be built elsewhere ; but we never yet heard the like of the Lord's-day. No ? but I have, namely, that a great man in the Reformation had once a Consultation to have translated the Lord's-day unto Thursday, upon pretence to take away Superstition, and though that Consultation succeeded not, yet he is known to have been no great friend to the hallowing thereof. How true this is I know not, penes authores fides esto ; but such a thing I have read, I can assure you.

Thus with my heartiest affection, which I never found my self prone to change for mere difference of Opinion, I commend you and yours to the Divine blessing, and am still

Your assured Friend,

Mr. Hartlib's Letter to Mr. Mede, with an Extract of a Letter concerning Dr. Alting's Censure of Dr. Field's opinion.

Worthy Sir,

I Cannot but confess my self much obliged unto you for the Papers which you have been pleased to impart unto me. You do well to help us by a fuller unfolding of those excellent Mysteries which divers will take for Paradoxes. —

But I return to your Letter, and assure you that I will have a special care to send back your Papers. In the mean time I pray accept of these inclosed, which concern the work of Pacification. Mr. Dury remembers his respects unto you, and will be glad to embrace your Letter when-ever it comes. He hath not yet read your Book, because he can get none for himself, the Book becoming now rare every way. When you have done with the Papers, I pray let me have them again; some of them I had not leisure to read over. The printed Treatise I got from beyond the Seas; the * Author of it thus writes unto me: Adfui Doctori Altingo; Is maximopere optat non præmissilem meo contra Bod-saccum Exercitio istud ex Fieldo excerptum. Ratio 1<sup>a</sup>, Quia falsa sunt quæ ille tum de Orientalium hodierna, tum de Occidentalium ante Lutherum Religione refert. 2<sup>a</sup>, Quia Lutherani indè capient calumniandi ansam, quasi Universalem aliquam Religionum conciliationem moliamur. Intellexi simul hâc occasione Geneva imprimis Novum Testamentum linguâ Gracâ qualis nunc est, adèd ut non tantum Originale Græcum, sed & Versionem Græcam simus habituri; quam ad rem 1000 Imperiales Domini Ordines dederunt, ut mittantur Exemplaria in Græciam.

Inter argumenta cur Fieldi sententiam rejicit est, quòd Witebergenfis quidam olim ad Græcum Patriarcham miserit Confessionem Augustanam, ut approbaret, sed illam ut heterodoxam rejecisse. Quòd hodiernus Patriarcha alius sit, id personale esse, & facillè apparere ex quibus scriptis ille hauriat. Sepultus est hâc hebdomade noster Burgersdicius, &c.

But I would fain know your judgment about this Censure of Field, it being a thing of very great consequence. Dr. Alting, I hear, is writing an Ecclesiastical History. Thus expecting your Answer, I rest for ever

Your assured and affectionate Friend,

EPISTLE LXXVII.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Mr. Hartlib, vindicating Dr. Field's Tenet, and shewing in what sense it may be said that the Roman and Greek Church have not erred in Primariis & Fundamentalibus Fidei Articulis.

Mr. Hartlib,

* His Clavis and Commem-orary upon the Apocalyps.

I Received not your Packet till yesterday at dinner-time. I send with this inclosed a * Book to Mr. Dury, which I was fain to rob a Friend of, promising to give him another as good, but I send the Book and this my Letter apart, that the one may bring news of the other, if they should chance not to arrive at your hands together —

I thank you for Mr. Stresö. Concerning that of Dr. Field, I have hitherto subscribed to it, according as I conceived to be his meaning; though whether the particulars of his narration be every one of them true, I cannot affirm: the most, I believe are.

are. But it is no marvel though such a Tenet make your forein Divines to startle : That notion is almost proper to our English, to maintain that the Roman Church, much more the Greek, erreth not in Primariis & Fundamentalibus Fidei Articulis, because explicately they profess them, howsoever by their Assumenta implicately and by consequent they subvert them. This your forein Divines, and some too of our own, think to be an harsh assertion, because they rightly conceive not our meaning : whereof you may be more fully informed by Dr. Crakenthorp against Spalato, cap. 47. and by Dr. Potter in his Charity mistaken. You may remember also that Bishop Davenant (in the Discourse you shewed me at London) by the name of Fundamental Articles understands the Articles of the Creed of all Christians, and no other. Take notice likewise that we say the Roman Church and Ours differ not in the Articles we account to be Fundamental : not that we differ not, and mainly too, in those which they account Fundamental : Nor do we say but by consequent they ruin too even those Articles we account Fundamental, though explicately they profess them. In a word, we hold That all the Roman Errors consist in the Assumenta they have added to the Foundation, and not in the Foundation it self, which they profess notwithstanding.

Besides that in the main Points of Controversie between them and us, the Truths, we affirm against them were heretofore freely maintained in their Church, as for the substance from time to time ; and though for the most part the opposite Faction overtopped them, yet were not the Tenets of that Faction made the Tenets of their Church, till the Council of Trent decreed them, and condemned the other.

This is the sum of the Tenet of ours. But what do I write of these things in so tumultuary a manner ? It is a point that requires a man should have his brains at home.

What though the Patriarch Jeremy rejected the Augustane Confession for Heterodox, when it was sent him ? It is true, that often one Sect of Religion condemns that in another which it self affirms ; because it understands not its own in anothers terms and after another way. Besides, though the Patriarch rejected the Confession in gross, yet it follows not, he rejected it for those Points whereof Dr. Field affirms ; but because it condemned likewise their Assumenta. For it is certain that in the Assumentis we differ mainly from them, and they from us.

Now the clock strikes three, I must make an end. So with my best affection I rest

Joan. Duræi Epistola ad Jos. Medum.

Gratiam & Pacem.

Clarissime & Doctissime Vir,

HUMANISSIMIS tuis Literis & præclaro illo, quod amicitia mecum inita pignus esse voluisti, Scripto, cujus priorem ante aliquot annos, posteriorem nunc primum video partem, ita animum meum affecisti, ut sufficientes neque jam scribere, neque posthac habere gratias queam ; quas quia me referre posse despero, ideo debitorem me tibi agnosco. Sed ante omnia Candorem tuum exosculor, quo de tuo erga mea qualiacunque in Pacis causa studia affectu certiore reddis, deque cantela in colligendis Ecclesiastica Pacis suffragiis adhibenda prudenter mones : Nihil præter debitum officii erga Superiores respectum à quoquam exigendum ; Nihil insciis cujusque Ordinis Primoribus promiscue proponendum ; Nihil privatis temere in publico negotio, nihil extra ordinem aggrediendum. Me quod attinet, semper ita cogitavi : attamen nescio quibus adductus tandem fiducialis hoc in me onus susceperim ; aliquid ab aliorum provocatione, aliquid à mea vel simplicitate vel temeritate fateor profectum est : certè in hoc mihi Conscientia præbet testimonium, nihil à me hætenus quæsitum quod vel meipsum vel mea, sed tantum quod publicum aliorum commodum, spectaret. Ab omnium partium legibus & dominio solutus,

This Letter (after thanks to Mr. Mede for his Book upon the Apocalypse, as also for his well-willing to the Pacifick design among Protestants) represents Mr. Dury's manner of Address and Treating with the Batavian Churches, and withall desires Mr. Mede's judgment thereof.

lulus, omnium me servum exhibui quoad potui. Neque mihi aut ab eruditione aut rerum experientia singulari animus ad hæc molimina satis instructus vires & fiduciam sibi sumpsit; sed invicta potius quadam propensitate delatus est in hunc impetum, ut experiretur quid in præjudiciis animorum inter partes tollendis præstari divinâ benedictione posset à privata industria, & quid apud alios in tam sancta causa juvanda promptitudinis futurum esset. Siquid præter spem, non tamen ultra votum accidit, Deo qui corda hominum regit, & abjectis sæpe utitur ad gloriæ suæ manifestationem instrumentis, laus tribuenda est. De cætero quid imposterum mihi conandum incertus sum. Extra spheram hanc privatae vocationis Theologicæ me trahi non facile patiar; atque ideo quoniam res jam paulatim vergit ad publicam tractationem, nihil aliud mihi propono quàm ut propensam hanc animarum inclinationem in tempus usque præstituti Conventus fovere annitar, & occasionibus suis intentus quibus Belgarum (siquidem haberi facile potest) publicus in hoc Concilio consensus obtineatur. Vidisti jam ex narratiuncula à Lomino Hartlibio missa quid apud Ecclesias Batavicas transactum sit. Tua singularis Prudentia & mihi rem gratam & suâ humanitate dignam fecerit, si non gravetur suum de meis illis conatibus judicium exponere; An scilicet nimia parrhesia peccatum non fuerit; Quantum nobis liceat ab illis Ecclesiis expectare; & Quâ ratione posthac, (quoniam de responso Synodico jam sollicitus sum) sive non concedant, sive concedant meis postulatis, causa hæc cum illis tractanda est. Certum mihi est per Dei gratiam nihil agere quod animorum irritationi aut justæ suspicioni præbere possit occasionem: Pacis enim studia cum omni lenitate, humilitate & patientia pacificè sunt tractanda: neque privato mihi aut expedire aut licitum esse judico, à quoquam efflagitare vel importunius extorquere velle quidquam quod non suâ sponte, Conscientiâ duce, Charitate comite, quilibet præstare paratus sit. Hæc lege tecum, Clarissime & Spectatissime Vir, familiariter agam, ut cuique nostrum liceat suo jure uti, liberè & loqui & tacere. Ità Divinæ gratiæ te tuæque studia animitus commendo. ## EPISTLE LXXIX.

Mr. Mede's Answer to Mr. Hartlib, excusing his not giving his judgment of Mr. Dury's manner of Address and Treaties with those of the Batavian Churches.

Mr. Hartlib,

I Received yours on Saturday, with the Copy enclosed, and Mr. Dury's courteous Letter. To which yet I doubt I shall make no answer, but use the liberty he there vouchsafes me; Ut cuique nostrum liceat suo jure uti, liberè & loqui & tacere: For he desires me to give my judgment of his manner of Address and Treaties, with those of the Batavian Churches; What may be expected from them, and What course were best to be taken in case they grant, or deny. But what were this but for Phormio to teach Hannibal Stratagems of war? Ego verò ita usu rerum non valeo, ut hoc vel cogitare audeam, nedum scribere. For the place I live in, I could perhaps tell something; but the condition of those Churches and their humors I know not farther than by hear-say, and much of that too I learned by the Papers you last sent me. And for my part, rebus sic stantibus, I cannot conceive any way better than what Mr. Dury there relates he took; whose wisdom and ability therein I am fitter to receive knowledge and information by, than to censure or give direction unto. And in particular methinks the deferring of them to the last, and not dealing with them till all other Churches had declared themselves, will, if any thing, bring them off, at least in some degree, to shew their concurrence. For in such a case singularity cannot be without a blur; which perhaps they will consider, though their home contentions have made them, I believe resty enough. But, Lord! is there any hope of a Pacification, whilst each party studies to maintain their advantage against the other entire? A Joyner cannot set two pieces of Timber together, without paring something from either. I pray remember me most kindly to Mr. Dury.

I send

I send home herewith the Copy of his Epistle ad Batavos; which I shewed only to Dr. S. to whom I had communicated the former. Dr. W. and the rest are from home this Easter-time, and I thought not fit to keep it till their return.

And do the affairs in Germany, say you, begin to turn? Lord! what will the Scene be then that is now to come upon the Stage? It is an intricate business, so full of windings and turnings, that no man can yet guess what is the way that Providence aims at to accomplish its end.-----

Thus in haste, with my affection and Prayers, I rest

Your assured Friend,

EPISTLE LXXX.

Another Letter of Mr. Mede's to Mr. Hartlib, shewing his Reasons why he refused to declare himself concerning the Acta Lipsiaca.

Worthy Mr. Hartlib,

----- I T grieves me not a little, yea perplexes me, to hear that Mr. Dury is come off with no better success from my L.-----I am loth malè augurari; but I like it not. I fear it is mali ominis, and that our State and Church have no mind to put their hand to this Work: Deus avertat omen. But our Church, you know, goes upon differing Principles from the rest of the Reformed, and so steers her course by another Rule than they do. We look after the Form, Rites and Discipline of Antiquity, and endeavour to bring our own as near as we can to that Pattern. We suppose the Reformed Churches have departed farther there-from than needed, and so we are not very solicitous to comply with them; yea we are jealous of such of our own as we see over-zealously addicted to them, lest it be a sign they prefer them before their Mother. This, I suppose, you have observ'd, and that this disposition in our Church is of late very much increased. Well then; If this Union sought after be like to further and advantage us in the way we affect, we shall listen to it. If it be like to be prejudicial, as namely to give strength and authority to those amongst us who are enamour'd with the foreign Platform, or bring a yoke upon our own by limiting and making us obnoxious; we'll stand aloof and not meddle with it, lest we infringe our liberty. This I have always feared would be no small Remora on our part, and I pray God it may fall out beyond my expectation.-----

Now for my self; The Acta Lipsiaca I never saw, nor did I find the Extract you mentioned in your Letter: I suppose it was forgotten when you seal'd.

But I am afraid you have made Mr. Dury take me for another man than I am: I pray therefore, let him know that I am a private man, one that the Church never took notice of, having no place or dignity in the same, nor any condition or means of living but a poor Fellowship, not known to any of the greater Clergy, nor acquainted with those that are of note in any special manner; in a word, one of the ἐξουθενούμενοι ὅν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, as * S. Paul speaks: and therefore see not how my verdict should be of any moment in this cause.

* 1 Cor. 6. 4.

2. I live in the University, where we move only ad motum Primi mobilis; and that discretion is expected at our hands, who are of the inferior Orbs, as not to move without our Superiors. If any one transgress this rule, and offer to meddle in ought that concerns the Publick, before the State and those in place declare themselves, he is taken notice of for Factionous and a Busie-body; and if he be once thus branded, all the water of the Thames will not wash him clean, if it be objected to his prejudice, though many years after: as we see by daily experience, and of late in the business of-----College, if some body say true. For this cause, I am afraid, Mr. Dury will find our University-men more shy and nice than others, now-----hath refused to declare himself, and-----to give such encouragement to the business as was expected.

3. That for my self, I am so far inclinable to Peace, that I can yield to a Christian Communion at as great a distance of Opinions as any Protestant whatsoever. For I hold Communion is not to be broken but for Fundamentals : of which kind I take none of the differences between the Calvinists and Lutherans to be. Yet am I not so well versed in the subtilties of those Controversies, as I think fit to adventure my judgment to the publick view by an examination and censure of particulars, wherein my unskilfulness would too soon appear. Nor do I think this Union, which every true Christian ought so much to desire, will ever be brought to pass by a full decision of the Controversies ; but only by abating of that vast distance which contention hath made, and approaching the differences so near, as either party may be induced to tolerate the other, and acknowledge them for Brethren and Members of the same Body.

To Mr. Dury's request therefore I answer, That if Mr. Dr. Ward here, or Mr. Dr. Potter at Oxford think fit to declare themselves concerning the Acta Lipsiaca, when I have seen either, I shall not be unwilling to give my general suffrage with reference unto theirs. But to go farther than thus, the Reasons above-mentioned will deter me.

Thus hoping to receive the Extract you mention with your next, and praying Almighty God to remove all obstacles, and to afford Mr. Dury all means of success in this so holy a business, I rest

Christ's College,
April 9.

Your assured Friend,

Joan. Duræi Epistola ad Jos. Medum.

Gratiam & Pacem.

In this Letter Mr. Dury represents the Heads of his design for a Pacification amongst the Protestants, particularly in Germany; and withal intreats Mr. Mede's Advice thereupon.

JA M in procinctu sum, Reverende Vir, ut in Belgium iter faciam. Vale-dixi Domino Archiepiscopo Cant. & amicis in Aula, & in eo sum ut & cæteris valedicam : Tu mihi prætereundus non eras, cujus non ita pridem humanitatem prolixè expertus sum. Dici non potest quàm grata tuæ apud me hæreat & hærebit conversationis memoria ; quoties enim sermonis tui doctissimi, prudentissimi & utilissimi capita apud animum, quod fit multoties, revolve, fateor nullam mihi à multis annis horulam tam fructuosè, tam jucundè effluxisse, quàm illa fuit quæ tuo usus sum consortio. Nunc brevibus accipe itineris mei scopum. In Belgionihil urgebo, nihil instantè affectabo, præter id quod sponte suâ facturi sunt nihil postulabo ; id quicquid futurum est in Ecclesiæ Germanicæ commodum convertetur. Sed apud Germanos hæc mihi erunt proposita suasionis & tractationis capita.

1. Decreto ab Ordinibus factò contineri saluberrimum componendis Ecclesiæ dissidiis consilium.

2. Ad hujus Decreti executionem pro virili promovendam omnes & Magistratus & Theologos junctis suffragiis, studiis & conatibus, teneri in conscientia : atque ideo Conventus indicationem non ulterius differendam.

3. In Conventu hoc ad abolitionem Schismatis indicendo opinionum minutias & difficultates Scholasticarum controversiarum spinosas ressecandas à Pacis tractatu ; neque de aliis capitibus disputandum, sed explicandum quid utrinque receptum & in confesso est.

4. Concordiam in Ecclesiæ Primitivæ Symbolica, & Christianæ Religionis Fundamentali veritate, atque in ea Fraternitatis confederationem, certis canonibus Ecclesiasticis esse confirmandam.

5. Symbolicam veritatem illam quæ continetur Apostolico, & explicatur Athanasiano Symbolo, & quæ confirmata fuit in Nicæno, Ephesino primo, Constantinopolitano, Chalcædonensi, Milevitano & Arausicano contra Pelagianos Conciliis, quibuscum Confessiones Protestantium & inter se harmonicè & subordinatè cum sacra Scriptura consentiant, per se solam ad animarum salutem sufficere iis qui ex Verbo Dei in Fidei simplicitate citare illam haurientes, de cetero voluntati ejus sine admixtione cultus Idolatrici obediunt.

6. Omnes extra hunc Fidei tenorem Scholarum controversias in utramque partem salvâ charitate inter Doctos agitari; à simplicioribus tuiò & utiliter ignorari, atque ideo pro concione nequaquam contentiosè tractari debere: atque hoc Patribus Ecclesiæ Primitivæ in more positum fuisse constat.

7. Causas Schismatum & inextricabilium in Ecclesiâ Christiana confusionum oriri hoc seculo, partim ex neglectis rerum Fundamentalium & Non-fundamentalium in Fide & Praxi limitibus; partim ex nimis curiosa Mysteriorum perscrutatione, & promiscuâ privatarum de iis opinionum evulgatione; partim ex spreto Antiquitatis Primæ de sacræ Scripturæ sensu judicio; partim ex præpostero & amarulento refutandi potiùs alienam sententiam, quàm inoffenso veritatem ex proprio sensu explicandi studio; partim ex usurpata unius in alterius conscientiam & intellectum tyrannica definiendi potestate & censura; partim ex amissa pristina disciplina regula; partim denique ex neglectis sanctæ Communionis officiis, fraternæque Communicationis inter Ecclesias distinctas sopitis super mutua in rebus spiritualibus ædificatione affectibus. Hinc obortam Opinionum & Rituum omnimodam diversitatem; inde multiformem Ecclesiarum in Fidei fundamento alioquin consentientium faciem emicuisse; hæc rerum imperitis æstimatoribus speciem contrarietatis, atque inde dubitationis, disquisitionis, dissidii & Schismatis ansam præbuisse.

8. Hisce malis remedium hoc tempore calamitoso nullum accommodatius excogitari posse hoc Protestantium præstituto Conventu; cujus effectus hic expetendus est, Ut in Doctrinalibus utrinque concessis Fraternitas, in dubiis & utilibus commoda explicatio, in reliquis sentiendi libertas & tolerantia communibus suffragiis sanciat; in publico autem Cultu ac Ritibus Ecclesiasticis ea conformitas quæ necessaria ad mutua ædificationis & commercii sacri affectus confirmandos videbitur, certis legibus circumscribatur.

Hic vides institutum meum: cui assequendo licet me imparem agnoscam, nihil tamen pro tenui virium mearum demenso reliqui faciam ad summum & sincerum conatum. Multum tribuo, idque meritò, tuæ eruditioni, pietati & prudentiæ. Ergò si quid visum fuerit super hisce monere, feceris amico & conservo Christi tui observantissimo rem gratam, & forsan publico non inutilem. Exspecto etiam ut me tuis vel ad Dominum de Dieu, vel alios quosvis, aut literis aut mandatis, siquid nunciandum est, perferendis adhibeas. Si quid autem sequenti Septimanâ huc deferatur quod mihi traditum volueris, præsentem adhuc me, & tuis, Reverende Vir, paratissimum obsequiis invenies. Vale. Dabam Londini, 14. Kalend. Jul. 1635.

In this Letter Mr. Mede approves the Heads and method of Mr. Dury's Pacifick design, and advises him to urge mento define the Ratio of a Fundamental Article; but withall intimates thereason why many are and will be averse from thinking of any such Definitions.

In

In Articulos Fundamentales optârim equidem fieri posse ut paulò altius inquiretur, utque non enumeratione solâ, (quod hucusque factum) sed Rei ipsius definitione aliquid statuatur; quâ nempe ostenderetur, in quo demum Articuli Fundamentalibus ratio & natura sita sit. Admodum enim dignum est consideratione, neminem ferè nostrorum reperiri qui hac in parte quidquam decernere ausus fuit, imò nè aggredi quidem: cùm tamen ab ejusmodi aliquo κερταίω omne de Articulis Fundamentalibus & Non-fundamentalibus judicium pendere necesse est. Ratio in aperto est; Cavet quisque suæ Sectæ placitis, metuitque nè dogmata sua, hoc pacto è Fundamentalium numero excidisse videantur. Hoc enim partium studiis in religione innatum est, ut dogmata, pro quibus cum parte adversa contendunt, Fundamentalium numero omnino inseri vellent, saltem non ex professo eliminari. Cavent etiam prudentiores, nè mitiori fortè errorum censurâ damnatæ alicui Sectæ aut Hæresi patrocinari aut favere viderentur.

Sed quoniam exigua est spes, fore ut in hac parte quicquam communibus suffragiis unquam definiatur; ideo fortè prisca Ecclesiæ ejusque Symbolis acquiescendum. Certum enim est, qui tunc Fundamentalis Articulus non fuerit, neque hodie haberi debere.

Hæc habui, nec quid amplius, Vir Clarissime, quæ ad tuas responderem. Jam illud solum restat, ut votis te abeuntem prosequar, Deumque venerer, ut scopo tuo piissimo benignus adeste velit, te ubicunque terrarum protegat, & conatibus tuis felicem succellum largiatur. Ità vovet

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Hartlib, touching 2 sorts of Fundamental Articles, viz. Fundamentals of Salvation and Fundamentals of Ecclesiastical Communion: His Censure of a Boook written against the Ecclesiastical State.

Mr. Hartlib,

I Received your last, with the continuation of Mr. Dury's progress and success. I gave it to read first to—, then to some others of lower rank, lastly, to—. I know not whom I shall communicate it with besides; yet I'll keep it a week longer to that purpose. But I'll tell you, so unwilling are ours here to acquaint themselves with any such business, that you shall scarce get them to read any thing that way without much entreaty. Yea I found—himself, when I carried him this, in somewhat a like disposition. Fain he would have declined the reading of it; You can tell (said he) the substance of it, &c. One Dr. a great Calvinist for the points of Predestination, being shewn it by a friend to whom I had lent it, could not be gotten, after he had read a leaf or thereabouts, to read one jot more, but cried out, It is a thing simply impossible, and never can or will be—I know one in the world, otherwise a wise, discreet, understanding man, to whom discoursing historically about Mr. Dury's negotiation and hopes, he commended it for a good and pious endeavour: But I pray God (saith he) he doth not much hurt, as things now stand at this time. He meant, as I supposed, give advantage to the Arminian party, whereunto he is a great opposite. Yea I'll tell you, but sub sigillo, that I have heard—himself say as much heretofore. You see how hard it is for men who have once drawn blood in these Controversies, I mean have publickly engaged and declared themselves in them, to listen to any overture of Peace. But enough of this.

You long, you say, to hear my Answer to the particulars of your Letter. Which do you mean? I suppose chiefly that of Fundamental Articles. But if such great Prelates and learned Doctors (as you mention) detest the defining of the Ratio of a Fundamental Article, or designing the Number of them, as a matter not only difficult, but inconvenient and dangerous; Quid ego miser homuncio homuncio facerem ? I confess I am in part guilty of advising Mr. Lury to urge men to think of such a Definition, as a ground to examine the points of difference by, of what nature they are : But I intimated withal how likely they would be to detract it, and wherefore ; namely, lest by that means they might either declare some darling Opinion of their own not to be Fundamental, and thereby prejudice their own cause ; or else exclude out of that number some Articles formerly determined by the Church, and so incur a suspicion or be liable to be upbraided with favouring some condemned Heresie.

But what if, to avoid the aforesaid Inconveniences, we should go this way to work, Make two sorts of Fundamental Articles, Fundamentals of Salvation, and Fundamentals of Ecclesiastical Communion ? one, of such as are necessarii cognitu & creditu ad salutem simply and absolutely, and therefore no Christian soul that shall be saved incapable to understand them ; another, of such as are necessarii creditu ad Communionem Ecclesiasticam in regard of the predecision of the Church.

The first not to be of such Truths as are merely Speculative, and contained only in the Understanding ; but of such only as have a necessary influence upon Practice : and not all those neither, but such as have necessary influence upon the Act and Function of Christian life, or whereon the Acts without which a Christian lives not necessarily depend.

Such, namely, as without the knowledge and belief whereof we can neither invoke the Father aright, nor have that Faith and reliance upon him and his Son our Mediator Jesus Christ, which is requisite to Remission of sins and the hope of the Life to come.

How far this Ratio of a Fundamental Article will stretch, I know not ; but believe it will fetch in most of the Articles of the Apostles Creed. And by it also those two main Errors of the Socinians, the one denying the Divine Nature, the other the satisfaction of Christ, may be discerned to be Fundamental. For without the belief of the first, the Divine Majesty cannot be rightly, that is, incommunicably, worshipped, so as to have no other Gods besides him : For he that believes not Christ to be Consubstantial with the Father, and yet honours him with the same worship, worships not the Father incommunicably ; which is the Formalis ratio of the worship of the true God, from whom we look for eternal Life. And without the belief of the Second (the satisfaction of Christ) there can be (I suppose) no saving Faith or reliance upon Christ for Forgiveness of sin. After this manner may other Articles be examined. Thus much of the first sort of Fundamental Truths, measured by the necessity they have with those Acts which are required to Salvation.

Concerning the second sort of Fundamentals, viz. necessary ad Communionem Ecclesiasticam ; It is not fit that the Church should admit any to her Communion which shall professedly deny or refuse their assent to such Catholick Truths as she hath anciently declared, by universal Authority, for the Symbol and Badge of such as should have Communion with her.

And this sort of Articles without doubt fetches a greater compass, and comprehends more than the other, as being ordinate and measured by another End, to wit, of Discipline ; and so contains not only such Truths, the knowledge whereof and assent whereto is necessary unto the being of Christian life, but also to the well-being thereof ; and therefore not needful to be understood of every one distinctly and explicitly, as the former, but implicitly only and as far as they shall be capable or have means to come to the knowledge thereof. This is the Sum of my thoughts concerning Fundamentals : If I have not expressed my self so dilucidly as I should, I pray help it with some intention of your conceit in the reading.

For the Book you speak of, I like it not ; I knew by hear-say much of the Author and his condition some years before the High-Commission took notice of him, and wondred he escaped so long. For in every company he came, he took an intolerable liberty of Invectives and Contumelies against the Ecclesiastical State, when no occasion was offered him. Such Books as these never did good in our Church, and have been as disadvantageous to their Party who vent them, as they have been prejudicial to the common Cause. I durst almost affirm, that the alienation which appears in our Church of late from the rest of the Reformed hath grown for a great part from such intemperancy and indiscretion as this is, and will be still increased more and more, if those who seem to be the chief favourers of them go on in this manner. He hath too ready a Faculty in expressing himself with his pen, unless he would employ it better. For who can excuse him from a malignant disposition towards his own Mother, thus to publish her faults in Latin, of purpose to discover her shame to strangers, and to call her Sisters to see it, as Cham did his Brothers? Think what kind of crime it is for a man that is Civilis and a Member, to traduce the Rulers of his people among foreiners; and what little good affection they are like to expect from ours, who are made partisans in such a kind.

— Thus with my best affection I rest, and am

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Hartlib, expressing his Opinion touching Mr. Streso's Book, and his distinguishing of Three sorts of Fundamentals.

Mr. Hartlib,

I Read over your streso with some attention, and find many learned and considerable passages and discourses therein: But for my Animadversions which you look for, it were against my Genius; for I am one that had rather give my opinion by much, (though the world hath taught me even there to besomewhat nice,) than censure another man's. But in general, I conceive his way to be somewhat ambiguous and intricate, more than needs.

He distinguisheth Three sorts of Fundamentals. One he calls Fundamentum ipsum: The other two he measures by their relation to it, either à parte antè, and such he terms sub-fundamentales; or à parte Post, which may be called super-fundamentales. The one, of such Truths quæ substernuntur Fundamento; the other, such as follow by immediate consequence from the same. This I take to be the Sum of his opinion.

Now for that which is his Fundamentum ipsum or κατ' ἐξοχήν, I make no doubt but the acknowledgment of the truth thereof is Fundamental ad salutem: So I believe also are his Ante or sub-fundamentals; though the most of them not proper to Christianity, but common to it with Judaism. For the Church of the Gospel is built or grafted upon the Jewish, the common Foundation remaining the same in both. But as for the third sort of Fundamentals, or super-fundamentals, which he makes such as are by immediate or necessary consequence deducible from the Fundamentum salutis; I make some question whether all such are necessaria cognitu & creditu ad salutem simply. First, because the necessity of such consequence may not be apprehended by all who hold the Fundamentum. Secondly, because I am not yet perswaded, that to deny or be ignorant of a Truth which is merely Speculative (such as some of these Consequences may be) is damnable; but only of such Truths, the knowledge and acknowledgment whereof hath necessary connexion with some practical requisite unto Salvation; I mean, whereon depends necessarily the acquiring of some Act necessary, or the avoiding some Act repugnant to Salvation.

So that still, it seems to me, the readiest and easiest way for resolution in this matter is, To enquire and examine what those Acts are wherein consists our Spiritual life, or that Union and Fellowship which we have with the Father and his Son our Mediator Jesus Christ. That which is necessarium cognitu & creditu unto these is Fundamental ad salutem, i. e. cujus agnitioni salus tanquam Fundamento innititur: That which is not so, is not Fundamental ad salutem. For example, He that comes unto God (saith S. Paul) must believe that God is: So likewise, He that comes unto Christ, or unto the Father by him, (as every one must do that will be saved) must believe that Christ is, and that he is constituted the Mediator between God and us. He that comes unto and relies upon Christ for remission of sin, must believe that Christ suffered, and was offered a Sacrifice for the sins of men, and thereby purchased that power to confer remission unto all that should repent and believe in his Name. He that bids a true farewell to sin, and savingly buckles to the works of a new new life, must believe there is a life to come, and a Day wherein God by the Man he hath ordained shall judge both the quick and dead, and give unto every one according to his works; according to that of S. Paul, Acts 24. 15. 16. I have hope towards God, that there shall be a Resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust. * [For this cause] do I exercise myself to have always a conscience void of offence toward God and toward men. According to these examples you may examine more.

The difference between Mr. Streso's way and mine is this: He measures his Fundamentals by their relation to one Fundamentum; I measure all by the relation they have to Eternal life, in regard of those Acts and Dispositions whereby we are capable thereof.

Take this Similitude; In a Creature indued with animal life are many Members or Organs, whereof though none can be wanting, hurt or wounded, without some deformity, defect or detriment of the whole; yet all are not essential unto the Life of the Body, but such only from whence those Faculties and Functions flow whereon Life necessarily depends; such as are Respiratio, Nutritio, Gustus, Tactus, Pulsus, Somnus, and the like: Therefore the Organs whereon these depend can neither be wanting, nor notoriously hurt or wounded, but the Body presently dieth. Without Legs, Arms, Tongue, Eyes, Ears, Nose, a man may live, though a most pitiful, ugly and loathsome spectacle, and more fit for the Spittle than the publick society of men: But without Head, Heart, Lungs, Stomach, and the like, he cannot; namely because these Members, and the sound and good temper of them in some degree, are necessary to those Faculties and Functions which are requisite unto Life. Apply this, and improve it by your Meditation. Vale.

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Hartlib, touching the Acta Lipsiaca, as also touching a Confession of Faith and the way of determining Fundamentals, that it should be short, easie and evident.

Worthy Sir,

I Have received the Acta Lipsiaca, but if I could have given you notice in time, I would have saved you that labour, and borrowed of Dr. W. for he had promised to lend me his. When I had read it over, Lord! me thought, what little differences are these to break communion for? viz. for one or two Speculative Subtilties, for some Logical or Metaphysical Notion. So I believe much of these disputes (when the wisest and moderatest of both sides have expounded themselves) is (I will not say mere λογομαχία, but) λογικουμαχία. — For your Extracts, I read them presently, and laid them by; and to confess the truth, some business following presently took me so much up, that I had almost forgot I had them, till your admonition put me now in mind of them.

That George Francis his way De gradibus necessitatis dogmatum Christianorum, quibus Fidei, Spei & Charitatis officia reguntur, methinks by the Title should come somewhat near that fanſie. 'Tis true that he says, Some men have such an unhappineſs of Logick, that by an affected following their methods and Technological artifices they make things more obscure and intricate, which in the true use of Logick should be made more easie and perspicuous.

I have not yet attentively read Mr. Dury's Consultation: which I will do, and then send it back: For mens minds here are so remote from thoughts of this nature, that it is to little purpose to communicate it to many. The way to determine Fundamental Articles must be made very short, easie and evident; or it will breed as many Controversies as are about the Points themselves in question. I can gather that by what I sometimes meet with. It is not fit that a Confession which concerns all that will be saved saved to know and remember should be any long or tedious Discourse. The Ten Commandments given by God are an Epitome faciendorum; The Lord's Prayer is Summa or Epitome petendorum: According to which Pattern the Confession we seek for should be but Summa credendorum.

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Hartlib touching the defining of Fundamental Articles.

Mr. Hartlib,

I Have received yours. It seems strange to me that men should hold, that those who erre in Fundamentals cannot be saved, and yet maintain it scarce possible to set down the Ratio of a Fundamental Article, or any κεκρίσθαι whereby to know them.

What though Fundamentum & Fundamentalia be Metaphorical terms? yet may they soon be turned into proper ones, namely, Articuli cogniti & creditum necessarii ad salutem. Here is no Metaphor: Whether therefore may there any Ratio or κεκρίσθαι be given to discern these?

I believe not that Canon of the Council of Ephesus intended to prescribe to any other Council of like Authority, not to explicate or improve the Creed of Nice, as they did that of the Aposiles; but that no private Bishop should compose any other Formula Fidei, to be a Rule and Symbolum of Communion, than that of Nice.

Thus with my Prayers and best affection, I remain

EPISTLE LXXXVII.

Another Letter more fully treating about the defining the Ratio of Fundamental Articles.

Mr. Hartlib,

YOU with I had declared my self more largely: But what needed it? you had the substance of all I had to say. But if you would have it more fully, then thus.

1. By Fundamental Articles in this inquiry we mean such as are Necessarii cogniti & creditum ad salutem; that is, Fundamenta salutis, Fundamental to Salvation; not Fundamenta Theologiarum Veritatum, Principles whence Theological Verities are deduced. For these, though they may be sometimes coincident, are not the same.

2. What then though the Term Fundamental be Metaphorical and improper? yet we see it may easily (if we understand our own meaning) be expressed in clear and proper terms. And therefore this can be no impediment to the finding or defining the Ratio of such Articles, whereby they may be known and distinguished from others.

3. And what though the whole Scripture be Fundamentum or Principium Veritatum Theologiarum or Dogmatum Fidei? Yet is not every content in Scripture necessary to be known and believed explicitly unto Salvation; and therefore this Notion of Fundamentum nothing to the purpose; since (as I said) Principia Theologica, or Fundamentalia dogmatum, and Fundamentalia salutis are not the same, but differ formally, though some of them may be materially coincident.

4. But the Definition of such Fundamental Articles would be dangerous, inconvenient, and subject to much reprehension, yea, in respect of the diversity of mens judgments, is in a manner impossible. This methinks is very strange, That any who acknowledge there be some Truths necessary to be known and explicite believed unto Salvation, should yet deny there can be any Ratio or Character given whereby to know them; yea affirm it to be unsafe to determine any such, if it might be found, or that any enumeration of such Articles should be made. What? Cannot or may not those Truths be defined and known, without an explicite belief whereof we cannot be saved? What will follow upon this?

Neither when we speak of defining here, do we mean any such matter as the ἀκρίβεια or exactness of a Logical definition, (which might entangle us in School-niceties and janglings,) but any description or designation of that Ratio or distinguishing Character whereby such Truths as are cognita & credita necessaria ad salutem might be known from others. And this sure might be done without any such engagement in Logical scrupulosity.

5. As for the Objection of the Canon of the Oecumenical Council of Ephesus; Certainly that Council never intended to restrain the power of any Council or other publick Ecclesiastical Authority like it self, but only private Persons, from attempting to make any such Creed, Formula, or Confession of Faith, besides that of Nice. This I suppose may be gathered from those words, Si Episcopi, &c. Si Clerici, &c. Si Laici, &c. and the Censure to be laid upon them. Nor does it seem simply and altogether to forbid them neither, to compose any such for private instruction or use; but only for a publick intent, to be tendered as a Form of Confession of Faith to Pagans or Jews at their Baptism, or to Hereticks when they were again received into the Church. Can. Ephes.
1 Can. 7.

For why should not the Churches now, as well as then, have the like power, upon the like occasion, further to explicate or make more explicite the former Symbols of Faith, as the Council of Nice did that of the Apostles, yea or any Church or Churches that are or would be of the same Communion, to do it for themselves? For then we know the Churches were all of one Communion; now they are not, and therefore may provide for themselves according to their condition.

Besides, how came the Creed of Athanasius to be since publicly received in the Church, or the Council of Chalcedon, after this of Ephesus, to make a new Exposition of Faith, (unless this Canon were understood as aforesaid,) since neither of them are the same with that of Nice? Or how could the Reformed Churches make such publick Confessions for themselves as they have done?

Thus I think I have declared my self largely enough now; and perhaps more largely than befitted me, when I consider to whom it hath reference. But my hope is, you will conceal the Author's name from any man, and not reveal it save to Mr. Dury alone. And so, with my best affection, I remain

Your assured Friend, without subscription of my name.

EPISTLE LXXXVIII.

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Hartlib, containing his advice for framing a Fundamental Confession agreeably to the practice of the Ancient Church in composing their Creeds or Symbols of Faith.

Mr. Hartlib,

When I read over Mr. Dury's Consultation, (before his Discourse ad Dominum Forbesum came to my hands) I perceived he aimed at the self-same ground for the discovery and discerning of Fundamental Verities from not-Fundamental that I had formerly done in mine to you, though in a differing way of expression, as men that conceive apart are wont to do. I made them to be such Truths as have necessary influence upon the Acts and Functions of Christian life, or without the explicite knowledge whereof those Acts and Functions cannot be exercised. He goes further, and specifies wherein this Christian life consisteth: namely, As Natural life consists
in

in the conjunction of the Soul with the Body ; so doth Spiritual life in the conjunction of Men with God, that is, in being in Covenant with him. All those Verities therefore, the knowledge and belief whereof is necessary to the Acts and Functions requisite to the being and continuation in the Covenant with God in Jesus Christ, are Fundamental Verities, without the explicate knowledge and belief of which a man cannot be saved.

But for the framing or composing such a Fundamental Confession as is sought for, let me discover my Opinion, Fancy, or whatsoever it be. I observe, That the Confessions or Creeds of the Ancient Church ( which were their Symbols of Communion ) were always the former Creeds or Confessions enlarged with such further additions or explanations subjoyned to the former Articles respectively as the Heresies of the Times made requisite for the distinction of Orthodox Believers. So the Nicene Creed was the Creed of the Apostles enlarged in the Articles of the Father and Son, and one or two other. The Creed of Constantinople added to the Article of the Holy Ghost in that of Nice those words, The Lord and giver of life, who proceedeth from the Father [ and the Son, ] who with the Father and the Son together is worshipped and glorified; against Macedonius. This is the Creed we say at the Communion in our Church. That of Athanasius yet more enlarges that of Nice, as doth that of Chalcedon also the Article of the Son, against Eutyches.

Were it not fit therefore that we should tread in their steps, and frame our Confession or Symbolum in like manner ? to wit, not making the Form of our Confession wholly new, but taking the former Creeds or some of them for our ground, to enlarge their Articles with such further additions and explanations as the state of the Times requires ; that so our Confession might be the Creeds of the Ancient Church specified only to the present condition of the Churches, and no other. Thus we should both testify to the world our communion and agreement with the Ancient Catholick Church, ( a matter of no small moment, that we may not seem to have made a new Church or Religion, as we are charged, ) and yet withal distinguish our selves from the Sects, Heresies and Apostasies of the Times.

To which end it were fit the words of the Ancient Creeds should be retained as much as could be ; and for the more easie reception thereof, that the additions and insertions should be made in the express words of Scripture, as near as the nature of the composure would suffer it, and not otherwise. As for the meaning of them, their application to the several Articles would specify it as far as were needful to the end aimed at by such a Confession.

Compare the Creeds of Nice, Athanasius and Chalcedon with that of the Apostles, and you will understand my meaning. And consider that in such a business as this we must not be too much in love with Methods of our own devising, ( though perhaps they seem better, ) but follow that which all the Churches will most easily yield unto, and cannot except against. I believe our own ( as may by some passages be already guessed ) would hardly be brought to subscribe to any other Form than of such a mould.

Take this also before I conclude ; That my meaning is not, we should do as the Council of Trent hath done, by adding Twelve more Articles to the Creed : but that our Additions should be inserted into the several Articles of the Ancient Creed, as subordinate to them, and farther Explanations of them. Which those of Trent indeed could not well do, those which were added being the most of them incompatible and inconsistent with the former Articles according to the true and original meaning of the same, and therefore not to be incorporated with them.

I send you home the Consultation ; I will keep the Discursus a while longer. For Comenius his Preludium I thank you, but I have not had leisure to consider so much of it as were needful to give a censure. I believe such a thing is feasible ; but for the way, Hic labor, hoc opus est.

So with my best affection I rest

Worthy Sir,

— I Had occasion to exchange some Letters of late with Dr. Twisse: In his last he writes thus unto me; [As for Regnum Sanctorum & Christi in terris, Resurrectio prima, &c. Passages there have been between me and Mr. Mede thereabouts, and I am but his Scholar therein: and I know full well, you are so well acquainted with him, that you may have any thing from him, who is my Master in this. I have yet no liberty to take into consideration the matter of Fundamentals, neither have I any affection to it, as finding no sure footing in that argument.] Thus far he. I pray let me reap the fruit of his confidence in the enjoying of those Papers which have passed between you on the fore-mentioned Subject. Truly I shall count it a great favour, if you shall be pleased to communicate them; and having perused them, I will be careful to return them safely into your hands with my hearty thanks. ## EPISTLE XC.

Mr. Mede's Answer, with his judgment upon a Discourse arguing from some Politick Considerations against the composing a Fundamental Confession.

Mr. Hartlib,

I Answered not your first Letter, because I had not wherewith to satisfy you. For that which Dr. Twisse says he had of me concerning the Millenary opinion, the grounds and stating thereof was only in Letters between him and me, whereof I kept no Copies; and now it would be tedious to me to renew what I then wrote. In conference I could do it with ease, but writing is very tedious to me; and my notions and wit too die presently, when I intend my mind to express them by writing.

Concerning the Paper you now send; what judgment should I give but that I like it not? It savours methinks of too much averfeness from that business. I believe you think so. The Gentleman (whosoever he be) seems himself to be one of those he speaks of, that hath in his eyes to preserve his own opinions from indemnity: But if every man do so, what hope of conciliation?

Besides, the matter aimed at in this business is not that either side should presently relinquish their opinions of difference; but only take notice that, notwithstanding these differences, both sides do so far agree in other Points, that they may and ought to acknowledge each other as Brethren; that so their Affections being united, and exasperation abolished, they might be the better disposed and fitted to judge of the Points of difference between them. And whereas he objects, That such Points being declared not Fundamental, would lose part of their strength, and be shaken, this inconvenience would be recompensed, in that the Opinions of the opposite party will suffer as much; and so what we lose at home, we should gain abroad.

Howsoever it seems to me no very warrantable policy, That for the better strengthening and propagating a Truth, men should be born in hand that the belief thereof is Fundamental, when it is not; that is, that a Truth should be maintained by a Falshood. I cannot believe that Truth can be prejudiced by the discovery of Truth;

Truth; but I fear that the maintenance thereof by Fallacy may not end with a blessing.

I would know whether the Author of this Letter thinks that the Lutherans and Calvinists agree not in so much as is necessary unto Salvation. If they do, would not a Confession composed of such things wherein they agree contain all things necessaria cognitum ad salutem; and yet no necessity that this or that particular Tenet should be defined by such Confession to be or not to be Fundamental?

I would know also whether he thinks it fit that particular Churches should have particular Confessions, whereunto their Members should profess their assent. If so, I would have it considered, whether some of his Inconveniences be not as incident to such Confessions towards the members of a particular Church, as would be from a general Confession towards the members of several Churches.

All such Inconveniences are per accidens, but the good and benefit is per se; yea prevents far greater evils, with which such contingent and casual Inconveniences may not stand in competition. What greater evil can befall the Church than Schism and breach of Charity between her Members, and the woful effects that do inevitably follow thereof? Shall we then to avoid the lesser, and such as perhaps may not be, cherish the greater, which threaten ruine to the whole Body? that I say nothing of the danger of the spiritual estate of those who are engaged therein, if they are not so much as willing to be at Unity. This is a great piece of Practical Divinity, and to be more considered than it is.

Moreover it is to be considered, that many of the Evils he supposes would follow of such a Confession are already in being in most Churches, whilst there is no such Confession: Therefore the declining of such a Confession is not the means to avoid them; they will be whether there be any such or not. Those who will seek for pretences to do amiss, will always find them.

Some of the Evils he alledges are such, as the contrary to what he fears seem every whit as like to follow. For why should not such a declaration and limiting of Fundamentals rather introduce a greater liberty and indulgence in particular Churches to think what men list in other points, than an oppression or further bondage to be imposed upon the Members thereof? Yea a Confession cannot descend far in particulars, but some mens Consciences or other will be wronged by it: And a man in this case should not have respect to his own Conscience only, but as well to other mens who may scruple the contrary to his.

He seems to me to confound Points of Faith with matters of Practice and Manners. But the question is not, what is Licetum or Illicitum in Practice, or what is Necessarium factum; but what is Necessarium creditum ad salutem.

Lastly, the whole Discourse, methinks, moves rather upon the hindges of Policy than of Divinity; as is too manifest in that he would have the forein Churches to labour such a Confession, and ours to lie at the advantage to approve or not to approve it, as we shall find it makes for or against our particular Tenets.

All this I write tumultuously and confusedly, without order, without deliberation. It is sufficient if you can guess my mind thereby, or get any hint to think more accurately how such Objections are to be answered. To shew it any body I would not; it is not fit: If any thing be to purpose, make it your own. So with my best affection I rest

Christ's Colledge,
Jan. 22.

Yours,

J. M.

Mr. Hartlib's Letter to Mr. Mede, touching the Manuscript decyphering the Number of the Beast, 666, and other Books newly set forth.

Worthy Sir,

I Thank you for your Answer and solid judgment which you have returned to the enclosed Paper: you need not fear the miscarrying of these your Notions. Mr. Dury will easily smell them out, though I should convey them in my own name unto him. By these enclosed you will see a fuller character of that Gentleman, and what entertainment some Extracts out of your Letters concerning Fundamentals have found with Mr. Dury. You do not tell me the name and your opinion concerning the Anonymous Book in folio, called Bestia Apocalyptica. There is great commendation of a Manuscript decyphering the Number of the Beast, 666. I would fain learn of you wherein the excellency of that Treatise principally consisteth. I hear Cluverius, a very profound Historian and Divine of Denmark, hath written an excellent Commentary upon the Revelation, which is not suffered to come forth, by reason of many Paradoxical passages which the Times cannot brook as yet. I make no question you have seen a Book which Dr. Brochmand of Denmark hath written, which is not unfit for our Times, wherein he answereth the Motives for which the Administrators of Hall did fall off from Protestancy. It was published Regio jussu Hafniæ, 1634. One writes that this Book doth answer largely many of the particular Arguments which are used in Mercy and Truth against us, and doth it solidly and well in most of them. He wishes also that it were more common amongst our Court-Divines. —

Return the Copy of the Order of the Knighthood, when you have sufficiently perused it. Thus I rest

Worthy Mr. Hartlib,

I Received yours with the Ordo Beata Virginis, which with the rest I will send back next week; for now I have no time to make them up.

That Discourse or Tract of the Number of the Beast is the happiest that ever yet came into the world; and such as cannot be read (even of those that perhaps will not believe it) without much admiration. The ground hath been harped on before; namely, That that Number was to be explicated by some Ἀντιστοιχία to the Numbers of the Virgin-Company and New Jerusalem, which types the true and Apostolical Church, whose Number is always derived from XII. But never did any work this Principle to such a wonderful discovery as this Author hath done; namely, to make this Number not only to shew the nature and property of that State which was to be the Beast, but to design the City wherein he should reign, the figure and compass thereof, the number of Gates, Cardinal Titles or Churches, S. Peter's Altar, and I know not how many more the like. I read the Book at first with as much prejudice against such Numerical Speculations as might be, and almost against my will, having met with so much vanity formerly in that kind; but by the time I had done, it left me as much possessed with admiration as I came to it with prejudice. He meddles with no more of the Apocalyps than what concerns this Number. 'Tis a Mathematical ground he builds upon, and will not be so well understood by one that hath not been a little versed in Arithmetick, in that part which is called Extraction of Roots.

If the Scrivener, whom I hired to write me out a fair Copy thereof, had not disappointed me, I could ere this have lent you a Copy, it may be, as good as the Authors; I believe somewhat more distinct, by such directions as I gave my Scribe. If it were in Latine, it would make some of your German Speculatives half wild.

Bestia Apocalyptica I saw and had above a dozen years since; but some 6 or 7 years after it came first out, our London Stationers, to make it the second time a New Book, (because some of them lay upon their hands) printed the Title-leaf anew with the then present year of our Lord at it, and at Delph, as before. This knavish trick I observed, and compared the Books at that time. But the Author I never heard, nor know who it was, but I believe a Laick Gentleman, and so I think I have heard.

By your last piece, that Divine whose it is seems not to understand what we mean by a Fundamental Confession and Fundamental Articles. For he takes them to be such as are instar Principiorum, out of which all other Theological Verities or Articles are deducible; wherein he is wide: for the question is of Fundamentalia ad Salutem, i.e. Cognita & creditu necessaria ad Salutem, not of Fundamenta veritatum Theologicarum.

— Thus with my best affection, I rest

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Hartlib, with his Censure of Grebner's Prophecy, in a MS. in Trinity Colledge Library in Cambridge.

SIR,

ON Saturday I received yours dated March 14, that is the Wednesday fortnight before. —

The Prophecy (which I here send you again) I would not have you make too much of. It is taken out of Paulus Grebnerus his Prophecies, a Manuscript in Trinity Colledge Library. It was left them by Dr. Nevil their Master, had been presented it seems to Queen Elizabeth, (whom part of his Prophecy concerned) and so came to Dr. Nevil's hands, whilst he was Clerk of the Closet to her Majesty. 'Tis now almost 28 years since I first saw and turned it over, the rather because of the fine pictures therein in colours, &c. When the Wars began in Bohemia, (which was eight years after I had first seen it) remembring something I had seen therein, I had a desire to survey it anew, and borrowed it to my chamber, to see if there were any thing therein worth taking notice of. But I found nothing but vanity and fancy, and the whole series thereof and many of the particulars manifestly then confuted by the contrary Event; as you may guess by this one thing I shall tell you.

The beginning or Epocha of his Prophecies he makes from the year 1572. when the new Star appeared in Cassiopeia, and ends the whole series of his Vexillai (so he terms them) at the year 1613. which he supposed should be The Day of Judgment, having no other ground for the same than the Numeral Letters of the Latine word JUDICIUM (as they are all) which makes that Number. What think you now? He prophesied great matters of Henry the IV. of France, (which proved clean contrary,) of Queen Elizabeth and other Princes, which never came to pass. I have, I know not how often, to satisfy one or other, told them as I now tell you; and yet every five or six years it comes up again, as if it had never been discredited. Men are prone to believe any thing they would have, and any words that seem that way they lay hold on; never regarding though the ground be foolish, and the coherence coherence with the rest repugnant to their construction. I'll tell you what Paul Grebner meant or dream'd by that you sent me.

Know, he lived in the time of King John of Sweden, who married a Popish Lady: This is his Hujus temporis Rex Suecia, (i. sui temporis) which he supposed should be invited by the Catholick party to take their part and to invade Denmark, &c.

The Carolus he speaks of was Carolus Sudermannia Dux, King John's Brother, with whom he threatens King John, that if he joyned with the Popish League, he should leave his Kingdom unto him; who should of Carolus become Carolus Magnus, that is, of a Duke be made a King, and be in respect of his Dominions and Conquests another Charlemaign of the North: Et sic (saith he) è Carolo Carolus Magnus regnum capeffit, (for so it should be read) qui magno successu & fortunâ, &c. —

It follows, Deus autem Regis conjugem Papisticam ex hac vita evocat. This is King John's Wife. What should it mean else? This he dream'd should happen to King John as soon as he should have declared himself for the Popish League, and that then presently Charles his Brother should take the Kingdom, &c.

By this time I doubt not but you understand it, and how little they heed Circumstances and other Connexions who would interpret it of any other Charles. Howsoever Grebner was for a great part deceived concerning even that Charles he meant. —

I think my Letter be now long enough; therefore with Prayers and best affection, I rest

Post-script.

I had written yesterday, but that partly other writing, partly Molesti homines robbed me of my time. Would you have me send back Mr. Dury's Letter or not?
Vale.

EPISTLE XCIV.

Mr. Hartlib's Reply, thanking him for that Censure.

Worthy Sir,

I Thank you for your last of the third of Aprill. I never made much of Grebner's, or any of those Prophetical fancies. I approve fully of your judgment which you have given upon it. I hope it will work some good upon those who are used to be carried away with these Dreams. Some weeks ago worthy Dr. Twisse communicated unto me Mr. Potter's MS. of 666. Certainly our Germans will be wild when they shall see it in a more known language. If you please to let me have your Copy also, I shall take it as a special favour. I am very confidently assured that my Lo. Gr. of Cant. himself hath written a Book in answer to some Popish Points, as it were a second part of Chillingworth, composed chiefly upon the point of Fundamentals and Non-fundamentals; which Book is almost ready for the Press: only because in his quotations he hath trusted to his memory, he is revising and examining them, and then it comes forth. In the mean time I rest

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Hartlib, concerning the Number 25. the Root of the Beast's Number, viz. 666. with his judgment of an Analytical Table of the Apocalyps which was sent him; his differing from the Author thereof in four particulars.

Worthy Mr. Hartlib,

— CONCERNING your Mathematician's Letter about Mr. Potter's interpretation of the Beast's Number, I like his Observation of the Roman Calendar, that of all the Numbers of the Epaet they should chuse XXV. for the *Æ*quation with the Golden number; and I think it (as far as I understand it) worthy to be added to the rest of Mr. Potter's of that kind. But that of T. L. 1666, I have known long, but never had any fancy to, and I think it not worthy to come in collation with that of Mr. Potter's. Yet it is pretty, I confess, what your Author observeth of the Roman Numeral letters CDILMVX, idest, MDCLXVI.

I would willingly send you my Copy of Mr. Potter's Book, but by a sure hand, for the Carrier I dare not trust. It cost me — to be written out to my mind, besides mine own pains in distinguishing it, and dividing the whole into 8 Sections, and prefixing the Contents of every Section at the beginning, and writing the margins with mine own hand: and therefore I would not willingly lose it. If I light upon a convenient messenger, I shall send it.

The Analytical Table of the Apocalyps, if you had not charged me therewith, I should not have believed it had been still in my hands; for I verily thought I had sent it back long before this, and was a while very much afraid I must have sent you word it was lost: yet at length I found it, and have sent it herewith.

The Author of the Analytical Table differs from me wholly in the 20. Chapter, and follows Mr. Erighman. What I conceive, you may find in my Commentationes Apocalypicae. My difference will appear by these particulars.

1. I hold but one Millennium, and that to begin at the destruction of the Beast: He holds two, one beginning at Constantine, another at the destruction of the Beast.

2. I deny that Satan was ever yet tied up, much less at the time of Constantine. 'Tis one thing to be dethroned and thrown down from Heaven, (that was at the time of Constantine;) another thing to be bound and close prisoner, and not so much as peep out of his dungeon. See my Synchronisms, Clav. Apocal. Part. 2. Synch. 4.

* In this Edition pag. 427.

3. I take the Resurrection, both of them, First and Second, to be proper and real; he Metaphorical. 'Tis not safe to deprive the Church of those Texts whereon her faith of the Resurrection is builded. For this interpretation will necessarily rob us of that of Daniel Chap. 12. also, whereon I believe the Church of the Old Testament built her faith of that Article; there being no such evident place besides in all the Old Testament.

4. He seems to appropriate the Second Millennium (which I think the only) to the glory of the Jews only: I extend it to the whole Catholick Church of the Gentiles, when the Jews shall come into the fold; and that the Apocalyps is properly and primarily the Gentiles Prophecy, I mean of the Church of the Gentiles, and of the Jews but by accident and coincidence only. The Jews have prophecies enough of their own in the Old Testament.

In my Books and the papers I once sent you concerning this Point all this is easily to be seen. — With my best and wonted affection I rest

Jos. Mede.

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Hartlib, modestly excusing his own abilities, and intimating what cause he had to decline coming forth in print; with his Observation touching the Latitude of Rome.

Mr. Hartlib,

Touching the Letter you sent me, De necessitate Textualis interpretationis S. Scripture, I so fully agree with the Author in the former part thereof, that I could not have expressed mine own thoughts thereabouts in mine own words better than he hath done in his. But for the latter part, alas! it is nothing so. I know my self better than any man else, and I am conscious that I am infinitely far from any such ability as he collecteth out of a little diligence perhaps in a Discourse or two. If I have hit upon any Truth, it is wholly to be attributed to my indifferency in such searches, to embrace whatsoever I should find, without any regard whether it were for the advantage of one side or other, and not to any ability beyond others. Freedom from prejudice, studium partium or desire to find for this side rather than that, (which I confess I endeavour as much as I can possibly to subdue my self unto) is sufficient with a little diligence to discover more than I have yet done, without any such great learning. I confess I know my self to have so little of that this Gentleman supposeth me to have, that the very reading thereof hath made me more than half melancholick ever since. I am bound to love him, and take it kindly that he hath any good or favourable conceit of me or ought of mine: But no man can make me believe that I have those abilities I have not; yea 'tis somewhat burthensome and unwelcome to me to be thought to have: Ex animo loquor. Yea I am almost so uncharitable as to suspect this is some stratagem to work me to something I know not what. But let it go.

I could tell some tales of my Altare of another strain, that would make you think I have no great joy to come in publick; as, I think I can safely say, I did never yet plena voluntate, but yielding to other mens importunities or desires: yet I know not whether I shall yet rest, and keep my thoughts and my self in my Cell. In a word, Mundus amat decipi magis quam doceri, and will never entertain any man well that shall deal ingenuously with them. He must look to have Micaiah's luck: He must say true, and yet not prophesie against Ahab: If he does, he must to Pound and to hard meat for it.

For mine to Dr. Twisse, there is something wherein I had not fully informed my self, about the Latitude of Rome, as having not Ptolemy by me. I said, the old Astronomers made the Latitude thereof 41. 50. minutes; the later promoted it some minutes more to the North. When I wrote so, I trusted to Jo. Stadius, who makes it so; and supposed he had derived it from those before him. But after looking upon Maginus his Ptolemy, I find that Ptolemy, according to him, makes it but 41. and 40. min. and some others and some Maps less. The sum is this; Ptolemy 41. 40. Stadius and others 41. 50. Maginus himself 42. 2. Origanus 42. 4. The Middle is about 41. 51. I have no time to enquire further, nor Books at hand. I pray transcribe this in yours to Dr. Twisse, lest he send my notion or mistake to Mr. Potter without this correction, though it be not material. For by his words to you I suspect he means to do it; which occasioned me to add this. Thus with my wonted affection I rest, and am

Yours,

Joseph Mede.

Mr. Mede's Letter to a worthy Friend, touching some Papers of his printed without his privity.

Worthy Sir,

I Thank you very heartily for your Book and kind Letter, as I should have done long ago for another Book you sent me. But I have entangled my self a long time with so much needless writing to no purpose, as it makes me sometimes glad of any pretence to be idle, when I should not. For what you say of a Scribe, it was I that took order to have such a one sent to you, not you to me. I'll assure you, you have performed more than I durst have thought of doing, though you please to profess yourself my Disciple. But it is no unwonted thing for Scholars thus to outgo their Masters.

There are some Papers of mine walking I know not where, concerning Bowing towards the Altar: which were written by way of Answer to some body (and a man of note) demanding of me what I thought thereof. One was my first Answer: Another more large, replying to the Exceptions he made against that first, and the whole opinion and practice, being somewhat larger than I use to write Letters, and written with some intention of mind (after my thoughts that way had been long asleep.) I by chance kept a Copy of it, which how it came to be so much dispersed, I profess I know not.

That so-long-since-written Discourse of mine, De Sanctitate Relativa, &c. savours too much of my infancy in Divinity, and first thoughts, and affection of style, ever to see the publick light.

And indeed I had resolved to enjoy my self, and such contentment as I could find in my Cell, and never to have come in print again, either to please or displease any man; but only to vent such Notions as I had conceived privately by a new way I took of Common-placing, changing my Theme qualibet vice: When now on a sudden before I was aware, and little expected any such matter, one of my Straglers is perkt into the Press, telling the world he was one of those Common-places. What his destiny is, I know not; but if it be good, some body can say, He hath flung many a stone in his days, but never hit the mark till now; and that too by mere chance, and not so much as intending it.

For writing to Sir W. B. I think it is not tanti upon this occasion. 'Tis a Pamphlet, and I had rather it should come to his hands with a kind of neglect on my part, than with too much pomp. But I thank you for what you have done, and for your further offer.

Thus with my best affection I commend you to the Divine blessing, and am

Mr. Mede's Letter to Mr. Hartlib, touching some Socinian Books and Tenets: together with his resentment of the Difficulties which Mr. Dury's Pacifick Design met with, and of the Evil of Prejudice and Studium partium.

Mr. Hartlib,

I Received yours with the Discourse inclosed of Schism — That Extract of the Letter to you is but a Symptom of Studium partium; of which kind he that will be an indifferent and moderate man must look to swallow many: Therefore Transfert.
Only

Only thus much; to be nearer or further off from the Man of sin is not (I think) the measure of Truth and Falshood, nor that which would be most destructive of him always true and warrantable. If it be, there be some in the world that would be more Orthodox and Reformed Christians than any of us. The Socinians, you know, deny That Souls live after death, until the Resurrection; or That Christ hath carnem & sanguinem now in Heaven; both as most destructive of the idolatrous errors of the Man of sin: the first of Purgatory and Invocation of Saints, (which they say can never be solidly everted, as long as it is supposed Souls do live;) the other of Transubstantiation of the Elements of Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Christ. Is not this to undermine Antichrist with a vengeance, as they say?

I have not been very obtrusive unto men, to acquaint them with my notions and conceits in that kind, (for some of them that are but lately known have lien by me above these twenty years, and not shewn to any) unless they urge me and ask me what is my opinion: and yet my freedom to utter my mind than to such as are prejudiced the contrary way, does neither them nor me any good. Therefore Cupio defungi, if it would be, and to be troubled no more either with Quæsitæ or Reciprocations in that kind.

For the Discourse you sent me; It proceeds from a distinct and rational Head, but I am afraid too much inclined that way that some strong and rational wits do. It may be I am deceived. The Conclusions which he aims at I can more easily assent to, than to some of his Premises. I have yet looked it but once over. But any more free or particular censure thereof than what I have already given look not for, lest I be censured myself. 'Tis an Argument wherein a wise man will not be too free in discovering himself pro or con, but reserved.

Thus with my wonted affection and prayers, I rest

Your assured Friend,

Joseph Mede.

[After this Mr. Mede wrote another Letter (the last Letter he wrote to Mr. Hartlib, about a month before he died) wherein (besides matters of News, and his repeating what he had said in the foregoing Letter concerning the great Learning of the Author of that Discourse of Schism,) he expresseth his resentment of the Difficulties which Mr. Dury's design of Pacification met with, in these words.]

— Mr. Dury and such as wish well to his business must comfort themselves as the Husbandman doth, who though he sees no appearance of his Seed awhile after it is sown, (especially in dry weather) yet despaireth not but as soon as the Rain from above shall water the ground, to see it begin to spring up. You see what an invincible mischief Prejudice is and studium partium; It leaves no place for admission of Truth that brings any disadvantage to the side: That's the Rule which they examine all by. Will so many Rents of the Church as we see ready to sink it never make us wiser?

CHAP. I.

The disposition of the years of Jehoiakim according to the several Events mentioned in Scripture.

Jehoiakimi 1<sup>o</sup>.

IN the First year of Jehoiachim, as soon as the King of Egypt had made him King, Nebuchadnezzar being sent by his Father yet living, came into the Land to reduce those of Phœnicia and Cœlesyria (which had revolted to the King of Egypt) unto his obedience; wherewith Jehoiakim being affrighted, became his tributary and served him three years, 2 Kings 24. 1.

This was that Expedition whereof Berosus speaks, Lib. 3. rerum Chaldaicarum, citante Josepho: Cum audivisset Nabuchdonosoris parens Nabopollasarus Satrapam Ægypti & Cœlesyriæ Phœniciaque locis præfectum rebellionem fecisse, nec ipse jam labores ferre posset; tradidit filio Nabuchdonosoro adhuc ætate viginti parte copiarum, eum misit: & ille cum rebelli prælio congressus, victor evasit, & regionem denno sub ipsorum potestatem redegit.

And this was the Expedition whereof we read, 2 Kings 24. 7. That the King of Egypt came not again out of his Land any more: (viz. after he had made Jehoiakim King) For the King of Babel had taken from the River of Egypt unto the River Euphrates all that pertained unto the King of Egypt, viz. Phœnicia, Cœlesyria, &c.

This also was the Expedition whereof the Rechabites speak Jer. 35. 11. When Nebuchadnezzar King of Babel came up into the Land, we said, Come let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the Army of the Chaldeans: So we dwell at Jerusalem. For this coming of the King of Babel into the Land must either be in the first of Jehoiakim, or in the fourth, or in the last year of his Reign. In the last it could not be; for they speak of it as of a thing a good while past, when Jehoiakim was yet reigning: And the Prophet says he was bidden go to these Rechabites in the Reign of Jehoiakim; where no year being named, it seems to be supposed as a thing happening about the beginning of his Reign, or before Nebuchadnezzar was yet returned home out of those quarters. Nor could it be in the fourth year; for then Nebuchadnezzar besieged and took Jerusalem, Dan. 1. but here he came but into the Land, and the Rechabites were safe in Jerusalem. Therefore it must be in the first.

And from this time to the first year of Darius with Cyrus (that is, to the first of Cyrus his 9* years) are just 70 years; at what time Daniel made his Prayer, as having hoped his people should then have returned from Captivity, Dan. 9. 2. &c. But he anticipated the Epocha which God intended.

In the Fourth year of Jehoiakim, (or Third compleat) which was the first of Nebuchadnezzar, Jehoiakim after three years service, as soon as he heard of the death of Nabopollasar and recalling of Nebuchadnezzar out of those parts, taking courage and rebelling upon the advantage of the time, Nebuchadnezzar returns again, and the first time besieged Jerusalem, took it, carried many of the people captive, and Daniel

And from hence to the first year of Cyrus solus, (that is, of those six * years which he reigned compleat after Darius his death) are 70 years: which was the time when God according to the Prophecy of * Jeremie released their Captivity.

Jehoiakimi 5°.

In the Fifth year of Jehoiakim, in the ninth month, the same month that Nebuchadnezzar had taken and spoiled the City the year before, they proclaimed a publick Fast, Jer. 36. 9. that so by humbling themselves upon the remembrance of the former year's calamity, they might pacifie the farther wrath of God towards them. For the like reason after the destruction of the City they used, even till Zacharie's time, to fast upon the 4. 5. and 10. months (Zacharie 7. 3. and Chap. 8. 19.) because Nebuchadnezzar began that fatal siege in the 10. month, took the City in the 4. burnt it in the 5. Jer. 52. v. 4, 6, 12. and 2 Kings 25. At this Fast Euruch read his Roll.

Jehoiakimi 11°.

This year the King of Babel sent to Jerusalem to bring Jehoiakim bound in fetters unto Babylon, 2 Chron. 36. 6. But his servants used him in such manner, that he died miserably before he went, and was buried with the burial of an Ass, drawn, and cast forth beyond the Gates of Jerusalem; Jer. 22. 19. Whereupon the people made his son Jehoiachin King; when presently Nebuchadnezzar (who had then accomplished the 7. * year of his reign) came, besieged the City, took and carried the new King Jehoiachin captive, when he had reigned but three months.

* Jer. 52. 28.

Obj. Jehoiakim in the 9. month of the 5. year of his Reign was not yet in Captivity, as is plain by Jer. 36. 9. Therefore Nebuchadnezzar had not approached Jerusalem and made a deportation in the 4. year of Jehoiakim.

I answer, it follows not. For the Captivity of Jehoiakim seems not to have been a Captivity of his person, but of his people; and that for these Reasons. First, If Jehoiakim were carried captive either in the 4. or 7. year of his reign, how could he be said to reign 11. years? did he reign whilst he was in Babylon? Secondly, Jehoiakim was buried sepultura asini, protractus & projectus extra portas Jerusalem, Jer. 22. 19. If he died at Jerusalem, how could he be a captive in Babylon? Thirdly, It is no where said that Jehoiakim himself was carried captive: Of his people captived we hear Dan. 1. and of part of the Vessels of the House of God; of his Servitude both first and second, 2 Kings 24. 1, 2.

Obj. But 2 Chron. 36. 6. it is said, that Nebuchadnezzar came up against him, and bound him with fetters to carry him to Babylon.

Ans. True; it appears he meant to have carried him, but not that he performed it. 2. This coming up of the King of Babylon, if we compare it with the Text of the 2 Kings 24. will be his first coming up, when Jehoiakim became his tributary three years. Therefore this coming up and this binding, though joyned in one sentence, was not at the same time.

Obj. But you will say, When then was this binding to have carried him?

Ans. I suppose in the last year of his reign and life; and that his ill usage at that time was the occasion of his so miserable death, before he was yet gone from Jerusalem. And yet perhaps those who came to fetch him went not home empty, but carried those 3023 mentioned Jer. 52. 28. though I had rather refer them to Jehoiachin's going, which was immediately.

Object. The first deportation of the Jews was in the 7. of Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. 52. 28. Therefore not the 4. but the 11. of Jehoiakim's reign.

Ans. Jeremy intended not a rehearsal of all the Captivities, nor of the full number of the captives, as appears by the smallness of the number. It may be those numbers contain men of particular quality, and such as were disposed of in one and the same place. But here I am resolved.

The Mystery of S. Paul's Conversion: or, The Type of the Calling of the Jews.

See this largely treated of in Book IV.
Epist. XVII.

1.
PAUL among the sons of men the greatest Zelot of the Law, and Persecutor of the way of Christ.

2.
Paul in the height of this his zeal, and heat of his persecuting fury, found mercy and was converted.

3.
Paul converted by means extraordinary, and for manner strange: not, as were the rest of the Apostles, by the Ministerie of any Teacher upon earth, but by visible Revelation of Christ Jesus in his glory from Heaven; the light whereof suddenly surprising him, he heard the voice of the Lord himself from Heaven saying, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

4.
Those who accompanied Paul at the time of this Apparition saw the light only, and were amazed; but Paul alone saw the Lord, and heard the voice which he spoke unto him.

5.
Paul no sooner converted, but was immediately inspired with the knowledge of the Mysteries of Christ, without the instruction of any Apostle or Disciple; for he received not the Gospel which he preached of Man, neither was he taught it but by the Revelation of Jesus Christ.
He consulteth not with the rest of the Apostles, but after 14 years preaching communicated to them the Gospel which he preached among the Gentiles, who added nothing unto him, but gave him the right hand of fellowship.

Paul the last called of the Apostles.

1.
THE Jews among the Nations most obstinate Zelots of Moses, and the most bitter Enemies of the Followers of Christ.

2.
The Jews, though persisting unto the last in their extremity of bitterness and mortal hate to Christians, yet will God have mercy on them, and receive them again to be his People, and be their God.

3.
The Jews not to be converted unto Christ by such means as were the rest of the Nations, by the Ministerie of Preachers sent unto them; but by the Revelation of Christ Jesus in his glory from Heaven, when they shall say, not as when they saw him in his humiliation, Crucifie him, but, Blessed is he that comes in the Name of the Lord. Whose coming then shall be as a lightning out of the East, shining into the West; and the sign of the Son of Man shall appear in the clouds of Heaven, and every eye shall see him, even of those which pierced him, and shall lament with the Spirit of grace and supplication, for their so long and so shameful unbelief of their so merciful Redeemer.

4.
This Revelation of Christ from Heaven like to be most apparent to the Jews in all places where they are dispersed, but not so perhaps to the Gentiles with whom they live. The light of his glorious presence shall be such as the whole world shall take notice of, but those only to see him and hear his voice who pierced him.

5.
The Jews together with their miraculous
Calling, shall be illuminated also with the * knowledge of the Mysteries of the Christian Faith, even as it is taught in the Reformed Churches, without any Instructors from them or Conference with them; and yet when they shall communicate their Faith each to other, shall find themselves to be of one communion of true belief, and give each other the right hand of fellowship.

6.
The Jews to be called after all the Nations in orbe Romano or in the circuit of the Apostle's preaching.

* Zach. 13.

7. Paul once converted, the most zealous and fervent of the Apostles.

8.

Till Paul was converted, the Gospel had small progress amongst the Gentiles; but when he became their Apostle, it went forward wonderfully.

9.

The miracle of S. Paul's Conversion (the person so incapable, till then a Persecutor and most bitter Enemy of Christians; the manner so wonderful as by an Apparition and Voice from Heaven,) was a most powerful motive to make all those who heard and believed it, Christians; and therefore so often by S. Paul himself repeated.

10.

Paul reproveth Peter, one of the chief Apostles, for symbolizing with Judaism.

7. The * Jews once converted, the most zealous and fervent of the Nations.

8.

Till the Calling of the Jews, the general Conversion of the Gentiles not to be expected; but the receiving of Israel shall be the riches of the world, in that by their restitution the whole world shall come unto Christ.

9.

The miracle of the Jews Conversion so much the more powerful to convert the Nations of the world not yet Christians, by how much their opposite disposition is more universally known to the world than was S. Paul's, and by how much the testimony of a whole Nation, living in so distant parts of the world, of so divine a miracle as a Vision and Voice from Heaven, exceeds that of S. Paul, being but one Man.

10.

May not the Jews likewise reprove (if not more) the Church of Rome, the chief of Christian Churches, for symbolizing with Gentilism?

S. Paul to Tim. I Ep. c. I. v. 16.

CHAP. III.

Answer concerning a Discourse inferring from the Septenary Types of the Old Testament and other Arguments, That the World should last 7000 years, and the Seventh Thousand be that happy and blessed Chiliad.

I.

THE Millennium of the Reign of Christ is that which the Scriptures call The Day of Judgment; the ancient Jews and S. Jude יום דינא רבא Magnus Dies Judicii or Dies Judicii magni. Septimus Millenarius ab universa Cabbalistarum Schola (saith Carpentarius) vocatur Magnus Dies Judicii; Comment. in Alcinoium Platonis, pag. 322. A Day, not (as our languages commonly import) of a few hours, but, according to the Hebrew notion (from whence the name is derived) of many years: For with them Day is Time, and not a short only; but a long Time. A Day whereof S. Peter speaking, 2 Epist. chap. 3. tells the believing Jews his brethren, as soon as he had named it, vers. 8. That he would not have them ignorant, that one Day with the Lord was as a Thousand years, and a Thousand years as one Day. This is the Day of the great Assises beginning with the seventh Trumpet, Apocal. 11. 15. wherein Christ shall give reward unto his servants the Prophets, and to the Saints and them that fear his Name, and shall destroy them that destroy the earth, vers. 18. The Process of this wonderful Day S. John describes by a twofold Judgment, and a twofold Resurrection, and the glorious Reign of the Saints between them. The morning Judgment shall be of Antichrist and all his partakers, whom Christ shall destroy at the appearing of his coming, 2 Thess. 2. 8. and then shall be the first and particular Resurrection. The evening Judgment shall be upon the remainder of the living enemies of Christ, Gog and Magog, and conclude with the last and universal Resurrection of the of the dead : and so the last enemy, Death, being now wholly vanquished, he shall surrender his Kingdom into the hands of his Father, that God may be all in all, 1 Cor. 15. 24, &c.

Nor ought it to seem strange, that the name Day should signifie so long a time as a Thousand years : The Jews, who first imposed it, understood it so. And in the end of S. Peter we shall find yet a longer Day, even ἡμέρα αἰώνιου, Dies Aternitatis, a Day of Eternity, 2 Pet. 3. 18. The Prophets have many such long Days, when they say, In Die illo, Vide. The whole time of Christ's first coming is called a Day, Joh. 16. 26. 2 Cor. 6. 2. The whole time of the Jews forty years abode in the wilderness is called a Day, Heb. 3. 8, 9. Their first Captivity of seventy years, a Day : Vide Prophetas. Their last and long Captivity, a Day, as Deut. 32. 35. & alibi apud Prophetas. And what if in our daily prayer [Give us this day our daily bread] Day be to be taken for the whole time of our life? For in stead of S. Matthew's [This day] speaking after the Hebrew notion, S. Luke hath in the same Petition, καὶ ἡμέραν, that is, every day. So S. Paul, Heb. 3. 13. Exhort one another καὶ ἐκαστὸν ἡμέραν every day, whilest it is called To Day. Doth not Day here include many days?

Now if the Thousand years of the Reign of Christ be the Day of Judgment, then it will follow, that though we may know by the fulfilling of things to be fulfilled whether it be nearer or farther off, yet the precise time of the coming thereof cannot be known, because it is to come upon the world unawares as a Thief in the night.

II.

Nevertheless it is true that the Primitive Fathers (especially those who believed the Chiliad) conceived the World should last, and the Church therein labour, 6000 years, and that the Seventh thousand should be the Day of Judgment, and Sabbath, in which the Saints should reign with Christ their Lord.

So Irenæus, Lib. 5. c. 28. Quotquot diebus hic factus est mundus, tot & Millenis consummatur — Si enim Dies Domini quasi Mille anni, in sex autem diebus consummata sunt quæ facta sunt; manifestum est, quoniam consummatio ipsorum Sextus millesimus annus est.

Idem eodem Libro cap. 30. Cum vastaverit Antichristus hic omnia in mundo, regnans annis tribus & mensibus sex — tunc veniet Dominus de celis in nubibus in gloria Patris, illum quidem & obedientes ei in stagnum ignis mittens, adducens autem justis Regni tempora, hoc est requietionem (i. Sabbathum,) septimam diem sanctificatam, & restituens Abrahamæ promissionem hereditatis, &c.

* Intelligit signum Petri cap. 3. &c.

Cyprianus, Lib. de Exhortatione Martyrii; Primi in dispositione Divina Septem dies, annorum Septem millia continent, — ut consummatio legitima impleatur.

Lactantius, de Divino premio Lib. 7. c. 14. Quoniam Sex diebus cuncta Dei opera perfecta sunt; per secula Sex, id est, annorum Sex millia, manere in hoc statu mundum necesse est. Dies enim magnus Dei Mille annorum circulo terminatur. — Et ut Deus Sex illos dies in tantis rebus fabricandis laboravit; ita & religio ejus & veritas in his Sex millibus annorum laborare necesse est, malitiâ prævalente & dominante. Et rursum, Quoniam perfectis operibus requievit die Septimo, eumque benedixit, necesse est ut in fine Sexti millesimi anni malitia omnis aboleatur à terra, & regnet annos Mille Justitia; sitque tranquillitas & requies à laboribus quos mundus jamdiu perpeffus est.

III.

The ancient Jews also had a Tradition to the same purpose, as appears by these testimonies recorded in the Gemara or Glosse of their Talmud, Cod. Sanhedrim, cap. Kol Jisrael. For there, concerning that of Esay chap. 2. [Exaltabitur Dominus solus die illo] thus speaks the Talmudical Gloss.

Dixit Rabbi Ketina, sex annorum millibus stat Mundus, & uno (Millenario) vastabitur; de quo dicitur, ATQUE EXALTABITUR DOMINUS SOLUS DIE ILLO. Note, By Vastabitur they mean the Vastation of the world by Fire in the Day of Judgment, whereby it shall become New, or a New Heaven and New Earth.

Sequitur.

enim (Psal. 92.) Psalmus & Canticum de Die Sabbati; id est, de eo Die qui totus Quies est. (Note, they understand this Psalm of the Great day of Judgment, and the Sabbath mentioned in the Title, of the great Sabbath of a Thousand years.) Dicitur item (Psal. 90) Nam mille anni in oculis tuis velut dies hesternus.

Sequitur.

*Traditio Domus Eliæ: Sex mille annos durat mundus; Bis mille annis* Inanitas, bis mille annis Lex, deniq; bis mille annis Dies Christi. At verò propter peccata nostra plurima & enormia, abierunt ex his qui abierunt.* These last words Petrus Galatinus proves to be added to this Tradition by the later Jews. And surely this Eliæ lived under the second Temple and before the birth of Christ. And though there be no mention here of the Seventh thousand years; yet that this R. Eliæ acknowledged it as well as the rest, appears by a former place of the same Gemara Talmudica, which is this; Traditio Domus Eliæ. Iusti quos resuscitabit Deus, &c.

[ See the rest of this quotation printed in Book IV. E-pist. 22. page
776. ]

The concinnity of this conceit hath made me (I confess) sometimes inquisitive, whether it could be brought to accord with the received computation of the Age of the World, and with our experience of the beginning and continuance of the times of Antichrist now revealed. But the obstacle I found was, that I could never persuade my self the times of Antichrist began so late as this conceit and our computation of the World's years imply they should, namely, not till near about the time of Carolus Magnus. Nor can I admit that the 42. moneths which the Beast is said to * continue, should be reckoned from his ἀκμὴ or etæ adulta, and not from his beginning, as must be here likewise supposed. For as when we reckon the Age of a Man, we reckon not from the time he came to man's estate, or from the time he sued out his livery, but from the time of his birth; so should we do here for the times of the Man of sin.

* Apocal. 13.3.

Besides, we ought not (as I take it) to fix our eyes so much upon the Popes dominion and his improvement thereof, as upon the Apostasie of the Church from the rule of Christian Worship by Spiritual Fornication with Idols; which is the Character the Holy Ghost gives us in the Apocalypsis to know the Antichristian State and Times by. Of which estate the Pope or False-prophet was indeed to be the Head, and his See Babylon the Metropolis; but the Body was to be, and so is, Bestia Romana novissimi capitis decem diadematis redimita, the Roman Empire shiver'd into a plurality of Kingdoms, but re-united again under this new Head, and fashioned and renewed by him unto a lively Image of the former Roman Ethnicism, which had but newly received a deadly blow, and been cast down to the ground by the Lamb and his Champions. This new Idolatry or Idolatrous state, this Imaging of the wounded Draconizing Beast, is that treading down or profaning the Court of the Temple of God, Chap. 11. that is, of the visible Worship of Christ in his Church, by a new Gentilism. Unto which the 42. months are attributed as well as to the Beast; and so the beginning of the Times of the one not to be reckoned without or severed from the other. But whosoever shall impartially search into the Stories of the Christian Church, (as all those do not who labour to diminish the antiquity of Antichristianism, rather than to find it) will see her not only tainted, but even all-over polluted, with Spiritual Fornication with Saints, Angels, Reliques, yea and Images too, hundreds of years before the times of Fepin and Charlemaign: nay the chiefest part of those lying wonders and strong delusions, whereby this impiety and wickedness was advanced, was long before that time. How can I then believe that the time of the Gentiles profaning God's House, and of the Witnesses or Prophets mourning for the same in sackcloth, should not begin till about the year 792. whatsoever improvement the Pope's dominion then had?

V.

Finding such an Obstacle as this, and loth yet utterly and absolutely to reject this so ancient a Tradition, I began to make with my self these Quere's. First, Whether it were needful to reckon these Thousands of years compleat, or only current in the last hundred; which want of completion, though unknown to us, might abate so much of the full length of 6000 years, as would bring the computation nearer the mark for the beginning and end of the times of the Antichristian Beast. But finding no grounds to make such a conceit probable, I rejected it as a vain imagination.

But then I made a second Quere of greater moment; namely, Whether the computation of the years of the world before the Promise made to Abraham were or could could be certainly known or not. For as for the time after the Promise, I make no doubt but it may be known, even almost to a year.

The occasion of such a doubt was the great difference which is found between our Hebrew Copies and the Seventy concerning the years of the foresaid generations: For though it be true or likely that the Seventy, translating in Egypt, voluntarily and of set purpose increased the years of those first generations, to make them reach the antiquity of some Stories of the Egyptians, and thereby exceeded the Hebrew computation above 1300 years; yet it follows not that all the differences between them and our Hebrew Bibles in the years of those generations should proceed from this fountain, but some of them perhaps from the reading of the Copy they used. For that there should be differences of reading in the Hebrew Copies of the Old Testament, is not a thing to be so much startled at as some conceive, seeing we find many such in the Greek Copies of the New. And how can it be proved that the Church of the Jews had in this particular (especially when Prophecy ceased) a greater privilege than we? For as for that admirable Masorethical method, whereby they are now inviolably preserved from change, it was devised since the coming of Christ, and applied to one Copy only, which they esteemed most true and authentic; namely that (as some of them say) which was written by the great Rabbi Hillel's own hand; and many hundred of years after kept as a Relique: Yet nevertheless might some other Copies, though in general far inferior, yet in some few particulars have a better and righter reading than it.

3. That most Learned Prelate and Mirror of Bishops, the Lord Primate of Armagh, could not be at rest, till by his indefatigable industry and no small charges (as such a business required) he had some four years since gotten from the remnant of the Samaritans in Palestine into a Christian hand that admirable Monument, the Samaritan Pentateuch or Five Books of Moses; which may be presumed to be that which they received from the captived ten Tribes, when they first learned from them to worship the God of Israel, 2 Kings 17. 27. This wondrous and non-paril of Manuscripts he brought hither to Cambridge amongst us; and during his stay here some time, was most ready to shew it to all Scholars that came unto him; and so free in communicating the use thereof, that some of us had opportunity, by comparing it with our Hebrew Bibles, first to pick out the Alphabet, and then to read therein. It is in the same Hebrew tongue and words (saving the diverse readings) with our Bibles, but written in a strange character, namely the Samaritan, which is supposed to have anciently been the Hebrew, till it was changed by Ezra at the return from Captivity.

In this Book is found a strange difference in the years of the generations before the birth of Abraham both from the Septuagint and our Hebrew Bibles. Before the Flood, by diminishing the generations of Jared, Methuselah and Lamech, it comes short of us. After the Flood (for the most part agreeing with the Septuagint) it much out-reckons us. To be short, it exceeds in the upshot our Computation 301 years: so that the birth of Christ falls according to it to be Anno Mundi 4254. Agreeable whereto the 6000. year from the Creation would be compleat Anno Christi 1746. and consequently Antichrist's 42 months or 1260 years would begin Anno Christi 486. which is presently after the deposition of Augustulus, in whom the Empire of Western Rome expired. And this comes much nearer the point than 792.

Howbeit, far be it from me to affirm any thing thereof, or of the verity of the Samaritan Computation, or to prefer it in the general before our Hebrew; though some things be found therein which dissolve a knot or two which make our Chronologers at their wits end. As one for example; How Abraham could come into Canaan after the days of his Father, (as S. Stephen says) and yet be but 75 years old, Gen. 12. 4. whenas his Father Terah lived 205 years, and himself was born in the 70 year of his age, Gen. 11. 26. But the Samaritan saith (chap. 11. 32.) That the days of Terah were (but) 145 years, which is just; for then Abraham was 75 years old at his Father's death, and Moses and S. Stephen are reconciled; which yet no man can imagine that the Samaritan Scribe ever thought of.

But the thing I aim at in representing these differences, and would propound to the consideration of the pious, sober and judicious, and with due reverence to the Divine Writ, is, Whether there may not be some secret disposition of Divine Providence in this variety of Computation, to* prevent our Curiosity in counting the exact time of the Day of Judgment and second appearing of Christ. And that as the ambitious Tower of Babel was hindered by the Confusion of Languages, so our Curiosity in this particular be not by a like Providence prevented by such a diversity of Computations

For these things concern not matter of Salvation. We know the first Ages of the Church followed the Computation of the seventy altogether, though it were most wide of truth; and the chieftest Doctors the Church then had, through ignorance of the Hebrew, for a long time knew not, or believed not, there was any other Computation. But for contents of Faith, and the way of Salvation, over such the Providence of God watcheth with a careful eye, though man be heedless, wicked and careless of preserving the integrity of that precious treasure committed to their custody.

Besides, I nothing doubt, if our Books be in any such particular as we speak of deficient or corrupted, but that the true reading is yet extant in some of the two named, or some other Copy some-where preserved by Divine Providence, though we cannot yet know and discern which those right readings be. The Jews having a saying, Cum Elias venerit, dissolviet nodos: And without doubt, when they shall be called, and meet together from all places of the world, (which must be before that great Day cometh) strange things will be discovered, which we little dream of.

Now if any man ask, if such a corruption of Computation be supposed, where it is most like to be: I answer, Not in those generations before the Flood, (where the Hebrew Computation, being the middle between the excess of the septuagint and defect of the samaritan, seems to be crucified, as our Saviour, between two Thieves) but in the generations immediately after the Flood. 1. Because in those the seventy and the samaritan for the most part agree; which argues their difference from our Bibles not to have been voluntary. 2. Because S. Luke in the Genealogy of our Saviour inserts, as the seventy do, the generation of Cainan immediately after Arphaxad, which our Bibles have not: who knows what it means, or whether it argue not a defect thereabout in the Hebrew Copies? Time may discover the meaning thereof. 3. Because Peleg, at whose birth the Scripture seems to say the Earth was divided, was born, according to our Copies, but 101 years after the Flood; which troubles our Chronologers, as seeming too small a time for eight persons to multiply unto such a number as may be presumed to have been at the building of the Tower of Babel, and at their dispersion thence; which will be much holpen, if either Cainan be to be inserted, (to whose generation the septuagint allow 130 years) or if any of the other generations of Arphaxad, Salah and Eber be to be read as both the septuagint and samaritan have them.

To conclude, if the years of but three of those generations between the Flood and Abraham, as of Arphaxad, Salah and Nahor, should prove to be as the septuagint and samaritan agreeingly read them, and the generation of Cainan, (mentioned by S. Luke, and four times by the septuagint) also to be added unto them, the duration of the World hitherto will have been 350 or 360 years more than we count of.

If therefore such Suppositions as these may be admitted, (which I determine not, but leave to such as are able and fit to judge; Apagite indocti & prophani) then that Tradition of the seventh Thousand year to be the Day of Judgment and of the glorious Reign of Christ, will (in respect of those septenary Types of the Old Testament) have good probability of Truth: Otherwise, I cannot see how possibly it can be admitted.

CHAP. IV.

An Explication of Psal. 40. 6. [ Mine ears hast thou bored ] compared with Hebr. 10. 5. [ A body hast thou prepared me. ]

PSalms 40. v. 6, 7. Sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not have; mine ears hast thou bored: Burnt-offering and Sin-offering thou hast not required. Then said I, Lo, I come: in the volume of the Book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God.

In which words an allusion is made to a Custom of the Jews to bore the ears of such as were to be their perpetual Servants, and to enroll their names in a Book, or make some Instrument Instrument of the Covenant. Sacrifice and burnt-offering thou wouldst not have; but because I am thy vowed Servant, bored with an awl, and enrolled in thy Book, I said, Lo, I come, I delight to do thy will, O my God.

These words of the Psalms are alledged by S. Paul, Heb. 10. But the first of them with a most strange difference. For whereas the Psalmist hath, according to the Hebrew Verity, sacrifice and burnt-offering thou wouldst not: mine ears thou hast bored or digged, כְּרִיתָ; S. Paul reads, with the LXX, σώσα κατηρτίσω μου, A body thou hast prepared or fitted me. What Equipollency can be in sense between these two? This difficulty is so much the more augmented, because most Interpreters make the life of the Quotation to lie in those very words where the difference is, viz. That the words [A body thou hast prepared me] are brought by the Apostle to prove our Saviour's Incarnation; whereunto the words in the Psalm it self, [Mine ears hast thou bored, or digged, or opened] take them how you will, will in no wise suit.

I answer therefore, That the life of the Quotation lies not in the words of difference, nor cando; because this Epistle was written to the Hebrews, and so first in the * Hebrew tongue, where this Translation of the LXX could have no place. And if the life of the Quotation lay here, I cannot see how it can possibly be reconciled. It lies therefore in the words where there is no difference, viz. That Christ was such an High-Priest as came to sanctify us, not with Legal Offerings and Sacrifices, but by his Obedience, in doing like a devoted Servant the will of his Father.

* Juxta sententiam Clementis Alex. Eusebii Hieronymi Theodoret. Origenis, &c.

Thus the allegation will not depend at all upon the words of difference, and so they give us liberty to reconcile them thus: Mine ears thou hast bored (saith the Psalmist,) i. e. Thou hast accepted me for a perpetual Servant, as Masters are wont, according to the Law, to bore such Servants ears as refuse to part from them. Now the LXX, according to whom the Apostle's Epistle readeth, thinking perhaps the meaning of this speech would be obscure to such as knew not that Custom, chose rather to translate it generally, σώσα ἡ κατηρτίσω μου, Thou hast fitted my body, viz. to be thy Servant, in such a manner as Servants bodies are wont to be. And to the sense is all one, though not specified to the Jewish Custom of boring the ear with an awl, but left indifferently applicable to the Custom of any Nation in marking and stigmatizing their Servants bodies.

CHAP. V.

D. HIERONYMI Pronunciata de Dogmate MILLENARIORUM.

IN cap. 54. Esaie, vers. 1. LAUDA vel LÆTARE STERILIS, QUÆ NON PARIS, &c. Hunc locum, inquit, & cetera quæ sequuntur, Judæi & nostri Judæizantes ad Hierusalem referunt, quam dicunt in Mille annorum regno instaurandam, & eandem esse quæ prius habuit virum, & postea habere desierit; multoque plures habitura sit filios postrepudium, quàm prius habuit sub viro. — Nec mirandum de Judæis, quorum oculi aurisque sunt clausæ, si apertam non videant veritatem. De Christianis quid loquar, nescio, qui, dicente Apostolo quæ sunt Allegorica, & ad duo Testamenta, Vetus & Novum, Saram Agárque, referente, Judæis tradunt manus, terrenarum in Mille annis desiderio voluptatum.

Ad vers. 11. Respondeant amatores tantum occidentis Literæ, & in Mille annis exquisitos cibos gulæ ac luxuriæ preparantes, (quorum Deus venter est, & gloria in confusione eorum; qui post secundum in gloria Salvatoris adventum sperant Nuptias, & parvulos centum annorum, & Circumcisionis injuriam, & Victimarum sanguinem, & perpetuum Sabbatum; qui dicunt cum Israel in perversum modum, Manducemus & bibamus, eras enim regnabimus) quæ sit ista celestis Hierusalem, cui nunc dicitur, ECCE EGO STERNAM PER ORDINEM LAPIDES TUOS, &c.

In cap. 60. vers. 1. SURGE, ILLUMINARE, &c. Breviter, inquit, perstringendum est quod plurimi de hoc loco sentiant; ut errore perspecto, facilius possimus suscipere veritatem. Judæi & nostri semi-Judæi, qui auream atque gemmatam de cælo expectant Hierusalem, hæc in Mille annorum regno futura contendunt: quando omnes gentes servitutæ sunt Israel; & cameli Madian & Ephra de Saba venientes aurum deferent & thus, thus, &c. — Hac illi dicunt qui terrenas desiderant voluptates, & Uxorū quarunt pulchritudinem ac numerum Liberorum; quorum Deus venter est, & gloria in confusione eorum: quorum qui sequitur errorem, sub nomine Christiano Judæorum se similem confitetur. Alii autem asserunt hæc omnia Judæis carnaliter repromissa, si eum recepissent qui dicit in Evangelio EGO SUM LUX MUNDI — quem quia non susceperunt, repromissiones quoque irritas fieri. — Vide cætera.

thus,

In Proœmio in lib. 18. Commentariorum in Esaiam: Nec ignoro quanta sit inter homines sententiarum diversitas. Non dico de Mystério Trinitatis, cujus recta confessio est ignoratio scientiæ; sed de aliis Ecclesiasticis dogmatibus: de Resurrectione scilicet, & de Animarum & humanæ Carnis statu; de repromissionibus futurorum, quomodo debeant accipi; & quâ ratione intelligenda sit Apocalypsis Joannis: quam si juxta literam accipimus, Judaizandum est; si spiritualiter, ut scripta est, differimus, multorum veterum videmur opinionibus contraire; Latinorum, Tertulliani, Victorini, Lactantii; Græcorum, ut cæteros prætermittam, Irenæi tantum Lugdunensis Episcopi faciam mentionem, adversus quem vir Eloquentissimus Dionysius Alexandrinæ Ecclesiæ Pontifex elegantem scribit librum, irridens Mille annorum fabulam & auream atque gemmatam Hierusalem in terris, instaurationem Templi, Hostiarum sanguinem, otium Sabbati, Circumcisionis injuriam, Nuptias, Partus, Liberorum educationem, Epularum delicias, & cunctarum gentium Servitutem; rursumque Bella, Exercitus, ac Triumphos & superatorum neces, mortemque centenarii peccatoris. Cui duobus voluminibus respondet Apollinarius; quem non solum suæ Sectæ homines, sed & nostrorum, in hac parte duntaxat, plurima sequitur multitudo: ut præfagâ mente jam cernam quantorum in me rabies concitanda sit. Quibus non invideo, si tantum ament terram, ut in regno Christi terrena desiderent, & post ciborum abundantiam gulæque ac ventris ingluviem ea quæ sub ventre sunt quarant. De quibus Apostolus, ESCÆ, inquit, VENTRI, ET VENTER ESCIS, &c. & NON EST REGNUM DEI CIBUS ET POTUS: & Christus, ERRATIS NESCIENTES SCRIPTURAS, NEQUE VIRTUTEM DEI. IN RESURRECTIONE ENIM NEQUE NUBENT NEQUE NUBENTUR, SED ERUNT SIMILES ANGELORUM.

In cap. 66. Esaiæ, vers. 22. QUIA SICUT COELI NOVI ET TERRA NOVA, &c. Quod aliis verbis in alio Psalmo dicitur, OMNES GENTES QUAS FECISTI VENIENT ET ADORABUNT IN CONSPECTU TUO, ET GLORIFICABUNT NOMEN TUUM, DOMINE. Mensem ex mense & Sabbatum ex Sabbato, in quibus venit omnis caro ut adoret Deum, ridiculè interpretantur ΧΑΙ-ΑΣΤΑΙ, quos nos dicere possumus MILLIARIOS; ut qui in vicino sunt omni Sabbato veniant in Hierusalem, qui longius per menses, qui valde procul per annos singulos, hoc est, diebus Paschæ sive Tabernaculorum, juxta illud quod in Zecharia dicitur [cap. 14.] ASCENDENT AB ANNO IN ANNUM, &c.

In Hieremiam, cap. 31. 27. Omnes hujusmodi repromissiones juxta Judæos & nostros Judaizantes in Mille annorum regno putantur esse complendæ: Nos autem — in primo adventu Christi spiritualiter impleta defendimus, & impleta ex parte, non ex toto.

Ibidem ad vers. 38. Qui Mille annorum in terra Judæa Regnum Christi recipiunt, Judæi videlicet & nostri Judaizantes, conantur ostendere turrem Hananeel & portam Anguli, &c. — Et ibi dicunt Sanctuarium Domini, i. e. Templum, esse condendum, manurumque in perpetuum. Vide cætera.

In cap. 16. Ezech. vers. 55. ET SOROR TUA SODOMA, &c. Judæi, inter cæteras fabulas & interminabiles genealogias & deliramenta quæ fingunt, etiam hoc somniant; In adventu Christi sui, quem nos Antichristum scimus, & in Mille annorum Regno, Sodomam esse restituendam in antiquum statum, ita ut sit quasi Paradisus Dei, & quasi terra Ægypti; & Samariam pristinam recipere felicitatem, ut de Assyriis revertantur in terram Judæam — Hierusalem quoque tunc fabricandam, &c. — Nos autem perfectam horum scientiam Dei judicio relinquentes, imò liquidò confitentes post secundum adventum Domini Salvatoris nihil humile, nihil futurum esse terrenum, sed regna cælestia quæ primum in Evangelio promittuntur, hoc dicimus, quod in Ecclesiæ statu cuncta completa sint & quotidie compleantur, &c.

In cap. 36. Hac illi (id est, Judæi) expectant in Mille annorum Regno, quando Civitatem Hierusalem asserunt extruendam, & Templum quod in fine hujus voluminis describitur, & rerum omnium felicitatem; quorum nonnulli arbitrantur sub Zorobabel hæc fuisse completa. Sed quomodo stare poterit hoc quod dicitur, v. 11. ET HABITARE VOS FACIAM SICUT A PRINCIPIO, &c? Paulò post, Et quia longum est nunc adversum dogma Judaicum, & beatitudinem ventri & gutturi Judaico servientem — in brevi explanatione dicere — Neque enim juxta Judaicas fabulas, quas illi εὐτεπείσεις appellant, appellant, gemmatam & auream de cælo expectamus Hierusalem; nec rursus passuri Circumcisionis injuriam, nec oblaturi taurorum & arietum Victimæ, nec Sabbati otio dormiemus. Quod & multi nostrorum, & præcipue Tertulliani liber qui inscribitur de spe fidelium, & Lactantii Institutionum volumen septimum pollicetur, & Victorini Pictaviensis Episcopi crebræ expositiones, & nuper Severus noster in Dialogo, cui Gallo nomen imposuit: & ut Græcos nominem, & primum extremumque jungam, Irenæus & Apollinarius.

In cap. 37. vers. 15. in fine. Quod si Judæi & Christiani Judaizantes hæc ad Mille annorum voluerint referre regnum, necessitate coguntur, ut suscipiant omnes qui salvi fuerint habituros in terra Israel, ædificandam Hierusalem, extruendum Templum, cunctas Legis Cæremonias exercendas, observandum Sabbatum, accipiendam Circumcisionis injuriam, &c.

In cap. 38. Igitur Judæi & nostri Judaizantes putant Gog esse gentes Scythicas immanes, &c. — & hæc post Mille annorum Regnum esse à Diabolo commovendas, &c.

In cap. 39. Et hæc Judaica traditionis hæredes, & discipuli interminabilium fabularum, post Mille annorum Regnum futura contendunt.

In Micheam cap. 4. Sciendum quoque hoc capitulum, & huic simile de Esaiâ, Judæos & eorum Erroris hæredes ad Mille annorum referre imperium Christi & sanctorum, &c.

In Zach. c. 14. ad v. 10. IN DIE ILLA, &c. Judæi & Christiani Judaizantes ultimo sibi tempore repromittunt, quando rursus exercenda Circumcisio sit, & immolande Victimæ, & omnia Legis præcepta servanda; ut non Judæi Christiani, sed Christiani Judæi fiant. In die, inquit, illa quando Christus in Hierusalem aureâ & gemmatâ sedet regnaturus, non erunt Idola, nec Divinitatis cultura diversa; sed erit Dominus unus. Paulo post, Hæc Judæi juxta literam somniant & nostri Χιλιάται, qui rursus audire desiderant, Crescite & multiplicamini, &c. At provitæ hujus continentia brevique jejunio, bulbos sibi, & vulvas, & aves Phasidis, & attagenem nequaquam Ionicum, sed Judaicum, repromittunt, &c. Hactenus Hieronymus.

Plura de Hieronymo vide in Lib. III. pag. 602. Lib. IV. Ep. 51. in fine, & Epist. 64.

OS Hieronymi! qui Millenariis promiscuè affinxit Circumcisionis injuriam, Victimarum sanguinem, cæterasque Legis Cæremonias postliminiò instaurandas. Scilicet quæ Judæi, aut fortè ex Judaismo Hæretici, de suo Millenario somniarunt, ille Christianis odiosè impingebat. Sed & tu, Hieronyme, vel teipso judice, prodiscriminationem istam falsam esse. Sic enim scribis in Jeremiam cap. 19. v. 10. Post captivitatem quæ sub Vespasiano & Tito, & postea accidit sub Hadriano, usque ad consummationem sæculi Ruinæ Hierusalem permansura sunt: quanquam sibi Judæi auream atque gemmatam Hierusalem restituendam putent; rursusque Victimæ & Sacrificia, & Conjugia sanctorum, & Regnum in terris Domini Salvatoris: qualicet non sequamur, damnare tamen non possumus, quia multi virorum Ecclesiasticorum & Martyrum ista dixerunt. Unusquisque in suo sensu abundet, & Domini cuncta judicio reserventur. Hæc verba tua sunt, Hieronyme. Sed dic sodes, An viri isti Ecclesiastici & Martyres sanctissimi dixerunt, Circumcisionem & Victimæ in Regno illo Christi restituendas? Cave dixeris. Aut si ita credidisse scires, annon sine cunctatione damnares? Sed quòd contrarium docuere, firmari potest ex Justinii Martyris Dialogo cum Tryphone Judæo. Οὐδὲν τῇ πάλιν παρουσία μὴ δόξῃτε λέγειν Ἡσαΐαν, ἢ τὸς ἄλλους προφῆτας, θυσίας ἀπ' αἱμάτων ἢ σποιδῶν ἐπὶ τὸ θυσιάσῃν ἀναφέρεισθαι, ἀλλὰ ἀληθινὰς καὶ πνευματικὰς αἰνὰς καὶ ὀρχασίας. In cujus [Christi] secundo adventu, nè existimetis Esaiam aut alios Prophetas admonere, ut Sacrificia sanguinis aut libationum super altari offerantur, sed veræ atque spirituales laudes & gratiarum actiones.

CAP. VI.

Verba Gaii apud Eusebium, Lib. 3. cap. 22. Hist. Eccles.

Aλλὰ καὶ Κλήμεντος ὁ δὲ Ἀποκαλύψων, ὡς ὑπὸ Ἀποστόλου μεγάλης γεγενημένων, τερατολογίας ἡμῖν ὡς δι' ἀγγέλων αὐτῷ δεδογμῆτας ψευδόμενος ἐπεισάγει, λέγων, Μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν ἐπ' αἰῶνα τὸ βασιλεῖον τοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ πάλιν ἐπιθυμίας καὶ ἡδοναῖς ὅν Ἱερουσαλήμ ἀπὸ τὴν σάρκα πολιτευομένην δαλεῦν * καὶ ἐχθρὸς ὑπάρχων ταῖς γραφαῖς τῷ Θεῷ, ἀειμὸν χιλιονταετίας ἐν γάμψορτῃς, δέλων πλανᾶν, λέγει γινέσθαι. Id est, sed & Cerinthus per Apocalypses, velut à magno Apostolo scriptas, portentosa quædam nobis quasi per Angelos sibi ostensa mentitus, attulit, Regnum Christi (sed βασιλεῖον Regiam significat) post Resurrectionem terrenum futurum, & carnem nostram denno Hierosolymis concupiscentiis ac voluptatibus carnis servitutem dicens: Et cum inimicus esset Scripturis Dei, numerum ejusdem Millenarii festi nuptiis deputatum, seducere volens, futurum dixit.

Animadversiones in verba G A I I.

ANon hinc meritò quis suspicari possit Gaium istum ex Alogorum hæreticorum numero fuisse, quos Epiphanius tradit Dei Λόγον negasse, ideòque tam Joannis Evangelium quàm Apocalypsin Cerintho tribuisse? Tempus omnino congruit: Theodotus enim Alogorum antesignanus à Victore Papa de Ecclesia ejectus est; Gaius autem iste floruit sub Zephyrino, qui Victori proximè successit.

Possunt tamen forsàn Gaii verba in eum sensum accipi, ac si dixisset Cerinthum alias nescio quas Apocalypses præter unicam illam magno Apostolo affixisse, ex quibus probare sategit homo falsarius Regnum Christi post resurrectionem terrenum futurum, in quo homines carnis cupiditatibus & voluptatum carnalium blanditiis inservirent. Et Χιλιονταετίαν non illum quidem commentum esse, sed docuisse eam in nuptiarum festis & similibus cupediis consumptum iri, quasi Joannes idipsum voluisset.

Sed quæcunque fuerit Gaii mens, verisimile est eum de Cerintho falsum fuisse. Si enim hæc fuisset Cerinthi Hæresis, quæ id ignorare potuerint Justinus, Irenæus, Melito, Tertullianus, Hippolytus? quorum Irenæus & Tertullianus Cerinthi hæreses ex professo enumerarunt: sed de isthac altum silentium. Unde igitur illud Gaii innotuit?

Videntur nihilominus hæc Gaii, hominis obscuri, verba Dionysio Alexandrino, Eusebio, & aliis pluribus, fervente lite cum Millenariis, errandi & de Apocalypseos autoritate dubitandi occasionem præbuisse.

Ex Irenæo; Simon, Menander: ex iis Saturninus & Basilides, Carpocrates, Cerinthus, Ebion, Nicolaitæ, Cerdon; ei successit Marcion.

Ex Tertulliano; Simon, post hunc Menander: sequutus est Saturninus; postea Basilides, Nicolaus, Ophitæ, Cainæi, Sethoitæ, Carpocrates; post hunc Cerinthus; hujus Successor Ebion, Valentinus; post hunc Ptolomæus: Valentini sequaces Secundus, Heracleon; post hos Marcus & Colobarsus, Cerdon; post hunc Marcion cum discipulis Lucano & Apelle, Tatianus, Cataphryges.

Eusebius hic tempora confundit, dum Basilidem & Saturninum, quos συγχρόνως facit, collocat sub temporibus Adriani, itémque Carpocratem, quem, testante Irenæo, eisdem cum illis temporibus vixisse (συγχρονίσαι τούτοις) affirmat. Rectè quidem, si istos tres invicem συγχρόνως dicat; at falsò, si sub Adriano. Quomodo enim Ignatius mentionem faceret Basilidis, si Basilidis Hæresis non innotuisset ante Adriani Imperium, cum Ignatius Martyrio coronatus sit anno 11 Imperii Trajani? Deinde, si Cerinthus (Epiphanio teste) Hæresin suam disseminaverit superstitè adhuc Paulo Apostolo, id est, ante Excidium Hierosolymitanum, fueritque idem Carpocratis Successor, (affirmante Tertulliano, & non diffidente, imò innuente, Irenæo ipso) quomodo etiam Carpocrates cum contemporaneis suis Basilide & Saturnino non fuissent etiam ante idem Excidium, non video.

Eusebius igitur hic rejicio, qui & ipse lapsus est, & posteris errandi occasionem dedit, deceptus forsan autoritate Clementis Alexandrini, qui Lib. 7. Stromat. Hæreseων authores non vult exstitisse ante Adriani Imperium, ubi & Basilidem nominat, quem tamen fatetur Glauciam quendam, Petri Interpretem, magistrum sibi adscripsisse. Dixit ibi Clemens quod consilio suo inserviret: Ego, autoritatibus Ignatii, drum, Saturninum, Basilidem, Nicolaitas, Carpocratem & Cerinthum (utpote omnes Ebione priores) ante Excidium Hierosolymorum Hæreses suas disseminâsse, superstitibus adhuc Apostolis Petro & Paulo, saltem intra triennium.

Sensus igitur Loci Joannis Ep. 1. cap. 2. v. 18, &c. ejusmodi est:

De Simone Antichristo, Satanæ Primogenito & omnium Hæreticorum & Pseudoprophetarum Coryphæo, jamdudum audivistis, ut ad seducendum venerit: Nunc autem plures Antichristos & Pseudopphetas, scilicet Menandrum, Saturninum, Basilidem, Carpocratem & Cerinthum, &c. exortos vidimus: unde jam certò scimus Finem Gentis nostræ & Politicæ Mosaicæ abolitionem instare; cum inter alia signa Excidii istius appropinquantis hoc etiam Salvator prædixit, Quod multi Pseudoppheta exorirentur & seducerent multos Matth. 24. 11.

Aliter.

Joannes nomine Antichristi non tam unum aliquem & singularem hominem intelligit, quam Factionem hæreticam seu Pseudopphetarum turbam, cujusmodi plures paulò ante Hierosolymorum Excidium existuros prædixerat Salvator, Matth. 24. 5, 11. unde colligit Joannes finem Politicæ Judaicæ jam, tempore quo Epistola ista prima scripta sit, instare, ὅτι Ἀντίχριστοι πολλοὶ γεγόνασιν.

* 1 Jo. 2. 18.

Patet autem Antichristi nomine Factionem designari, cum ex hoc * loco, ubi ὁ Ἀντίχριστος & πολλοὶ Ἀντίχριστοι sese mutuò explicare videntur, tum maximè ex Ep. 2. vers. 7. πολλοὶ πλάνοι εἰσῆλθον εἰς τὴν κόσμον, οἱ μὴ ὁμολογῶντες Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ἐρχόμενον ἐν σαρκί. ἔτος ἔστιν ὁ πλάνος & ὁ Ἀντίχριστος. — Cæterum quamvis existimârim Joannem hisce in locis de Pseudopphetis loqui, qui Christi doctrinam corrumpere prope excidium Reipublicæ Judaicæ, (id quod Christus fore prædixit Matth. 24.) tamen potest & istorum Antichristorum doctrinæ summa (quæ negatur * Jesum esse Christum) magno isti Antichristo accommodari, qui quòd Christunculos (i. e. Sanctos) suos instar Δαιμόνων surrogârit, eo ipso negat Jesum esse Christum: sicut qui plures Deos colerent, negant Jehovah esse Deum. Etiam ex cap. 5. hujus Epist. vers. 20, 21. tale quid probabiliter colligitur; cum enim dixerat Joannes de Jesu Christo, ἔτος ἔστιν ὁ ἀληθινὸς Θεὸς & ἡ ζωὴ αἰώνιος, statim subjungit, Τεκνία, φυλάξατε ἑαυτοὺς ἀπὸ τοῦ εἰδώλου, innuens aliquando fatale futurum ut Christiani loco Christi colerent Idola, i. e. falsos Christos & Mediatorculos Sanctos.

Esa. 21. 11. מִשָּׁא רֹמָה הִיא אֲרוֹם, inquit R. Solomon Jarchi. מִשָּׁא רֹמָה inquit R. D. Kimchi, (quæ verba Pontificii omittenda curarunt.) Idem Hieronymus in hunc locum & in Prophetam Abdiam annotavit.

In Esa. 34. 16. Kimchi, Dixit QUÆRITE respectu illius viri qui Romæ excidium videre ac intelligere cupit, אֹמֵר כְּנָנִי מִי שִׂירָאָה בְּחֶרֶבֶן רֹמִי רָשִׁי. Istas duas voces [בְּחֶרֶבֶן רֹמִי] Romani editores omiserunt, sensu imperfecto relicto: Et quater in eodem capite pro voce אֲרוֹם (quæ Romam designant Rabbinii) substituitur יוֹן כּוּתִיָּה, id est, Græcia, Cuthith, in Commentariis Kimchi & Jarchi.

Esa. 34. 9. יִתְחַפְּכוּ נְחִלֵּיהָ רְרוּמִי לִפְתָּה, Mutabuntur torrentes Romæ in picem. Kimchi hanc expositionem Chaldaicam citat & approbat. A Pontificiis tamen editoribus omittitur nomen Romæ, & locus relinquatur sine sensu.

Ex Rabbinorum Commentariis in Esa. c. 34. & c. 35. Romæ nomen bis oblitterarunt; & pro Edom, nomen Pares, Javan & Cuthith quindecies substituerunt.

Num. 24. 24. Targum Onkelos, Et naves venientes מִרֹמָא à Romanis. Targum Hierosolym. Legiones multa מִן רְרוּמָא à Romanis. Sed Pontificii Correctores hic substituendum curarunt כְּתָא.

Ex Kimchio in Abdiam nomen Romæ sæpius deletur: & integra hæc sententia, עַם חֶרֶבֶן אֲרוֹם תְּהִיָּה תְּשׁוּעַת יִשְׂרָאֵל, id est, Cum devastabitur Roma, erit Israël Redemptio. Præcessit autem in Kimchio, מִה שְׂאֵמֶר הַנְּבִיאִים בְּחֶרֶבֶן אֲרוֹם בְּאַחֲרִית, id est, Quicquid dixerunt Propheta de destructione Edom in postremis temporibus, de Roma dixerunt.

An Advertisement.

There being scattered here and there in the Author's Adversaria and other MSS. some few Observations and short Notes upon some passages in the Apocalyps, I thought it not amiss to gather up these Fragments and place them in their due order. Some of them are upon those parts of the Apocalyps that the Author did not write upon in his Clavis & Comment. Apocalyp. but would have been farther enlarged and improved, if he had lived to have perfected his Commentary on the remaining Chapters. The Observations in English are set in Chap. X. the Latine ones in Chap. XI. The summary Exposition of the Apocalyps (which makes Chap. XII.) was an entire Tract written by the Author, though before his Comment on the Apocalyps.

CHAP. X.

Short Observations upon some passages in the Apocalyps.

CHAP. 1. vers. 11. — the Seven Churches which are in Asia ] If we consider their number, being Seven, which is a number of revolution of times, and therefore in this Book the Seals and Trumpets and Vials also are Seven; or if we consider the choice of the H. Ghost, in that he taketh neither all, no nor the most famous Churches in the world, as Antioch, Alexandria, Rome, and many other, and such no doubt as had need of instruction as well as those here named; If these things be well considered, may it not seem that these Seven Churches, besides their Literal respect, were intended to be as Patterns and Types of the several Ages of the Catholick Church à principio ad finem? that so these Seven Churches should prophetically sample unto us a Seven-fold successive temper and condition of the whole Visible Church according to the several Ages thereof, answering to the Pattern of the Seven Churches here. And if this were granted, viz. That they were intended for so many Patterns of so many States of the Church succeeding in the like order the Churches are named; then surely the First Church (viz. the * Ephesian State) must be first, and the Last be the last. As for those between, though there be no Characters to bound them all || exactly, yet the mention of false Jews and the Synagogue of Satan, Throne of Satan, Balaam, Jezabel, &c. (Apocal. 2.) in the Five middle ones, will argue that they belong to the times of the Beast and Babylon. And for the Sixth in special, viz. Philadelphia, we have a good character where to place it, viz. partly about the time the Beast is falling, and partly after his destruction, when the New Jerusalem cometh. For Philadelphia is promised that the Synagogue of Satan should bow before her feet, that she should be preserved in the general temptation to come upon the whole world, that upon her should be written the name of the New Jerusalem (Apocal. 3. 9, 10, 12.) If any thinks these Seven Churches are to be put into the Scheme, (as being perswaded they serve for Prophecies of things to come as well as Descriptions of things present) he may easily supply their want by imagining them in that middle empty space between the Two Prophecies, or might without any great deformity express them by 7 letters, E. S. P. &c.

* Ephesus primitiva Ecclesie Typus, plurima fortiter passa, sed tandem in amore & castitate, unde Apocalyp. 2. Theil 2. and 1 Tim. 4. 1. No more have the first 6 Trumpets: only in gross we know by the Text where the First of them beginneth and where the Sixth endeth.

CHAP. 3. vers. 21. — I will give him to sit with me in my Throne, even as I am set down with my Father in his Throne ] Here are 2 Thrones mentioned. My Throne, saith Christ; this is the condition of glorified Saints, who sit with Christ in his Throne: but my Father's (i. e. God's) Throne is the Power of Divine Majesty; herein none may sit but God and the God-man Jesus Christ. To be installed in God's Throne, to sit at God's right hand, is to have a God-like Royalty, such as his Father hath, a Royalty altogether incommunicable, whereof no creature is capable. To receive our devotions in Heaven is a flower of this incommunicable Royalty.

CHAP. 5. vers. 12. Worthy is the Lamb to receive Power, and Riches, and Wisdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Blessing ] The whole Doxology consists in the acknowledgment ledgment of these three Sovereign Prerogatives of the Divine Majesty, his Power, his Wisdom, his Goodness. The two first, Power and Wisdom, are express; and Riches and Strength belong to Power: the third (viz. Goodness) is implied in Blessing or Thanksgiving, which is the Confession of the Divine Goodness. Observe also that these words (and those in the parallel place, chap. 4. 11.) are the summe and argument of that Hymnologie which the Primitive Church used at the offering of Bread and Wine for the Eucharist.

CHAP. 9. vers. 5. — tormented five months, and vers. 10. — to hurt men five months] For the clearing of this difficulty, 1. What if these Five months are not the whole time of the plague of Locusts, but the time only of their tormenting with their tail? Agreeably to this supposal the Editio Complutensis followed by Plantine reads not vers. 10. as we do with the Codex Regius, Καὶ ἔχουσιν ὡς ὁμοίας σκορπίους, καὶ κέντρα ὡς ἐν ταῖς ὀπίσθαις αὐτῶν. καὶ ἡ ἐξουσία αὐτῶν ἀδικῆσαι τὴν ἀνθρώπου μῆνας πέντε. but thus, Καὶ ἔχουσιν ὡς ὁμοίας σκορπίους, καὶ κέντρα. καὶ ἐν ταῖς ὀπίσθαις αὐτῶν ἐξουσίαν ἔχουσιν ἀδικῆσαι τὴν ἀνθρώπου μῆνας πέντε, that is, And they had tails like unto Scorpions, and stings: and in their tails they have power to hurt men five months. And what if this then be the meaning of vers. 5. — They should be tormented five months; and their torment was as the torment of a Scorpion, when he striketh a man, that is, they should be tormented by the tail, as Scorpions torment and strike with their tail?

* the Saracens.

2. What if by the Head of this Army of * Locusts we understand their Foremost troup or Vanguard, which infested and settled in the Eastern parts, erecting their chief Caliph at Bagdat or Babylon in Mesopotamia; and by the Tail of this Army their Latter and hindmost troup, which encamped Westward in Africk and Spain, as the Rere of that great Army who in process of time erected also a Caliph at Algier, and from thence after some ages invaded Sicily and Italy, which they held even under the Walls of Rome and Pope's nose, just five months or 150 years; during which though they killed not the Beast, yet they continually frightened, vexed and tormented him? For it should seem that the Holy Ghost in this number principally aimed at Italy, once the Seat of the Empire, and now of the Beast, whom the Head-troups of these Locusts never came near, but only their Tail.

Vers. 20. And the rest of the men which were not killed by these plagues, yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship Demons, and Idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood, which can neither see nor hear nor walk] See this explained in Book III. pag. 635.

CHAP. 10. vers. 11. Thou must prophesie again before many, &c.] These words, Δὲ σε πάλιν προφητεῦσαι, Thou must prophesie again, (which interpret the Symbolum of the Book-eating, ver. 10.) do imply that the Systeme of Visions following do relegere tempus Apocalypticum ab ovo. But if any Vision of that Systeme of Visions do begin at the beginning of the Apocalyptical time or period, (as it is not denied but that of the Puerperium in Chap. 12. doth) there is no reason to think but that the First Vision beginneth there; both because it is the First, and because it is the summe and Compendium of all that follow after. If then the First Vision after the eating of the Book begin at the beginning of the Apocalyptical period, surely the Measuring of the Temple and Θυσιαστήριον is that which begins there: If the Measuring of the Temple and Θυσιαστήριον begin at the beginning of Apocalyptical time, then this Measuring cannot be contemporaneous with the Treading down of the Outer Court and the Witnesses prophesying in sack-cloth; because these contemporate with the Woman in the Wilderneck and the XLII months blasphemy of the Beast, which are granted not to be from the beginning of Apocalyptical time.

* the same is said of the Woman's being in the Wilderneck, ch. 12. 6.

CHAP. 11. vers. 2. — the holy City shall they tread under foot 42 months; and vers. 3. — my two Witnesses shall prophesie in sack-cloth* 1260 days; and vers. 9. — three days and an half (as in chap. 12. 14. — a time and times and half a time) ] That by these Numbers are not meant Three single years and an half, see it demonstrated by five Reasons, in Book III. pag. 598.

CHAP. 12. vers. 14. And to the Woman were given two Wings of a great Eagle] This alludes unto Exod. 19. 4. where God is said to have born his people upon Eagle's wings, and brought them (out from the Egyptians) unto himself, namely in the Wilderneck.

— That she might flee into the Wilderneck, into her place, where she is nourished from the face of the Serpent] Seeing the whole Apocalyps almost consists of Expressions borrowed from the Types of the Old Testament; why should not this of the Woman's dwelling and being fed in the Wilderneck have reference to that of Israel's Mora

Mora in deserto, an estate and condition externally better than what they came from in Egypt, but inferiour to that they should in time attain unto? Yea besides this general, the Allusion is most fit for many particular Correspondencies. Moses brought the Israelites out of the Egyptian bondage into the Wilderness, a place where they might worship and sacrifice unto the Lord safely, where the Law was given, Tabernacle built, Ordinances both Sacred and Political enacted, &c. So did Ἀέτος ὁ μέγας, Great Constantine deliver the Apostolical Woman, and brought her into the like condition, wherein she might worship Christ safely, the Laws of the Church were established, Tabernacles for Christian Worship erected, Tithes and Revenues assigned, &c. And had not this Christian Wilderness a Calf too made of the Ear-rings stoln from the Egyptians? Was there not here found a Korah among the Sons of Levi, with his partakers, * men of renown, to rebel against Moses and Aaron, and to offer strange fire unto the Lord? Was there not here a Balaam to deceive, and a Baal-Peor to be worshipped? was there not a Marah and a Meribah? Yea, was there not here also as well as there those who brought an evil report upon the Land whither they were to go? Farther, might not God say of the times of this Christian Wilderness, as he did of the abode of Israel there? Psal. 95. 10. Forty years long was I grieved, &c. and Amos 5. 25, 26. Have ye offered unto me sacrifices and offerings in the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel? But ye have born the Tabernacle of your Moloch, &c.

* Numb. 16.

CHAP. 17. 14. — and they that are with him are called and chosen and faithful ] i. e. The Lamb and those called and elect and chosen ones which are with him shall overcome the Beast. So I understand it. These are that Virgin-Company (Chap. 14.) which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth, and shall now accompany him in this Exploit. This therefore will serve for a Character Synchronistical, That that Virgin-Company continues in time to the end of Babylon and the Beast; and for an intimation of whom that Vision meaneth, viz. such as faithfully adhere unto the Lamb, while the Beast reigneth and the rest of men admire and worship him.

CHAP. 19. 15. And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the Nations ] So it was prophesied of him by Esay, chap. 11. 4. — that he should smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips should slay the wicked: and in 2 Thess. 2. 8. — he shall consume that Wicked one (viz. Antichrist) with the Spirit of his mouth. Christ our General nor fights nor conquers by force of Arms, but by the power of his Word and Spirit; He does all nutu & verbo: As it is said (Psal. 33.) God made the world by his word and by the breath of his mouth; in like manner doth Christ overcome his enemies, and enables his Ministers to overcome them also, Verbo & Spiritu oris. Agreeable hereunto is that in Hos. 6. 5. I have hewed them by my Prophets, and slain them by the words of my mouth.

CHAP. 20. 6. Blessed and Holy is he that hath part in the First Resurrection ] What is meant by the First Resurrection, see in The Remains upon the Apocalyps. Book III. pag. 604. and in Book IV. Epistle 20.

Verf. 14. And Death and Hades were cast into the lake of fire: This is the Second Death ] Nothing is hereby meant but that Death was now quite vanquished; and that there should be no more Death of Body or Separation of Soul, but only the second Death. As if it had been said, Death and Hades were now confined only to the lake of fire, which is the second Death. The Death of Bodies in the grave should be no more, nor the state of Separate Souls in * Hades.

* Hades is the state of Separate Souls, whether good or bad, after death.

Scil. Θυμός Hellenisticus est Venenum, quia הַמָּוֶה, cui respondet, ut Iram, sic quoque Venenum significat. Istiusmodi exempla Hellenismi passim in S. S. occurrunt, ubi Græca vox respondens Hebrææ in una significatione, ad alteram ejusdem, licet non secundum idioma Græcum, extenditur. חַמַּת & חַמַּת significant & finem & mercedem; hinc τέλος pro mercede ponitur, Rom. 6. 21. 1 Pet. 1. 9. חַיִל plerumque denotat robur, interdum virtutem; hinc ἀρετή pro robore, 2 Pet. 1. 3. חַטָּאת denotat peccatum, aliquando sacrificium pro peccato; & sic ἀμαρτία 2 Cor. 5. 21.

Sic 1 Chron. 16. 42. כְּלֵי שִׁיר הָאֱלֹהִים Instrumenta musica Dei, eodem planè sensu. Nam כְּלֵי שִׁיר construenda sunt quasi per Maccaph, ut 2 Chron. 7. 6. כְּלֵי שִׁיר יְהוָה, & cap. 34. 12. ### The Brief Meaning or Summary Exposition of the Apocalyps.

The Stage of the Apocalyptic Visions, Chap. 4.

GOD sitting in Majesty upon the Throne of his Temple, according to the pattern of his ancient encamping with Israel in the Wilderness, [ Numb. 1. 52, 53. & ch. 2. 3, &c. ] His Throne, the Tabernacle, stood in the midst: next pitched the Priests and Levites, round about it: Behind them, to the four quarters of Heaven, encamped the four Standards of Israel, three Tribes to a Standard; and each Standard had his Ensign, which though the Scriptures particularly describe not, yet the Jews by ancient Tradition do. The Standard of Judah on the East-side of the Tabernacle had for his Ensign a Lion; the Standard of Ephraim on the West, an Oxe; the Standard of Reuben upon the South, a Man; the Standard of Dan on the North, North, an Eagle. [ See Chaskuni on Numb. 3. Aben Ezra on Numb. 2. ] The truth of this Tradition may be confirmed by the Cherubims four Faces * in Ezekiel of the same likeness, signifying that he who rode upon them was Jehovah, the Lord of the four Standards of Israel: where also is easie to be gathered ( by the Cherubims and Ezekiel's posture in that Vision ) toward which quarter of the Heaven each Face looked. The like Faces, I suppose, the other of the Cherubims had, even those in the Temple. ( See Ezek. 41. ) Even as the Chariots and Horses of Princes and Potentates carry upon them the Insignia of their Masters atchievements; so do the Cherubims here of the Lord God of Israel. And of these Four Animalia, the Ensigns of the four Standards, some have expounded that of Psal. 68. 11. which Hierom turns juxta Hebraicam veritatem, * Animalia tua habitaverunt in ea, id est, in hereditate tua. A sense not improbable, the Psalm speaking directly of God's marching before his people in the wilderness: Yet we translate it much otherwise.

* Not four Heads, as some conceive, but four Faces on one Head; the Man's face being the forward Face.

\* The LXX.  $\tau\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\alpha\ \tau\epsilon$  Hebr.  $\text{חיה}$

See now whether God's Session in the Apocalyps be not in every part accommodated to this his Encamping in the Wilderness.

1. The Throne pitched in the Temple, insinuated 1. by the * Seven Lamps burning before it, like the Candlestick of so many Lamps in the Tabernacle: 2. by the * Glassy and Chrystal Sea; not the Ocean, but the great washing Laver which in Solomon's Temple was call'd a sea; but there of brass, here of more transparent metal. And yet some allusion may be unto the Laver in the Tabernacle, which is said Exod. 38. 8. to be made of the Looking-glasses of the women which assembled at the door of the Tabernacle of the Congregation. See the Temple called a Throne, Esay 6. 1. Jer. 17. 12. Ezek. 43. 7. And such the whole Apocalyps supposeth the Throne to be in this Session. How come we else to have Souls under an Altar, chap. 6. 9. a golden Altar of Incense before the Throne, ch. 8. 3. four Horns of the golden Altar before God, ch. 9. 13. the Temple, Courts and Altar to be measured, ch. 11. 1. the Ark of the Testament seen in the Temple, vers. 19. Angels coming out of the Temple, ch. 14. 15, 17, 18. the Harpers upon the brim of the Glassy-Sea or Laver, chaunting a * Song of Deliverance from the Beast, as being but newly cleansed, and yet as soon as out of the water a-flinging, when not yet come off from the Laver, ch. 15. 2. Temple of the Tabernacle of the Testimony opened in Heaven, vers. 5. Temple filled with smoke from the glory of God, (as the Temple and Tabernacle were at their dedication) vers. 8. But most invincibly manifest ch. 16. 17. where a voice comes out of the Temple of Heaven, from the Throne, saying, It is done?

* The Song of the Reformed Churches all the time the Vials are pouring upon the Beast.

2. * Round about this Throne and next unto it sit 24 crowned Presbyters, representing the Pastors of the Churches, which answer to the Priests and Levites about the Tabernacle, and their number alludes to their 24 Courses. * Verf. 4.

3. Lastly and outmost we have the * Four Beasts, signifying the Church in the four Quarters of the world, and answering to the four Standards of Israel, distinguished by the same Beasts in their several Ensigns. Which Beasts are here said to be in * the midst of the Throne and round about the Throne, that is, diametrically placed round about the Throne. For so must ὁ μέσῳ be understood, quasi ὁν διαμέτρῳ. * See the Author's clearer explication of μέσῳ.

And so will the supposed Solocism in the Greek, vers. 9 and 10, in the words δώσουσι, πεσύνται and προσκυνήσουσι, be avoided, if the words be taken not as a Narration of what S. John saw the four Beasts and the Elders then to do, but what their Office was to do, and what they would do afterward as occasion required in the progress of the Visions; namely, As often as the four Wights had occasion to give glory and thanks unto God, the 24 Elders should fall down before him that sat upon the Throne, &c.

This was the Stage whither S. John was called to be a Spectator, and where and whence he saw his Visions.

The Interpretation of the Seven Seals.

As Daniel in his Prophecy carries the Fates of the Church along with the State of the Empires and Kingdoms under which it lived ; so doth S. John here : the First Prophecy [ The Seals ] containing Fata Imperii, what should befall the Empire ;

the Second [ The Book opened ] Statum Ecclesie, the Fates of the Church, until both do meet in one in Ecclesia regnante, when all the Kingdoms of the world shall become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ.

Fata Imperii, the argument of the Seals, are the successive States and Changes of the Roman Kingdom for the times thereof then yet remaining. The First six Seals distinguishing the times preceding its Fall by the Characters of Six predominant Tempers. The Seventh is the Climacterical Seal, sounding the warlike alarm to the Empire's Ruine by Seven successive and languishing blows, signified by Seven Trumpets.

SEAL 1.
Chap. 6. 2.

The First predominant Character which befalls the Empire is of Conquest, when Christ began to subdue the subjects thereof by the Sword of the Gospel; Of which the First Beast gives notice, because the Actors, Christ and his Apostles, came from his Quarter, ab Oriente.

Aliter.

If the beginning of the Seals be from the destruction of Jerusalem, then may this First Seal be expounded of Political Conquest: Forasmuch as the Empire, after the death of Nero, being in extreme danger of dissolution, was again not only restored anew but much enlarged by Vespasian, Titus, &c. And so the First Beast gives notice at the opening thereof, because the Epocha of this conquering State is Excidium Hierosolymorum, an Oriental action, and therefore of his Quarter.

SEAL 2.
Vers. 4.

The Second predominant Temper is of Slaughter and Massacres in the Empire; as happened in the Bellum Judaicum under Trajan and Adrian, & postea in Bello Marcomanico. The Index is the Second Beast; because the first of those Emperors which began and managed the Times of this Temper was Trajan, a Spaniard, of the Second Beast's Quarter, ab Occidente.

SEAL 3.
Vers. 5.

3. The Third State was remarkable for establishment of Equity, & procuratio rei frumentariae & annonariae in behalf of the City of Rome. The Index when this time began is the Third Beast, the first of the Emperors of this State belonging to his Quarter; Septimius Severus, Afer, Imperator à meridie. Eutropius, Solus ex omni memoria & antea & post ex Africa Imperator. Most interpret this Seal of Famine; but History affordeth not an Event answerable. By Libra therefore I understand Aequilibrium Justitiae. Such were the Laws of Severus; Legum conditor longè æquabilium, saith Anrelius Victor: and especially of Alexander Mameæ, who so much delighted in that Christian Maxime, Quod tibi fieri non vis, alteri nè feceris. For the prizing of provision, in the Text, I understand A Chanix of Wheat and three Chanixes of Barley for one and the same Denier, and a competency of Oil and Wine into the bargain, that is, a compleat sufficiency for the price of one day's hire; (such was Antiochus III.) By Chanix I understand Chanix Syriaca, which is said to contain quatuor cotylas, double to the other Chanix, which holds but two, and yet is called ἡμετέρεα. Spartianus de Severo, cap. 8. Rei frumentariae, quam minimam repperat, ita consuluit, ut excedens ipse vitâ septem annorum Canonem populo Romano relinqueret: ita ut quotidiana septuagena quinque millia modiorum expendi possent—Olei verò tantum reliquit, ut per quinquennium non solum Urbis usibus, sed & totius Italiae, quæ oleo indigeret, sufficeret. Herodian. Frumenti summam primus adauxit. Lamprid. de Alexandro, Oleum quod Severus populo dederat (quòdque Heligabalus imminuerat) integrum restituit, &c. The colour of the Horse [ Black ] fits the severity and strictness of Justice, yea Severus his person both for countrey and quality. Sed non est tanti.

SEAL 4.
Vers. 8.

The Fourth State was remarkable for concurrence of War, Famine, Pestilence, (This, fortien years together,) as it is plain in Story. The Index, the Fourth Beast: the first Emperour of this State, Maximinus Thrax, being of his Quarter, Imperator ab Aquilone.

Thus the first Four Seals of the Six, as being of unequal times, and easy for their qualities to be confounded in the accommodation, it pleased the Holy Ghost therefore to distinguish them by their several references to the Four Beasts: but the other Two have no such need; the Character of their qualities will sufficiently serve to sever them.

The

The Fifth State therefore, which we may count from Aurelian, Ann. 270, or 268. SEAL 5. ( for thereabouts the former ended ) unto Constantine, is notable for the Tenth Persecution by Diocletian, the greatest that ever the Ethnick Cæsars raised against the Saints of Christ, in regard whereof the rest were but as Flea-bitings. This is typified by the Cry of the Souls under the Altar, How long, O Lord, Holy and True, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? And they had promise of present hearing, as soon as their Fellow-servants, which were yet behind, should come in; which was not to be long after. Verse 9.

The Sixth Seal is Terræ-motus, a great Earth-quake. That intestine Change of the Roman State begun with Constantine, and was fully settled with the death of Julian, about the year 364. SEAL 6. Verse 12. For an Earthquake implies not a Destruction, but an extraordinary Alteration and Change of the face of things: As an Earthquake changeth the posture of the Earth by exalting Valleys and depressing Hills, turning the Channells and courses of Rivers, and such like. And was there not here the whole Politick Government as well as Religion altered, the Imperial Seat removed, the distribution of Provinces, Offices and Governments new moulded, &c? Was not the former State of the Empire turned topsie-turvy, when the low and trampled Valleys arose into Mountains, and the haughty Mountains were laid as low as the Valleys? And if the Roman Gods be any of the * Stars or * Hills here mentioned, we need not go farther for an * Verse 13, 14. Exposition of this Earthquake and the shock it caused in the world.

The SEVENTH SEAL, or Seven Trumpets.

The * Seventh Seal, or Seal of Trumpets, brings forth the Ruine and miserable * Chap 8.1. Downfall of the Roman State. This is that which the Martyred Saints in the Fifth Seal, prayed for, How long, O Lord, Holy and True, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood upon this cruel Empire? They were answered, that some more of their Brethren must yet suffer as they had done. When they were once come in, then should the cry of their blood be avenged upon that bloody State. This now comes to be accomplished. And therefore when the seventh seal was opened, and the Trumpets were to sound, Christ, the Angel of the Covenant, offereth those Prayers of the Martyrs in a golden Censer upon the golden Altar before the Throne, that they might come into remembrance before God. Verse 3. And no sooner was the Incense of their Prayers ascended, but instantly the Seven Angels come forth with their Seven Trumpets to sound alarm for the Empire's Dissolution. For though Josiah were a good King, and made a Reformation, yet must the blood shed by Manasseh needs be avenged upon the Kingdom of Judah. So although the Roman Emperors were now become Christians, yet would not God forget their former slaughters of his Servants, but require their blood at the hands of that Empire.

The Epocha or beginning of these Trumpets was about the year 365. Now was the Censer, wherein the Martyrs Prayers were offered, thrown down to the Earth; and Verse 5. there were Thundrings and Lightnings and an Earthquake: the meaning whereof may be otherways expounded, but was here even literally fulfilled in that stupendious Earthquake described by Ammianus Marcellinus, l. 26. c. 14. Horrendi tremores per omnem Orbis ambitum grassati sunt subito, quales nec fabulæ nec veridicæ nobis antiquitates exponunt. Paulo post lucis exortum densitate præviâ fulgurum acrius vibratorum tremefacta concutitur omnis terreni stabilitas ponderis, &c. Now the Trumpets began to sound, which Ammianus c. 5. tells so happily as if he meant to be an Expofitor. Hoc tempore (saith he) velut per universum Orbem Romanum Bellicum canentibus Buccinis, excitæ & viffimæ Gentes limites sibi proximos persultabunt. Gallias Rhetiasque simul Alemanni populabantur, Sarmatæ Pannonias — Thracias diripiebant prædatorii globi Gothorum, &c.

Of these Seven Trumpets the first Four are lesser ones, and fall chiefly upon the West, and made way for the rising of the Antichristian State of the Beast or Kingdom of the False-Prophet. The last Three are greater and more terrible and more lasting, and therefore distinguished from the former by the name of WOES, verse 13.

The First Trumpet, which lights upon the Earth, was that terrible, furious and bloody Hail-storm of the Nations of the North, (which Ammianus told us of even now) without intermission harrying, spoiling, burning and wasting the inhabitants and Citizens of the Empire, great and small, young and old, from the year 365, almost most 45 years, but not yet, by settling therein, impairing or diminishing the Roman Dition.

TUBA 2.
Verse 8.

The second, which fell upon the Sea, was the bloody rending and destruction of the Amplitude of the Roman Jurisdiction in the West, from the time (viz. Ann. 410.) when Alaricus sacked Rome; and was occasioned by the swelling and burning ambition of Stilico, who called in the Goths, hoping, when the waters were thus troubled, to have made his Son an Emperor.

TUBA 3.
Verse 10.

The Third Trumpet brought Lapsus Hesperii, the fall of the Western Cæsar, which after the death of the third Valentinian, when Genfericus with his Vandals had again sacked Rome, fell by degrees out of the Orb of Sovereignty, though blazing a little as a Candle before extinction. By the fall of this star the Rivers and Fountains suffered, the power of the Roman Presidents, Ministers and Courts of Justice failing in the West for want of their wonted influence from that star, the Western Cæsareate being extinct in Augustulus, resembled, by reason of the then bitterness and sorrows, by a falling Star called Wormwood, vers. 11.

TUBA 4.
Verse 12.

The Fourth Trumpet brings darkness upon the Roman Firmament by an Eclipse of the Sun, Moon and Stars in the third part thereof; when in the Wars of the Greek Emperors with the Kings of the Goths in Italy, the remaining light of Rome's Majesty in the West was quite put out; after the year 542 the long-continued succession of the Roman Consuls ceasing, the Roman City taken by Totilas, and a third part thereof demolished, and the rest left for a while memorandum Fortuna ludibrium, without an inhabitant; and, lastly, the Ostrogothish Kingdom, which a while, as a blaze, continued the light of the dying Cæsars in Italy, by Narses utterly extinguished.

WOE, WOE, WOE.

TUBA 5.
Ch. 9. 3.

The Fifth Trumpet is the First Woe, and brings the Saracen Locusts upon the world, proceeding out of the smoaky and darkning Seduction of Mahomet, conjured up by the Angel of the bottomless pit: who, though a warlike people and well armed, yet had not power to destroy either the State of Cæsars in New Rome, or the Papal Principality sprung out of the Empire's ruine in the Old, but only scorpion-like to torment and vex them, as their Tailor hindermost Troups out of Africk did Italy and Western Rome 150 years.

TUBA 6.
Verse 14.

The Sixth Trumpet is the Second Woe, and brings upon the Roman Provinces the barbarous and dreadful Inundation of the Turks, loosing them from the great River Euphrates, where they had been long before * prepared, and now let go as a plague for the || Idolatry of Christians; not only, as the Saracen Locusts, to plague and torment the Roman State, but in part to utterly * slay and destroy it, as they have done in the Empire of Greece, which the Saracens had no power to do.

TUBA 7.
Ch. 11. 14.

The Seventh and Last Trumpet is yet to come, the entrance whereof is the Last Woe, wherein all the Reliques of the Roman Beast, with the last Principality of the City of Rome yet surviving, shall together with the rest of the enemies of Christ be utterly abolished in the Great Day of * Armageddon; that all the Kingdoms of the world may become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ. Ch. 11. 15.

* viz. the Prophecy of the Seals, and the Prophecy of the Book opened.

Note, that when the Angel comes at the Seventh Trumpet, because the Event thereof is the common issue to * both Prophecies, he therefore suspends it a while, till he hath fetch'd up (Chap. 11.) a transcurent and through-running Vision of the Second Prophecy unto it, and then joyns them together in one and the same close, The Kingdoms of the world are become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ.

The Second Prophecy, The Opened Book; containing Fata Ecclesiæ.

I.

* Ch. 11. 1.

By the * Inmost and Measured Court of the Temple, I understand the Church in her Primitive Purity, whenas yet the Christian Worship was unprophaned, and answerable to the Divine Rule revealed from above.

* Ch. 12. 7.

By the * War between Michael and the Dragon about the Woman's manly Off-spring contemporary with the Measured Court, I understand that long and bloody Combate which which Christ our Lord, animating with his Spirit his undaunted Souldiers, fought with the Devil possessing and reigning in the Ethnick Roman State; that is, the Times of the Primitive Persecution by the Heathen Emperors: a War lasting long, and costing the lives of many a valiant Martyr; yet at 300 years end, when a Christian was installed in the Imperial Throne, the old Dragon was * dismounted and overthrown, and the Souldiers of Christ our Lord prevailed; For || they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony, and loved not their lives unto the death. * Verse 9. 1 Verse 11.

Note that the Description of this Vision is double in the Text: 1. more General, The Dragon's endeavour to destroy the Woman's Off-spring, from ver. 1. to the 7. verse; 2. more Particular, of his Battel with Michael the Woman's Champion. For that these two Descriptions are of the same thing and same time, is manifest in that one and the same Event [ * The Woman's escape into the Wilderneck ] is the Consequent to them both. * Verse 6, & 14.

II.

1. By the Second or * Outward Court trampled by the Gentiles, and not to be measured, I understand the Apostasie under the Man of Sin, when the Visible Church, being possessed by Idolaters and Idolatry like that of the Gentiles, became so inconformable and unapt for Divine measure, that it was to be cast out and accounted as prophane and polluted. For the Apostasie of the Church is Ethnicismus Christianus. * Ch. 11. 2.

2. By the * Witnesses in sack-cloth, I understand the mournful Prophecy of God's true Ministers during all that time: who, when toward the end of their days of mourning they should be about to put off their sack-cloth and leave their lamentation, (seeing the Truth they witnessed beginning to take place by publick Reformation) the Beast which ascends out of the Abyss shall slay them, and rejoyce over them as dead three days and an half, that is, so many years. * Verse 3. 1 Verse 7-9.

3. By the Woman in the Wilderneck, (Ch. 12.) I understand the condition of the true Church in respect of her * Latency and Invisibilty to the eyes of man. As the Israelites, when they had escaped the rage and gotten out of the reach of the Egyptian Pharaoh, yet lived a long time after, but in a Wilderneck, an infrequent and barren place, where they could not have lived without being extraordinarily fed with Manna from Heaven: Such was the condition of the Apostolical Woman and Church of Christ, when she had escaped the rage and fury of the Dragon persecuting in the Seven-headed Empire. * See a farther account of her being in the Wilderneck, in the Short Observations, Chap. 12. & Comments, Apocal, in locum.

4. By the * Virgin-Company of the 144000 sealed ones, I understand the opposite State of the unstained Church unto the Kingdom of Apostasie, in their sincerity of Service and faithful adherence to their Lord and Master, whilst the rest worshipped the Beast and his Image. These are those who, when the Trumpets were to sound, were secured by the * Mark of Divine protection, lest their Society should have been extinguished in those Calamities which then fell upon the Empire. How could this Holy Company else but have perished in such Confusions? In that * place they were represented by the Tribes of Israel; for the present Church of the Gentiles is but Israel surrogatus, and so by God accounted, until the Fulness of the Gentiles come in. * Chap. 14. 1. * Chap. 7. 3. * viz. Ch. 7.

5. By the * Seven-headed Ten-horned Beast, the Two horned False-Prophet, and || Babylon the Mother of Harlots, I understand the State and Kingdom of Apostasie according to three subordinate parts thereof, 1. The Body, 2. the Head, 3. the Seat. For Kingdoms, especially of the ancient form, consisted of three parts, Regnum, Rex, Metropolis Regni. So in the Kingdom of Apostasie (for such it was to be) are Regnum Apostaticum, Rex Apostaticus, Metropolis Apostaticus. * Ch. 13. 1, 11. 1 Chap. 17.

The Kingdom of Apostasie was to be the Roman Empire upon a deadly wound of the Cæsarean Sovereignty shivered into a Plurality of Kingdoms, yet all joyntly as one Body anew acknowledging the Motherdom of the Roman City. This is that Seven-headed Beast with Ten crowned Horns upon the Seventh Head, whereof S. John speaks Chap. 13. whose description there I understand as if he had said, "I saw a Beast with Seven Heads and Ten Horns with Diadems, which, upon the recovery of a deadly wound in one of his Heads, arose out of the Sea, and succeeded in the Throne, Power and Authority of the Dragon; blaspheming God by another Idolatrous worship, and warring at length against his Saints and overcoming them. This I would call Antichristendom."

Rex

Rex Apostaticus, The King of this Apostatical Kingdom is the Two-horned False-Prophet, the Roman Bishop, who also is the Founder thereof, soasmuch as by lying Signs and Wonders establishing a new-coined Idolatry therein, he made it to be a living Resemblance or Image of the Kingdom of the Cæsars in Ethnicism when the Dragon ruled. Observe here that in Ch. 13. 14. those last words [ Kai i'znoen ] are not the words of the Beast speaking, but of S. John relating the Event of his speech. And so the Interpretation will be plain.

The Metropolis of this Kingdom is Mystical Babylon, that is, the See and City of Rome, of the Spouse of Christ become a Babylonish Strumpet. This is the Mother of Harlots, that is, the Metropolis of the Brothel-Cities, and Lady of the Apostatical Kingdom, whose Kings commit fornication with her. For the Beast she rides upon is the new-formed Beast which arose out of the Sea with Ten crowned Horns; the meaning whereof the Angel here expoundeth, and thereby openeth an entrance to the whole Prophecy, which till now was nothing but an involved Mystery.

The Whore's Beast, Chap. 17.

The Whore's Beast is that Kingdom which in S. John's time had Five Successive Heads already past, One (that of the Cæsars) in present being; but the Last, or Seventh, wearing Ten Horns, which was yet to come, was that under which the Whore should ride him. Hence comes the Angel's Riddle, * The Beast which was, and is not, and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit; The Beast that was, and is not, and yet shall be, ἡ παρέραι that is, The Beast or State that had then been in the course of Five or Six Seals, but in the Seventh was yet to come. Some read the last expression of the Riddle thus, The Beast that was, and is not, and yet is; that is, The Beast that had already been in the course of Five of his Heads, was not then in that State of Sovereignty in which the Whore should ride him; and yet was even then (in S. John's time) in present being in the Sixth Head, the Cæsars then reigning.

* Ch. 17. 8.

The * Seven Heads of the Beast are by the Angel made a double Type both of the Seven Hills where the Woman sitteth, and of the Seven Sovereignities with which in a successive order the Beast should reign. This is a pair of Fetters to tie both Beast and Whore to Western Rome. The Seven Sovereignities must not be separated from the Seven Hills, nor the Seven Hills from as many Sovereignities. Constantinople may have so many Hills, but those Hills had never so many Sovereignities. In other Cities where the Sovereign Roman Name (or but the Name) hath reigned, are neither so many Hills, nor ever were those Seven succeeding Sovereignities. By these Fetters we shall hold this Proteus-like and flitting Beast fast enough.

* Verse 9, 10.

The Last Head of the Beast is indeed but the Seventh, (for the Beast, we see, hath no more Heads than Seven in the Vision) yet for some respect is an Eighth, namely, because the Sixth Head, the Sovereignty of Cæsars, (that Head which in S. John's time was) declined at length to a Demi-Cæsar confined to the West, (beginning with Honorius, (or, if you will, sooner,) till after a short time it failed upon the death of the last Valentinian,) which being in some sort diverse from the former takes the seventh place, and makes the False-Prophet the Eighth. But being, as in name, so in substance, the same Cæsar with the former, the False-Prophet (in whose time the Whore rides the Beast) is still in order the Seventh. 2. The False-Prophet beginning his dominion as soon almost (if not altogether) as the Demi-Cæsar, is therefore in order of time the Seventh as well as he. But the Demi-Cæsar being soon gone, the False-Prophet still surviving, and therefore succeeding him, is, in respect of that time wherein he outlasteth him, as it were an Eighth. But whether Eighth or Seventh, he is the Last Head this Beast shall ever wear. When the former Heads failed, the Beast still continued by succession of a New: But in this he * goeth into perdition, that is, shall utterly be destroyed.

* Verse 11.

Object. Yea but when the Roman State was a Red Dragon, it appeared then also with * Seven Heads and Ten Horns as well as now.

* Ch. 12. 3.

Ans. As the Beast which carrieth the Whore appeareth with all his * Heads, though six of them should be past before the Whore should ride him: so the Red Dragon, which watched the Woman in travail, is represented with the whole Roman Cognizance of Heads and Horns, though the Sixth Head only (the persecuting Cæsars) were then in course when the bloody Dragon informed it.

* Ch. 17. 3.

The

The Seven Vials.

*The * Seven Vials* are the Seven several and successive degrees of the Fall of the * Chap. 16. Apostatical or Pseudoprophetical Beast: some whereof are already past, ( for his Declination and Ruine we see is already begun, ) some are still to come. They are called the * Seven last Plagues in reference to the Seven Trumpets which are the Seven first * Chap. 15. 1. Plagues; the first ruining the Old Beast, the last destroying the New which is risen out of his ruine: Which is the reason why the Vials are so like the Trumpets. For as this Latter Beast was fashioned after the Image of the Former; so was it fit his Ruine should carry the resemblance of the Ruine of it.

The Kingdom of Christ upon the Seventh Trumpet.

That Kingdom of our Lord to follow upon the sounding of the Seventh Trumpet, at the appearing whereof, in several Visions, the Quire of Wights and Elders sing and worship before the Throne, ( Ch. 7. 11. Ch. 11. 16. Ch. 19. 4 ) what it means and what shall be therein, Posterity will better understand. Perhaps we may be as wide of the meaning thereof as our Forefathers were of the State and Condition of the times of Antichrist. Yet as they in this missed not of the main, but erred in the manner and particular Circumstances; so would it be considered whether the conceit the Ancients had of this Regnum Christi contains not likewise some general Truth received from the eldest times, though deformed with many erroneous misconceits and idle, yea some not tolerable, fancies.
